Israel Insists Egypt End Blockade, Live Up to Pact

NEW YORK — Israel insisted this week that "effective guarantees" must be obtained from Egypt assuring freedom of passage through the Straits of Iran, guarding the entry to the Gulf of Aqaba.

An Israeli spokesman in Jerusalem denied Secretary General Hammarskjold's contention made in his report last week that the right of free passage in the gulf was a controversial issue.

The spokesman recalled that seven years ago today Egypt itself accepted the idea of freedom of passage in the gulf in a formal note to the U. S.

"What is required is an unequivocal and official announcement by the government of Egypt," the spokesman continued, "that it is abandoning its blockade policy and that it is ready to sign a non-aggression pact with Israel."

At the UN, Israel representatives used the renewed discussion in the Assembly of the Gaza and Aqaba issues to press for direct talks with Egypt under Assembly auspices.

Hammarskjold's report, an Israeli spokesman cautioned "instead of moving forward to a better system of relations, tends to argue in favor of a patchwork reestablishment of the collapsed structure" set up in the armistice.

In Cairo official circles were reported displeased with Hammarksjold's suggestion that the Israeli-Egyptian armistice agreement might be transformed into a non-aggression pact. They were also critical of developing Assembly moves to enlarge the functions of the UN Emergency Force.

But Egypt's reaction to the Hammarskjold report was a model of gentleness compared to Israel's. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Jerusalem called the report "negative and unconstructive" and in parts "a masterpiece of obscurity."

The Israelis take exception to Hammarksjold's apparent doubt on the right of free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba. Hammarksjold implied the doubt by referring to a controversy in the International Law Commission on the subject.

"The fact that a commission of the General Assembly has decided procedurally to study a legal topic at a later date does not mean that the established law of freedom of the seas is suspended or that there is an interim sanction for acts of war at sea," an Israeli said.

674 Egypt's Jews Sail for Israel

ATHENS — Six hundred-and-seventy-four Jewish refugees from Egypt, many of them with stories of Cairo police brutality, sail from the Athenian port of Piraeus this week for new homes in Israel.

They arrived in Greece aboard the Egyptian vessel Misr and transferred to a Greek ship for the final leg of their journey. Another 182 Jews who sailed from Egypt with them will remain aboard the Misr until it reaches Naples.

A 26-year-old electronics engineer from Cairo, who asked that his name not be published because his mother may still be in Egypt, said he was arrested on the night of Nov. 1, shortly after Israel invaded Egypt.

'Five Minutes'

He said police took him to headquarters without letting him change out of his pajamas because they wanted to question him only for "five minutes."

The five minutes, he said, turned out to be two-and-a-half months and would have been longer if the International Red Cross had not come to his aid.

On the night of his arrest, he said he was put in a single room with 58 other prisoners, many of them among Cairo's wealthiest Jews.

"In the early morning," he added, "Egyptian officers lined us up and began heaping each of us with abuse . . . some of the most frightful obscenities we ever heard.

"Two days later they took us to the Jewish district school where we slept on the floor, sixteen to each classroom.

"British and French Jews were placed in separate classrooms. One day we heard they had been led away and we never heard anymore about them."

On Nov. 17, the young engineer said, an officer came and asked the prisoners to sign a declaration that they wanted to leave Egypt voluntarily.

'Couldn't Leave'

The engineer said::

"I couldn't leave because I'm the only support of my mother who is too old to travel. The officer slapped me across the face, knocking me down and breaking my spectacles. He told me I was a Jew and that was enough."

A few days later, he said, he was forced to sign a declaration, and on Nov. 19, he and 65 others were led handcuffed to Alexandria and placed aboard the Misr.

Charles H. Jordan, director-general of the American Distribution Committee, who flew to Athens from Paris to meet the new refugees estimated that some 10,000 of the 50,000 Jews living in Egypt "have been expelled or forced to flee in the past two months."

Army Admits It OKd Kilmer's Pro-Nazi Sheet

NEW YORK—An Army spokesman this week conceded that a new Hungarian-American weekly newspaper published by a man described as "a veteran propagandist of Nazi anti-Semitism both in Hungary and the U. S." was being distributed with Army approval to refugees at Camp Kilmer, N. J.

Irving M. Engel, president of the American Jewish Committee, said that Zoltan Fay's paper, Szabad Magyarsag (Free Hungary), was marked by a "flagrantly pro-Nazi spirit."

He said the paper was being distributed secretly at the camp, but the Army said the publication, which has offices at 1592

Protest Posting Of 'Ten Commandments'

ALBANY, N. Y. — The posting of the so-called "Public School Ten Commandments" in schools was deplored this week by an attorney for the American Jewish Congress and the New York Board of Rabbis as "bad theology, bad pedagogy and bad law." At a hearing conducted by James E. Allen, Jr., New York State Commissioner of Education at the Education Building here, Leo Pfeffer, representing the two organizations, argued that the practice of displaying a "non-sectarian" Ten Commandments in schools constitutes "another step in the threatening evolution of a new religion in America — 'public school religion'."

The case of the "non-sectarian" Ten Commandments has come before Mr. Allen in the form of an appeal from parents of schoolchildren attending the public schools of New Hyde Park, Long Island. Late last November, the school board of that community voted to post copies of a special, unnumbered version of the Decalogue in the schools.

To Hold Israel Bond Drive Honoring Cantor's 65th Birthday

A special national drive in celebration of Eddie Cantor's 65th birthday was announced today by the State of Israel Bond drive.

The special campaign in honor of the noted entertainer who has been a leading personality in work for Israel for many years, will highlight Providence's intensive effort to provide the Israel Bond dollars needed to maintain Israel's economic strength during the present Middle Eastern crisis.

The Providence effort is part of a nation-wide campaign to sell a minimum of $75,000,000 in Israel Bonds during 1957. The first $20,000,000 of this sum must be raised before the end of February, to meet Israel's pressing need.

As the result of the emergency Israel now faces, an intensified effort will be made to re-enroll Israel Bond Trustees, Guardians of Israel and National Sponsors for 1957. Trustees are those who purchase $10,000 or more of State of Israel Bonds each year; Guardians of Israel are men and National Sponsors are women who buy $1,000 or more in Israel Bonds each year.

More than 50 men and women leaders of the Providence Israel Bond Committee attended a luncheon meeting last Wednesday (January 23) and heard, on a closed circuit telephone conference, Foreign Minister Golda Meir and Ambassador Abba Eban give a confidential report on the critical political and economic problems confronting Israel and the dire need for Bond dollars to shore up Israel's economy during this critical period. A total of $17,500 in Bonds were purchased by those in attendance, renewing their membership in the Guardians of Israel and National Sponsors. The Committee decided to immediately embark on a drive to re-enroll and to obtain new Trustees, Guardians and Sponsors for 1957.

In stressing the importance of a maximum sale of Israel Bonds during the coming weeks, Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, chairman of the Providence Committee for Israel Bonds, drew attention to Israel's need for economic strength.

Rabbi Bohnen emphasized that the drive in honor of Eddie Cantor's 65th birthday would give decisive impetus to the current effort for Israel Bonds. "There can be no more appropriate tribute to Eddie Cantor," he said, "than the sale of the greatest possible number of Israel Bonds."

Israel Honors Anne Frank

TEL AVIV — An Anne Frank memorial forest is to be planted in the mountains of Jerusalem.

It will honor the young girl and others who were tortured by the Nazis in Holland during World War II.

The "Diary of Anne Frank" is being performed in Israeli theaters.

Hit Religious Bias In Job Practices

NEW YORK — Religious bias still keeps "white collar" workers out of jobs "on all levels, from clerical to professional," according to a five-year survey of six major areas made by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The report, detailing prejudicial hiring practices in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Pennsylvania and among the college placement bureaus of the Midwest, was made public by Henry Edward Schultz, ADL national chairman. About 18% of 20,000 "white collar" job vacancies listed for filling in Chicago in the last six months barred Jews from consideration for those openings, the survey showed.

In Los Angeles, all but one of 126 employment agencies surveyed "had agreed to screen out Jews when referring applicants to prospective employers," the data showed. The single agency that had refused to discriminate against Jewish job applicants is Jewish-owned. The same situation exists in Denver, where 45 out of 46 employment agencies, including public agencies, had agreed to service a request for a secretary with applicants who were "white Protestant."

'Not Anti-Israel; Just Anti-Zionist'

JERUSALEM — Lessing Rosenwald praised Israel and the accomplishments of its people last night after completing a week's tour of the country, but insisted that he was still opposed to Zionism. Rosenwald stressed that the anti-Zionist Council for Judaism, of which he is a former president, is not anti-Israel.

During his visit as a guest of the Government of Israel, Rosenwald conferred with Premier David Ben Gurion, who had extended the invitation to visit Israel. He toured Israel and even visited Sharm el Sheikh, at the Sinai Peninsula.

Occupation in the Sinai

Every occupation force has problems, usually psychological and social ones which not even the best of planning can forsee. Those of a Jewish army in possession of Arab territory are special indeed. El-Arish, an odoriferous mud-walled example of Egyptian modernity—at once the administrative capital and hashish-smuggling center of the Sinai peninsula—typifies several of them.

One is fraternization. No, not the boy-girl kind. But the Jews are a friendly people. So are the Arabs when there is no one around to stoke the fires of their hatreds. The result is that they mingle in the streets and public places of this town of some 30,000 inhabitants in the easy, matter-of-fact way of people who have known each other all their lives.

There is nothing buddy-buddy in Jewish-Arab relations. A Jew doesn't trust an Arab any further than he can throw one over his shoulder. And it will be a long, long time before an Arab evidences genuinely friendly feelings toward a Jew.

But the Arab respects his Jewish conqueror as he respects anyone stronger than himself, particularly when that strength is proved as conclusively as it was by the dazzlingly quick Sinai campaign. The Arab finds, moreover, that the Yemenite, Iraqi and North African Jews of the Israeli Army are astonishingly like himself physically. Many speak Arabic as fluently as the Egyptians themselves. What is most important, none is afraid of the Arab and looks it without being arrogant or offensive.

There is enough fraternization to cause the Israeli authorities to put up signs everywhere, in Hebrew, proscribing the practice. But the Israeli women soldiers in khaki slacks and battle-blouses cannot resist the gaudy scarves and beads offered by hordes of hawkers, all of whom have learned to say "shalom," meaning "peace," and to appreciate Israeli currency.

In the few shops that are open here the merchants freely accept Israeli money as though the Jews were here to stay, which everybody knows, or suspects, isn't true. Israel did not attack Egypt for territorial gain, although it is doubtful that the Jews will give up the Gaza Strip, which is not considered to be Egyptian soil, strictly speaking.

* * *

A second problem, according to Lieut. Col. Aaron Harsina, the chunky, middle-aged military governor of Israeli-occupied territory, is just plain everyday hatred. Not the animosity one might expect between Arabs and Jews, but between the Arabs themselves. Of the town's 30,000 people, 4,000 are refugees from what was once Arab Palestine.

"Some of the residents' leaders," said the governor, "have expressed the hope that we remain in charge here. Not because they love us. I know very well that they don't. But there has been bitter enmity between the permanent population and the refugees, whom the Egyptians apparently treated like slaves, untouchables.

"They are kith and kin, Arabs all, but they hate one another even more than they hate us. If we hadn't moved in so quickly behind the Egyptian army, heaven knows what might have happened to the regular population. There might have been an uprising, and a very bloody one."

But fraternization and intramural animosities are only some of Harsina's problems. There are also the normal ones faced by any occupation forces, with, however, peculiar Arab angles. The town, for instance, is utterly without visible means of support.

* * *

El-Arish is a biggish place, as Egyptian provincial towns go, lying about 30 miles west of the southern end of the Gaza Strip on the dunes that tumble down to the Mediterranean.

But El-Arish has virtually no agriculture, no industries. Its resident population lived on handouts from the large military establishment which the Egyptians maintained here—its best armored division and related services—and its refugee population was supported by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, created to feed and care for the refugees from Arab Palestine. Nobody worked, or not much.

Yet from the balcony of the town major's headquarters over the "business center" were visible the several walled-in green islands surrounding the villas of obviously wealthy persons. They were the homes, it developed, of the town's "hashish millionaires." The hashish traffic was, apparently, El-Arish's main industry.

No one could provide any figures, but the traffic must have been considerable, for the second biggest "industry" was the law. Of the town's small corps of professional people, the overwhelming majority were lawyers. Their standard fee, according to the scanty records found by the Israelis, was the equivalent of $1,200 per case.

Of the professional class, only some of the teachers remained, and they have proved troublesome. They are young, thoroughly indoctrinated with Nasserism. They wouldn't cooperate when the Israelis opened the schools. They heard Nasser's promises that he would be back with his army in a day or two and discouraged the kids from attending classes.

But when the days passed and Nasser did NOT return, the schools began filling up. The Jews assured this reporter they were doing no indoctrinating themselves.

"We're just trying to squeeze some of the hate propaganda out of the Egyptian curriculum," Col. Harsina said. "Believe me, it's some job."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Of These Things We Must Be Sure

By BERYL SEGAL

The hour was too late for a telephone call. When the telephone does ring at such an hour you expect the worse. Bad news? An emergency? My hands were therefore unsteady when I lifted the receiver, and my voice was agitated. But the voice of the caller at the other end sounded even more upset than mine. It was a lady, and though she mentioned her name I did not hear it distinctly, and to this day I do not know who my caller was.

But here was the reason for the late telephone call.

The lady was attending a series of talks on foreign affairs and one of the topics for discussion was dealing with the Arab-Israel conflict. The speaker, a professor at one of the local universities, traced the roots of the Mid-East troubles to the Arab refugee camps. The conflict between the Arab nations and Israel began on the day when the Jews dispossessed the Arab settlers of home and land and chased them across the borders with nothing but their clothes on their backs. So eloquent was the professor in his description of the refugee camps and the plight of the Arabs in those camps that the listeners were moved to tears, and the lady, being Jewish, felt waves of resentment engulfing her.

Now the lady wants to know what are the real facts? Did Israel commit this inhuman wrong to half a million Arabs? Since every controversy has two sides, what is the Israel side of the refugee story? Where could she find facts so that she may be able to stand up and talk back to the professor who, by the way, was never there. He draws his "authoritative" knowledge from the truths dispensed by the Arab League Information Service in the United States. This Arab propaganda agency, very cleverly, harps on the refugee camps in all the literature directed toward the schools and colleges of the land. The wronged Arab pleading for understanding. The underdog appealing for sympathy.

I told the lady what I knew of the Arab-Israel conflict and of the Arab refugees, and I directed her to sources of information. There are many accounts written by Jews and non-Jews. I hope the lady was able to dismay the professor at the next session of the world affairs class. But even more important than that is my hope that she herself was convinced that her professor was not as unbiased and non-partisan as he claimed to be. He is knowingly, or more likely unknowingly a tool in the hands of the Arab League.

Since the telephone conversation I have come upon this painful dilemma in conversations with many Jews young and old alike. On the one hand they cannot believe that Israel would commit such an inhuman crime on the very day of her birth as a state. On the other hand the existence of the Arab refugee camps only a stone's throw from the Israeli borders point an accusing finger at the Jewish state.

And I have often thought whether we do wisely in spending all our efforts to convince the professors of world affairs and to counteract the Arab propaganda. We have much convincing to do in our own midst. After all is said and done, Israel will somehow survive without the good will of this or that professor but it cannot stand up for one day without our own belief in its justice.

Israel will stand or fall by the strength of our faith in the land and the people and the truth of its ways. We cannot tire of repeating again and again the fact that the Arab refugees are not the doing of Israel. The Arabs left the towns and villages of Palestine at the outbreak of the war in 1948 on the advice of the Arab High Command. They were told to get out of the way so that no harm may befall them as the battles of annihilation of Israel were raging, and were promised the spoils when victory was won. They took the advice in hope of gain by the defeat of Israel. The Arab armies lost, and so did the Palestinian Arabs who shared their plans and their hopes of victory. The refugee problem was not created by Israel but by the action of the Arab States.

We must make it be known to all that 200,000 Arabs who did not leave Israel are today living in the land and are citizens of Israel. They are enjoying more freedom and a higher standard of living than Arabs in any Mid-Eastern state. They are the only Arabs whose children have free public schools, whose women have the right to vote and do make use of their right, and whose workers are members of Labor Unions who enjoy the right to work and have all the sick and unemployment benefits that the Jewish workers enjoy. These Arabs have elected four members to the Israel Kneset, the Israel Congress, who make the laws of the land. These Arabs live in better homes and their sick receive better medical care than Arabs of any other land in the area.

We must also tell our own people, as well as non-Jews, of the many efforts on the part of Israel to solve the Arab refugee problem and to break up the camps just as we solved the Jewish refugee problem and removed the displaced persons from the degrading camps. Israel has proposed to give its share of the cost to resettle these refugees and to restore them back to normal life. Is there any need for people to vegetate in squalid camps and subsist on hand-outs from the United Nations while their kinsmen, the Arab States, possess so much undeveloped land and such unlimited riches? The refugee problem would have been solved long ago were it not that the Arabs, who shed tears over the fate of the refugees, would not let them leave the camps. It is too good a weapon against Israel to let go of it. And so the Arabs are still refugees eight years after the war ended.

Again and again Israel has offered to get together and to solve the refugee problem, and every-time their proffered hand is rejected.

Our young people must know this. Their faith in Israel is even more important to us than the good will of Dulles, or Khrustchev, or Dag Hammarskjold, or Nehru of India.

As for myself, whenever I feel low in spirit and doubts creep in to gnaw within me, I conjure up the image of Nasser, of King Saud, of the infantile little King of Jordan, and the corrupt rulers of Syria and Yemen, and my faith in Israel is restored again. If Israel is a thorn in the sides of such as these, I say to myself, then I am sure in the justice of Israel. Let us be sure of this, and we will never lose faith in Israel.

A.D.L. Upheld In $150,000 Bequest By Non-Jewish Donor

NEW YORK — A bequest of around $150,000 to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in the will of a Protestant benefactor was upheld this week by a Queens County judge who dismissed a family action against the bequest by Mrs. Gertrude M. Ellis of Kew Garden Hills, N. Y. It was the largest bequest ever received from a non-Jewish donor, according to A.D.L. officials.

The money was left by Mrs. Ellis, who died a year ago, to the A.D.L. to set up a Kenneth Malcolm Ellis Memorial Fund in honor of her late husband, the funds to be used for education in better human relations.

Mrs. Ellis became acquainted with the work of the A.D.L. during her career as a teacher in a Brooklyn high school where she participated in special A.D.L. human relations programs for schools.

Brandeis Offers Freshmen Aid

WALTHAM, MASS. — Incoming freshmen of "exceptional promise" who enter Brandeis University in September will be eligible for national scholarships with stipends of $1500, it was announced today by Dr. Abram L. Sachar, president of the University.

Scholarships will be awarded for study in the University's four fields of concentration, the Schools of Humanities, Social Science, Creative Arts, and Science.

Recipients of the scholarships will be selected competitively, according to Dr. Sachar.

Sportsmanship

This is the second column I have written this week. The first one, a week delayed as it was, is being pushed back one more issue, and I must offer my apologies to the R. I. Jewish Softball League and the Jewish Community Center for so doing. There is big news involving these two organizations, significant news, for all sports-minded men of the community. This news is not shunted easily aside. As such, it was the theme of the column originally prepared for this issue.

Yet, for this one week, I hope the softball and JCC officials and players will not feel slighted. Another event of importance has bounded to the forefront, largely because of its worth and the imminence of its occurrence.

Originally, when I was apprised of the plans for the second annual sportsmanship night program of Plantations Lodge, B'nai B'rith, I intended merely to tack on a paragraph or two about it to the column about softball, so that the reading public would know that the sportsmanship program will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 6 at Temple Beth Sholom. A couple of committee names, perhaps, plus the intent and theme of the program, along with a reminder that the public is invited to attend. That would suffice.

Then, in my capacity as a judge at this B'nai B'rith affair, I was provided with pertinent information relative to the merits of the high school candidates for the sportsmanship awards to be presented next Wednesday. A few minutes of reading convinced me that the column must be re-written, with the emphasis going to Plantations Lodge.

Last year, at the inaugural sportsmanship night, I was impressed mostly by the persistence with which the guest coaches on the speaking program generally avoided mention of the word "sportsmanship". One of these coaches, I recall, said his school teaches sportsmanship because a penalty on the football field could hurt the team and even contribute to its defeat. Therefore the emphasis on clean play. This seemed like saying that stealing is wrong because one is liable to be caught.

This is not intended as a slur on anyone, merely a factual report on the thinking of some of the coaches, most of whom (let's face the facts) are hired to win, and expected to win, or else. Sportsmanship is of necessity a secondary consideration with them.

For the true meaning of sportsmanship, I refer you to the stated purpose of Plantations Lodge's sportsmanship night, which reads: "To give public recognition to feats of sportsmanship irrespective of athletic prowess in order to stimulate the practice of sportsmanship in everyday life."

Then, for examples of the true meaning of sportsmanship, here are several anecdotes from which Webb Youlden and I were to make our decisions later this week. The stories, all of them refreshing, and revealing of character, bear no postscripts. They are reported here as they were supplied to the judges. Names of athletes and schools are unknown to us as they are to you. The boys' coaches, by the way, made the nominations.

* * *

"I believe that (A), a member of this year's hockey squad should be a candidate for the sportsmanship award. He was in line for a position as a wing on our second line, but gave up this position to take over the goalie job. This was all new to him, and it required many extra hours of practice on his part. This to me was a wonderful bit of sportsmanship to offer to fill the job."

* * *

"(B), co-captain of the school team, injured his knee seriously while competing in a game against the (X) school. Despite his injury he protested vigorously while being removed from the field, insisting that the coach let him continue to play in the game.

"He was treated by the doctor for three weeks and made daily trips to the Y for whirlpool bath treatments.

"The doctor agreed to let him play in the (Z) game, but in this contest the old injury re-occurred and this time he was sidelined for the rest of the season.

"In spite of his inability to play, he inspired the squad by his courage and leadership and attended all the practice sessions and games for the remainder of the season."

* * *

"(C), with the school leading by the score of 20-7, and the ball on the opponent's 15-yard line, called time out and walked off the field to the bench. Addressing the coach he said, 'Send someone in for me, Coach, and tell them to let (Z) carry the ball. He hasn't scored a touchdown yet. All the other backs have scored at least one.' (Z) scored."

* * *

"In a golf match with (X), (D) might have won his match if he had not inflicted a penalty on himself.

"Although he had grounded twice when trying to get out of a trap, his opponent did not recognize the extra strokes and reported a five for (D). This would have given (D) the first nine holes.

"But his honesty came to the fore and he insisted upon penalizing himself the two strokes. This changed his score to seven, and the match went to his opponent."

* * *

"This incident involves a boy who must pay board to the people with whom he lives and also buy his own clothes. It is absolutely necessary for this boy to work if he wishes to stay in school.

"His chief athletic interest is basketball, a sport at which he excels and in which he is able to use his six feet four inches of height to great advantage. In order to play basketball he must sacrifice participation in all other sports, and he must work even harder to make up for the loss of income which participation in basketball incurs.

"Last fall an appeal was made to him to play football, since our material was rather poor generally. His coming out for the team meant an even greater loss in income than he had been suffering, but, more than this, he stood to jeopardize his basketball career by possible injury in football. Nevertheless he played. Although he had never played football before, he was chosen as All Class (X) player."

* * *

Which episode will win the contest? Don't crowd me — haven't made up my own mind yet, let alone consulted with Webb Youlden.

Also on the program will be awards to three girls for their essays on sportsmanship. Bet we get some highly illuminating definitions of the word from the gals.

Anyway, for a sports night program that is different, that has a constructive, morally uplifting purpose, I feel I can recommend sincerely the Plantations Lodge affair next Wednesday at 8 P.M.

R. I. Boy Qualifies Twice for Annapolis

Not once, but twice, Morris B. Mellion, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mellion of Sessions Street, has finished first in the Naval Academy competitive examination.

Young Mellion took the exam more than a year ago, when he was too young to qualify for a 1956 appointment. With this try-out to his credit, he took the test again for next July's class, and again heads Senator Theodore Francis Green's list for appointment to Annapolis.

Morris is a graduate of Moses Brown School, and was one of 34 Rhode Island finalists recently in the nationwide National Merit Scholarship Corporation competition.

Joel G. Caslowitz of 529 Prospect Street, Woonsocket, was named second alternate for the appointment.
