"Power," Based on Feuchtwanger's Novel to be Shown at Centerdale Community Theatre

The Gaumont British picturization of Lion Feuchtwanger's novel, "Power," which has enjoyed such widespread popularity both here and abroad (except in Germany) will open at the Community Theatre in Centerdale, Monday night and will play there through Thursday night.

Remarkably photographed, acted by the finest cast assembled by a British company, it is a picture that every Jew in Providence should see. It is the only showing billed for Providence.

The story is of a Joseph Suss Op-conjunction with a special educational program of the Zionist Organization of America. It also celebrated the 15th day of the Hebrew month, Shevat, which is known as the New Year of the trees and is the beginning of the Spring cycle.

The Pawtucket and Central Falls Senior Hadassah acted as hostesses at a reception held in the vestry which followed the services. The hostesses were Mrs. Julius Robinson, ex officio, Mesdames Morris Sholovitz, Edward Kalman, John Marks, Barney Korenbaum and Louis Lipson. penheimer, known after his rise to fame, as Jew Suss, who becomes one of the most powerful statesmen in Germany of 1730. The sense of inferiority that he has pushes him forward, to success after success. Then he learns that he is really a Gentile, he had been adopted by a Jew, but circumstances are such that he clings to the Jewish faith. For him, it is his faith; to it he keeps his allegiance, even to death.

It is a strong and moving drama, produced lavishly, and carefully.

ORPHANAGE MARKS 25th ANNIVERSARY

As one of the outstanding institutions of its kind in the country, the Jewish Orphanage of Rhode Island has now definitely taken its rightful place as a progressive organization employing modern technique in child care and development. It has now passed the quarter century milestone in its long service to the community and to the state — the officers and directors may well be proud of their great work in not only devoting their best abilities to a truly philanthropic work, but also in obtaining the confidence and co-operation of the community at large.

To make a real home for the homeless is at best a most delicate problem. However, the policies entertained by the administration to treat each ward as an individual have been noteworthy in their effectiveness in developing the various talents and interests of the children. Obviously, the result has been highly successful in making scores of children become worthy men and women, married and with children of their own, happy, ever grateful for the opportunity to work out their destiny with a minimum of embarrassment and loneliness.

The annual meeting of the Orphanage next Sunday will bring to the fore the noble efforts and practical aims of the Superintendent, Mr. Stollerman, who has simply done a "swell" job. He has endeavored with the others to make this institution always free of machine-like procedure and coldly stereotyped methods. The initiative of the youngsters is thus given a chance to grow normally; thus we note a proper amount of intelligent discipline without the proverbial disciplinary measures usually ascribed to such organizations. When patience, understanding, liberality and freedom are practiced by the authorities, the Rhode Island Jewry may well be proud of its orphanage. Those who have been associated with its progress and administration must truly feel the deepest sense of satisfaction with the fruits of their efforts — a work of love is a godly thing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Readers of this newspaper are invited to send in questions regarding the Protestant, Catholic or Jewish faiths. These questions may touch upon any aspects of these faiths. Questions will be answered in this column as promptly as possible and should be addressed to this newspaper or to the National Conference of Jews and Christians, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Q—What is the Jewish attitude toward the liquor problem?

A—The juice of the grape is frequently praised in Scripture. "Wine, which cheereth God and man" (Judges IX, 13). It is considered a good stimulant for "such as lie faint in the wilderness" (II Sam. XVI, 2). Several of the Psalms compare Israel to a vine. The ideal of Peace is that every man should rest "under his vine and fig tree." In the Rabbinic literature, wine is praised for its medicinal qualities but severe warnings are given against excess drinking. "One who drinks excessively is certain to become poor" says a Rabbi in the Talmud. The Talmud also reports that Abba Saul, a grave digger, made observation on bones and found that the bones of those who drank excessively were scorched — devoid of marrow.

Little is said about stronger drink in rabbinic literature, but the Jews have been throughout history a very sober people. Cases of alcoholism are rarely found among them. Statistics from large Jewish hospitals show that only one tenth of one percent of cases admitted were for alcoholism, while the percentage of alcoholic cases in general hospitals is between three and five percent. Some have attributed this to racial temperament and the sane attitude toward drink in the religious literature of the Jews. Others point to the Jew's position as a minority group necessitating a more rigid code of good behavior.

Q—Are there not many divisions and sects in the Catholic Church such as the Franciscans, the Dominicans, the Jesuits? Father Bertrand L. Conway of the Paulist Fathers answers this question as follows:

A—No. The religious orders of the Catholic Church are not, like the denominations in Protestantism, separatist churches, with creeds of their own devising. They are bodies of men that have arisen at different ages of church history to give men the example of a particular virtue, like the poverty of the Franciscan or the obedience of the Jesuit, and to carry on a special work of charity, education or missionary activity. Every order believes in every teaching of the Catholic faith; they differ only in matters of opinion, wherein every Catholic is free. As Cardinal Newman says: "Augustinians, Dominicans, Franciscans, Jesuits and Carmelites have indeed their respective homes and schools, but they have, in spite of all that, a common school and a common home."

Q—In discussing intolerance religious leaders always single out Protestants as the guilty party. Is this fair? Haven't Catholics and Jews a lot to answer for?

A—No single group has a monopoly on intolerance and prejudice. As individuals, it is probable that Protestants are not less tolerant than their Catholic or Jewish neighbors. Catholic and Jewish groups have each been guilty of intolerance during the course of history when the occasion and opportunity made it possible. But Protestants have always formed the majority group in this country and the history of political and social discrimination and intolerance in this country has been consequently mainly that of Protestant attitudes. In the early days the Puritans maltreated Quakers and Baptists, minority religious groups though Protestant. Later, when Catholics came in large numbers they were the object of various hostile movements as were the Jews still later when Jewish immigration increased. The majority group was the aggressor, as always, and under the circumstances that have prevailed in America, the majority has been Protestant. Doubtless there is prejudice and misunderstanding on the part of Catholics and Jews directed toward Protestants, but prejudice is most disastrous when it becomes the organized, aggressive movement of a majority against a minority group.

The following spoke: Ralph Cohen, "Palestine and the American Jewish Youth"; David Hassenfeld, "The Arab Problem"; Milton Horvitz, "Anti-Semitism"; Frank Licht, "The Dream and the Realization"; Miss Harriet Winnerman, "What Palestine Means to Me," and Miss Beatrice Klemmer, "Palestine and the Jewish Woman."

A full choir under the direction of Jonas Goldenberg assisted Cantor

Joseph Schlossberg in the reading of the service. Miss Bella Goldenberg was at the organ.

The husbands were the guests of the ladies and thoroughly enjoyed the evening, which concluded with dancing.

Chamisha Osor was also celebrated by the children of the Religious School, who presented a program of recitations, addresses and sketches before several hundred children and parents Sunday morning. Besides the pupils of the beginner's classes, the following participated: Address on Chamisha Osor, Harold Ratush; Palestine, Maurice Cohen; Trees of Palestine, Doris Bachman. Two playlets were presented in which the following participated: Howard Rosenberg, Beverly Lightman, Evelyn Fowler, Frances Singer, Regina Schlossberg, and Adelle Lamchick. Every child present was later given a bag of Palestine fruit, prepared by the Sisterhood, under the chairmanship of Mrs. L. A. Marcus.

Around The Town

By JOSEPH M. FINKLE

Glad to have heard from so many of you since my advent as a columnist Friday last — if only for the reason that I will hear from my friends and a few enemies from time to time I will feel that these lines of comment and gossip will not have been in vain . . . Write often . . . and, of course, send along the doings of you and yours — these columns are for you and you and about you — and I repeat once again if you find these paragraphs interesting — I take no credit — because it is you that makes them interesting.

Dr. Jay Fishbein, Dr. Samuel Gorfine and Sam Medoff, our Woonsocket Adonis have returned from Southern climes with many a tale . . . Dr. Fishbein is head of the staff at the North End Dispensary . . . Dr. Gorfine is the thriving "yanker out" on Atwells Avenue while handsome Sam M. is a valuable member of the staff at the R. I. Hospital Trust in Woon.

There are six places I'd rather be than here — and all six of them are in Florida . . . It's an open season now for post card addicts with the usual trite and none-the-less maddening inscription of the "Wish you were here" type . . . Florida-bound soon or already there are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Magid, Max Winograd, Lennie Levine, Louis Rosenberg, Irving Nagers, the Philip Weinstains, Joseph Willner, Mrs. Jacob Hochberg, Miss Sally Teath, Mrs. Morris Mellion, Mrs. B. Tichman, and many more . . . Miami seems like a suburb of Providence and, of course, Mr. Magid's hotel there is a popular spot for localities.

Aaron Roitman, the furniture czar, has been flitting hither and yon of late . . . hither to Chicago and now it is yon to New York.

I heard gossip about one of our local communists who was called on the carpet by the party because his daughter was planning a religious ceremony at her wedding. Was his face red!

Did you notice the beautiful cover on the January issue of "American Home"? It was painted by Mrs. Florence Baron Wise of Edgewood, who is brining renown to our village by her fine contributions to American art.

George Jordan is the most Jewish Gentile I know. He speaks Yiddish almost as well as you . . . has a host of Jewish friends . . . versatile, yes, plays the violin beautifully . . . an expert photographer, etches and if he gains another pound he is going to study tap dancing.

I saw Valencia Lapsitz at the Gertrude Stein lecture on Monday eve. I know all about it Valencia but if you didn't did it you didn't did it but if you did it you did it, but how did you did it— please write and tell me, Valencia.

Echoes from Woonsocket . . . Marion Rubin tells me the Y. W. H. A. will hold an informal dance this Sunday nite in the Temple vestry . . . a cordial invite is extended to all . . . Arthur Kornstein, that Jack-of-all-trades, wants the world to know that the eloquent orator Rabbi Joseph Shubow of Boston, will occupy the pulpit of the Woonsocket Temple tonight . . . by the way this same Rabbi will speak before the new local unit of the American Jewish Congress a week from this Sunday . . . more details on this later.

Congrats to the Herman Hassenfelds on their great 35th wedding anniversary of last Sunday nite . . . Herman is the elder brother of the famous Hassenfeld Bros. . . . Henry and Hillel . . . two of our better known citizens and actively interested in things Jewish.

My first invitation was from none other than Master Joel Irwin Feinberg, who is planning great things for his birthday party next month . . . and what an event . . . Joel is the 11-month-old son of the Norman Feinbergs, and his party will be in celebration of his first birthday.

Arthur Einstein just called. This genial and well-liked director of the Temple Emanu-El choir and one of our leading instructors of piano reminds me that David Roitman and Leib Glantz, prominent New York cantors, will be the principal artists in the gala concert which he is directing at the Plantations Club Auditorium on this Sunday eve. Arthur is also presenting his chorus of 30 voices. A worthy event worth hearing and the proceeds to a worthy cause.

SIDELIGHTS

Mrs. Alfred A. Fain, sweet, charming wife, mother and grandmother, Jewish leader, interested in Jewish womanhood, for several years, president of the League of Jewish Women's Organizations, leader in Hadasah — wife of one of our leading business men, mother of three sons and two daughters — sincere and of great understanding — I place her on my list of those who have their fellowmen and women always first at heart.

The Ted Galkins say "yes, it's a boy" . . . Florence Goldblatt and Hy Pressman will soon tell it to the rabbi and then to Florida . . . Sam Gardner, our own great violinist will feature the Jewish Orphanage meeting Sunday afternoon . . . remember Igor Gorin, sweet of voice whom Rabbi Jacob Sonderling discovered in Vienna several years ago and introduced to Providence at Temple Beth Israel? . . . He is now a featured N. B. C. artist and can be heard locally through WJAR on Monday afternoons . . . this handsome boy sure made hearts flutter.

Harry R. Rosen and Max Rosen started the Franklin Auto Supply with $5 and a prayer . . . There is also Ben Bromberg (to you, Benny) of Benn's Auto Stores — an example of a self-made man . . . Dr. Myron Heller and Dr. Gerald Feinberg, two of our younger citizens conversing with Dr. Harry Goldman at Dorrance and Westminster — there goes Walter Sundlun, brief-case in hand — he is our silver-toned orator and sure made them take notice during the last campaign . . . Judge Phil Joslin and Rabbi Goldman mutually congratulating each

JFW Society Cared for 281 Families Last Year

Meeting with the Council of Jewish Social Workers, Morris Lewis, field representative of the National Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, will speak here on the significance of recent trends in Jewish communal activities on Monday evening, February 4.

At the first regular meeting of the board of directors of the Jewish Family Welfare Society, Monday night, Miss Jessie Josolowitz, executive director, submitted her report indicating that during 1934, 281 Jewish families had been under the care of the society. Of this number 132 received relief in various forms. Abraham Blackman gave his treasurer's report.

Arthur J. Levy is president of this organization; first vice president is Moses Einstein; second vice president, Alter Boyman; secretary, Dr. Joseph Smith; treasurer, Abraham Blackman.

CONCERT DIRECTOR

DR. WASSILI LEPS

The Providence Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Wassili Leps, conductor, at its second concert of the season at the Metropolitan Theater, January 29, will play Mozart's G Minor Symphonie. This is one of the composer's most beautiful numbers and is included in response to many requests for Mozart Symphonie. The orchestra will also play the Prelude and Isolde's Love-death scene from music drama "Tristan and Isolde" by Richard Wagner.

This marvelous composition from the pen of the great master expresses the poignant grief of Isolde at the death of her lover Tristan, with whom she fell in love while he was conveying her to his King to whom she was to be wedded. Altho Isolde and Tristan were enemies, it was thanks to Isolde's lady in waiting Brangaene who in mixing the phials administered a powerful love Tristan and his bride-to-be, Isolde, King Marke, upon learning that Tristan and his bride to be Isolde, were in love, wounded Tristan mortally in combat, and banished him to a lonely island, where Tristan was doing when Isolde arrives, and her grief at finding her lover on the point of death caused her to join him, which this composition illustrates.

After the Lalo Symphony Espagnole for Violin and Orchestra, in which Grisha Goluboff will be heard playing on one of the most famous and almost priceless Stradivarius violins, the orchestra will finish the concert with Massenet's brilliant "Scenes Napolitaines."

This is the fifth of a number of suites for orchestra, and is perhaps the most effective and popular one written by the French master. It begins with a Tarantelle, followed by a religious chant, then comes a theme and variations, ending in a very brilliant Finale depicting a Fete or Festival.

Mrs. Samuel Starr, lover of the drama and coach of the players at the Jewish Community Center who will trot the boards at the Barker Playhouse this Sunday nite . . . Who is that chain store manager who insists upon being called "Mister" by a clerk who not so long ago was his classmate at high school? . . . Mr. Silverman of the Narragansett Tailoring Company has the same trouble with pencils as we . . . he carries a large assortment in his vest pocket with the result that his good friends are not at all bashful in helping themselves to a percentage of the supply.

Best wishes for success to Leon Flanzbaum who is opening his new shoe store this week on Union Street, where Bailey's used to be . . . and to William Bielfeld, genial N. Rochelle man, who is to occupy a portion of his store for the sale of millinery. They say that Robert Allinson, manager of Carroll's Cut-Rate Store is enjoying great success . . . With which request we close for the week.
