

Nazi Ransom Plan

The solution of the Refugee problem offered by the Nazi government bears the same pattern which Hitler has used so successfully in the invasion of Austria, the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and in the solution of other political problems which had been prepared for Reich.

The brazenness of the so-called Schacht plan coming on the heels of the November pogroms which have been prepared for months to the minutest detail and staged with unexampled bestiality, is evidence that the Nazi regime thought the Jews and the world to be so shocked into fear as to accept anything that Hitler may offer.

The mere fact that this plan is now being seriously discussed, is an indication that the sheer absurdity of the Schacht plan is no guarantee against its acceptance in whole or in part. This is something that no liberal-minded man can contemplate with equanimity.

Before we permit another surrender of democracy to brutal force we must visualize the full implications involved in this new Nazi "conquest."

Is there to be a repetition of the Munich peace negotiations?

Faith

If England would recognize Ethiopia as part of the Italian Empire, Mussolini would withdraw his troops from the Spanish conflict, was one of the clauses of the Anglo-Italian pact recently signed.

The Duce ordered, as a token of friendship, the withdrawal of 10,000 troops. Chamberlain, in return, in his toast to King Emanuel referred to him as Emperor of Ethiopia.

This week Mussolini stated that Italy was prepared to send even more fighters to the insurgent army to insure a rebel victory.

Will 1939 Be Mussolini's Year?

By general consent, though for the most part given grudgingly, 1938 was "Hitler's year." With the Fascist end of the Rome-Berlin axis lending its vociferous moral support from the sidelines, the Nazis gained 34,000 square miles of territory and 10,500,000 population last year by seizing Austria and the Sudetenland as prizes through ruthless application of the piracy principle to international politics.

Has the time come for Il Duce to remind Fuehrer Hitler of the debt he owes Fascist Italy for having stood by him in his hours of danger last year?

After Mussolini, erstwhile "protector" of the little republic, had acquiesced in the blotting out of Austria, Hitler last March telegraphed him: "I shall never forget this." These words contained a pledge of future Nazi support—moral, economic or military.

But Chamberlain, during his visit last week to Rome, indicated to Premier Mussolini that Herr Hitler is using him as a dupe. This coupled with the reputed story that the Fuehrer "advised" the Duce to postpone his demands until 1940 has created the strong suspicion that all is not well with the Rome-Berlin axis.

It is not likely that Mussolini will tarry. Like all dictators he must continually be pulling rabbits out of the hat. The recent victories of Franco in the Spanish Civil war may provide him with the lever he has been seeking.

Father Held for Murder in Imbecile Son Mercy Killing

NEW YORK. — Louis Greenfield, who took away a life he had helped to create, was ready this week to go through the formalities of the law.

Jerry, his seventeen-year-old imbecile son, was dead.

Anne, his gray-haired wife, had considered the death of her son by her husband's hand and decided it was right.

At the Greenfield home, 2840 Sedgwick Avenue, the Bronx, began the traditional week of mourning. The chairs had been taken away and in their stead were boxes. Shoes had been placed in a closet. Ten adult males were gathered to pray for the spirit of the dead youth.

Dutch Find Shots at Nazis Were Pebbles Reich Blamed Jewish Refugees

AMSTERDAM. — Police guards were posted around homes and offices of German officials in The Netherlands this week, although an attack on a German-occupied building for which Nazi papers angrily blamed Jews gave evidence of being only a "slingshot crisis."

The police details were ordered following German diplomatic representations and an angry Nazi press clamor.

But Netherlands detectives believe that the "mysterious bullets from ambush" were nothing more than pebbles from the slingshot of a boy.

Detectives said their theory was confirmed when a "bullet hole" in a window of the Brazilian Consulate in Amsterdam turned out to have been made by a pebble from a slingshot.

Sharp Drop in Nazi Exports Revealed

NEW YORK. — An analysis of German trade figures released by Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum, chairman of the Joint Boycott Council, coordinating agency for all anti-German boycott activities in this country, reveals a sharp slump in German export trade during the third quarter of 1938. German exports for this period were approximately 259 million marks below the corresponding three months in 1937.

This drastic curtailment of German exports, now causing the gravest concern to Nazi leaders, was attributed by Dr. Tenenbaum to the increasing effectiveness of the boycott movement and to the collapse of the German trade barter system.

German foreign trade for the first 11 months of 1938 showed a deficit of 400 million marks. This compares with a 422 million marks export surplus for the corresponding period of 1937.

"Our Religious, Cultural And Philanthropic Needs"

By DR. ISRAEL M. GOLDMAN

This is the second in a series of four addresses being made by Dr. Israel M. Goldman at Temple Emanuel on "Planning the future of the Providence Jewish Community." The third lecture will be published in next week's issue of the Herald.

One of our major problems is how to reach the masses of our Jewish community, and how to bring them a little closer to Jewish life.

I have indicated that about half of our total Jewish population constitutes what we might call "A lost tribe in Israel" living within our own city. The presence of such an appalling number of men, women, young people and children who live outside the pale of Judaism and Jewish interests must serve as a stirring challenge to our Temples and Synagogues.

The only way that our religious institutions will be able to meet that challenge will be by promoting such types of Synagogue programs and activities as to make of each Temple and Synagogue a veritable Synagogue Center. This is, of course in true keeping with the traditional role of the Synagogue in Jewish life.

It is known to all that in days of yore the Synagogue served in a three-fold capacity: it was a House of Prayer, to be sure. But it was more than that. It was also a House of Study. That meant that it afforded cultural programs, not only for children, but for adults. Finally, the Synagogue also served as a House of Assembly. In modern terms we might say that in this latter function, the Synagogue served as a center for social recreation.

Unfortunately, in the last generation or two our Synagogue ceased functioning, in the fullest sense of the word, as Houses of Study and as Houses of Assembly. They limited their program of activities only to sponsoring services and worshipping. This became very apparent about forty years ago in this country. The Orthodox congregations became more and more merely Houses of Worship. It is true they wanted to have their Synagogues serve as Houses of Study, too. They tried to sponsor Talmud Torahs and Hebrew schools, but somehow, these institutions lost step with the need of the educational needs of American Jewish youth, so that gradually these Synagogues began to be less and less Houses of Study and they began to serve only the exclusive purpose of being Houses of Worship.

The same was also true of our Reform Temples. They based their philosophy of Judaism on the fact that Judaism was only a religion and that the Jewish people were nothing more than a religious sect. It followed, therefore, that the only purpose which the Temple should serve was that of an "ecclesia"—a church—a place of worship and in a very narrow sense, a place for teaching religion. So that we witnessed, about thirty or forty years ago in America, the strange paradox of having orthodox and reform congregations, each standing at opposite ends of the pole from one another, yet united in the fact that they served only as Houses of Worship. They ceased to stand in close touch with the throbbing educational and recreational needs of the Jewish Community.

Kaplan's Synagogue Center

About a quarter of a century ago, Professor Kaplan viewed the moribund orthodox Synagogues' and reform Temples' congregations with alarm. He wanted to re-create the Synagogue as an institution which would reach the needs of the masses of the Jewish people. He therefore conceived of the idea of having the Synagogue resume its ancient functions by becoming a SYNAGOGUE CENTER. When the re-

Storr Says Iron Hand Will Calm Palestine Praises Jews' Work There

NEW YORK — The solution to the Arab-Jewish conflict in Palestine lies in a program of suppression of violence with an iron hand, and the maintenance of Balfour's doctrine including unrestricted immigration of Jewish refugees.

This was asserted last week by Sir Ronald Storr, former British Governor of Palestine.

He criticized the fifty-members of the League of Nations who "in twenty years offered not a single constructive suggestion toward elimination of strife and friction."

Sir Ronald opened his talk with high praise of President Roosevelt for the selection of Professor Felix Frankfurter for the Supreme Court.

Speaking highly of the Jewish population of Palestine in their efforts to reconstruct their homeland and make a "garden in the desert," Sir Ronald said Jewish domination of the locality was the result principally of the intelligence and initiative of the race.

Everyone Wants A Session With Charlie

HOLLYWOOD. — Hollywood is the town where most of the eminent citizens are anxious to get into an argument with a wooden dummy, who is at all times the most formally dressed man in town.

It was Edgar Bergen's original idea that it would be amusing to have Charlie McCarthy get into arguments and make love to the movie stars. He says that he never expected the idea to grow to such fantastic proportions, however.

It all started the night of the Chase and Sanborn Hour premiere May 9, 1937, when Charlie had a short talk with Ann Harding. It was Carole Lombard two weeks later who got into the first knockdown and drag-out fight with Charlie.

Now, after 18 months, every body is anxious to have a little session with McCarthy.

THE AGE OF WISDOM

Directly since my life began
I've liked a certain type of man
The tall, dark-haired and lean . . .

But when I met you I forgot
Everything that you were not
I clean forgot instead of tall
You were hardly tall at all
And I forgot instead of lean
You were sort of in-between . . .

Your hair's not dark, but I don't care
Fact is, you haven't got much hair!
But what can all this mean? . . .

I must confess I liked a type
(Gary Cooper with a pipe)
But I was young and silly then
Gullible with handsome men
I've learned to play the silly game
And after all, you're all the same! . . .

—Leda

Last Monday nite the Repertory Theatre of the Air, directed by Syd Long, presented "When the Sun Rises," . . . It was publicized as an opportunity to get an "inside view on the technique of a radio broadcast" in all its fascinating angles . . . As one spectator described it, "It definitely shattered whatever illusion I might have had, as to the glamour of radio production." . . . While most people are eager to know what goes on beyond the curtain, such a scene once glimpsed is disappointing to the great majority . . .

On the following nite, another illusion was smashed at the same address, in the person of John B. Kennedy, writer, commentator and (speaker). . . Handsome John, he of the florid complexion and unruly iron-gray hair, wandered without rhyme or reason, through a discourse entitled, "What's Wrong With the World?" . . . He blew both hot and cold on Fascism, Communism and Democracy, and admitted he had never learned a definition of any . . . His soft Irish brogue made about as much impression with this naive scribbler as a refugee's plea would make with Hitler . . . Mr. Kennedy may be a great figure in his own field, but before any other local organization brings him to lecture, they ought to make him pass an I. Q. test on his topic . . .

"2nd Munich" of Dictators Grimly Satirized in Paris

Henri de Kerillis, Parliamentary Deputy, told Paris in a newspaper satire this week that Mussolini and Hitler have prepared a "second Munich" to occur when and if Spanish insurgents enter Barcelona.

An imaginary telephone conversation between the two dictators was published in the Deputy's newspaper, l'Epoque.

It went like this:

Hitler: As soon as Franco enters Barcelona we'll pull a second Munich coup.

Mussolini: Without wasting a minute, Adolf.

A Lot of Massing

Hitler: And here's how you do it—you mass 500 planes behind the Pyrenees, 500 seaplanes and thirty submarines in the Balearics, 500 seaplanes in Spanish Morocco. After that you tell Daladier you want Djibouti—

Mussolini, breaking in:—And Tunisia?

Hitler, apparently irritated: No, I've told you a hundred times that you must go slowly at the beginning. It's the principle of the thing that counts.

Mussolini: Okay, Adolf. But let's look at the dark blue side. If war breaks out are we going to be all right?

Soviet and Czechs Poles Apart

Hitler, confidently: My dear Benito, if war starts we should be a thousand times better off than at Munich. I wouldn't have anybody in my rear because I've just made a deal with Beck (Polish Foreign Minister). My food supplies toward the east would be assured because I've got Czechoslovakia under lock and key. I wouldn't be afraid of Russian airplanes from Czech airfield. And on top of all, you would have a handful of trumps against France from Spain.

Mussolini: How careful you are, Adolf.

Hitler: But we must go easy.

Mussolini: I'll follow your instructions to the letter, Adolf. They hang up.

True Stories

A couple of years ago, when the Havara arrangement with Palestine was initiated, a certain German Jew converted his sizeable fortune into goods and emigrated to Palestine . . . The Yishub, always anxious to help a refugee, bought his goods, and pretty soon the gent in question, had his money back . . . So he took a boat for France, and settled down in a Riviera hotel to await developments . . . Pretty soon his reading of the financial pages convinced him that business was booming in Germany . . . So he packed his trunk and went back to Berlin, bank account and all, to make hay while the sun shone . . . The pay-off is that now he has to sell his new—and flourishing—business in order to raise the dough to pay his allotted share of the $100,000,000 payment recently extorted from the Jews of Nazi-land . . .

Which Side

Then there's the occurrence that took place at a recent broadcast in New York, made in connection with a plea for aid for German Jewish refugees . . . One of the speakers remarked that after all Germany isn't the great air power of the world . . . Whereupon a bona fide refugee in the broadcasting room grew so volubly indignant that attendants had to hustle him out, lest he break up the program . . .

Attention California:—Herodotus, the Greek historian, when he described Egypt back about 450 B. C., praised its salubrious climate and prosperous life, but complained the place was full of medical practitioners, most of whom were "high-fee specialists."

Perhaps Fascism wouldn't make such great strides in so many countries if somebody would take the trouble to explain to the public that the Fascist and Nazi salute dates from Roman antiquity, when—as now—it was the sign of the slave greeting his master . . .

N. Y. Schools Plan Tolerance Courses

NEW YORK. — The Board of Education has voted to introduce courses in tolerance in the school system. The resolution provides that assembly programs be set aside in each school to present the constructive contributions of the various racial and religious groups. It is hoped that good-will and tolerance among students and teachers can be fostered and mutual respect for the accomplishments of all races will result.

Felix Frankfurter

BY CAL TINNEY

DEAR PAPA,

They have been trying to dig up something on Felix Frankfurter to keep him from getting a Supreme Court appointment, but the only guilt they have been able to hang on him so far is he smokes cigarettes.

It's been charged that he whistles while he works, but they haven't proved it yet.

Economy advocates also say he shouldn't be put on the Supreme Court because he is too slight of build—that it will call for the purchase of a cushion for him to sit on or he won't be able to see anybody that's before the bench.

His Scholarship Finds Favor

But every lawyer in the country seems to be in favor of the ex-Harvard professor for the Supreme Court job. As one put it, "I would rather be decided against by a bright lawyer than be awarded the case by a dumb one."

I don't think that lawyer meant exactly what he said—he wouldn't be a lawyer if he did—but it sort of reflects how people who value scholarship are for Frankfurter.

Even Sherman Minton, the Indiana Senator who wants to be a Supreme Court justice so bad he can't see straight, says "Dr. Frankfurter is one of the great legal scholars of our day."

What does Felix look like at fifty-seven? Well, he's small, as heretofore hinted, and red-faced, and has no more hair than you can shake a hair-brush at.

As far as dress, he looks like a wealthy fashionable medico. Any minute you expect him to say, "Open your mouth and say 'Ah'."

He likes to read Herodotus who was a reporter in Greece back in the old days I don't know whether Herodotus worked for the Associated Press or the United Press, but he was a good leg man and always filed his stuff on time.

A Stream-lined "Conservative"

In some ways, as you might have guessed, Felix Frankfurter is modern, and up-to-date, and in other ways he is about as stream-lined as a bustle. He's married but he has no children; that's modern. But he is so old-fashioned as to prefer pen and ink-bottle to these newfangled typewriters.

He wears pinch-nose glasses, and enjoys a cocktail, and reads fast. "Gone With the Wind" was the best thirty-minutes' reading he can remember.

What does Mr. Roosevelt's new Supreme Court appointee believe? Well, he believes there are too many laws, for one thing. He opposed the Lindbergh kidnap law on those grounds.

Felix Frankfurter

min Cohen, and others to carry out the Roosevelt New Deal. As this was only the 1920s, that is what you call range planning.

There is a story that President Lowell didn't like Jews on the Harvard faculty, but when he couldn't get the Law School dean, Roscoe Pound, to fire Frankfurter, Lowell said, "Okay, but one Frankfurter to the Pound is enough."

A Liberal as a Professor

Felix wasn't popular even with the Harvard alumni when he demanded a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti in 1927.

Some people detect a little vanity in Felix. Anyhow, some of his "Harvard Boys" ride him for a line in his "Who's Who" biography. It reads, "Declined Gov. Ely's nomination to Mass. Supreme Judicial Court, June, 1932."

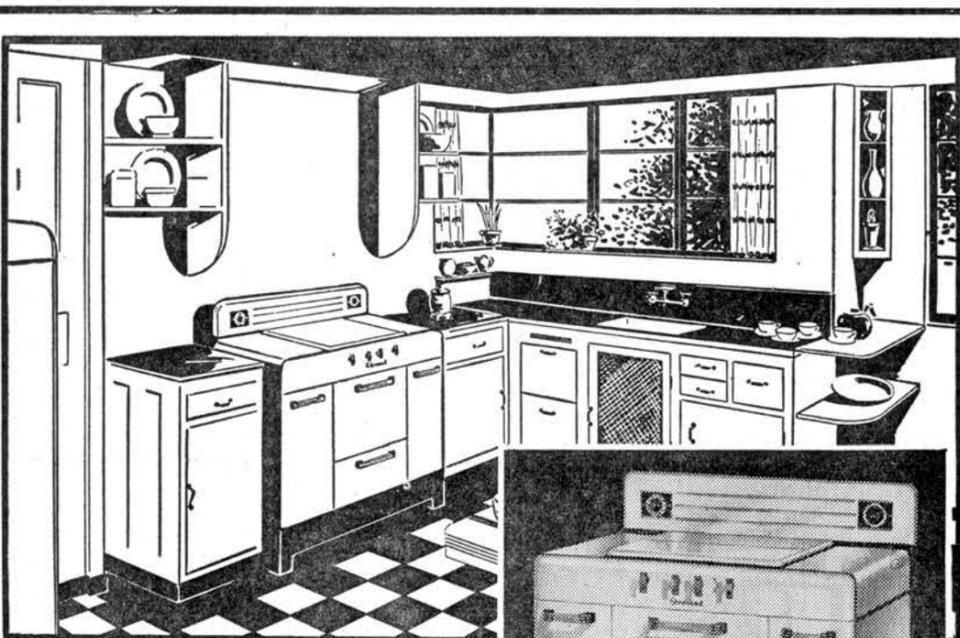

Then came the New Deal. Besides shooting about a hundred and twenty-five of the "Frankfurter boys" down to Washington to take important jobs, Felix leaped in himself and drafted parts of the securities and utility holding company acts.

But all the time his hobby was the United States Supreme Court, and all the time he was studying it.

Now he has been appointed to a perch in that judicial hen-house. The Senate Confirmation was a foregone conclusion. You see, Papa, Felix is on record for having said some years ago, "No body of men in the U. S. work harder than the Senate or with more intelligence."

"Our Religious, Cultural And Philanthropic Needs"

By DR. ISRAEL M. GOLDMAN

ligious institution conceives its program in terms of a Synagogue Center it at once ceases to be merely a House of Worship; of necessity it begins to conceive of itself in terms of such types of activities that will keep its building open seven days and seven nights in the week. That, of necessity, implied educational programs for children, youth and adults. That, of necessity, further implied the bringing together of masses of Jewish people for occasions of social and physical recreations as well.

Democratization of Synagogues

Such programs as a Synagogue Center have afforded the further merit of democratizing the Synagogue. It was only recently when Temples especially were more or less exclusive clubs. If you had so much money to pay per year, you "belonged" to the Temple. Then the members of your family could belong to the Sisterhood or the Men's Club, and the children could belong to the "Religious School." All others were hardly welcomed. But when a Synagogue conceives of itself in terms of a Synagogue Center, then it could make room for twice or three times the number of those who actually are members of the congregations itself, to cite the instance of Temple Emanu-El, and I hasten to add that it is not a lone instance and I cite it only because I know it best. We here, because we are imbued by the philosophy of Professor Kaplan, and even though we have not adequate facilities for it yet, we minister to more than 400 Jewish families, in addition to those 300 families who are members of our own congregation.

This Is Our Need

I would say, then, that our first religious need in our community is to have our Temples and our Synagogues develop such programs as to make them serve in whatever neighborhood of the community they may be located in, as veritable Houses of Instruction and Assembly for the Jewish people in those particular neighborhoods. I believe that our Temples are more and more adopting such points of viewing such programs, but I am frank enough to state that our Orthodox congregations have yet a long way to go in order to serve adequately the needs of the Jewish Community in which they are located. It is most disturbing to me to walk along Williard avenue, Prairie avenue, Orms street, Douglas ave., Lippitt street and Howell street, and see our Jewish youth standing on the street corners when in those very neighborhoods stand Synagogues empty and idle. Here then, is the mighty challenge, to our Temples and Synagogues, both to do their share in reaching down to the masses of our people, and to bring them closer to the center of Jewish Living.

The Community Center

If Professor Kaplan's views had been heeded 25 years ago and if Temples and Synagogues had expanded their programs, it is very unlikely that the Jewish Community Center Movement would have been necessary in this country. Certainly it would not have been necessary in small communities. The fact remains, however, that due to the failure of Synagogues to broaden their scope and their vision, the Community Center Movement was made necessary and there was established in this community, as it was in others, the Jewish Community Center.

I am firmly convinced that this institution is serving a most useattempting to reach down to the masses of this community, especially of our youth. It is said by some that it might perhaps develop more Jewishly motivated programs. But I am not interested in that question right now. What I am concerned with is that I see in the Jewish Community Center a means of tackling the problem of how to reach the Jewish masses in our midst. And I am convinced that the Center can serve such a need, that the Center is serving such a need and that, given better facilities it can be even more effective. I believe that the Center ought to have better facilities. It is now housed in a building which is seventy years old. It certainly needs better quarters. I would be opposed to have this institution launch upon a building campaign, but I strongly endorse the directorate of this institution to raise the modest sum of thirty thousand dollars, in order to do very necessary remodeling of their present location. I urge our people to support this present campaign for thirty thousand dollars, to give our Center more adequate facilities.

Jewish Education Association

When we speak of reaching down to the large numbers of our Jewish children who have little or no Jewish education I would propose that the only means of solving that problem would be to make Jewish education a collective communal concern. This might be achieved by the organization of a Jewish Education Association. It might be composed of representatives of all Temples, Synagogues and Hebrew schools.

The first purpose of such an Association should be to carry on such propaganda among our Jewish parents so that every Jewish boy and girl of school age should be sent to some Jewish school. If possible, at least once a year, say at the time from Rosh Hashanah to Succoth, there should be held a community-wide campaign stressing the need of Jewish education. It should be talked of in every institution in town. There should be placards and announcements everywhere. Committees could be formed to visit homes of Parents.

In other words, through this association, the community would say to our Jewish people "We want you to send your children to the Jewish school of your choice." Such an association might have a further objective at a later time, in attempting to raise the level and standards of Jewish education in the community without in any way infringing upon the right of each institution to decide for itself what and how to teach. I believe that such a Jewish Education Association is a great cultural need in our community.

Our Philanthropic Needs

Every community has elements in it that need help. There are

Records Songs

DAVID J. PUTTERMAN

NEW YORK. — The beginning of the assemblage of the musical folk heritage of the Jewish people was made recently with the release of an album of Hebrew songs as sung by David J. Putterman, cantor of the Park Avenue Synagogue of New York.

The album consists of three ten-inch records containing eleven selections recorded by the RCA Victor Company under the auspices and direction of the Women's League of the United Synagogue of America.

the aged, the sick, the orphans, and the poor families that need assistance of one kind or another. To be sure, we are not free from such elements in this Jewish community of ours. It may surprise you know that about 300 Jewish families are receiving some kind of aid from the Public Agencies in Providence. These Public Agencies may be either the Department of Public Welfare, the Old Age Assistance, or the WPA.

But the Public Agencies alone do not begin to meet the philanthropic needs of our Jewish Community. We fortunately have a number of splendid agencies of our own, to cope with these problems.

Aid Societies

One should make mention of the Ladies Union Aid, which was organized more than fifty years ago, and which is doing a fine job in ministering to the charitable needs of many families in our midst. But, of course, as the years went on, and as more scientific methods became the widespread practise, in dealing with such problems, there was bound to arise in our community such an agency as the Jewish Family Welfare Society. More recently it celebrated its tenth anniversary, and I listened with great pride to the splendid reports of the first decade of its activities. I was impressed by the fact that they cared for about 350 families per year and that it would and should minister to about double that number, but it cannot do so because of lack of funds and facilities. It is my belief therefore, that one of the first philanthropic needs of our community is to make possible an enlarged and expanded Jewish Family Welfare Society, so as to cope more adequately with the charitable needs of our Jewish life.

Stronger Federation

A number of our local Jewish philanthropic agencies are federated into a Federation for Jewish Social Service. These institutions receive the greater part of their budgets from funds obtained from the Providence Community Fund. I believe that the Federation has done a splendid job, but I also believe that it is not functioning at the maximum in this community. It seems to me that this splendid organization could greatly increase its usefulness by seeking to strengthen itself in a number of ways. In the first place it should seek to become a more active agency. It should not merely become galvanized into activity before the an-should adopt an all-year-round program and should meet more frequently. It should have stronger representatives from each of its member agencies. It should have period elections. It should study the philanthropic needs of the Jewish community and direct these into adequate channels. It might also serve as a collective representative for its constituent members to the Providence Community Fund.

To summarize: — I believe that some of the major religious, cultural and philanthropic needs of our community are these: Expanded programs for our Temples and Synagogues; better facilities for the Jewish Community Center; The organization of a Jewish Education Association; a stronger Federation for Jewish Social Service, and a more adequately implemented Jewish Family Welfare Society.

Kadimah Chorus Resumes Rehearsal

Announcement was made this week that the Kadimah Choral Society, comprising a select group of singers, has resumed rehearsals which are held each Monday evening at the Monday Morning Musical Club, under the direction of Arthur Einstein, conductor.

Mrs. Hillel Hassenfeld, president, in a statement this week, said that the need for a choral group in Providence has been long felt, and an organization such as the Kadimah choral group can add much to the musical culture interests in the city. Mrs. Hassenfeld added that a successful season is anticipated.

Mr. Einstein announced today that additional singers are welcome to try out for admittance to the choir.

Lack of Refugee Immigration Opportunities Hit at Conclave

Send Appeal to Chamberlain to Lift Temporary Restrictions on Refugees

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Asserting that the refugees find most doors closed to immigration because "many nations fear that their own economy and policy might be disrupted by extending a right of sanctuary," United States Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, speaking at the National Conference for Palestine convened at the Mayflower Hotel under the auspices of the United Palestine Appeal, pointed to Palestine as the only haven of refuge for oppressed Jews, condemned intolerance as foreign to the American spirit, and called upon the Christian world to atone its sins against the Jewish people by supporting the rebuilding of the Jewish National Home.

In a world in which "other lands" like our own, have all but shut their doors or have rationed their hospitality on a quota basis," he said, "the plight of the Jews is a challenge to the Christian conscience to make good the promise of a Jewish National Home in Palestine."

At the close of the afternoon session Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, was re-elected national chairman of the United Palestine Appeal.

Appeal to Chamberlain
The action of the Conference in speeding the rebuilding of Palestine expressed itself in the following results:

The adoption of a memorial addressed to Prime Minister Chamberlain, calling upon Great Britain to fulfill her pledge to the Jews and to demonstrate her sincerity of concern with the refugee problem by lifting the temporary restrictions now in effect on Jewish immigration into Palestine; and the ratification of the creation of a unified campaign which in 1939 will seek the largest quota for overseas needs in the history of American Jewry under the title of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs.

The United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs will represent the interests of the United Palestine Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee and the National Coordinating Committee Fund, thus providing for the needs of distressed Jews and refugees through Palestine rebuilding and settlement, European relief and rehabilitation and refugee readjustment in the United States.
