ALL MOTION PICTURES OF Hollywood comedian Jerry Lewis have been banned throughout Syria because of what authorities called his "pro-Zionist activities." The ban was imposed in response to a recommendation sent to all Arab states by the Arab League Boycott of Israel central office.

THE CASE OF THE SCUFFLE between a local Jewish leader in Washington and a neo-Nazi follower of George Rockwell is closed. The District of Columbia corporation counsel last week dropped the charges of disorderly conduct against Irving Berman, northern Virginia head of the Israel Bond drive, and Kenneth Morgan, member of the American Constitutional Party. This ended efforts of the American Civil Liberties Union to transform the case into a free speech test.

THE MUNICH RECRUITMENT office has rejected an application for army service exemption by Wolf Ruediger Hess, 23-year-old son of Hitler's former deputy, Rudolf Hess. The youth, an architecture student, said his conscience forbade him to do military service for the former judges of his father, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for war crimes, in 1946.

THE FIRST SYNAGOGUE established in Alaska, Congregation Beth Shalom, has voted to become affiliated with Reform Judaism and to join the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The congregation was founded 17 months ago.

JEWISH IMMIGRATION INTO Canada increased slightly in 1959, in comparison with the preceding year, according to official figures announced last week. During 1959, a total of 2,686 Jews came to Canada. The 1958 figure was 2,290. General immigration into the country declined over 10 per cent in 1959.

THE JEWISH CONTRIBUTION to the recently opened Soviet book exhibition in London is slight: one prayer book and three partially stenciled calendars. Other Soviet nationalities make a much larger contribution to the exhibition, which purports to show the literary and intellectual achievements of the USSR. The Jewish prayer book was printed in 1956.

THE ISRAELI MINISTRY OF Education recently issued a circular to all schools ordering instruction to promote understanding by pupils of all religions. The Ministry acted at the urging of Israel's interfaith Cooperation Committee, headed by Prof. Benjamin Mazar, president of Hebrew University.

A MAN HELD IN KANSAS CITY in connection with the recent bombing of the Kehillath Israel Synagogue was described by police as a former mental patient who was said to have boasted to a friend before the bombing that the synagogue would be "good place to blow up." The detained man is 47 year old Charles Bednarz.

Offers Bill Banning Publication of Hate Literature

NEW YORK — Atty. Gen. Lefkowitz last week offered the Legislature a bill to make the publication distribution or possession of hate literature a crime.

The bill is to be introduced in Albany by State Sen. Albert (R-Nassau). It is aimed at printed matter which would "tend to incite hatred or ostracism of persons of any race, color, creed, national origin or ancestry."

Lefkowitz pointed out that there is currently no state law covering hate literature. His bill which he recommended to the Legislature for study, provides for fines up to $2,000 and imprisonment for one year.

More severe penalties are provided for second offenses. Lefkowitz said he had consulted with representatives of religious and civic rights groups before drafting the bill.

To Establish Institute To Train African, Asian Labor Leaders

NEW YORK — An Institute of Labor Studies for the training of Asian and African labor leaders will be established soon in Tel Aviv, Israel.

It will be under the joint auspices of the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations and Histadrut, Israel's labor federation.

Its courses will include administrative techniques, collective bargaining and economics.

Details of the project, which will be devoted to "the principles of the free trade union movement," were outlined by Charles S. Zimmerman, chairman of the board of the National Committee for Labor Israel, at its annual midwinter conference in the Commodore Hotel.

The setting up of the labor training institute for trade union members from Asian and African countries was approved by the executive council of the A. F. L.-C. I. O. at its recent meeting in Bal Harbour, Fla., Mr. Zimmerman said.

Provision for Scholarships

He quoted George H. Meany, president of the combined labor movement, as saying that the A. F. L.-C. I. O. "will provide half the scholarships in the first year of operation." This will amount to $175,000. The other $175,000 will be allocated by the National Committee for Labor Israel.

That committee raises funds in this country for the support of a network of medical, vocational, cultural and economic projects carried out by Histadrut in Israel.

In recent years Israel has developed a close relationship with the newly emerging Asian and African nations. They have been sending delegations for short-term studies in Israel and the Israeli Government has sent technicians to aid in their economic development.

Pays Tribute To Leader

Mr. Zimmerman paid tribute to Mr. Meany, Walter Reuther, David Dubinsky, George M. Harrison, American labor leaders, as well as to Isaiah Avrech, American representative of Histadrut, for their efforts for the new institute.

Acclaiming Israel's Asian and African role, Haim J. Zadok, a member of the Israeli Knesset (Parliament), said:

"Israel is a pilot plant which has demonstrated that a small country in Asia can achieve economic development and a civilized standard of living while preserving individual liberty and a democratic way of life."

Rabbi Jacob Weinstein, chairman of the National Committee for Labor Israel, declared that "Israel is most happy to be able to 'export' such tangible forms of social justice and applied democracy to Asia and Africa."

It was announced that 1,500 delegates, representing sections of this country and Canada, had contributed more than $1,250,000 towards the committee's 1960 goal of $5,000,000 for the social service and medical programs carried out by Histadrut in Israel.

Help Students In Old Neighborhood

NEW YORK — When Manny Goldenberg and Muni Weissenfreund were going to PS 30 on the Lower East Side, back in the early 1900s, lack of money was always a problem.

Manny's father ran a small luncheonette. Muni's father dabbled in the theater.

Muni and Manny, among many other PS 20 graduates, still remember those hard days, according to Marvin Smilon in the New York Post.

As a result, Muni, better well known as Paul Muni, and Manny, more familiar as Edward G. Robinson, are two of the PS 20 alumni who have contributed to the Nathaniel Phillips Scholarship Fund to help needy students in their old neighborhood.

Character Changed

"Though the character of the Lower East Side has changed, we would like to help these people who are in the same situation we were in 50 years ago," said Symon Gould, chairman of the fund.

"The fund is named after Nathaniel Phillips, who is the only living PS 20 teacher of that era," Gould said. "It is a tribute to all of our old teachers." Phillips, close to 80, is retired.

The list of graduates includes the late George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin, Harry Golden, Sen. Jacob Javits, songwriter Irving Caesar and Board of Education President Charles Silver.

Gould is director of the American Library Service. He remembers:

"Robinson was the valedictorian and I was the salutatorian when we graduated. Harry Golden lived on my block.

"We all used to go to the University Settlement House, across the street from school. That's where the Gershwins started dabbling in music.

Tough Area

"It was a tough area. If a pick-pocket found you had no money in your wallet, he threw it in your face and cursed you.

"My next door neighbor was a character named 'Gyp the Blood,' who was executed with his four-man gang for murder.

"But look at the list of prominent people the area spawned. We want to help produce the same kind of good citizens now."

The PS 20 Alumni Association is planning its annual dinner in June and has invited Javits as guest of honor.

The old school, at Rivington and Eldridge Sts., has been taken over as the Manhattan Trades Center, for veterans' training and vocational rehabilitation.

PROTESTS BEHAVIOR

HAMBURG — The West German white collar workers union (DAG) revealed last week that it will protest to U. S. Army headquarters in Europe the "impossible behavior" of a Jewish army officer. The union charged that Capt. William Cohen of New York City, "insulted and aggravated German employes under his command, in a manner intolerable under the standards of German friendship."

Israeli Cabinet Extends Term of Chief Rabbinate

JERUSALEM (Israeli sector).—The Israeli Cabinet acted last week to keep the country's Chief Rabbinate in operation.

It empowered the Minister of Religious Affairs to extend the Chief Rabbinate term of office five months beyond a week ago Saturday, the day it was supposed to expire, said Lawrence Fellows in an article in the New York Times.

Meanwhile, Premier David Ben-Gurion continued to struggle with the National Religious Front over the influence that party will exert on his Government. The Premier is seeking to protect the secular nature of the state from those Orthodox politicians who would have all legislation based on the Torah.

Political Tension Mounts

Since the death last July of Dr. Isaac Herzog, one of Israel's two Chief Rabbis, political tension has mounted over the election of his successor.

One chief rabbi is always Sephardi, from an Oriental (or Spanish-Portuguese) community. The other is an Ashkenazi, from some community of Western Jews. The re-election of Yitzhak Nissim as the Sephardi Chief Rabbi has aroused only the normal sort of opposition.

Dr. Herzog was the Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi.

The arguments today are those of 1958, when Mr. Ben-Gurion fell out with the National Religious Front over the question, "Who is a Jew?"

As things turned out the orthodox politicians had their way in the final pronouncement that a Jew is the child of a Jewish mother or is a person converted to Judaism in accordance with rabbinic law. But the two ministers of the National Religious Front had resigned from the Cabinet during the quarrel.

Age Question Has Impact

Ben-gurion replaced one of them with a nonparty man, Rabbi Yakov Toledano, as Minister for Religious Affairs. After the elections last fall the Premier insisted on keeping Rabbi Toledano, in spite of rumblings over new regulations that the Rabbi said he was going to press.

One rule would make 70 the maximum age for candidates for Chief rabbi, ruling out Rabbi Isar Unteman, 74-year-old chief rabbi of Tel Aviv.

Other Regulation

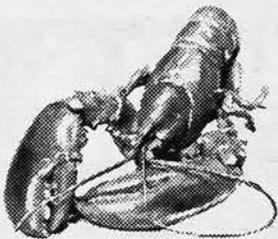

The other Toledano regulation would have limited the candidacy to Israeli rabbis, ruling out Rabbi Joseph Soleveitchik of Brookline, Mass., whom the National Religious Front had hoped to persuade to run for the office here.

But Rabbi Soleveitchik seems determined not to run and Dr. Toledano has since dropped the regulation that would have excluded him. The only other possible candidate mentioned is Col. Shlomo Goren, chief chaplain of the armed forces, a non-party man, who is the choice of Rabbi Toledano and, presumably, of Premier Ben-Gurion.

Two N. Y. Rabbis Oppose Capital Punishment

NEW YORK — Two New York rabbis said last week that Jewish tradition opposed capital punishment. Their comments were based on the Chessman case.

Caryl Chessman is the convict under sentence of death who recently received a sixty-day stay of execution from the Governor of California.

Both clergymen maintained that the Biblical phrase "an eye for an eye" did not literally describe the Jewish attitude on the subject.

The Rev. Dr. Israel Goldstein, preaching to Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, 270 West Eighty-ninth Street, said that "if a referendum were taken today among rabbis the vast majority would be against capital punishment."

Disputing the contention that capital punishment was needed for retribution and for deterrence of crime, he said:

"Statistics do not show that the death sentence works better than life imprisonment as a deterrent to murder, and vengeance is an idea we should outgrow for the progress of civilization."

The Rev. Dr. Judah Nadich, in his sermon at the Park Avenue Synagogue, 50 East Eighty-seventh Street, explained that even in Biblical times the phrase "eye for an eye" referred to monetary compensation for damages and that "only in the case of murder was the verse to be taken literally."

"In post-Biblical times," he said, "Jewish law hedged about capital punishment so many restrictions as safeguards for the suspected criminal as to make the taking of life virtually impossible."

memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Bridge

by Revoke

Charles Goren is the greatest living personality in bridge. For some years he has been the leading writer on the game, and he has staged immensely successful television programs on it. He plays mainly in competitions and his favorite partner is Helen Sobel. Here is an interesting hand which he played with his commentary upon it.

North-South vulnerable South dealer:

The bidding went:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1H	Pass
2D	Pass	4D	Pass
4S*	Double	5C	Pass

5D Pass 6D Pass
Pass Pass
*(cue bid!)

Faced with a perplexing problem, by reason of capable defense on the part of West, South allowed "percentages" to work for him. His refusal to play for an even break of the trumps accounted for a saving of many hundred points.

There were several points of interest in the bidding. South though he held only eight high-card points, chose to make a two-over-one response in preference to 1NT in view of his unbalanced distribution. North, having to choose whether to jump in hearts or in diamonds decided it would be more constructive to do so in his partner's suit. South's initial apprehensions left him and he showed the ace of spades. West, anticipating the possibility of an eventual heart contract, doubled to induce a spade lead. North, realizing that (because of his queen) spades could not be attacked at the start if his partner played the hand, eventually went to 6D.

West opened with the ace of clubs, which was ruffed in dummy. It becomes apparent that success on the hand depends upon establishing the dummy, but there are several ways to go about setting up the hearts. Declarer decided against trying to ruff out the king for fear it was guarded too many times. He decided to against finessing the heart and then ruffing out the suit for this would involve release of the ace of spades. Indeed he decided to concede a heart trick if necessary. He cashed the ace of hearts and then played the queen on which he discarded the ten of spades. West took with the king and put up the best defense by returning a club forcing declarer to ruff in dummy. This posed a problem for South. If the adverse diamonds were divided two-two, declarer could cash the ace and king of trumps and claim all the tricks. Realizing however, that the chances were distinctly against such a break he decided to play East for three diamonds and cashed only the king of trumps. He then played a high heart. When East ruffed he over-ruffed, and returned to dummy with the ace of diamonds, drawing East's last trump. The established hearts provided declarer with the rest of the tricks.

This week the corner will highlight "Ulps" (Upsilon Lambda Phi) fraternity. The officers are Jerry Engel, head master; Bob Moskol, deputy head master; Mike Margolis, recording secretary; Fred Kamin, treasurer; Mike Friedberg, corresponding secretary, and Stephen Lopatin, pledge master.

In this Chapter, the Beta Beta Chapter, there are 26 active members, all of high school age. Sixteen of these members are new as of September.

Dave Goldstein, the athletic chairman, has organized a very able basketball team, which is undefeated. The team consists of Mike Bernstein, Peter Bock, Billy Bromberg, Bob Moskol, captain; Frank Ostrow, Pete Winslow and Steve Beranbaum.

Doing their part for the community, "Ulps" assisted in the GJC annual drive and in April will hold their annual dance for Muscular Dystrophy.

For the near future, "Ulps" have planned a banquet which is the first of its kind in Rhode Island. This banquet is an alumni reunion for the oldest members of the fraternity in the state. Names will be taken from lists dating back to 1927 when the first chapter of "Ulps" was formed in Rhode Island. This is the Upsilon chapter.

PRESENTS ERMINE CAPE

BOSTON — A Jewish furrier from New York presented an ermine cape to Pope John, said The Pilot, Catholic newspaper here. Arthur Schwartz, president of Fredrica furs, made the gift because the pope "has been a good friend of all religions and a bulwark against the irreligious world of the communists." Mr. Schwartz gave a similar cape to Pope Pius II in 1951 in appreciation of the pontiff's shelter for Jewish refugees inside the Vatican during World War II.

Israel's Independent Policy

The U. N. Correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, Joseph Newman, reported on December 30th that Assistant Secretary of State Wilcox disclosed that the United States Government expects Egypt to "honor its promise to reopen the Suez Canal to Israel shipping." In a telephone interview with Mr. Wilcox, he commented on Nasser's seizure of the Greek ship Astypalea for carrying Israeli cargo through the Canal: "I would hope this was not a deliberate attempt to freeze Israel out of the Canal." It is not known on what Mr. Wilcox based his hopes. Judging by Nasser's general attitude, we would be more than justified in remaining skeptical. This is especially true since the policies of the United States and the Israeli Government regarding the Suez affair have left him a free hand to maneuver at will.

The Nasser-Israel dispute, or any dispute in the Middle East, naturally cannot be divorced from the world-wide struggle between the Communist bloc and the Western powers. A proper evaluation of the latest flare-up in the Suez must therefore take into account the general tendencies displayed by the chief actors on the wider arena.

It is axiomatic that the strongest force in the East and West is the craving of the masses for peace, or rather, their fear of a nuclear war. This has brought on the era of "good feeling," which manifests itself in the acceleration of international travel and visits and all sorts of summit talkathons. Naive people take this at face value. Realists remain reservedly dubious.

Secretary of State Herter, in his year-end statement, warned against premature relaxation in the non-Communist world because so far there is no change in the Communist world. The fact is that to date both sides have not even attempted to seriously discuss their basic disputes with a view toward abolishing causes for conflict and war. Obviously it is recognized that these causes are deeply rooted and are not easily given to discussion. What both sides are now doing are merely sweeping the dust under the carpet and by little compromises, retreating a wee bit here and there, postponing final action and giving the impression of peaceful intentions to their people and to the so-called neutralists.

These retreats differ in their nature. The Communists merely smile politely and talk less harshly. Western leaders show a readi-

Engaged — Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Pitchersky of 222 Guilford Court, West Hempstead, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Judith Pitchersky, to Arthur N. Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gilbert of 213 Baker Street.

Miss Pitchersky is a senior at the University of Rhode Island. Mr. Gilbert received his B.A. from the University of Rhode Island and his M.A. from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. He is now working for his Ph.D. at the Fletcher School. A June 19 wedding is planned.

ness for compromises and concessions—in other words, appeasement. In its quest for bolstering its strategy and world position, the Kremlin presses for the retreat of the West in Germany and in the Afro-Asian world. Anglo-American diplomacy shows signs of appeasement in both areas. As in the Chamberlain era, the appeasement is again at the expense of friends and allies, not at a direct cost to themselves. But this time the intended victims refuse to lay their heads on the block and the appeasers find themselves balked.

The British, followed by the United States, were ready to appease Khrushchev in West Berlin. The U.S. showed eagerness to appease the Afro-Asians in Algiers. Hesitating to antagonize the French, it did not risk it openly but resorted to a policy in the United Nations which the French Commander in Algiers called "sickening abstentions." The combined front of DeGaulle and Adenauer, their forceful stand against appeasement in both directions, however, frustrated the Anglo-American appeasing line. There is a lesson in this to Israel.

Ideologies Unwilling To Be 'On Speaking Terms' Says Rabbi

WASHINGTON — The trouble with diverse ideologies in Jewish life is not that they exist — but that they're unwilling to be "on speaking terms" with each other. This is the blunt-spoken charge of Rabbi Morris Adler of Detroit, a prominent leader in the Conservative movement.

The effect, Dr. Adler says, is that the multiple theological and organizational loyalties among American Jews, which could bring "mutual enrichment and enlargement," instead have produced an abundance of "controversy and acrimony."

His plea, in an article in Jewish Heritage, publication of B'nai B'rith's adult Jewish education program, is for some "creative conversation" among all elements in Jewish life.

"A system of belief or opinion is not meant, in a democracy, to imprison its adherents incommunicado behind the picket fence of its particular creed or outlook," Rabbi Adler asserts.

"What prevents diversity from crumbling into chaos and divisiveness is the dialogue which is carried on between different political parties, ideologies and social philosophies."

But instead of "dialogue," he says, the disparate groups in Jewish life are each "engaged in a monologue, neither talking with other groups nor listening to them."

As a consequence, "controversy grows out of the rivalry of competing agencies, national organizations and religious institutions. It is a war between corporate mechanisms, a struggle between institutional imperialisms, a clash of organizational absolutes."

"The fight is for expansion, prestige, and power, and is not related to any philosophy of which an organization is presumably the instrument."

"One institution berates another, one movement dismisses another, and each acts with bland disregard of the position or, for that matter, the very presence on the Jewish scene of any Jewish body other than itself."

"Each claims to provide for all the religious and communal needs of all American Jews . . . so we may have Orthodox medical schools, Conservative museums and Reform archives — each claiming as its constituency not one denomination of Jews but all American Jews."

"The attempt is not to win disciples, and cultivate adherence to a particular philosophy and ideology," he continues, "but to gain formal members and annual contributors. Such a goal obviously does not call for a 'dialogue'."

Dr. Adler criticizes Herman Wouk's best-selling book, This Is My God, in which the author presents his Orthodox view as an example of the "wholesale dismissal of all opposition."

"Wouk renders any serious consideration of other views unnecessary by the simple device of impugning the motives of those who subscribe to them."

"One finds this author's attitude dripping with a fatty complacency and a smug self-righteousness which would hardly commend the quality of the religious spirit out of which he writes," Dr. Adler adds.

Nevertheless, all Jewish groups are needed, Dr. Adler concludes. "The sober truth is that no single wing of Jewish religious life and no one national Jewish organization, of whatever stripe, can adequately deal with the whole perplexing and intricate problem of meeting the challenge of the modern world to Jewish life."

Israel Convinced UAR Will Not Fight

TEL AVIV—Israel last week declared its conviction there would be no war with the United Arab Republic despite current tension.

Justice Minister Rosen, addressing a meeting here after consultations with Premier Ben-Gurion, said:

"The Premier and all other members of the Cabinet are convinced there will be no war because our neighbors would not dare attack us and because we have no intention of attacking anybody."

Rosen said there was no doubt that Egyptian forces were building up their strength in the northern Sinai near the frontier. Israel, he said, has taken limited precautionary measures.

Mrs. Meir Meets Envoys

"If they dared to start an offensive, then something would have to be developed," he said. "We are convinced they would not dare to do so."

Meantime, Foreign Minister Golda Meir continued her talks with Western and Soviet ambassadors about the military buildup.

She met British envoy Patrick Hancock at her request. She also arranged to confer with the American and French representatives.

'Serious Situation'

Mrs. Meir was pointing out the "serious situation" created by the Egyptian army concentrations, an official announcement said.

Her warning was underlined by an Israeli letter to the members of the UN Security Council urging them not to be diverted by "technical details" from the central issue of UAR President Nasser's policy of "incitement to war."

The "technical details" were in a UN report critical of Israel's policies in the demilitarized zone along the Israeli-Syrian border.

MaJ. Gen. Carl C. von Horn, chief of the UN truce supervisory organization in Palestine, made a painstaking assessment of responsibilities in the recent flareup in the demilitarized zone.

His report assigns to Israel the major share of the blame for the recent clashes in the demilitarized zone near the Sea of Galilee. Much of the difficulty, states von Horn, stems from Israel's encroachment on Arab lands in the zone and from the ambiguities surrounding land ownership in the area.

UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold, who arrived in Stockholm recently, said von Horn's report gave a good picture of the situation. He said he saw no reason to call a Security Council meeting at this time.

Israeli's Independent Policy

In order not to spoil the peace game and the summit shows, London and Washington, as well as the Kremlin, now try to keep the Middle East quiet. There may be a little incitement here and there but everyone is careful to avoid a flare-up situation which may involve the "big boys". Since Nasser is compelled to keep his flock in continuous excitement by twisting somebody's nose, thereby stalling himself as a modern Saladin, barring the Suez to Israel was a natural for his pantomime. The Americans, who believe in keeping him out of the Kremlin's talons by financing the widening of the Suez Canal, devised a compromise through Hammerskjold whereby Nasser would save his face and Israel would also be accommodated. Israel diplomacy went along with this same keeping it a secret from the home front until it was disclosed by Dana Adams Schmidt, the Washington correspondent of the New York Times.

Nasser received the bounty, but did not keep the bargain; he knew that he had nothing to fear. The Israeli protest against the World Bank loan for widening the Suez was interpreted as meant for home consumption only. Israel's own application for a loan from the World Bank is pending. It certainly, therefore, would not like to jeopardize it by ruffling the feathers of the directors and the State Department. Israeli diplomats have made it known repeatedly that they favor economic support to the Arabs, including Nasser's U.A.R. A suggestion by Dayan, the former Commander of the Sinai Campaign, that Israel should take active steps to reopen the Suez for her mercantile, quickly was officially rebuked. Nasser received the loan and Wilcox is left merely with hope based on nothing.

This controversy manifested the weakness of Israel's diplomacy. By refusing to victimize herself on the altar of appeasement, Israel could easily have turned the tables. Nasser knows full well that he is not in a position to meet Israel in a head-on collision. He only relies on the support of the Kremlin and on the hesitancy of the Western powers to give Israel outright assistance. But since both the Kremlin and the West cannot at present afford an open clash in the Middle East, the decision must go to those who show greater determination and readiness to cut through the Gordian knot. Israel, it would seem, is in a better position for such a move.

APPOINT COMMITTEES

Members of the committees for the 10th Anniversary Donors' Dinner of the Mothers' Association of Temple Beth David were appointed at a recent meeting. The Dinner will be held on March 28 at the temple.

Chairmen of the committees include Mesdames Peter Feinstein, general chairman; Samuel Berman, ad book; Abe Levin, candy; James Riseberg, raffle; Joseph Lapatin, treasurer; Joseph Gold and Herbert Wagner, secretaries; Philip Woled, reservations.

Other members are Mesdames Nathan Kniager, Charles Kilberg, Henry Matzner, Philip Rubin, Simon Goldenberg, Fred Stone, Samuel Gorfine, William Kanopkin, Irene Less, Joseph Beckler, Paul Samuels, Max Levins, Isidore Wolfe, Joseph Bram, Albert Snell and Raymond Mulla, ex-officio.

The difficulty with Israel's foreign policy, however, is that the economic pattern of the Socialist regime has made it dependent on outside sources. To keep its head above water, it must rely on hand-outs, not only from the Jewish public campaigns but also on grants and loans from foreign governments, especially the United States. It must be exceedingly cautious not to overstep the lines mapped by foreign chancelleries. This, of course, deprives Israel's diplomacy of independence and freedom of movement.

The hope for a truly independent, far-seeing and bold Israeli foreign policy therefore rests on a change of the present social pattern. A free enterprise policy with ability to attract fully the resources, the interests, ingenuity and energy of the individual Jew, whether in Israel proper or in the Diaspora, would launch the country quickly on the road to self-sufficiency. It would also free Israel's foreign policy from the shackles that now tie it hand and foot.

Engdahl Denies Tie With Anti-Semitism

MALMO, Sweden — Dr. Per Engdahl, 51-year-old poet and specialist in political science denied last week accusations that he headed an international anti-Semitic organization of a neo-Nazi stamp.

These charges have appeared in newspaper articles quoting Swiss sources and some Jewish leaders according to a New York Times article by Werner Wishari.

"I'm nearly blind," the tall thin Swede said in an interview in a shabby office. "How can anyone regard me as dangerous?"

Dr. Engdahl vigorously denied that he was anything but anti-Communist or that his group had any connection with the recent epidemic of synagogue desecrations in West Germany and other countries.

Swedish authorities appear to agree with this. The state police report that those persons whom they have caught as daubers of swastikas on synagogues in Sweden have turned out to be young pranksters or persons not fully responsible for their actions.

No Link to Outrages Found

Swedish authorities also say that they have been unable to turn up any evidence that would implicate Swedish fringe groups having Nazi or Fascist leanings with anti-Semitic outrages here or abroad.

Nevertheless, embarrassed by reports picturing Malmo as a command center for anti-Semitism, the Swedish Government has ordered close surveillance of the activities of all such groups.

One example of this is the watch being kept in Malmo on twenty-seven young men who, the police say, form the Riksparti (Reichs party) with twenty-three others in other parts of Sweden.

The self-styled Fuehrer or leader, 27-year-old Goeran Assar Oredsson, says Jews in Sweden have too much economic power and something nonviolent should be done about it. He can often be found in a smoke-filled beer parlor discussing his ideas to the blare of music from a jukebox.

Col. Leonard Holland Promoted By Army

Lieutenant Colonel Leonard Holland, Commanding Officer of the 385th Regiment, Basic Combat Training, 76th Training Division, U. S. Army Reserve, has been promoted to the rank of full Colonel, according to a new release from the R. I. Sector, XIII U. S. Army Corps.

Colonel Holland's promotion will be officially announced at a military ceremony conducted Sunday morning, March 6 at the U. S. Army Reserve Center, 1 Washington Avenue, Providence. Brigadier General Robert W. Kenny of Providence, Commanding Officer of the 76th Training Division, will be present at the ceremony and will pin the eagles on the new colonel.

Colonel Holland entered the military service as an enlisted man with the rank of private in April 1941. In August 1942, after being graduated from Officer Candidate School, he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant. He served during World War II in the Pacific Theatre, and participated in the Northern Solomons and New Guinea campaigns. He was wounded in action, and numbers the bronze star and purple heart among his decorations.

Since 1946, Colonel Holland has been active in the Army Reserve.

Asks Herter To Explain Policy

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Herter was asked last week to explain a new policy barring American personnel of the Jewish faith from assignment to U.S. diplomatic and aid missions in Pakistan. The request was made by Rep. Farbstein, (D-N.Y.), a member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Rep. Farbstein told Secretary Herter that any measures to weed out Jews from among personnel assigned to Pakistan "would be a distinct violation of every American tradition and of the Morse-Javits amendment to the Mutual Security Act of 1959." The amendment calls on the executive department to withhold aid from nations discriminating against Americans on the basis of religion.

Rep. Farbstein asked Secretary Herter whether the State Dept. and the International Co-operation Administration were presently screening formally or informally individuals considered for assignment to Pakistan or any other country to determine religious affiliation as a vocational qualification. He cited an "authoritative news agency" report that such a practice involving Pakistan had gone into effect.

He made a formal request for a detailed report on current policies of the State Dept. involving assignment of American Jews to Pakistan and other Moslem nations. The other nations include Saudi Arabia, United Arab Republic, Jordan, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Sudan, Yemen.

"For 2c Plain"

By HARRY GOLDEN

DON'T LOOK

I have tried to weigh myself at least twice during the past two years, but each time I just listened to the clicking of the weights and measures, but did not look at the results. I think it's better that way. This system works at other times of crisis. Once I dropped my glasses on the tile floor of the bathroom, but I did not look. I merely felt around with my hand, slowly trying to find the glasses, with my head turned away. When I found them, I moved the fingers slowly around the rims first, then touched one lens and finally the second—with great relief. They were intact. If I had looked at once, they probably would have been shattered to smithereens.

I learned this many years ago, when I was more or less interested in precinct Tammany politics. My friend John Duff (later a famous criminal lawyer in New York) and I were watching the presidential election returns up at the Joe McCormick Tammany Club, and the returns were beginning to come in on Al Smith and Herbert Hoover. Cheer after cheer went up as the announcer called out, "Eighth District, Smith, 231, Hoover, 29; Eleventh District, first returns, Al Smith 99, Herbert Hoover, 4." And so it went for an hour or more, and finally John and I took the subway downtown to be on Times Square for the big celebration. As we piled out of the subway, The New York Times was flashing the news that Herbert Hoover had been elected—by a landslide. This overwhelmed us, and John turned to me angrily and said, "Dammit, if we had stayed at Joe McCormick's Club, Smith would have been elected."

My system of not looking is reminiscent of the strong belief in prenatal influence among the women on the East Side during my childhood.

Yes, this was a serious problem with pregnant women. They were deathly afraid of accidentally staring at anyone or anything that would harm the unborn child. The East Side was full of stories about the woman who gave birth to a midget because she had "mislooked herself" at a passing carnival, and a red spot on the face of a child was supposed to have resulted from the mother's clasping her hand to her face in fright—and at that very spot.

When the pregnant woman had to venture into the street, she would often take along a relative who had to be on the alert every step of the way. The relative would say, "Look away, there are a couple of dogs running this way." American movie audiences have laughed a million times at that old scene where the wife tells the husband she is pregnant and husband grabs a chair and insists she sit down. Well, this was no laughing matter in a Jewish home. It was both law and tradition that the pregnant woman be pampered. She was even guarded from bad news of any kind. It was always feared the slightest disturbance would result in a deformed or misshapen child.

Many pregnant women would hire a good-looking child of a neighbor (a boy, of course), to run an errand ostensibly, but actually to get her fill of "looking." And, fat kid with black curly hair that I was, but "beautiful" by Old World Jewish standards, that's where I came in—for a dime.

THE SALOONKEEPER

The saloonkeepers represented the backbone of organized charity in the days before community chests and charity federations. Irish Catholic saloonkeepers had very much to do with the building of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The Jewish saloonkeeper helped keep up the neighborhood Talmud Torah (Hebrew School) and the home for the aged. The saloonkeeper was not only the easiest touch, but his establishment was the first call the committee made when something was needed in the neighborhood, like giving someone a decent funeral or putting up ball for a wayward boy.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Bible Technique

BY BERYL SEGAL

The American Red Cross has adopted a novel method of reviving infants and small children whose breathing has stopped. It is called the Mouth-to-Mouth technique and it is referred to as the Biblical-Method with modern modifications.

The Red Cross pronounces it a safe and effective means of resuscitation for children, and adults as well, who have sustained chest-wall injuries. The method is described in four stages:

1. Clear the mouth of the child of any foreign matter with the middle finger of the hand. Hold the tongue forward with the same finger.
2. Place the child in a prone position with head down and pat firmly on his back to help dislodge any foreign object in the trachea.
3. Put the youngster on his back and lift the lower jaw from beneath so that it juts out. Hold the jaw in that position with one hand.
4. Put the lips over the child's mouth and nose and breathe into them steadily until the chest rises. With free hand, apply continuous, moderate pressure to the child's abdomen between the navel and ribs. That will prevent the stomach from becoming filled with air.

When the lungs have been inflated, they should be allowed to empty. The cycle is repeated at the rate of twenty times a minute. The operator should stop after every twenty cycles long enough to take one deep breath.

This is described the new, improved method of reviving—the Biblical Technique with modifications.

Now in the Bible, the method is mentioned only once, and it is performed by Elisha the Prophet. We who read a chapter in the Bible every day, as recommended by the Rabbinical Association, have read this account in Chapter Four, of Second Kings.

The story goes like this:

There was a great woman in Shunem, and whenever Elisha passed by that way, she gave him bread to eat and a roof over his head. She did, in fact, build a little chamber on the roof, with a bed, a table, a chair and a candlestick, so that the Holy Man might turn in there whenever he came to Shunem.

One day when he asked the woman what he could do for her, she did not want a thing from him. But the servant of Elisha knew that she had no son, and therefore Elisha told her:

"At this season, when the time comes round, you will embrace a son."

The son was born, as promised by the Holy Man.

"And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers. And he said to his father, 'My head, my head.' And he (the father) said to his servant, 'Carry him to his mother.' And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon and then died."

The mother sent for Elisha on Mount Carmel. The Man of God hastened to her house;

"And when Elisha came into the house, behold, the child was dead. He went in therefore, and shut the door upon the two of them, and prayed unto the Lord. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon the mouth of the child, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hand upon his hands, and he stretched himself upon him, and the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house once to and fro, and went up and stretched himself upon him, and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes."

This is the account in the Bible of the "mouth-to-mouth" technique of reviving a child.

Notice the similarity of the method described by the Red Cross and that of Elisha. Note how he rested between each cycle, "and he walked in the house, and went up, and stretched himself upon him" again and again.

There is only one detail in the method of Elisha that the Red Cross does not recommend. "And he prayed before the Lord," is not in the Manual of the Red Cross, while in Elisha's days, no one would ever presume reviving a child without the help of God.

But then, we are modern men and women.

an aide: "Who's this fellow Markey?"

The aide recited Markey's background, then added: "He was married to Joan Bennett, Hedy Lamarr and Myrna Loy"...The admiral repeated the names of the three film beauties, then said: "Get him out here and let's take a look at him."

MEMO: Brigitte Bardot demands $200,000 for her TV spectacular here--$100,000 for herself, $100,000 for her husband...Charles Van Doren will have a nine-page article in the new issue of "Leisure" magazine. It will deal, in part, with TV and censorship.

WEALTH: One of the last shows Queen Elizabeth saw, before retiring to have her baby, was Bob Williams and his dog act. The Queen's statement that she enjoyed the act brought Williams increased fees...Williams was married to Ann Corio, the stripteaser. After the wedding, she showed him the contents of her vault. He said, "This is my first trip to Ft. Knox."

BRAVERY: Lady Edwina Mountbatten, who died recently, had a wartime job supervising First Aid units after the air raids in London. As soon as the bombardment ended, she'd drive to the bombed areas and organize aid. Once, when she barely escaped a delayed bomb, her husband sent a message to a friend: "Please keep an eye on Edwina..." "Follow Edwina around?" the friend replied. "I'd rather join your flotilla."

MESSAGE: Harry James' opening night messages at Basin St. East included one from Benny Goodman. James was quite pleased: "It's the first message I've received from Benny since 1935, when he heard me playing in Ben Pollack's band and wired me to work with him."

SWANK: Prince Serge Obolensky, who once married an Astor and is considered top-drawer society, agreed to appear on David Susskind's "Open End" TV Show recently. The topic was society. Obolensky mentioned that when he fled from Russia, he took very little with him--in fact, only one suit. Susskind said: "Tails, no doubt."

PROGRAM: Susskind, incidentally, had trouble last year getting a TV sponsor for his production of "The Moon and Sixpence," starring Laurence Olivier. The show won the awards as the best of the year. Now he has the same problem--seeking a $350,000 TV sponsor for "The Visit," starring The Lunts. Again the ad agencies wonder if TV audiences would appreciate such class--America's foremost theater couple doing the play in which they've toured the nation.

NAME: For years a legend has persisted that Erich Maria Remarque's name really is "Kramer"--that Remarque is just Kramer spelled backwards...The name, said the novelist the other day, always has been Remarque. The legend began when his maid in Switzerland, Rosa, married his gardener, a man named Kramer. And Remarque wrote letters addressed to "Mrs. Rosa Kramer."

REALITY: Elia Kazan chose Cleveland, Tennessee, as the location for his newest film, "The Wild River." Kazan always prefers to use these local sites to achieve realism. He also likes to use the natives, who give a feeling of authenticity...In one picture, Kazan found a local man who acted well and sang native songs, to his own banjo accompaniment. The man even had a song whose title was the same as the movie...Kazan used the man and the songs--then discovered, via financial settlement, that the songs were Tennessee Ernie's.

DREAM: The strike vote by the Screen Actors Guild recently ended, at least for a while, the ridiculous assumption by some producers that screen writers are not vital to the industry. The late Harry Warner, head of Warner Bros. studio, once went even further. At lunch in the studio one day I heard Warner say: "This would be a great industry, if only we could do without the actors."

CHARM: In completing his latest novel, "That Far Paradise," soon to be published by McKay, Gene Markey has revealed another of his many talents. This is the ninth novel by Markey, who also has been a top Hollywood producer and a Navy hero, too. When war began, Markey, now a Rear Admiral, was assigned to Vice Admiral H.F. Leary, in the Southwest Pacific. Leary declined to have him on his staff. The Navy nominated Markey again to this post, and again Admiral Leary refused. Leary asked

Are The Yankees Coming Or Going?

Probably the biggest upset announcement of the new-born baseball training season was the dispatch out of Las Vegas that the bookmakers had established the third place New York Yankees as favorites to win the 1960 American League pennant.

Most disturbed about this mildly startling development were the baseball writers of the nation. The writers as a group felt that the Yanks have not improved enough to catch the champion White Sox and the runnerup Indians, and, as a consequence, will again finish third.

The bookmakers in Las Vegas picked the Yankees because, they said, "despite their third-place finish of 1959, they were the best A. L. club."

The rebuttal for the writers is led by that venerable expert, Dan Daniel, of the New York World Telegram and Sun, who exclaimed:

"In view of the fact that the Bombers finished 15 lengths behind the White Sox, who took 13 out of 22 games from them, the Nevada authority would appear to have received some rather lopsided information."

This little disagreement forms a perfect and timely background for the comments of this column promised two weeks ago about the Yankees. Will the Yanks win the pennant? Your guess is as good as any. I have given up out-and-out forecasting of the exact finish of any major league ball club.

Are the Yanks as bad a ball club as they appeared to be last year? Or are they a much better club than their third place finish showed them to be? To these questions I think I may give some illuminating answers.

And at the end, we'll delve into the meaning and reliability of the opinions expressed by the writers. This latter treatise, incidentally, will be of importance when the prospects of the Red Sox are touched upon a bit later.

To do a proper analytical job, let's attack the problem at its source. The reasons for the Yankees' collapse last year come under one or more of these headings:

1. Loss of the old Yankee spirit.
2. A very leaky defense.
3. An inept pitching staff.
4. An acute hitting failure
5. Individual slumps and injuries.

Strangely, if that's how you want to consider it, I regard the first two reasons as the predominant factors in the fall of the mighty Yanks. The fifth I discount entirely. Any team that isn't prepared to withstand the effects of various individual slumps and assorted aches and pains just is not being practical.

That Yankee Spirit

Despite denials from the management, the manager, the players, and the writers who covered the team, there is no doubt, and no secret, about the fact that the Yankees went through 1959 — spring training, and the pennant race — as a grumbling, unhappy bunch of malcontents. They arrived, individually, at St. Petersburg in a venomous frame of mind, boiling mad at statements their manager had made during the winter.

Many felt that these statements had given their wives grounds for wondering about their marital fidelity during their many days, weeks, and months away from home. Maybe the wives asked some questions; maybe home conditions were at least temporarily strained as a result. Whatever did happen, or might have happened, didn't make for happy faces whenever the grizzled old genius, Casey Stengel, came into view. They hated him savagely, and openly.

When things went badly for the team during the early part of the season, and Stengel looked everywhere for an answer, his players snickered behind his back. It did their hearts good to see the old man squirm.

That is how bad things were with the Yanks a year ago, and almost all the way through 1959. The team played without life, without inspiration, deriving actual, even though secretive, pleasure at the discomfiture of the manager. Stunningly strong anonymous statements to the press completely bear out that reasoning.

Well, is such negative spirit to be considered a cogent reason for the Yankees' poor play? I vote yes, at least partly-yes. It certainly had a harmful effect.

Which brings us to the first conclusion about the New Yorkers for 1960 — is it likely that the team's spirit will continue in that vein for the new season?

I say no; and I add that this is not entirely a matter of personal opinion.

It is a fact that peace was declared late last summer; harmony was restored between the players and Stengel. Casey, apparently instructed and convinced (if not ordered) by general manager George Weiss, became more temperate in his dealings with and statements about his players. He even conceded he had handled them wrong, and managed them wrong. The players reacted by settling down and playing good ball.

It is a fact, too, that with harmony restored, and the pennant irretrievably lost, the team settled down in September to play the winningest ball of any club in the League, including the new champions.

If it can thus be logically assumed that the Yanks will play better ball because of their improved mental condition, you have to lean a little toward the Las Vegas opinion, and a little away from the writers' viewpoint.

haps the worst infield in both leagues. If not the very worst, it was at least close. Tony Kubek at shortstop was as bad or even worse than Don Buddin had been in his first two nightmarish seasons. He was kept at short by a grim Stengel who was determined he, Kubek, would make the grade despite even himself (Tony openly says he plays best and hits best when playing the outfield, even as Elston Howard says he is best when behind the plate).

As Kubek went from bad to atrocious, his keystone sidekick, Gil McDougald — the club's best shortstop, and the major leagues' top short fielder just the year before — yielded almost inevitably to the circumstances, and gave very poor coverage to a position that has always been a pride and joy to the Yankees and their fans. Defensively and offensively the second base combination was horrible.

Along with this, the Yanks early bought Hector Lopez and installed him at third. Hector can hit; but the infield was now in even worse shape. It was a sieve.

In September, the situation changed. Kubek settled down and became a fine shortstop (chalk one up for Casey); Richardson took over at second base, and gave the position its former Yankee class. McDougald replaced Lopez at third. And the leaks were plugged.

For 1960, it is certain that Stengel will not hesitate to bench or move any infielder not doing a good job. His infield already looks far better than it did last year.

So the conclusion: Is it likely that the Yankees will continue their poor defensive play of 1959?

I say no. It seems that there just has to be substantial improvement. If this is conceded, move over toward Vegas; if not, snuggle up over there against Dan Daniel.

TO INVESTIGATE INCIDENT SEATTLE — An official investigation to determine the degree of anti-Semitic bigotry on the University of Washington campus was underway here last week as a result of an anti-Jewish incident which involved the suspension of a Jewish student from his class presidency. The student was Brue Osterman 18, of San Francisco.

During a campaign parade through the University's fraternity row last month, unidentified students threw firecrackers at Osterman and painted swastikas on the truck he was riding. The youth responded with an obscene gesture for which he was later suspended from the presidency.

● OUR DELEGATE TO THE FAIR

As science keeps conquering the degenerative diseases, it seems apparent that we must either crowd one another off the earth or begin to populate the other planets. Science has spent no time figuring out how Earth is to accommodate between fifteen billion and twenty billion people, but it has spent a great deal of time figuring out how to travel in space. Eventually, I am convinced, we will colonize the planets which are habitable. Communications will improve and we will have stellar radar so we can talk with one another.

Two thousand years from now there will be a Planetary Fair, much like national capitals today have a World's Fair. When that time comes, Earth will be asked to contribute some product that best represents it. The best representative we could send is a little girl between the ages of four and nine. At that age, little girls are without guile and are much neater than little boys. Little girls are a joy to look at, and they have a wonderful curiosity about people and places. I don't know that Earth's little girl will necessarily win the heart of the universe, but, when some stellar inhabitant asks, "Why do you live on Earth?" he will best understand by talking with a little girl. This is our best.

CENSUS — PATRONAGE PIE

For the first time since William McKinley was President in 1900, the Republicans this year will control a juicy patronage pie in an election year—via the appointment of the army of voters who will conduct our nationwide census beginning April 1.

Not in 60 years has the GOP enjoyed the patronage of the decennial population census in a national election year. Not since 1940 has a census year coincided with a Presidential election year.

The decennial census actually "ranks with postmaster appointments as a major patronage 'plum' available to the political party which controls the Presidency," in the judgment of the Washington reference service "Congressional Quarterly." And it's the GOP's turn to have it.

Already, GOP Congressmen, Senators or State Republican organizations across the country have selected the 392 census supervisors who will run the massive count. Each of these will be paid at a rate of $500 a month for four or five months—patronage de luxe.

Of the supervisors chosen, 50 are women—surely a reflection of the crucial role women will play in this year's Presidential election as well as the availability of women for the posts.

Being selected now are about 10,000 crew leaders and 160,000 enumerators. The crew leaders will get $15.50 a day for five to eight weeks and the enumerators will get about $12 a day for roughly two weeks' work. More than two-thirds of the enumerators probably will be women.

Altogether, the census patronage pie will be worth about $45,000,000 to the GOP, the highest figure ever. And the cash value is only a part of the story, for through this patronage, the Republicans are deliberately solidifying their organization for the November elections.

As a result of the obvious advantages of the patronage, the party not in power traditionally grumbles about the way the census-takers are chosen. Back in 1950, for instance, when a Democrat occupied the White House, CQ recalls that two Republicans from New York and Michigan—named Leonard W. Hall and Arthur Summerfield respectively—complained of the "deplorable abuse" of the census-taking function, and Summerfield even suggested a Congressional investigation "might be in order."

Now it's the Democrats' turn to refer to the selection method as "the Spoils System" and to the 1960 census as "for the benefit of the Republican party."

While the political shenanigans are going on, though, the time for the massive undertaking is fast approaching. Late next month, you'll be getting a questionnaire to fill out which will ask you basic questions about your age, sex, color or race, marital status, etc. An estimated 180,000,000-plus of us will be checked, 45 times the number counted in the first U.S. census in 1790.

Shortly thereafter, a census enumerator will call in person to collect your questionnaire. The Census Bureau figures the 160,000 enumerators who will crisscross our country in April will travel over 25,000,000 miles or the equivalent of 1,000 times around the world.

Every fourth household, in addition, will get a more detailed questionnaire asking unprecedented questions about the family's income, possessions, etc. Then out of it all will come economic and social data of keen significance to us and the world.

And out of it all will come political data of vital significance, for on the basis of the population shifts uncovered—and many will be startling—Congress will reapportion the seats in the House of Representatives. This census really will be loaded with dynamite!
