

La Guardia's Sister To Offer Testimony For Eichmann Trial

NEW YORK — Among the documents of testimony to be offered against Adolf Eichmann in March will be a memoir by the sister of former New York Mayor La Guardia.

Mrs. Gemma La Guardia Glueck, 80, now living in New York, wrote a ninety page account of her experiences in Ravensbruck concentration camp and her life in pre-Nazi Budapest with her Jewish husband. Mrs. Glueck is an Episcopalian and was born in New York.

Her story was brought to public notice as a result of memorandum written about her to Eichmann by Eberhardt von Thadden an "expert" on Jewish affairs in the Nazi German Foreign Office.

In this memorandum dated June 6, 1944, von Thadden wrote:

"It has been requested that, because of the position of her brother, Frau Glueck not be sent with a mass transport to the Eastern territories, but rather be held in a special camp in the Reich or in Hungary in order to be available for eventual political use."

This memorandum turned up recently in the Yad Vashem archives.

Orthodox Rabbi In Cincinnati Approves Center Sabbath Program

DETROIT — Cincinnati Jewish Center's decision to open on Saturday for programming in the Sabbath spirit caused Philip Slo-movitz, editor of the Detroit Jewish News, to ask editorially if he hasn't erred in opposing Sabbath programming in the Detroit JCC.

Commenting on the Detroit Center's financial difficulties which caused it to cancel music programs and orchestra concerts, the Jewish News editor, past president of the American Jewish Press association, wrote in part as follows:

Now, after all the turmoil in Detroit, the Jewish Community Center of Cincinnati is conducting programs on the Sabbath with the approval of Rabbi Eliezer Silver, who is considered by many as the Dean of Orthodox Rabbis in America.

Sabbath Program

The Cincinnati Center's Sabbath programs were announced to be as follows:

"Social and recreational activities will include general club and other group activities; informal swimming programs devoid of instruction or competition; informal recreation with no competitive activities."

We immediately asked ourselves the question: does this mean that we must add another hatosi to the list of all the confessions we recite on Yom Kippur? But if a hatosi (I have sinned) is required, shouldn't it be a communal hatosi, nay, an orthodox community hatosi? For, if Sabbath programming is permitted with the approval of one of the most revered

Tunisian Newspaper Observes 'Danger Signals' For Jews

PARIS — "Danger signals" regarding the Jews in Tunisia were enumerated this week in the influential Tunisian newspaper, Afrique Action, which ran a symposium on the Jewish situation in Moslem North Africa.

Serge Guetti, prominent Tunisian-Jewish writer, summarized the principal "danger signals" as the fact that Tunisian Jews, unlike the Moslems of the country, are not required to serve in the army; the inability of Jews to obtain certain administrative positions; and the barring of Jews from enrollment in institutions of higher learning, especially the Teachers Training Institute.

The failure to make army service obligatory upon Tunisian Jews, said Guetti, "may make the Moslem population distrustful of the Jews." The writer pointed out that while one Jew is usually included among the members of various public bodies, that practice is followed only so that the country might not be charged officially with anti-Semitism.

A large part of the 120,000 Europeans who left Tunisia since the country won its independence in 1956, are Jews, most of them now living in metropolitan France. Jewish circles said here. The statement was made after a Tunisian newspaper, La Depecha, reported that, since 1956, 120,000 of the country's 180,000 European residents have departed.

Meanwhile, reports stating that the expected independent regime in Algeria will not discriminate against non-Moslems, Jews or Christians, were accepted by French Jewish leaders in Paris this week as "reassuring."

Afrique Action, considered close to the Algerian rebels who have their headquarters in Tunisia, declared that "there will be equality for all in Algeria, assuring all minority groups so that they will remain in independent Algeria."

The newspaper added, however, that the leaders of the Algerian rebels would have to "make a number of concessions to reassure the minority groups as to the treatment they will receive in independent Algeria."

Cinci Comment

This question of opening the Jewish Center on Saturdays has plagued the leaders of that popular Jewish institution for the past several years.

A committee took it upon itself to consult Rabbi Eliezer Silver as to the possibility of keeping the Jewish Center open on Saturday, and to their very pleasant surprise, the committee found Rabbi Silver in warm sympathy with them and actively cooperative.

Rabbi Silver told the members of that group that there were many things in the way of recreation that were permissible on the Sabbath under certain rules and regulations, and if the responsible heads of the Center would obligate themselves to see to it that these rules and regulations will not be violated deliberately, he (Rabbi Silver) would not object to the Center opening on the Sabbath.

Orthodox Shocked

Some of our strict Sabbath observers feel shocked and cannot understand how Rabbi Silver should permit such a thing. "This will bring about flagrant violations of the Sabbath on the part of our youth," they claim. Some very sincere Reform and Conservative Jews argue: "Rabbi Silver made

To Head Campaign — Mrs. Raymond L. Cohen will head the 1961 campaign of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee. Mrs. Cohen's appointment as campaign chairman for the second successive year was announced today by Mrs. Julius Irving, president of the Women's Division.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mrs. Cohen said she was looking forward to another successful drive in 1961. She announced that contributions to the 1960 campaign of the Women's Division totaled $80,000.

Attempts To Form New Government

JERUSALEM — Israel's Foreign Minister Golda Meir and Commerce Minister Pinhas Sapir — two Mapai members of the Cabinet who had been refusing to serve in another Ben-Gurion Cabinet—were reported last week as having reversed their refusal, thus making it easier for David Ben-Gurion to form a new government under his premiership.

The two, reportedly, agreed reluctantly only after close party associates had warned them that their refusal to serve in the new Cabinet may lead to the necessity of holding national elections which neither the country nor the Mapai party could afford at this stage.

Having won Mrs. Meir and Mr. Sapir, but unable still to overcome the reluctance of the Progressive party leaders to serve in another Cabinet under his premiership, Mr. Ben-Gurion then concentrated on winning the National Religious party with a view to forming a new government based on a narrow coalition of his own Mapai party, the Arab parties allied with Mapai, and the National Religious party. This coalition would command a majority of 67 out of the 120 votes in the Knesset, Israel's Parliament.

Mr. Ben-Gurion reportedly offered the National Religious party three Cabinet portfolios against the two it held in the previous government, appointment of a party member as Deputy Minister of Education and concessions long sought by the Religious group. Under his proposals, the Ministry for Religious affairs would be one of the posts going to the junior partner in the coalition.

Comay Says Israel's Road Ahead To Be Rougher For Several Years

UNITED NATIONS — "Israel's position in the United Nations now faces new tests and challenges, and the road ahead is likely to be rougher than it has been for several years," Ambassador Michael S. Comay, head of the Israel delegation to the United Nations, declared here last week.

Addressing 500 participants in the annual Seminar of the Zionist Organization of America, held at the UN headquarters, Mr. Comay pointed out that the United Nations is now in a state of flux because of new African countries, the Soviet attack on the present UN structure, and the involvement of the UN in the Congo.

"The rapidly changing United Nations hold for Israel both opportunities and dangers," Ambassador Comay stated. "On the one hand, the United Nations is the world's meeting place, and we must there foster our relationships both with our traditional friends and with the new friends we have made in Asia and Africa. On the other hand, there are many signs that the Arab states want to develop a new diplomatic offensive at the United Nations against Israel, and to drag the so-called Palestine question into the forefront of UN concern once more."

Ambassador Comay sees one of the reasons for this greater belligerence in the tensions within the Arab world itself, and the tendency to cover them over by a collective crusade against Israel. "But maybe the main motive for renewed Arab activity against Israel at the United Nations is the desire to influence the new African countries and to disrupt their ties with Israel," he added. "However silly the charge of Israel colonialism may be, it should not be ignored. The turmoil in Africa produces Arab African groupings, which the Arabs do their best to exploit against Israel, as recent events have shown."

"I am not pessimistic about the outcome," Mr. Comay continued. "For most of the African countries have direct and positive contact with Israel, are suspicious of Nasser's ambitions in Africa, and in any case are reluctant to be in-involved in the conflicts of others. But we may have some disappointments in this field and must remain constantly vigilant." The Israel representative stressed the following points:

GERMAN BIAS

NEW YORK — A 35-year-old former German soldier declared recently that no one in Germany wants concentration camps, "but also no one wants his daughter to marry a Jew."

"I have many good Jewish friends," declared Wolfgang Marquard of Berlin, "but I feel the same way."

Marquard, whose remarks appear in an article on Berlin in the current issue of Look Magazine, is presently studying industrial psychology. Discussing Germany's Jews in Look, he added:

"The Jews came out of the ghettos of Poland long ago. They became rich by being shrewd. They were resented by maybe half the German people."

CHURCH ATTENDANCE
NEW YORK — Mount Holyoke College notified the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations recently that compulsory church attendance at the college was discontinued in November, 1959 "and no one is new compelled to attend." The information was transmitted by Deane W. Ferm.

Jewish Holiday Of Purim Starts At Sundown Wednesday

One of the most joyous Jewish holidays, Purim, the Festival of Lots*, will be commemorated by Jews this year in synagogues and homes beginning sundown, March 1. (By all branches of Judaism, Orthodox, Conservative and Reform.)

Festive in spirit, the celebration marks a successful struggle in ancient Persia against the forces of religious bigotry. The story of Purim is recorded in the Megillah, a scroll containing the Book of Esther, found in the Bible.

This biblical tale relates the Persian Queen Esther's fight against Haman and his attempts to persecute the Jews. The story tells how Haman, the Prime Minister, tried to force the Jews to abandon their form of worship and prostrate themselves before pagan idols or face extinction. Current struggles by all people against discrimination in our world today take on stronger meaning as this initial resistance against religious persecution is remembered.

In the synagogue the holiday is marked by sermons stressing religious liberty, prayers of thanksgiving, reading of the Megillah, gay musical selections and special temple social activities.

Children find a particular delight in this holiday. During the reading of the Book of Esther the youngsters are provided with noise makers to drown out the name of Haman each time it is uttered.

Religious schools usually schedule Purim carnivals and masquerades. Parents and children present special gifts to the needy.

Special delight is taken in the eating of Hamantashen, a triangular pastry especially baked for the holiday.

A prayer that will be ready during the worship service in Reform congregations from the Union prayerbook is:

"Strengthen us to combat prejudice, injustice and oppression when they strike not only against us but men of whatever race or belief. May we strive unceasingly for the triumph of truth and right over falsehood and wrong. Thus shall we be united in a true covenant of brotherhood and peace. Amen."

"The word Purim means 'lots', a drawing by chance used by Haman to select the day for the murder of the Jews."

Anyone wishing to attend may contact either Mrs. Irving, or Joseph Galkin, GJC executive director.

Go After the Kind of People You Want in Your Store

BUSINESS is a battle. And the master of business is the man who thinks—plans—directs the fight with the cool and calculating eye of an experienced general. Competition is daily becoming keener in every line of trade. Scientific methods are demanded in every department of business. And all commercial organizations lead to definite and centralized effort.

In no other feature of modern business is the expediency of concentration so universally emphasized as in the advertising end. Topsy-turvy publicity will quickly eat up the profits. In order to create a demand for an article through newspaper advertising you must first formulate a specific proposition for the right people.

This accomplished, you next seek an economical and efficient vehicle of publicity for the marketing of your goods. The selection of your medium should be made with regard to the character of the merchandise you are offering. If you are engaged in distributing goods of the better grade, you know that your logical field of sale is that of the substantial, prosperous class of people—the folks who can appreciate and afford your wares.

Your problem is to reach possible buyers —and no others.

Maximum results at minimum cost — that's The Herald's claim on your advertising appropriation.

NEW YORK — Merrill L. Hassenfeld, a vice president of the General Jewish Committee and general campaign chairman for 1960 and 1961, has been named a member of the National Campaign Cabinet of the United Jewish Appeal, it was announced today at UJA national headquarters in New York by UJA General Chairman Joseph Meyerhoff.

The national campaign cabinet comprises 71 key Jewish communal leaders from all parts of the country. It is the top planning and policy-making body for the nationwide UJA.

This year the cabinet members will direct a drive for 72-million, 400-thousand dollars to meet the needs of nearly 600,000 distressed Jewish men, women and children in 27 countries.

Mr. Hassenfeld, a prominent industrialist and an active leader in the Rhode Island Jewish community, was chairman of the successful 1960 GJC campaign that raised $640,000. It was just within the past two weeks that GJC president Joseph Ress announced that Hassenfeld had accepted the chairmanship for the 1961 campaign.

New Government

"1. As the new United States Administration has emphasized, the United Nations should be regarded as a forum for reconciling differences and not for inflaming them by sterile controversy. This applies to the Israel-Arab conflict as strongly as it does to the Cold War.

"2. The United Nations should refrain from tampering with resolutions, and writing into them what might appear to be minor concessions to Arab demands. It must be understood that these demands are not made in the interests of a solution of the refugee problem, but in the interests of political warfare against Israel, in the hope of undermining our position and eventually trying to settle accounts again with Israel. In the long run, therefore, such gestures of appeasement are destructive.

"3. The true role of the United Nations is to go on insisting on a settlement of outstanding issues between Israel and the Arab states by negotiation. Even if the Arab Governments refuse to negotiate, they should be discouraged from believing that in a changing and expanding United Nations, they can gain ground at Israel's expense. Here the United States has a vital stabilizing role to play."

Ambassador Comay concluded his address with the warning that the friends of Israel "must be fully aware of these dangers, while not exaggerating them." He emphasized that Israel has many in the world and at the United Nations, but the shifting battle lines of bloc politics at the UN may not always produce the kind of resolutions which are helpful or constructive.

The National Religious party was said Monday to be badly split over the Ben-Gurion proposals and subject to intense pressure from the rightwing Herut party to reject it. The conservatives within the Religious party and those now in Government posts were reported in favor of disregarding the Lavon affair and of joining the proposed new coalition. The leaders of the Religious Kibbutz movement and the young intellectuals of the party were opposed.

Menahem Beigin, leader of Herut, met Moshe Shapira, leader of the National Religious party, and proposed a wide coalition, headed by Mr. Shapira of all parties except Mapai. Later Mr. Shapira had a three-hour meeting in which Shapira avoided definite commitments stating only that he would present the Prime Minister's views to the party executive.

Hundreds of students demonstrated in Jerusalem last week, protesting against the "anti-democratic" trends manifested in public circles in connection with the Lavon affair. They carried placards protesting the ouster of Pinhas Lavon as security-general of Histadrut, the Israel Federation of Labor. Mr. Lavon was ousted by a solid Mapai vote after Mr. Ben-Gurion had announced he would not seek to form a new government unless Mr. Lavon were removed from office.

a big mistake, because the closing of the Jewish Center on Saturday, gave that institution a Jewish distinctiveness, which will now be removed.

Personally I feel proud as a member of the Cincinnati Jewish community where the question of Sabbath observance on the part of an institution, such as the Jewish Community Center, is settled on the fundamental basis of Jewish law (Halacha), as interpreted by Rabbi Eliezer Silver, whose outstanding position in Halachic Judaism no one can challenge. I feel that the leadership of the Center should be congratulated for obligating itself to conduct the Center's Saturday activities. I also wish to congratulate Rabbi Silver for his great faith in the leadership of the Jewish Center that it will sincerely endeavor to follow Rabbi Silver's blue-print for the Saturday activities of the institution.

AIDE ARRESTED

VIENNA — The Austrian Ministry of Justice reported last week that Hermann Hoefle, 49-year-old former SS officer who was arrested in Salzburg, has been charged with having been an accomplice of Adolf Eichmann in "solving the Jewish question."

The Ministry said that Hoefle's arrest was carried out after receipt of documentary evidence from the German State Prosecution Office, indicating he had a leading role in the mass murders of Jews in Poland, particularly in Warsaw and Lublin. He had recently worked as a commercial representative in Salzburg.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

HIDDEN SOURCE OF BOOM—'REPLACEMENT'

For the first time since we built our house in the country on the eve of the Korean war in 1950, we are in the market in a big way for replacements.

In the kitchen there are major purchases I can no longer duck; repairing the appliances again doesn't make sense. In the cellar, my husband is holding long conferences with experts who know about the expensive things that go into cellars. In the living room and bedrooms the need for new furniture becomes glaringly obvious in the revealing sun of a winter noon.

We are re-entering the market for durable goods after a long interval. We soon will be shifting back to buying big-ticket items for the simple reason that we need them to replace items we have.

What we are about to do, I submit, millions of other middle income families will be doing too on a rising scale as the goods they bought in the earlier postwar years get old, tired, rusty.

REPLACEMENT DEMAND is going to emerge as one of the great stimulants to the vitally important durable goods market in our nation as this decade wears on.

Buying to replace an appliance, a car, a couch -- and a house -- you now own is going to represent an increasing percentage of our total spending in coming years, to be a truly crucial factor in expanding factory employment and paychecks, spurring our rate of growth.

While few commentators are as yet even touching on this point, one nationally respected economist who also believes strongly in the rising significance of replacement demand is William F. Butler, vice-president of New York's Chase Manhattan Bank. Butler has, in fact, been working out estimates of the stupendous size of replacement buying in this decade, thinks that this is one "underlying factor swinging to the side of supporting a quickened rate of economic growth." Let's review for an instant the way you and I have been living and buying in the postwar period and you'll get the full meaning of this.

From the end of World War II through 1955 -- a full decade -- the American economy soared from boom to boom under the stimulus of our vast demands for housing, appliances, furniture, cars, etc. The upsurge was powered by two forces. First, all of us were starved for every type of product that was hard, heavy and expensive as a result of the depression in the 1930s and World War II in the 1940s.

The backlog of our demands inherited from depression and war was huge and we had the cash to buy. Second, on top of this came the postwar marriage boom. In the 1950-55 period, 1,500,000 new households were formed annually and each household had a multiplicity of needs.

Then in 1955, these underlying trends shifted. As Butler emphasizes, "The backlog demand was made up -- with a dramatic flourish in autos," and the formation of new households fell to 800,000 last year. Only because replacement demand began to rise did we see "general stability in the over-all market during the past five years."

Now replacement demands are really on their way up. Butler estimates total replacement requirements, at $60.6 billion in 1960, will be up to $68.4 billion in 1963, up to $70.8 billion in 1964, up to $73.5 billion in 1965. These estimates are in 1947-49 dollars -- meaning the totals would be billions bigger if figured in dollars of today's buying power. The replacement market for autos alone is calculated at $12.3 billion in 1965; for other consumer durables, at $23.4 billion; for housing, at $9.9 billion; for business plant and equipment, at $27.9 billion.

If yours is a home built, bought or furnished before 1955, your family is likely to be one of America's "hidden" sources of boom by 1965. And in the next few years, the other two underlying forces will be shifting back to the favorable side as well -- adding mightily to our chances for a fully prosperous economy.

ONE MAN'S OPINION THE PEOPLE OF EXODUS

by Beryl Segal

In July 1947, a ship set out from a European port and was headed for the shores of Palestine. The ship carried a cargo of "illegal" immigrants -- 4,500 of them -- from all parts of Germany. It was the purpose of the Haganah, the underground army of Palestine, to rescue all the Jews from the Nazi concentration camps and bring them to the land of their fathers. The ship was the former President Warfield, and it was renamed "Exodus," that is, going out of bondage to freedom, as in the time of Moses who brought the children of Israel out of Egyptian bondage into the Promised Land.

That was not the only ship that carried "illegal" immigrants, but it was the more famous one. The reason for its fame was that the English authorities overtook the ship, used seven warships to subdue her and her crew, and sent the immigrants back to the concentration camps in Germany. Other immigrants that were removed from their ships on the way to Israel were merely rerouted to Cyprus where they awaited their turn. Not so the 4,500 people of the "Exodus." On them the British turned with their full fury. They were the most stubborn, and they broadcast to the world their plight, while fighting a losing battle against the might of Britain.

The story of that battle, of that ship, and of the heart breaking journey of the "Exodus" is well told in the novel and the movie by that name.

The novel and the movie "Exodus" did more for awakening an interest in Israel, its people, and the Haganah in particular, than scores of books on the subject. The book is not the best narrative, and the movie is probably not a work of art, since it is based on the book. But they are effective, and they serve their purpose. There is a large segment of the population that has grown up during this time, which knows very little of the events of 1947. What is more, these young people are not going to study and look up the tragedy of the time. The novel and the movie give them this information, in a melodramatic way, but nevertheless in a painfully moving manner.

The book is not accurate. It is not meant to be an accurate account of the events that led up to the journey of the ship "Exodus." The captain of the ship, who is now a student at Columbia University, says that he did not recognize himself in the novel, nor any of the passengers.

Now, there is another book about the "Exodus." It is much thinner than the "Exodus," less pretentious, gives less political and social background to the story, and it is less known. But it is much more accurate, gives the daily events of the ship's journey, and is more a personal diary than a recreation of the trip. The author was himself a passenger on the "Exodus." He and his wife and their two-year old son were among the 4,500 passengers of the "Exodus," and what he tells is the first hand experience, and we might add, the dramatic experience, of one of the actors in the drama. The author, Yitzhok Perlov, and his wife, Lola, entertained the passengers while the ship was attacked by the British, and its crew was fighting for its life. In mid-ocean, Yitzhok Perlov and his wife tossed a closed bottle into the sea. It was picked up on the shores of Israel, at Haifa. The note was written in Yiddish, and it read:

"We are proud of our sufferings and our struggles."

While the book "Exodus" was written after lengthy interviews and back breaking research for contemporary material, the author Yitzhok Perlov wrote his novel as a personal account of the heroism and suffering of one of the passengers of the ship "Exodus."

The novel was written in Yiddish in 1949, just two years after the sailing of the Exodus. It has been translated now into English by Jeanette E. Shoham. Many of us will remember Jeanette and her husband, Maurice, from their stay in Providence and in Woonsocket. He was the Hebrew teacher at Beth Israel and later in Woonsocket. She was very active in Hadassah. They are now living in Petach Tikva, in Israel.

For an accurate account of that historic journey, and a personal narrative of the sufferings of the people of "Exodus," you will want to read "The People of Exodus."

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

Jack Benny attended the 50th wedding anniversary party for Tom and Anita May in Los Angeles. In his tribute to the Mays, Benny mentioned that Mrs. Benny had been a salesgirl at May's department store when he first met her. "We've been married for 34 years," said Benny. "One of the reasons why we've been together this long is because the May Co. has a policy -- once you take something out of the store, you can't return it."

Kim Stanley is on a crash diet to lose 20 pounds quickly. Her director husband, Alfred Ryder, likes her in full bloom -- but then there's the scene in their new play, "The Far Country," where the leading man has to lift her easily. ... Herbert Hoover is writing the history of America's relations with Russia. He works with three secretaries. ... Anita Loos, author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," finished her new novel, "No Mother to Guide Her."

William Black, head of Chock Full O'Nuts, had a dinner appointment at the Caravelle with his son-in-law, Eammon Kennedy, counselor to the Irish delegation to the UN. He told the maitre d': "Mr. Kennedy's table, please." ... The maitre d' bowed and led him to a recessed table where sat Joseph P. Kennedy, father of the President of the United States.

One of Dag Hammarskjöld's friends said of the Soviet attack on him: "Dag can take it. He feels it, but he can take it." ... Tyrone Guthrie, the 6 ft. 7 director, read Paddy Chayefsky's play, "Gideon," and decided he'd like to play the role of God in it. ... When Kay McCracken, the singer, made her New York debut at Judson Hall her accompanist was Vernon Duke, composer of "April in Paris" and "Cabin in the Sky." He's her husband.

Darryl Zanuck will have four directors for his film about D-Day, "The Longest Day." The director in charge of the dominant attacking force in each section will take over. Thus, when the Germans attack the Allied paratroopers, the German director will rule the set. In the scene where the American troops invade, the American director will be in charge. To coordinate any style differences, Zanuck will be over-all director.

William Saroyan took off for his native San Francisco the other night, and will fly home to Paris from there. ... Leonard Bernstein's "Joy of Music" just went into its seventh printing -- over 100,000 copies sold. ... Jim Hagerty's first bylined magazine piece will be in TV Guide Feb. 25.

Nazi Trials Spur Investigation On Wide Scale For Witnesses

NEW YORK—Parallel with the trial of Adolph Eichmann in Israel, the West German authorities are preparing trials of Nazi concentration camp officials and annihilation squad members charged with participating in the murder of 6,000,000 Jews. Their number is expected to reach the 100 mark. The West German authorities are in constant touch with the World Jewish Congress in New York in connection with tracing witnesses, obtaining depositions and other relevant information.

As a result of the World Jewish Congress' global appeal, about 300 persons all over the world have been traced or have given testimony. In at least two of the major cases, one involving the camp command at Auschwitz, 34 Nazis have already been arrested and are awaiting trial.

Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director of the World Jewish Congress' Institute of Jewish Affairs in New York, has reported to the WJC Executive the results of a two-year search for criminals and witnesses by the Central Office for War Crimes in Ludwigsburg, under the direction of Dr. Erwin Schuele.

Investigations have been initiated on a broad scale, the two main complexes being the major concentration camps and the Special Annihilation Squads (Einsatzgruppen) and their units, which were active in those areas of the Soviet Union occupied by Hitler. Special attention has also been paid to crimes committed in Nazi occupied Poland. In addition, investigations are now being conducted into crimes committed in Bulgaria, Denmark, France, Greece, Italy, Yugoslavia, the Netherlands, Norway, Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, as well as within that part of the former German Reich now outside West Germany.

The biggest investigation is into crimes at Auschwitz and its satellite camps. The case involves 950 Nazis of whom 28 are already under arrest. Investigations are also being conducted into crimes in such notorious concentration camps as Mauthausen, six of whose officials have been detained, Buchenwald, Ravensbrueck, Stutthof, and Sachsenhausen.

Eight separate investigations are being conducted into the mass murder of Jews in Poland carried out during Aktion Reinhard, the systematic extermination of Jews in the territory of the Government General of Poland in 1942 and 1943. Crimes in the districts of Cracow, Lwow, Warsaw and Lublin are being investigated separately.

The cases of the special squads (Einsatzgruppen) cover all areas of the Soviet Union that were occupied by the Germans, including Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, White Russia, the Ukraine, the Caucasus, Transnistria and Bessarabia.

Special investigations are also being carried out into the wave of anti-Jewish excesses on Crystal Night in November, 1938, and into the so-called "mercy-killing" program conducted by the Nazis.

What Is The Miami Story?

By Richard Cohen

April 4, 1961, has been set as the date on which the Dade County Circuit Court will hear final arguments by the attorneys in Miami's famous religion-in-the-schools trial -- the most significant lawsuit affecting religious liberty and church-state separation in our generation. A comprehensive account of the events leading up to the suit, the testimony itself, local and national repercussions and the factors that impelled the American Jewish Congress to sponsor this litigation are contained in "The Miami Story," a brochure recently issued by AJ Congress. What follows is a condensation of "The Miami Story."

The setting is the assembly hall in a Miami, Fla., public school. The occasion: an Easter Holiday program for children. In the spotlight on the darkened stage stands a child in the role of Jesus, naked except for a towel around his loins, his arms outstretched against a large wooden cross; his thin body is smeared with ketchup, simulating blood. The silence in the auditorium is broken only by the voices of two students -- a boy and a girl -- alternately reading the verses in the New Testament describing the Crucifixion.

"...and he saith unto the Jews, behold your king.

"But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Caesar.

"Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

"And he bearing the cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha;

"Where they crucified him, and two others with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

"An Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS."

As the last verse is read the boy on the cross moans and gives a final tortured gasp. His head drops; the agony of the Crucifixion is over.

This scene took place in a Miami, Fla., public school Easter program in the Spring of 1960. It was described in Dade County Circuit Court last summer, by a pupil who had been required to attend the performance, in a lawsuit challenging the religious practices of the public schools of Dade County, Fla. But while the immediate issue was the holding of sectarian observances in the public schools of Miami, the national significance of the case was manifested by the corps of newsmen covering the trial and the determination of lawyers for both sides to take the issue to the United States Supreme Court for final adjudication. The ultimate decision is expected to comprise one of the most significant Supreme Court rulings affecting religious liberty and separation of church and state within recent years.

At issue in the case are ten different types of religious observances practiced in the Miami public schools: (1) Bible instruction, (2) Prayers and Grace, (3) Sermons, (4) Religious films, (5) Religious Hymns, (6) Religious Holiday Observances, (7) Religious Symbols, (8) Baccalaureate Programs, (9) Religious Census, and (10) Religious Test for Teachers.

Four parents (three Jewish and one Unitarian) have challenged these observances as divisive, sectarian and violative of the U.S. and Florida Constitutions. The parents are being represented without fee by counsel provided by the American Jewish Congress -- Leo Pfeffe of New York, director of its Commission on Law and Social Action (CLSA) and one of the country's leading authorities on church-state law; and Bernard S. Mandler of Miami, CLSA Chairman for the South Florida Council of AJ Congress.

In the view of the American Jewish Congress, the Jewish community of the entire country has a major stake in the Miami litigation. Perhaps more than any other group in the U.S., American Jewry is committed to the unimpaired and uncompromised preservation of the principle of separation of church and state. For two thousand years Jews suffered persecution for adherence to their faith. It was in the United States, with its constitutional guarantee of religious liberty and church-state separation, that Jews first achieved a full measure of equality and freedom.

Recognizing this, Jewish organizations have unanimously and consistently opposed all efforts to impair the integrity of the separation principle. The most recent expression of this position was made on October 27, 1960, at a special meeting of the Joint Advisory Committee of the Synagogue Council of America and the National Community Relations Advisory Council (NCRAC). This meeting unanimously adopted a resolution which read in part:

"The Joint Advisory Committee of the Synagogue Council of America and the National Community Relations Advisory Council, having heard a report of the Miami litigation, believes that the cause of American Jewry and the principle of religious freedom would be promoted and furthered if this suit were to proceed to ultimate determination by the United States Supreme Court. It believes that the Jewish community of Miami would render a great service to American Jewry and the cause of religious liberty if it would cooperate in the achievement of this purpose."

Whatever Judge Gordon's decision at the Dade County Circuit Court level, all interested parties agree that the case is important enough and the issues significant enough to warrant an appeal to a higher court and eventually, to the United States Supreme Court.

The American Jewish Congress believes it is in accordance with the basic premise of American democracy for such an issue, affecting one of the fundamental freedoms of our Constitution, to be heard in a court of law and resolved ultimately by the highest tribunal in our land. This reliance on the law as the guarantor of freedom is among the highest values of the Jewish heritage as well. For it is in the tradition and the liturgy of the Jews -- a people whose history has been shaped by the concept of Torah -- that "the law is a tree of life to those who embrace it, and its advocates shall prosper."

In Hollywood . . .

Hollywood, Calif.--Jack Kruschen, who played the doctor in "The Apartment," has an excellent chance to win an Oscar for his supporting role. Jack's grandfather was a rabbi in Russia. . . . Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., former star of the TV show "77 Sunset Strip" and now a co-star of the movie "Fever in the Blood," is one of the few celebrities to become more famous than his father. You will remember that Zimbalist, Sr., was a widely known concert violinist.

That Ralph Blum, whose short story appeared recently in The New Yorker, is the 28-year-old son of Carmel Myers, the silent film star. . . . My sincere sympathy to Aaron Rosenberg, producer, on the death of his beloved mother, Bessie, 78. . . . Whoever thought up the idea of those buttons on the "Operation Eichmann" movie set has a perverted sense of humor. The buttons read: "I Like Eich." That's a tragedy, not a joke.

Harpo Marx, the famous deaf mute with the blonde curls and auto squeeze-horn, is now retired and living in Palm Springs, Calif. . . . Marge Hoshelle will pursue a singing career again under the name of Harriet Lee. She's Jeff Chandler's ex-wife. . . . Leonard Bernstein and Elmer Bernstein are each other's devoted musical fans. . . . Old vaudeville fans will be happy to hear that I met two former headliners--Senator F. Murphy, now 73 (real name Samuel LeTraunik)--and Julius Tannen, now 81. Julius was raised in the Hebrew Orphan Asylum at 138th and 10th ave., N. Y. City, when Harlem was Manhattan.

Adolph Zukor, granddaddy of Hollywood producers, is now a very active 84. . . . He received a thrilling standing ovation at the Friars tribute to Gary Cooper recently. . . . At the Friars, George Jessel said: "I've spoken for Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faith. I'm not so close anymore to the Moslems."

Give Ed Sullivan Brotherhood Award

NEW YORK — Ed Sullivan, famed newspaper columnist and television personality, was honored here last week by the Men's Club of New York's historic Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, for his efforts to promote the cause of racial and religious goodwill in America and better understanding among the nations of the world. The occasion was a special Brotherhood Service, at which the Congregation bestowed upon Mr. Sullivan its 15th Annual Brotherhood Award.

Rabbi William Berkowitz, who recently succeeded Dr. Israel Goldstein as spiritual leader of B'nai Jeshurun, presented the award in the form of a Scroll to Mr. Sullivan.

The special Brotherhood Service, in keeping with a tradition established by the Men's Club of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun in former years, served once again as the kick-off for the nationwide observance of Brotherhood Week. In attendance were delegations from other Synagogues and from several Christian churches.

However, I'd be willing to get up in the middle of the night anytime and say Kahdish for Nasser."

Continued Jessel: "I live at the Santa Monica Beach where my only visitor is an anti-Semitic seal" . . . Jack Warner, head of Warner Bros. Studios, commented: "I've always had faith in Gary Cooper. What else can you have in a guy getting 22 thousand dollars of your money every week, no faith?" . . . Sam Goldwyn couldn't remember the name of the first picture Gary Cooper made for him, so Jessel interrupted: "It was 'The Winning of Barbara Worth' and your name is Samuel Goldwyn."

Milton Berle then arose and said: "George Jessel has spoken at so many Jewish affairs, he's the only man who ever spoke at his own briss. He said: 'Ouch!'" . . . Continued Berle: "Jessel has eaten at so many charity banquets, he's now trying to kick the liver habit" . . . Also, "Now that Marilyn Monroe divorced Arthur Miller she's giving all her kosher dishes to Sammy Davis and May Britt."

Also, if any of you readers are still harboring any old-fashioned memories about the late Henry Ford's alleged anti-Semitism, let's forget it, because George Jessel reminds us that Henry Ford, II, who was present at the Friars tribute to Gary Cooper, recently gave the Israel Welfare Fund a check for $20,000.

Singapore Resumes Hebrew Education

NEW YORK — After a lapse of about 15 years, Hebrew education has been resumed in Singapore, according to a report received by the World Jewish Congress in New York.

In an appeal to the World Jewish Congress to help develop Jewish education in Singapore, Mr. Eli Kelman, of London, newly appointed principal of the local Talmud Torah Hebrew School, reported that more than 100 children enrolled when classes were opened early this year.

The community, which dates back to 1840, once numbered 2,000. Today it totals 650.

"There has been no Jewish education in Singapore since the war, therefore we have to start from scratch," Mr. Kelman wrote to the World Jewish Congress in New York. He added: "There is a keen spirit amongst the community, both young and old want to learn, to know more about their religion."

Mr. Kelman's plans include classes for the younger children, a special Bar Mitzvah class, evening instruction and discussion group for adults, and a two-year course to provide the Talmud Torah with locally trained Jewish teachers.

The World Jewish Congress has undertaken to extend all possible assistance.

The community has two synagogues, and a communal center and school, which was recently constructed by the Reuben Meyer Trust.

Second Speaker — Dr. Ben-Zion Bokser, Rabbi of Forest Hills Jewish Center, will be the second speaker in the Beth El series "Jewish Law" on Sunday, March 5 at 8:15 P.M. in the temple meeting hall. Dr. Bokser's topic will be "Jewish Law—What Does it Mean to the Modern Jew".

With North the dealer and neither side vulnerable, the bidding went:

| North | East | South | West |
|-------|------|-------|--------|
| Pass | Pass | 1H | Pass |
| 3NT | Pass | 4H | Double |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

West opened the ten of spades and South had no trouble in making the game. The club finesse held, the ace of clubs was cashed, and a spade return enabled South to lead a club for dummy to ruff, dropping West's king. Next a spade was ruffed, the ace of diamonds cashed, and a diamond ruffed. Declarer thus won the first eight tricks and could not be prevented from making two more tricks in trumps.

If West had analyzed the bidding he would have reasoned thus: North's 3NT bid could hardly have been made after his original pass if he had held a singleton heart; South's insistence on hearts with only a king-high suit places him with a six-carder. The trump position could, therefore, be clearly worked out by West before he led. His first consideration should have been to remove the two trumps from dummy to eliminate any ruffing values. The indicated lead by West was the ace, followed by the queen of trumps. Against this defense the contract cannot be made.
