Archie Smith Receives Award For Work In Jewish Education

By Celia Zuckerberg

In another story in this week's Herald there is a sentence which mentions, rather casually, that "Among the eighteen other prominent Jewish communal leaders from various parts of the country who were presented with Torah Umesorah Amudin Awards for their active support of intensive Jewish education was Archie Smith of Providence." Behind this casual mention are many years of vigorous and constant work for Jewish education in Providence.

Mr. Smith, a prominent Providence attorney, who was Assistant Attorney General of the State of Rhode Island for 17 years, serving under three administrations, is a friendly, genial individual who, on the surface, doesn't seem to take things too seriously. However, it becomes obvious after a short time that although he may seem to have a smile or a joke for practically everything, he is quite serious about a great many things.

Helped Found Day School

He was one of about a dozen men who worked to found the Providence Hebrew Day School, and who at the start "took all

13 Ex-Nazis On Trial For Murder In Bonn

BONN — Thirteen former Nazi Storm Troopers and security police officers went on trial last week on charges that they had murdered or abetted the murder of 170,000 Jews in the concentration camp of Chelmno in Poland.

The trial is being held in the Provincial Court of Bonn.

The 200-page indictment, a year in preparation, charged that starting in December, 1941, Jews were transported daily from the ghetto in Lodz to the death camp in an old castle.

The nine-member jury heard one of the defendants, 50-year-old Walter Bock of Hanover, testify. The former non-commissioned officer in the S.S., or elite guard, was not asked to plead. This is customary in a German court.

He said: "I did not mention my service in Chelmno in my denazification proceedings because nobody asked me." He was cleared and in 1947 returned, with his old rank, to the police.

Heart disease forced him to retire in 1957. To augment his pension, he took a part-time job as a truck driver.

The other defendants are laborers, municipal employes, farmers and an inkeeper.

It will be three to four months before a verdict is returned.

the abuse." These few men had decided in 1942 that a Hebrew Day School was needed to provide proper Jewish education for the children of the Jewish community, and so they contracted to buy a house on Prospect Street which they could use for the school.

Once the story appeared in the daily paper, the whole community according to Mr. Smith, became upset. They called a meeting which the men working for the day school were asked to attend and "talk sense."

At this meeting they were requested to give up the idea since they were afraid that having a school in that location would offend the neighbors—and they were also afraid of the idea of a Hebrew Day School since they felt it would make the Jewish children seem different than their neighbors, says Mr. Smith.

The contract was dropped only to be picked up by another school, the Abbie Tuller Loveland School, which is still located at the same place.

Start Campaign Again

A year or two later when the Lubavitch Yeshiva School opened on Orms Street, they again started a campaign for a Hebrew Day School since they felt that the Yeshiva was actually what had been feared by the members of the Jewish community before—a throwback which could only prove harmful.

The original Providence Hebrew Day School was started in 1946 in its building on Waterman Street. The Lubavitch School closed because of its inability to raise funds, and this left a burden on the hands of the new school.

The Day School group, of which Mr. Smith was an active member and of which he became the first president, had enough money for the down payment on the building, and for teachers and other necessities for kindergarten and first grade classes for one year's operation. Their intention had been to add one grade each year. In this way they felt they would have funds with which to work and they could gradually accustom the community to the idea of a Hebrew Day School.

However, they felt an obligation to the other children who were without a school and so they were suddenly faced with eight grades and the necessity for teachers and supplies and room for these eight grades. As time went on they gradually were able to come back to six grades.

Reform Groups Hold Assembly In Providence

Jews must take seriously the "universal priestly vocation" which their religion requires of every congregant, Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut, senior rabbi of Holy Blossom Congregation in Toronto, Canada, told 500 Reform Jewish leaders from all parts of New England at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel in Providence, Saturday night.

Rabbi Plaut was the principal speaker addressing the record gathering at the banquet session of the Biennial As-

Abram Says Minorities Control Legislatures Through Apportionment

BOSTON — Legislatures in all 50 states will be controlled by a minority of voters because of mal-apportionment, Morris B. Abram, head of the American Jewish Committee's executive board, recently stated here.

Outmoded voting systems have brought about this control, it was reported in the New York Times by Irving Spiegel, who covered Mr. Abram's speech delivered last week at the closing session of the committee's executive board meeting at the Kenmore Hotel.

Mr. Abram asserted that "state governments have actually been instruments through which a minority of the people have 'legally' imposed their views, taxes and programs on the majority."

He predicted that reapportionment cases now before the courts in 35 states would give city and suburban voters their "first, fair political shake in 50 years."

He said that reapportionment also might weaken resistance to desegregation in the South.

Mr. Abram, a New York lawyer who is a native of Georgia, argued that state's reapportionment case before the United States District Court in Atlanta.

Mr. Abram, a member of the law firm of Paul Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, was the first legal director of the Peace Corps and is a member of the United Nations subcommittee on the Prevention of Discrimination and the Protection of Minorities.

Cites Georgia

He cited Georgia as an example of the injustice of mal-apportionment, saying that in 1961 "it took 159 college professors in Atlanta to equal the vote of ten tenant farmers in the smallest Georgia county."

Reapportionment, he said, will provide, "a new civil right for many Americans who live in urban areas."

Mr. Abram continued: "Much of the resistance to the desegregation decisions has been political; and unfortunately, the political power of the South has been based upon rural oriented voters."

He linked reapportionment to increasing political power for important "religious and ethnic minorities in this country."

In some states, Mr. Abram said, "political life has been distracted by the failure to include in the decision-making processes all those whose welfare and life were affected."

As examples, Mr. Abram cited Mississippi, where about 30 percent control the lower house.

"UZZIS" NET $8 MILLION

TEL AVIV — Israel has exported 212,000 of its Uzzi sub-machine guns in transactions which have netted $8,000,000 to Israel's Treasury. Deputy Defense Minister Shimon Peres told a Defense Ministry workers' rally recently. He also told the rally that the entry of missiles into the Middle East had "considerably reduced" Israel's qualitative edge in manpower, but it had also cut Egypt's quantitative superiority in armament.

Dr. Emanuel Gamoran Dies At Age Of 67

Dr. Emanuel Gamoran, for 36 years Director of the Commission on Jewish Education of Reform Judaism, died at his home Nov. 15, of a heart attack.

A pioneer in the field of Jewish education, Dr. Gamoran was responsible for revolutionizing the curricula and techniques of Jewish education. His innovations set the pattern for religious school educational approaches in Reform Jewish congregations of the Western hemisphere. Other branches of Judaism in the United States and throughout the world emulated the methods which he devised and developed.

At the time of his death, Dr. Gamoran was educational advisor to the Commission on Jewish Education, a joint body representing the Central Conference of American Rabbis and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, central congregational body of Reform Judaism.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisen-drath, President of the UAHC, mourned the passing of Dr. Gamoran today and stated that "Dr. Gamoran was a teacher of teachers, who labored until the moment of his death in the mission of his life — to pass on as a living inheritance the deep ideals of Judaism and the body of learning bequeathed by its tradition. He was a teacher whose class was made up of countless thousands extending over three generations. His presence and his wisdom will be sorely missed by all who were privileged to work with him."

Dr. Gamoran made four extensive visits to Europe and Israel. In 1961 he visited the Union of South Africa and, together, with Mrs. Gamoran, lectured to the South African Union of Progressive Synagogues.

He is survived by his wife, Mamie Gamoran, author and educator and three children.

'EXODUS' CAUSES RIOT

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Anti-Semitic rioting broke out in this capital city recently when one of the leading movie theaters in the country staged its premiere showing of the American film, Exodus.

Mobs gathered outside the theater, anti-Semites painted the slogan "Death to the Jews!" in large, red letters on walls near the Central Square which faces the theater, and swastikas were emblazoned on the facade of the theater itself. During the rioting, tear-gas bombs were tossed into the movie house, disrupting — but not halting — the performance. (Latest figures show that the Honduran Jewish population is 150.)

Boston CJP Announces New Foundation Plan

BOSTON — The Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston announced last week that a new foundation plan allowing for distribution of both principal and income to non-affiliated agencies may now be established through contract with the CJP.

Under the plan, the CJP takes full responsibility for administration and investments, files necessary reports, and submits regular statements to the donor on transactions in this fund. A simple form for the establishment of the private foundation is patterned after that developed by the Cleveland Federation and approved by the Internal Revenue Service.

Provisions of the trust from contract call for distribution of income and principal at the direction of the donor in writing. In any one year, where there is no such direction, net income would go to CJP to apply towards donor's campaign pledge. On expiration of fund or death of donor where there is no written direction for distribution, all principal and income would be held in the CJP Endowment Fund.

The new program has been set up in connection with the CJP Endowment Fund under direction of Sidney Cohen, vice-president of endowments and bequests.

Honors Newspapers Of Yiddish Press

NEW YORK — The Yiddish press in the United States has been singled out for special honors with presentation of scrolls of honor to the Jewish Daily Forward and the Jewish Day-Journal, citing the Yiddish press in the United States as the reflection of "the aspirations of newcomers to our shores," and picturing the achievements of immigrants in this country.

The scrolls were presented to the newspapers at the 33rd annual convention of the Council of Organizations of United Hias Service held here recently.

Murray J. Gurfein, president of United Hias Service, and James P. Rice, executive director, reported the worldwide migration agency will help approximately 9,100 migrants and refugees to resettle, in 1962, in the United States, Brazil, Canada and Australia. Hias is a beneficiary agency of the United Jewish Appeal.

SOME PEOPLE THINK

FOR THE SAME THING!

However... the same thing in another store might not be the same thing at Herbert Browns. For instance, packages do wonderful things for clothes. Dress them up with lots of tissue... tie them up with pretty ribbons... and they all look good. But... put them on, and that's when the "definitely Herbert Brown" look comes to the fore. It's the cut that counts, the fabric that flourishes, the detail that dominates! From fine suits, sportswear and outerwear to distinctive personal accessories like ties, suits and pajamas, the Herbert Brown look of understated elegance does exciting things for father and son.

So if Herbert Brown charges more for the same thing, it's not the same thing.

In union, there is strength. The fable of the Lion and the Oxen illustrates this lesson very forcibly. As long as the three Oxen stayed together, the Lion dared not attack. But 'the king of beasts' sowed dissension and jealousy amongst his adversaries, and they separated. It was then easy for the Lion to attack and destroy them one by one.

In Sun Life, also, there is strength. When you become a policyholder of this great company, you become one of a group of farsighted men and women — the holders of three million policies and group certificates — who protect their families and themselves against an uncertain future through the medium of life insurance.

A LOOK AT SPORTS

by LEON SAPERSTEIN

Baseball entered the sports scene recently with the news that the Milwaukee Braves had been sold by the Perini empire. Although Louis Perini will still retain a ten percent interest in the club, he will no longer be the power behind the Braves throne.

What the sale will mean to Milwaukee pennant hopes is still debatable. My sources indicated that Perini had earlier attempted to move the Braves back to Boston after the initial Milwaukee welcome had eased off. However, there were too many hurdles to overcome and so the Braves will stay in the city that made beer famous.

For the Braves to once again enter the flag picture they must make two improvements. The first is in the outfield where only the fabulous Hank Aaron stands supreme. If Lee Maye can show his potential, the team may finally have a competent outfield.

Another problem is the hurling delegation, which has veterans Warren Spahn and Lew Burdette and very little else. Needed here are two more reliable pitchers for starting assignments and a capable relief specialist. These moves would make the Braves a strong contender in 1963 especially since no National League squad looks like a shoo-in at this date.

PROFILE OF A FIGHTER

Last Thursday night, in Los Angeles, Cassius Clay wrote finis to the remarkable fistic career of Archie Moore, the patriarch of boxing. Clay had boasted that, "Moore must fall in four," and sure enough the bout ended in the fourth stanza. What kind of a fighter is this brash young man?

At the present time Cassius Clay is riding the crest of 16 consecutive fights without a defeat. Since capturing the Olympic light-heavyweight championship he has beaten every opponent sent against him. Therefore it is little wonder that Cassius is not cautious in extolling his own virtues.

Although Clay talks about meeting Sonny Liston for the title, it is doubtful that he is quite ready at the tender age of 20 for this undertaking. The Talkative One needs a few more bouts before being placed in the arena against the massive Liston. I feel that in 1964 Clay will be in his best condition, physically and mentally, for the extreme test. Then he will still be ten years younger than Liston and the novelty of the heavyweight crown will have lost some of its lustre to Sonny Boy.

Of course there is still the return match with Floyd Patterson (remember him?) to consider. If Patterson should by some miracle, regain the championship it would not be until 1964 before Cassius would be able to finally vie for the Grand Prize of boxing. And Clay will be ready. He is the most exciting pugilist around with all the necessary tools for greatness. But, only if he is not rushed too quickly up the ladder, for then he may be destroyed.

The Cocky One needs his conceit. As long as he is able to back up his statements with his punches he is almost invincible. A bad defeat would wreck his self-confidence and probably his career.

FOOTBALL PREDICTION DEPARTMENT

Lately my crystal ball has been shining very brightly. Last Sunday's game between the Boston Patriots and Houston Oilers was one of my best efforts. I had forecast a 24-20 victory for the Oilers. The final score was 21-17—close and the winning margin was by four points.

Not only were the Patriots beaten and ousted from first place, but they lost quarterback Babe Parilli for the remainder of the season. This crippling blow should end the Patriot hopes for the Eastern Division title in the American Football League. Yewic is adequate but Boston desperately needs a veteran at its controls.

PROCLAMATION

BY JOHN A. NOTTE, JR.

GOVERNOR

The greatness of our American heritage is reflected by our holidays. We honor courageous men and celebrate great events. Yet, we are unique in our national purpose in that we set aside one day to be humble -- a day to give thanks to God -- a day we simply call Thanksgiving.

On this day we give thanks to our Creator for the many blessings He has bestowed upon us. Yet, we can never experience the symbolism of this holiday unless we recapture the mood that inspired the first Thanksgiving.

Let us go back three hundred and forty-two years to relive in spirit those trying times. The Pilgrims, their hazardous voyage over, had landed at Plymouth. Before them lay a winter of privation and suffering. But with spring came help from the Indians -- practical help given in a friendly spirit. With renewed hope, the Pilgrims worked steadfastly, tilling the soil, planting the seeds, and praying that their crops might survive.

God answered their prayers, for their crops came to full fruition. To show their gratitude for the food God had given them, the Pilgrims and the Indians joined in the thanksgiving feast. They realized that God had seen them through their sufferings, that He had given them strength and courage to forge ahead. With their faith restored, they laid the cornerstone of a great nation.

Today many of us fail to appreciate fully the true meaning of Thanksgiving, for we have not experienced such deep sufferings to make us realize how truly grateful we should be. Look at America and her bounty! Our heritage of freedom -- the rights granted by our Constitution, our vibrant economy -- all parts of this great nation! Reflect on the beauty of our land and the stamina of our people. We are great because of our intrinsic strength and the endowment of the Pilgrim forefathers, who in turn, were saved by the charity and humanity of the Indians; AND NOW, THEREFORE, DO I, JOHN A. NOTTE, JR., GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS, PROCLAIM calling upon all our people to recognize it as a day of heritage and humility. Pause a while and reflect upon the significance of its deeper meaning. Let us in this spirit be mindful of our blessings, but also cognizant of the many who are not so endowed as we -- many who today suffer as did the Pilgrims. Let us extend the helping hand, as did the Indians to the Pilgrims, so that throughout this favored land and throughout the restless world, peace and plenty may be bestowed upon all mankind from the hand of a Bountiful God.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22ND, 1962, AS

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State to be affixed this 20th day of November, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and sixty-two, and of Independence, the one hundred and eighty-seventh.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

Save On Taxes NOW

CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS

If you, as a businessman, are planning to get rid of any old machinery, equipment, furniture, cars, etc., consider the possible tax advantages of giving the property to a school, church or charity before January 1, 1963, instead of trying to sell the stuff. By giving, you not only will help the organization but you also will get more benefit from the net after-tax return of your contribution than you would from a sale of the property.

Because of changes made by the Revenue Act of 1962, this will be the last year you can get the full tax benefit from this type of charitable contribution.

As an illustration, say you have old desks, chairs and typewriters which you have depreciated down to zero, but which have a second-hand market value of $5,000. Used property dealers might not even give you half this price because they can't get more than $5,000 from reselling your property. Also, you have to pay tax on whatever price you do get. A simple alternative would be to give the property to a local school which needs it badly. Then you would have a charitable contribution of $5,000, which, if you are in the 50 per cent bracket, could save you $2,500 in taxes.

The 1962 Revenue Act says that when you make charitable gifts of depreciable business property after 1962, you must reduce your contribution deduction by the amount of depreciation you take on the property after 1961. In the above example, assume you took your last $2,000 of depreciation on the desks, chairs and typewriters this year. If you wait until January 1963, to give the stuff to the school, you'll have to cur your $5,000 charitable gift in 1963 by the $2,000 of depreciation you took this year. Just because you put off the gift beyond December 31, your deduction would be reduced.

Note carefully that you can make charitable gifts of used non-business as well as used business property and there is nothing in the 1962 Revenue Act which will cut down your charitable deduction for non-business property, whether you give this year or next. Check on whether a charitable, religious or educational organization can use your old refrigerator, bed chair, personal desk, etc. If so, you not only will help by contributing this used property; you also will save taxes because you can deduct the fair market value of the property you contribute.

If you are in the business of selling goods, you can get a tremendous tax break by contributing your own merchandise to charity.

Here's, why. You buy at one price, sell at a marked-up price and the difference is your profit. If you give the goods to a charity instead of selling them, you don't pay any tax on the difference between your cost and selling price—or what would have been your profit on a sale. Yet, you can take a charitable contribution deduction equal to the price at which you sell your goods, not the lower cost to you.

In short, you get a deduction for the potential income but you don't pay any tax on the income.

For instance, say your corporation is in the 52 per cent tax bracket and you want to contribute $200 of its income to a local charity this Thanksgiving. Your corporation's out-of-pocket cost for this $200 charitable gift would be only $96, for if it hadn't made this tax deductible cash contribution to the charity, it would have had to pay the Treasury the other $104 anyway in taxes.

Now, say your corporation makes the contribution by giving its own merchandise -- just as an illustration, air conditioners which your firm buys for $120 and resells for $200. The charity either can use the air conditioner or resell it easily for $200.

Your corporation deducts $200 for the charitable contribution of an air conditioner, thereby saving the same $104 in taxes that it would have saved from a $200 contribution in cash. But since your firm paid only $120 for the conditioner, its out-of-pocket cost is only $16 ($120 cost less $104 tax saving).

By making its charitable gift in its own merchandise, your corporation can contribute $200 at a net cost of only $16!

The heart of this is that you do not report as taxable income the difference between the cost and sales price of the merchandise and yet you get a deduction on your income tax for the full sales price. It's a two-way tax break which can add up to immense savings!

MEDICAL DEDUCTION CEILING DOUBLED

If you've had catastrophic medical bills this year, one comforting bit of news is that a new law gives you significant tax relief. For the law doubles the ceiling on deductions for medical expenses for practically everyone for 1962 and on.

Until this year, the general rule has been that you could not deduct more medical expenses in one year than $2,500 multiplied by the personal exemptions to which you are entitled (not counting extra exemptions for blind persons and those 65 or over). In no event, though, could a single person -- other than a head of household or surviving spouse entitled to income splitting -- or a married person filing a separate return deduct more than $5,000. Nor could a married person filing a joint return or a head of household, or a surviving spouse entitled to income splitting deduct more than $10,000 in one year.

All these figures have now been doubled. Let's assume you are a married man with three children and this year you were hit by uninsured medical expenses of $15,000 over and above 3 per cent of your total adjusted gross income. Under the old law, your top deduction would have been

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY LIKE A HEAP OF WHEAT

By Beryl Segal

About nine or ten years ago, I told of a Rabbi who does a strange thing. He pours old wine into new jugs. He does it reverently, because every drop of this wine is precious. He does it carefully, because a drop lost in the process is a loss to the flavor of the wine. He does it with great love, because only thus can a man devote all his thoughts and all his talents to the labors which he has taken upon himself.

That Rabbi was Dr. William G. Braude, of Temple Beth El, and the wine he poured was the Midrash on the Psalms which he recreated into English. That work of his was published by the Yale University Press, and is now a book of reference in the library of every Rabbi, of every scholar and of every one who cherishes the Midrash and who appreciates that form of writing.

Now Rabbi Braude is engaged in a similar job. This time, he is translating a Midrash called Pesikta Rabbati. The work is of the fourth century C.E., and consists of interpretation by Jewish scholars of portions of the Bible. It is a very obscure work and, left to itself, it would probably be forgotten altogether and be accessible to a few scholars only. The original is extremely difficult to understand. Not because the language is difficult, but because the style of writing is so precise, and because the allusions made in the Midrash require intense investigation. The Midrash was known and popular at the time it was written, but it is out-of-bounds to us, accustomed as we are to a different manner of writing.

And so Rabbi Braude undertook to translate this Midrash into readable English, to pour the old wine into new jugs, so that you and I might be able to read it with pleasure.

I have read some chapters of the Pesikta, and with the permission of Rabbi Braude, I wish to reprint two stories from the Tenth Chapter of the book.

"Thy belly is like a heap of wheat," so it says in the Song of Songs. Israel is likened to a heap of wheat. The Midrash asks: "Why is Israel likened to wheat?" And it answers it in this manner:

"Rabbi Huna said in the name of Rabbi Idi: 'Is not a heap of cedar cones or a cluster of pepper plants more beautiful than a heap of wheat? And since the Holy One, Blessed be He, wishes Israel to know how dear they are to Him, He ought to have called them a heap of cedar cones, or a cluster of pepper plants.' It is possible, however, for the world to get along without cedar cones and without pepper plants, but it is impossible for the world to get along without wheat. Should the world lack cedar cones or pepper plants, would it concern the inhabitants? But should it lack wheat, there would be no life for them -- not even for a short time!"

Thus the Midrash explains a verse in the Song of Songs that would be meaningless otherwise, and we who read it are delighted with the comparison and with the reasoning. Look how down-to-earth these Rabbits were. How they knew the beauty of pepper plants and cedar cones; they are beautiful to our eyes as well. But, how well they knew the value of things. To the existence of the world, wheat is more valuable than the cones and the peppers, and hence Israel is compared to wheat. Though not so beautiful, and not so eye-catching as the other nations may be, they are as necessary as wheat to the welfare of the world. Quite a tribute to a people.

Or let us take this Midrash, and see the beauty of it.

"Thy Belly is like a heap of Wheat." A wheat plant rises straight up like a palm, its stalk long, its leaves wide and long, and the ear at the very top. Now when the stalk boasts and says: 'The field was sown for my sake,' and the leaves boast and say, 'The field was sown for our sake,' the ear of wheat replies: 'Behold, harvest time is coming and every one will know for certain for whose sake the field was sown.' After the coming of harvest, the stubble is disposed of in fire, the chaff is scattered before the wind, but the wheat is kept for the granary. Whoever passes by, takes some grains and kisses them."

Hence it makes sense to compare the People of Israel to a heap of wheat. It is like wheat in importance, it is like wheat in its usefulness, it is like wheat in the scheme of things in the world. And look also how the Rabbits of the Midrash had an eye for nature and for the kernel of importance in nature. Always the humble and the plain to the sight, like the wheat, emerges in the end as the one thing for which the farmer toiled and sowed and harvested, and the one thing that is really of importance. Everything else was only an ornament, an aid to the growing of the wheat.

And so Rabbi Braude is immersed in this Midrash and counts and measures every word, every phrase, every sentence. The book, when completed, will be published by the same publication society that published his first two books, the Yale University Press. We will await the appearance of the Midrash Pesikta Rabbati with great interest.

AGE: Somerset Maugham, who will be 88 in January, recently was ill. A woman who lives nearby phoned Maugham's secretary and asked if she could send fruit or flowers. "Tell her," Maugham replied, "it's too late for fruit and too early for flowers."

VISIT: The John F. Kennedy's visit to the Washington premiere of the Bolshoi Ballet was first revealed here last June. It was the result of long negotiations by S. Hurok, the impresario... Mr. Kennedy is not the first President to visit a Hurok presentation in Washington. President Eisenhower attended the touring Met first night of "La Boheme" in the capital. At intermission Rudolf Bing, head of the Met, asked Eisenhower how he liked it.

"You have a tenor... a Dane... Eisenhower said... Bing supplied the name, 'Lauritz Melchior'.... "Yes, Melchior," said Eisenhower. "He sings 'The Star Spangled Banner' better than anyone."

CRITIQUE: Jack Waldron, the veteran nightclub comic, presided at a Lambs Gambol. He announced the door prizes: "First prize will be 50 Lawrence Welk records-- and a hammer."

CENSORSHIP: Arthur Sylvester, of the Defense Dept., is under fire because of his withholding of news during the crisis over Cuba. His explanation was that news is a weapon these days. Winston Churchill was asked if the public should be told everything. He replied that the public should not be told everything by those in possession of the facts.

Churchill said that keeping a secret for security reasons is the responsibility of an elected head, that as long as those with whom the secrets are deposited are freely elected, then our freedom is not impaired.

Gov. Mike DiSalle of Ohio watched his friends weep at the news of his defeat, and said: "A politician should be an unmarried orphan -- without friends."

CROWD: Jan Mitchell, the owner of Luchow's and Long-champs, was at a buffet dinner party given by an eminent New Yorker. The guest list was long and the buffet table small, and there was a bit of pushing. Gilbert Miller, the producer, would have none of it, and started to leave. He told Mitchell, "I'm too old and too rich to be pushed around like this."

HOME: Paulette Goddard owned vast, valuable tracts of land on both coasts and in Europe. Now she is happily settled in a home near the Swiss-Italian border with her husband, Erich Maria Remarque. "Before Erich, I had much property, but no home," said Miss Goddard happily. "Now I have no property, but a home."

MEMOS: Commissioner Joe Foss, in New York to sit in on Harry Wismer's sale of the New York Titans football team, said: "I'm like a sheepherder on a very high mountain". . . Roger Kahn, who ghost wrote "Calories Don't Count," is writing Mickey Rooney's autobiography. . . Arthur Murray's franchised schools report that bossa nova has replaced the twist. . . Margaret Leighton, co-star of "Tchin-Tchin," has moved into an apartment with a bed and one chair -- until her furniture arrives from London. . . Ex-candidate James Michener has resumed working on his musical "Tahtti."

INVITATION: Irving Berlin tells of the day during the war when Eleanor Roosevelt saw his GI musical "This Is the Army." She went backstage afterwards and told the assembled cast of soldiers, "You're all invited to the White House, and you won't have to do KP."

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA-- Paramount Studio came a cropper in a recent press release when it related that Murray Alper, veteran actor, was furnished his start in showbusiness as interlocutor at the tender age of 17 by Ernest D. Glucksman in a Glucksman-written minstrel show at Manhattan's 92nd Street YMCA. The aforementioned facts are correct except for one -- it was the YMHA, not YMCA.

Glucksman, currently producing "The Nutty Professor," starring Jerry Lewis at Paramount, hired Alper again -- this time to portray Jerry's judo instructor.

Murray has proved himself an excellent actor in countless films, but continues to mellow with age. He created a buzz of excitement at Warner Brothers recently when he played the town drunk in the "Cheyenne" video segment, "Who Murdered Cheyenne Bodie?" Catch that episode in your hometown and observe a top pro add depth to what might have been a run-of-the-mill role.

After many Broadway successes, Alper came west in 1935 with his friend Dave Chasen, former vaudeville straight man and now a prominent Beverly Hills restaurateur. Murray has appeared in almost all Jerry Lewis films and considers Jerry an artist of unlimited dimensions as well as one of the leading philanthropists of this age.

PAST PRESIDENT FEYED

Burton Salk, prominent Providence attorney and past president of the Touro Fraternal Association, was named to the association's Board of Directors at last week's meeting which was designated as "Past President Night."

Joseph Engle, chairman of the Board, spoke on men of principal and their relation to Touro which is the largest independent Jewish Fraternal Association in New England.

About 100 members turned out to hear Dr. Marshall K. Bernstein praise Mr. Salk with opening remarks. Ben Rabinowitz, Touro's president, acted as master of ceremonies and presentation of a gift was made by Charles Coken, secretary.

The fraternity's faithful guide, Morton L. Coken, commented on Mr. Salk's many civic endeavors other than his good work for Touro.

A highlight of the evening was a medley of songs by the Touro choristers under the direction of Cantor Samuel Berditch.

A social hour followed.

BILL: Monte Brice, the veteran movie director, who died recently, spent his last years working as a member of Bob Hope's staff. He accompanied Bob to Paris, where I saw him lurching on his terrace at the Hotel George V. Brice was angry, for he'd been charged $3.50 for laundering his pajama top: "They insisted it was a robe."

Brice pointed to the hotel, the gardens, the Eiffel Tower, the Seine, the cafes -- to all the loveliness of Paris, and roared, "The whole thing is really a front for a laundry."

LETTERS: The unpurgated letters between Henry Miller and Lawrence Durrell, covering their 25 years of friendship will be published in January. It began when Durrell, then 23, wrote a fan letter to Miller after reading one of his books. Miller said of that first letter, "I liked it. It's the kind of letter I would have written, had I not been the author of the book."

There has been quite a change in the Providence Hebrew Day School in the past 16 years. It is now housed in a new building of its own on Elm Grove Avenue with an ever growing student body.

At the time the Providence Hebrew Day School started there were no more than half a dozen schools throughout the country—now under the Torah Umesorah there are 295 Hebrew Day Schools in 105 communities.

The Torah Umesorah, explains Mr. Smith, is not affiliated with synagogues or temples. The Providence school was the first started says Mr. Smith, with an absolute disregard for Orthodox, Conservative or Reform following. The feeling of the group which started the school was that there is only one kind of Jew—some simply are more observant than others—and so there is only one kind of Jewish education.

According to Mr. Smith, there is a definite need for a Hebrew Day School. "In our community with the public school system as it is, it is the only practical way of giving an integrated education to Jewish children. The public school is geared to the slowest children, and it is a Christian-oriented school. An amazingly extensive program of Christian education is part of the curriculum, including Christmas plays, prayers, Easter preparations, etc." Trying to equate Christian holidays is not proper either, he feels.

Receiving a truly adequate Hebrew education in after-school Hebrew schools is not possible, no matter how good the Hebrew schools are and how many hours of teaching they supply.

"The children have been" says Mr. Smith, "in a Christian-oriented school for the major part of the day. They cannot at the end of the day, when they are tired, learn a culture which is 5,000 years old, in an hour or two."

Deep as is his interest in Jewish education, Mr. Smith has been very active in many other things. His career as Assistant Attorney General and as an attorney have been noteworthy. And he is still actively working for the state besides conducting his private law practice.

Born in Providence in 1908 Mr. Smith was graduated from Brown University in 1929 and then attended Harvard Law School.

He received his Doctor of Laws from the University of Chicago and was admitted to the Rhode Island Bar in 1934.

Presently he is the legal director of the Legislative Council of the State of Rhode Island and a member of the Committee on Highway Laws of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Science.

He has been active in communal work other than the Hebrew Day School, having been former president of Congregation Ahavath Shalom, past president of the Roger Williams Lodge, B'nai Brith, and the first president of the Providence Chapter of Mizrahi. He is also a director of the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra.

He and his wife, the former Miriam Bell, and their four children live in a 15-room home, the former George Jepherson mansion, at 134 Brown Street. Of the three sons, Hershel, 21, is attending Boston University School of Law, having been graduated from Brown University. Arthur, 19, is a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The youngest son, Earl, who is 16 attends Hope High School, and their daughter, Meryl, is 17 and a student at Pembroke College.

Community Center To Open Campaign For Membership

The Jewish Community Center will open a concentrated one-week campaign for 150 new Center Family Members with a campaign workers' breakfast rally and briefing session at the East Side JCC building this Sunday beginning at 9:30 A.M.

Maurice Dressler, chairman of the Center Membership Committee and the campaign, announced that more than a score of drive captains attended last Sunday's Captains' Breakfast, and that some 80 workers will probably participate in the concentrated effort.

Campaign captains include Harold Baron, Jules Cohen, Raymond Cohen, Harry Coppel, Abbott Dressler, Burton Fain, Bernard Gladstone, Harold Goldenberg, Edward Leif, Mrs. Sidney Meyer, Martin Miller, Marc Pearlman, Joseph Rubien, Charles Samdperil, Elliot Slack, Stanley Smith, Sol Wald, Melvin Zurier, Perry Deitch, Mrs. Sidney Dressler, Lee Bonoff, and Milton Wintman.

Each captain will command a team of three to four workers in the campaign, and each worker will solicit approximately five prospects.

sembly of the New England Council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, who opened their four-day conclave in Providence on Nov. 16.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations is the central congregational body of Reform Judaism in the Western hemisphere.

Delegates at a convention luncheon which concluded the four-day proceedings Sunday, passed resolutions calling for modification of U.S. immigration laws by Congress "to eliminate the racist quota system of selecting new Americans" and for support of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision on prayer, with religious teaching to remain "as it has been, the responsibility of the home, the church, the synagogue," with the public school to teach "morality, ethics and good citizenship" but "without presenting or teaching any sectarian or theological sources or sanctions of such values." The resolution opposed the practice of reading prayers in public or high schools as well as Bible readings except as included in literature courses, hymn-singing, granting of school credits for religious studies, wearing of clerical garb by teachers on school premises, holding of public school classes on premises of religious institutions, and "taking of a religious census by pupils."

Among the officers of the New England Council elected at the conference were Walter Adler of Temple Beth El, a vice-president; Mrs. William Matzner of Temple Beth, a vice-president of the New England Region District No. 1 of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Unofficial figures show that Brazilians voting in the general elections throughout the country last month elected at least five Jews to Federal and state legislatures.

The ballot count as it stands now shows that Emanuel Weisman of this city has been elected as a deputy to the Federal Legislature. In addition three other Jews, Francisco Silbert and Gerson Bergher of Rio de Janeiro, and Jacob Salvador weibel, of Sao Paulo, were elected as deputies in the Legislature of the State of Guanabara.

Find Two Israelis Responsible In Soblen Case Irregularities

JERUSALEM — Two unidentified senior civil servants have been found responsible for alleged irregularities in the expulsion of the late Dr. Robert A. Soblen from Israel last summer.

According to a report by the New York Times, an Israeli inquiry committee was still divided on what disciplinary steps to take against the two officials believed to serve in the office of Premier David Ben-Gurion and in the Foreign Ministry.

Dr. Soblen, the convicted spy, took his life in London within recent months to avoid returning to the United States.

One of the officials was reported to have been held responsible for having failed to inform Soblen's lawyer, Ari Ankorian, of the Government's decision to expel the Soviet spy after he had forfeited bail in the United States and fled to Israel in June. The other official was charged with having co-operated with American authorities in the expulsion arrangements.

When Soblen was expelled July 1, he was accompanied aboard an Israel El Al airliner

Announce Program To Ease Shortage Of Hebrew Teachers

NEW YORK — A comprehensive program designed to ease the critical shortage of teachers in Hebrew day schools throughout the United States and Canada was announced here Nov. 11 by Torah Umesorah, the National Society for Hebrew Day Schools.

In an address to the organization's Annual Dinner at the Hotel Pierre here, Samuel C. Feuerstein of Brookline, Mass., national president, outlined details of the plan which will utilize the facilities of rabbinical seminaries in major cities in various parts of the country where special training centers for day school teachers will be established by Torah Umesorah in cooperation with the Jewish institutions of higher learning.

The first such center to provide the specialized training required by day school teachers has already been set up in Baltimore, Md., in cooperation with the Ner Israel Rabbinical College in that city with an enrollment of twenty students. Other teacher training units are scheduled to be opened next year in different parts of the country, Mr. Feuerstein said.

Noting that the day school movement had reached a stage of growth in which the teacher shortage was a primary concern, Mr. Feuerstein said that communities in many cities have been unable to open day schools because of the lack of qualified teachers.

Mr. Feuerstein called upon the heads of all rabbinical seminaries in the country to urge the best of their students to enter the day school teaching field where they are badly needed. "Scholarship has always been the basic element in Jewish religious tradition," he declared, "but unless some of it is channeled immediately into this vital area, a day school education will be unavailable to thousands of youngsters."

Torah Umesorah's Siegfried Bendheim Memorial Award, given each year to an outstanding personality who has shown selfless devotion to the religious well-being of the American Jewish community, was awarded at the Dinner to Max Stern, president of Hartz Mountain Products Corp. and vice president of Torah Umesorah.

Among the eighteen other prominent Jewish communal leaders from various parts of the country who were presented with Torah Umesorah Amudim Awards for their active support of intensive Jewish education, was Archie Smith, of Providence.

To Occupy Pulpit — Rabbi Maurice Davis of the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation in Indianapolis, Ind., will occupy the pulpit of Temple Beth El this evening at 8:15 o'clock.

Rabbi Davis, son of Mrs. Jack Davis of Providence, makes his traditional visit each year on the occasion of his mother's birthday.

Rabbi Davis serves as a member of the Executive Board of the Governor's Youth Council, Governor's Commission on Aging and Aged, and Governor's Commission on Migratory Labor.

He is president of the Indianapolis Council on Human Relations, and is the founder of the bi-weekly television program SCOPE.

BACK HOUSING RIGHTS

DETROIT — The Detroit Jewish Community Council this week announced support of a proposed City Council ordinance to safeguard minority rights in housing.

Reports Jewish Communal Life In Poland Dwindles Under Impact Of Assimilation

DETROIT — Jewish communal life in Poland is dwindling precipitately under the impact of assimilation and should a Jewish creative country ever emerge there again "it will be another of the miracles of Jewish survival," it was disclosed here by Philip Slomovitz, editor-publisher of the Detroit Jewish News.

Reporting on his recent visit to Poland as a member of a UJA study mission, Mr. Slomovitz limned a bleak picture of Jewish life in Poland and of its prospects in the future. He estimated the Jewish population there at 25,000, with a mere twenty-two communities in a country which in pre-Hitler days counted a proud and creative Jewish community of more than 3,500,000.

"There are no rabbis and no rabbinical seminaries" in Poland and the "religious element is small and the synagogue's influence is minimal," Slomovitz reported, adding that "Jewish school attendance is small and the regimentation in the direction of current political influence is overwhelming." He said some 1,500 Jewish children outside Warsaw and Krakow were attending non-religious folk schools. He called Krakow a "dying community" with a Jewish population of about 2,000.

mosty elderly. Before the war Krakow had a Jewish population of about 80,000. In Krakow, as elsewhere, Mr. Slomovitz reported "the religious element is dwindling" and the so-called cultured youths are "abandoning their people," with a few desiring to go to Israel. In his opinion, "the dedicated group that sought freedom as Jews has already gone to Israel, and a very small percentage of the remaining will seek eventual haven in Israel."

In Warsaw, where he said the cultural Jewish community was making a "valiant effort" to spread Jewish culture among the young through the medium of Yiddish books, "the young people are assimilated or assimilating," with few knowing or caring about Yiddish, Slomovitz reported. Apropos Jewish religious life in Poland, he said that its dwindling was due to voluntary abandonment.

Two Members Of Racist Group Fined $100 Each

BALTIMORE, Md. — Two members of a racist group, the Fighting Nationalists, were convicted and fined $100 each for disorderly conduct here, after testimony was heard in court that they distributed American Nazi Party literature in two drive-in restaurants near Baltimore.

Richard B. Norton, 27, and John Wolfgang Schrodt, 24, had attempted to post stickers in the two restaurants, antagonizing crowds of teenagers. The latter began throwing paper cups and cartons at Norton and Schrodt, before the men were led away by police.

DEDICATE ORON KODESH

When the Oron Kodesh, the Ark which houses the scrolls of the Torah, was dedicated at Temple Beth Shalom earlier this month, a resolve made 16 years before had been brought to completion.

At that time, the sisterhood of Ahavath Shalom was active and a group of women organized in 1946 for the purpose of erecting a new Ark when a new synagogue would have been built.

The president of the Oron Kodesh Circle was Mrs. Diana Silk, whose husband, the late Rabbi Morris Silk was the one who had urged his congregation to build a new synagogue.

Mrs. Bessie Strauss was secretary and Mrs. Rose Adler was treasurer of the Circle, the goal of which was to collect $10,000, meaning that each member would have to contribute at least $100.

It is only now in 1962 that the Oron Kodesh was finally dedicated at Temple Beth Shalom, the old Ahavath Shalom, synagogue.

Rabbi Rubel gave the blessing and the cantor chanted a memorial service for the departed.

Of the original women who had started the Circle, those who were present included Mrs. Silk, chairman; Mrs. Strauss, secretary; Mrs. Daniel Chorney, Mrs. Charles Lappin, Mrs. Louis Fishbein, Mrs. Helen Fishbein, Mrs. Myer Smith, Mrs. Hinda Weiner, Mrs. Israel Chernick, Mrs. M. Hyman, Sarah Bader, Eva Bader, Mrs. Betty Wattman Shanbrun, Mrs. Bessie Ostrow and Mrs. Mildred Weiner.

Inaugurate Ben-Zvi As Israel President

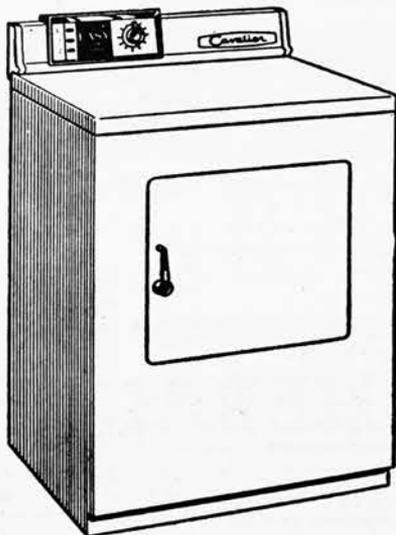

JERUSALEM — With pomp and impressive ceremony, Israel inaugurated Izhak Ben-Zvi as president recently. Mr. Ben Zvi was elected by the Knesset Israel's Parliament, to serve a third, five-year term. Although members of opposition parties had cast blank ballots — as a protest against the principle of permitting any incumbent to serve three terms in the Presidency — the 78-year-old veteran Zionist and former pioneer in the building of the State had been elected without opposition or contest.

Recalling the ancient glory of Israel, when its kings were inducted into office with the sound of shofaroth, heralds preceded Mr. Ben-Zvi's ride to the Parliament building, blowing the ram's horns, as thousands of Israelis lined the streets, cheering the President. Mrs. Ben-Zvi accompanied her husband. Other thousands filled Parliament Square, and the Knesset chamber was filled to capacity with prominent visitors, including the entire diplomatic corps.

$10,000, even though $2,500 multiplied by five exemptions comes to $12,500.

Because of the new law, your ceiling is now five times $5,000, but no more than $20,000. You can, therefore, deduct the entire $15,000 as your medical expense in 1962 and, thereby, slash your taxes.

If you have been close to the old dollar limits on medical deductions and worrying about losing deductions for additional medical expenses you must meet this year, you can now readjust your planning and make your payments within the doubled ceilings.

The ceilings on deductions by disabled persons 65 or over also have been lifted. The previous ceiling for medical deductions by the disabled person 65 or over was $15,000, and for both a taxpayer and his spouse disabled and 65 or over, the ceiling was $30,000. The new limits are $20,000 and $40,000.

The 3 per cent "floor" on medical expenses remains. To summarize, if you are under 65, you can deduct medical expenses above 3 per cent of your total adjusted gross income. You can include in your medical expenses, the cost of drugs and medicines only to the extent that they exceed 1 per cent of your adjusted gross income.

This means that if your medical expenses don't go over 3 per cent of your adjusted gross income in either 1962 or 1963, you won't be entitled to any medical expense deduction in either year. Your year-end tax strategy clearly calls for an attempt to shift your expected medical expenses so that they run over the 3 per cent limit in at least one of the two years.

Your tax target should be to try to move into the closing weeks of 1962 some of the medical or dental treatments you originally planned to have done in 1963 and to pay for these before Dec. 31. By paying for $150 more of the dental work this year which you had scheduled for 1963, you will create for yourself a $130 medical expense deduction for 1962. Your actual expenses over the two years will be precisely the same either way.

Of course, if you have been unusually lucky this year and your medical expenses are far lower than they normally run, the proper strategy for you is to delay until January 1963 any dental or medical expenses that you can. This will permit you to raise next year's total and quite possibly give you a deduction if, in 1963, your luck isn't so hot and your payments run over the 3 per cent limit.

If you plan a medically necessary trip before Dec. 31, or already have made this sort of trip in 1962, a Supreme Court decision on your living expenses at your destination is of direct importance to you.

While your travel costs to and from your destination may qualify as a medical expense deduction if your trip is shown to be medically necessary, your meals and lodging while there, do not qualify. The Supreme Court itself has now ruled this; so don't try to deduct your meals and lodging on these stays as medical expenses.

Auto Parts Firm Agrees To Stop Sending Letters

PHILADELPHIA — A Philadelphia auto parts firm agreed recently to stop a practice of sending sales letters to Arab Middle East countries, containing announcements that the firm did not engage Jews.

The Parts Outlet Co. agreed to halt the practice, designed to help solicitation of export orders from Arab League countries, after the Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations told the firm that the letters were a violation of the Fair Employment Practices Law. The Philadelphia FEP law bans announcements of discriminatory hiring practices.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Commission by a New York firm which had received one of the letters. Executives said they did not know the practice was illegal.
