Two Younger, More Liberal Men Named Chief Rabbis In Israel

TEL AVIV — The chief rabbis of Israel's two religious communities were voted out of office this week and were replaced by younger men with records of greater leniency in the interpretation of Torah law. Hard-liners seeking re-election to the Supreme Rabbinical Council also were defeated.

Shlomo Goren, aged 55, who was formerly the chief military rabbi, was chosen by a 150-member electoral college as Chief Rabbi of the Ashkenazic, or Western, community, replacing the incumbent, 86-year-old Rabbi Isser Y. Unterman. Rabbi Goren, who received 89 votes to Rabbi Unterman's 57, had received stronger support from Premier Golda Meir.

Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, 51, defeated the incumbent Yitzhak Nissim, 76, for the post of Chief Rabbi of the Sephardic, or Oriental, Jewish community by 81 votes to 68.

Both of the new Orthodox chief rabbis are currently serving as chief rabbis of Tel Aviv. Their election was seen as a victory for more liberal religious elements against the conservative elements that have been dominant.

Precedent Broken

This was the first time that incumbent chief rabbis had failed to win re-election, all previous occupants of the posts having died in office. The term of office is five years.

The election of the two new chief rabbis and 10 members of the Supreme Rabbinical Council, who will constitute the new chief rabbinate, took place in Jerusalem. It had been delayed three years because of political complications.

The electoral college consisted of 80 rabbis and 70 laymen. Ten of the rabbinical electors were appointed by the Government and the others were chosen by their peers. The laymen were representatives of municipalities and of local and religious councils. Most of them belonged to the Labor and the National Religious parties, which make up the majority of Mrs. Meir's governing coalition.

Many political leaders have held that an overly conservative chief rabbinate has irritated secular Jews, who have chafed over religious coercion, particularly in questions concerning marriage and divorce. The main political parties consequently threw their weight behind Rabbi Goren, who as senior chaplain for 23 years resolved a series of complex problems in what was considered a liberal manner.

3 Conservatives Defeated

The successful candidates for the Supreme Rabbinical Council were on slates supported by Rabbi Goren and Rabbi Nissim. The unsuccessful candidates included three conservative members of the outgoing council who were widely held responsible for its image of rigidity.

The chief rabbis preside over the Supreme Rabbinical Council and the Supreme Rabbinical Court, which interpret religious law. In questions of marriage and divorce, the two rabbis exercise exclusive authority, granted by parliament.

Both Rabbi Goren and Rabbi Yosef are, like their predecessors, strictly Orthodox and believe that rabbinical law cannot be amended or modernized. They are regarded as liberal, however, in that their vast knowledge of the Torah enables them to find grounds in rabbinical sources for lenient interpretations.

Rabbi Yosef, who entered the race for Sephardic Chief Rabbi only last week, was born in Iraq. He served three years as Deputy Chief Rabbi in Egypt before coming to Israel. He was a rabbinical court judge and later a member of the Supreme Rabbinical Court before his election to his Tel Aviv post.

Jewish Groups Adopt Security Measures

NEW YORK — Jewish organizations in the city have adopted new security techniques as a result of the recent terrorist tactic of mailing explosives to Israeli diplomats and supporters of Israel.

The security measures were discussed at a secret meeting two weeks ago between representatives of the major organizations and city and Federal law enforcement officials.

Last week, large mail sacks were stacked against tables, and a half-dozen clerks sorted letters in the midtown mailroom of a major Jewish organization that coordinates the use of funds raised for Israel.

The operation appeared to be calm and routine, as it did in the mailrooms of smaller Jewish philanthropic and service organizations here.

A mailed bomb killed an Israeli Embassy official last month in London. Recently, two New York women long prominent in American Zionist affairs received letters with bombs that had been mailed from Malaysia, assertedly by the Black September Arab terrorist organization. The letters failed to explode.

85 Inspectors Assigned

Recently the United States Postal Service announced here that it had assigned 85 inspectors to check all suspicious letters, especially foreign mail, that were addressed to Israeli or Jewish organizations or personages.

"We're not going to be hysterical or stampeded from carrying on all our normal activities," said Isidore Hamlin, executive director of the World Zionist Organization's New York headquarters.

Although most Jewish groups were reluctant to discuss the Friday meeting, Mr. Hamlin acknowledged it was held.

"What we are doing is pooling

Bar-Lev Stresses Return On Capital

NEW YORK — The Israeli military man who gave his name to the Bar-Lev line — the defensive system of fortifications on the eastern bank of the Suez Canal — was in New York this week to talk about the economic development of his country. In his speech to the American-Israeli Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Gen. Haim Bar-Lev — who is the new Israeli Minister of Commerce and Industry — stressed the return on capital available to investors in businesses in Israel.

"During the next five years we expect that $1.5-billion will be invested in our industry," said General Bar-Lev, a 47-year-old career officer who retired early this year as Chief of Staff. The average annual return on capital has been 14.2 per cent, he noted, adding that his trip to the United States was part of an over-all effort by his Government to "mobilize foreign investment."

our knowledge and the advice and cooperation we have been getting from Federal and city authorities," he said.

All the organizations have instructed their mail clerks to put aside letters or packages that have foreign postmarks and that do not have the name of the sender. Addresses of foreign mail that carries a sender's name are contacted to see if the sender is known. If a letter is bulky, it, too, is set aside.

Jordanian Slain In Rome Believed Member Of Fatah

ROME — A Libyan Embassy employe, a Jordanian who is believed to have been a member of Al Fatah, the Palestinian guerrilla organization, was shot dead Monday night outside his suburban apartment.

The 38-year-old victim, Abdel Weil Zuaier of Nablus, Jordan, was described by Fatah's press agency in Beirut as its representative for Italy. It said he was a martyr and hero of the Palestinian cause, "assassinated" by Israeli secret-service operatives.

A Jordanian Embassy official said Mr. Zuaier was a nephew of Akram Zuaier, Jordan's Ambassador in Beirut but declined to confirm a report that he was also a second cousin of Yasir Arafat, leader of Fatah.

The police said the murder had been carefully planned. Neighbors told the police they saw two men fire and then escape in a waiting car.

The car was found a few blocks from the scene. The police said it was rented Sunday by a man who showed a Canadian driver's license on which he was named as Anthony Hutton, 47, of Toronto.

Premier Announces Dismissal Of Israeli Security Officials

JERUSALEM — Premier Golda Meir announced this week that three senior officials of the security service had been dismissed because of the failure to provide adequate protection for the Israeli Olympic team in Munich.

It was the first time that the Israeli Government had formally acknowledged that its own precautions had been insufficient September 5, when 11 members of the team died as a result of a raid by Arab terrorists.

Speaking at the opening of the fall session of the parliament, Mrs. Meir also criticized as a "grave error" the West German Government's decision not to provide armed guards inside the Olympic Village.

She said that Bonn's effort to minimize security at the games to stress the Olympic spirit had represented "a basic misconception" about the dangers in such international gatherings.

Mrs. Meir said it "stood to reason" that the Israelis would offer a tempting target to Arab guerrilla organizations, particularly in West Germany, where she said they were well-entrenched.

One of the unanswered questions, Mrs. Meir said, was what difference it might have made if Israel had pressed the West German Government for permission to provide her own armed security for the delegation.

"I am convinced," she said, "that more comprehensive and intensive security measures, in accord with the German authorities, would have hamstrung the terrorists and lessened their chances of success."

The three dismissed men were identified only as two senior officials of the General Security Service, which looks after the safety of Israelis abroad, and a third official in a "responsible position with the General Security Service."

Informed sources said later that the three men had been the principal "operational figures" who had been responsible for arrangements with the German authorities for protection of the Israeli delegation. Their names were not released.

Mrs. Meir delivered her report in a solemn, sober tone. Dressed in a dark blue dress, she read her speech to a nearly full parliament, which resumed sessions this week after its annual summer recess.

During much of Mrs. Meir's speech, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan sat leaning back in his seat, his hands behind his head, staring at the ceiling. At one point, as Mrs. Meir described the meager security precautions at Munich, he shook his head in evident disgust.

Administration Criticized

The Premier's 40-minute speech opened a four-hour debate on the question of Arab terrorism in which the opposition took her administration to task for failure to act decisively against the Arab commandos.

Haim Landau, speaking for the Opposition Gahal bloc, charged that the Government had given the "green light" to the Arab terrorists by announcing after the Munich incident that it would not engage in counterterrorism in Europe.

Mr. Landau maintained that the Israeli security services were entirely capable of meeting the Arab commandos on their own ground. "All they need is the order," Mr. Landau said. "But they will never get it from the present leadership."

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Meir reiterated that the Government was determined to track down Arab terrorists "wherever we can reach them." By its very nature, she said, "a war against terrorism can not be limited to defensive means."

COPENHAGEN — Police at Copenhagen Airport will carry arms for the first time, according to reports published here.

SEARCH HOMES
JERUSALEM — Police carried out a widespread search of the homes of Jewish Defense League members here in their continuing investigation of the JDL's attempts to smuggle arms out of the country for a private war against Arab terrorists abroad. But apparently because of a tip-off, police found many of the JDL flats locked and their occupants gone. The JDL accused the police of planting an informer in its ranks.

BEN POULTEN
 Funeral services for Ben Poulten, assistant director of the Rhode Island Legislative Press Bureau and for a generation the state house reporter for the state's smaller daily papers and many of its weeklies, who died October 12, were held Sunday at Temple Beth Israel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Poulten, who would have been 66 on October 22, had worked for the state since shortly after suffering a heart attack in June, 1968. He was stricken after having covered one of the longest General Assembly sessions in history.

His work for multiple papers often kept him working 18 hours a day. Often he would be putting newsletters on buses to Woonsocket, Westerly or Newport after midnight.

Mr. Poulten was on the staff of the Pawtucket Times from 1931 until his illness in 1968. He served as well as state house correspondent for the Woonsocket Call, the Newport Daily News, the Westerly Sun and the Pawtucket Valley Times. He also wrote for several weekly papers and for Commerce Clearing House Reports, a national statistical agency recording legislative action.

A tireless legislative worker and a confidante of its leaders and rank-and-file members, for more than three decades, Mr. Poulten would brush off repeated urgings of his fellow newsmen to slow down. The state house and its workings were his life and consuming interest and he could recall almost unerringly the effect of virtually any pending piece of legislation. His cooperation with other newsmen and with public officials and state workers made him a highly respected member of his craft.

Mr. Poulten was also a cofounder and guiding force behind the Model General Assembly. He annually compiled for the educators who ran the high school legislature a list of interesting and controversial bills worthy of discussion by the young people. He also had been a consultant to the Rhode Island Social Studies Association.

Because of his diverse responsibilities, and especially through his connection with Commerce Clearing House, he was able on occasion to catch flaws in laws already passed by the General Assembly.

Mr. Poulten was honored on repeated occasions for the way he practiced his profession. In 1957, the General Assembly passed unanimously a resolution commending him for his 25 years on the job. In 1962, he was presented the University of Rhode Island's medal for service to the state and journalistic achievements. He won the New England Associated Press Managing Editors Association first prize in 1962 for the best big city newspaper story, and in 1963 won honorable mention for a discussion of absentee balloting, conducted by the New England Association Press News Executives Association.

Mr. Poulten was a member of Temple Beth Israel and a member of its board of directors. He also served on the board of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

For many years he had been active in the American Newspaper Guild, for four years vice president and later president of the Guild local, and later a vice president of the New England Council of the union. His other activities included membership in the Touro Fraternal Association and the Roger Williams Lodge, B'nai B'rith.

Mr. Poulten was a native of Providence, son of Molly (Mudrick) Cohen and the late Joseph Cohen. He had adopted the name Poulten, a family name.

He attended Classical High School, where he was a catcher on the nasenall team, and Brown University from which he was graduated in 1929. After breaking in on New York and Massachusetts newspapers, he joined the Pawtucket Times staff on April 4, 1931. On that newspaper he had been a general assignment reporter, city hall and state Senate reporter, state editor, news editor and assistant managing editor. He was then moved up as head of the state house bureau, a post he frequently handled with no assistance at all.

He was the husband of the former Pauline C. Chorney. They lived at 249 Warrington Street.

Besides his wife and his mother, Mr. Poulten is survived by three sons, Arthur Poulten of Cranston, Stephen Poulten of Narragansett, and Howard Poulten of Providence; a sister, Mrs. Max Tippe of Providence, and one grandson.

Bearers were Sanford Chorney, Max Tippe, Irving Avrutsky and Edward Raiff. Mr. Poulten's brothers-in-law, and Harris Chorney, Alan Chorney, Kenneth Levin, Donald Avrut and Robert Moskol, nephews.

HYMAN CUTLER
 Funeral services for Hyman Cutler, 62, of 21 Chace Drive, who died October 14 after an illness of one year, were held Sunday at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Sharon Memorial Park, Sharon, Massachusetts.

The husband of Betty (Lampert) Cutler, he was born in Central Falls, a son of the Harry and Ethel Cutler. He was a Providence resident for 15 years and had lived in Boston, Massachusetts prior to that.

Mr. Cutler was the founder of the Darlington Auto Parts, 651 Cottage Street, Pawtucket, and operated the firm for 15 years until his retirement eight months ago.

He was a member of Temple Israel, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, What Cheer Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the El Karun Temple, DOKK.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Warren Cutler of Cranston, and Jeffrey Cutler of Providence; a daughter, Mrs. Sharen Sherman of Framingham, Massachusetts, and five grandchildren.

Says Erroneous Translation Of Torah Causes Misunderstanding Of Saying

The oft quoted phrase, "An eye for an eye," seems to indicate acceptance on the part of the ancient Hebrews of a code of vengeance for misdeeds, a code which would be brutal and barbaric.

However, scholars who have studied the Talmud realize that the erroneous translation of one word in the phrase has resulted in a misconception of the entire meaning and purpose of the moral law indicated.

The phrase should read, "An eye INSTEAD of an eye," not "An eye FOR an eye."

Ascribed to Moses, the Torah, which is made up of the first five books of the Old Testament, is supposed to have been written about 3275 years ago, at a time when civilization was still at a very low stage. The human race was mostly barbaric, and, of course, the people who lived at that time, including the Jews, were semi-civilized.

There are surely many passages written in the Old Testament that are not in harmony with present times. They may even be harsh. Nevertheless, there are many that are wonderful. For instance: "Thou shalt not take vengeance, nor have any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," appears in Leviticus (19-18) which was written about 1400 years before a similar thought was expressed in the New Testament.

Hillel, who lived one hundred years before the new era, coined the phrase, (Talmud Sabbath, page 61), "Do not do to others what you would not want them to do to you. That is the entire Torah, and the rest is commentary. Go and study."

Evidently the Torah was compiled by more than one person in different periods of ancient times, for in Leviticus (24-21) it is worded "An eye INSTEAD of an eye, a tooth INSTEAD of a tooth." If one injures another human being, one must give him full value for loss. One cannot give in compensation a dead worthless eye. The words cannot mean the actual eye, but rather the value of the eye.

The Bible forbids vengeance. Wouldn't it be absurd, then, for us to assume that it should order bestial brutality as compensation? We do not have the original ancient writings of any Hebrew book. They were destroyed many times through the ages, and even those learned scholars of ancient times who did reconstruct that which had been destroyed could not have remembered every original expression exactly. For this reason, and because of the difficulty of finding a word that has the exact meaning of the translated word, discrepancies are apt to occur.

It is therefore important that no one misinterprets the teachings and moral concepts of the ancient Jews. Nowhere in history has there been an ethnic or religious group that has had a higher regard for human life and human rights than the Hebrews.

We should be proud that we are Americans and Jewish. We are heirs to the best democracy and finest ethics. Throughout the centuries, despite oppression and even annihilation in some countries, the Jews have continued to progress intellectually and morally, and their contributions to science and human betterment have been phenomenal.

I therefore think it is incumbent on those of us who use the expression, "An eye for an eye," as an excuse to condone vengeance, even though it be legal, to recognize that this interpretation is contrary to the original concept.

In the Talmud, which consists of Jewish Law and commentary, we find in Bode Kame, pages 166 and 167, writings that deal at length with this subject. For scholars who would like to pursue the investigation further, there is in Exodus (21-24) the Hebrew word Takhas which must definitely be translated as instead, not for. Contrary to the supposedly superior Roman laws that ordered thieves crucified, Jewish law stated that when one was in debt to another and could not repay, he was morally obliged to settle his debt as soon as he possibly could do so.

Jewish laws, ethics and morals have, through the centuries, been humane, not vengeful. Let no one interpret them otherwise.

The Annual Physical Exam

Among people I know, at least a half-dozen have taken off an hour to a half-day in the past few weeks to go through their annual physical exams.

Perhaps this sampling is exceptional: many of us live in both country and city, and at this season of the year we are firmly back in town where our internists are; we are all devoted believers in preventive medicine and an annual physical surely goes under the heading of preventive medicine; increasing numbers of enlightened corporations offer annual exams to their employees (in fact, require them); in the group we're in, we are all old enough to think about our health, earn enough to afford the exam.

Still, the concept of an annual physical exam has its detractors as well as its champions within the medical profession.

The cost is far too high for the percentage of problems that are discovered, many respected physicians insist. The very emphasis on the annual visit tends to lessen the individual's concern between exams — and as a result, many ignore signals of danger which occur only days or weeks later. Group exams are frequently condemned as superficial, scarcely deserving even to be called physical check-ups.

Yet, "one out of every seven premature deaths in the U.S. could be eliminated through preventive medicine and one out of every three cancer victims died needlessly for lack of early detection," says the president and medical director of New York's Strang Clinic-Preventive Medicine Institute.

"It costs nine times more to cure a disease than to prevent it in the first place."

It costs about $180 to detect one case of glaucoma at one Health Maintenance Organization, for instance. High? Maybe not, when you consider that next to cataract, glaucoma is the most common cause of adult blindness. It's estimated that 1,200,000 Americans have undetected glaucoma and that the disease is responsible for some 3,500 cases of blindness each year.

It costs about $2,000 to detect one case of breast cancer. (These figures are for the most part, except for a few schools, from the classrooms. Our children will have to wait until they reach the student age to discover Yiddish.

And yet I remember a time when Yiddish was in its heyday, here in America. I was a teacher in the Workmen's Circle school system for night twenty-five years.

I remember the day when one could go from Boston to New York and stop in any town and find a Yiddish school there. If they were not Workmen's Circle schools, they were schools sponsored by the Poale Zion-Farband or by the Sholem Aleichem group. Boston was, of course, the center of the school district. There was an Arbeiter Ring school in Lynn, Peabody, Worcester, Springfield, Pittsfield, Brockton, New Bedford and Fall River. Providence had two schools and Pawtucket only a Sunday school. In Connecticut there were schools in New Lon-

Dr. Gersefelt, Danes Honored For Role In Underground

NEW YORK — "They were Danes, our friends; it didn't matter if they were Jewish, and it doesn't now," remarked Dr. Joergen John Gersefelt.

The remark reflected the intense feeling of his fellow 198 Danish men and women, who had played roles in Denmark's underground resistance movement in October, 1943, in rescuing 8,000 Danish Jews.

The whole country acted as an underground movement to ferry the 8,000 to Sweden as word reached the underground that the Nazis were about to round up the Jews for imprisonment in the death camps.

Dr. Gersefelt and his fellow Danes were honored at City Hall last week. Mayor Lindsay had their 20s and 30s who live in the Rhode Island area. Non-members may attend all functions.

A paid-up Hanukah party on December 2 is their next function.

HOMECOMING EVENTS

This year's Chowder Party at Providence Country Day School, an annual Homecoming event for several decades, will be held at noon on Saturday, October 21. The school soccer team will meet Thompson Academy that morning at 10:30, and the football team will play Moses Brown after the chowder lunch at 2 p.m.

Parents of the students will meet the faculty and attend mini-classes on Tuesday, October 24, and Thursday, October 26, it has been announced by Martin A. Zawatsky, president of the Parents' Association.

The Chowder Day festivities, sponsored jointly by the Parents' and Alumni association, will end with an informal reception for all alumni, parents and friends at 5 p.m. at the Agawam Hunt Club. Cochairmen of the events are Dr. Joseph J. Box and Frederick A. Reardon, Jr.

TO HOLD MEETING

Mrs. L. Povar will show slides and speak of her travels in Europe at the meeting of The Mothers' Association of Temple Beth David-Anshei Kovno on Tuesday, October 24, at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Charles Ross is program chairman.

proclaimed "Danish Resistance Day."

Dore Schary, honorary chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, which had arranged the reception, in citing the efforts of the underground in saving the Jews from the Nazi holocaust, remarked: "We repay the debt in prayer, thanks and affection."

A fellow Dane, looking at Dr. Gersefelt, remarked: "He saved so many Jewish children. He injected a serum that kept them unconscious to remain quiet while they were smuggled aboard a boat which took them to the Swedish coast."

The group was in the United States until yesterday for a series of events.

NEW YORK: Security chieftains hunting European-based Arab terrorists have ordered detailed searches of all mail addressed to Queen Elizabeth . . . Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban saw Jesus Christ Superstar recently . . . Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hay (the former Sharman Douglas) entertained the Duke and Duchess of Kent at the Rockefeller Center Luncheon Club last week.

At the Ginger Man party for the New York Film Festival directors last week, Senator and Mrs. Jacob Javits were talking about movies and discussed The Valachi Papers, opening next month. The Senator was on the Senate Investigations subcommittee which interrogated Joe Valachi in October, 1963, and he recalled the hearings: "They took so much time," he said, "and I had work pressing from other committees. But they did formalize much of the underworld knowledge we had gathered over the years."

Javits was asked if he had seen Young Winston . . . "Oh, yes," he replied, "I saw him the other day in the Senate," referring not to the movie but to Sir Winston Churchill's grandson.

Robert Emmett Kennedy Schlesinger, son of Alexandra and Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., was christened last week at New York's Holy Trinity Church, followed by a celebration at the home of movie producer Sam Spiegel . . . Bill Weeden, composer of Hurry, Harry, used to write the news blurbs flashing across the sides of the Allied Chemical Building in Times Square . . . London publisher Peter Owen acquired the rights to Salvador Dali's novel Hidden Faces. The artists made special drawings for the book.

Director Chester Erskine and his wife dined at the Algonquin the other nights, after a worldwide tour scouting film locations. Erskine said that during his flight to New York, he asked the steward to reserve a car to meet him at the airport. He wrote "car" on a form, and handed it to the steward, and was assured he would be met. When he arrived, there was no car. An airline official finally told him: "We have it, Mr. Erskine, we have your CANE."

They had misread "car" on the form, and had ordered him a walking-cane instead.

Erskine recalled living in California, near the Beverly Hills Hotel. "We had a pool," he said, "and one day after swimming in the ocean I decided I needed lessons in how to swim in a pool because fresh water had less buoyancy than the ocean. I asked the hotel to send someone over to teach me. The pool boy was about 17, and I was amazed at his speed in the water. He instructed me and advised about diving in the shallow end. 'Thanks,' I said to the pool boy — Mark Spitz."

Joey Adams dedicates his new Doubleday book, Speaker's Bible of Humor, to "Maria Ouspenskaya, Sessue Hayakawa, Akim Tamiroff and Arthur Murray — without whom this book was written. Also, mainly for the fact that nobody else ever dedicated a book to them before" . . . At the musical show and exhibition put on by the telephone company in Central Park recently, highlighting the recent improvements in phone service, several of the mechanical exhibits were out of order.

Henry Dreyfuss, the industrial designer who committed suicide with his wife recently, was once asked by three publishing houses to undertake the physical designing of books. Dreyfuss studied the matter and concluded there was no other way of reading a book. "The present book form," he reported, "will be with us until we are willing to put our literature on microfilm and look at it through a small, illuminated glass."

Ron Eliron, now appearing at El Avram, speaks five languages and sings in eight. His previous engagement was at the Cellar Door, Washington, D.C. One night, while he was singing in Spanish, a large group of people arose and left. Eliron was horrified: "I know I am not the best performer in the world," he said, "but I didn't think I was that bad." Fearing he had offended the patrons, he asked the manager to investigate.

Eliron was reassured. "They were Jordanians," explained the manager, "and they had no idea when they came in that you were an Israeli."

Producer Joseph E. Levine, who has taken out cast insurance for the dolphins in his new movie, Day of the Dolphins, had to pay higher premiums on each of the highly trained mammals than for any of the stars of the film

Guerrilla Naval Base

One of the Lebanese targets, Ras Naba Muhiliv, was described as a guerrilla naval base consisting of a primitive jetty from which the guerrillas launched armed gunboats and terrorist raids against the Israeli coastline. A guerrilla gunboat reported sunk by the Israelis on the night of September 7 was said by the military spokesman to have been outfitted at this base.

The air strikes were the first on targets in the Arab countries reported since September 16, when Israeli jet fighter-bombers hit what were said to be guerrilla encampments in southern Lebanon. Eight days earlier, scores of planes participated in a series of heavy raids deep into Syria and Lebanon in reprisal for the killing of 11 members of Israeli's Olympic team in Munich, West Germany.

Every North-South pair bid game in today's hand but not one was able to make it, the hand just couldn't be made. However, down one was an excellent score for all but two of the thirteen Declarers did go down two tricks. Had they given the problem a bit more thought they should have solved it well enough to garner that extra trick. It really is not so difficult to see even if the opponents never make a bid. As it was, their bidding made it even easier for Declarer to do right.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roberts were North and South, East-West were vulnerable, West Dealer with this bidding:

W N E S

West had a perfect "Weak" Two Bid, a good six card suit but not quite enough to open one. North and East had nothing to say but South had a fine hand. With eight sure tricks in his own hand and a solid suit of his own each South that I watched simply took the bull by the horns and went right to game. They felt they could never find whether North had enough for the game anyhow and furthermore, North didn't need that much for the game to be made.

The play was just about the same at each of the tables where Declarer went down two. West led three rounds of Hearts after East high-owed, Declarer trying to ruff the third and East over-ruffing Dummy. When West opened the bidding as he had, and most of them did, this should have alerted South to this probability but actually should not have made the Declarer change his game plan. Ruffing that third Heart in Dummy was never going to be the best play under any circumstances.

Examine the North and South hands together. Along with the Heart losers there is also a sure Club loser and one in Diamonds. When East over-ruffs that third Heart these same two losers have to be lost just the same for down two. So what can be done to save that trick? This is what Mr. Roberts did. Instead of ruffing that third Heart he discarded a Diamond from Dummy. True, he lost that trick but would have anyhow when it would be over-ruffed but now he was able to ruff his own third Diamond safely. That is the trick he saved compared to those who went down two. Even without the warning that Weak Two bid had sent out, that is the better way to play the hand. True, East might have discarded a Diamond and now still over-ruff that suit but with West known to have six Hearts and East two the probability of that happening is quite slim. Regardless, that is the best possibility to hold the losses to four tricks. Accomplishing that would be tied for top.

Actually what Declarer is doing by playing the hand in this manner is transferring the ruff from one suit to another, in this case from the one that would probably be over-ruffed anyhow to one that would be much less likely to be.

Moral: Don't make a hopeless play especially when there is a better one in the offing. Before doing something you feel won't help think if there might not be something else to do. As usual, THINK.

Iraq Accuses U.S. Of Using Veto For Own Political Purposes

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Iraq has accused the United States of using its veto power in the Security Council to serve its own internal political purposes.

In a speech before the General Assembly, Iraq's Foreign Minister, Mortada said Abdul-Baqi, asked if anyone doubted "the ulterior motives" that led the United States to expose "international peace and security to certain danger in the interests of its own political expediencies."

Last month the United States vetoed a Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire with a condemnation of the killing of 11 Israelis in an attack by Arab terrorists at the Munich Olympic Games, which had touched off Israeli air strikes.

The Iraqi Foreign Minister also said that the United States was pushing for action on international terrorism in the General Assembly also "for internal political purposes."

Value of U.N. Questioned

While Arab delegates have been saying privately for some time that President Nixon in an election year was trying to woo the Jewish vote through his actions at the United Nations, the Iraqi speech was the first time that the charge was made in public debate.

"It is no secret that the people of Iraq, like many other peoples throughout the world, have come to question the value of this international organization in maintaining peace and justice, in view of the behavior of some of the great powers among its members," Mr. Abdul-Baqi said.

"What we did not expect, even from the United States with its well known support and loyalty to Israel, was a resort to the use of the veto to defeat a resolution which only sought to restore a cease-fire violated by Israel in its murderous attacks against Lebanon and Syria," the Foreign Minister added. "The Security Council was thus prevented from discharging its most elementary duty in the maintenance of international peace and security."

He then charged that the United States acted out of political expediency.

U.S. Bowling Denounced

Mr. Abdul-Baqi said that the reasons for the people's loss of confidence in the United Nations and its failure to live up to the hopes placed in it were not to be found in its "so-called neglect of the acts of political terrorism, as some have claimed, but rather in the impotence of the United Nations in the face of the international terrorism practiced by one of the major powers."

"We find it totally unacceptable that the United States Government should, under the cloak of humanitarian motivations, call for action against terrorism," the Iraqi Foreign Minister said. "While a deluge of American bombs engulfs the innocent women and children of Vietnam and 'civilized' American generals threaten to bomb that valiant people back to the Stone Age."

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

do with the judgment of the scorer. "If a player reaches the bases after a muffed foul-fly ball; if there is interference or obstruction; because of an error (judgment enters); or a passed-ball; and so on and on. Walter Sundlun, one of our outstanding attorneys who has such a keen, analytical mind, was discussing the "Earned Run Scoring Rule" the other day. No doubt, he'll come up with a clear interpretation. And while awaiting his expert comment, a suggestion for the writers of books on baseball might be the including of the rules for playing, officiating and scoring the game. If you don't have a rule book handy, try and find one!

CINCINNATI WAS FIRST: The first regular professional baseball team in the country represented Cincinnati in 1869. It had been organized in 1868 at a meeting held on September 9 of that year in the law offices of Tilden, Sherman and Moulton at 17½ W. Third Street, Cincinnati, when it was decided to eliminate the amateur element. And, as they say, "Baby, you've come a long, long way," evidenced by the professional salaries paid the players. Here's the list: Harry Wright, captain and centerfield, $1200; George Wright, shortstop, $1400; Asa Brainard, pitcher, $1100; Fred Waterman, third base, $1000; Charles Sweasy, second base, $800; Charles Gould, first base, $800; Douglas Allison, catcher, $800; Andrew Leonard, leftfield, $800; Calvin McVey, rightfield, $800; Richard Hurley, substitute, $600. And so, as the man on TV says, "The Whole Thing" adds up to only $9300! It's lower than the minimum today.

WHICH REMINDS ME OF: The famed — and almost forgotten — $100,000 infield of the Connie Mack Athletics of the early 19-hundred 'teens, were all stars, any one of whom could have demanded that sum for individual effort today. Or, how would any manager like to have an infield consisting of Stuffie McInnis, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and Frank "Home Run" Baker for a hundred grand?

BACK TO CINCI: In 1935, club owners frowned at an innovation brought to Cincinnati by the colorful Larry MacPhail, who introduced night baseball under lights. They don't frown now because the floodlights have proven the salvation of the game. Despite the more convenient nighttime games, baseball has had its ups and downs. Frinstance, in 1956, the American League dropped a million in attendance, which was the bad news — but — in the same year, the National League gained a million in attendance which was the good news.

ONE MORE LITTLE ITEM: When you start reading the fabulous figures from the World Series box offices, think back to the very first time admissions were charged to see a baseball game. It was on July 20, 1858, at the Fashion Race Course, Long Island and the fee was 50 cents.

CONFOOSING, TO SAY THE LEAST: Referring to the "Earned Run Scoring Rule." It has a lot to

THAT AND THAT: Movie Mirror magazine for November includes a picture of Mike Sands, WICE, receiving a "Personality Award" from Fred Dugdale, and Independent News District Manager and Frank Koslov, promotion manager for the Mag... A story in SPORT mag. relates that the pitching coaches — 23 of them — consider Mickey Lolich of the Tigers as the outstanding hurler in baseball today. Close behind Lolich in the balloting were three National Leaguers — Tom Seaver, Bob Gibson and Steve Carlton...

Also in SPORT: Mike Curtis, the only regular player to report to training camp on time during the first strike against the National Football League, and Bill Curry, staunch supporter of the strike in 1970 and now Public Relations Director for the NFL Players Association agree on one thing — no athlete should get more than $100,000 for a year's work...

Both good stories... BICYCLE COMPETITION: A story from SPORTS ILLUSTRATED tells of bike riding competition in Alexander Valley, California. The Races? They weren't races at all. More like Time Trials with the peddlers peddling against time. The well-liked Pasquale Lombardi, formerly a motor-pacer in the old banked, wooden track races that thrilled thousands both in Cranston and Providence, is of the opinion that, if brought back, the spectacles would attract thousands again. And Pasquale (Pat) is always right! So, CARRY ON!

Your Money's Worth

figures aren't the actual cost of each test, but rather the overall cost of conducting the specific test divided by the number of cases detected.) Again, the question becomes: what is early detection worth to the individual involved?

You don't pay this much directly for an annual physical, of course. While the cost of a comprehensive physical given by an internist, including lab fees, varies — depending on the physician — you can expect to pay from $40 to $180. And part of the cost may be covered under your health insurance or as a special employee benefit.

One New York medical group annually examines some 25,000 basically well persons from approximately 800 business firms that purchase the service. Here's how three major types of exams look in terms of tests and costs:

Examination Plan A: Given to group employees between the ages of 25-34 and the ages of 36-39; includes complete physical, eye, hearing tests; X-ray of chest, simple lab studies, written report of findings; time required about one hour; fee $40.

Examination Plan B: Given to group employees at age 35; includes complete physical; eye, hearing tests; X-ray of chest; electrocardiogram; much broader lab studies; PAP cancer test for women; written report; consultation with physician 10 days later; time required about two hours; fee $95.

Examination Plan C: Given to employees aged 40-65; much broader tests in every area, including instrumental exams of various parts of the body, blood chemistry and lipid profiles; written report; consultation with physician 10 days after exam; time required about 2½ hours; fee $165.

You will become much more familiar with all these tests, no matter whether you're pro or con — for the Stanford Research Institute predicts that within this decade alone, the number of Americans who undergo health screenings will soar from 1970's level of about 170,000 to 17,400,000.

A TIP: Schedule your exam for your birthday week each year if possible. It's one way to keep from forgetting what could be the most important 90 minutes of the whole year to your bank account — not to mention your life!

Tourists Praise Jordan Hospitality

JERUSALEM — The first foreign tourists to cross from Israel into Jordan and returned have nothing but praise for Jordanian hospitality and planning. The tourists consisted of eight American students, six of them Jews.

The students' trip was organized by the Israel Students' Travel Association with the cooperation of an East Jerusalem travel agent.

"Jordanian soldiers and policemen knew we had come from Israel from the stamps in our passports, but they were courteous and made every effort to be good hosts," the tourists said on their return.

Israeli Tourist Mauled By Lion In New Jersey Jungle Habitat

POMPTON PLAINS, N.J. — It was "five long minutes of plain horror," a Brooklyn cab driver said Tuesday at the bedside of Abraham Levy, the Israeli tourist who was mauled by a lion Monday afternoon at Jungle Habitat in West Milford.

The driver, David Nagar, was describing the sudden sequence of events that turned a pleasant outing for his family and their guest, Mr. Levy, into a nightmare.

Mr. Levy, who is 26 years old, was reported in fair condition today in the intensive care unit of Chilton Memorial Hospital here after four hours of surgery. He is expected to be hospitalized for five to six weeks to recuperate from injuries to his face, neck, right shoulder and right arm, Mr. Nagar said.

Swathed in bandages, Mr. Levy was able to say — in Hebrew, as he speaks no English — that he felt "a little better." Mr. Nagar, also an Israeli, and other family members and friends are keeping a bedside vigil.

Mr. Nagar was driving one of the two cars in the family outing, with Mr. Levy seated at his right and Mr. Nagar's mother in the back seat. In the other car were Mr. Nagar's wife, daughter, sister-in-law, her husband and a friend.

"When you first enter Jungle Habitat it's not dangerous," Mr. Nagar said, speaking through an interpreter because he feels more comfortable in his native language than in English.

"There are ducks and elephants and everybody leaves the windows open," he continued. "We approached the area that is supposed to be dangerous, and we went through a gate, but we didn't feel it was a dangerous place."

Mr. Nagar said he and his passengers did not see the lion approach the car from the right until the animal was at the window.

"I yelled for Abraham to close the window, and he ran it up to about six inches from the top when the lion put his paws in," he said.

The lion began clawing Mr. Levy's face, neck and shoulder. Mr. Nagar drew a knife he had with him and tried to slash at the lion's face.

Dov Wysacki, Mr. Nagar's brother-in-law, driving the car in front, heard the commotion, stopped his car, got out and began throwing rocks at the lion.

Mr. Nagar feels that because there were two lanes of traffic through the wild-animal area, a Jeep bearing an attendant could not get through quickly. When it did arrive, the lion was forced away.

Mr. Nagar said he tried to staunch a heavy flow of blood from Mr. Levy's neck. When an ambulance arrived, Mr. Levy was rushed to Chilton Hospital, where Dr. Arthur David, a plastic surgeon, and Dr. Robert Steinfeld, another surgeon, operated on him. Mr. Levy sustained eight severed nerves in his right cheek, cuts on his right ear and arm, damage to muscles in his right shoulder and severe abrasions.

The mauling was the first reported at the 450-acre animal preserve, which opened in July.

Account Disputed
WEST MILFORD — Kerry Smith, a Jungle Habitat spokesman, said that "Witnesses tell us he (Mr. Levy) was leaning out of the window, beckoning the lion."

The wildlife preserve, including the fenced-off lion area, contains numerous large green signs with clear black lettering warning visitors in both English and Spanish to remain in their cars and keep their windows closed.

In addition, warnings appear in literature given to visitors entering the park, and are repeated verbally by guards in the lion area, as well as the bear and baboon compounds; according to Mr. Smith.

He said that Mr. Levy had been rescued by David Barnes, a 20-year-old game ranger, who forced the lion to release its grip on Mr. Levy's arm by ramming the animal with his jeep.

The lion, who was not injured, was placed in quarantine, at least 10 days, according to Mr. Smith, who said that the cat had received its last rabies shot in June.

NATHAN IN AMSTERDAM
AMSTERDAM — Abbie Nathan, who flew a single-engine plane from Israel to Egypt in 1966 in a one-man attempt to secure peace between the two countries, announced here that he plans to sail his "Peace Ship" from New York to extraterritorial waters between Tel Aviv and Port Said and keep it there "until peace comes to the Middle East." The ship, which Nathan plans to sail before the end of the year, will be equipped to broadcast Israeli and Arab news.

Commerce Secretary Continues Soviet-American Negotiations

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Commerce Peter G. Peterson said last week that he had been told to continue negotiations for a Soviet-American trade agreement without reference to the Senate's warning that it would block passage of such an accord if Moscow did not lift the exit visa tax on Jews and others seeking to emigrate.

In a brief interview following a talk to the newly formed East-West Trade Council, Mr. Peterson indicated that the Administration hoped that Soviet authorities would take note of the Congressional concern and abolish the tax, which varies with the education of the emigrants, before an agreement is sent to Congress, probably next year.

Mr. Peterson, in his remarks to the group, made up of businessmen and others interested in promoting East-West trade, said that he remained optimistic that the comprehensive agreement would be concluded soon, but he listed many points left to settle.

To Include Arbitration
He said that in addition to Lend-Lease debts, credits and tariff arrangements, the accord would include provisions for arbitration of disputes and for business facilities for American businessmen in Moscow and Soviet trade officials in this country.

Explaining that agreement on those latter points was difficult to achieve, Mr. Peterson said that their inclusion had probably added 60 to 90 days to the time needed to conclude the accord. But he said the extra time was worthwhile because it insured that future relations would be less complicated by disputes.

At his news conference last week, President Nixon said of a Soviet trade agreement, "I can't tell you whether there will be one or when."

"I think there will be one," he said, "but my point is that it is tough bargaining up and down the line, and until we get it nailed down we are not sure that we are going to get it."

Kissinger Was Optimistic
Mr. Nixon's caution contrasted with the optimism expressed by Henry A. Kissinger, his national security adviser, when he returned from Moscow last month.

Mr. Kissinger then indicated that major progress had been made on trade questions in Moscow and he left the impression that agreements on trade, Lend-Lease and maritime would be only a matter of weeks.

The mood of Congress on a trade was made clear when 72 Senators introduced an amendment that would bar approval of an agreement so long as the Russians imposed the tax on those seeking to emigrate, mostly Jews. The tax ranges from about $4,000 to $25,000, depending on level of education. The Russians contend the tax is part payment for free education and is designed to prevent a "brain drain."

Ginzburg, Released, To Reopen Case

NEW YORK — Ralph Ginzburg, the magazine publisher, was released last week from the Allenwood prison farm at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, and indicated immediately that he would not accept freedom quietly. Mr. Ginzburg was freed after having served eight months of a three-year sentence as the result of protracted courtroom skirmishing that began in 1963 with his conviction for sending obscene materials through the mail.

He said, on being released from the Federal prison, that he would re-open his case in order to vindicate himself. "The American people will see, once and for all," said the publisher, "whether justice in this country is a beautiful blindfolded woman or a deaf, blind old man."

Damascus Jews Demonstrate

JERUSALEM — The first public demonstration by Damascus Jews against their oppression by Syrian authorities was reported by Israeli Supreme Court Justice Haim Cohen. Cohen, who heads the Public Committee for Jews in Arab Lands, said he learned that a few weeks ago several hundred Jews demonstrated in Damascus. He did not say how Syrian authorities reacted.

Cohen addressed a rally near the Western Wall. Another speaker, Police Minister Shlomo Hillel, said the Israeli government has made every effort to improve the situation of Jews in the Arab countries. He warned the Syrian government to stop persecuting its Jewish citizens.

SENTENCED

TEL AVIV — A 50-year-old Jewish woman tourist from West Germany was sentenced by a district court here to three months imprisonment after being convicted of having mistreated other women in a Nazi labor camp during World War II. Duba Gritzma-cher was identified by two sisters, who had been inmates. The sisters and other former inmates of the camp testified during the trial that Mrs. Gritzma-cher had perpetrated a number of cruelties. Other witnesses, however, testified that she behaved favorably. The court said it took into consideration the positive testimony in imposing the light sentence.

A January wedding is planned at Temple Meir Chayim in McGehee. Rabbi Eugene Lipsey of Manhasset, Long Island, New York, uncle of the bride, will perform the ceremony.

MOVE TO NEW ADDRESS

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Pearlman have moved from Nimitz Drive, Lafayette, Indiana, to Carriage Hill, Huntington, Indiana.

Mr. Pearlman received the degree of design engineer from Purdue University and is now associated with the Orton McCullough Crane Company in Huntington.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pearlman are originally from Chelmsford, Massachusetts. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pearlman, and she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Levin of Chelmsford, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gershman of Pawtucket.

MILLMAN-ZELTZER

Miss Roberta Pearl Zeltzer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Zeltzer of Eames Street, was married on Sunday, August 27, to Michael Jay Millman of 67 Fourth Street, son of Mrs. Doris Millman and the late Mathew Millman. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the 1 p.m. ceremony which was held at Temple Emanu-El. A reception followed at the temple.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white peau de soie fashioned with an empire waist trimmed in lace. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a French grosgrain bow. She carried a bouquet of mini white roses, carnations and baby's breath.

Israeli, Arab Police Leaders Agree On Intensified Efforts

UNITED NATIONS — Israeli and Arab police leaders apparently concurred in an American-sponsored resolution unanimously approved at the Interpol conference in Frankfurt urging the 110 members of the international police organization to intensify their efforts to combat "non-political" terrorism.

According to Martin Pollner, director of law enforcement for the US Treasury Department, the resolution, adopted by a vote of 58-0, had been worked out by Israeli and Arab police officials and was "acceptable to all."

Miss Judith Miller, wearing a blue dotted Swiss gown and carrying blue daisies and carnations, was maid of honor.

Harold Millman served as best man for his brother. Barry Zeltzer and Jerry Zeltzer, brothers of the bride, were ushers.

Following a wedding trip to Maine and Nova Scotia, the couple will reside in Cranston.

BAR MITZVAH

David William Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Price, will become Bar Mitzvah at services at 11:15 a.m. on Saturday, October 21, at Temple Sinai.

ONEG SHABBAT

Following services at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, October 20, at Temple Beth Am, Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Kapp will sponsor an Oneg Shabbat in honor of their son, Ronald Alan, who will become Bar Mitzvah during services on Monday, October 23.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Sholowitz of Providence were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary at a brunch given by Mrs. Mary Posner, their daughter, and Mrs. Robert Halpern and Mrs. Joseph Posner, their granddaughters.

The affair was held at the home of Mrs. Halpern in Reseda, California, on October 8, where the Sholowitzes were visiting. Guests attended from Los Angeles, Sepulveda, Panorama City and Irvine, California, and Kingman, Arizona.

The resolution was adopted shortly before US Secretary of State William P. Rogers addressed the UN General Assembly urging that it act without delay in undertaking global measures against international terrorism. Rogers' proposals were embodied in draft treaties calling for the extradition and punishment of terrorist perpetrators and sanctions against countries aiding them.

While Rogers spoke, the White House disclosed that President Nixon had established a high-level Cabinet committee.

IN NEW ZEALAND
WELLINGTON, N.Z. — New Zealand's 5000 Jews have a comfortable and quiet life, but there is increasing anxiety over the strong trend towards assimilation by the younger generation evident from the large number of mixed marriages. Most New Zealand Jews are affiliated with a synagogue not because they are traditional or observant, but because they feel it is important "to belong." They draw their spiritual inspiration largely from the more populous Jewish community of Australia where there are approximately 72,000 Jews who have a rather well-developed active, and variegated Jewish cultural life.

LACK OF EDUCATION
TEL AVIV — Lack of a proper education is responsible for most Israeli malnutrition cases, not lack of money, according to the Family Expenditure Survey published here. The second part of the survey which was just released cover the nutrition aspects of family budgets. The average caloric intake in Israel was said to be 2,920 per capita, compared with 3,200 in Britain and over 4,200 in the U.S.

TO RECEIVE AWARD: Israel Medoff of Woonsocket, industrialist, religious leader and philanthropist, will receive the National Community Service Award from the Jewish Theological Seminary of America at a dinner being held by the New England Friends of the Seminary on Sunday, November 19, at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston.

The award is a bronze plaque conferred each year upon communal leaders whose "distinctive and continuing service to the community at large perpetuates the Jewish tradition of involvement in and concern for the wellbeing of man."

Mr. Medoff is honorary vice president of Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket, and was chairman of the building fund which made possible the erection of the new synagogue in which he has been active for over half a century.

Mr. Medoff is the owner of the I. Medoff Company, a textile converting firm in Woonsocket. An overseas veteran of World War I, he has served as the commander of Arnold F. Young Post, American Legion.

Organizations and institutions in which he has been active include The Miriam Hospital, the Providence Hebrew Day School and the Jewish Home for the Aged. Also included are the Maimonides School in Boston, Massachusetts, and the Jewish Theological Society of America. Seminary chancellor, Dr. Gerson D. Cohen, will confer the award upon Mr. Medoff.

AJCongress Asks Protection For Elderly

NEW YORK — Congress was called upon this week by the American Jewish Congress to enact emergency legislation that would protect the nation's elderly by requiring state officials to disregard the new Social Security increase in computing eligibility for other federally funded health and welfare benefits.

The AJC said the 20 per cent increase in Social Security benefits was likely to have "a negative impact on many senior citizens who will now be above eligible income levels for other aid programs."

Vatican Attacks Israeli Reprisals

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican's weekly newspaper criticized Israel's reprisal attacks against Palestinian guerrillas as "another link in the bloody chain" of violence in the Middle East.

"Does terror eliminate terrorism, or does it nurture it?" Federico Alessandrini, the Vatican's press spokesman, asked in an editorial in L'Osservatore della Domenica. The editorial was headlined: "An Eye for an Eye."

The newspaper said the Israeli incursions only exacerbate the hatreds of the Palestinians "who, driven from the land where they lived for 15 or 20 centuries, have lost a country without finding another, either because of the impossibility or because of the lack of good will."

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Future Brightening For Curtis Noll
Q: I have a chance to buy stock in the company I work for, Curtis Noll. Do you think this would be wise? H.B.

A: Between 1962 and 1969 Curtis Noll (OTC) grew at a fast pace — 25% compounded annually. Since then profits declined moderately reflecting a slower pace of sales increases, disposal of two marginal operations and a loss incurred when a major customer suffered a prolonged strike. Because these factors were of a temporary nature, marked improvement is looked for this year. This has already been demonstrated in the first half when net gained 47% on a 17% rise in sales.

Some 63% of sales is derived from the automotive replacement and consumer product markets. The balance is accounted for by industrial products, the area that had adversely affected operating results. Curtis is currently trading at about 15x estimated 1972 net, well below the level of many automotive aftermarket issues. As a company employee, presumably purchasing shares at some advantage, I would urge you to accept this opportunity to build a nest egg toward retirement.

Q: I invested $10,000 in IDS Mutual Fund on a $50-a-month withdrawal plan. My principal kept going down so I switched to 437 shares of IDS Stock Fund. Now these shares are going down each month. What should I do? J.S.

A: On 437 shares of the stock fund you would have received $284 last year in total distributions, a 2.5% return on your investment. Since you are withdrawing $600 annually the balance must be made up from principal. The same management offers Investors Selective which would better meet your needs. Because this fund is lower priced, your shares could be exchanged for 950 of the Selective Fund. Thus far this year 45c a share has been distributed with 60c or better probable for the year. On 950 shares you would receive, at that rate, $570, leaving a minimal balance to be met from your capital.

Some Bonds Are Speculative
Q: I am 32, self-employed with children who will be ready for college in 14 years. Would Pan American World Airways 4 1/2% of 1986 be a good investment if held to maturity? Does the bond selling at $600 return 12 1/2% annually under those conditions? A.P.

A: This particular security is not a straight-debt obligation but rather a convertible subordinated debenture. It is therefore able to be exchanged at the holders option into common stock at $34.84 a share. With the common now trading at $11.50, this feature is of no current interest. Further, this security is subordinate to all superior debt issues and although a direct-debt obligation of Pan Am, it is unsecured.

Under terms of the sinking fund the company must retire $10,000,000 of these debentures each year 1976-85. In other words, by 1986, when the issue matures,

Shochet In Lithuania Dies; Have No Replacement For Him

ELIZABETH, N.J. — The only shochet (kosher slaughterer) in Soviet Lithuania died a few days before Rosh Hashanah at the age of around 60 and "there is nobody to replace him," Rabbi Pinchas Teitz, former member of the presidium of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the US and Canada, has announced. The Shochet, identified by Lithuanian sources as "Reb Yaacov," was based in Vilna.

Rabbi Teitz also reported that $100 million of the $175 million will have been retired. The company has the option to voluntarily retire a like amount each year. Thus your chances of holding through 1986 are reduced. The bond, trading at 53 1/2, yields 8.5% currently with a possible capital gain of $465 per bond. There is a high element of risk in this B-rated issue, Pan Am having operated at a deficit in each of the last three years. An 86c-a-share deficit was also reported in the first half of this year. Unless you wish to speculate, I would avoid this debenture.

Q: Could you tell me where I can purchase H Bonds and savings notes? Also what are the minimum amounts I can buy? W.H.

A: Sales of savings notes — Freedom Shares — were discontinued by the U.S. Treasury on June 30, 1970. H-bonds may be bought through commercial banks, thrift institutions and savings banks. Four different denominations are issued, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000. Income on this series is paid semi-annually by Treasury check.

Lumber Retailer Shares Get Axed
Q: Earlier this year, after reading several favorable articles on Wickes Corporation (NYSE), I bought 50 shares at $53. What has happened to this stock? E.W.

Q: How is it possible for a stock like Wickes Corporation to drop $25 in eight months? M.N.

A: Aside from softness in the building group as a whole, Wickes has suffered from problems of its own. In particular, the minimal increase in fiscal first half earnings was a blow to institutional investors expecting substantial year-to-year improvement. Sales rose 35% for the six months through July, but an 18% increase in shares outstanding reduced the 21% gain in net income to 3% on a per share basis. This news was followed by an announcement that production of modular housing units would be discontinued. This division had been operating at a loss and the shut-down would result in some write-offs. Thus earnings estimates for this retailer of building supplies have been modified by industry experts.

Price action will probably be uninspired in the coming months, although longer term performance is expected to be above average.

Q: On the advice of a broker I bought National General warrants at $8 in July 1971. This was to be the start of a portfolio for my retirement in 1981. Should I continue to hold? V.B.

A: Price action in the common and therefore the warrants is apt to be restricted over the near term. Shareholder disapproval of the proposed take-over of National by Pennsylvania Life largely dissipated earlier gains in National's shares. Furthermore the NYSE is investigating trading in these shares prior to the proposed merger announcement. The possibility of a proxy fight — three top officers resigned in July — is also apt to have a depressant effect on share price. Warrants, now trading at a 63% premium, are highly speculative for a person in your situation. Sell.

the cantor from Memel, Lithuania, who had served Vilna for several years on the High Holidays, sang at Rosh Hashanah services this year and died before Yom Kippur. He said there was no indication of foul play in either death.

Rabbi Teitz added that a monument in memory of the late Rabbi Yatzhak Rabinowitz, the Lithuanian "Rav of Ponievitz," who died in 1918, was recently unveiled there.

Arab Leaders Admit Disunity Their Foe

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Arab leaders, spurred to frankness by their numerous disagreements, have acknowledged that disunity has brought their cause against Israel to the brink of despair.

Col. Mummar el-Qaddafi, the militant Libyan leader, addressing a rally in Tripoli welcoming him home from a conference in Cairo recently said that the Arab situation was "weak, covered with mist and darkness," and that the Arabs were "without a united sense of direction."

In Amman, King Hussein of Jordan opened a founding congress of the Arab National Union, the Country's only political party, with an attack on Arab leaders who were "fond of the game of evading facts by raising more slogans and spinning more dreams."

Divisive Attitudes

"The Arab nation, as is evident to all, has slipped into a whirlpool of accusations, polemics and attempts to justify inability and neglect," the King added.

The situation, he said, is "driving our captive people to the brink of despair." He was referring to those living in territories occupied by Israel, particularly the West Bank of the Jordan River, since 1967.

Although King Hussein and Colonel Qaddafi concurred on the weakness of the Arab position, they exemplify the attitudes that keep the Arab countries in permanent infighting, intrigues and distrust.

Hussein's reference to Arab leaders who raise slogans and spin dreams might well have been aimed at Colonel Qaddafi, a 29-year-old nationalist with a popular following who has called for a holy war against Israel.

'Massada' Takes Responsibility For Bombed Bookstore In Paris

PARIS — An explosion badly damaged a Palestinian bookstore recently in what appeared to be Jewish violence against Arabs.

The police said that a group calling itself the "Massada action and defense movement" had claimed responsibility for the bombing but that they knew of no such organization.

Mahmoud Hamchari, the French representative of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, the over-all guerrilla organization, termed the bombing "a Zionist attack" and said, "We consider that this cowardly attack is an act of provocation aimed at disturbing French-Arab relations."

"We had received threats before, and they became more frequent these past days," Mr.

Colonel Qaddafi was more explicit in referring to King Hussein in his speech, calling him "a lackey of Zionism." The charge stems from reports in the Arab world that Hussein, a moderate, had been in touch with Israeli leaders on a negotiated settlement that would restore the West Bank to Jordanian control.

The Libyan leader is the principal supporter of the Palestinian people now, particularly the guerrilla organizations that rely on Libyan oil profits.

Syria, now the home base for the major Palestinian fighting units, is so opposed to King Hussein that diplomatic relations are severed, Jordanian airline flights over Syria are prohibited and some truck shipments are blocked.

Meanwhile, Egypt and the Sudan, which once had troops together along the Suez Canal facing Israel, are involved in a serious political fight. The Sudanese have pulled the last of their forces out of Egypt at Cairo's request and have sent many Egyptian advisers home.

Yemen, a conservative Arab republic backed by Saudi Arabia, is engaged in a fitful border war with Southern Yemen, which has a Marxist government backed by both the Soviet Union and China.

In the circumstances a meeting of Arab foreign and defense ministers scheduled in Kuwait on Nov. 15 to adopt a common policy against Israel has uncertain prospects, like many of its predecessors. The meeting was called by the Arab League foreign ministers after Israel attacked Syria and Lebanon by air, bombing Palestinian refugee camps, and then occupied parts of southern Lebanon for a weekend with armored infantry.

Hamchari said. He also said he had heard of Massada and "they carried out attacks against Arabs in Jerusalem."

Below the shop's sign in Arabic and French, the glass in the front door was blown out, windows were broken and a piece of metal paneling had been torn off by the blast.

An anonymous message delivered to a Paris newspaper shortly after the blast was signed by the "Massada action and defense movement."

The declaration said Massada had carried out its first operation in response to terrorism against Israelis and Jews. It read: "To anti-Semite terror, Jewish terror will respond. This is our first warning."

Only In America

By Harry Golden

Odd Men Out

The odd men out in Israel are the Jewish atheists and the interfaith Jews.

The atheists are in a bad way, although the country is filled with them. The unanswerable argument the Israelis offer to the World is that God gave them this land. That indeed they have repurchased much of it, have fought for it time and time again, is offered, too, but it doesn't have the weight of God's dispensation. God makes Israeli priority simpler to understand and, as Israelis insist, he wouldn't have it any other way.

There is an interfaith movement on. But the interfaith movement in Israel differs greatly from the interfaith movement in America.

In Israel, the Jews are an overpowering majority and there is no theological confrontation. Christianity is not theologically important to Judaism, although Judaism is important theologically to Christians.

The movement in America gains its impetus from the desire of the Jew to preserve his civil rights and share in all the advantages of his Christian neighbors. The interfaith Jew in the States is out to prove he is no different from gentiles except in the way he worships. He has a social motive. The interfaith movement hopes, say, that Jew and Christian can unite in the attempt to abolish poverty.

This situation does not obtain in Israel. There are hundreds of thousands of Israelis who probably have never met a Christian. The Christians in the Holy Land are usually either Arabs or clergymen. The Jews interested in the interfaith movement are intellectuals, and the Christians who are interested are a small number of the same. The Jews in Israel are a living presence.

The interfaith Jew is dedicated to helping Christians understand that the Jewish religion and the Jewish state are one and the same thing. The movement has a political motive.

But there is one day in the year which is an interfaith day which would make an American Jew turn green with envy. That is New Year's Day when the president of the state, now Zalman Shazar, holds a reception for all Christian and Moslem clergymen. A good time is had by all, including Israel's president, who is a Hassidic Jew.

The Nobel Prize and Nixon

While Senator George McGovern, his aides, the Democratic constituency, and assorted psychiatrists mulled over the prospect of whether or not Thomas Eagleton was sane enough to be Vice President of the United States, Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania nominated President Richard Nixon for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Only 14 Americans have won the Nobel Peace Prize, two of them presidents, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson. One American, Linus D. Pauling, even refused it (Although he was already Nobel laureate in chemistry).

Senator Scott was of the opinion that it was time for another American president to get out his best bib and tucker for the trip to Stockholm.

President Nixon had made state visits to both Russia and mainland China which provided the Ameri-

SIGN AGREEMENT
JERUSALEM — Israel and Liberia have signed an agreement in which each country grants the other full landing rights in their airports. The agreement will enable El Al to open a projected route to South America via Monrovia, the capital of Liberia. The document was signed by the acting minister of commerce and industry of Liberia and Pinhas Rodan, Israel's ambassador to Monrovia.

NO EXEMPTION
JERUSALEM — The rabbi's daughter who wears mini-skirts will have to serve in the army, a military exemptions committee decided recently. Sarah Barazani appealed against her call-up order earlier this year claiming she was religious and was entitled to an exemption. The committee reported that she could not answer certain questions about the Jewish religion and wore a mini-skirt six inches above the knee.

French Aide Attempts Blackmail
Of Government On Libya Deal

PARIS — The Jews of France have been put in a delicate position by a former French ministerial aide who has threatened to publicize "highly compromising" official documents unless France stops delivery of Mirage jet fighter planes to Libya, observers here reported recently.

Gabriel Aranda, a non-Jew who served as a technical advisor and press officer to a former Gaullist minister for Housing and Development, listed in a letter to the French daily, "Le Monde," what he said were examples of government corruption and of government corruption and threatened to make more such disclosures if the government continues to deliver Mirages to Libya.

The observers noted that the French information media seem to be insinuating that the country's Jews have a double allegiance which could be "detrimental" to French national interests. They cited a comment on the state-owned radio ORTF that the "Aranda affair shows the dangers run by French citizens when they are too closely linked to foreign powers." Aranda, who is believed to be in Paris, apparently went into hiding after French Justice Minister Rene Pleven issued a warrant for his arrest on charges of stealing and improper use of government documents.

Aranda's campaign has been a major shock to all Israel and Jewish organizations in France, the JTA was told. Virtually none of these organizations had ever heard of Aranda before he exploded his political bombshell. It is obvious that no government can give in to blackmail and change its foreign policy under the pressure of a single man or group.

The documents published in Le Monde refer to what Aranda described as "gross governmental corruption" in the granting of building contracts and supply contracts to Gaullist elements. It was recalled that President George Pompidou dismissed Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas after the opposition leveled charges of corruption against the government.

Rabbi Goren Hopes To Solve
Religious Problems In Israel

TEL AVIV — The shooting had hardly subsided in Israel's 1948 war of independence when Rabbi Shlomo Goren, then chaplain of the armed forces, discovered that Israeli paratroopers were not keeping kosher mess halls. He was told that there were no religiously observant paratroopers. So he became one. He broke a leg in training, but 10 days after the cast was removed, he returned, earned his wings and got his kosher kitchen. Rabbi Goren, who was elected last Sunday as Chief Rabbi of Israel's Ashkenazic, or European community, has come to be known over the years as a man who puts knowledge, ingenuity and sheer will to work in reconciling the frequent contradictions between national necessity and rabbinical law.

He is, accordingly, a controversial figure, a brilliant Talmudic scholar with an unorthodox approach to Orthodox Judaism, a warrior-rabbi who can handle a rifle or a machine gun; he was in the Israeli vanguard in the Sinai peninsula in 1956 and at Gaza in 1967.

During the six-day war, an Arab shell blasted his command car on a mission in Gaza. The following day, his bushy white beard flapping in the wind, he dashed through sniper fire in Arab-held Jerusalem to become one of the first Israeli soldiers to reach the Wailing Wall.

"Goren," said a man who had served with him, "is a gever" — a man's man.

Rabbi Goren, chaplain of the armed forces for more than 20 years and Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv's Ashkenazic community since 1968, now hopes to achieve the sort of unity in Israel's civilian society that he achieved in the military.

The task promises to be more difficult. Rabbi Goren managed to resolve many contradictions in the military — the use of telephones, light bulbs and transportation on the Sabbath — with declarations that the national security transcended the ancient religious laws. In so doing, he averted a split of the armed forces into observant and nonobservant factions.

Questions of marriage, divorce and conversion, the exclusive jurisdiction of the rabbinate, have become sharply divisive in Israeli life. Public opinion has been aroused by instances of couples barred from marriage because they have been declared illegitimate.

With the blessing of Premier Golda Meir, Rabbi Goren hopes to solve such problems within the framework of Halacha, the Jewish religious law.

Shlomo Goren was born in Poland and was brought to Israel by his parents at the age of 7. He attended primary school in Kfar Hasidim, a village in the Jezreel Valley, and Yeshiva and the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

He was Palestine's youngest rabbi when, at 16, he was ordained in 1934. A year later, he published a scholarly study on the medieval Jewish philosopher Maimonides, and by 1936 he was a member of Haganah, the underground Jewish self-defense organization organized during British rule.

He earned a reputation as a sharpshooter in the 1948 war and was a machine gunner when Premier David Ben-Gurion made him a colonel and senior chaplain of the armed forces that year.

He is the author of numerous books and, in the nineteen-sixties, was a key figure on a committee formed to study modernization of the Halacha. He and his wife, the daughter of a well-known Jerusalem mystic, Rabbi David Hacoheh, have two daughters.

Yiddish Musical, 'Rebbitzen' Is Done Quite Pleasantly

NEW YORK — For the women, usually mature, often portrayed in Yiddish theater, the positions taken by Women's Lib may represent something of a retreat. They are wise, schemers (for good things of course) and usually they manipulate their men like marionettes. Which brings us smoothly to "The Rebbitzen From Israel," the new Yiddish musical that opened last week at the Mayfair Theater, 235 West 46th Street.

A rebbitzen, first off, for noncognoscenti, is a rabbi's wife and in this case she's a widow. The plot, but let's not get into all of it, you wouldn't believe. It has to do with the rebbitzen and a rich man whose wife ran off years ago; he lives on West End Avenue so he must be comfortable although his apartment is 1930-ish Tremont Avenue. Well, they have troubles and children and they solve them all inexorably in a tismis of tears, laughter, song and even a broadcast from WEVD, the station that speaks your language.

The production, adapted from L. Freiman's play, is recommended, perhaps, for mature audiences who love a Yiddish word, a Yiddish gesture. It is a paragon of tradition, and a bit different from all those musicals that preceded it all over the world, not the more creative ones but the ones that satisfied the many, less demanding theatergoers who reveled in sentiment and situations they themselves encountered: the children growing apart from the parents, the pull of America against tradition.

Since it is much like its forebears, the question is — how is it done? It is done quite pleasantly, if somewhat to straight at times when comedy might alleviate the tsores. Pesach Burstein and Lillian Lux, in the lead roles, pilot their vehicle with the assurance of veteran travelers and Bernard Sauer, as a matchmaker, is an attractive comedian. The others, the younger cast members, perform in requisite fashion. Lili Amber's music and lyrics are lively in the Yiddish theater style and Mr. Burstein even takes on the audience in one number. "Rebbitzen" is not exactly a Great Leap Forward, but if you can muster up the proper mood, you might have fun with it.

ISSUE WARRANT

BRUSSELS — Deputy Attorney General E. Dubois said an international warrant has been issued for the arrest of Hassan Ben Joudai, a 29-year-old former Moroccan officer who is believed to have shot Israeli Embassy official Zadok Offir, in a downtown Brussels restaurant on September 11. Offir, who is in serious condition at St. Pierre Hospital, was too weak to answer the questions of Belgian police officers and an investigating magistrate who visited him. Most of the eye-witnesses to the shooting identified Joudai as the man who fired four shots at the 42-year-old Israeli.

Six Soviet Scientists Protest Treatment

WASHINGTON — Six Soviet Jewish scientists in Moscow telephoned a message to the president of the National Academy of Sciences here this week protesting their treatment in the Soviet Union and the refusal of the Soviet Government to permit their immigration to Israel.

The message, in the form of an open letter, was received by Dr. David Korn, chairman of the Soviet Jewry Committee of the Jewish Community Council here and professor of Russian studies at Howard University. Dr. Korn said he transmitted the message to the National Academy and its president, Dr. Philip Handler.

In their message, the six scientists said that their situation was "getting graver each day," that they were being "isolated from the outside world" and that their families were being "both openly and secretly oppressed by the Soviet authorities." They said that they were not permitted to work in their specialties but were forced to do manual labor.

The six scientists asked Dr. Handler to convey their message to Prof. M. V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, who is now in Washington. "We ask you to discuss with him the measures he can and must take to protect our basic human rights," they said.

Dr. Korn identified the scientists and their fields of specialization as Prof. David Asbel, physics; Prof. Aleksandr Lerner, cybernetics; Prof. Benjamin Levich, biophysics; Prof. Boris Moisheson, mathematics; Dr. Roman Rutman, cybernetics, and Prof. Aleksandr Voronel, physics.

MORE SETTLEMENTS

JERUSALEM — Deputy Premier Yigal Allon urged that more Jewish settlements be established along the cease-fire lines to give Israel political leverage in future negotiations with the Arabs. He said Israel did not want to become "like an aircraft carrier," meaning a country that had to rely on military means alone to defend itself. Allon, speaking at the 50th anniversary of Benyamina settlement, said that Jewish settlements along the cease-fire lines would further the expansion of the nation's economic infrastructure.

can constituency with mind and trade broadening experiences as well as the Washington zoo with pandas and Comrade Brezhnev with a Cadillac.

In his peroration, Senator Scott proclaimed Richard Nixon a man devoted to world peace through easing tensions. What he failed to note, however, was that we are not at war with Russia or China. Nor did Senator Scott mention the incursions into Cambodia or Laos or the mining of Haiphong harbor.

Coincident with Senator Scott's nomination was President Nixon's announcement that he would not meet with his opponent Senator McGovern in televised policy debates on the grounds that such debates were not in the public interest.

Just why such debates were not in the public interests, Mr. Nixon did not enumerate. But we can guess that these debates would sap his energies from the televised speech he will deliver at Stockholm and the speech he will undoubtedly deliver to the travel agents of American when they nominate him as the MVP of the tourist industry.

Certainly the President has pioneered in the highways and byways of new lands as yet unexplored by the Polaroid-toting American sightseer.

NO ACADEMICIANS

TEL AVIV — There were no academicians in the large group of Soviet immigrants who arrived here recently by way of Vienna. This rare situation was attributed by aliyah officials to the recently imposed heavy exit fees for educated Jews seeking to leave the USSR. The officials expressed anxiety at the development. The immigrants — from Georgia, Odessa, Riga and Moscow — were given housing in Upper Nazareth, Ofakim, Shderot and other places.

HARRY J. LICHT

Funeral services for Harry J. Licht, a brother of Governor Frank Licht and a prominent businessman and civic leader, who died Monday, were held Wednesday at Temple Emanu-El. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The husband of Mrs. Charlotte (Long) Licht, he resided at 14 Tannery Road, and was associated with Jacob Licht, Inc., and Licht Industries. He was considered to have provided the business skills and leadership in the growth of the firms and other industrial undertakings.

The 61-year-old Mr. Licht was one of three brothers. The third is Julius Licht.

Additional survivors are his father, Jacob Licht, of Providence, and three children, Mrs. Barbara Resnick and Mrs. Bette Jane Ouakinine, both of New York City, and Gary Licht, a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

They are the children of Mr. Licht and the late Mrs. Lillian (Rubin) Licht.

Other survivors are two stepsons, Michael Marcus of New York City and David Marcus of Providence.

Mr. Licht was instrumental in developing the Nicholson File plant a dozen years ago into an industrial center after the company left Providence.

He was associated with the Wilkinson Company, Jali Realty Corporation; Lyman Associates; Summer Realty, Inc.; Mortgage Guarantee and Title Company, and Ten Keys, Inc.

Mr. Licht was a member of the zoning board of Providence. He was on the board of the Jewish Community Center and chairman of its building committee. Mr. Licht was a member of Temple Emanu-El.

When Mr. Licht returned the former Nicholson File Company plant to industrial activity, he was associated in the venture with his father and two brothers. The reconversion at the time was considered a classic example of what can be done with the physical properties that remained once a long-established firm leaves a community.

In recent years he devoted much of his time to the construction of the new Jewish Community Center on Elm Grove Avenue.

Mr. Licht was born in Providence on November 11, 1910. He attended Providence public schools and Northeastern University.

LOUIS J. BERGER

Funeral services for Louis J. Berger, 74, of 75 Ferncrest Avenue, Cranston, founder of the former Berger Supply Company in Warwick and the Berger Lumber Corporation in West Kingston, who died Tuesday after an illness of five weeks, were held Wednesday at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Berger owned the Warwick firm until last year. He remained active in the West Kingston business he had started in 1955.

He was a native of Poland, who had lived in Providence before moving to Cranston 27 years ago.

Mr. Berger was a member of Temple Beth Israel, and the Roosevelt Lodge of Masons, AF&AM.

Besides his wife, Helena (Tannenbaum) Berger, he is survived by a son, Albert Berger of Cranston; a daughter, Mrs. Jacqueline Nemzow of Providence; a sister, Mrs. Freida Dorkin of Bridgeport, Connecticut, and five grandchildren.

DAVID S. SCHWARTZ

Funeral services for David Samuel Schwartz, 43, of Brooklyn, New York, formerly of Pawtucket, who died Sunday were held Monday in New York.

The husband of Mrs. Selma Schwartz, he was born in Pawtucket, the son of Mrs. Bessie G. Schwartz of Far Rockaway, New York and the late Isadore Schwartz. He had lived in Brooklyn for about 20 years.

Survivors besides his wife and mother include a stepdaughter, Mrs. Rhea Landau of New York City; four sisters, Mrs. Ruth Pressman and Mrs. Anna Parness, both of Brooklyn, Mrs. Adelle Caplan of Montreal, Canada, and Mrs. Dena Shindler of Far Rockaway; and three brothers, Donald and Aaron Schwartz, both of Brooklyn, and Israel Schwartz of Providence.

MRS. JACOB LOCKE

Funeral services for Mrs. Tilly (Goldenberg) Locke of 10 Brookfield Drive, East Providence, who died October 12, were held Sunday at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel.

The widow of Jacob Locke, she was born in Providence, a daughter of the late Jacob and Pearl Goldenberg.

She was a member of Temple Beth Torah and its Sisterhood. Survivors include two sons, Rodney Locke of East Providence and Dr. Murray S. Locke of Edina, Minnesota; five brothers, Irving Goldenberg of Providence, Harry Goldenberg of Queens, New York, Hyman Goldberg of Mountandale, New York, Julius Rice of Miami, Florida, and Morton Morse of Worcester, Massachusetts; one sister, Mrs. Ethel Schlesinger of Bronx, New York, and two grandchildren.

Strober Feels Protestants Still Negative In Views

NEW YORK — "Protestant church school curricula still tend to draw an unjustifiably negative picture of Jews and Judaism in dealing with such crucial themes as the Jewish religion itself, the Jew's rejection of Jesus as the Messiah, their role in the crucifixion and the relationships between Jesus and Jewish contemporaries." That is the conclusion of Gerald S. Strober, consultant on religious curricula in the American Jewish Committee's Interreligious Affairs Department, in a new booklet, "Portrait of the Elder Brother: Jews and Judaism in Protestant Teaching Materials."

The booklet is published by the AJ Committee and the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Protestant "negativism obscures understanding of Israel and its meaning to Jews everywhere (and) continues to perpetuate outdated stereotypes and prejudices in daily life. It hampers the growth of mutual respect between Christians and Jews," Strober charges.

Strober, who several months ago condemned the rock musical "Jesus Christ, Superstar" for its treatment of Jews, calls in his booklet for an immediate "thorough reform of Christian teaching about Jewish religion and life." His study was planned and supervised by Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum and Dr. Bernhard E. Olson, directors of Interreligious Affairs at the AJ Committee and the NCCJ.

Israel Builds New Miami Beach On Shores Of Mediterranean

TEL AVIV — Israel is creating a new Miami Beach-like gold coast on the shores of the Mediterranean.

"We're pushing back the sea," the director-general of the tourism ministry, Hanoeh Givton, said in explaining the process of producing beaches for many of the 11 luxury hotels now being built along the shore

despite an outcry from ecologists that the high-rise, glassy buildings will ruin the natural beauty of the coastline. Mr. Givton said the hotels will be better than the blocks of four-story flats now there.

To this end, long stone and cement bulkheads have been built into the sea along Tel Aviv's coast, all of them crossed at the end like a "T", in order to "catch" more sand and thereby force back the water.

Equally important to Israel's new quest for a "fun in the sun" image is a revitalized effort to keep the Mediterranean free of raw sewage and to rid the sand of the globs of oil from tankers offshore.

The incentive is a national balance of payments deficit of $3-billion.

To pay for the weaponry needed to maintain the Middle East balance of power, and to make a dent in the Government's overseas debt, Israel needs hard cash. Tourism is the No. 1 provider.

The record 657,000 visitors who came to the Jewish state last year left behind $155-million. This year, according to Mr. Givton, 775,000 are expected, with the tourism ministry devising ways to increase the take even more.

JORDAN IN PEACE BID

JERUSALEM — Jordan made a peace overture to Israel via television. Amman TV inaugurated a daily news program in Hebrew with a pledge to promote peace in the region. It is the first Hebrew program ever beamed from the Jordanian capital. It began with a promise to address "the people of Israel in their own language in a bid to promote peace" in the area. An Informaton Ministry official started the program with a pledge to give the Israeli audience "straightforward news."

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities
By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello again, my friends, here's what we have for you this week. Africa anyone? For a free, full color brochure showing some of the outstanding sights in this adventurous land, write to Kuoni Travel, Inc., 11 East 44th Street, New York, New York 10017. Of course, there are fascinating sights in other parts of the world too. Want to see some? What's your pleasure — Europe, Hawaii, Latin America, the Pacific or the Caribbean? You can get a free brochure on any of them. For the one (or ones) you want, write to Pan American World Airways, P.O. Box 2212, Boston, Massachusetts

There's one other distinctive gift catalogue worth your seeing too — the Harriet Carter catalogue. Items here aren't so spectacular (or expensive) as Kenton's but many good unusual ones nevertheless.

But be forearmed — if you send for these catalogues you'll need resistance of iron not to find yourself spending money for something in them. Remember, you've been warned.

Just received an interesting letter from a reader. I'll tell you about it next week. With a few other items I think you'll find of interest too.

By the way, is telephone service deteriorating or is it just me? Have you tried to get an operator or information lately (are you ringing more and enjoying it less?) What are we supposed to do in an emergency, send smoke signals?

Speaking of telephones, I received a call inviting me to an open house in Senator Pell's honor the other day. My thanks. It was a pleasure meeting him and his charming wife. As well as some of my readers (the most important people to any writer). One of the women was absolutely beautiful. Ebony hair framing pure cream. Radiant. Exquisite.

Whoever she is, get her to the polls, Senator. To stand there with

Boobytrapped Letter Arrives In W. Germany

BONN — The first boobytrapped letter reported to have arrived in West Germany in the recent wave of bombings by mail found its way into the hands of an old woman in a Jewish home for the elderly, but the woman's caution saved her at the last minute, the police here said.

The woman who received the letter today was a 75-year-old resident of the Nelly Sachs Home in the northern Rhineland city of Dusseldorf, the police said. They said she poked her finger into a blue envelope, thought the better of it and called police. A bomb expert pried it open gingerly and found a device inside composed of a lethal plastic explosive between two pieces of cardboard.

The police said that the letter had been mailed from Kadeh, in Malaysia, to Dr. Arnold Schustermann, a deceased resident of the Nelly Sachs Home and the fiancée of the elderly woman.

REASSURES ARABS
LONDON — A Moscow radio Arabic broadcast assured its listeners that the Soviet Union was limiting the number of Russian Jews allowed to emigrate to Israel. "Jews can leave the Soviet Union like all other citizens but exit visas for Jews going to Israel are considered in relation to the Middle East situation," the broadcast said. It claimed that "There is no foundation to the recent reports in reactionary circles, Western and Arab, that there had been an increasing Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union." The broadcast said this was "a lie purveyed by the imperialists and their Zionist henchmen." According to Moscow radio "the number of Jews who have left the Soviet Union since 1945 does not exceed 21,000."

Two Younger, More Liberal Men Named Chief Rabbis In Israel

TEL AVIV — The chief rabbis of Israel's two religious communities were voted out of office this week and were replaced by younger men with records of greater leniency in the interpretation of Torah law. Hard-liners seeking reelection to the Supreme Rabbinical Council also were defeated.

Shlomo Goren, aged 55, who was formerly the chief military rabbi, was chosen by a 150-member electoral college as Chief Rabbi of the Ashkenazic, or Western, community, replacing the incumbent, 86-year-old Rabbi Isser Y. Unterman. Rabbi Goren, who received 89 votes to Rabbi Unterman's 57, had received stronger support from Premier Golda Meir.

Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, 51, defeated the incumbent Yitzhak Nissim, 76, for the post of Chief Rabbi of the Sephardic, or Oriental, Jewish community by 81 votes to 68.

Both of the new Orthodox chief rabbis are currently serving as chief rabbis of Tel Aviv. Their election was seen as a victory for more liberal religious elements against the conservative elements that have been dominant.

Precedent Broken

This was the first time that incumbent chief rabbis had failed to win re-election, all previous occupants of the posts having died in office. The term of office is five years.

The election of the two new chief rabbis and 10 members of the Supreme Rabbinical Council, who will constitute the new chief rabbinate, took place in Jerusalem. It had been delayed three years because of political complications.

The electoral college consisted of 80 rabbis and 70 laymen. Ten of the rabbinical electors were appointed by the Government and the others were chosen by their peers. The laymen were representatives of municipalities and of local and religious councils. Most of them belonged to the Labor and the National Religious parties, which make up the majority of Mrs. Meir's governing coalition.

Many political leaders have held that an overly conservative chief rabbinate has irritated secular Jews, who have chafed over religious coercion, particularly in questions concerning marriage and divorce. The main political parties consequently threw their weight behind Rabbi Goren, who as senior chaplain for 23 years resolved a series of complex problems in what was considered a liberal manner.

3 Conservatives Defeated

The successful candidates for the Supreme Rabbinical Council were on slates supported by Rabbi Goren and Rabbi Nissim. The unsuccessful candidates included three conservative members of the outgoing council who were widely held responsible for its image of rigidity.

The chief rabbis preside over the Supreme Rabbinical Council and the Supreme Rabbinical Court, which interpret religious law. In questions of marriage and divorce, the two rabbis exercise exclusive authority, granted by parliament.

Both Rabbi Goren and Rabbi Yosef are, like their predecessors, strictly Orthodox and believe that rabbinical law cannot be amended or modernized. They are regarded as liberal, however, in that their vast knowledge of the Torah enables them to find grounds in rabbinical sources for lenient interpretations.

Rabbi Yosef, who entered the race for Sephardic Chief Rabbi only last week, was born in Iraq. He served three years as Deputy Chief Rabbi in Egypt before coming to Israel. He was a rabbinical court judge and later a member of the Supreme Rabbinical Court before his election to his Tel Aviv post.

Jewish Groups Adopt Security Measures

NEW YORK — Jewish organizations in the city have adopted new security techniques as a result of the recent terrorist tactic of mailing explosives to Israeli diplomats and supporters of Israel.

The security measures were discussed at a secret meeting two weeks ago between representatives of the major organizations and city and Federal law enforcement officials.

Last week, large mail sacks were stacked against tables, and a half-dozen clerks sorted letters in the midtown mailroom of a major Jewish organization that coordinates the use of funds raised for Israel.

The operation appeared to be calm and routine, as it did in the mailrooms of smaller Jewish philanthropic and service organizations here.

A mailed bomb killed an Israeli Embassy official last month in London. Recently, two New York women long prominent in American Zionist affairs received letters with bombs that had been mailed from Malaysia, assertedly by the Black September Arab terrorist organization. The letters failed to explode.

85 Inspectors Assigned

Recently the United States Postal Service announced here that it had assigned 85 inspectors to check all suspicious letters, especially foreign mail, that were addressed to Israeli or Jewish organizations or personages.

"We're not going to be hysterical or stampeded from carrying on all our normal activities," said Isidore Hamlin, executive director of the World Zionist Organization's New York headquarters.

Although most Jewish groups were reluctant to discuss the Friday meeting, Mr. Hamlin acknowledged it was held.

"What we are doing is pooling

Bar-Lev Stresses Return On Capital

NEW YORK — The Israeli military man who gave his name to the Bar-Lev line — the defensive system of fortifications on the eastern bank of the Suez Canal — was in New York this week to talk about the economic development of his country. In his speech to the American-Israeli Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Gen. Haim Bar-Lev — who is the new Israeli Minister of Commerce and Industry — stressed the return on capital available to investors in businesses in Israel.

"During the next five years we expect that $1.5-billion will be invested in our industry," said General Bar-Lev, a 47-year-old career officer who retired early this year as Chief of Staff. The average annual return on capital has been 14.2 per cent, he noted, adding that his trip to the United States was part of an over-all effort by his Government to "mobilize foreign investment."

our knowledge and the advice and cooperation we have been getting from Federal and city authorities," he said.

All the organizations have instructed their mail clerks to put aside letters or packages that have foreign postmarks and that do not have the name of the sender. Addresses of foreign mail that carries a sender's name are contacted to see if the sender is known. If a letter is bulky, it, too, is set aside.

Police May Be Called

Jordanian Slain In Rome Believed Member Of Fatah

ROME — A Libyan Embassy employe, a Jordanian who is believed to have been a member of Al Fatah, the Palestinian guerrilla organization, was shot dead Monday night outside his suburban apartment.

The 38-year-old victim, Abdel Weil Zuaier of Nablus, Jordan, was described by Fatah's press agency in Beirut as its representative for Italy. It said he was a martyr and hero of the Palestinian cause, "assassinated" by Israeli secret-service operatives.

A Jordanian Embassy official said Mr. Zuaier was a nephew of Akram Zuaier, Jordan's Ambassador in Beirut but declined to confirm a report that he was also a second cousin of Yasir Arafat, leader of Fatah.

The police said the murder had been carefully planned. Neighbors told the police they saw two men fire and then escape in a waiting car.

The car was found a few blocks from the scene. The police said it was rented Sunday by a man who showed a Canadian driver's license on which he was named as Anthony Hutton, 47, of Toronto.

Premier Announces Dismissal Of Israeli Security Officials

JERUSALEM — Premier Golda Meir announced this week that three senior officials of the security service had been dismissed because of the failure to provide adequate protection for the Israeli Olympic team in Munich.

It was the first time that the Israeli Government had formally acknowledged that its own precautions had been insufficient September 5, when 11 members of the team died as a result of a raid by Arab terrorists.

Speaking at the opening of the fall session of the parliament, Mrs. Meir also criticized as a "grave error" the West German Government's decision not to provide armed guards inside the Olympic Village.

She said that Bonn's effort to minimize security at the games to stress the Olympic spirit had represented "a basic misconception" about the dangers in such international gatherings.

Mrs. Meir said it "stood to reason" that the Israelis would offer a tempting target to Arab guerrilla organizations, particularly in West Germany, where she said they were well-entrenched.

One of the unanswered questions, Mrs. Meir said, was what difference it might have made if Israel had pressed the West German Government for permission to provide her own armed security for the delegation.

"I am convinced," she said, "that more comprehensive and intensive security measures, in accord with the German authorities, would have hamstringed the terrorists and lessened their chances of success."

The three dismissed men were identified only as two senior officials of the General Security Service, which looks after the safety of Israelis abroad, and a third official in a "responsible position with the General Security Service."

Informed sources said later that the three men had been the principal "operational figures" who had been responsible for arrangements with the German authorities for protection of the Israeli delegation. Their names were not released.

Mrs. Meir delivered her report in a solemn, sober tone. Dressed in a dark blue dress, she read her speech to a nearly full parliament, which resumed sessions this week after its annual summer recess.

During much of Mrs. Meir's speech, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan sat leaning back in his seat, his hands behind his head, staring at the ceiling. At one point, as Mrs. Meir described the meager security precautions at Munich, he shook his head in evident disgust.

Administration Criticized

The Premier's 40-minute speech opened a four-hour debate on the question of Arab terrorism in which the opposition took her administration to task for failure to act decisively against the Arab commandos.

Haim Landau, speaking for the Opposition Gahal bloc, charged that the Government had given the "green light" to the Arab terrorists by announcing after the Munich incident that it would not engage in counterterrorism in Europe.

Mr. Landau maintained that the Israeli security services were entirely capable of meeting the Arab commandos on their own ground. "All they need is the order," Mr. Landau said. "But they will never get it from the present leadership."

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Meir reiterated that the Government was determined to track down Arab terrorists "wherever we can reach them." By its very nature, she said, "a war against terrorism can not be limited to defensive means."

SEARCH HOMES
JERUSALEM — Police carried out a widespread search of the homes of Jewish Defense League members here in their continuing investigation of the JDL's attempts to smuggle arms out of the country for a private war against Arab terrorists abroad. But apparently because of a tip-off, police found many of the JDL flats locked and their occupants gone. The JDL accused the police of planting an informer in its ranks.

BEN POULTEN

Funeral services for Ben Poulten, assistant director of the Rhode Island Legislative Press Bureau and for a generation the state house reporter for the state's smaller daily papers and many of its weeklies, who died October 12, were held Sunday at Temple Beth Israel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Poulten, who would have been 66 on October 22, had worked for the state since shortly after suffering a heart attack in June, 1968. He was stricken after having covered one of the longest General Assembly sessions in history.

His work for multiple papers often kept him working 18 hours a day. Often he would be putting newsletters on buses to Woonsocket, Westerly or Newport after midnight.

Mr. Poulten was on the staff of the Pawtucket Times from 1931 until his illness in 1968. He served as well as state house correspondent for the Woonsocket Call, the Newport Daily News, the Westerly Sun and the Pawtucket Valley Times. He also wrote for several weekly papers and for Commerce Clearing House Reports, a national statistical agency recording legislative action.

A tireless legislative worker and a confidante of its leaders and rank-and-file members, for more than three decades, Mr. Poulten would brush off repeated urgings of his fellow newsmen to slow down. The state house and its workings were his life and consuming interest and he could recall almost unerringly the effect of virtually any pending piece of legislation. His cooperation with other newsmen and with public officials and state workers made him a highly respected member of his craft.

Mr. Poulten was also a cofounder and guiding force behind the Model General Assembly. He annually compiled for the educators who ran the high school legislature a list of interesting and controversial bills worthy of discussion by the young people. He also had been a consultant to the Rhode Island Social Studies Association.

Because of his diverse responsibilities, and especially through his connection with Commerce Clearing House, he was able on occasion to catch flaws in laws already passed by the General Assembly.

Mr. Poulten was honored on repeated occasions for the way he practiced his profession. In 1957, the General Assembly passed unanimously a resolution commending him for his 25 years on the job. In 1962, he was presented the University of Rhode Island's medal for service to the state and journalistic achievements. He won the New England Associated Press Managing Editors Association first prize in 1962 for the best big city newspaper story, and in 1963 won honorable mention for a discussion of absentee balloting, conducted by the New England Association Press News Executives Association.

Mr. Poulten was a member of Temple Beth Israel and a member of its board of directors. He also served on the board of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

For many years he had been active in the American Newspaper Guild, for four years vice president and later president of the Guild local, and later a vice president of the New England Council of the union. His other activities included membership in the Touro Fraternal Association and the Roger Williams Lodge, B'nai B'rith.

Mr. Poulten was a native of Providence, son of Molly (Mudrick) Cohen and the late Joseph Cohen. He had adopted the name Poulten, a family name.

He attended Classical High School, where he was a catcher on the nasenall team, and Brown University from which he was graduated in 1929. After breaking in on New York and Massachusetts newspapers, he joined the Pawtucket Times staff on April 4, 1931. On that newspaper he had been a general assignment reporter, city hall and state Senate reporter, state editor, news editor and assistant managing editor. He was then moved up as head of the state house bureau, a post he frequently handled with no assistance at all.

He was the husband of the former Pauline C. Chorney. They lived at 249 Warrington Street.

Besides his wife and his mother, Mr. Poulten is survived by three sons, Arthur Poulten of Cranston, Stephen Poulten of Narragansett, and Howard Poulten of Providence; a sister, Mrs. Max Tippe of Providence, and one grandson.

Bearers were Sanford Chorney, Max Tippe, Irving Avrutsky and Edward Raiff, Mr. Poulten's brothers-in-law, and Harris Chorney, Alan Chorney, Kenneth Levin, Donald Avrut and Robert Moskol, nephews.

HYMAN CUTLER

Funeral services for Hyman Cutler, 62, of 21 Chace Drive, who died October 14 after an illness of one year, were held Sunday at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Sharon Memorial Park, Sharon, Massachusetts.

The husband of Betty (Lampert) Cutler, he was born in Central Falls, a son of the Harry and Ethel Cutler. He was a Providence resident for 15 years and had lived in Boston, Massachusetts prior to that.

Mr. Cutler was the founder of the Darlington Auto Parts, 651 Cottage Street, Pawtucket, and operated the firm for 15 years until his retirement eight months ago.

He was a member of Temple Israel, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, What Cheer Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the El Karun Temple, DOKK.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Warren Cutler of Cranston, and Jeffrey Cutler of Providence; a daughter, Mrs. Sharen Sherman of Framingham, Massachusetts, and five grandchildren.

can constituency with mind and trade broadening experiences as well as the Washington zoo with pandas and Comrade Brezhnev with a Cadillac.

In his peroration, Senator Scott proclaimed Richard Nixon a man devoted to world peace through easing tensions. What he failed to note, however, was that we are not at war with Russia or China. Nor did Senator Scott mention the incursions into Cambodia or Laos or the mining of Haiphong harbor.

Coincident with Senator Scott's nomination was President Nixon's announcement that he would not meet with his opponent Senator McGovern in televised policy debates on the grounds that such debates were not in the public interest.

Just why such debates were not in the public interests, Mr. Nixon did not enumerate. But we can guess that these debates would sap his energies from the televised speech he will deliver at Stockholm and the speech he will undoubtedly deliver to the travel agents of American when they nominate him as the MVP of the tourist industry.

Certainly the President has pioneered in the highways and byways of new lands as yet unexplored by the Polaroid-toting American sightseer.

NO ACADEMICIANS

TEL AVIV — There were no academicians in the large group of Soviet immigrants who arrived here recently by way of Vienna. This rare situation was attributed by aliya officials to the recently imposed heavy exit fees for educated Jews seeking to leave the USSR. The officials expressed anxiety at the development. The immigrants — from Georgia, Odessa, Riga and Moscow — were given housing in Upper Nazareth, Ofakim, Shderot and other places.

HARRY J. LICHT

Funeral services for Harry J. Licht, a brother of Governor Frank Licht and a prominent businessman and civic leader, who died Monday, were held Wednesday at Temple Emanu-El. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The husband of Mrs. Charlotte (Long) Licht, he resided at 14 Tannery Road, and was associated with Jacob Licht, Inc., and Licht Industries. He was considered to have provided the business skills and leadership in the growth of the firms and other industrial undertakings.

The 61-year-old Mr. Licht was one of three brothers. The third is Julius Licht.

Additional survivors are his father, Jacob Licht, of Providence, and three children, Mrs. Barbara Resnick and Mrs. Bette Jane Ouakine, both of New York City, and Gary Licht, a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

They are the children of Mr. Licht and the late Mrs. Lillian (Rubin) Licht.

Other survivors are two stepsons, Michael Marcus of New York City and David Marcus of Providence.

Mr. Licht was instrumental in developing the Nicholson File plant a dozen years ago into an industrial center after the company left Providence.

He was associated with the Wilkinson Company; Jali Realty Corporation; Lyman Associates; Summer Realty, Inc.; Mortgage Guarantee and Title Company, and Ten Keys, Inc.

Mr. Licht was a member of the zoning board of Providence. He was on the board of the Jewish Community Center and chairman of its building committee. Mr. Licht was a member of Temple Emanu-El.

When Mr. Licht returned the former Nicholson File Company plant to industrial activity, he was associated in the venture with his father and two brothers. The re-conversion at the time was considered a classic example of what can be done with the physical properties that remained once a long-established firm leaves a community.

In recent years he devoted much of his time to the construction of the new Jewish Community Center on Elm Grove Avenue.

Mr. Licht was born in Providence on November 11, 1910. He attended Providence public schools and Northeastern University.

Locke of Edina, Minnesota; five brothers, Irving Goldenberg of Providence, Harry Goldenberg of Queens, New York, Hyman Goldberg of Mountandale, New York, Julius Rice of Miami, Florida and Morton Morse of Worcester, Massachusetts; one sister, Mrs. Ethel Schlesinger of Bronx, New York, and two grandchildren.

Strober Feels Protestants Still Negative In Views

NEW YORK — "Protestant church school curricula still tend to draw an unjustifiably negative picture of Jews and Judaism in dealing with such crucial themes as the Jewish religion itself, the Jew's rejection of Jesus as the Messiah, their role in the crucifixion and the relationships between Jesus and Jewish contemporaries." That is the conclusion of Gerald S. Strober, consultant on religious curricula in the American Jewish Committee's Interreligious Affairs Department, in a new booklet, "Portrait of the Elder Brother: Jews and Judaism in Protestant Teaching Materials."

The booklet is published by the AJ Committee and the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Protestant "negativism obscures understanding of Israel and its meaning to Jews everywhere (and) continues to perpetuate outdated stereotypes and prejudices in daily life. It hampers the growth of mutual respect between Christians and Jews," Strober charges.

Strober, who several months ago condemned the rock musical "Jesus Christ, Superstar" for its treatment of Jews, calls in his booklet for an immediate "thorough reform of Christian teaching about Jewish religion and life." His study was planned and supervised by Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum and Dr. Bernhard E. Olson, directors of Interreligious Affairs at the AJ Committee and the NCCJ.

Israel Builds New Miami Beach On Shores Of Mediterranean

TEL AVIV — Israel is creating a new Miami Beach-like gold coast on the shores of the Mediterranean.

"We're pushing back the sea," the director-general of the tourism ministry, Hanoch Givton, said in explaining the process of producing beaches for many of the 11 luxury hotels now being built along the shore

despite an outcry from ecologists that the high-rise, glassy buildings will ruin the natural beauty of the coastline. Mr. Givton said the hotels will be better than the blocks of four-story flats now there.

To this end, long stone and cement bulkheads have been built into the sea along Tel Aviv's coast, all of them crossed at the end like a "T", in order to "catch" more sand and thereby force back the water.

Equally important to Israel's new quest for a "fun in the sun" image is a revitalized effort to keep the Mediterranean free of raw sewage and to rid the sand of the globs of oil from tankers offshore.

The incentive is a national balance of payments deficit of $3-billion.

To pay for the weaponry needed to maintain the Middle East balance of power, and to make a dent in the Government's overseas debt, Israel needs hard cash. Tourism is the No. 1 provider.

The record 657,000 visitors who came to the Jewish state last year left behind $155-million. This year, according to Mr. Givton, 775,000 are expected, with the tourism ministry devising ways to increase the take even more.

JORDAN IN PEACE BID

JERUSALEM — Jordan made a peace overture to Israel via television. Amman TV inaugurated a daily news program in Hebrew with a pledge to promote peace in the region. It is the first Hebrew program ever beamed from the Jordanian capital. It began with a promise to address "the people of Israel in their own language in a bid to promote peace" in the area. An Informant Ministry official started the program with a pledge to give the Israeli audience "straightforward news."

Hello again, my friends, here's what we have for you this week. Africa anyone? For a free, full color brochure showing some of the outstanding sights in this adventurous land, write to Kuoni Travel, Inc., 11 East 44th Street, New York, New York 10017.

Of course, there are fascinating sights in other parts of the world too. Want to see some? What's your pleasure — Europe, Hawaii, Latin America, the Pacific or the Caribbean? You can get a free brochure on any of them. For the one (or ones) you want, write to Pan American World Airways, P.O. Box 2212, Boston, Massachusetts

And for those of you who like the unusual, you must see the fabulous Kenton collection of Christmas gifts. These are really spectacular. You can get their free catalogue by writing The Kenton Collection, 1757 Merrick Avenue, Merrick, New York 11566.

There's one other distinctive gift catalogue worth your seeing too — the Harriet Carter catalogue. Items here aren't so spectacular (or expensive) as Kenton's but many good unusual ones nevertheless.

But be forearmed — if you send for these catalogues you'll need resistance of iron not to find yourself spending money for something in them. Remember, you've been warned.

Just received an interesting letter from a reader. I'll tell you about it next week. With a few other items I think you'll find of interest too.

By the way, is telephone service deteriorating or is it just me? Have you tried to get an operator or information lately (are you ringing more and enjoying it less?) What are we supposed to do in an emergency, send smoke signals?

Speaking of telephones, I received a call inviting me to an open house in Senator Pell's honor the other day. My thanks. It was a pleasure meeting him and his charming wife. As well as some of my readers (the most important people to any writer). One of the women was absolutely beautiful. Ebony hair framing pure cream. Radiant. Exquisite.

Boobytrapped Letter Arrives In W. Germany

BONN — The first boobytrapped letter reported to have arrived in West Germany in the recent wave of bombings by mail found its way into the hands of an old woman in a Jewish home for the elderly, but the woman's caution saved her at the last minute, the police here said.

The woman who received the letter today was a 75-year-old resident of the Nelly Sachs Home in the northern Rhineland city of Dusseldorf, the police said. They said she poked her finger into a blue envelope, thought the better of it and called police. A bomb expert pried it open gingerly and found a device inside composed of a lethal plastic explosive between two pieces of cardboard.

The police said that the letter had been mailed from Kadeh, in Malaysia, to Dr. Arnold Schustermann, a deceased resident of the Nelly Sachs Home and the fiancée of the elderly woman.

REASSURES ARABS

LONDON — A Moscow radio Arabic broadcast assured its listeners that the Soviet Union was limiting the number of Russian Jews allowed to emigrate to Israel. "Jews can leave the Soviet Union like all other citizens but exit visas for Jews going to Israel are considered in relation to the Middle East situation," the broadcast said. It claimed that "There is no foundation to the recent reports in reactionary circles, Western and Arab, that there had been an increasing Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union." The broadcast said this was "a lie purveyed by the imperialists and their Zionist henchmen." According to Moscow radio "the number of Jews who have left the Soviet Union since 1945 does not exceed 21,000."
