

Rabbi Goren Rules Langers Can Marry As Proper Jews

TEL AVIV — Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren put an abrupt end last week to a religious controversy over a brother and sister who have been prevented by a rabbinical court from marrying their fiancés.

The former senior military chaplain who last month was elected Chief Rabbi of Israel's Ashkenazic, or Western, Jewish community, set up a panel of nine rabbinical judges to review the case of Sgt. Maj. Hanoeh Langer, who is 27 years old, and his sister Miriam, 26, who had been declared bastards, and ineligible for marriage, by a rabbinical court in Petah Tiqva, outside Tel Aviv.

Under rabbinical law, bastards are not children born out of wedlock but only those born of adultery. The Langer children had been designated as bastards because their mother had married their father, who is now dead, without having been divorced from Abraham Brokowsky, whom she had married in Poland.

The Langers could have gone abroad with their fiancés for civil marriages, as other Israelis have done to get around rabbinical difficulties, but they insisted on a solution that would leave their children unstigmatized.

Rabbi Goren announced that the panel, which included presidents of rabbinical courts, had signed a document admitting the brother and sister "to the assembly of the Lord." Accordingly, Rabbi Goren ruled they were eligible to marry Jews and a double wedding took place in a small hall here.

Had the Langers' ordeal not been brought to an acceptable end within the framework of rabbinical law, secularists in the Government would have pressed for the introduction of civil marriage in Israel to break the rabbinic's exclusive control over marriage.

The Langers' mother and her first husband separated during World War II. She reached Israel and married an Israeli. When her first husband turned up in Israel, the rabbinic recorded the marital situation.

Panel Decision Sparks Row Between Israel's Chief Rabbis

JERUSALEM — The controversial Langer case has sparked a bitter public row between Israel's newly elected chief rabbis over the nature of the rabbinical court that will try to find a halachic solution to the problem of Hanoeh and Miriam Langer. The brother and sister were branded mamzerim (illegitimates) by the rabbinic and forbidden to marry the partners of their choice.

Sephardi Chief Rabbi Ovadia Yosef claimed that he was given an ultimatum by Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren who, he said, threatened to "cut off all contact" with him and refuse to participate in a joint inaugural ceremony unless he agreed to adjudicate the Langer case in the manner proposed by Rabbi Goren. Rabbi Goren has denied that there was an ultimatum but Rabbi Yosef repeated the charge in an interview published in the Jerusalem Post. He said he would not agree to Rabbi Goren's proposal and resented his threats and ultimatum.

Rabbi Goren, who had pledged that one of his first tasks as Chief Rabbi would be to settle the Langer case which has aroused bitter feelings in Israel against the religious establishment, wanted Rabbi Yosef to join him and one other rabbinical judge on a special three-man court to re-hear the case. Rabbi Yosef insists that the case be heard by a regular rabbinical court with neither chief rabbi participating but with recourse of appeal to the Rabbinical Supreme Court on which both chief rabbis sit. Rabbi Goren refuses to sit with members of the Supreme Rabbinical Court who opposed his election and whom he considers personal enemies.

JFRI '72 Campaign Reaches $1,730,000

The 1972 campaign of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island now in progress has reached $1,730,000, it was announced today by Max Alperin, president of the Federation. This is an interim total and the campaign is far from completed, he said.

Mr. Alperin, in announcing the status of the campaign, said it is important to wind up the drive before the end of the year and set Friday, December 8, as the deadline for workers to complete their solicitation of cards. He said any cards uncovered at that time should be returned to Federation headquarters and they would then be reassigned for coverage.

In the Women's Division, the interim total has reached $279,500, which represents an increase over the same cards for last year. Mrs. Jacob Stone, campaign chairman for the Women's Division, said, however, that there are still in excess of 400 cards to be accounted for.

Marvin S. Holland, chairman of the Pace Setters Division, said that while a majority of cards have been accounted for there are still a number of prospects who have not yet made a pledge.

James Winoker and Alan Samdperil, cochairmen of the Providence Area Division, also urged their captains and workers to complete their cards by the December 8 deadline.

LASHES AT PIRACY

LONDON — Jeremy Thorpe, leader of Britain's Liberal Party, lashed out against air piracy in a speech here and proposed that Britain ban all flights to Libya until Libya ceases to harbor and sustain terrorists.

Israel, Uganda Figure In New York Court Case

NEW YORK — The embittered relations between Israel and Uganda figured in a court case here this week.

An Israeli contracting company obtained in State Supreme Court in Manhattan an order directing sheriffs in the state to attach any assets of Grindlays Bank (Uganda) Ltd. to satisfy the company's claim of $610,270.20.

Court papers filed for J. Zeevi & Sons, Ltd., which had done construction work in the East African country, said the company had made deposits in Uganda currency in Grindlays Bank last March against which letters of credit totaling $610,270.20 could be drawn here. The company charged that Grindlays, a British-owned commercial bank, had canceled the letters of credit because of the Uganda Government's "new policy of active anti-Semitism."

The order of attachment was signed by Justice Isidore Dollinger, Joseph P. Brennan, Undersheriff of New York City, said he immediately filed it with the main office of the First National City Bank of New York at 399 Park Avenue, where Grindlays Bank apparently has the principal assets in this country.

The Israeli company said it had made its deposits in Uganda shortly before April 9, when the Government of Gen. Idi Amin expelled the last of the Israeli diplomats, military advisers, technicians and dependents.

General Amin, who visited Israel three times in 1971, later broke with the Israelis, charging that they had encroached on Uganda's military and economic affairs. He is also said to have felt that his status as an African leader was being compromised by his close ties with Israel. Israel believes Libya encouraged the break.

Another factor is reported to be that Uganda owed more than $13-million in short-term debts to Israeli concerns constructing airfields, military barracks and housing projects and that Uganda did not have the money to pay the debt.

Court papers filed for the Zeevi company by Harry H. Lipsig and Pamfil A. Ripoanu, its lawyers here, stated that on April 17 the manager of Grindlays Bank in Kampala, Uganda, notified the Workers Bank in Haifa to cancel a letter of credit and "not to honor a withdrawal against it."

"The action taken by the bank of Uganda on instructions from the Uganda Government is, of course, embarrassing to us but you will appreciate that we have no option but to follow their instructions," the manager, J.H.G. Hendrie, wrote.

The Zeevi complaint contended that the cancellation of the letter of credit was "based upon a new Government-inaugurated and directed policy on forfeiture of foreign assets and property and a new policy of active anti-Semitism embarked upon by the Government of Uganda."

Court papers included as exhibits were news articles quoting General Amin as praising Hitler "for the killing of Jews."

Sheriff Brennan said that a court action of this kind was "not uncommon."

Arabs, Israelis Exchange Information In Chats Across Suez Canal

ALONG THE SUEZ CANAL, Israeli-Occupied Sinai — In the dark, moonless night, the voices carried easily over the still waters of the canal.

"Are you sleeping, Abraham?" a voice called in English from the Egyptian bank.

"No, just dreaming, Ali," came the answer from the Israeli side.

"Where is Illana?" the Egyptian voice continued. "I didn't see her today. You know how I miss her."

"She went south today," the Israeli soldier replied. "She'll be back, Ali."

This exchange and others like it have become part of the nightly routine in recent months along Israel's most placid cease-fire line: the Suez Canal. Fighting the boredom that afflicts them both, the Israeli and Egyptian soldiers manning the positions along the clogged and unused canal fill the still night with idle conversation.

The tenor of their talk has changed in recent months, according to senior officers here, and the change reflects the more relaxed atmosphere that has prevailed along the canal since July, when several thousand Soviet advisers and missile technicians were withdrawn from the Egyptian bank.

"The rancor has drained out of the conversations," a regional commander explained. "Before they used to curse one another and sometimes the arguments led to shooting. Now, it's small talk about their girl friends and their homes. The tension is gone."

In some cases, the soldiers have come to know each other well. The Israeli called Abraham (that is not his real name, but the name he uses with the Egyptian, who is probably not named Ali, either) told a visitor the other day that he has gradually learned a lot about Ali's family and life.

"He says he has eight brothers and sisters, which I believe," the soldier said, and two girl friends, one in Cairo, one in Alexandria, which I don't believe."

Illana is a Soldier

Illana, the Israeli explained, is the name the Egyptian has given to an Israeli woman soldier who visits the outpost frequently to give the bored soldiers instruction in leathercraft. She is a trim young woman, he said, and has caught the eye of Egyptian soldiers.

The two men sometimes talk politics during the quiet nights, but seldom seriously. Their exchange the other night was typical.

"When are you coming to see me in Tel Aviv?" the Israeli asked.

"When we liberate the Palestinian homeland," the Egyptian replied.

"I can't wait that long," the Israeli said.

"Tomorrow, Abraham, tomorrow," was the reply.

During the days, which are bright and crisp in November, the Israeli lookouts keep a close eye on the Egyptian bank, watching for reinforcements and troop movements.

Although there has been no fighting along the canal since the American-sponsored ceasefire went into effect on Aug. 7, 1970, the Egyptians have been waging a propaganda war across the waterway in recent months.

Broadcasts Across Canal

Using huge loudspeakers across from the Israeli strongpoints, they have been broadcasting polemical messages in Hebrew intended to weaken Israeli morale.

Most of the messages dwell on such issues as the conflict between the dark-skinned Oriental Jews and the lighter-skinned Ashkenazic, or European, Jews, and on the harsh weather in the Sinai Peninsula.

Recently, however, the broadcasts have become more sophisticated. Tapes have been played that purport to be the voices of some of the 10 Israeli pilots and airmen who have been held in Egypt since before the cease-fire.

The psychological-warfare effort seems to be having little or no effect on the Israelis. Most seem to regard the clumsily worded messages as comic rather than persuasive — a mild form of entertainment in a spot where amusement is scarce.

One colonel, a regional commander, dismissed the broadcasts as a farce. "These are highly motivated soldiers, many of whom fought hard to get to this bank of the canal," he said. "They're not going to be talked off it by recorded messages."

Hanukkah Torch Run To Finish At Center

The Jewish Community Center will conduct a Hanukkah Torch Run in memory of the Munich Olympics martyrs on Sunday afternoon, December 3.

A special torch, flown from Israel, will be landed at Green airport in Warwick after a flight from Kennedy airport in New York. At the airport, the torch will be greeted by Govern-elect Philip Noel and other dignitaries in the main airport lobby. Mr. Noel will then hand the torch to a relay of more than 50 runners who will carry the torch over a 10-mile route to the Center.

The route of the run will be: From the airport along Route #1 on Post Road to Elmwood Avenue; along Elmwood Avenue to Broad Street; through to Weybosset Street and the downtown area, turned left on Durand Street to Kennedy Plaza; continuing on Exchange Street to Memorial Square, across Washington Street; up College Hill on Waterman Street to Wayland Avenue and then turning left on Angell Street at Wayland Square and right on Elmgrove Avenue to the Center.

Arriving at the Center at approximately 4 p.m., the torch will be accepted by Center and government dignitaries. A prayer for the dead will be sung by Cantor Karl S. Kritz of Temple Beth Israel and then, with the appropriate blessings, the torch will be used to kindle the lights of the Center's Menorah.

The block of Elmgrove Avenue between Sessions and Savoy Streets will be blocked off to automobile traffic during the afternoon so as to provide space for spectators.

When in doubt, you need look no further for the perfect gift. The Herald subscription is one that is always appreciated for birthdays or holidays.

R.I. Women To Participate In Meeting On Soviet Jewry

A delegation of Rhode Island women will participate in a "Women's Plea for Human Rights for Soviet Jews" on Tuesday, December 12, in Boston, Massachusetts, from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon at Faneuil Hall, to focus attention on the plight of Soviet Jewry.

A similar conference will be held simultaneously in almost 50 cities across the country under the joint sponsorship of the Conference of National Jewish Women's Organizations and the National Conference on Soviet Jewry. The RI group will be led by Mrs. Frank Licht, who will be honorary chairman of the conference, and by Mrs. Max Alperin, president of the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island.

The Women's Conference will feature Mrs. Margaret Heckler, congresswoman; Mrs. Francis Sargent, Chaim Spivakofsky, a recent Soviet emigre, and Debbie Lipstadt, an American student recently returned from a trip to the Soviet Union, with Sonya Hamlin, hostess of the television talk show, "For Women Today," acting as chairman of the day.

In Rhode Island arrangements are being handled through the R.I. Conference on Soviet Jewry and the Jewish Community Relations Council of R.I., which is providing bus transportation to Boston. The bus will leave at 9:15 a.m. from the parking lot across the street from the Jewish Community Center, and will return to the same place at 1 p.m. Further information may be obtained by calling 421-4111.

Quarter-Century Later

Maybe the United Nations General Assembly was more prescient than it realized 25 years ago when it voted, with uncertainty and misgiving, to partition the troubled land of Palestine into separate but closely linked Arab and Jewish states.

In the wisdom of hindsight, that ill-fated design with its gerrymandered frontiers between two hostile peoples, was naive in the extreme — as much so as the self-deluding dream some Arabs now nurture of returning to this same partition scheme that their fathers so violently rejected in 1947.

Partition in its original form has been hopelessly superseded by three wars and a quarter-century of national construction, but a new Middle East generation has grown to appreciate the underlying concept of two national identities for two neighboring peoples. Liberals in Israel find themselves supporting Palestinian nationhood; the Arab press reports discussions in Cairo aimed at recognizing a Palestinian state for the occupied Gaza Strip and Jordan West Bank.

The Governments of Israel and the Arab states have grown accustomed to sending their armed forces into combat — last week it happened again on the Israel-Syrian frontier. Political positions have ossified, the United Nations itself has grown constrained by the numerical weight of its Arab bloc. As a politically polarized General Assembly opens yet another Middle East debate, it is doubtful that a sufficient majority could be mustered to pass the same far-sighted assessment that the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine made a quarter-century ago:

"The claims to Palestine of the Arabs and Jews, both possessing validity, are irreconcilable ... Both of these peoples have their historic roots in Palestine and ... both make vital contributions to the economic and cultural life of the country ... Only by means of partition can these conflicting national aspirations find substantial expression."

If partition is dead in the details of 25 years ago, the rationale behind it remains the still-unaccepted reality of the Middle East.

What Inflation Means to YOU

A pound of ordinary steak at a minimum of $2.68? A pack of cigarettes at a minimum of 85 cents? A stripped-down, medium-size car at a minimum of $4,937?

Yes. That's what these things will cost a mere 10 years from now — if prices continue to rise in this period at an average annual rate of only 3½ per cent.

A quart of milk at a minimum of 43 cents? A subway ride up to 50 cents? A nothing-special lipstick at $3.50?

Yes. That's what these things will cost by 1982 — if prices continue to rise in this decade at an average annual rate of only 3 per cent.

At a 3 per cent a year rise in prices, if you earn $11,500 today, you will have to be earning around $15,500 in 1982 and close to $21,000 in 1992 — just to be standing still in terms of your family's buying power.

At a 3½ per cent a year rise in prices, you will have to be earning more than $16,200 in 10 years and more than $22,800 in 20 years just to have the same buying power that an $11,500 family income has today.

A range of annual inflation averaging 3 to 3½ per cent is considered a realistic, conservative prospect by a broad consensus of experts in private industry and in Washington.

But while this range is no longer the galloping inflation of the late 1960s-early 1970s, it's far too high a rate to be completely accepted.

For the first crucial point is that today's higher prices are built on top of yesterday's higher prices and tomorrow's higher prices will in turn be built on today's.

In this sense, inflation is precisely like compound interest and you know how compounding can make anything grow.

A second crucial point is that inflation includes a hidden multiplier which transforms apparently modest increases in prices into eye-stopping increases over a comparatively short time. This is, in a basic sense, an extension of the compounding process.

A third key point is that inflation intensifies existing inequities in our social-economic structure and it is particularly murderous in its impact on those living on fixed incomes.

In fact, an annual rate of inflation in this range foretells an explosive crisis among retired persons as this decade wears on — unless major steps are taken to cushion the effect of the price hikes and to protect our older citizens.

Putting it more bluntly, if you are in your 20s or 30s or 40s, you can anticipate earning more and more money, as prices rise, and staying ahead of the rising cost of living.

But if you are in your 50s, 60s

THE HIDDEN LIGHTS

A STORY FOR HANUKAH

BY BERYL SEGAL

In the Cranberry country in Southern Massachusetts, on a rise in the middle of the bogs, stands a house. It is isolated from all the other houses in the vicinity, and it attracts the attention of the passerby on the country road. The house is sprawling on the hillside, with wings and annexes that seem to have grown on the main building — a house with two wings on it.

The main building is of white clapboard, with a door in the middle and two windows on either side. The white of the walls of the main building contrasts sharply with the black shutters and the black frame of the door. Another house, with separate entrance and also with black door and window shutters is on the right side of the main building. On the left side of the main building is a house of the architecture. They are separate houses, but connected to the Great House, as the main building is called. All three houses form a court resembling the letter Het of the Hebrew Alephbeth.

In the house standing in the front, facing the road, and in the houses forming the two legs of the Het, lives the Rodrigues family. The family consists of the grandparents, the parents and their married son and daughter.

The original house was built by the grandparents. They came from the South Sea Island and settled in the Cranberry country of Massachusetts. That was many years ago. Both, the husband and the wife, worked in the Cranberry Bogs, picking and packing and selling the berries.

When the first son was born to the Rodrigues, they built the first wing to the house. This is where the son will live when he gets married, they said.

This is how it was done in the Island where they came from. This is how it would be done in their new land.

When the second child was born, a daughter, the wing on the left was added. This is where the daughter will live with her husband when she gets married.

Now the house with its wings stands on the hillside, a good distance away from the road, commanding a beautiful view of the Cranberry Bogs which the family owns.

The Rodrigues family consists of eight people now, and promises to grow in numbers. They too will live in the same house on the Rodrigues property.

They will all live in the same house, building on and on to the Great House, as the original home of the Rodrigues is called by the family.

So it was done in their old home on the Island.

And another thing that was done in the Old Home is observed in the Rodrigues house.

Every Friday, when the sun sets on the Cranberry Bogs, mother Rodrigues and all the female members of the family gather in the cellar of the Great House. Mother Rodrigues opens a closet, takes out candles and lights them. They all stand and watch them for a while, and then they cover the burning light with a tall wicker basket and they ascend to the Great House for supper, at which the Rodrigues' grandfather presides.

This they observe every Friday, and none of them know why. All they know is that it was done in the family for hundreds of years.

Mother Rodrigues lights ten candles now. Two for herself and her husband. Two for their son and his wife. Two for their daughter and her husband. And two for the grandchildren. Every time a child is born to the Rodrigues family, grandmother lights a new candle.

But at one time of the year the grandfather himself goes down to the cellar with his sons and he lights eight candles. He pours oil from an old cruse into a lamp having eight cups. When all the eight oil wicks are burning the sons put the wicker basket over the burning lamp and come up to the house. This they did every year, a week before the coming of the new year. And they did not know why eight candles, and why in the cellar, nor why they covered the burning lights with the wicker basket.

This is the way it was done on the Island.

The custom goes back much further. It had its origin many hundreds of years ago. The forefathers of the Rodrigues lived in Portugal. There the King gave the Jews the choice of either converting to the church of the realm, or leaving the country altogether. The Rodrigues and hundreds of families with them chose the conversion. They became Catholics.

But secretly the Rodrigues family still kept the laws and traditions of their fathers. Secretly they kept the Sabbaths and the Festivals. Secretly they gathered in the cellars of their homes, behind closed doors and shuttered windows to worship. Secretly they remained Jews.

But as time went on the children forgot the faith of their fathers. They were pious Catholics like all the people of Portugal.

But the women still blessed the candles on Sabbath, and the men still kindled the lights on Hanukkah.

When the Rodrigues family left Portugal and came to the New World, the memory of the faith of their forefathers grew dimmer and dimmer. They were Catholics in their new homes. Catholic holidays were their holidays. Catholic Saints were the Saints of their home. They did not differ in anything from their Catholic neighbors.

But the Rodrigues observed two strange customs. The women kindled lights on Fridays, and the men poured oil from a cruse into tiny cups and lighted the wicks in them, one week before the New Year was approaching. And they covered these lights with a tall wicker basket.

Neither of the Rodrigues knew why and wherefore. They only knew that this is what they did in the South Sea Islands.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Dr. Stanford Moore, the corecipient of the Nobel Prize for chemistry, referred to the housing problem for young scientists and scholars in New York in his reply to Mayor Lindsay's congratulatory telegram: "To the extent that you and the agencies of the city government can make New York more livable, you are performing an invaluable service to the community and to the world" ... August Heckscher, the retiring city parks recreation and cultural affairs administrator, is giving an eight-session course on "The City and the Arts" at the New School.

At the first graduation ceremony of the new Hadassah Community College in Jerusalem, 74-year-old Prime Minister Golda Meir — alluding to her own rumored retirement — minimized the problem of finding her replacement. Referring to Hadassah's system of choosing a new president every four years, she said: "I have thousands of friends in Hadassah, and have never heard anyone say, 'What is going to become of us if she goes? There is nobody to succeed her.'"

David J. Mahoney, president and chairman of the board of Norton

Simon, is one of the 72 American businessmen visiting the Canton Fair as a guest of the Chinese government. He is also the chairman of Canada Dry and, during his trip, will discuss the purchase of oils, spices and ginger for the beverage company. In return, Mahoney said he is prepared to sell can-making machinery and formulas for nutritional soft drinks to the Chinese.

There is an unusual advertising campaign for Bellerophon Books' "Eat It," a cookbook by Dana Crum and Shery Cohen. The San Francisco publishing house arranged for a crop-duster to sky-write "Eat It" over the Golden Gate Bridge. Publisher Lawrence Knill explained: "We did it this way because the pilot is 75, the plane is 50 — and they both need the money." ... After attending a benefit performance of Applause in London, the Queen Mother told producer Alexander H. Cohen: "I am terribly proud of the dance skills of our British chorus." Lauren Bacall is the only American in the show.

Israel To Impose Stiffer Penalties

JERUSALEM — There are to be stiffer penalties for crimes of violence under an amendment to the Criminal Code ordinance which has been passed by the Knesset.

Harsher sentences are provided for protection racketeers, the suborning of witnesses, criminals using firearms and operating in gangs.

Minister of Justice Yaacov Shapiro said protection rackets are now rampant in Tel Aviv. Persons guilty of operating them would now receive a maximum sentence of five years imprisonment instead of one year in the past.

Criminals guilty of armed robbery or carrying weapons when burgling would receive twice the sentence imposed for such offences carried out without firearms. There has recently been a spate of bank robberies in the country.

Rape or sodomy carried out under the threat of arms will in future carry a maximum sentence of 20 years imprisonment.

Democrat, Republican Analyze National Election As They See It

NEW YORK — A leading Democrat and the former executive director of Concerned Citizens for the Reelection of the President analyzed the national election from their different vantage points at a workshop session at the 59th annual meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. The meeting, at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, brought together some 200 ADL leaders from all sections of the country.

The Democrat, Robert R. Nathan, a nationally prominent economist, said the election "tended to deepen cleavages among different groups, especially along the lines of color, material resources, and between groups of different philosophies and leanings."

Lawrence Y. Goldberg, formerly of Providence, asserted that one significant consequence of the election is that "Jews are no longer locked into the Democratic Party and must be considered a swing group." As Jews move into the mainstream of the two party system, he added, there is new potential for the Republican Party. "How well the Republicans realize this potential is a question that only time can answer."

Mr. Nathan, pointing out that 45% of eligible voters stayed away from the polls, went on to say that "any contention that the huge Nixon margin was a vote for conservative principles is fully refuted by the fact that the new Congress is more liberal than its predecessor."

The two men agreed that the presidential vote was more on personality than on issues. They voiced distress over a lack of focus on issues. No matter who is President, Mr. Nathan declared, "we cannot turn our backs on the country's fundamental problems which are more serious than lowering taxes."

Mr. Nathan said he had "grave misgivings" over the emphasis on "the Jewish vote and Jewish money" during the campaigns. He criticized what he called reported attempts of Israeli officials to influence the votes of American Jews and the use of Jewish organizational affiliations to identify supporters of political candidates as "carrying great dangers."

Mr. Goldberg, on the other hand, said he was not concerned that the focus on "the Jewish vote" would stimulate anti-Semitism. He attributed "the significant shift" of the Jewish voters to President Nixon to three basic factors: * The domestic scene, with Jews joining other urban dwellers in voting for "neighborhood stability," a term he preferred to "law and order." * The international situation, "not alone for Israel but also for the detente with Russia, the opening to China and the winding down of the Vietnam conflict." * The substantial difference between the two candidates.

He also noted that the shift to Mr. Nixon was most pronounced among middle and lower class Jews, greater in the neighborhoods than the suburbs and cut across all economic lines.

He commented, too, that the percentage of Jewish youth voted for the President was smaller than that of their elders while Orthodox Jews of all ages backed the Republican candidate in greater proportions than other segments of the Jewish community.

Mr. Goldberg agreed with Mr. Nathan that the increasing proportion of people who do not exercise their franchise represents a disturbing trend that is of urgent concern to both parties.

They also agreed that money was not the decisive factor in the electoral decision. Mr. Nathan pointed out that there was a bigger migration of Jewish contributions to Nixon than of voters.

Mr. Goldberg countered that nevertheless McGovern received greater financial support from Jews than did Nixon.

LAWRENCE Y. GOLDBERG

Mr. Goldberg also observed that although "liberals can no longer count on Jewish support automatically" he does not expect a large raft of Jewish conservatives to emerge as candidates on the Republican line.

He went on to say that even though he feels the election indicated that the terms conservative and liberal no longer have the connotations they previously did, Jews continue to be the most "liberal" in the accepted sense because, as a group, they did very well for McGovern.

Mr. Goldberg, former chairman of the New England Regional Board of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, has been elected as one of the six New England representatives to the National Commission of the ADL.

Prior to taking the position of executive director of Concerned Citizens for the Reelection of the President, he was active with the ADL in Rhode Island as chairman of its area committee of the New England Regional Board and was a member of the National Community Service and Urban Affairs Committees of ADL. He resigned his position as chairman of the New England Regional Board to take his assignment in Washington.

Mr. Goldberg was a well known communal leader in Rhode Island where he was extremely active with the General Jewish Committee serving as secretary of the board of directors, past president of the Young Adult Division and a member of the executive, allocations and community planning committees. (The General Jewish Committee is now the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island.)

An attorney, Mr. Goldberg is a graduate of Harvard Law School and has served as legislative counsel for the Small Business Administration in Washington, D. C.

Expect Guerrillas To Attack Alitalia

JERUSALEM — Sources here said that the next target of Arab terrorists may be Alitalia, the Italian airline.

The terrorist's intention would be to force Italian authorities to release two Arabs arrested at Rome Airport last summer after they tried to dupe two British girls into carrying a live bomb aboard an El Al airliner, the sources said.

Available information here also pointed to possible new attacks on Israeli targets with the objective of receiving maximum publicity, the sources said.

The reported that stringent security measures have been introduced at Israeli diplomatic missions and organizations abroad in close coordination with the security authorities of the host countries. The purpose is to secure Israeli Embassies, offices and individuals from possible attacks by terrorists, the sources said.

In many of these articles we have discussed so-called guesses and how often these are not really guesses at all. If one used all of the information available he would much more likely come up with the right answer than the wrong whereas a guess would mean right just half the time. Sometimes the information is more subtle to procure than other times when it actually screams at you. Today's hand was one of the more subtle ones for the successful Declarers who truly knew what they were doing had to delve deeply into what had happened to give out this knowledge.

Mrs. Allie Simons and Mrs. Helen Lehrer were North and South, North-South were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

E S W N
 P INT P 3NT

None of the pairs had any problem at all with the bidding and although I did not see this hand played every round I did see it enough times and every auction was identical. Also every West made the same lead, either the 3 or 2 of Clubs. This depended on whether they were leading their third or fourth best when they were on lead against a No Trump contract. The hand looked very automatic to almost every one of the Declarers. They could count five Diamond tricks, two high Spades, two high Clubs and the Heart Ace, ten tricks in all but was there a catch to this? Indeed there is for they had failed to take into consideration the fact that one of the opponents might have all three Diamonds to the Queen and in that case if the wrong high honor is played first a Diamond would have to be lost. Most of the Declarers, even with this in mind simply guessed whether to play the Ace from Dummy first or the King from their own hand. If they did guess to play that Ace first they would then lose a trick to the Queen.

How can they guess right and play the King first? This is how they should think about a problem such as this. First, they do have to realize there is a problem. Then they have to decide which of the opponents is more likely to have all three Diamonds. They might even decide which has to be the one. In this hand here is what the Declarer did consider: West had led a low Club, the seuce. Usually one leads from his longest suit in No Trump especially when there is no bidding to help him and obviously there wasn't. So if deuces usually indicate a four card suit West could have no suit longer than four cards and as a result could not possibly be void in Diamonds but East certainly could. Taking that into consideration Declarer played the King from her own hand first and was gratified and rewarded when West showed out and the Queen was now finessed easily. This Declarer made ten tricks. Some who "mis-guessed" that Queen made but three. A little deep? Not really. This is how Bridge should be played. If you don't want to think play "War" or some other game like it.

Moral: Clues are much more abundant than you might think. Almost every word spoken, bid made or not made, gesture or lead of a card or the other way around the failure to lead certain cards or suits can tell so much. Watch for these and many other signs. You will learn much.

TO HOLD SYMPOSIUM

A community-wide symposium will be conducted on Sunday, December 10, from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in the Sherman Union ballroom of Boston University, according to an announcement by Philip A. Bloom, Soviet Jewry week chairman for the New England Regional Alliance for Soviet Jewry.

The symposium, sponsored by the New England Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, will feature a presentation by Chaim Spivakovsky, a visiting scholar at Brandeis University.

Marshall Schneider will introduce and narrate the "Sights and Sounds of Simchat Torah," a multi-media presentation of his experiences in Moscow during the autumn of 1969. Mr. Schneider is vice chairman of the Soviet Jewry Committee of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston.

BOARD MEETING

The Shalom Chapter of Pioneer Women will hold a board meeting on Tuesday, December 5, at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Harold Cort of 56 Birchwood Lane, West Warwick.

NEW SINGLES CLUB

The New Single Adult Club meets every Sunday at the Lion's Den at 2255 Warwick Avenue, Warwick. Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Evelyn DelGiudice at 738-3687.

STUDENT OPERA

Orpheus in the Underworld, a comic opera about an Olympian musician forced to play cat-and-mouse with the gods, will be performed by the Brown Opera Workshop in Alumnae Hall at Brown University from Thursday, November 30, through Saturday, December 2.

It will be the first production of the year by the Brown Opera Workshop, a group formed a year ago to acquaint students with opera.

All performances will be at 8:30 p.m.

APPOINTED MEMBER

Lester J. Millman, associate professor of architecture at the Rhode Island School of Design, has been appointed a member of the National Committee on Urban Planning and Design of the American Institute of Architects for a one year term, beginning January 1, 1973.

LIMA — Because Jews in Latin America are considered part of the 5 percent of the population living in opulence, while 95 percent of the population is in need, Jewish communities are in an uncertain situation as Latin America seeks its new destiny — which may take a generation. That view was presented here by Dr. Isasac Goldenberg, president of the Latin American Jewish Congress. He addressed the sixth conference of Latin American Jewish communities.

Hello Again!
 News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

IN THE MIDST OF IT: The Providence College Friars are the best basketball team in New England according to a consensus of college coaches; the R.I. Reds are away on a six-game road trip while Ice Capades takes over the new Civic Arena; the Bowl Games are getting nearer; the Major League baseball men meet in Hawaii; and the Louisville Colonels will move to Pawtucket which means the International League will come back to Rhode Island. Snuff to create a case of indigestion.

McCoy Stadium. Good luck.

ROVING RAMBLER: Two women have inquired concerning the crowing of the Rooster at R.I. Reds games. "No, I will not tell you my name. Just say two women asked me to ask you," said one who asked me. The only way in which I can identify her is by mentioning that she sells fine "hot dogs." The next one mentioned in a phone call that she didn't hear the Rooster crowing. Such concern! When I asked who was calling, she replied, "Just say 'Narcissa'." ... Big time held for John L. "Johnny" Lewis last Sunday at Venus de Milo. More than 700 attended. The biography in the program mentioned that Johnny was an outstanding manager in the Tim O'Neil Baseball Leagues which should make the late "Sandlot King" happy, wherever he is, because he always named Mr. Lewis as one of the finest managers in the history of his leagues. Johnny is Executive Assistant to U.S. Senator Pell ...

TWICE BEFORE: Back when the International League and the American Association were classed as Double-A and not Triple-A, Providence was represented in one League and Louisville in the other. The famed Grays, with Babe Ruth as a pitcher, were International League champions in 1914. Louisville played in the American Association and although there never was a rivalry between the Grays and the Colonels, there was interest in the town that gave the "Slugger" its name when Eddie Doherty, a major league exec from Providence, became affiliated with the team. But anihoo, it's the return of the International League that is being discussed. And its the third time that a Rhode Island entry has been represented in that circuit.

NOT A PLUG — This is valuable information for you sometime when you desperately need it and not offered as a plug for the Star Pharmacy on Broad Street but proprietor Max Greenberg says he has been prompted to stay open until 2 a.m. again due to the popularity of the new Civic Arena, backers of which should be glad to know that the Center is bringing business ... Why do drivers become so mean when they get behind the wheel and don't budge an inch to let someone out of a street blocked by traffic? And why do they continually pass on the right? Isn't there a law against it, enacted for their own safety? ... People who work in restaurants should stop flipping loose locks around.

THE OTHER TIME: When the champion Grays were in the International fold, they played home games at Melrose Park, one of the finest minor league fields in the nation and what a pity it had to go; to make room for what improvement? Get the old timers talking about that time — Ruth, Carl Mays, the Onslows and others who were outstanding in the major leagues later. The old International League breathed its last sometime before the 20s and the next time it invaded the Rhode Island field was in 1925 when it played at Kinsley Park and when another immortal was in his embryonic stages. He would be Jimmy "Double-X" Foxx who was a catcher on the Providence team of that era. And now, for the third time, along comes the International League which is different than it was and which will play at SOUNDS ODD IN HOCKEY: "At defense, Jim Ivison, called up from Cape Cod." He came to the R.I. Reds, bringing a different fame from the Cape ... Only two bowlers have ever received the "Gold Key Award" from Connecticut sportswriters — Nick Tronsky and Ed Feustel. Seventy-six from other fields have been honored. The 1973 National Duckpin Tournament will be named for Feustel ... Congrats and CARRY ON!

Labor Israel Plans To Raise $5 Million

NEW YORK — An economist has warned that fund-raising on behalf of Israel would lose its "appeal and moral justification" unless Jewish organizations placed greater emphasis on Israel's social purposes and human achievements.

Leon H. Keyserling, who was re-elected president of the National Committee for Labor Israel at its annual conference in the Commodore Hotel, addressed 1,500 of the committee's delegates.

say we cannot afford to build a just society because we need funds for national defense. Others say we cannot afford a strong national defense because we need funds for a just society. Israel bears its social and defense needs together because it has moral purpose and true political values."

Bernard B. Jacobson, executive director of the campaign, announced that $5-million would be sought in 1973 to help Histadrut's social welfare, vocational and educational programs.

He said that insufficient stress was being placed on such matters as Israel's educational system, trade schools, health services, integration of immigrants and development and management of economic enterprises.

Mr. Keyserling, who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Administration of President Harry S. Truman, said it was imperative for "young Americans, Jews and non-Jews, to look at what Israel is doing in social purposes."

$5-Million for Histadrut
 "In America," he added, "some

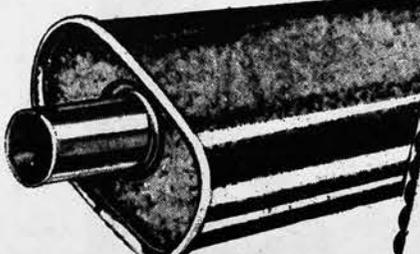

'Fundamental Right' Sought
 Dr. Sol Stein, chairman of the Israel Histadrut Foundations, said an additional $5-million would be sought through wills and legacies.

Histadrut is Israel's general labor federation. The National Committee for Labor Israel serves as the fund-raising arm for Histadrut's programs in this country and Canada.

In a resolution, the delegates called on Soviet officials to "abolish the diploma tax, which is a barbaric, medieval form of extortion."

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Improving Prospects
At Control Data

Q: I own 20 shares of Control Data (NYSE) for which I paid 137½. I am wondering if it will ever get that high again. E.B.

A: Some price recovery would appear to be in store for Control Data, although it is difficult to perceive a rebound on the order you suggest. Earnings have demonstrated a strong recovery trend since the 1970 deficit. For 1972, $3.90 a share seems a reasonable expectation in view of contributions from the now profitable computer division. For next year, this division should account for a larger share of profits. An improved product mix, with outright computer sales growing in importance, should broaden margins and significantly boost earnings of the computer division. Also important in the 1973 picture is the turnaround projected for the 50%-owned Ticketron affiliate.

On the negative side is the loss of a computer contract with General Motors and an FTC complaint against Commercial Credit. However, neither factor is expected to have serious impact according to management. Unless interest rates soar, and given the current anti-inflation posture of the Administration this is unlikely, earnings should continue their strong recovery through 1973.

Q: I have a considerable number of shares of Synalloy Corporation (ASE) purchased at $15. The shares have settled in the $6.50-$7.00 range recently. Do you foresee any recovery in the near future? H.S.

A: With earning recovery now apparently begun, price action should also improve its tone. In the fiscal year ended September 30, 1972, net moved ahead 12% as profits surged 50% in the fourth quarter. New product development costs, which had penalized profit margins in the first half, are now behind. One of the new and potentially promising product developments, is a dyeing machine, "Crossfire" for double-knit fabrics. Synalloy also produces dyes, with a new line specifically designed for polyester fabrics, and other products for the textile, chemical and paper industries. With the outlook for these areas improving, Synalloy's operations should gather momentum. Shares are worth holding.

Coal Mining Doldrums
Plague Suppliers

Q: Would you please give me your opinion of Joy Manufacturing (NYSE)? The stock is now trading at about half what I paid for it. I am wondering if I should try to average out or sell and take the loss. C.T.

A: For a number of reasons the latter course would appear to be the wisest at this time. Earnings for the fiscal year ended September 30 dropped sharply despite an 8% gain in sales. An eight-week strike, cost-overrun problems and reduced shipments of mining equipment were responsible for the low level of profits. Some 50% of sales and 65% of pretax income is derived from the mining systems equipment division with the bulk of sales to the coal industry. Near term, the outlook for this industry is clouded by higher wage and safety costs, with no price increases in sight to cover the increased expenses. As a result, orders for new mining equipment have been postponed.

Because the national demand for coal is expected to grow 80% by 1985, the long term outlook for Joy Manufacturing is more promising than for the next six to 18 months.

Q: My husband and I are retired, have $40,000 in savings at 5¼%-5½%. We need more income but wish to retain maximum safety. Would you suggest some higher rated bonds to return 9%? E.H.

A: At current interest rate levels, a 9% return entails more risk than you should assume. While some moderate upturn in these rates is anticipated over the next few months, the threat of government controls will undoubtedly limit the amount. There are several A-rated debt issues available which suit your needs. For example Dayton-Hudson Corporation 9-3/4s of 1995 yields 8.6% currently, 8.4% to maturity and carries an A rating. In a short-term AA-rated bond, Beneficial Corporation 9-3/8s of 1978 offers an 8.6% current return with yield to maturity at 7.5%.

Merger A Plus
For Natural Gas Supplier

Q: In view of the pending merger of Pioneer Natural Gas (NYSE) into Houston Natural Gas (NYSE) would you advise holding or selling? F.M.

A: The merger, if completed, is to your advantage as a shareholder of Pioneer, unless of course, you are in need of income. Pioneer currently yields 4.4% versus 1.2% on Houston. At current trading levels the proposed exchange rate of 2½ of Pioneer for each Houston share allows growth-minded investors to acquire the latter shares at a 16% discount. Houston has compiled an excellent record; earnings have grown 12% annually compounded over the last five years, with cash flow expanding 15.5% in the same period. My advice would be to retain these shares in anticipation of the merger being completed.

Q: In February of this year I purchased 1,000 shares of Detroit Edison (NYSE) at 21-1/8. Should I continue to hold or should I sell the shares? H.B.

A: Although some major problems still remain, Detroit Edison's new chief officer, William G. Meese, has solved many long-standing difficulties in his year of stewardship. Cutbacks in the work force, abandonment of a costly re-development project, improvement of the company's public image and reversal of the earnings slide are some of his accomplishments. Increasing interest and fixed charges as well as dilution from common stock offerings resulted in a 16% decline in earnings over the five year period through 1971; this, despite a 52% gain in revenues during those five years. However, in the first nine months this year, earnings moved ahead 32% on an 11% rise in revenues. In part this reflected the $45.2 million in rate relief granted this summer.

Construction costs of up to $2.5 billion in the next five years will have to be financed 75% by common, preferred and debt securities. This burden plus the protracted struggles for rate increases may dampen price action in the shares. Nonetheless, the generous 6.7% return and low price/earnings multiple makes Detroit Edison shares a worthwhile holding for income investors.

Kidnappers Abduct Wrong Man In Beirut

PARIS — A 65-year-old Lebanese Jew kidnapped in the center of Beirut has been released. Selim Halam was reportedly abducted by two armed men from the musical instrument shop in which he was working and was driven away in a waiting car. Lebanese police sources, quoted by reliable Jewish sources, say that the man was returned to his home. Apparently he had little worthwhile information for the police.

It is believed that Halam was kidnapped by Palestinian terrorists after having been mistaken for someone else. The kidnappers apparently realized their mistake and returned Halam.

Herald Recipes

APPLE SAUCE AND COTTAGE CHEESE PANCAKES

1 cup (1/2 lb.) small-curd cheese
2 eggs
1 jar (25 oz.) apple sauce
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup flour
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
Oil for frying

Combine cottage cheese and eggs and beat until well mixed. Stir in 1-1/2 cups apple sauce, sugar, cinnamon and salt. Add flour and baking soda, mixing well. Heat oil in a large skillet. Use about 2 tablespoons of batter for each pancake and cook each side until golden. Serve with rest of apple sauce. Makes about 20 small pancakes.

POTATO LATKES

4 large potatoes, peeled
1 medium onion
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons flour (approx.)
Oil for frying

1 jar (15 oz.) apple sauce
Coarsely grate potatoes into a mixing bowl; drain off excess liquid. Grate onion into bowl; add eggs, salt and pepper. Stir in just enough flour so that batter holds together. Heat about 1/4 inch oil in a large skillet and drop in potato mixture by tablespoons. Fry pancakes brown and crisp on both sides. Serve with apple sauce. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CURRIED APPETIZER MOLD

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup cold water
1 1/2 cups hot vegetable broth
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon curry powder
Sprinkle gelatin on water to soften. Dissolve softened gelatin in hot vegetable broth; chill 45 to 60 minutes or until mixture is consistency of unbeaten egg white. Mix together remaining ingredients until smooth. Fold mayonnaise mixture into gelatin mixture; turn into 3-cup mold. Chill about 4 hours or until firm. Unmold and serve as an hors d'oeuvre spread, appetizer salad or main dish accompaniment. Makes 6 (1/2 cup) servings.

FISH-CHEESE FILLING

1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 pound halibut or flounder, poached and flaked
2 ounces Roquefort cheese, crumbled
Stir together mayonnaise, fish and cheese. Chill. Serve in lettuce cups or spread on toasted English muffins or toast. To serve sandwiches hot, broil 2 to 3 inches from source of heat about 3 minutes or until lightly browned and heated through. Makes 2 cups filling or enough for 4 sandwiches. Stuffed Mushrooms: Follow directions for Fish-Cheese Filling. Spoon into 1 1/2 pounds fresh medium-size mushroom caps. Broil 2 to 3 inches from source of heat about 8 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes about 30 to 32 stuffed mushrooms.

AVOCADO-HERRING SPREAD

1 jar (16 oz.) pickled herring tidbits, drained & finely chopped
2 medium avocados, peeled and mashed
2 hard cooked eggs mashed
1 small onion, finely minced
1/4 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Mix all ingredients together. Serve on crackers or party rye bread. Makes about 3 1/2 cups.

PEPPY POTATO SALAD

1 tablespoon celery seed
1 1/2 teaspoons mustard seed
3 tablespoons vinegar
1/2 cup, finely chopped green onion
1 tablespoon sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
5 cups diced cooked potatoes
2 hard cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
Soak celery seed and mustard seed in vinegar several hours or overnight. Add green onion, sugar and salt to seed mixture. Add potatoes and eggs and mix lightly. Toss with mayonnaise and chill thoroughly. Makes 6 servings or 5 1/2 cups.

Newspaper Criticizes Israeli Censorship

TEL AVIV — An influential independent daily, Haaretz, criticized Israeli press censorship and described it as "outdated" and "one of the most strict in the world."

The criticism came after a Government ban on publication of reports to the Cabinet on the situation on the Syrian-Israeli front by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, and the Chief of Staff, Gen. David Elazar.

The censorship, the newspaper said, infringed on the freedom of the press.

"It happens too often that Israeli censorship is outdated and bans publication of news that could have been regarded as being in the realm of security 20 years ago."

Find Remains Of Herod Palace

JERUSALEM — The remains of a 2,000-year-old Herodian palace, complete with swimming pool, chariot race track and apartments for royal guests, have been uncovered near Bethlehem.

The ruins surround the hilltop Herodion, a fortress-like construction overlooking Bethlehem built by Herod in the first century B.C.

An Israeli archeologist who uncovered the ruins displayed a large swimming pool and a 300-yard terrace that was probably a race track.

The ruins have been damaged over the centuries by land cultivation and by passing camel caravans, and little is left of the once splendid palace, Ehud Netzer, the archeologist, said.

Several brief Hebrew inscriptions, still undeciphered, were found on pottery fragments.

LESTER A. SHAPIRO

Funeral services for Lester A. Shapiro, 50, of 32 Susan Drive, Cranston, who was fatally stricken on Tuesday, were held Thursday at Temple Sinai. Burial was in Sinai Memorial Park.

The owner and operator of Plantations Auto Parts of Cranston, he was the husband of Ruth (Freiberg) Shapiro.

He was a graduate of Brown University, class of 1949. A member of Temple Sinai of Cranston, he was a member of the Temple Sinai School Committee and a member of the Overseas Lodge, F&AM.

Mr. Shapiro was an Army Air Corps veteran of World War II and attained the rank of first lieutenant. He served in Europe and was awarded five medals. In 1949 he won the Rhode Island Table Tennis Championship at Brown University.

He was born in Providence, a son of David Shapiro of Cranston and the late Sally (Taber) Shapiro, and had been a Cranston resident for 16 years.

Besides his wife and father, he is survived by four sons, Donald, Morton, Mitchell and Louis Shapiro, all at home, and a brother, Robert Shapiro of Cranston.

Children's Theatre
Opens December 10

The Jewish Community Center's 1972-73 Children's Theatre Series will open Sunday afternoon, December 10, at the Center social hall with the presentation of Pepito's Story by the Merry-Gornders.

The first of three programs that will be presented by the series this year, Pepito's Story is the dramatization of the book by Eugene Fern, adapted by Rhode Levine, author of children's book and choreographer. Songs in the production are from Hy Zaret's album, It Could Be a Wonderful World.

The Center's Children's Theatre Series is among Rhode Island's oldest continuous children's entertainment experiences, begun in 1954. Admission is open by season ticket only to all children of school age and their parents.

On January 28 the Children's Theatre will present the Performing Arts Repertory Theatre in Young Abe Lincoln and on March 25, the Pickwick Puppet Theatre will present Cinderella.

Senior Youth Group
To Play This Sunday

Ten young musicians from Providence will take part in the first concert of the 1972-73 season of the Rhode Island Senior Youth Orchestra on Sunday, December 3, at 3 p.m. in Roberts Hall at Rhode Island College.

The musicians are Susan Florry, oboe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Florry; Shirley Francis, violin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Francis; James Hubbard, bassoon, son of Mrs. Leslie K. Hubbard; Henry Kowalski, violin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kowalski; Eleanor Stover, cello, daughter of Mrs. Luisa R. Stover; Susan Thomas, flute, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley B. Thomas; Barbara Trapassi, violin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Trapassi.

Also, Eric D. Weiner, violin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome H. Weiner; Ellen White, violin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. White, and Kevin White, oboe, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. White.

Martin Fischer will conduct the program.

Bikel Urges Jane Fonda Not To Attend Festival

NEW YORK — Theodore Bikel urged actress and peace activist Jane Fonda not to attend a Palestinian film festival in Baghdad, because her presence "would most certainly be construed as endorsement of such obscenities as the Munich massacre."

"Variety" reported that Miss Fonda had been invited to the "First World Festival on Palestine Films and Programs" scheduled for March, and that many of the

"We'd rather read about the present." ... At the Pub Theatrical party afterward, Harry Belafonte was asked how he keeps so slim and trim. "My diet is an easy one," he said, "lots of aggravation."

Cornelius Ryan's new book, "The Bridge Too Far," which Simon & Shuster will publish in the spring, deals with a great air drama of World War II. His wife, Kathryn Morgan Ryan, is the author of "The Betty Tree," published by Trident Press ... LeRoy Nieman asked Lana Cantrell to pose for him several weeks ago. The singer was so pleased with the result that she is using the art work for posters announcing her engagement at the St. Regis Maisonette.

Ruth Lief joked about being the daughter of a well-known person. "The greatest advantage," she said at the Russian Tea Room, "is that I get the best tables in restaurants." The daughter of S. or 70s, how much of an increase in earning power can you anticipate? And if you live out just an average life span, what will happen to your carefully prepared retirement plans as you age?

Our Social Security System is being geared to deal with aspects of this problem via automatic adjustments in benefits as the rate of rise in living costs hits the 3 per cent-plus range. But much more can be and must be done — and soon.

Here are illustrations of how an annual rate of price rise of 3½ per cent would affect you in 10 years, put together for me by Judy Smith, research analyst for The Conference Board.

A family income of $11,500 in 1972 would rise to $16,222 in 1982. But along with it a weekly food budget of $50 in 1972 would rise to $70.53 in 1982; a quart of milk priced at 32 cents in 1972 would rise to 45 cents in 1982; a pound of steak priced at $1.90 in 1972 would rise to $2.68 in 1982.

A package of cigarettes priced at 60 cents in 1972 would rise to 85 cents in 1982; a mink coat priced at $5,000 in 1972 would rise to $7,053 in 1982; lipstick priced at $2.50 in 1972 would rise to $3.53 in 1982; a car priced at $3,500 in 1972 would rise to $4,937 in 1982; a refrigerator priced at $275 in 1972 would rise to $387.91 in 1982.

A subway ride that cost you 35 cents in 1972 would rise to 50 cents in 1982; a hospital room billed at $100 in 1972 would rise to $141 in 1982; a year's tuition priced at $3,000 in 1972 would rise to $4,232 in 1982.

most certainly be construed as endorsement of such obscenities as the Munich massacre," Bikel said in his telegram.

"In the name of Jews whose credentials in the peace movement should command your attention, I earnestly beg you not to give support to the murderers of our people." He signed the wire as co-chairman of the Congress' Governing Council.

Only In America

By Harry Golden

A Golden Plan

Here it is, my friends, the Golden Plan to Eliminate Anti-Semitism.

First I must have the cooperation of the three rabbinical associations representing the Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform congregations of America; the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the B'nai B'rith, the Jewish War Veterans, the Jewish Labor Committee, the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, and the Workmen's Circle.

The first step in implementing the plan is for all these organizations to issue a joint declaration as follows: "At the very first sign of any overt anti-Semitism in the United States, we shall recommend to our memberships that all the Jews in America become Christians, en masse, overnight."

Now here is what would happen. The Jews of America are now mostly in the middle class or upper middle class. Naturally the majority would seek membership in the Episcopalian and Presbyterian churches.

The prospect of five million Jews applying for membership in the middle-class Protestant churches would be the greatest social threat in all history.

The result: The Episcopalians and the Presbyterians would organize a strong Anti-Defamation League. They would go from door to door whacking anti-Semites on the head: "Shh, you don't know what you're saying."

Movies for Adults Only

I had a long talk with the operator of an art theater.

He plays the Alec Guinness pictures, and most of the good English, Italian, French and Swedish films. For most of these pictures he draws an audience of "regulars," but when he adds the phrase "For Adults Only" to an advertisement, he attracts many whom he sees only once in a great while.

And they come out of the show mad — hopping mad — angry as all get-out. Their indignation knows no bounds! "What do you mean, 'Adults only'?" There was nothing in that picture!"

In one film, particularly, a Swedish movie, there was one of these Hedy Lamarr sequences where a nude girl runs through the woods, but it all happens very quickly, and anyway the shot was taken at a considerable distance from the subject.

Many of the audience came out immediately after this frustrating sequence and demanded their money back. "Why that was just a flash. There was nothing to that!"

What they wanted, of course, was a close-up, or at least for the gal not to run so darn fast. But they keep coming. They probably figure that someday that gal may go sprawling over a stump and they want to be in on it.

Meanwhile, the art-theatre operator has adopted a new system. As soon as the "adult" film begins, he puts his hat on and goes home.

LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET, a mystery-musical-comedy, is the next offering of the Trinity Square Repertory Company which opened on Wednesday, November 22. Kate Young, above, has the title role in one of two productions of the piece which will be performed simultaneously at the Playhouse in Providence and in locations throughout New England.

Lady Audley's Secret Purely Entertaining

Trinity Square Repertory Company presents Lady Audley's Secret, a musical comedy adapted by Douglas Seale from a novel by Mary Elizabeth Braddon, with music by George Goehring and lyrics by John Kuntz. Directed by Word Baker; with music direction by Richard Cumming; set design by Robert D. Soule; light design by Roger Morgan, and costume design by Sunny Warner. The cast:

Phoebe	Cynthia McKay
Luke	William Damkoehler
Lady Audley	Kate Young
Sir Michael Audley	Donald Somers
Alicia	Ann Sachs
Capt. Robert Audley	Robert Black
Mr. George Talboys	Timothy Crowe
Chairboy	David Kennett
Jake	Jason Phillips
Joe	Vernon Graham
Jim	John Saunders
Jason	Richard Jenkins
Polly	Mina Manente
Sue	Jane MacDonald

Mary (The first six roles are played in a second company by Georgia New, Robert J. Colonna, Barbara Orseon, David C. Jones, Leta Anderson, Richard Kavanaugh and George Martin, respectively. About eight members of the chorus are not listed in the program.)

Trinity's third production this season is a musical melodrama that is set becomingly, costumed effectively, and played with great charm. It has no redeeming social significance; it is purely entertaining.

The plot is standard — a beautiful young woman marries a rich old man, whose daughter is not very happy with her new stepmother. The daughter is even less happy when her cousin and suitor, a dashing captain, begins to fall in love with the stepmother. Lady Audley seems to have more than one secret, as her maid, the black-guard married to the maid, and a long-lost friend of the captain take their places on the stage. Only at the curtain song is the real secret revealed, which Lady Audley has concealed so carefully from everyone.

Kate Young is bewitching as the young Lady Audley, whose every gesture is a graceful burlesque of the mannered Victorian era. Miss Young was an attractive actress as a Pembroke student not very long ago, but her stage presence, ease, poise, and gaiety now betray a polish that was only beginning to be apparent then, when one critic compared her to a young Angela Lansbury. Now she is the focus and backbone of a colorful comedy that has vigor, wit, good stage movement, and lively songs, but that would flounder if Lady Audley were not superbly portrayed.

Aby seconding Kate Young is Robert Black, the handsome captain whose pure white uniform proclaims his purity of heart. Black's bird-watching moments and the stepdaughter's horsey snuffle (Ann Sachs manages to look rather like a horse at that moment) are among the unexpected charms of the production. Sir Michael is lovably portrayed by Donald Somers, and David Kennett's handling of his wheelchair varies from broad to subtle comedy. But everyone is satisfactory in this well-paced, well-directed show, which at times seems to combine the best of Gilbert and Sullivan, Nellie the Farmer's Daughter, and three-ring circus. Among the several amusing songs was The Audley Family Honor, an achingly funny and spirited rendition that pulled out all the stops (somehow, Lady Audley's Secret cries out for clichés). Richard Cumming not only did a fine job of musical direction but added some broad effects to his onstage-piano playing.

Some evenings at Trinity have been just plain fun. All to Hell Laughing and Taruffe were, and a few others, Lady Audley's Secret among them. Thanks to many things going right, the company should have a hit on its hands.

LOIS ATWOOD

WILL HARM ARABS

LIMA — Louis Pincus, chairman of the Jewish Agency and World Zionist Executives, has said terrorism was not impeding Israel's progress and would ultimately harm only Arab interests.

Notes Increase in Anti-Semitism; Lessening Of Concern By Public

NEW YORK — A marked increase in anti-Semitic propaganda and activities in the last two years — accompanied by diminishing public concern about anti-Semitism — bears "disturbing implications for the security of American Jewry," the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith reported here.

The findings of an investigation of manifestations of anti-Semitism in the United States were reported to the delegates attending the league's 59th annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel by Lawrence Peirez, chairman of the agency's fact-finding committee.

Mr. Peirez and Arnold Forster, the league's general counsel, who conducted the survey, said that anti-Semitism "is no longer largely limited to the far right of the political spectrum but now comes from the far left, from otherwise respectable sources and from extremist segments of other minority groups."

Arabs and Russians

They said that a "major component is the heavily increasing flow of Arab and Soviet propaganda," and that a "major trend is the use of euphemisms such as the terms "anti-Zionist" and "anti-Zionism" when "anti-Jewish" and "anti-Judaism" are really meant."

The survey found, they said, that "while there was keen sensitivity to anti-Semitism following the Nazi period, many reputable individuals and institutions, including Government agencies, today are indifferent or callously disregard the concerns, feelings and interests of the Jewish community." The report did not cite specific Government agencies.

Detailing the survey's findings, Mr. Peirez said that a hate campaign was insinuated into the national elections by right-wing and left-wing extremists against Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser.

Attack on Kissinger

The right-wing press, according to the survey, made attacks against Mr. Kissinger that, Mr. Peirez said, "ran the entire gamut of anti-Jewish publications in the United States." These were listed as Thunderbolt, Common Sense, Herald of Freedom, the Washington Observer, and The American Mercury. Mr. Peirez said that Mr. Kissinger was at times inaccurately described as "the son of a rabbi."

In addition, the survey found, the John Birch Society, the Liberty Lobby and the Christian Crusade "frequently and gratuitously referred to Mr. Kissinger as Jewish in their attacks on him."

The league's survey, Mr. Peirez said, indicated the American Communist party and the Socialist Workers party who engaged in bitter anti-Israel appeals."

'Destruction of Israel'

The Socialist Workers party, he said, "called for the outright destruction of Israel; the Communist party stopped short of that extreme, but just barely." "The positions of both parties regarding Israel and Jews," the survey concluded, "have crossed the line into outright anti-Semitism."

In contending that a number of extremist groups had used the 1972 elections to advance anti-Jewish purposes, the league said that foremost among them was the American party and its Presidential candidate, Joh G. Schmitz.

The league charged that Mr. Schmitz and his running mate, Tom Anderson, had based their campaign on a book, "None Dare Call It Conspiracy" which the John Birch Society distributed to six million Americans during the campaign.

"The book," Mr. Peirez said, "is saturated with anti-Semitism of the kind disseminated by anti-Jewish propagandists for more than 50 years."

The Arts In Israel

Several Films Being Produced; Artists' Colony In Jerusalem

JERUSALEM — Atop the Nabotean ruin of Avdat, deep in the Negev Desert, Jesus was being crucified to a throbbing rock score. Eighty miles to the north, in an ersatz western town on the outskirts of Tel Aviv, Gregory Peck and Desi Arnaz Jr. were staging a classic chase scene. In Jerusalem, Paddy Chayefsky was making notes for a film he plans to shoot here next spring about Palestine under the British mandate, and at Lod Airport, Melvyn Douglas was arriving to star in a film written by Ephraim Kishon, the Israeli Art Buchwald.

The crucifixion, of course was the climactic scene of the rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar," which is being shot on location here by Norman Jewison, the man who put "Fiddler on the Roof" on screen.

Messrs. Peck and Arnaz are the principals in "Billy Two Hats," a traditional western being shot in a newly constructed frontier movie village in Petah Tikva, a Tel Aviv suburb.

These are two of the nine major foreign features that are being shot on location in Israel. The flurry of film-making is the result of a determined bid by the Government here to make Israel a major location for foreign producers, just as Spain has been for the last 15 years. The natural assets here are the near-constant sunshine, varied terrain, and, as Mr. Kishon has put it, "a nation of born character-actors."

To this the Israelis have added a substantial lure: a flat 25 per cent rebate on all foreign currency exchanges by foreign film companies. Thus, a film budgeted for $1-million can be shot here for $750,000, with the Government making up the difference. Attracted to this cut rate, foreign film producers will spend $3-million here this year.

Harry Golden

Demonstrating confidence in the insatiability of the public appetite for westerns, a group of foreign investors has constructed a traditional western lot, complete with swinging doors on the saloon and the inevitable hotel, for rent to foreign producers. "Billy Two Hats" is their first customer but several more "Matzoh westerns," as they have already become known, are scheduled for next year.

How is Israel as a place to shoot movies? "Good and bad," Mr. Jewison observed the other day. "Good in the sense that the Government is bending over backwards to make it easy for us. Bad in that they are short on many of the basic necessities, such as experienced technicians and a reservoir of props."

"Israel right now is where Spain was 10 years ago," he said. "But from the way they are going at it, they won't take 10 years to catch up."

With its cast of 50, crew of 150 and high expectations, "Jesus Christ Superstar" is the most ambitious of the current productions. Mr. Jewison and his youthful troupe (no one in the cast is over 26) have been filming here since August at over 30 locations on a budget of $3.5-million.

Their goal is a treatment of the now-familiar rock opera that is, in Mr. Jewison's words, "reverent and cynical at the same time."

The stress will be on the continuity of the past with the present, suggesting that what happened 2,000 years ago could happen again today. The point will be driven home, perhaps with a heavy hand, by costumes that mix the ancient and modern (centurions in Roman helmets over fatigue pants and boots carrying Uzzi sub-machine guns.) and 20th-century props such as the Israeli jets and tanks.

As it was on the stage, the central conflict of the screenplay is the relationship between Jesus and Judas. Judas, played by Carl Anderson, the black actor who dominated the Los Angeles stage production, is portrayed as the most clear-thinking and realistic of the apostles who saw Jesus being swept away by his own popularity and wanted to bring him back to reality.

"Judas was the only one who maintained a clear head," Mr. Anderson said during a break in the shooting of the crucifixion scene. "His aim was to bring about a confrontation between Jesus and the Romans, not to betray Jesus, and he hanged himself when everything went wrong."

The film tries to avoid a definitive comment on the divinity of Jesus, but there is no doubt in the mind of Ted Neeley, the 28-year-old Texan who also played the title role in the Los Angeles production, that he is portraying a man, not God.

"The stress is on the humanity of Jesus, not his sanctity," Mr. Neeley said. "In that way it's different from the stage version. To me, Jesus was a great, charismatic leader, theologian and thinker, but not God. He was a man who got beyond himself and went too far."

All the principals in the film are aware of the controversy their interpretation of the Biblical tradition is likely to cause, and they don't seem to relish the prospect. "My hope is that the audiences will take this for what it is," Mr. Jewison said. "An opera, not history. These kids are trying to take Jesus off the stained-glass window and get him down on the street. Some people aren't going to like that."

On a hill in the heart of Jerusalem, a long, low building that was built 112 years ago by Sir Moses Montefiore as the first housing for Jews outside the walled old city, is about to begin a new existence. Through the patronage of William J. Levitt, the builder, it is being transformed into a unique living and working colony for internationally famous artists.

Isaac Stern, the violinist, is scheduled to spend three months there next summer giving a series of masters classes for aspiring violinists; Saul Bellow is expected to do a stint of writing and lecturing, and Peter Brook has been invited to come for a period and do something with the new Jerusalem Theater.

The idea for a transient artists colony came from Teddy Kollek, the indefatigable Mayor of Jerusalem, who has done more to promote the arts in this city than any other individual. Looking for a site, he settled after the 1967 war on the building, known as "Mishkenot Shaananim," or roughly, "House of the Lovers of Peace."

The handsome, once elegantly carved building was in a state of major disrepair after the war. For the previous 20 years it had been located flush on the cease-fire line with Jordan and occupied by squatters. With the aid of a $1-million gift from Mr. Levitt, the building is being converted into nine elegant apartments with a dramatic view of the Old City walls and the Jordan River valley in the distance.

"Our hope is that artists will come here and live quietly, spending a few months writing or painting or just thinking," Mr. Kollek told a recent visitor to the site. "If people like Isaac Stern and Saul Bellow spend some time here, a little of what they have inevitably will rub off on Jerusalem."

Increased Use Of Hard Drugs Disturbs Israeli Official

TEL AVIV — Attorney General Meir Shamgar said recently that he was alarmed by the increasing use of opium and other hard drugs by Israeli youth but would not recommend an anti-drug advertising campaign because that might only arouse curiosity and lead more youngsters to sample the drugs.

Shamgar said opium use was found among soldiers, high school students and even among grade school children and was spreading. At the same time, however, school children seem to be aware of the dangers of drugs, Shamgar said, and he thought the best way to solve the problem was through personal talks with small groups of youngsters.

The government was not relenting in its campaign to wipe out the use of the so-called "soft drugs" such as hashish and marijuana, Shamgar stated. He added he was categorically opposed to recommendations made in the United States for a permissive attitude toward marijuana. There is no proof that these drugs are not harmful and no reason for Israel to change its present policy against them, he observed.

SENTENCED

NEW YORK — Two Jewish Defense League members, Robert Fine, 26 of Brooklyn and David Levine, 19, a college student were sentenced in federal district court to prison terms on pleas of guilty to charges of plotting to place two pipe bombs at the Soviet Mission summer estate in Glen Cove, New York, last May.

CHIDES USSR

WASHINGTON — The New China News Agency charged in Hong Kong that the "practice of Soviet revisionism" in allowing Jews to go to Israel "can only prolong the state of war in the Middle East." This, the agency stated, is because Soviet policy on this matter "is doing Arab countries considerable wrong."

Expects Serious Surplus Of Professionals

TEL AVIV — Unless Israel changes its development and investment policies there will be a serious surplus of professionals in five years. This was the message of Natan Peled, Minister of Immigrant Absorption, to the annual conference of the Israel Management Center.

calculated that taking into account present immigration trends and economic forecasts published by the Economic Planning Authority, there will 8-12,000 surplus engineers and architects by 1976, 5,000 surplus scientists and 2,500-5,000 surplus technicians.

To encourage the employment of university trained manpower,

Mr. Peled urged an amendment to the Capital Investment Law granting financial concessions to employers of graduates. He said the only area which could be developed by Israel was in the fields of electronics, teaching aids, medical and pharmaceutical research and the manufacture of medical equipment.

Mr. Peled pointed out that there were 370,000 professionals in the Soviet Union and 700,000 in the United States. Jewish students throughout the world number one million and the figure was still increasing.

REPUDIATES STATEMENT JOHANNESBURG — The governing National Party has repudiated anti-Semitic canards expressed by one of its members against a Jewish leader of the opposition United Party during a recent bi-election meeting in Piet Retief, a country town. The local National Party leader apologized on the spot for his colleague's behavior and the outburst was condemned later by the National Party newspaper, Die Vaderland.

Now that I've given you some ideas on how to spend money, I feel obliged to give you some on how to save it.

First, if you're thinking of reducing and would like to do it without dieting or exercise, have you heard of the sauna wrap? You can get such treatments at many health spas. But why pay for them when you can do it yourself for a total cost of under $1.00? Simply buy a roll of Saran Wrap and wrap away, whatever part of your anatomy you'd like to shrink. Try it, it works!

Want protection against phony cures, fast-buck operators and retirement home gyps? Send for "Buyers Guide" No. 9 — Protection for the Elderly. It's yours free from the Federal Trade Commission, 6th and Pennsylvania Avenues, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580.

That, my friends, is all for this week.
