Arrest Three As Israeli Spies

Egypt Intensifies Vigil Against Foreign Spies

CAIRO — Egypt intensified the vigil against foreign spies and internal conspirators as security authorities reported that a French student and two Belgians had confessed and that underground subversive organizations had been uncovered.

The three foreigners were arrested a week ago and accused of having attempted to mail Israeli-prepared anti-regime leaflets to Egyptians to foment rebellion.

The Belgians have been identified as Jacques Pierre Herran, described as an industrialist, and his 18-year-old son, Pierre. The French student is Jean Marc Vouaux, whose name was erroneously given last week as Marc Seine. President Anwar el-Sadat disclosed that the three had been arrested.

The leaflets they were said to have brought to Egypt on behalf of Israel were attributed to a mysterious organization called the Egyptian National Front.

Egypt's state security prosecutor, Salah Nasser, said at a news conference restricted to Egyptian newsmen that the three "confessed immediately" when confronted with copies of the leaflets, which he said, had been smuggled into Egypt in the secret compartments of suitcases.

The prosecutor said that the French student had told of being recruited early last year by Israeli intelligence agents in Cologne, West Germany. He was said to have related that his first assignment was to visit the restive province of Eritrea in Ethiopia to gather military and political information.

Late last year, the prosecutor said, Israeli agents began to prepare the French student for a mission in Cairo, advising him to find employment in the French cultural center here and to seek out secrets pertaining to any Egyptian plans for undertaking war against Israel.

The student was also said to have told his interrogators that Israeli agents gave him "some letters" to mail when he reached Cairo.

Jacques Pierre Herran, the Belgian father, confessed that he had been recruited by the Israelis in 1968 after he had visited Israel and fallen in love with an Israeli woman, the prosecutor said.

His mission, it was said, was to visit Iraq, Egypt and Libya, posing as a tourist, to gather information.

Herran stopped off in Cairo to mail leaflets, under Israeli instructions, while on his way to the Congo on a business trip, the prosecutor said.

Leaflets of the Egyptian National Front began to appear in Cairo last summer. One of the first received by foreign residents in the mall denounced "Soviet imperialism" in Egypt and called for the ouster of Soviet military units.

Later leaflets, according to official sources, criticized President Sadat, the Arab Socialist Union, the Egyptian press and the Cabinet shuffle last month in which Dr. Aziz Sidky was named Premier.

The prosecutor said that the student and two Belgians were being detained in a continuing investigation.

Adding to the drama of spy revelations, Egyptian authorities disclosed that an underground organization called the Arab Vanguard Organization, a name suggesting a left-wing orientation, had been broken up.

The police were reported to have arrested 27 persons in a raid on a home where a meeting was under way. The head of the clandestine group was identified as Mohammed Abdel Shafel Eissa, a graduate of Cairo University's department of economics and political science.

Two other conspiratorial cells were broken up at the same time, it was reported, with the arrest of seven in one and five in the other.

One of the cells was in the industrial city of Helwan. The newspaper Al Ahram called it "part of a bigger ideological organization," an apparent allusion to the illegal Communist party.

disclosure that he had canceled an order for a military assault against Israeli positions in December.

President Nixon's decision to sell more Phantom and Skyhawk fighter-bombers to Israel and his moves to strengthen the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean confirmed apprehensions, Mr. Sadat declared.

President Sadat outlined what he called Egypt's requirements for "the coming stage" in a speech to a special session of the National Congress of the Arab Socialist Union, the country's political organization.

He appealed for unity and understanding.

"In recent weeks," he said, "we were in a situation of losing patience, which is legitimate and human. We were shaken by it, but it would be a grave error to exaggerate this impatience."

New Yiddish Paper Folds After 30 Issues

NEW YORK — The Yiddishe Tzeitung, launched December 29 a day after the closing of the Day-Jewish Journal, died itself February 9 a victim of editorial dissension at the age of 30 issues.

Sender Deutsch, the publisher, editor and printer, who said at the paper's launching that he foresaw a $250,000 loss in the first year but was willing to make the effort anyway, said that he expected the paper's sudden demise to cost him "a couple of thousand." The only major remaining Jewish daily is the Forward.

Deutsch, said that unexpected disagreements on editorial policy had developed among the members of the staff — all of them Orthodox. The Tzeitung's intention, he recalled was to appeal to all generations in the Orthodox community, but this goal could not be effected with the "troubles on the editorial staff."

Group Disseminates Nazi-Type Literature

Nazi-type literature, including stickers stating "Hitler was right" are being disseminated in Britain by an organization known as the National Socialist Irish Workers Party, it has been revealed by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

The Anti-Defamation League also reported the distribution of a pamphlet entitled "The Falsehood Exposed" by the same group. This pamphlet is an attack on the charge that six million Jews died at the hands of the Nazis before and during World War II.

According to an authoritative report, the National Socialist Irish Workers Party is operated by a man named Terry Byrne of Dublin. Byrne furthermore publishes a magazine called "Irish Worker" which contained a recent article entitled "Unwinding the Jewish Mystery." The article begins: "The Jewish thoughts, which have mystified the modern world, are really quite simple. Jews firmly believe in their magic; They believe that the Jewish hand is always quicker than the Gentile eye. . . ." In an earlier issue (May, 1971) Irish Worker states: "we here in Ireland are involved in a fight, a fight of which the whole world is aware. A fight similar to the one that the Arab people is fighting to push out the Jewish occupation of their homeland. . . ." The article ends with the words, "Heil Hitler."

Poll Reports Public Backs Meir Regime

TEL AVIV — A recent survey conducted by "Public Opinion Research for Israel Ltd." reveals that 82 per cent of the public believes that the Meir regime is doing all that it can in the cause of peace.

Only 12.5 per cent indicated their belief that the government was not doing enough in the direction of peace with the Arab world.

The results of this poll are significant in that they put to rest the notion that many Israelis are critical of the government for taking a too rigid stance.

Jarring Intends To Visit Israel On Peace Mission

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Foreign Ministry has announced that Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring, the United Nations mediator for the Middle East, would soon visit Jerusalem, apparently in an attempt to revive his peace-making mission after a year long stalemate.

Dr. Jarring, who is also Sweden's Ambassador to the Soviet Union, has concluded two days of talks in Cairo with the Egyptian leadership. In a half-hour meeting with the Israeli Ambassador to Cyprus, Rachamin Timor, Dr. Jarring is understood to have proposed personal meetings with Israeli leaders. But he gave no substantive information about any new suggestions for starting peace talks under his auspices between Israel and Egypt.

Dr. Jarring flew to Cyprus unexpectedly this week but kept silent about his plans until after he had conferred with the Israeli diplomat and had received the Israeli Government's response. Cyprus is a normal stopover for travelers between Cairo and Jerusalem since there are no direct air connections between the hostile neighbors.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman, Avraham Avidar, said that contacts were continuing with Dr. Jarring in Cyprus to fix a date and schedule for his visit. Reliable sources indicated that this weekend was the probable time for him to be here.

Premier Golda Meir is now on a brief vacation, and there was no indication that she would interrupt her leave to meet Dr. Jarring. The Foreign Minister, Abba Eban, is also on leave, but is expected back in his office to meet the United Nations representative.

Israeli officials remained dubious about Dr. Jarring's chance of success in finding a new formula to bring the two warring parties together at the conference table. They continued to pin their primary hopes on a break in the deadlock on the United States proposal for a new round of talks on a special agreement to reopen the Suez Canal, closed since the 1967 war.

In contrast to this limited American suggestion, Dr. Jarring is operating under a Security Council mandate to seek a comprehensive peace settlement among all the Middle East belligerents, embracing all the issues that have divided Israel and her Arab neighbors more than 23 years.

Controversy Still Rages Over Forest Hills Project

NEW YORK — "I'll lie down in front of the bulldozers," Jerry Birbach pledged again and again. During months of vituperative protest that kind of ultimate confrontation seemed to be the only way to stop construction of a low-income housing project in Forest Hills, Queens, where Mr. Eirbach led the opposition to the scheme.

Last week, however, more imposing obstacles than even the burly Mr. Birbach were placed in the bulldozers' paths. First, State Supreme Court Justice Irving H. Saypol, ruling on a suit by some Forest Hills residents, ordered construction halted. He said the project as it now stood was so different from the one first approved by the city's Board of Estimate in 1966 that new hearings were needed. And then, Mayor Lindsay, fresh from a scalding reception on a Presidential campaign swing in Miami, let it be known that he was prepared to compromise by cutting the size of the project.

The Saypol decision provided the first victory for the Birbach forces. But it was by no means a final one, for the city declared that the ruling would be appealed. And in view of the hysteria surrounding the controversy, the Lindsay compromise plan seemed fragile.

Until last week, the Mayor had repeatedly answered "absolutely not" when asked if the project's three 24-story towers would be scaled down and the 840 apartments reduced in number. But the outcry of Forest Hills residents became more potent when it followed Mr. Lindsay to Florida, where he is entered in the March 14 Democratic Presidential primary. Richard R. Aurelio, the Mayor's campaign manager, pushed for a compromise that would enhance Mr. Lindsay's images as a peacemaker and soften the Forest Hills opposition.

However, resistance to compromise emerged among some Lindsay administration officials, especially from Simeon Golar, the chairman of the Housing Authority. Eventually a tightrope-like plan was proposed under which the Forest Hills project would be cut by one-third and a small project would be revived in the Lindenwood section of Queens, where it was killed several months ago after protests by the residents there. The number of apartments built on the two sites would therefore still total about 840.

The question is whether the Board of Estimate would approve this revision. The impression prevails at City Hall that if the board gets a chance, it will reverse its 1966 decision. If Justice Saypol's ruling survives appeal, the board will have that chance.

If an appeals court rules out the need for a return to the Board of Estimate, there is still a chance that the project will die if the Lindsay compromise is forged into a hard proposal. The reason: If the size of the project is cut, the per-room Federal limit on the cost of construction might be exceeded, requiring the city to put its own money into the housing. That would mean a return to the Board of Estimate for the funds.

Mr. Golar's aides also raise the possibility of a complex legal tangle. They say that the city has entered into a binding contract with the construction firm that has already sunk piles on the site. A halt in construction or a change in the plans they believe, would invite law suits from the contractors, and might bog the project down in court battles as surely as it is now engulfed in hateful polemics.

President Sadat Vows To Resign If Egyptians Lose Confidence

CAIRO — President Anwar el-sadat vowed last week that he would resign if the Egyptians lost confidence in his leadership during what he conceded would be "a long political and military struggle" to recover Arab lands occupied by Israel.

"Changing circumstances," President Sadat explained, have compelled Egypt to reassess strategy against Israel.

The major change preventing Egypt from taking early military action, he said, was strengthening of the United States commitment to Israel after Washington's loss of prestige last December through the defeat of Pakistan by India.

"We felt the United States would do something rash in the Middle East after the Indian-Pakistan war so we had to be cautious," President Sadat said in an allusion to an earlier

Kosher Dining Cooperative Opened At Princeton Univ.

NEW YORK — A kosher dining cooperative and synagogue has been opened at Princeton University, the 21st kosher dining club sponsored by the National Council of Young Israel on American college campuses. In addition, according to Nash

Kestenbaum, Young Israel president, there are six kosher sandwich programs initiated by the Orthodox congregational agency at commuter colleges in New York City, and a total of 3,400 students are being served in the 27 facilities.

Mr. Kestenbaum reported that Young Israel was approached by Princeton University Yavneh, the Orthodox campus organization, and by university officials to help establish such a facility. Up until that point, he said, a privately-operated kosher dining club was conducted in a house off-campus which was inaccessible to many students. The National Council responded by providing a grant to make possible a complete kosher kitchen in the university's Stevenson Hall. In turn, university officials provide the Jewish students with a large facility in Stevenson Hall to house a kitchen, dining area, meeting rooms and synagogue. Facilities.

The Young Israel kosher dining program was started in 1955 with the opening of a Young Israel house at Cornell University. Subsequently dining cooperatives were set up at George Washington University, Michigan University, Case Institute of Technology, Ohio State, Western Reserve, New York State University at Buffalo, John Hopkins, Brown, Long Island, New York University, Washington Square and Bronx campuses, University of California at Los Angeles, San Fernando State College, Pierce College, Los Angeles City College, Columbia, Brooklyn College, Pace College, Kingsboro Community College, Downstate Medical Center, Poston University, Amherst College, Simmons College, Texas University and State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Stanley W. Schlessel, director of the Young Israel kosher dining program, said each kosher dining cooperative serves meals to its students with the exception of the commuter colleges which serve sandwiches. He said two dining clubs, those at Buffalo and Cornell, also have dormitory facilities for students on the premises of the dining coop.

Chancellor Brant To Visit Israel

BONN — Chancellor Willy Brandt has accepted an invitation last week to visit Israel. He will be the first West German head of Government to visit Israel while in office.

Knowledgeable quarters here say that the Chancellor is expected to make the trip in the early autumn. By that time Bonn most likely will have resumed diplomatic relations with several large Arab countries, including Egypt. Most of the Arab countries broke diplomatic relations with Bonn in 1965 when West Germany recognized Israel.

Since Mr. Brandt took office in 1969 there has been a slight tension in West German-Israeli relations as the Arab countries began courting the Government again.

Since Bonn officials have spoken of Israeli "pressure" on the Brandt Government to shun the Arabs and to support the Israeli position on the Middle Eastern conflict more vigorously.

Israeli press reports during the last two weeks that Mr. Brandt would soon be invited were interpreted here as signs of that pressure.

Mr. Brandt indicated at a press luncheon last week that he was slightly annoyed over the airing of the idea in the Israeli press beforehand. The invitation, addressed to Mr. Brandt and his wife, Ruth, arrived today. It was brought by Ambassador Eliahu Ben-Horin, apparently several days later than had originally been planned by the Israelis.

Cabaret Theatre At Biltmore Hotel To Open March 10

Cabaret theatre, located in the Manson House at the Biltmore Hotel, will open on Friday, March 10, under the auspices of Margo Productions. Patrons for this new experiment in adult entertainment will be offered the opportunity to dine, at special rates, in the Tudor Room of the hotel, and then go to the Manson House for after dinner, or before dinner, refreshments in a setting of musical comedy entertainment.

"Passionella," Part III, of Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick's Broadway hit, "The Apple Tree," will be the first offering, featuring Leta Anderson, who is leaving the cast of the New York production of "The Fantasticks" to appear in Providence. Miss Anderson, the wife of William Cain, a long-time favorite of the Trinity Square Repertory Company, has been featured in a number of Trinity Square productions, including the role of Polly Peacham in "The Three Penny Opera."

Supporting Miss Anderson in this initial offering will be Gordon Argo, former producer of the Hummocks Circle Theatre, as the Narrator, with Dennis Chambers as the Producer and Steve McElroy as Flip, the young Prince Charming in this modern Hollywood version of the old-time Cinderella story.

Reservations to the Manson House Theatre may be made in advance at the Biltmore Hotel for the opening performances on Friday and Saturday nights, March 10 and 11, at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Center Plans Purim Dance, Open House

The Jewish Community Center will hold a two-day Purim celebration at the Center for members on Saturday, March 4, and Sunday, March 5, starting with a Purim Cabaret Dance on Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The event will feature cabaret style decor, with reserved tables, music for dancing by Ralph Stuart and his orchestra, and a buffet and midnight coffee hour.

A Family Open Purim will be held on Sunday, starting at 2 p.m. and continuing through supper. Entire families are invited to attend and participate in a variety of games, contests, tournaments, novelty races and relays. There will be crafts and hobby exhibits by the Center's children and youth, as well as contests and tournaments in pool and ping pong for junior and senior high school students.

Supper will be at 4:30 p.m. and awards will be presented at that time, followed by a fashion show presented by the Center's junior high school members, and entertainment will be provided by the Brown University Festival Dancers. Israeli group dancing will follow.

Bank Of Israel Moves Toward More Supervision

JERUSALEM — The Bank of Israel, the nation's central bank, is preparing legislation for the Knesset that will give it extensive new powers of supervision over the country's banking business.

The move stemmed from the recent failure of the Agudath Israel Bank under circumstances that hinted at the emergence of a new financial scandal.

The Agudath Israel Bank which was on the verge of bankruptcy, has been taken over by the Bank Leumi, one of Israel's major banking institutions, in order to save the deposits of its 19,000 clients. The Cabinet discussed the transaction and the circumstances leading up to it.

The near collapse of the Agudath Israel Bank was attributed to improvident loans, most of which went to the bank's principal shareholders, and to the bank's involvement in dubious outside ventures.

Mrs. Herbert S. Fogel

Miss Judith Susan Jacobson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman W. Jacobson of Providence, became the bride of Herbert S. Fogel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fogel of East Greenwich, on Saturday, February 19, at Temple Beth El. Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman, Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland and Cantor Norman Gewirtz officiated at the 6:30 p.m. candlelight ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white brocade gown with a high neckline and long fitted sleeves trimmed with pearls. Her A-line skirt was fashioned with an attached chapel train. A pearl-edged organza Camelot headpiece trimmed with Venice lace held her fingertip silk illusion veil. She carried her mother's prayer book which was covered with phalaenopsis orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Barbara Lynne Jacobson was maid of honor for her sister. She wore a burgundy velvet A-line gown trimmed with white winter lace and a matching Camelot headpiece. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Vernon H. Bryant, Mrs. Stephen H. Cohen and Miss Tobybeth Rosenberg.

Bruce E. Fogel served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Vernon H. Bryant, Stephen H. Cohen and Louis Giordano.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brown, grandparents of the bride, of Pompano Beach, Florida, were part of the wedding party.

Following the ceremony, a candlelight dinner and reception were held in the temple social hall.

METRO-GOLDWYN MAYER, INC., in an attempt to portray the positive momentum of today's college youth, requested that 12 colleges in the New York area submit delegates, chosen on the merit of having attempted to create interaction between the community and the university, and thus to constructively aid their society, to be honored by MGM. Miss Lillian Amcis, shown above, center, receiving her award, was chosen to represent her university. Miss Amcis, a resident of Providence, and a junior at Yeshiva University in New York, has organized and directs the "Bikkur Cholim Club," an organization which seeks to directly interact with the community by visiting, entertaining and rehabilitating those in various institutions, such as hospitals, old age homes, etc. Prior to the presentation, the delegates were asked to review the MGM film, "The Jerusalem File." Presenting the award to Miss Amcis is Ram Ben-Ephraim, director of the movie, and next to him is the Israeli star, Barak. Other award winners are, at the left, Mauro Casci and Miss Jane Venetucci, both of Hunter College.

Moes Chitim Campaign Opens To Give Assistance To Needy

We are calling upon you again as the Passover Holidays approach to keep alive the traditional concept of Moes Chitim — Passover Assistance to the needy and deprived persons of the Jewish Community. Do your part to make it meaningful for the poor, the aged, and the sick persons of our community and for the inmates in the various State Institutions, including the children at the Ladd School.

For thousands of years, Jewish communities have taken care of their own poor at Passover. We now, for the fifteenth year in our area, are soliciting your help so that with the assistance of the Jewish Family and Children's Service and the Ladies Festival Committee we can help those who need it.

One further word: Too many people who intend and wish to heed our appeal postpone their giving until the last minute so that it is often received too late for the general distribution of the funds. This year the Passover Holidays begin on March 30th, so that early giving is a must. It is as easy to give now as later and the Mitzvoth of giving is just as great now as later. . .

Jewish Community Of Bombay Asks Help To Get Record Player

I would deem it a matter of personal obligation if you would be kind enough to publish my letter in the esteemed columns of your journal.

In this great city of Bombay, with a population of over five million, the number of Jews is a drop in the ocean and they are so widely scattered that social and religious customs are slowly vanishing. Synagogues are far apart with the result that attendance is extremely thin. Within the community it was apprehended that if such a state of seclusion was allowed to continue, the younger generation would soon be deprived of rich Jewish tradition and culture, unless some positive efforts were made to guide them.

Happily, it was found that there were about 30 Bene-Israel families in a comparatively small area of the city comprising the Kalachowky and Cotton Green areas within a radius of a mile or so. A number of elders in these families took upon themselves the task of propagating the Jewish customs, etc., and from small beginning, the above named institution (Ahva) was formed in April, 1965.

The main objects of the Institution are:-

1. To impart education, in traditional and modern Hebrew, to children as well as adults.
2. To conduct Erev prayers (except Yom Kippur Prayers) on all Jewish Festivals, for the convenience of the residents who have been cut off from the vicinity of the nearest synagogue.
3. To inculcate in the residents, particularly in the younger generation, the rich heritage of Jewish culture.
4. To render welfare service to the members who mainly comprise lower middle-class persons and industrial workers.

Our Institution has at present about 45 students between the ages of 7 to 50 years, who regularly attend the Sunday Hebrew Classes which are held under the auspices of the Jewish Agency in Bombay. Books and stationery are provided by the Institution. The foreign Magazines and Newspapers which are received from donors in U.S.A. are circulated free amongst the students for their reading. The festival prayers including celebration of Chanukka Week, are largely attended by the members and their families at the end of which refreshments and snacks are served. The needy have also been helped by the Institution which has provided them with Talliths, Skull Caps and even clothing for the High Holiday Festivals which was made possible by the generous donations received locally and also from abroad. By and large, the venture has proved a boon to the residents and the band of dedicated workers on the Committee have the satisfaction that their efforts are being amply rewarded by the overwhelming response. The Committee desires to give tuition fees to the students of this class up to Matriculation standard which is the minimum qualification to get a job.

This noble cause has often to suffer great handicaps due to the lack of adequate finance. The Institution has no regular income. All activities are run by means of donations from benefactors and well-wishers. The urgent need of this institution is a record player which can be purchased locally costing dollars 125/- or Rs.900/- approximately. Since one of the donors from U.S.A. has sent records of Hebrew songs for the students of the above class.

I shall be happy if any institution or well-wisher would extend assistance to this institution.

Shalom,

SAMUEL HANNOCK
Hon. Secretary
Bombay, India

WANT GOLDA MEIR

TEL AVIV — A majority of Israelis want Premier Golda Meir to remain in her post after her term expires officially in 1973, according to the results of a Gallup poll conducted here. The poll found that 61 per cent wanted her to stay in office, 33 per cent wanted her out and six per cent had no opinion. Fifty-one per cent chose Defense Minister Moshe Dayan as her successor.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

A Society That Keeps Secrets

By BERYL SEGAL

Times change. Concepts change. Social agencies assume different kinds of functions because the people have changed.

In 1929 when the Family Welfare Society was formed, its main aim was to render aid to underprivileged families. The society continued the work of the Montefiore Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Association and the South Providence Ladies' Aid Society, two women's groups who provided clothing and shoes for the children of needy families. The Family Welfare Society, in addition, supplied food for those families and took under its wing the children whom it sent to Hebrew school and to the Jewish Community Centers free of charge. The sick were referred to The Miriam Hospital. The Family Welfare Society was thus known as the place where poor people come for guidance and aid in their difficulties.

Today, over 40 years later, the Jewish Family & Children's Service is functioning mainly as a counseling agency. And it is called upon to help middle-class families who do not necessarily need financial assistance.

I sat in the office of Mr. Paul E. Segal, director of the Providence Jewish Family & Children's Service, and listened to his unfolding of human perplexities and maladjustments that are indicative of the times in which we live. He and his staff of social workers, homemakers and psychiatrist are engaged in problems and situations unknown to the founders of this society.

Here are some of the things in which they are engaged:

1. THERE IS THE CONFLICT OF THE TEEN-AGERS AND THEIR PARENTS. Children smoking, drinking and injecting drugs and parents not being able to cope with them. Young girls getting pregnant and parents not knowing where to turn for advice.

2. MARITAL PROBLEMS IN THE HOME. Tensions. Accusations. Homes on the verge of breaking up. Each of the parents blaming the other. They come to the Welfare Society to help them solve their problems.

3. THE DILEMMA OF THE ELDERLY. Elderly couples not willing to give up their home. But they cannot attend to the management of a home. Coming and going. Shopping for food. Keeping the house clean and orderly. Illness in the home. The burden is too great. They must have a Homemaker, and the Family Welfare Society is the one to whom they turn for help.

4. FOSTER HOMES FOR ORPHANS AND CHILDREN OF BROKEN HOMES. Adjusting foster homes to children. Reconciling children to strange surroundings. Avoiding conflicts between child and child. Problems of adoption.

5. WORKING WITH HIAS, the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, to receive refugees and help them settle in our city. Last year there were three families from Egypt and one from Poland. Finding homes for them. Finding jobs for the able-bodied members of the immigrant families. Making their stay in the city comfortable. Providing for people who came to a strange city. Helping them adjust socially and financially to the new environment. That, too, is the work of the agency.

6. MOES CHITIM — "Wheat Money," translated literally. What it means is the provision for Passover food and supplies during the week of the holiday when the expenses are higher than during any other week. This old tradition is kept alive by the society through the collection and distribution of funds which it solicits every year. When you get the appeal this year, please donate as much as you can so that the needy can enjoy the Passover festival.

7. CAMP JORI. The camp is a leftover from the Jewish Orphanage of Rhode Island (J.O.R.I.). Besides the children whose parents can afford to pay, the society sends also those who either have no parents or whose parents cannot afford the fee. And at Camp Jori all children are equal. No one knows who is who in the camp.

Secrecy, that is the key word in all the work of the Jewish Family & Children's Service. Whatever goes on between the director and the client is in complete confidence. The Board of Directors neither wants to know nor does it interfere with the services performed by the staff.

This confidence is probably the reason why the troubled and the problem laden come to the society to find solutions and relief.

Dr. Nathan Bolotow, a well known Ear, Nose and Throat specialist in the city, has been the chairman, for many years, of a committee which deals with emotionally disturbed children. Few as such children are, the Jewish Family & Children's Service helps with their treatment and rehabilitation.

I came away from my conversation with the director of the society completely astonished at the number of people having problems, having difficulties, such as we, the fortunate ones, have no inkling of. They are right here in the city, perhaps our neighbors. And the Jewish Family & Children's Service gives them counsel and assistance, quietly, efficiently, and above all, in perfect secrecy.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

Once again, you, America's shoppers, show signs of staging a coast-to-coast rebellion against rising food prices.

The "petticoat rebellion" of 1966, in which consumers across the nation organized marches and boycotts against food stores, was only a preview, says William Rindler, editor of Supermarketing magazine. "The rebellion did not end. It only went underground, to surface again — stronger, more powerful and much better organized."

The petticoats are now buttressed by consumer groups in every city and town. They are backed by powerful anti-pollution and pro-nutrition forces. They have the spur of an election year and the support of an increasingly consumer-oriented Congress.

A new survey of an enormous 250,000 U.S. households by Supermarketing, to be published in early March, underlines the feelings and dissatisfactions of today's supermarket shoppers. It dramatizes the dangers in the typical shopper's mistaken beliefs about who's responsible for recent price increases. For instance, a hefty majority think the food retailers themselves are directly responsible, when in fact the blame must go all the way back to the beginning of the line: from the farmer through all the middlemen to the retailer. The following questions and summary of answers in the survey will illustrate the points:

Q. Is shopping in food "discount" stores an important way of increasing your food purchasing power?

A. Overwhelmingly, the answer was yes. — which surely is an explanation for the recent surge in numbers of discount stores.

Not surprisingly, the lower a family's income bracket, the greater its interest in (and belief in) discounting. Fully four out of five families in the under $5,000-a-year bracket were convinced they achieved significant savings in discount stores.

Q. Do easily understood date codes on food packages help in assuring that the food is fresh?

A. Nearly nine out of 10 shoppers surveyed (and in some cities as high a proportion as 95 to 97 per cent) applauded date coding as a potentially valuable indicator of the freshness — and thus also quality — of the food in a given package.

This result surely must warn the food industry to adopt at once simple, meaningful date codes.

Q. Should food stores refuse to carry products which might be harmful to our environment?

A. You, the supermarket operator should act, said a startling 84 per cent, as a "policeman" in the food area.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand concerns the old problem of the overtrick again. A correct guess would make all the difference and most of the players did just that, they guessed. But actually there was much more than a guess here and those who approached the problem correctly would be rewarded with the overtrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Greene were North and South, no one vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

P	2♦	P	6NT

North had visions of a possible Grand Slam when he heard his partner open the bidding with One No Trump. If he could find a maximum plus a Major suit fit he might go all the way so he bid the Stayman two Clubs to hear a bit more from his partner. When the response added nothing good he signed off at six and awaited the opening lead.

If West should lead what some have often heard is the proper lead, fourth from his longest and strongest suit, the Club suit, he would automatically donate a thirteenth trick to the Declarer.

All South would have to do with a small Club lead would be to duck it around to the Jack and when that wins, take another Club finesse. That adds up to thirteen tricks. But a Club lead from the King on this kind of bidding would not be very wise. The idea is to try to make the opponents work for their tricks. Of course, any lead is liable to hurt the leader and give up a trick but at least one should try to make a lead less likely to do this. Four small cards is not too likely to do much damage to oneself.

After the opening Diamond lead Declarer could count twelve sure tricks. With every off suit stopped at least twice she didn't care whether the Club finesse worked or not so after the Diamond lead she led a small Club to Dummy's Queen. If it lost, her own Jack would be good for the twelfth and fulfilling trick. Four Spades, four Hearts, two Diamonds and two Clubs adds to twelve. But the Club finesse did work so now the twelfth trick is in with no losses as yet. Now there might be a good way to make seven. Some players did make seven but most of them guessed as to the best way to go about it. There is one best way.

The situation is this; after the finesse works one has to either drop a singleton King of Clubs or smother a singleton 10. To do this you either play the Ace to drop the King or else play the Jack. If West doesn't cover, the Jack will win the trick. If he does cover and East's 10 drops, the nine becomes the thirteenth trick but which way is more likely to work, who is more likely at this time to have the singleton? Those very words, "At this time," should provide the clue for one might garner more information about the hand pertinent to the problem if he delays this a while. He should run all of his other tricks and see what happens. This is what Mrs. Greene found out when she did this: West showed out on the third Spade and both followed to three Hearts. Now which opponent was more likely to have more Clubs than the other? The answer is quite obviously West. If West happens to hold both the King and ten there is nothing Declarer can do but at least she was going to give it a try. So after cashing in all of her other tricks she led the Club Jack. West covered and now she turned to look at East's Club. When that opponent dropped the ten her nine became good just as she had played for. Others did make as many tricks but not many of them really did it with their eyes completely open.

Moral: Delay a guess as much as possible. Sooner or later a clue may come up to help you go right. Almost always there is some kind of a clue, so learn to spot them.

Student Who Set Himself On Fire Reaches Israel

TEL AVIV — Ilya Ripps, a Jewish mathematics student who set fire to himself on a Riga street on April 13, 1969, arrived in Israel recently with his parents.

The tall, thin young man, who speaks some Hebrew, said he wanted to complete his studies here and to "be of value to this country."

But he told reporters that his self-immolation had not been intended to dramatize his desire to go to Israel but to protest the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August 1968. Two more plane loads of immigrants from Russia also arrived at the same time.

Capture Terrorists In Jordan Cave

TEL AVIV — The capture of 11 terrorists after a fierce gun-battle in a caved area of the Jordan valley disclosed the existence of a hitherto unknown guerrilla group, security sources have disclosed. The captured terrorists carried both weapons and explosives.

It marked the largest infiltration of terrorists from Jordan since the guerrillas were thrown out of the country by King

Hussein's army last summer. One terrorist was killed in the gun-battle; no Israeli casualties were reported.

The new terrorist group calls itself Salah A Din, after the Moslem leader who drove the Crusaders out of Palestine seven centuries ago. Their mission was to carry out acts of sabotage in the Nablus and Ramallah districts.

VISITS AFRICA

UNITED NATIONS — Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring, the United Nations conciliator for the Middle East, is visiting Africa apparently in search of ideas to break the Egyptian-Israeli deadlock. A United Nations spokesman said that Dr. Jarring would confer with President Leopold S. Senghor of Senegal and President Moktar Ould Daddah of Mauritania, the leading members of the 10-nation African mission that visited Egypt and Israel late last year on a mediation mission.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

Hello Again!

OF MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS: "The Turf and Sport Digest" referred to the late Leo P. Bradley as "A Man of Many Accomplishments" in a story by Marshall Smith. Marshall was once a Providence sports writer with the old Star-Tribune and after that with the Providence Journal before becoming associated with Life Magazine. His story is only one of hundreds written about the accomplishments of Leo P. who could write and tell stories of interest that would number in the hundreds of hundreds. Leo Bradley was a most unusual character in the sports world. Many times he was the answer to a writer's prayer. Leo could always come up with a yarn that would move a pondering columnist out of the doldrums.

IN SALUTE: Last week when Mr. Bradley's countless friends and acquaintances were paying final respects, stories of Leo's accomplishments filled every corner in McMurrugh and Todd's parlors. Few were those who passed by for a last look at Leo who didn't have some sort of reminiscence involving the great man's colorful career. And they were there from far and near, from many walks of life. Sam Silverman, "Mr. Boxing himself," with Jack O'Brien from Boston; Manny Almeida, greatest boxing promoter in the history of the game in Rhode Island; Larry McGarry, the popular Public Works Commissioner of Providence; Dr. James Flanagan who has examined more boxers than any other medico in this section; and former boxers Eddie Holmes, Joe Accetta, Pecky MacFarland; Boxing Commissioner Anthony Macerone and former boxing commissioner Charles Reynolds of the famed 20-inning pitching performance for P.C.; John Houston was there and so were Buck Herzog and Georgie Castro along with others and others — each one remembering something colorful about the great Leo P. and each attesting to the important role Mr. Bradley had played in the sports picture down through the years. . . . Leo P. Bradley, boxing manager extraordinary and devotee in the effort for bettering the breed of ring gladiators and thoroughbreds that race in the "Sport of Kings."

REMEMBER THIS AND THAT: It was related that one of Leo Bradley's boxers was knocked to the canvas in the very first minute of the first round. The referee was counting, "One, Two, etc." Leo P. leaned over the apron toward his boxer, asking, "Are you going to get up?" On went the referee, "Three, Four, Five." Leo P. asked his fallen gladiator once again, "Are you going to get up?" — and the boxer finally rolling over on one side toward Leo and answering, "Yes. But not tonight."

AND ANOTHER: At old Pascoag Park when Leo's horse "Star Quest" came under the wire a winner and paid $8 for a $2 ticket, Leo didn't have a bet on the race, exclaiming, "If I'da bet, he would-a seen me going to the window and he wouldn't have won. He didn't look as though he was going to win, anyway."

PROUD OF THIS ONE: A few, special, privileged associates had been favored with a "showing" of a gold medal emblematic of an honorary admiralty in the Canadian Navy. It had been presented to Leo P. Bradley by Prime Minister McKenzie King of Canada during World War II in recognition and appreciation of efforts raising funds for Navy Relief. And so, although many thought Leo P. Bradley's title "Admiral" was just another nickname, it was an official designation.

LONG LIST: The list of boxers who were guided by Bradley is a mile long. "You just had to keep the 'mashed potatoes' coming in to keep them going," he said. He remembered Howell King, Joey Angelo, Norman Horton, Lucky Jordan as favorites but considered Jackie Callura, World Featherweight Champion, the best of all.

LEO DIDN'T KNOW THIS ONE: Joe Celletti and his protege, Barry O'Neill, N.E. Heavyweight Champion, were present during visiting hours and final rites for their friend. Mr. Celletti presented a floral piece in the shape of a boxing glove which was his own idea and design. He also brought along a cigar. "Leo always asked me for one," Joe said, "whether he had any or not." Joe wanted to carry on the custom and he did. When no one was watching, Joe slipped a nice cigar in the casket with Leo. With a tear in his eye, he remarked, "Now he'll always have a cigar — he never lighted one anyway." — CARRY ON!

Bonn Grants Asylum To Non-Jewish Resident Of Israel

BONN — A West German court has granted political asylum to Mrs. Dora Czczena, a non-Jewish former resident of Israel who came here with her 14-year old son allegedly to escape discrimination and harassment in Israel.

Mrs. Czczena, 41, is a Russian Christian who recently divorced her Polish Jewish husband. She told the court that she had suffered "serious religious discrimination" in Israel and was unable to find work there because of her religion, and that after her divorce had found herself homeless and penniless. The woman said her son was unable to find a place in a normal Jewish school in Israel. She claimed that all schools to which she applied turned him down when his non-Jewish origin became known.

She said further that her son was frequently beaten by Jewish children and insulted and jeered at, and that despite her many complaints to the police they refused to take action or even to investigate her charges. The court ruled that Mrs. Czczena was entitled to asylum under the Federal Constitution.

Ralph Ginzburg Goes To Prison; Protests Right To Free Speech

LEWISBURG, Pa. — Ralph Ginzburg, the publisher, went to prison today, 10 years after he distributed a short-lived quarterly magazine called Eros that emphasized sex.

Before turning himself in, the New Yorker paused outside the four-story Federal Building on this small city's main street, drew a parchment from his jacket and said:

"This is the Bill of Rights of the United States Constitution. It says Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech or the press. I am entering prison under a three-year sentence for publishing something I believed in. Every day I remain in prison this Bill of Rights is a meaningless piece of paper."

He crumpled the copy, which his 11-year-old daughter, Lark, had bought some time ago at a New York art museum as a result of her own interest in the document. He tossed it into a wire-mesh wastebasket at the curb, kissed his wife Shoshana, good-bye and entered the building.

When he emerged with a deputy Federal marshal, Frank Cotner, he was handcuffed. He and Milton Kelton, a bank robber also charged with manslaughter, were driven north of town to Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary, where the main gate swung open and then quickly banged shut behind them.

In 1963, in Federal District Court in Philadelphia, Ginzburg was found guilty by a judge of violating an 1872 law by sending obscene material through the mails. He was sentenced to five years in prison.

The Supreme Court upheld the conviction in a 5-to-4 decision three years later, not declaring the material obscene but creating the doctrine of "pandering" to say that he could be prosecuted because he advertised the sexual aspects of Eros and other publications. The pandering standard had not been applied before and has not been applied since.

Court appeals that kept Ginzburg free on bail for years succeeded only in reducing the original sentence from five years to three.

The Ginzburgs left New York at 4 A.M. to drive to this quiet old town on the Susquehanna River. Ginzburg said in an interview after breakfast at a small diner here that he "profoundly appreciated" a full-page advertisement in the New York Times seeking contributions to help a specially formed Committee for a Free Press work for his release. The advertisement expressed the outrage of intellectuals.

"If it is right that Ralph Ginzburg go to jail," said the playwright Arthur Miller in the advertisement, "then in all justice the same court that sentenced him should proceed at once to close down 90 per cent of the movies now playing and the newspapers that carry their advertising. Compared to the usual run of entertainment in this country, Ginzburg's publications and his ads are on a par with the National Geographic."

"A man is going to prison for publishing and advertising stuff a few years ago which today would hardly raise an eyebrow in your dentist's office," Mr. Miller said. "This is the folly, the menace of all censorship — it lays down rules for all time which are ludicrous a short time later."

Kenneth D. McCormick, chairman of the Freedom to Read Committee of the Association of American Publishers, said in the same advertisement:

"This case should serve as a warning that there is no guarantee of freedom in a democratic society, that what can happen in a totalitarian society can happen here."

In a letter to the editor of The Times, the eighth grade of New York's New Lincoln School wrote: "We urge that everything possible be done to prevent Shepherd's father from spending the next three years in jail."

Shepherd Ginzburg, 14, is a member of the class. He is the brother of Lark and of Bonnie Ginzburg, 18.

Ginzburg was committed to a penitentiary that Warden Noah L. Alldredge conceded was badly overcrowded. Some 500 of the prisoners, out of about 1,400, are on strike over a number of complaints.

ASSAIL ADMINISTRATION
NEW YORK — The heads of the congregational and rabbinic arms of Reform Judaism assailed the Nixon administration for the renewed bombings in North Vietnam and stated that such action endangers the peace aims of the President's forthcoming trips to the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China. In a telegram to Nixon, Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, and Rabbi David Polish, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, called upon the administration to "set a date for total withdrawal of all American forces from all of Indochina."

MEMBERS OF TEMPLE BETH ISRAEL left for a pilgrimage to Israel to commemorate the Fiftieth Anniversary of the temple. This is the first Israeli trip ever sponsored by the temple. Tour arrangements were made by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Sholes in conjunction with Zaida Kouffman of the Cranston Travel Service. Rabbi Jacob Handler will conduct services at the Wailing Wall.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Some months ago, before the recent death of Marianne Moore, George Plimpton — her onetime escort — telephoned Harold Conrad, the fight promoter. Plimpton wanted to arrange a meeting between Miss Moore and Muhammad Ali, and succeeded — it was a tea at Toots Shor's, which is now Manny Zwaaf's International. At their meeting they decided to write a joint poem, each responsible for an alternating line.

There was no paper available, so they wrote it on a napkin. When they left, Plimpton realized he had forgotten to take the napkin. He went into the basement of the restaurant, to the laundry, and checked through a week's supply of soiled linen, until it was found. There now is a problem of who owns the rights to the verse.

Last week, General Moshe Dayan saw "The Prisoner of Second Avenue." At the final curtain, the cast gave HIM a standing ovation. . . . On February 12, Pauline Trigrere took Dayan and his daughter, Yael — who was celebrating her birthday — to lunch at La Grenouille. Afterwards, Dayan visited J.J. Klejman, the antiquarian. . . . Ladislav Farago, author of "Patton" and "The Game of the Foxes," has signed with Harper's Magazine Press for "The Glant Toy: The Mad World of Heinrich Himmler."

Bill Cosby said that when he called the Copa to make a reservation to see his friend, soul singer Wilson Pickett, he was asked: "How many will be in your party?" Cosby replied: "One." Cosby was then informed that the Copa's policy is never to take reservations for just one person. Cosby settled the problem by saying: "Please make it for seven people — and I will sit alone."

On the afternoon of February 12, a hearing was held in Judge Theodore B. Kupferman's apartment, on the right of Time magazine, to publish excerpts from Clifford Irving's book about Howard Hughes. The judge said: "Putting aside a judicial approach and speaking as an old show business lawyer, the book now has more value because, even if it is not true, so many more people are interested in seeing the final result."

The New York County Republican Party held its 1972 annual Lincoln's Day Dinner at the Waldorf. Governor Rockefeller spoke of President Nixon's approaching visit to China: "Eight hundred million people, with 5,000 years of cultural heritage, cannot be further ignored, and we must establish contact with these people."

With reference to the November elections, the governor said: "We want four or five women candidates on the New York County Republican slate this year. We want a group of outstanding women running for office, as a team, preferably in their early 20s. We recognize the role of youth in this country, and we want them speaking for us."

The Lipton Tea Company may arrange for a pageant to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Boston Tea Party, with an Anglo-American sponsorship, to indicate that all is well and forgiven by now. . . . "Light Up the Sky," the Moss Hart play being revived by Harold J. Kennedy, may play the Kennedy Center in Washington. . . . Jane Nusbauer will produce a TV version of Durgil's autobiography. He wrote "The Doe" . . . Carl Reiner's definition of a bore: "A man who deprives you of solitude without depriving you of company."

Benny Goodman has been invited by the State Department to make a goodwill tour again. The King of Swing left February 24 with the All Star Orchestra that appeared with him at his recent Rainbow Grill engagement. They will head for Amsterdam, Berlin, Paris and London. In each of those places, the State Department is having the American ambassador set up receptions in Goodman's honor.

During World War II, John Roeburt, the mystery writer, took Dosoo Karaka of the Bombay Chronicle on a tour of New York. Karaka wrote a small, scoffing book entitled "New York With Its Pants Down," because Roeburt had taken him to Sammy's Bowery Follies. Roeburt recently wrote to Karaka about using references to the Indian journalist in his memoirs. Karaka replied that he is in the midst of his own third autobiography. He recently reached the 300,000-page mark, in typed manuscript form.

He expects the completed script will be twice as long.

Hillard Elkins, the producer, made a deal with an electronics company for a daily debugging of his office. This is in preparation for his forthcoming play, Gore Vidal's "An Evening with Richard Nixon." He feels the Justice Department will be out to get him once the play goes into production.

10,000 ENTER

NEW YORK — 10,000 Russian Jews have entered Israel during the nine month period ending November 30, 1971, according to Leon Dultzin, Treasurer of the Jewish Agency. Dultzin said "We must be prepared for even greater immigration in 1972." The figure was the first mentioned by any Israeli with official status. The Israeli government has heretofore refused to disclose the number of Jewish immigrants arriving from the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Sapinsley was guest speaker at the meeting.

Beryl Segal Reiterates Stand On Germany, USSR

I am sorry if Mr. Charles Garber had any crank calls because of his address appearing on the poster of the Jewish Defense League. I merely copied all that was printed on the infamous poster. It was the first time that I saw it, and the cruel, misleading and irresponsible pictures on it were shocking to me. If Mr. Garber doesn't see anything wrong in them, he is welcome to his opinion. I did not know that the address given was his home address. The only thing I made sure of was, though, that it was not the address of the Hebrew Day School on Elm Grove Avenue.

Some people may call it "Pro-Soviet Propaganda," but I will not let anyone equate Soviet Russia with the Nazi regime in Germany. They were not "weak-minded Jews" the victims of the holocaust. They were victims of a period in the history of Europe that the world cannot to this day understand. I wouldn't repeat this accusation, Mr. Garber, when writing again about the Jews of Germany. Only the great minds of the JDL have simplistic explanations for everything.

The Nazis were murderers, perverts and inhuman. The Soviets have an ideology different than ours. You can reason with ideologies, something you cannot do with murderers. Only deranged minds can compare the two.

Disputes Rabbi Pollak's Letter

Despite Rabbi Pollak's pious disclaimer that "the surveyors did not come to condemn or to praise," in point of fact the striking corrections of the AAJE report by Mr. David Hassenfeld strongly suggest otherwise. I know important PHDS authorities who call the report on the PHDS "a hatchet-job." I did not, of course, and should not, use such strong language.

A more important issue is the role of Hebrew language in Jewish education. I stated agreement with the teaching of Talmud in Hebrew and Aramaic original, with translation into English, such as is done at the Day School. My only suggestion is that instruction in Aramaic — both Galilean and Babylonian — be undertaken, so that the students will understand that the Talmud is not really written in gibberish, but in a beautiful language.

Rabbi Pollak informs us that the Mishnah is written in Hebrew. I don't know anyone in Providence who knows what the Mishnah is who does not know that fact. The point is that the students speak English and understand complex ideas in English rather than in Hebrew. True, the Talmud can be discussed in Hebrew. But one cannot be sure that what is said is accurately grasped by students whose knowledge of Hebrew is not native. The great Talmudic academies in Eastern Europe taught the Talmud in their native language, which was Yiddish, and not in Hebrew. That did not make their devotion to Hebrew any less.

My view is that Hebrew is important because it gives us access to the classical texts of Judaism, which are in Hebrew, and spoken Hebrew is useful, though not essential, in relationship to Israelis. I see Hebrew as an instrument of Jewishness, not as an end in itself. In other words, I am for Hebrew, but I am not a Hebraist. I am a Judaist — to me, study of Torah and fulfillment of mitzvot are ends in themselves. Everything else may serve as means toward those ends.

Rabbi Pollak ends as piously as he began, with the claim that someone's "impartiality" or "integrity" has been "impugned." Now I am supposed to disclaim any such intent. But since he raised the issue, let me state that I do not think the report is impartial at all. It reflects an ideology of Jewish education — and it would be of no value if it did not. That ideology is the Hebraist one, which places knowledge of the Hebrew language at the top of the educational scale. I do not share that ideology, for my reasons, and I suspect the authorities at the Day School — for whom I cannot be called an apologist — do not share it for theirs. So I think Rabbi Pollak has correctly stated the issue, and I shall not draw back from it. As to integrity, no one's personal integrity has been called into question. But — for reasons not pertinent to Providence — I may state that, among a great number of professors of Judaic studies all over this country, I do not regard the AAJE as a worthwhile organization, and so far as its projects on the campus are concerned, I do not know of any "integrity" it might have to be impugned. Indeed, it has disgraced itself time and again in dealing with the campus. But that is no problem in Rhode Island.

Q. Do coupons and cents-off offers influence the brands and products you buy?
A. For three out of five, they do — particularly among lower-income shoppers trying to keep within tight budget limits. The message to food manufacturers and supermarkets is to concentrate this type of promotion among people most likely to take advantage of it.

Q. Are savings on weekly "specials" offset by price hikes food stores post on other products?
A. The public's skeptical answer is another yes — although Ringler insists this simply is not true. In many cases, specials come directly from supplier to retailer, with the supplier bearing the cost as a promotional expense. With meats and certain other products, it's the retailer who stages the special, on the expectation that he'll make up for any losses through increased sales of his store's wares generally at regular prices.

Q. Do giant economy sizes represent real savings?
A. An impressive one out of three said no — including households with many children. The supermarket industry would be wrong to dismiss this as "sheer ignorance," says Ringler. For many consumers, this answer reflects deep doubts about all food labels.

"Until now, you have taken the consumer — your customer — pretty much for granted," Ringler warns the food industry.

But now before Congress are proposals to force manufacturers to specify on food packages the dates after which they should not be sold for consumption; to require national nutritional standards and labeling of nutrients in foods; to require retailers to post unit prices (cents per pint, per pound, per lump, per sheet).

The food industry, though, shouldn't need more laws, Ringler emphasizes. With these signals of rebellion flying, the industry should be taking action all on its own to meet our frustrations and demands.

STUDENT TRANSFERRED
NEW YORK — Ilya Glezer, a student at Moscow University, was transferred to the Lefortova prison in Moscow, a prison for political prisoners, it was reported by the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry. Glezer was arrested after the KGB searched his home on February 7 and confiscated books on Jews and Judaic topics. Glenn Richter, national coordinator of the SSSJ, said that in a telephone conversation with sources in Moscow, Glezer may be charged with anti-Soviet agitation under Article 70.

Two Admit Helping In Hotel Bombing

TEL AVIV — At a public meeting in Tel Aviv, a post office engineer and a sedate motherly type recently admitted to being members of the commando group that blew up the King David Hotel in Jerusalem in 1946, one of the most sensational events in the years before Britain quit Palestine in 1948 and the state of Israel was born.

The explosion at the hotel, which was British Army headquarters, killed 95 British officers, Jews and Arabs.

The two were Israel Levi, 34 at the time, and Sara Agassi, who said they posed as Arabs and drove to the hotel in a truck and ambulance. They carefully placed seven milk cans full of explosives around the central support of the hotel, with a 35-minute timing device.

The duo, who did not give information on the other 12 members of the group, said their phone calls warning of the explosives were ignored.

Israel's Rabbinate Allows 802 Bigamous Marriages

JERUSALEM — Israel's Orthodox rabbinate which governs matters of personal status according to halacha, religious law, permits bigamous marriages in certain circumstances. Dr. Zerach Warhaftig, the Minister for Religious Affairs, told the Knesset that since the establishment of the State in 1948 the rabbinate has granted 802 Jews the right to take a second wife though they were neither divorced nor widowed.

Israeli criminal law defers to religious law in this matter. It states that a man shall not be prosecuted for bigamy if his bigamous marriage was entered with the approval of a three-man rabbinical tribunal legally constituted.

Warhaftig said in reply to questions that 24 such marriages were authorized by rabbinical tribunals last year alone. Permission to take a second wife has been granted in cases where the man's first spouse is an

Director Adrian Hall has put together two productions of "School for Wives" (in a new English verse translation by Richard Wilbur) so that it is available for touring throughout New England.

The Washington Anniversary

He had big hands and a big appetite which in later years caused him considerable distress because his teeth hurt him. He enjoyed a good story and he had an eye for a pretty woman. He was a highly successful farmer, who also distilled whiskey and played cards for moderate stakes.

They called him first Colonel Washington, then Mr. Washington, then General Washington, and later on, Your Excellency. No one called him George.

Washington allowed familiarity from only two of his contemporaries, General Henry Knox, the artilleryman, called him General, without adding the last name, and so did General Nathanael Greene whom Washington called Brother Nat. Of course there was no nickname for this aristocrat. Has there ever been a nickname for King Arthur or for Sir Lancelot?

At the time of the French and Indian War, Washington was 22, but already a lieutenant colonel in the Virginia militia. His abilities were known not only throughout the colonies, but in the Mother Country as well.

He was a Virginia gentleman, a fact which played him false when he had to surrender Fort Mifflin to the French. He signed the surrender never dreaming that another professional soldier would attempt trickery. But in the surrender, unwittingly Washington admitted to the "assassination" of a Frenchman named Jumonville, a scout killed in combat.

During the Revolution the Tory journalist, James Rivington, printed a poem recalling this "cruel assassination."

But this integrity stood him in fine stead during the war for independence. When a few jealous fellow officers initiated an under-the-table movement to remove him from command, Washington dispelled the scheme by shaming General Conway and General Horatio Gates, both of whom lived out their lives in sorrow and oblivion for their pains.

When the Continental Congress fled from Philadelphia and thousands of American neutrals and Tories came out of hiding to help the British, things looked black indeed. But by the end of the Revolutionary War it was clear there would have been no United States of America if there had been no Washington.

The old Prussian, Frederick, studied the American campaigns and was so impressed by Washington's retreats into victory that he sent the American General a sword inscribed: "From the oldest General in the world to the best."

Koufax Receives 87% Of Vote For Election

NEW YORK — Sanford (Sandy) Koufax, the former Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers pitching star, has been elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame with one of the highest vote percentages ever.

Koufax, who received 344 — or 87 per cent — of the record 396 ballots cast by veteran members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, becomes only the second Jewish electee to the Hall, joining Henry Benjamin (Hank) Greenberg, elected in 1956.

With the election this year of Koufax, the New York Yankees' Yogi Berra and the Cleveland Indians' Early Wynn, there are 111 players and 18 others in the shrine.

At 36 the youngest electee to the Hall, Koufax retired prematurely in 1966 with arm trouble after winning 165 games and losing 87 in 12 seasons. He was named the National League's most valuable player in 1963 and the majors' top pitcher three times.

The holder of numerous strikeout records, Koufax was the only pitcher ever to hurl four no-hitters (one of them a perfect game). Election to the Hall this year required 297 votes, 75 per cent of the total.

To Name School After Barbour

TEL AVIV — American envoy to Israel, Walworth Barbour, will soon have a school here named after him.

The International American School, at Kfar Shmariahu near here is shortly to be considerably expanded and the re-naming ceremony will take place after the alterations.

Ambassador Barbour has served in Israel since May, 1961 and will soon be the only one of the diplomatic corps here, after the departure of the Liberian Ambassador next month.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By Roger E. Spear

Dividend Increase Projected

Q: In 1969, I purchased 20 shares of Becton, Dickinson at $50. The dividend is negligible; I am 83 and need income. I hate to take the $500 loss. What would you advise? K. H.

A: Since your inquiry, Becton shares have moved up to recover all but $200 of your loss. As a result of including previously unconsolidated foreign subsidiaries, sales have reached new highs in recent quarters. First quarter ended December 31 showed earnings up more than 10%; sales comparisons were not meaningful.

While a dividend increase in the area of 10% has been discussed by directors, Phase 2 guidelines may limit the increase to a smaller amount. In any case, the yield afforded even including a full 10% increase, would be less than 1%. Therefore, because of your income requirements, I would suggest switching from these shares into Central Maine Power. This electric utility returns 6.8% on shares selling at 17-1/2.

Q: When I retire next year, I can withdraw $20,000 or $126 monthly for life (10 years guaranteed) from my annuity. Other income will provide $480 monthly for my husband and me. Should the $20,000 be invested in a high-quality income fund, tax exempt bonds, the bank or should I take the monthly payments of $126? I would like to be able to protect this $20,000 to leave for my children. M.E.

A: I would not recommend the monthly payments since unless you live 13 plus years, you and your heirs would be guaranteed only $15,120. Nor would I favor a fund or tax exempt bonds. Your income bracket would be insufficient to justify the latter investment and the former could deplete part of your capital.

By depositing one-half of your funds in certificates of deposit and the remainder in good quality utility bonds, your capital will remain intact. In addition, your income return would be close to 7% with today's money rates. This would give you about $115 added income monthly.

Earnings Undernourished At General Foods

Q: I hold shares of General Foods purchased at somewhat higher levels than those prevailing. What is your opinion of its future? H.M. What are the Federal Trade Commission's charges and how will they affect General Foods? W.N.

A: NYSE-listed General Foods is currently trading near its 12-year low levels as a result of disappointing 13-and-39-week results plus the FTC charges against GF and the other three largest breakfast cereal makers.

Despite significantly higher volume in the 39-week period, GF's profit margins were not maintained and earnings per share fell 2.9% to $1.68. In the 13-week January period, General Foods reported a net loss of $18.8 million incurred from a write-off of certain unprofitable operations — principally involving the firm's food-away-from-home subsidiaries. At this rate, GF may be heading toward its first year in 19 of declining earnings.

As to the FTC charges, the commission alleges that the four largest cereal makers, Kellogg, General Foods, General Mills and Quaker Oats, have illegally established and maintained a noncompetitive market structure and shared monopoly power for over 30 years through: the proliferation of brands and trademark promotion, artificial differentiation of products, unfair methods of competition in advertising and product promotion, restrictive retail shelf space control programs and acquisition of competitors. At the same time, the commission introduced a number of relief measures which could be ordered in the future. Although this action does add an element of uncertainty to shares, it is in the preliminary stages and a solution to this matter may well be some years down the road. In the meantime, therefore, the overriding consideration for GF is earning power which should resume in 1973, aided by new product introduction and diversification into more rapidly growing and potentially more profitable areas. Hold for recovery gains.

Ampex Having Difficulty Recording Profits

Q: Several years ago I bought Ampex (NYSE). At that time I was advised of the stock's wonderful longer-term prospects, but since then it has gone down rather than up. What future do you see here? Should I sell? J.C.

A: Since 1967, Ampex's earnings growth has been rather erratic. And, in fiscal 1971, growth slowed completely as sales fell 7.2% and a deficit of $1.23 per share was incurred. Fiscal 1972 results have shown no improvement; Despite a 12% sales gain year-to-year, a 24 cent share loss was posed for the initial half.

As to prospects for the remainder of the year, Ampex recently announced it will report a deficit of about $40 million for fiscal 1972, roughly two-thirds of which will come from current operations, and the balance from a revaluation of assets and the setting up of reserves in several areas. With little or no earnings improvement expected over the near term, Ampex shares offer limited appeal. Sell.

Q: I have a small profit in Continental Air Lines (NYSE). Should I get out now or hang on for more appreciation? G.E.

A: Continental managed to come through the recent airline industry slump in good shape — being one of the few carriers to stay in the black. Profit margins expanded substantially, aided by tight cost controls and aggressive marketing. Nine-month 1972 (ended September) revenues advanced 14%, while earnings rebounded 72% to 55 cents a share. Cargo operations received a considerable boost during the period from the prolonged dock strikes; and much of this business should be retained.

Industrywide prospects are favorable for 1972 and beyond: airline passenger traffic is expected to show good future growth as the economy picks up and consumer confidence improves, while the 7% investment tax credit should prove particularly beneficial. Along with this growth, Continental should be favorably affected by route awards of recent years, continued tight cost controls and anticipated higher fares. Currently trading in new high ground (1971-1972), CAL shares offer speculative long-term appreciation potential and should be held.

LAUDS NCJW WASHINGTON — In a White House proclamation issued in connection with the national observance of National Council of Jewish Women Week, President Nixon has hailed the contributions of the NCJW to humanity. He sent telegrams to an area NCJW meeting here and to a luncheon meeting of the NCJW executive committee in New York City, citing the group's "dedicated participation in civic affairs and volunteer community services" for nearly 80 years.
