Ask Annexation Of Golan Heights

TEL AVIV — A newly formed group of Druze headed by lawyer Kamal Kassem has called for official Israeli annexation of the Golan Heights to enable the 8,000 Druze villagers in the former Syrian territory to be united with Israel's Druze.

"Israel needs new immigrants and pays heavily for their absorption," Kassem declared. "Here we can have 8,000 new immigrants who would cost the state nothing. They are already absorbed with the Druze of Israel." Kassem said the Golan Heights Druze community agreed with him.

In the situation that prevails, the Golan Druze cannot join the Army or the police force or get other jobs to open to Israeli Druze.

Allon Softens Rejection Of King Hussein's Plan

TEL AVIV — Deputy Premier Yigal Allon softened the harsh rejection that greeted King Hussein's proposals last week for a federation of the East and West Banks of the Jordan River.

Mr. Allon, expressing what he called his own views in an interview published in the newspaper Maariv, said he had no quarrel with the Jordanian King's concept of a federation, which would grant semi-autonomy to the Palestinian West Bank.

"On the contrary, it may be easier to find a solution to what is called the Palestinian problem in the framework of a federation than in other ways," Mr. Allon was quoted as saying.

But, like other Israeli leaders, Mr. Allon firmly rejected what he described as King Hussein's map for the future borders between Israel and his proposed united Arab kingdom.

The King said at a news conference that his plan envisioned a complete withdrawal of Israeli forces from all the Jordanian land that they occupied in the 1967 war.

Mr. Allon dismissed as unacceptable the King's proposal on borders and said he found it strange that the King had failed to mention a peace settlement with Israel as a prerequisite for a federation.

The Deputy Premier dismissed as "a joke more than a challenge" the King's reference to Jerusalem as capital of the Palestinian region in the projected federation. Israel has said that she will not withdraw from the former Jordanian sector of the city.

Mr. Allon outlined his own proposal for a settlement, which he termed compatible with the federation plan except that the boundaries would be completely different from those proposed by the King.

Under his plan, he said, Israel would be defended from attack from the east by the Jordan river, which would serve as an antitank ditch. There would also be a "security belt" along the river, he said, that would range from a width of 10 to 16 miles from north to south and that would be impenetrable to armor because of strategic slopes.

Mr. Allon's remarks were seen as reflecting a more moderate approach to the Hussein proposals than that of Premier Golda Meir, who told Parliament that the King's message "does not bring tidings of peace" and that the plan could not serve as a basis for an agreement.

Israeli Troops Leave Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda — The departure of Israeli paratroop and army instructors from Uganda was almost complete as President Idi Amin's deadline for their expulsion drew near.

About 70 Israelis are affected by the expulsion, which the President ordered after an Israeli newspaper suggested that he canceled a visit to Egypt because of opposition to it at home.

General Amin ordered the two training missions to leave. Most members of the Air Force training mission, were also understood to be on their way home. Uganda has also demanded that the Israeli Embassy staff in Kampala be reduced from seven to four.

Uganda's Foreign Minister, Wanume Xibedi, has said that the phasing out of Israel's military instructors is a direct consequence of Israeli press attacks on Uganda and the "undesirable activities" of Israelis living in the country.

DEFENDS SHAPIRO

JERUSALEM — Acting Premier Yigal Allon defended his colleague, Justice Minister Yaacov Shimshon Shapiro, against allegations that he was slow to investigate an alleged scandal in the affairs of Netiv Neft, the government-owned company drilling oil in the Sinai.

New York Shoppers Complain Of Price Rise In Passover Foods

NEW YORK — Passover shoppers were complaining last week, and retailers and manufacturers were admitting, that the cost of serving kosher-for-Passover meals for the holiday beginning Wednesday night has gone up since last year.

"I realize the theme of the holiday is sacrifice, but this is ridiculous," said a young man as he paid 85 cents in a Greenwich Village grocery for a box of Passover egg matzohs.

While there is no official evidence that the cost of Passover food has risen more than the 6 per cent that other food has gone up in the last year, both manufacturers and retailers concede that price tags are higher on matzoh, matzoh meal, macaroons, gefilte fish and other holiday items.

"What can I say to you? We had a new union contract... the cost of supplies is going up... you can't raise prices as much as you'd like to," said Howard Manischewitz, advertising manager of the largest Passover food company.

He said that the price of Manischewitz macaroons was up about 3 cents over last year, matzoh up about 4 cents and cake mix up about 6 cents. But Mr. Manischewitz added that Passover food was always more expensive to make than regular kosher food, because, according to religious law, the manufacturing apparatus must be steam-cleaned before and after the kosher-for-Passover items are made.

Ernest Brown, a vice president of Waldbaum's supermarkets, acknowledged that on the retail level, too, Passover food prices were up. But like Mr. Manischewitz, he insisted that stores were merely trying to keep up with their own rising costs.

"The change is just moderate from last year, but if you raise prices a penny people notice," Mr. Brown said. "Actually, we should be the ones who should complain. We don't make any money on holiday items, because we don't profiteer at holiday time. The five-pound box of matzohs we sell for $2.49 costs us $2.49."

However, as housewives crowded the city's markets, loading shopping carts high with Passover delicacies, they showed little sympathy for the plight of Mr. Brown and Mr. Manischewitz.

"I feel terrible," declared Mrs. Nettie Schiffer as she waited at the checkout counter of the Shoprite supermarkets on East 16th Street and Kings Highway in Brooklyn. "Even though I made a seder for two people it cost a fortune."

Another customer, Mrs. Anne Brown, contended that Passover canned peaches sold last year for 37 cents and were now 57 cents. "I wouldn't buy it if my company starved to death," she declared, adding: "They may as well put a gun up against you and say 'give me your money.' No wonder when kids get married now they buy treif (non-kosher) meat."

But not all shoppers were complaining about the cost of Passover. Outside Millers cheese store on Essex Street on the Lower East Side, customers waited patiently in lines for over an hour just to buy Israeli specialties and Millers's own Passover warmer cheese. Prices were not discussed.

"We don't care about the prices as long as we get the cheese," said one elderly man.

NEED NEW SEWERS

TEL AVIV — When this city was built over half a century ago, the founding fathers were too busy building houses to pay attention to sewers. The present city council seems to be following in their footsteps. Gale force winds and torrential rains have flooded many downtown streets here and over the country these past few weeks. Anarchy has reigned at many a busy intersection as the traffic lights failed and yellow-raincoated policemen tried vainly to control vast traffic snarl-ups. Many residents feel that a recent loan from the World Bank to improve the nation's sewage system may be utilized in the not-too-distant future to make sure that the annual floods are prevented.

FASHIONS FROM ISRAEL: This two-piece black lurex suit with colored chainette stripes by Pnina Shalton will be one of the 83 stylings featured at the 1972 Israel Bond Fashion Show on Saturday, April 8, at the Temple Emanu-El meeting hall.

Fashion in Israel is one of the leading sources of export revenue which exceeds its own record each year. The 1972 fashion show will be the largest ever with 83

Asks Permission To Publish 'Exodus' In Lapp

COPENHAGEN — The Israel ambassador to Denmark, Moshe Leshem, has written to Danish Minister of Culture Niels Matiasen, requesting the government's help in the matter of publishing a book in the Lapp dialect in Greenland. The book is Leon Uris's best-seller, "Exodus." Not long ago a Catholic priest, who is known here as a particularly warm friend of Israel, finished the translation of "Exodus" into the dialect spoken by the inhabitants of the Arctic Greenland, which belongs to Denmark.

The priest, Pin Linde, was also the organizer of the first trip of Greenlanders and Lapps to Israel some six months ago. Leshem's request was "well met" by Matiasen, sources close to the minister reported this week. The Israeli ambassador, who is also a personal friend of Uris, has asked the author to facilitate the project by giving up his authors' rights and fees — something which Uris will find easy to do, since there are no more than a few thousand who read and write the Lapp dialect spoken in Greenland.

READS QUEEN

NEW YORK — Egypt's ambassador to the United Nations, Dr. Mohammed Hassanein el-Zayyat, disclosed to the New York Times that his favorite entertainment reading is Ellery Queen mysteries.

Mrs. Steven S. Scber

Miss Fay Adrienne Frank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Frank of 38 Sayles Avenue, Pawtucket, became the bride on Saturday, March 25, of Steven Slobodinsky Saber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Slobodinsky of 66 Rochambeau Avenue. Rabbi William G. Braude and Cantor Norman Gewirtz officiated at the 7:30 p.m. ceremony held at Temple Beth El.

The bride and bridegroom were escorted by their parents. The bride was gowned in ivory peau de sole designed with a scoop neckline, empire bodice, bishop sleeves, and an A-shaped skirt. Reembroidered Alencon lace, accented with seed pearls and sequins, formed the bodice, sleeves and trimmed the skirt. She wore a mantilla of matching imported English net with reembroidered Alencon lace.

Miss Ann M. Frank, sister of the bride, and Miss Sandra Slobodinsky, sister of the bridegroom, were the maids of honor. Best men were Ronald H. Glantz and Joseph A. Florio.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live at 114 Overhill Road.

The bride, a graduate of Pawtucket West High School, attended Hofstra University, before she transferred to Providence College, where she is a political science pre-law major.

Mr. Saber, a graduate of Hope High School, of Providence College and the New England School of Law, also attended the University Graduate School of Economics. He is assistant city solicitor for the City of Providence and is a partner in the law firm of Glantz, Florio and Saber.

Cannot Confirm Number Of POWs

NEW YORK — Rabbinical leaders here said they could not confirm the statement in Paris by Rabbi Schlem Rubin of New York that there are 30 Jewish prisoners of war in North Vietnam. Rabbi Rubin, of Young Israel of Peiham Parkway, said he had gotten the figure from North Vietnamese representatives to the Paris peace talks who rejected his request to conduct Passover services for Jewish POWs.

Rabbi Maurice Lamm, an official of the Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy of the Jewish Welfare Board, said that according to Maj. Gen. Will Hyatt, chief of chaplains of the United States Army, there was no information on the number of Jewish POWs, if any, held by Hanoi. Rabbi Lamm said Hyatt had advised him that the Army knows of the "desire and interest" of chaplains of all faiths to visit the POWs, but that no progress on the issue has been made with the North Vietnamese.

NAMED PRESIDENT
MIAMI BEACH — Norman Kasser, former Philadelphian and prominent Coral Gables businessman, was named to the presidency of the South Florida Chapter of the American Technion Society.

French Socialist Party Leader Gives Support To Palestinians

PARIS — French Socialist Party leader Francois Mitterand has said that he was on the side "of all the oppressed nations of the world, including the Palestinians." Mitterand, who is due to leave for Israel at the invitation of the government ruling party, made his statement at a press conference held at the Socialist Party's headquarters here.

Mitterand, who had convened a press conference in order to rap the Czech government for the political arrests and trials which it is carrying out, said that "Socialists support victims of injustice all over the world," adding that "we support the victims of Franco's police in Spain, as well as the Russian Jews who are not allowed to leave the Soviet Union." After the conference, Mitterand refused to further explain his words. A Socialist Party spokesman said, however, that in spite of Mitterand's remarks "nothing is changed and he will leave for Israel."

Observers here believe that Mitterand expressed support for the Palestinian problem in order to try and placate the Communist Party as he was about to take it to task over the Czech crisis. Mitterand, who hopes to lead a Socialist-Communist opposition coalition during the next presidential elections, would like to improve relations with the CP though he has to take a strong line over Czechoslovakia on behalf of his traditionally more moderate supporters. The Mideast is of no political importance to the Socialists but is of vital importance to the Communists because of their links with Moscow.

It is understood that Mitterand, the only serious opposition contender for power in France today, will deal with the Mideast issue at a press conference after his return from Israel.

ZIONIST AGENTS
PARIS — Anti-Semitic leaflets charging extreme left-wingers with being "Zionist agents" were distributed throughout the city. The leaflets signed by an extreme right-wing organization, "Oeuvre Francaise," called for an end to "anarchy in the country's political and social life caused by Jewish half-castes." The leaflets singled out such well-known anti-Israeli figures as Alain Krivine, a leader of one of the Trotskyist splinter groups, and Jacques Geismar as "typical Zionist agents."

Georgian Jews To Establish Ulpan

NEW YORK — Jews in Tbilisi, Soviet Georgia, have been permitted by the authorities to establish an ulpan, the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry has reported. There was no immediate explanation of the decision other than that the authorities saw it as a way to undercut the Jewish protest movement there. The Tbilisi ulpan will be run by Gershon and Shalva Tsitsuashevili. In Moscow, however, three Jewish activists were denied the right to establish one.

In Leningrad, Mikhail (Misha) Klich and Samuel Motzkin, who have been teaching Hebrew in weekly two-and-a-half hour private classes, were told by revenue service inspectors that they were unqualified to teach because they do not have philology degrees. Klich had left the Technical Institute for Mechanics and Optics, where he was a student, to teach the Hebrew classes. He and Motzkin told the authorities that because they have no diplomas they would forego the one-ruble ($1.11) fee they have been charging each student per lesson. The authorities, however, gave them one month to discontinue the classes, the SSSJ said.

In Riga, the SSSJ reported, 95 Jews wrote to the chairman of the Journalists Association of the Latvian Republic and to the editors of Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, and Tszina. They protested that recent articles attacking migration to Israel were not objective because they ignored the fact that "tens of thousands" of Soviet Jews have left or want to leave. The writers asked permission to hold a conference to give "our opinions" on Jewish culture, the problems of Jews in the USSR, assimilation, anti-Semitism, Zionism, emigration, trials of Jews for political reasons, and the Arab-Israeli conflict.

B'nai B'rith Provides For Rutgers Hillel

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — David M. Blumberg, president of B'nai B'rith, has announced that his organization had provided funds to avert a threatened shutdown of its Hillel Foundation building at Rutgers University.

He said that the Hillel programs at the $800,000 facility that had opened in September on the Rutgers campus — programs that also serve Douglass College here and nearby Livingston College — "will remain open and any curtailed program will be restored."

Hillel's kosher dining club, which had served 150 students until its operations were suspended two weeks ago as an economy measure, will be reopened this week in time to provide Passover meals, Mr. Blumberg said.

To Discipline Officers For Treatment Of Bedouins

TEL AVIV — The Chief of Staff, Lieut. Gen. David Elazer, told the Cabinet in Jerusalem that senior army officers and a civilian official had "overstepped their authority" during the evacuation of Bedouins from an area in the occupied Sinai Peninsula that had been fenced as a security measure. He said disciplinary measures are to be taken against the officers.

The Cabinet announcement was not clear, but an authoritative source said that a committee of inquiry had not criticized the displacement of the Bedouins, only the method. According to complaints, the soldiers bulldozed dwellings, sealed wells and destroyed crops.

The land fenced was south of Rafa. The Israelis said that the area had been used by guerrillas who had attacked Israel settlements in the Negev Desert.

CENTER OF ATTENTION for Mrs. Mary Collymore, supervisor of The Miriam Hospital Blood Bank, and Dr. Herbert C. Lichtman, director of the division of clinical pathology and medical director of the blood bank, is a certificate noting renewal of accreditation of the hospital's blood bank for another three years.

Blood Banks Association Renews Miriam Accreditation

The American Association of Blood Banks has renewed the accreditation of The Miriam Hospital Blood Bank for another three-year period.

Dr. Herbert C. Lichtman, director of clinical pathology and medical director of the hospital blood bank, has received a certificate of accreditation from Dr. William G. Battelle, president of the blood banks association.

"Through inspection and evaluation, it has been determined that the level of technical and administrative performance within your blood bank meets or exceeds the standards established by this association," Dr. Battelle said. Prior to receiving its reaccreditation, The Miriam's blood bank was thoroughly inspected by an association specialist, and detailed information was submitted by the hospital in response to a comprehensive questionnaire.

Accreditation of The Miriam Hospital's blood bank, one of more than 1,300 which have been certified by the association, assures the patient who receives a transfusion that the bank has voluntarily met high standards of procedures.

Spring Air Travel Bargains

Despite the bomb scares, if your time is limited and you're traveling a fairly long distance, a plane is the only way to go. Despite the greater inconvenience of baggage search, delays in take-off and the like these days, if spring is your vacation time, this is when you're searching for air travel bargains and guidance to what might be the most economical deal for you.

Okay, to illustrate: what about buying a regular economy fare ticket on a plane which is already fully booked and then showing up at the gate 20 to 30 minutes before scheduled departure to have one of three things happen: you would simply take off in the economy seat of someone who missed the plane; or you would be shifted from economy to first class at no extra cost; or if no seats at all were available on the plane, you would get a full refund and a free ride on the next available flight to your destination.

This is Eastern Airlines' "leisure class" experiment designed to slash today's drastic losses due to "no-shows" who book space and never show up for the flight. It runs until March 31 and Eastern has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board to extend it through April, 1973. It has proven to be a bonanza for kids, older people and those with limited funds in no particular hurry.

The overall trend in standard air fares and airport surcharges is UP, UP — but low-cost package deals and travel discounts still are multiplying and these can cut your family's vacation trip costs by hundreds of dollars.

As a result, huge numbers of you are now routinely flying a thousand miles or more for a short holiday. Flying for long weekend visits is becoming commonplace. Almost half of America's families plan a vacation during the next six months, 3.5 per cent abroad.

Until June 1, United Airlines is offering big discounts for groups flying from the East Coast to Western ski resorts. It's also offering discounts of 20 to 35 per cent to June 1 for midweek flights between Northeast and Midwest cities and Florida for trips lasting five to 21 days.

Until June 1, American Airlines is offering a "Take your wife to California" deal for $106.92 round trip from New York City, about one-third the regular coach fare. The fare includes free hotel rooms and a rented car with unlimited mileage. Hitch; no stopovers and you must return within five days of your departure.

Until May 31, TWA is offering a $99 round-trip air fare between New York and Los Angeles if you're under 21, are accompanied by a parent paying full fare and stay no longer than four days before you return home. TWA is also offering through May 31 a 25 per cent discount on 7 to 30 day trips between various East Coast cities and Los Angeles and San Francisco. Most other airlines offer some variation of this discount, but to get it you must travel weekdays.

* Mohawk is offering a "weekends unlimited" deal in which you may, with few exceptions, fly as far as you want on this line's routes for only $36.67. Hitch; you must do all your flying between Saturday

The Paycheck Is The Great American Secret

Sender Vanocur, the television commentator, left NBC to accept a job in public TV. An inquiring reporter printed the news that Mr. Vanocur's salary was $85,000 per annum. The news rocked some Congressmen, particularly Harley Staggers of West Virginia. He said it was entirely too much and that he would vote against any appropriation for public television if Mr. Vanocur's paycheck is an indication of how public funds are disbursed.

Most corporations keep the paychecks of their employees shrouded in secrecy. Many employees claim the sealed paycheck is a management trick and secret weapon which perpetuates inequities to management's advancement.

Ask any friend how much he makes a year and you have made an enemy. The paycheck figures are as private and sacrosanct as the rites of the nuptial bed.

In fact, the last secret exchanged between the adulteress and the adulterer is how much her husband makes. That is always the clincher.

Professor Robert F. Rapas of Michigan State University did not understand how possessive people can be about their secrets. He obtained, reproduced and mailed copies of the entire faculty salary list to all university employees, 2,500 colleagues in all.

A ton of brick descended on him, dumped in part by some of the older, wiser professors who called him a "Judas" and wanted him fired for moral turpitude.

The sealed paycheck has two geneses. One, of course, is the desire of management to save as much overhead as it can by treating salaries as confidential. Where salary scales are public, such as those in the Police Department or the Public Schools, the older hands in the department eventually establish the principle of parity. When a younger man gets a raise, the senior employees receive a corresponding raise. Members of the unions bargain openly and their income often makes headlines.

But there are eight million

Three couples were seated at the head table during the years the Third Seder celebrations were held here.

Alter and Sarah Boyman. Dr. Ilie and Anna Berger. Archibald and Ida Silverman. We miss seeing them all at the Seder.

Alter, who together with Henry Burt, originated the Third Seder idea in 1927, occupied the chairman's place until the year he died.

Archibald, or Archie, as he was called by everyone, came every year to tell a humorous story and, since the founding of the General Jewish Committee, would come with Mr. Joseph Galkin, director of the GJC, to deliver the check allotted to the Labor Zionist Group, hosts of the Third Seder.

Ilie Berger, the spiritual head of the Zionists in Providence, though not a Labor Zionist, felt that here was a gathering of kindred spirits who remembered Zion at all of their celebrations.

And so they came to the Third Seder year in, year out, and we who will come to the Seder this year will bring back their memories.

We will also bring back to memory the years when the Third Seder was held at the glittering, dazzling ballroom of the old

Narragansett Hotel, its hundreds of lights in the crystal chandeliers shining down on the festive gathering.

He who has not been to one of these Third Seder nights has not witnessed a people's Yom Tov in his life.

What was the idea behind the Third Seder? Why a Third Seder?

The first two Sedorsim of Passover are reminders of the exodus from Egyptian bondage to freedom. The Third Seder celebrated the rebirth of a land through labor. The motivating force behind the Third Seder was the Histadrut in Israel.

The Histadrut, the Labor Union of Israel, is also the builder of roads, of houses, of farms, of schools, of water works, of bridges, and the publisher of books, newspapers and journals in Israel. It is an organization that makes up three fourths of the labor force in Israel, and is the cooperative which sells and buys, ships and transports by air and by land, and supplies the needs of the Israel army. Histadrut is at once the employer and the employee, the investor and the profit sharer, the contractor and consumer of Israel. There is hardly a phase of life, from nursery to hospitalization, from bringing the immigrants to and procuring for them a place in the new land; all this is the work of Histadrut.

As the people sat down to the simple repast they knew who the Third Seder was for, and what it represented. In song, in dramatic sketches and in speeches by famous men and women, the story of Histadrut and of the growth of Israel was told.

There was still another tradition that grew with the Third Seder. That was the Passover Journal published by the Poale

Zion (the Labor Zionist Group) every year in honor of the Third Seder. As the years went by we came to appreciate the value of the Passover Journal. Alter Boyman, the editor of the publication, was presented with a bound volume of all the journals, and this volume was given to the Beth El Library, where it is kept locked up. It contains notes and critical essays of all that has happened in the Jewish community since 1927 to the last year when the Passover Journal ceased to appear, due to the death of the editor. It is a treasure house of information about our community.

The tradition of the Third Seder is kept up today for the 45th year since its origin. Mr. Harry Finkelstein, the chairman of the Third Seder of 1972, has arranged for the children of Alter and Sarah Boyman, Rabbi Melr and Sylvia Lasker of Philadelphia, to be the guests and to speak during the evening.

May the tradition of the Third Seder never cease in Providence.

And now a personal note. We cannot overemphasize the importance of the Passover Journals to the history of the Jewish community in Providence. The editor, because of his interest in all community affairs, was an acute observer of the Jewish scene. My plea is to those who have accumulated the Journals through the years to send them to the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association. They will do a great service to the community. Your children will learn about themselves through the pages of the Passover Journal.

The Lyons Den

NEW YORK: During Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek's visit here recently, he viewed the Hadassah exhibit at the Jewish Museum. On being asked his opinion of King Hussein's latest peace proposal, the mayor replied: "I am only concerned with garbage collections. I am not running for higher office." ... Former Chief Justice Earl Warren was in Geneva last week, attending an International Labor Organization conference.

Prince Mario Ruspoli, ex-husband of Dolores Guinness Litman, will marry Baroness Loana Wanger in Paris next month. ... A New York art dealer is negotiating to sell an old-master painting to a California industrialist at a record price — probably more than double the previous all-time high for any painting. ... Vittorio de Sica has been commissioned by the Vienna State Opera to direct two operas for its 1972-73 season, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

Bernardo Bertolucci was voted last year's best director by the National Society of Film Criticism and nominated for an Academy Award for his screenplay of "The Conformist." He is now directing Marlon Brando in "Last Tango in Paris," an Italian-French coproduction for UA release, now filming on location in Paris. Bertolucci, son of an Italian film critic, was educated in movie theaters. In his early teens, he accompanied his father to screenings, sometimes two or three a day. He first saw Brando in "Viva Zapata!" when he was 11, in 1952.

But the director didn't meet his star until last summer in Paris when Brando came at his invitation to discuss their current project.

The FCC has given full approval to Teatervision, the pay system of which Dore Schary is president. ... Ruth Jacobi, wife of Lou Jacobi, the actor, is studying for her master's degree at Hunter. She is teaching dramatic art to children. ... Lila Kedrova, who won an Oscar for "Zorba the Greek," is now living quietly in Belleville, Ontario, Canada. She is doing summer stock in that country. ... Alice Tully, who gave the hall bearing her name at Lincoln Center, is one of Mayor Lindsay's top campaign contributors.

On April 13, the famed Costello's bar on Third Avenue will be the scene of a cocktail party honoring Jack Lemmon, whose new film is "The War Between Men and Women." In the movie, Lemmon portrays a character loosely based on the life of the late James Thurber. Costello's was the favorite hangout of the artist-humorist, and on the walls of the bar are original drawings that Thurber drew there during the time he spent at Costello's.

At the Rainbow Room this week, the Porto Wine Institute hosted a reception honoring British Colonel A.J.B. Rutherford, CBE, who is the queen's taster. ... Dell Publishing paid $295,000 to Putnam for the paperback rights to David Niven's autobiography, "The Moon's a Balloon." ... I found Marlon Brando most believable in the title role of "The Godfather." ... Although "Steel Yard Blues" with Jane Fonda, Donald Sutherland and Peter Boyle hasn't been released

Today's hand is such an easy one, or should have been, that every Declarer should have simply laid their hands face up on the table after the opening lead and stated exactly how they were going to play the hand. Actually, there is absolutely nothing to the play at all. Something has to be done, there is no avoiding it, but how the various Declarers went at this hand was really something to see. Even some well above average players approached the hand either erroneously or else made quite a serious problem out of it before solving it correctly.

Mrs. Charles Steingold was Declarer, East-West vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

E	S	W	N

South had a problem with her rebid after she heard her partner respond 2 Clubs. She had what could be counted as 9 tricks in her own hand if one counts all eight Diamonds as winners. Her partner had gone to the two level in a different suit showing at least 10 points. There was a sure game and possible slam. Some Souths probed for Aces and finding only one missing went on to six. Others jumped right to 5 Diamonds and hoped their partners would carry on from there. No matter where they ended the play of the hand was the same.

Almost every West led the Spade Jack and the Dummy was spread. Here is when I say the Declarers playing this hand should have quickly taken stock and appraised their situation. They could win the first trick and then examine each suit. In Trumps they had a possible loser but not a probable one. With 10 between the two hands the Queen was very likely to fall. The other three suits were something else. Both Hearts and Spades had a potential loser now. Also the Club finesse had to be tried and here was the crux of the problem. The fate of the hand rested on that Club suit.

I watched the thoughtless Declarers do what came naturally and draw Trumps but when it took 2 rounds to finish that job, that exhausted the Trumps from Dummy. See what that does. Now they did attack the Clubs; two didn't even take the Club finesse, utterly ridiculous, the others took it and saw it work. So they didn't lose any Clubs and they made 5 but they were now unable to return to their hand to take that successful finesse again. They lost the Heart and Spade because at that time they couldn't help it.

What they should have done is this; sooner or later they would have to take that Club finesse. If it lost, the Spade and Heart would then be lost too, but if it won, as it does, it could be taken twice if timed correctly and a discard obtained to give 12 tricks to Declarer.

Only one round of Trumps should be drawn, the drop of the Queen divulging the favorable lie of the cards there. Now the first Club finesse. When that works, return to the South hand with that other Trump. This accomplishes also the drawing of the last Trump. Now the other Club finesse and then a discard of one of those two losers on the Club Ace. In fact, if West had had only three Clubs instead of four, seven would be made. As it was, six was cold and could have been claimed right off the bat; the statement being if the Club finesse works either 6 or 7 would be made, if it lost, 4 would be the maximum. There was no other possibility and nothing at all could change this so why delay it.

Moral: If a finesse has to be taken and can be repeated if successful, take steps to have the necessary entries handy at the right time. Never waste the opportunity.

Hussein To Make Six-Week Tour

AMMAN, Jordan. — King Hussein left Amman for Washington to explain his recently announced plan for a federal kingdom on the East and West Banks of the Jordan River. His talks with United States officials are also expected to cover economic aid.

The visit is part of a six-week tour during which the King will also have a medical checkup, possibly in London.

King Hussein is being accompanied by several civilian and military officials, including Ahmed Toukan, the royal court minister; Said al-Nabulsi, the Minister of Economy, and Zaid Rifal, who was appointed the King's political adviser last week.

King Hussein's plan, which would grant semi-autonomy to Palestinians, on the West Bank, was unanimously approved by the two houses of the Jordanian Parliament. About half the members are from the West Bank.

The King said at a news conference that his plan, opposed by several Arab countries and

One Out Of Five

American, Canadian Emigrants Cannot Adjust To Israel

TEL AVIV — One out of five American and Canadian immigrants leaves Israel within a year of coming here, according to figures disclosed here.

The president of the North American Immigrants Association, Mrs. Stephanie Bernstein, told the annual convention of the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel that 21 per cent of the North Americans simply cannot adjust to Israeli and the Israeli way of life.

"Most of them do not know Hebrew and have no relatives or friends in Israel," she said.

Mrs. Bernstein pointed out that, while 10,000 immigrants had been expected from the United States and Canada last year, only 8,500 came.

According to association figures, there are 30,000 Jews from the United States and Canada now in Israel.

SEND THREATS

JERUSALEM — Threats to murder prominent Arabs of East Jerusalem and the West Bank for "treason" arrived here recently in the mails of several news agencies. The leaflets, signed by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, singled out for death Anwar Nusseibeh, former Defense Minister of Jordan, and Hikmat el Massri, former Speaker of Jordan's Parliament. The treason referred to their alleged collaboration with King Hussein.

Kremlin Defends Its Policy On Jewish Emigration

MOSCOW — The Kremlin, defending its policy of limited emigration for Jews, labeled as "absurd" and "truly fantastic" the estimates of some Zionist groups that hundreds of thousands of the more than two-million Jews would leave if given a chance.

Joining the numbers game that has surrounded the controversial issue of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union, a high police official said that 21,000 Jews had left for Israel since the end of World War II, including "about 10,000" last year.

The official, Boris T. Shumilin, who is a Deputy Minister of Interior, said an "insignificant" number of applications were still outstanding. He made public a partial listing that included 258 applications in Moscow, 50 in Leningrad and 119 in Kiev.

Mr. Shumilin, breaking a long official silence on emigration policy, made public his views in the form of an interview given to an unidentified correspondent of Novosti, a feature press service.

To insure wide publicity abroad, the interview was transmitted over the foreign service agency, it could not be learned immediately whether the information would also be made public in the controlled domestic press.

By issuing a lengthy statement on the issue of Jewish emigration, the Soviet Government appeared to have two purposes in mind.

On the one hand, it evidently sought to counter statements abroad that a substantial portion of the country's Jewish population wanted to emigrate.

Soviet Jews have demonstrated interest in emigrating to Israel particularly since Israel's victory over the Arabs in 1967. They have been motivated by a complex of factors including Zionist aspirations and complaints of discrimination within the Soviet Union. The Soviet Government has denied all charges of ethnic bias.

On the other hand, the statement appeared designed to

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

A TIME FOR THOUGHT: It's a season for looking backward and forward. It's a time for gratitude for the blessings that have been bestowed upon us. It's a time for a temporary halt in the mad whirl of life and the excitement of the sports world; for reflecting on progress and accomplishments. It's a time for renewed inspiration in the examples set by the deeds accomplished by others. In the world of sports, it's a time to remember the efforts and success of a little fellow named Andy Cohen who dethroned a monarch when he replaced the immortal Roger Hornsby at second base for the Giants; for remembering another boy who played on the sandlots outside Yankee Stadium and moved on to undying fame when he made his way inside the fences and established the name "Hank" Greenberg in indelible ink on the record books with individual performances that stand alone. It's a season for recalling the deeds of others, too many for listing here, who have proven that "where there's a will, there's a way." It's a time to know and emphasize the belief that we are a great people.

COULD BE: It's a long time ago that George Bleackley wrote about soccer football in the old News-Tribune but his enthusiasm for the game seems as intense as ever. "Maybe if the scores were bigger, the American sports fans might become more interested in the game," he said the other day.

Kremlin Defends Its Policy On Jewish Emigration

calm Arab fears that Moscow, by allowing even the present limited emigration, was adding to Israel's potential.

Possible Arab strictures seemed to weigh particularly on Mr. Shumilin, who has been charged with the task of granting exit permits to those who wish to leave the Soviet Union.

In an effort to minimize the significance of Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel, the minister noted that the Arab countries themselves had contributed 800,000 Jews to Israel's present population of two million.

Mr. Shumilin denied that Jews were given preference or that they faced particular difficulties in emigration. He said their applications were being processed as were those of any Soviet citizens.

Apparently alluding to the better education and greater technological skills of Soviet Jews compared with Jews from North Africa and the Middle East, Mr. Shumilin said that applicants in some categories were not permitted to emigrate because of present Israeli-Arab hostilities.

He said the restrictions applied to Soviet citizens who had been given military training as well as to those who had been engaged in secret defense work. It was the first time that a responsible Soviet official had asserted publicly that those with access to secret information were barred from emigration because of the Middle East conflict.

NO KOSHER CERTIFICATES

JERUSALEM — Most of the hotels in the Holy City do not have kosher certificates from the Jerusalem Religious Council, despite the fact that the council provides the hotels with Kashrut supervisors — for a fee. The Council recently published a list of hotels in the capital which it considered kosher. Only a few were listed, leaving out the majority of Jerusalem's hotels. The Religious Council refuses to grant Kashrut certificates to hotels which operate lifts, write out orders or allow bills to be paid on the Sabbath.

Hello Again!

"In basketball the rapid scoring provides continuous excitement," said George. "Soccer is a great game and it's regaining the popularity it enjoyed back when the late Sam Fletcher was coaching the Providence team at Kinsley Park."

MEMORIES ARE MADE OF THIS: "What a great fellow was Fletcher," Mr. Bleackley continued as he mused and recalled the names of outstanding performers on the pitch such as Andy Auld, James Bardell, Red Stevenson and others. "Fletcher played for Manchester before coming to America to play for Bethlehem," George recalled while straining to see through the mists of yesteryear. "Ah yes," he continued, "He was great at old Kinsley Park and in the old Cycledrome, too. And don't forget his accomplishments at Brown."

AND SO: Maybe this might cause an explosion but maybe some of the Soccer rules could be slanted a bit to provide for more scoring and making the game a terrific possibility for television.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: John F. Smollins, Jr., executive assistant to Mayor Joseph A. Doorley of Providence, representing "hizzoner" at a recent meeting, was attracted by the similarity in appearance of Dr. Wesley Hall of the American Medical Association and famed footballer Charlie Conerly. "Have you ever seen Charlie Conerly?" Smollins questioned. Before he had a chance to add, "You resemble him," the good doctor revealed that he had taught Conerly to throw the pigskin overhand. "His training was effective," commented Smollins. Conerly set a record for a rookie with thirty-two completed passes in one game.

YOU WHO KNOW NOT (And know not that you know not): Providence City Clerk Vincent Vespa recalling a famed auto race at old Narragansett Track in Cranston. "I was a little tot," said Vespa. "And my father brought me out to see DePalma." It was Ralph DePalma who raced Barney Oldfield — two immortals in automobile racing. "I missed him the first time," explained Pat DeLuca, automobile dealer, as he pointed to a prized trophy of a Moosehead in his Cranston showroom. It must have been terrifying, for the mounted head alone makes one stand back in awe. Fighting fish are among Pat's trophies and he'll be glad to tell you about them if you visit him. . . . The late Pete Clarke was a baseball player, manager and umpire; also proprietor of Casino Bowling Alleys in Providence, a popular resort for keggers from far and wide. What became of Casino Alleys? They form the floor for Oriental & Metro Laundry at 880 Broad Street and appear fit for bowling even now.

TROPHIES, PAINTINGS AND PROGNOSTICATIONS: You would recognize John Karmozyn as "Johnny," proprietor of Johnny's Clam Spa in Glendale, Rhode Island, where clams do not grow in the fresh water. Johnny's Restaurant is the realization of a dream that saw him grow from a small spa to a gourmet's (or is it gourmand?) delight. The plaques on his walls attest to his accomplishments, the paintings to a talented son. Johnny will be ready to tell you about his trip to the famed Antoinette in New Orleans but will switch the conversation to the Red Sox. "I'm afraid," he said, "that we'll be saying again, 'Wait until next year' but I'll be loyal and follow them just the same. They're trying anyway and that's something." And I say, "Be grateful and CARRY ON!"

Lubavitch Rabbi Schneerson Reaches Biblical Age Of 70

NEW YORK — Menachem Mende Schneerson, the Lubavitch rabbi, reached the Biblical age of 70 this week but he has been living in the age of the Bible every one of those years, according to a New York Times story by Israel Shenker.

For him revealed law is not only a commanding presence but also literal truth. For thousands of followers round the world, it is the Lubavitch rabbi himself who is guide to the commands and interpreter of the truth.

Thus it has been, if not since the world began, 5,732 years ago by the Jewish calendar's reckoning, then at least since the 18th century, when the Lubavitch movement was founded.

The rabbi decided to use his birthday as a pretext for demanding of his followers what he called "an additional portion of study and devotion to the cause of spreading goodness and kindness."

"I think that is a very good challenge, not only for me — it is a very good challenge for them," he said.

There would be a farbrengen (get-together) for his birthday, with about 1,500 of the male faithful jammed into the synagogue (women upstairs, looking on from behind smoked glass) at 770 Eastern Parkway in Brooklyn, to hear the Lubavitcher deliver one of his extraordinary marathon addresses.

As customary the rabbi would begin with a half-hour warmup talk. As he speaks, many in the throng rock back and forth, or side to side.

Clad in black, they suggest a vast collection of somber grandfather clocks, each keeping time in its distinctive pendular way. Sometimes whole lines of the crowded faithful sway together, like waves sweeping to the rabbi's shore. Here and there a clock stands rapt and still.

When the rabbi finally pauses they swing into a joyous Hasidic hymn, often wordless. Here song is heard as the expression of the soul, and without words the soul is unconfined.

Slowly, the rabbi picks up the rhythm with his shoulders and head, and suddenly he is bouncing vigorously up and down in his chair to the music's beat. His feet swing left and right under the white tablecloth that covers the table in front of him. The harder he bounces the louder his audience sings.

Slowly he eases himself back to a stationary position and the singing calms from thunderous unison to silence.

He resumes his discourse — each half-hour portion a separate homily or argument. Except on the Sabbath, his words (Yiddish interspersed with Hebrew) are carried by loudspeakers to those who have been unable to get into the synagogue, and by open telephone lines to a dozen Lubavitch centers round the world.

On the Sabbath, when the Orthodox will not use recording instruments, two or three followers who have extraordinary memories listen carefully and then put together a verbatim record. The Lubavitch rabbi never uses notes and never hesitates, even during his six-hour talks.

Words and music are variations on themes that owe much to the teachings of the founder of Hasidism, the Baal Shem Tov — Master of the Good Name — an 18th-century mystic who taught pious joy in the performance of commandments. The Baal Shem Tov spread the word that a simple man who prayed sincerely was better than a Talmudic scholar whose heart was cold.

One group of believers subsequently attached itself to Rabbi Schneur Zalman (1745-1813), whose movement became known as Chabad Hasidism — "Chabad" being an acronym for the Hebrew words for wisdom, understanding and knowledge.

"Age makes my life more exact," he said. "My age is demanding more of me."

Rabbi Schneur Zalman urged his faithful to serve G-d (Orthodox Jews refrain from spelling out fully names for the deity) with mind that understands, heart that feels and hand that performs.

He became known as the Alter Rebbe (old rabbi), his son was the Mittler Rebbe (middle rabbi), and his grandson (third in the dynasty) took the name Schneersohn.

It was the Mittler Rebbe who settled in Lubavitch, a village in Belorussia that was to be the center of Chabad for 102 years. In 1940 the sixth Lubavitch rabbi, a great-great-grandson of the first, moved to America and settled in Brooklyn.

When he died in 1950, his second son-in-law, the current Lubavitch rabbi, succeeded him. Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson (the "h" in Schneersohn has been dropped, for no profound reason) also happens to be a great-great-great-grandson of the founder.

There was no election, but he was the natural candidate on dynastic grounds and on the basis of his scholarship and personal qualities.

The Russian-born rabbi lives only three blocks away from Lubavitch headquarters. Twice a month he takes his only trips outside Brooklyn — to Queens, to stand silently at the grave of his father-in-law.

Since the Lubavitcher never visits anyone else, his faithful come to him. Even the President of Israel, Zalman Shazar, whose name was taken from that of the first Lubavitcher, regularly pays two visits in the United States — first to the President in Washington, and then to the rabbi who lives on President Street in Brooklyn.

Lubavitch faithful like to joke that President Shazar comes to see President Nixon so that he will have an excuse to visit the Lubavitcher.

The rabbi receives visitors twice a week — Thursdays and Sundays beginning at 8 P.M. and often continuing till dawn or later. He explains that after 8 P.M. it is difficult to reach people at their work, so time is available for visitors.

Lubavitch believers come from many countries, often flying halfway round the world simply to ask their rabbi a question or to receive his blessing. His followers — many write instead of coming in person, and he personally opens all the mail — ask him about theology business, family affairs, even medical problems.

How can he possibly reply to such a range of concerns? "I am not afraid to answer that I don't know," he replied.

"If I know, then I have no right not to answer. When someone comes to you for help and you can help him to the best of your knowledge, and you refuse him this help, you become a cause of his suffering."

At a recent audience, just before the rays of dawn eased over Eastern Parkway, the Lubavitcher gazed intently at his visitor, and from time to time a warm remarkably gentle smile lit his face. Stroking his gray beard, he explained his role as "awakening in everyone the potential that he has."

On fundamentals, the rabbi has no doubts. "If you can accept that God Almighty created billions and billions of atoms, why can't you accept that God Almighty created a human being?"

"If you are enthusiastic to substitute for the term 'God' the word 'mystery,' then I'll ask you the same thing about 'mystery.' It is much easier to accept one human being, two human beings, than to accept billions of disordered atoms whirling around without any concept, any pattern, and then with a big bang or a small bang the universe is created."

To the suggestion that his orthodoxy marks him as a conservative he objected, saying: "I don't believe that Reform Judaism is liberal and Orthodox is conservative. My explanation of conservative is someone who is so petrified he cannot accept something new. For me, Judaism, or halacha (Jewish religious law), or Torah encompasses all the universe, and it encompasses every new invention, every new theory, every new piece of knowledge or thought or action."

"Everything that happens in 1972 has a place in the Torah, and it must be interpreted, it must be explained, it must be evaluated from the point of view of Torah even if it happened for the first time in March of 1972."

His followers are outspokenly reverential, and Lubavitch students will wait hours for a glimpse of their rabbi emerging from his study.

The faithful consider him a tzaddik (holy man), but that is not the way the rabbi sees himself — "Because I am not a tzaddik," he explained. He continued: "I have never given any reason for a cult of personality, and I do all in my power to dissuade them from making it that."

The Lubavitcher rabbi and his wife, married since 1929, are childless. Who is to be the eighth Lubavitcher rabbi?

"The Messiah will come and he will take all these troubles and doubts," replied the seventh, and added smilingly: "He could come while I am here. Why postpone His coming?"

"My intention is to live many years more, and the Messiah can come tomorrow or the day after tomorrow," he said. "There's a very great deal to achieve, enough not only for my life but even for more than 120 years."

He added: "The Messiah will be a real human being. Don't translate Him as something abstract. He is tangible. He has two eyes, two ears, two legs, two hands. And one heart. The heart has four compartments. One compartment is for impure blood, which the heart makes into pure blood. And that is the function of the Messiah."

Internal Dispute Jeopardizes Spanish Recognition Of Jews

MADRID — The small Jewish community in Madrid — about 2,000 in a population of over 1.5 million — has rarely been a source of news. Recently, the Jews in the Spanish capital let it be known that they were alive and kicking — each other. For years the community has been trying to get itself officially recognized by the Spanish authorities. Its chances were seriously jeopardized, however, by a serious internal dispute which threatens to split the community into two bodies, one Sephardic (Oriental) and the other Ashkenazic (European Jews).

The Sephardim, who number 1,500 against 500 Ashkenazic Jews, hold 75 percent of the seats in the Jewish Community Council.

The Ashkenazim, lead by former community president Max Mazin, want the by-laws changed to allow the election of a president by the council alone instead of by the entire community as is the current practice.

The issue led to a bitter confrontation at the Community Council meeting. Sam Ben Sadon-Laredo, the Sephardic incumbent, refused Mazin official status at the meeting on grounds that he was more than three months behind in his dues. In the ensuing shouting, the 60-man Ashkenazic contingent walked out. Madrid's rabbi, Benito Garzon, is attempting to get the two sides to reach a compromise, so far without success.

Dayan Feels Guerrillas Nearing End As Power

JERUSALEM — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said last week that the Palestinian commandos, who made a series of bold raids against Israeli settlements at the Lebanese and Syrian borders recently, now face the decision of "to be or not be."

In an interview broadcast by the Israel state radio, the Defense Minister said that if the guerrillas "cannot act from Lebanon and Syria, then they have to call off all their existence."

The northern borders with Lebanon and Syria have returned to their accustomed calm following Israel's swift incursion into Lebanon and the exchange of air raids across the Syrian cease-fire lines.

Israel leaders believe that their response broke up a coordinated attempt by the Palestinian commandos to bring an end to the 19-month cease-fire between Israel and the Arab states.

According to these officials, the guerrillas knew they would provoke an Israeli retaliation against Lebanese and Syrian territory from which they operate and apparently expected the two governments to respond strongly to the Israeli actions, thus threatening the truce that has settled over the Middle East. A minimum goal, it is felt, was to prove that the guerrillas remain a force capable of disrupting any conciliatory mood in the Arab capitals.

The guerrillas clearly failed to provoke serious combat and appear to have suffered a serious weakening in their position.

All signs reaching here suggest that the Lebanese Government has decided to take control of what had been a virtually autonomous area on the slopes of Mount Hermon from which the guerrillas have operated against Israel intermittently since 1968.

Mr. Dayan called this a "fundamental change" in Lebanese policy.

He said, "I believe that they (the Lebanese) will try at least to restrict, perhaps to control immediately the area, and not to allow El Fatah to act either from Lebanon or to cross the border."

He was less confident about Syria, which has been the most militant supporter of the guerrillas on Israel's frontiers.

Syria was the only Government that sent its forces into action against Israel, after Israeli attacks on guerrilla bases, although the brief Syrian air raid on the Golan Heights caused no damage or casualties.

"I do not think that Syria is prepared to go to war now," Mr. Dayan said. "It seems that Syria is prepared to run the risk of bearing the brunt of counterstrikes. We shall have to go on exerting pressure from our side."

Mr. Dayan conceded annoyance that Israeli anti-aircraft batteries and planes were not able to inflict any damage on the Syrian raiders. "I wish they would have been punished more severely, and I do hope if they try it again that they will have some practical losses with their airplanes."

Mr. Dayan said that gradually the guerrilla organizations have been neutralized in the Gaza Strip and Jordan, their two most effective bases for sabotage and military operations. This leaves Syria and Lebanon as their only jumping-off points, he said.

"We are not precluding the possibility of our forces crossing the border if it will be necessary in order to protect Israeli citizens on our side," he said. "It is a gradual process for which Israel will have to keep exerting pressure, and I hope that the Lebanese Government and the Lebanese Army will ultimately come to the conclusion that they had better prevent terrorist activity from their territory."

"Either they take care of the area, or we shall have to do it, by one way or another," Mr. Dayan said.

NEW PROGRAM

JERUSALEM — Israel embarked on a new technical assistance program in Africa and successfully wound up another. The latest project is a rural development program in Gambia which will be undertaken by Israeli experts under an agreement signed between the Gambian government and the Israeli Center for Agricultural Aid to Developing Countries at Rehovoth. An Israeli team will go to Gambia to collect data essential to planning the program which includes training local people as regional planners. Shmuel Tal, an Israeli printing expert has just returned from Chad where he turned over to local personnel the largest and most modern printing plant in Central Africa.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By Roger E. Spear

MUN Has Firm Foundation for Gains

Q: Should I continue to hold my 17 shares of Munsingwear? N.N.

A: By all means. A strong recovery in 1971 pushed operating results to new records. Earnings almost doubled depressed 1970 net, reaching $2.85 a share, while volume rose 11% to $80.4 million. Orders for spring delivery are up substantially in all product areas. If sales are maintained at the current healthy rate, 1972 could see volume reaching $90 million. On this figure, assuming margins remain at 5% after tax, earnings could reach $3.20 a share.

Women's lingerie, sportswear and sleepwear account for about one-half of sales, men's underwear and sportswear about 45%. Less than 10% of sales are derived from 96%-owned David Clark Company, maker of underwater diving equipment, stereo headphones and special environmental clothing. Almost 70% of this division's sales are to the government, although commercial business is being emphasized to a greater degree in recent years. In compliance with Phase 2 objectives, MUN refrained from raising its quarterly dividend rate in March; An increase by year end, however, is probable.

Q: Our investment club purchased 20 shares of NYSE listed AMF, Inc. in March, 1970 at 20-1/2. Should we sell now or do you think share have further upside potential? Could you suggest other growth companies for us to study? J.H.

A: The 175% profit now available to your club in AMF shares should be accepted. Having run up almost uninterrupted for 21 months, appreciation from here on will undoubtedly be at a considerably slower pace. Not since the bowling boom days have these shares been appraised so generously. Investor interest reflects not only the well-sustained recovery but also the current Japanese bowling craze. Benefits from this boom seem to be well-discounted at current prices.

The protection and judicious management of the environment appears to be a strong growth field for the 1970s. Within this area I like Browning-Ferris, Peabody-Gallon on the Big Board and Waste Management OTC.

Will Warrants Be Winners in '70s?

Q: I find myself in a position where I can afford to "take a flyer" with a few speculations. Warrants interest me for this purpose but I am not clear on the fine points of this kind of investment. Would you favor warrants for speculation and if so could you suggest three or four? C.S.

A: The market climate at this time appears favorable for speculative investments such as warrants. Spurred by economic recovery and concurrent improvement in investor psychology, not to mention its being an election year, 1972 should witness a generally uptrending market. In such an atmosphere the leverage afforded through warrants is a distinct advantage.

Warrants are options to purchase common shares, usually on a one-for-one basis, at a stated price, within a prescribed time period, although certain issues are perpetual. The warrant is generally priced well below the common share to which it is tied. Thus $1,000 will purchase possibly five times as many warrants as common shares. As a rule warrants move up and down faster than their common share counterparts, a fact confirmed by the Director of Research for NYSE. Between January, 1971 and 1972, National

General warrants more than doubled the upside move in the common, while Elgin National did the same on the downside.

There are 11 warrants on the Big Board and 68 on the Amex, allowing investors a broad list from which to choose. American Telephone, Continental Telephone, McCrory Stores (new) and Northern Natural Gas-Mobil are all attractive for purchase now. Ma Bell is the only one listed on the Big Board, the other three being Amex issues. Expiration dates should be noted carefully, since warrants are worthless after that time. Cont. Tel. expires in 1974 and is leveraged 3.2 times. Am. Tel. which expires in 1975, has the greatest leverage — 5.8 times. NNG-Mobil also expires in 1975 and has a 3.3 leverage factor. McCrory at 2.6 times has the longest term, expiring in 1981.

Western Pub. Moderately Priced for Growth

Q: I have $5,000 which I would like to invest in a good growth stock. Would you say Western Publishing (OTC) is a good one or is it overpriced now? R.P.

A: Although Western Publishing shares have appreciated some 30% in just two months, the stock is still moderately priced, at roughly 14 times 1972's earnings estimates, and may be bought for its long-term growth potential.

The company recorded vast improvement in the 1971 full year, ended December, reflecting in large part the excellent success experienced in the firm's Sesame Street product line. Profitability increased substantially with earnings posting a 77% gain to a record $1.68 a share, versus 1971's 95 cents, on a 7.6% hike in sales. Continued good gains are anticipated for this year aided by the introduction of a new assortment of Sesame Street items for the spring and fall seasons, possible expansion of a new product line being distributed by Sears, Roebuck & Company and the improvement forecast for Western Publishing foreign operations. Since the latter sector showed a fair-sized loss in 1971, any recovery here should give consolidated net a healthy boost in 1972. Purchase is justified at these levels.

Q: Can you tell me if LVO Corp. (formerly Livingston Oil) is involved in the CATV business. Also, is there any connection between LVO Corp. on the NYSE and LVO Cable Corp. on the over-the-counter? R.C.

A: Yes, to both inquiries. LVO Corp. was engaged solely in the production and sale of crude oil and natural gas until fiscal 1968 when the company began diversifying. One of its initial diversification moves was the acquisition of two community antenna television operators, GenCoE, Inc., and Effingham TV Cable Company. These now operate as the 75%-owned LVO Cable Corp. and accounted for about 17% of LVO's revenues in fiscal 1971. 340,000 shares of LVO Cable were initially offered to the public in April, 1971, at $10.50 and are now quoted at around $16.50.

FOUND GUILTY

JERUSALEM — Declaring that "God doesn't need a gendarmierie on earth," Magistrate Moshe Shalgi pronounced sentences on two religious zealots who participated in violent demonstrations against Sabbath violators here last July. One of them, Zvi Greenwald, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment. The other, a minor whose name was withheld, was fined $120. The pair were found guilty of unlawful assembly and disturbing the peace. According to police they were part of a mob that blocked traffic and stoned buses.

HOUSING PROGRESS
JERUSALEM — Housing Minister Zeev Sharef assured the Knesset that housing projects in the Jerusalem area were progressing well and that his Ministry and the City Council were in complete harmony.

Important Issues Rest On Election Of New Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi

TEL AVIV — Two secularists with personal stakes in the outcome of the forthcoming Israeli rabbinical election are Hanoch and Miriam Lange, a brother and sister. They have been labeled bastards by the rabbinical court, which makes them ineligible for marriage.

They pin their hopes on the victory of a more liberal candidate in one of the two rabbinical elections to be held not later than June 30. They feel confident that the election of former Maj. Gen. Shlomo Goren as Ashkenazi (western) Chief Rabbi of Israel will solve their problem.

The rabbinate, under a parliamentary act, enjoys exclusive competence over marriage and divorce in the Jewish community. The Langers were stigmatized by the competent authorities in Petah Tikvah and refused permission to marry on the ground that their mother had married their father without having been divorced from her first husband. Under rabbinical law, bastards are children born of "adultery."

The Langers, who are Sabras — that is, Israeli-born — could have gone abroad with their fiancées for civil marriages, as other Israelis have done to circumvent rabbinical difficulties, but they have insisted on a solution that would leave their children unstigmatized.

In the hope that Rabbi Goren will reduce to a minimum personal tragedies such as the Lange case, which have outraged the secular community, the Government of Premier Golda Meir has strongly backed him to succeed the 85-year-old Isser Y. Unterman as Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi. The former general Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv since last year, for 22 years served as senior chaplain in the defense forces. In that office he found a formula to permit the most observant Jews to serve in all units without transgressing religious principles.

Israelis have no illusions that Rabbi Goren, who is strictly Orthodox, would sanction what the Torah forbids. However, by applying his vast knowledge and his ingenuity, he has frequently ferreted out obscure laws to back

Henryk Kowalski To Present Concert

Henryk Kowalski, violinist, accompanied by Esther Chester, piano, will present a concert for Rhode Island Selfhelp on Saturday, April 1, at the Music Mansion at 88 Meeting Street at 8:15 p.m.

Mr. Kowalski was born in Poland and comes from a large family of musicians. He studied at the Music Conservatorium and the Academy of Music in Warsaw and with three noted violin teachers.

He suffered under Hitler in the concentration camps, managing to escape twice. He lost seven members of his family, only his sister and he survived.

Following the war he resumed his music career and gave many concerts in Vienna, Paris and other cities in Europe. He worked as professor of violin in Israel, at music schools in Haifa and Tel Aviv. Since last April Mr. Kowalski has lived in Providence with his wife, a pediatrician at the Miriam Hospital, and two sons.

Israel Leaders Deny Any Recent Meetings

JERUSALEM — Israel's leaders have firmly denied the recent reports that there was high-level Israeli-Jordanian consultation before King Hussein made his proposal last week.

Foreign Minister Abba Eban, Premier Meir and other key ministers described as "fanciful" reports that Mrs. Meir herself had recently met King Hussein.

Key officials are careful to limit their denials to "recent" meetings, that would involve the Hussein federation plan. They do not deny that there have been high-level contacts between Israel and Jordan over the last five years.

Asked about the reports, Mrs. Meir told foreign newsmen at a luncheon meeting, "Let me be frank — if there were any meetings such as you describe, I would not tell you about them."

Then she added, "I would be perfectly happy to go to Amman at any time if Hussein says he would like to meet me — and I would go secretly, or with my face uncovered — just as he chooses."

during World War II and Mrs. Langer reached this country, where she married an Israeli. The first husband later turned up in Israel and the rabbinate noted the marital situation in its records.

When Hanock, 27 years old, and Miriam, 25, applied to be married, they learned to their horror that they had been black-listed and that, according to the Torah, they could only marry others similarly stigmatized.

Hanoch Langer, in the armed forces at the time of the ruling, appealed to Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, who raised the matter in the Cabinet and instructed Rabbi Goren to study the case.

The rabbi produced a bulky treatise establishing the children's right to marry on the basis of a flaw in the procedure of the first husband's conversion. Since this made the first marriage invalid, a divorce was not required before the second.

Efforts to set up a rabbinical court of appeal to re-examine the case in the light of Rabbi Goren's findings were unsuccessful. Government leaders appear confident that he will find a satisfactory answer if he attains the chief rabbinate.

As Chief Rabbi he would automatically become president of the rabbinical high court and would have authority to appoint judges to a court of appeal.

When the tenure of the outgoing rabbinate expired February 1 and rules for the new elections had not yet been formulated, Mrs. Meir opposed extension of tenure, apparently to create pressure for a speedy choice. She also tried to introduce a maximum age of 80, which would have eliminated Rabbi Unterman.

POSSIBLE CUT

TEL AVIV — The possibility of a $33.6 million cut in Israel's defense budget is under consideration by a joint subcommittee of the Knesset Defense. Proponents of a defense budget cut claim it is an economic necessity. Opponents allege that it would hurt vital security needs. Sapir said that no cuts would be made in the funds needed to purchase armaments. It was learned, that fewer reserve units will be called for duty, which may help keep the Defense Ministry's expenditures down.

Orthodox Rabbis Seek To Find Closer Relationship With Times

JERUSALEM — An influential group of American Orthodox rabbis, concerned about the apparent decline in prestige and effectiveness of Israeli religious authorities, is preparing programs of "technical assistance" aimed at enhancing the Jewish religion in Israel.

Most far reaching, and inevitably controversial, is a plan to send American rabbis on sabbatical leaves to Israeli communities to perform pastoral work outside the synagogue, tasks from which the traditional Israeli rabbinate has remained aloof.

Over a thousand rabbis and lay leaders of American Orthodox synagogues have been meeting here to discuss the challenges facing Jewish religious life in the United States and, more acutely, in Israel.

Their conference, winding up last week, came coincidentally at a time when religious-interest and secular groups in Israel seem to be groping for pride of place in the society. There have been a sudden and bewildering series of power plays that are challenging the coalition Government of Premier Golda Meir.

The American rabbis say they wish to have no part in these internal conflicts. But they admit finding themselves involved in two specific aspects of them.

First, much of the militancy that has angered secular sectors of the Israeli public in recent weeks is supported, perhaps directed, by extremist Orthodox rabbis in the United States. Second, any weakening of the influence of the Orthodox rabbinate and religious political interests in Israel is seen weakening Jewish Orthodoxy and the religious ties of Jews around the world.

Internal problems in Israel, moreover, worry all concerned over the continuing threats from Israel's Arab neighbors.

In an interview Rabbi Bernard L. Berzon, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, central organization of about 1,000 Orthodox rabbis in the United States and Canada, disclosed his group's plan to send American rabbis to Israel, as he put it, "to help awaken the Israeli sense of religious relevance in their daily lives."

American rabbis are traditionally pastoral in their approach, entering into all the problems of daily life of their congregations.

The tradition in Europe is different. There the rabbis work only in the synagogue, providing religious education and advice to those who request it. Since most of Israel's rabbis came from Europe, Israeli rabbis are predominantly inward-looking — "pulpit rabbis" rather than "pastoral rabbis" along the pattern that has grown up in America.

"When we explained our idea of sending rabbis who would offer spiritual help and guidance in ordinary affairs of daily life, Israelis said to us this is what we have been longing for," Rabbi Berzon said. He said that Israelis felt that their "own rabbis seem to be of a different world, of a different culture from much of modern Israeli society."

In fact, Conservative and Reform rabbinical groups of the United States have long been trying to inject their pastoral approach into Israeli religious life, but they have been hampered by the fact that their branches of Judaism are not officially recognized in Israel. Only Orthodox rabbis have the authority to officiate at religious functions here.

Rabbi Berzon said that the Rabbinical Council's offer of American rabbis was warmly accepted by the Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv, Rabbi Shlomo Goren, who represents the more liberal outlook of the traditional Israeli Establishment.

Rabbi Berzon added that the Ashkenazic Chief Rabbi of Israel, Isser Y. Unterman, also welcomed the American offer. But other sources said that the 87-year-old Chief Rabbi had been "somewhat more reserved" in his appreciation, for he is clearly of the "pulpit-rabbi" school.

The present plans are to send perhaps a dozen rabbis to Israel this summer to work in colleges and schools, in remote towns and even at kibbutzim, in most of which the religious hierarchy is traditionally unwelcome.

The Rabbinical Council and its lay counterpart organization, the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, along with Orthodox delegates from other countries conferred in public sessions and in private working groups with Mrs. Meir and other Israeli Government and religious leaders during their 10-day convocation in Jerusalem.

Israeli leaders reportedly pleaded for Rabbinical Council help in discouraging extremist rabbis in the United States from supporting violent tactics used by extremist groups here to enforce more strict observance of religious law among the whole Israeli population.

Factions of the Orthodox Neturei Karta and Agudat Israel movements have led demonstrations against work and public transport on the sabbath, and yeshiva activists have spearheaded a campaign of harassment against pathologists who, in performing autopsies, the ultra-Orthodox say, violate some tenets of religious law. American rabbis associated with these groups, largely in Brooklyn, are widely believed to be encouraging their counterparts in Israel.

The Rabbinical Council firmly endorsed the Israeli Government's condemnations of violence and pressure tactics, but the leaders left open the question of whether they could influence extremists in the United States who shun their guidance.

The atmosphere of tension in which the American rabbis met was best illustrated by an Israeli issue in which the visitors did not have to get involved, thus far. The Supreme Religious Court ordered an Israeli Cabinet Minister to justify his actions.

The official is Michael Hazani, Minister of Social Welfare and a member of the National Religious Party. He has been asked to explain his role in advocating military service for women from religious families which many Orthodox consider contrary to religious law. But the specific issue is less important than the fact that the rabbinical hierarchy has now claimed the right to question political decisions in terms of an individual's religious obligations.

Accuse Kiev Synagogue Of Helping Council In Arrest of Jews

MOSCOW — A group of Jews in Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, has accused the council of the synagogue there of cooperating with the police in the arrests of 11 Jews on three consecutive Saturdays after they and others had gathered outside the synagogue.

A letter signed by 14 Kiev Jews and now circulating in Moscow also charges the synagogue leaders with barring younger Jews from the synagogue, maintaining that it is "not for the young," and with having "forced" elderly Jews into signing anti-Israeli letters by threatening to exclude them.

At recent memorial services for the Ukrainian Jews executed by the Nazis at Babi Yar in World War II, the letter also says, some members of the synagogue council and officials of the KGB, or secret police, tore Yiddish dedications from wreaths.

The letter also reports that after the 11 arrested Jews were given 15-day jail sentences on charges of hooliganism, the beards of at least two were shaved by jail authorities.

Jewish dissidents say that it is unusual for Soviet prison authorities to shave the beards of believers.

Foreign Jews visiting the Soviet Union have reported finding the synagogue in Kiev one of the most sensitive about political activism among its congregation. They also say they have been more carefully isolated from local Jews there than in other cities.

The letter of the Kiev Jews contended that "the systematic nature of the repressions lately testifies to the intention of authorities to hinder Jews from visiting the synagogue."

The formal reason for the latest arrests, it said, was a statement to the police from the synagogue council asserting that "Jews gathering by the synagogue were hindering religious services and behaving like hooligans." The letter did not say so, but activists in the Jewish emigration movement often gather outside synagogues on Saturdays.

The letter said that the "traitors" in the Jewish hierarchy in Kiev had asked the authorities "to rid the synagogue of the so-called hooligans, i.e., to

Tel Aviv Professor Confirms Einstein's Theory Of Relativity

TEL AVIV — Tel Aviv University has announced that it had the first scientific evidence that gravity acts in waves. An experiment by Prof. Dror Sadeh of the department of physics was said to have proved assumption that has been part of the Einstein theory of relativity for 55 years.

At a news conference here, Professor Sadeh said the gravitational waves were emitted by pulsating stars called pulsars that were unknown before 1967. However, 50 of them were discovered in the last four years, four of them by Professor Sadeh. The scientist said he had considered the pulsars likely emitters of gravitational waves because they were very dense and rotated very fast.

Instead of erecting an antenna for gravitational waves as had been done in a previous experiment at the University of Maryland, Professor Sadeh said he used the earth as a detector. He set up a seismograph in a cave near Elath to measure the vibrations that he assumed the pulsar created.

As the vibrations on earth were very small, an on-line computer was attached to the seismograph. Later, the data were transferred to a large advanced computer on the university campus.

Professor Sadeh said the analysis of the waves showed the rhythm of the vibrations on earth corresponded exactly to that of the nearest pulsar. They also came at regular twelve hour intervals, precisely when the pulsar was in the right position in the sky.

Einstein's general theory of relativity predicted that any massive, asymmetrical, rotating object would generate gravity wave. For several years, Dr. Joseph Weber of the University of Maryland has been reporting the observations of such waves with detectors several hundred miles apart.

The detectors consist of cylinders of solid aluminum weighing more than a ton whose geometry is reportedly distorted to a microscopic degree by the passing waves. Dr. Weber has reported that many of the waves seem to be coming from the core of the Milky Way Galaxy.

Although he is considered to be a painstakingly careful experimenter, his results have not been universally accepted. However other detection experiments are in preparation.

Protest Terrorist Acts; Jewish Defense League

NEW YORK — "If we are to combat the Jewish Defense League, we must look inward, into ourselves and our society, and look to see what nourishes it (the JDL)," Richard Yaffe, chairman of the National Council of Americans for Progressive Israel-Hashomer Hatzair, said March 1. Addressing 300 persons attending a "protest meeting against terrorist acts and the Jewish Defense League," as it was termed by the American Association to Combat Fascism, Racism and Anti-Semitism, which convened the meeting, Yaffe said it was difficult to combat the JDL because it makes points difficult to refute. "Jews have memories of many holocausts, not only the last one," Yaffe said. "We are afraid, and it is useless to say we are not." The JDL, he noted, stated there is a moral bankruptcy in the American Jewish establishment. "It is hard to argue with such a point," he said. The JDL says there is anti-Semitism in America. "There certainly is, almost anywhere one can go," Yaffe observed. "Just because it is not virulent today does not mean it may not be tomorrow." In addition, he continued, the JDL's views on the alienation of Jewish youth and the future of America is also undeniable. "But," Yaffe asserted, "the answers do not lie at the end of a billy club or a bicycle chain."

The rally unanimously adopted a resolution appointing a committee of seven to meet with Mayor John V. Lindsay to demand that the Police Department "take vigorous action" to apprehend those responsible for terrorist crimes in the city. The resolution also demanded an end to "the terrorist activities encouraged or committed by the Jewish Defense League."

DONATE SOYA FLOUR

TEL AVIV — The freighter Elva sailed from Eilat December 9 with 25 tons of soya flour donated by Israelis for the children of war-ravaged East Pakistan. The flour was provided by the Israeli Committee for Bangla Desh Children, a group that includes actors, writers and lawyers. The committee said it would continue to raise money for more aid to Bangla Desh children.

Arafat Insists Hussein Met Mrs. Meir At Aqaba

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Yasir Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said last week that King Hussein met recently with Premier Golda Meir at the Jordanian port of Aqaba and that a Jordanian Army officer who accompanied the King had defected to Cairo and told about the meeting.

Mr. Arafat, speaking to members of the Palestinian community in Kuwait, condemned the Jordanian King as an "agent of Zionism and imperialism" and warned that "the new agents shall have the same fate as that of Wasfi Tal," the Jordanian Premier assassinated reportedly by four guerrillas in Cairo last November.

The guerrilla leader was visiting the Persian Gulf state as part of a tour of Arab countries to generate opposition to King Hussein's plan for a federal kingdom linking the East Bank of the Jordan River and the Israeli-occupied West Bank with each region attaining autonomy but with the King as sovereign. Mr. Arafat later arrived in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Arafat, whose speech was carried by Kuwaiti newspapers available here, disclosed that King Hussein has proposed that the regular Palestine Liberation Army be turned into a security force for the Palestine region of the "United Arab Kingdom," proposed last week.

The guerrilla chief said that the King had invited Brig. Gen. Misban Budeiri, the Palestine Liberation Army's chief of staff, to Amman to discuss the proposal but that the general had refused the invitation.

The 8,000-man Palestine Liberation Army is the regular military arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the over-all guerrilla organization. Two of the army's brigades are stationed in Syria, the third is on the Suez Canal front in Egypt.

Mr. Arafat did not give the date of the reported meeting between King Hussein and Mrs. Meir nor did he identify the Jordanian officer he said had defected to Egypt.

He charged that King Hussein had reached an agreement with Israel under which Jordan would recover only part of the West Bank, which would be demilitarized. In Jerusalem, the Israelis would allow the Jordanian flag to fly over Al Aksa Mosque and the Vatican flag over the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, Mr. Arafat said. He added that a special Vatican representative was in Amman to make the arrangements.

Mr. Arafat was quoted as having said, "Hussein wants to give us a mutilated part of Palestine."

There has been no Jordanian commitment on Mr. Arafat's statement, but official sources in Amman had earlier denied previous reports of Jordanian-Israeli meetings.

CALLS FOR EQUALITY

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. — The newly elected president of the Rabbinical Assembly, the international movement of Conservative rabbis, called on the American Jewish community to meet "head on" the problems raised by the black revolution and the role of Jewish women in religious life.

Rabbi Judah Nadich told 800 delegates attending the assembly's 72d annual convention at the Concord Hotel that it was "high time for our movement to accord to Jewish women their rightful equality in the synagogue and the school, in Jewish law and Jewish life."

Miriam Hospital Raises Rates

The Miriam Hospital has announced a $3.00 per day increase in private and semi-private room rates, effective April 1, 1972. It is the first room rate hike by the hospital since October 1970.

The statement came from Jerome R. Sapolsky, executive vice president of The Miriam, who said the new rates have been established following intensive review and analysis by the finance and executive committees of the Trustees and after approval at the meeting of the full Board of Trustees.

"We have been able to hold off this long," he said, "because of the continuing high demand for hospital beds with related increased utilization of supporting services." He noted that The Miriam's medical-surgical beds have had more than 90% occupancy rate since October 1970. As part of what Mr. Sapolsky termed "the on-going effort to relate charges more closely to costs," the current $10 clinic charge will go to $15 on April 3.

"We have informed the appropriate federal and state agencies, in addition to Rhode Island Blue Cross," the hospital's executive vice president said, "and the increases are well within the federal guidelines established for hospitals by the Price Commission."

Semi-private accommodations will go from $60 and $65 per day to $63 and $68 and private rooms will go from $73 and $83 to $76 and $86; the self-care unit will increase from $48 and $55 to $51 and $58 for semi-private and private accommodations respectively.

"We have delayed implementing these new rates as long as possible," Mr. Sapolsky said, "as we endeavored to keep down operating costs while maintaining quality patient care."

Four Members Of JDL Sued For $100,000 In Damages

TORRINGTON, Conn. — A 64 year-old woman has filed suit in the Litchfield Superior court for $100,000 damages against four New York members of the Jewish Defense League who tried to disrupt the performance of a visiting Soviet Balalaika Orchestra by emptying ammonia bottles in the crowded Warner Theater on January 26.

Mrs. Natalie Menges alleges the defendants in the suit committed assault and battery on her person when they spilled the ammonia, causing her to become ill. On the night of the incident, Mrs. Menges was transported to the emergency room at Charlotte Hungerford Hospital, where she was treated and released.

Defendants in the suit are: Michael J. Brown, 21, White Plains, N.Y.; Chaim D. Gerwitz, 18; Irving J. Shumlik, 24; and Herman Erdan, 19, all of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Attorney Albert Goring, counsel for Mrs. Menges, maintained last week that "everyone in that theater" could sue the JDL members. Goring explained, "Theoretically, any person in the Warner that night who sniffed the ammonia could sue the defendants for battery." Anyone who was frightened by the disturbance, Goring further indicated, might have grounds for an assault suit.

Goring said Mrs. Menges was "upset" both emotionally and physically by the incident. He typified his client as a "fine and sensitive human being." Mrs. Menges was a Russian national and now lives in Washington Depot, Connecticut.

In Goring's opinion, the defendants "exceeded their right to free speech" in the incident. The attorney related he was in the Warner at the time of the happening.

In a related development Berthold Gaster, the publisher of the Connecticut Jewish Ledger of Hartford, announced that his newspaper's editorial which denounced the JDL's intrusion in Torrington and the crime its members committed in the Warner Theater, drew more praise and favorable letters to the editor than any other issue in the past 13 years. "I didn't receive one negative response," Gaster said.

Hadassah Allocates $1 Million For Clinical Psychology Dept.

NEW YORK — Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, allocated $1-million for the establishment of a department of clinical pharmacology at its Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center in Jerusalem.

The action was one of several features of the close of Hadassah's 60th anniversary midwinter convention at Temple Emanu-El, 65th Street and Fifth Avenue. Two hundred leaders, representing 325,000 members in chapters throughout the country and Puerto Rico, attended the four-day meeting.

In addition to its extensive network of social service and medical programs in Israel, Hadassah is the largest supporting agency of Youth Aliyah, an international child welfare movement. Youth Aliyah who founded in 1934 to save Jewish children from Nazi persecution.

In announcing the allocation of the $1-million, Mrs. Charlotte Jacobson, chairman of the Hadassah Medical Organization, said that "while medical students are taught how to prescribe drugs, their training concerning the side effects is deficient."

She explained that the new department at the Hadassah Medical Center would centralize testing, teaching and research "on humans, which is different from the School of Pharmacology, where researchers work with animals."

The Hadassah Medical Center, the focal point of Hadassah's comprehensive social service and medical projects, is in Ein Karem, near Jerusalem.

Scientist Dies In Blast At Technion Laboratory

TEL AVIV — Dr. Amnon Tzservinsky a scientist at the Technion's Aeronautics Department, was killed in an explosion that wrecked the rocket propulsion laboratory at the Haifa institute. He was 34. His assistant, Tzvi Avni, suffered from severe shock having apparently been thrown against a wall by the blast, and was hospitalized.

Dr. Tzservinsky, who for years had devoted his researches to rocket propulsion problems, had gone to the subterranean lab with Avni for a series of tests. The subsequent explosion was heard across the Technion campus, and the aeronautics building trembled. Workers hurrying to the scene found the lab and the control room wrecked and Dr. Tzservinsky dead.

Police and Labor Ministry officials began an investigation. Two theories emerged: that a bottle containing an inflammable material fell, or that there was a gas leakage.

Dr. Tzservinsky was a central figure in the Technion's long research on rocket-launching. The Haifa-born engineer received his doctorate in 1963. A senior lecturer in the Aeronautics Department, he was known to Israelis through his frequent appearances on radio and television, when he explained the space operations of the USSR and the US.

Julio Fernandez, the political caricaturist, whose works are currently being exhibited at the New School, once met Salvador Dali around Easter time and they discussed art. Dali invited Fernandez to visit him and continue the discussion. Dali consulted his pocket calendar and said: "Why don't you come on Thanksgiving Day?" The caricaturist, surprised by the eight-month appointment, queried: "Maestro, in the a.m. or in the p.m.?"

Screenwriter Albert Ruben had a grandfather who owned a circuit of vaudeville house in the Midwest. When he died, a son — Edmund Ruben — took over these theaters and developed them into movie houses. One of them was the "K" in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. The professional paths of Ed Ruben and his nephew Al never crossed. When "Journey Through Rosebud" received its world premiere booking in Sioux Falls, it was at Ed Ruben's "K" Theater. The theater owner had no idea that Al was the screenwriter. At the gala premiere they met for the first time in 10 years.

Al Ruben's wife, Judy, is the daughter of the famed ear specialist, Dr. Sam Rosen, who preceded President Nixon on a visit to China.

Black Caucus Dissociates Itself From Resolution

WASHINGTON — The Congressional Black Caucus has dissociated itself from a resolution to "dismantle" Israel that was passed at the National Black Political Convention in Gary, Indiana.

In a statement released on behalf of its 13 members, the Black Caucus said: "We fully respect the right of the Jewish people to have their own state in their historic national homeland. We vigorously oppose the efforts of any group that would seek to weaken or undermine Israel's right to existence."

The black convention was the first of what planners hope will be continued political strategy sessions every four years of influential black social and political figures. The convention was sponsored in part by the caucus, a group of black members of Congress.

Mayor Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, one of the principal organizers of the convention, said the anti-Israel resolution was passed "late in the day when few people were on the convention floor." He added that he did not believe it represented the view of the majority of the 3,456 delegates.

morning and early Sunday evening.

Then there are the basic discounts most domestic airlines offer. The rules change constantly, but here's an up-to-date rundown:

The basic fare the majority of travelers pay today is the "Y" — for economy. Every $1 on this fare costs $1.30 first class.

But "FN" (deluxe night coach flight leaving between 9 or 10 p.m. and 4 a.m.) costs no more than the daytime coach fare and "YN" (night coach flights) costs only 80 cents for every $1 you spend on a daytime coach fare.

"Discover America" fares on flights of more than 1,500 miles are 25 per cent below regular round trip fare.

Discounts on group fares — in which 15 or more people travel together — range 30 to 40 per cent below regular economy fares.

There are many special stopover and "circle" deals offered by most airlines. There are lots of youth fares, family excursions, inclusive tours which vary from place to place, date to date, airline to airline. There is a wide variety of money-saving routing tricks (for instance, you can save $35 each way on a night coach flight from New York to Los Angeles, if you go via Atlanta and change planes there). And there are such angles as scheduling your flight at meal times to save on restaurants, traveling light to save porter's tips.

Consult a knowledgeable travel agent or inquire at various airlines about the best bargain deals and the rules for taking advantage of them. If it's the bargain for you, take it.

Orthodox Rabbis Object To Amendment Guaranteeing Equal Rights For Women

NEW YORK — A coalition of Orthodox rabbinical organizations charged this week that the proposed constitutional amendment guaranteeing equal rights to women would threaten the Jewish Orthodox practice in separating the sexes in synagogues and parochial schools. The rabbis said it also could threaten morality throughout the country.

"A central tenet of our faith is the uniqueness of the respective roles of men and women," said Rabbi Abraham Gross, president of the Rabbinical Alliance of America. "This amendment directly threatens our rights to continue practicing our faith as we have for the past three centuries in America."

The coalition, which represents more than half of the 2,500 Orthodox rabbis in the United States, is made up of the alliance, the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada, the Rabbinical Council of the Sephardic Syrian and Near Eastern Jewish Community in America, the Central Congress of Rabbis and the Metropolitan Board of Orthodox Rabbis.

The 900-member Rabbinical Council of America has not yet taken a position on the amendment measure.

In a news conference at the alliance's offices, 156 Fifth Avenue, and in an interview afterward, Rabbi Gross said the First Amendment guarantee of religious freedom would not protect Orthodox synagogues from feminist lawsuits and might not prevent the Government from ending their tax exemption and school funds.

He urged a rewording of the amendment so that it would specifically guarantee religious rights.

The amendment was adopted by Congress last month. It needs the ratification of 38 states to become a law.

The rabbis stressed that they believed in equal pay for equal work and in not regarding women as inferior to men. Rabbi Gross said women throughout Jewish history had played leading roles in government.

Nevertheless, Orthodox Judaism, the most conservative of the three branches of Judaism, draws many distinctions between the roles of the sexes. Women hold an honored position in the home, while men assume the major religious responsibility.

Rabbi David B. Hollander, vice president of the alliance, said boys in Orthodox Hebrew day schools received "deeper academic study," while girls focused on subjects such as typing, stenography and home observance of dietary laws.

Rabbi Hollander said he knew of no move by any Orthodox women to counter the traditional barriers. The rabbi, who teaches sociology at Long Island University, also remarked that "women should be feminine in appearance and philosophy, not brazen or arrogant."

Asked whether he regarded Betty Frieden and Gloria Steinem of the women's liberation movement as arrogant and brazen, he replied, "If they claim that American women are oppressed, that's arrogance."

Both Rabbis Hollander and Gross expressed concern that the amendment might produce a climate that would jeopardize sexual morality. Rabbi Gross cited the trend toward coeducational college dormitories as an example of the way in which changing rules could affect morals.

Protest Return To France Of Nazi Collaborator

PARIS — Two major French Jewish organizations protested vigorously against the possible return to France of Darquier De Pellepoix, a notorious Nazi collaborator during World War II who was personally responsible for rounding up French Jews for deportation. Pellepoix has been living in Spain under political asylum since 1944.

Though condemned to death in absentia by a French military court in December 1947, the statute of limitations on the sentence became effective in 1969 and he has since applied to French authorities to relax or cancel their subsequent order forbidding him to return to France.

Warns Food Prices Should Not Rise

JERUSALEM — After an emergency meeting, the Ministerial Committee on Economic Affairs and Representatives of Histadrut, the employers' association and the cooperative movement, warned that prices of basic foodstuffs — bread, frozen meat, sugar and oil — should not be allowed to rise and all other price rises must be justified. High price increases have placed Histadrut and employers under heavy pressure to increase wages, and Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir warned that Israel was in danger of pricing itself out of world markets. A request by the Manufacturers Association for a free hand to raise prices by up to five percent was rejected.

At the same time strikes and slowdowns plague the country. New wage demands by bakers have caused bakery owners to warn of a shutdown unless they are permitted to raise prices of bread. Medical personnel at public hospitals have given the 15 day notice required by law for slowdowns or strikes. A shutdown of the diamond polishing shops are threatened and new labor troubles at Ashdod port have been complicated by disputes between longshoremen and their foremen.

Estimate 187,500 Jews In Miami

MIAMI — The Greater Miami area is home to 187,500 Jews, according to the first scientific Jewish population study in the United States.

The study shows that 85 percent of Jews in the Miami area are foreign-born, and that half of them moved here since 1960. The figures also show that almost a third of the Jewish residents here are 65 years old or older.

The study was conducted to provide demographic, social, economic and religious characteristics of American Jews to help various organizations plan their services, according to Robert Russell, president of the Greater Miami Jewish Federation.

Organizations Urge ZOA To Return To Federation

NEW YORK — Mrs. Esther P. Zackler, president of Pioneer Women, urged the Zionist Organization of America to reconsider its withdrawal from the American Zionist Federation "so that together, all organizations can pursue the important task which still confronts Israel and Zionism." Mrs. Zackler said the withdrawal of the ZOA, following on the heels of the 28th World Zionist Congress, "is a disservice to the monumental responsibilities undertaken at the Congress."

"In response to the ZOA's charge that it withdrew because the AZF duplicated many of the ZOA's activities, the Pioneer Women's leader stated: "The achievements of the individual Zionist organizations within the framework of the Federation are complemented rather than minimized or duplicated by the Federation." In addition, she noted, the AZF is a vehicle through which various ideological movements within Zionism "can unite on matters which affect all, leaving to each individual movement or organization the opportunity to further its own specific trends."

Americans for Progressive Israel-Hatzair, voicing its "concern for a vigorous and creative AZF," said the ZOA defection was "a further weakening of the AZF." In a statement, API-II said that for the AZF to succeed as "a vibrant and creative Zionist movement," it "must be an organization of ideas and ideologies that reflect the full spectrum of American Zionist life." The ZOA withdrawal, it continued, "diminishes this possibility and impoverishes the Federation itself and all Zionists" and prevents the AZF from being "a source of inspiration, courage and strength to American Jewry and to Israel."

B'nai Zion, the American Fraternal Zionist Organization, adopted a resolution calling the ZOA action "tantamount to disenfranchisement of many loyal and devoted Zionist members from the world Zionist movement." Asking the ZOA to "reconsider this decision," B'nai Zion declared: "We support and have full confidence in the AZF, its leadership and its programs which are gaining ever wider recognition in the American Jewish community."

Hold Conference In Cairo Between Arabs, Russians

CAIRO — A conference held in Cairo recently led to a disclosure that Soviet military assistance to Egypt had reached a total of about $5-billion, with a current rate of $5-million a day.

The figures were reported by the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, which cited "official Egyptian statistics."

Despite the vast military assistance to Egypt, Soviet participants in the seminar made it clear Moscow remained doubtful that the Egyptian armed forces could achieve victory in a fight with Israel.

The total military aid figure of $5-billion is nearly double some estimates of Soviet arms assistance to Egypt.

The seminar was convened in the wake of setbacks to Arab-Soviet relations last year, including a purge of pro-Soviet officials in Egypt and the execution of Communists in the Sudan after a short-lived coup d'etat there in July.

The purpose of the gathering, according to Mohammed Hassanein Heykal, the Cairo editor who was one of the organizers, was to "deepen" the Arab-Soviet dialogue, usually conducted only at the level of political and economic officials.

The seminar, which brought together scholars, Palestinian guerrillas and political commentators, was held at the Center of Political and Strategic Studies, affiliated with the Al Ahram publishing enterprise. A series of articles on the talks has been printed in Al Ahram.

The discussions, reported mostly without attribution to the individual speakers, laid bare some fundamental differences between the Arabs and the Russians.

Some of the major complaints raised by the Soviet speakers were the following:

The absence of a "progressive revolutionary party" to lead the Arabs and to unite them against the "imperialists."

Hostility to Communism by some nationalist Socialist Arab regimes — an allusion mainly to Libya and the Sudan.

The persistence of a strong petit bourgeois class in Egypt obstructing "Socialist transformation."

A tendency of Arabs to categorize the Soviet Union as a "superpower" like the United States, concerned more with its big-power interests and security than with promoting revolution and national liberation.

The use of textbooks in Egyptian schools that were said to lack "serious Socialist orientation, and (to be) sometimes even hostile to Communism and the Soviet Union."

An inability of the Palestinian guerrilla groups to unite and agree on ultimate objectives.

The Arabs turned aside some of the Soviet complaints and accepted others. In turn, they complained of the following:

Moscow's insistence that the Arab-Israeli conflict should be settled by political means, not war.

An ambiguous attitude by Moscow toward assisting the Palestinian commando movement against Israel.

Russian endeavors to promote Communist ideology in the Arab countries.

The Soviet policy of permitting a growing number of Jews to emigrate to Israel.

Soviet relations with "reactionary countries" and contacts with the United States aiming at a reduction of tension.

The major point of agreement reached during the seminar was that a "common denominator" between the Arabs and Russians was a policy of striving "to weaken capitalism as a whole."

Shanker Refuses To Attend Meeting At Which Rabbi Kahane Was Speaking

NEW YORK — Albert Shanker, the teachers union leader, refused to attend the annual luncheon of the Jewish Teachers Association last week because the guest speaker was Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the militant Jewish Defense League.

The Jewish organization, which has 30,000 members throughout the country, held its 45th annual luncheon at the Americans Hotel. Many members of Mr. Shanker's union, the United Teachers of New York State, also belong to the Jewish group.

In a letter to Dr. Michael Leinwald, president of Jewish teachers' group, Mr. Shanker wrote that his union "in no way wants to be associated with any individual or group that preaches violence or creates an atmosphere in which violence becomes permissive."

Defending Rabbi Kahane's appearance, Dr. Leinwald declared that "whether we agree or disagree is not important . . . the important element is that all shades of opinion should be respected."

In an article in The United

The Finest in Memorial Art where nothing is sacrificed but price.

Teacher, his union's publication, Mr. Shanker had indicated that his union at first had wanted to purchase 10 tickets to the luncheon because there was no indication that Rabbi Kahane would appear as a speaker.

Just before Rabbi Kahane began speaking to an audience of more than 1,200 who interrupted him with frequent outbursts of applause and gave him a rising ovation when he approached the lectern, Rabbi Harold Gordon, executive vice president of the New York Board of Rabbis, left the dais in protest.

Samuel Hausman, a political adviser of Governor Rockefeller and active in the United Jewish Appeal, also left.

However, most of those in the audience and on the dais remained to hear Rabbi Kahane, who during his talk defended the merit system as one that had enabled Jews to achieve progress in various professions, including teaching.

Rabbi Kahane said that Jews must use their "political and economic power to protect Jews."

Among those on the dais were prominent political figures who left before Rabbi Kahane's address with explanations that they had to leave for other meetings. They welcomed New York State Controller Arthur Levitt, New York City Controller, Abraham D. Beame, Lieut. Gov. Malcolm Wilson and Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz.

The Jewish teacher's group presented an award posthumously to Dr. Herman P. Mantel, who ad headed the association. Another award was made to Mrs. Golda Meir, Israel's Premier and the Jewish people the world over.

Rabbi Kahane Denied Entry Visa To USSR

WASHINGTON — Rabbi Meir Kahane, who has been agitating for the right of Jews to get out of Soviet Russia, is now trying to get himself and seven other Jewish Defense League Leaders into that country. So far he has been denied an entry visa.

Rabbi Kahane, head of the JDL, rang the doorbell at the Soviet Embassy here but was denied admittance. He claimed that an appointment had been made for him with Vladislav V. Shimanovsky, a political attaché at the Embassy.

Rabbi Kahane's lawyer, Rafael Perli, told newsmen that the JDL leader and the Russian official had chatted at the latter's home for a half hour last summer following a JDL demonstration outside. Rabbi Kahane was arrested last June 25 while holding a news conference outside the Soviet Embassy.

The JDL leader told the newsmen that the JDL-ers want to visit the Soviet Union from April 14-May 7 to conduct a "fact-finding mission" so as to be able to inform President Nixon "exactly what is happening to Jews in the Soviet Union" before the President departs for his May 22 summit meeting in Moscow.

Rabbi Kahane said he planned to visit Jewish communities in Kiev, Odessa, Moscow, Leningrad and Riga as well as the Potma labor camps where Jews are imprisoned and the Cheryashkous special psychiatric hospital.

According to Rabbi Kahane, he hoped by his visit to prevent "a potential blood bath by Jewish militants who have threatened" that Soviet diplomats would die if Jewish prisoners perished in Soviet camps. "We don't want to see this happen," Rabbi Kahane stated. He compared his proposed trip to the Soviet Union to President Nixon's recent visit to China. He said he wanted to show the Soviets "the way to peace is through talks."

To Teach English To Hassidic Jews

NEW YORK — A pioneering city-funded program to teach English to Hassidic Jews to enhance their ability to compete for jobs was announced by Mayor John V. Lindsay. The program funded at about $400,000 for two 26-week cycles, will be administered by the Manpower and Career Development Agency. Initially, the program will involve 50 Hassidic Jews divided evenly between the United Talmudical Academy, which will draw students from the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, and the Lubavitcher Yeshiva, which will serve the Crown Heights section. Both are among the city's 26 designated poverty areas.

Dr. Marvin Schick, the Mayor's Assistant for Intergroup Relations, who organized the project said that though many Hassidic Jews are second- and third-generation Americans, few speak or write English with enough mastery to enter the city's job market. He said it was a strong Hassidic tradition to cling to the language of a European cultural heritage, which is, for the most part, Yiddish.

featuring CANTOR IVAN E. PERLMAN and BRENDA BEDRICK

Brenda Bedrick adds charm to any stage. Coupled with a winning personality is a vocal talent that has kept her in more and more demand. Her interpretation of songs have been sensitive and thrilling, and her audiences rarely sit dry-eyed when listening to her sing.

Brenda is as much at home in operatic arias as popular ballads. Her career has spanned from the New England Conservatory of Music and the Boston University College of Fine Arts to Concert, Television and Radio appearances.

Cantor Ivan E. Perlman began his musical career at the tender age of 7, doing an imitation of Bing Crosby at the Schubert Theatre on Broadway. Since, he has been heard from Carnegie Hall with the High School of Music and Art, to concert halls throughout the country. Cantor Perlman is renowned for his artistry in his chosen profession, and is recognized by his colleagues as an outstanding Cantor. His talent has taken him from lead roles in opera to Sky Mastering in Guys and Dolls. Critics have written about his unusual range, and his audiences have clamored for "more."

The accompanist is Ellena DiNitto
