Thousands March In New York

NEW YORK — Tens of thousands of marchers, singers, dancers and stragglers, most of them children paraded up Fifth Avenue in the rain Sunday to salute the 24th year of Israel's independence.

A total of 219 contingents took part in the parade which, along with Columbus Day, St. Patrick's Day, Von Steuben Day and Pulaski Day, has become an occasion for nationalistic strolling. This was the eighth year the parade was held.

Most of the participants were from Jewish youth groups and schools, but there were a number of not particularly Jewish bands from high schools as far away as Dover, Delaware, and Uniontown, Pennsylvania.

Between the bands, which played "Rock of Ages," songs from "Fiddler on the Roof" and Israeli anthems, were squadrons of young people, ranging anywhere from five years old to their early 20's, from hundreds of Jewish organizations.

Most wore blue, yellow, or green cotton beanies, whose Hebrew name translates literally as "fools cap," that were popularized by kibbutz workers,

Hostility Against Jewish Civil Servants, Teachers, Students, Discussed At Meeting

NEW YORK — "I don't like what's happening to me," Elie Weisel, the author, told 1,200 people Monday night at an Emergency Conference on the New York Jewish Community.

"From the tensions that I feel tonight, I'm frightened," he said. "I'll tell you, it disturbs me deeply.

The conference was called at the Americana by the New York Board of Rabbis, which represents 1,000 synagogues, to discuss the "mounting hostility" toward Jewish civil servants, teachers and students; the "ethnic quota"; the Forest Hills housing controversy; "the disintegration of Jewish neighborhoods" and the plight of the Jewish poor, "deprived of poverty funds available to others."

Summarizing the two-hour conference as the last speaker, Mr. Weisel recalled a taxicab ride from Kennedy International Airport to his apartment on Central Park West. In a soft, halting voice, he said that the driver had delivered the following monologue:

"I don't like what's happening to me. I'm a Jewish boy. I believed in all the liberal and humane causes on earth. Until last year, I would take any one of any color anywhere. I was proud of that. Three months ago I took a passenger from the Americana Hotel to Bedford-Stuyvesant."

"When we got to Bedford-Stuyvesant, he took out a knife and said, 'Give me your money.' I gave him the money. I had a sick wife and children, but I felt, here is a man even poorer than me. As I gave him the money, he took his knife and cut my hand through."

"It was so unnecessary. I gave him the money. I even understood him. I don't like what's happening to me."

Mr. Weisel, who is the author of "Sons of Fire" and other works, spoke after a dozen speakers had delivered a litany of woes that most attributed to city policies initiated by Mayor Lindsay — although the Mayor himself was seldom mentioned by name.

All of the speakers agreed with William Kaufman, a real-estate developer and philanthropist, who was the keynote speaker. He warned:

"The Jewish community of New York is in deep trouble. It must not be necessary to leave this country or this city because one is a Jew."

William Berkowitz, president of the Board of Rabbis, said: "We want to assure the Jews in New York that their rights will be defended vigorously."

Murray Rockowitz, chairman of the Board of Examiners of the Board of Education, asserted that "Civil Service is on its deathbed."

Dr. Jack Bloomfield, president of the Junior High School Principals Association, said that although only six principals retired last year, 25 were retiring this year.

Israeli Labor Leader Rescinds Resignation

TEL AVIV — Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, who resigned Sunday as Secretary General of Israel's powerful General Federation of Labor, announced Tuesday night that he was resuming office.

Mr. Ben-Aharon, an influential figure in the governing Labor party, had resigned protesting that Premier Golda Meir and other Labor party leaders in the Government had undermined the Histadrut, or labor federation, by intervening to stave off a threatened strike in 12 canning factories.

He said Tuesday that he now had reason to expect fuller understanding between the Labor party's representatives in the Government and the Histadrut, but that he was returning unconditionally and had received no promises.

Workers all over Israel had gone on strike and had demonstrated in favor of Mr. Ben-Aharon, and had called upon him to rescind his resignation. He said that he was yielding to that pressure.

Professor Says More Jews Ask 'Is It Good For The Jews?'

GROSSINGER'S, N.Y. — Lately, more Jews have begun asking, "Is it good for the Jews?" according to Prof. Leonard J. Fein of Brandeis University.

Speaking to more than 500 Labor Zionist leaders attending a three-day leadership conference, Prof. Fein attributed the trend to the rise of ethnic pluralism in the United States.

"Until the rise, the assumption of most Jews had been what is good for America is necessarily good for its Jews as well," he noted. This may or may not be the case, Prof. Fein commented, citing as an example the rise of black militancy.

"While this was generally regarded by Jews at the time as a misfortune or calamity, there can be no question that this same militancy has been one of the chief causes of the resurgence of Jewish identity and commitment, particularly among the young," he said.

Prof. Fein lashed out at those who "defend Jewish jobs, and income without defending Jewish culture or seeking Jewish expression in their lives."

He also attacked various union leaders, intellectuals, community relations agencies, and the Jewish Defense League, who, he claimed, ask the traditional question: "If I am not for myself who will be for me?" but forget to add, "And if I am only for myself, what am I?"

Prof. Daniel Elazar of Temple University, Philadelphia, reported that the traditional relationship between Jews and liberalism is changing. "The sum of American liberalism is being for the underdog," Elazar said, "and Jews are no longer the underdog for liberals."

Noting that what the Jews need is not "liberalism but constitutionally protected pluralism," he told the Labor Zionists that it is in the Jewish interest to maintain a middle-of-the-road political stance, and that both the "left" and the "right" have sacrificed Jewish interests and encouraged anti-Semitism at various times.

Jewish Communities Outside US Face Uncertain Future

NEW YORK — Jewish communities outside the United States, with the exception of Western Europe, face an uncertain and perhaps ominous future in the decade ahead — this is the major import of a special survey released by the American Jewish Committee.

The survey, made public at the opening of the Committee's 66th annual meeting at the Americana Hotel, represents the thinking of a group of scholars constituting the Committee's Task Force on the World of the 1970s.

It indicated that while the Jews of Western Europe will probably enjoy security, Soviet Jews will still face repression, Latin American Jewry will be plagued by uncertainty and alarm, and Israel will need help and understanding.

BRILLE PETITION

NEW YORK — Eighty blind persons — Jews and non-Jews, whites and Blacks — signed a Braille petition asking President Nixon to demand equal rights for Soviet Jews when he visits Moscow in May. The SSSJ said it welcomed cooperation in the project by other groups assisting the sightless.

SUBJECT TO HARRASSMENT
JERUSALEM — Raiza Palatnik, the 35-year-old Jewish librarian from Odessa, is being subjected to extreme harassment at the forced labor camp where she is serving a two-year sentence for alleged anti-Soviet activities, Jewish sources in the Soviet Union reported. The sources said she is being forced to work in excess of the required norm and is subjected to anti-

Semitic epithets from her overseer. She has been forbidden to wear dark glasses prescribed for her by a physician, the sources said.

Anarchy Once Again

The shooting of Gov. George C. Wallace is a staggering blow to the morale of a country already badly shaken by intrusions of violence on its political system. Public men can no longer feel that the slow and often painful processes of democracy will be allowed to work themselves out at the polls — that a campaign or a career will not be wiped out in a moment by the swift and dreadful shortcut of the bullet.

Once again a dismayed nation must ask itself whether it can afford to let its Presidential candidates mingle with the electorate or whether they must rely solely on the remote and sometimes misleading intermediary of television — a question that is itself an indictment. With guns so readily purchasable all over America, no multiplication of police guards can provide real safety in a campaign crowd.

Horrifying as these cowardly crimes are, the real victim — whether it is a Lincoln, a King, a Kennedy or a Wallace who is shot — is the Republic itself. Reflections of the hatred and polarization that are rampant in American society today, these brutal private assaults can only deepen that hatred, intensify that polarization.

Little as this newspaper shares Governor Wallace's opinions, we earnestly hope for his quick and complete recovery — and the recovery of those in his entourage who like him were senselessly gunned down. The United States cannot be hurt by an open clash of views. It can be badly — perhaps fatally — hurt by an ever-increasing recourse to anarchy.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Irving Berlin, who was 84 last week, is still very active. In fact, he is busy writing a musical. He is also busy at his long-time hobby, painting.

The first time Berlin's name was in print was when Queen Victoria's granddaughter, the Marchioness of Milford Haven, was taken on a tour of the Bowery dives and to a saloon where she was served by a singing waiter whose name was originally Izzy Baline. The host of the party was Prince Louis of Battenberg, who later changed his name to Mountbatten, a translation of the German. When the water declined the tip from the prince, Herbert Bayard Swope — who was executive editor of the New York World, and was also in the party — reported the incident in the paper and mentioned the waiter's name, Irving Berlin.

After he achieved success as a songwriter Berlin frequently visited the Bowery haunts where he first began his career. He spent some time one evening with one of the old men at a mission. The old man asked Berlin to play the mission's organ for him, and Berlin played his song, "White Christmas." Just then some tourists arrived, led by a guide, who delivered a spiel about the Bowery, its history, and about the bar where Berlin had been a singing waiter. "As a matter of fact," said the guide pointing proudly, "that's Berlin at the organ right now."

The tourists stared skeptically at the organist, moved on, and one told the guide with a sneer: "We may be from out of town, but you don't expect us to believe THAT."

Press agent Irving Hoffman, a long-time friend of Berlin's, was also an artist and cartoonist. It was Hoffman who presented Berlin with his first brushes, paint tubes and canvases, which led Berlin shortly thereafter to begin devoting all his leisure moments to painting.

After he started painting, Berlin showed his friend, photographer Sam Shaw, a group of his finished canvases. Shaw remarked: "Irving, they're good. They're really good. Why don't you exhibit some of them at the Urban League's show of paintings of famous amateurs? I'm sure they would be delighted to show the paintings of Irving Berlin."

The composer replied: "I'm not ready to exhibit my paintings yet. They're not really good until I hear people say: 'I'm not sure Berlin painted them.'"

During the rehearsals of the musical "Miss Liberty," for which Berlin wrote the songs, he went to the New Amsterdam Building on 42nd Street to sit in on a rehearsal. At the entrance of the building he met Mae West, and both went into the elevator together. When it started its ascent, Berlin commented: "It seems to be climbing more quickly now than it did in the early days, when I used to go up to see Flo Ziegfeld."

Miss West explained: "The elevator was no slower than than now. It's just that in those days, Irving, we were younger — and more anxious."

Berlin wrote the songs for the hit musical "Annie Get Your Gun." When it opened on tour in Dallas, the premiere was reviewed by Adeline McCabe of United Press. As soon as the curtain came down, she rushed to a telephone and dictated her drama review to the UP desk. There was an adjacent phone booth, and she noticed a dark-haired, slim, bright-eyed man listening to her review. When she finished her rave notice, she hung up and saw that he had hung up too. It was Berlin, who smiled, introduced himself and thanked

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Day Schools, Looking Upward

By BERYL SEGAL

First it was rumored; now it is almost certain that the Hebrew Day School will open a so-called "branch" in the Cranston-Warwick area. There are apparently a considerable number of parents who are concerned for the education of their children and are willing to support such a school in the suburbs.

At the same time we hear of Woonsocket parents asking for transportation for their children to the Providence Hebrew Day School. Children from Fall River, Massachusetts, commute regularly to Providence.

These developments in the local Hebrew Day School are completely in accord with the with the development of the Torah Umesorah (Torah and Tradition) Hebrew Day school movement in the country.

Before me is the Torah Umesorah Report for April of this year. From it we learn that the schools have grown from 27 in 1945 to 200 in 1972 in New York State alone.

We further learn from the same report that Torah Umesorah has a network of 450 schools in 32 states of North America and five Canadian provinces. A phenomenal growth in 27 years.

This might be a coincidence, but the year, 1945 to 1972, correspond to the period when the General Jewish Committee, now Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, has been in existence here. To the observer of the Jewish scene it must be evident that there is a relationship between the rise of the General Jewish Committee here and the beginnings of the Torah Umesorah schools in America. Both were manifestations of the same mood that prevailed among American Jews at the time. Winds were blowing from all sides, and whether we knew it or not, were tearing us apart.

The period 1940 to 1950 was a time of awakening of the Jewish conscience. We were just out of the greatest tragedy in the life of our people in modern times. We also witnessed the greatest miracle of our time, the birth of the State of Israel. The Jewish community in America, on whose shoulders fell the burden of helping the remnants of the Holocaust in Germany and giving a hand in the rebuilding of the young State of Israel, came of age in the bitter experiences of the decade. It was a time for cementing together all segments of the population in one strong community. It was also a time for fortifying our own life in this country. Never before was the admonition "Teach them diligently to your children" so urgent for Jewish parents. Never before did parents have so much to teach to their children. Teach them to remember. Teach them to hope. Teach them to act when they grow up.

During that period Torah Umesorah opened its first Day Schools which have struck a responsive chord in the heart of the Jewish community and have multiplied to become 450 strong in 1972.

A question now arises: Where do these schools find the teachers necessary for their operation?

Remember that the Day School cannot use any parttime teachers. They must devote their full time to nothing else but teaching. Nor can they depend on teachers who come from overseas. There just aren't any teachers coming from Poland, Lithuania or the Ukraine. The ranks of teachers of the immigration era are getting thinner as the years go by, either through old age or death. They must be recruited from among American-born, American-educated young men and women. They cannot even depend on teachers coming from Israel. With very few exceptions, they do not fit into the spirit of the Hebrew Day Schools for various reasons. Their teachers must come from graduates of Yeshivot or Rabbinical Schools.

And yet they have enough teachers. Not only do the schools affiliated with Torah Umesorah have a supply of teachers, but other systems as well, school systems not connected with Torah Umesorah, have young men who find teaching in the Hebrew Day Schools attractive and remunerative.

These young teachers come from the Teachers College of the Yeshiva University. They get teacher training at the great Rabbinical Colleges and Seminaries. And now I have learned of a new Teacher Training Institute, not known to me (at least, until I read about it in the Torah Umesorah Report). The Joseph Shapiro Teacher Training Institute, we learn, has 96 students who study for three years. They have instruction in such courses as Principles of Education, Methods of Teaching, Educational Psychology, Jewish History and Hebrew Studies. The students are awarded Teacher's Licenses at graduation and are ready to assume their teaching duties at the Hebrew Day Schools.

Oh, yes. There is still another factor. Every student graduating from these academies or colleges is called Rabbi, which is legitimate since Rabbi is a teacher, and teacher is a Rabbi. That title gives status to a man, and with the status comes a decent living to which every man is entitled.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Where Will The Jobs Be? II

Before this decade ends, the glut for teachers will be so big that there may be nearly two applicants for every job in the public school system. Between now and 1980, we may train as many as 4,200,000 new elementary and high school teachers, says the Labor Department, but there will be only 2,300,000 jobs waiting for them.

Even at this early point, large numbers of graduating teachers are being compelled to abandon the field for which they trained so enthusiastically. Even now, the immediate future is clearly grim for the record numbers of college students majoring in education. Moreover, the trends for elementary and high school teachers will remain grim for a period.

Our declining birthrates have been shrinking enrollments, and elementary school enrollments as distant as 1980 are expected to be still below 1968 levels. Also reducing the overall numbers of teachers needed is the growing use, especially in high schools, of a new array of educational hardware — such as instructional television and language laboratories. Another strong trend with important implications for teachers is toward non-resident, non-degree courses — adult education, home-study programs, TV teaching.

But despite this overall picture, there are bright job opportunities in the teaching fields if you are alert to the chances, willing and able to grab them. For instance:

IN TWO-YEAR COLLEGES: Including junior and community colleges, vocational and technical schools: The expected growth in the number of openings for teachers in this type of school is more than double the expected growth in four-year colleges. The greatest number of new opportunities will be in public institutions.

IN GHETTOS AND POOR RURAL DISTRICTS: As one illustration of the fascinating teacher-training programs being launched, New York's Fordham University has set up a work-study scheme for "teacher advocates" specializing in teaching and helping youngsters in trouble with the law. The teachers, age 21-35, are living in the neighborhoods in which they're teaching, working toward masters' degrees, receiving stipends of $90 per week while they work-study.

IN ADULT EDUCATION-TRAINING-RETRAINING: So impressive is the surge in this field that "andragogy" — the Today's hand is a variation of one I use for teaching. Not many pairs bid to six but no matter what the contract the play should have been the same. To make the proper play costs nothing yet several Declarers failed to make it. Some of them not realizing that even though they may lose a trick if the play doesn't work, they will get it back later. The idea is that to make the play costs nothing and may gain a very vital trick. Furthermore, the bidding and the hand Declarer has himself would indicate that the distribution is quite likely weird. As you can see, it certainly is. To figure on an even break is not too probable and when one doesn't even have to worry about it, the play supposedly being automatic, one should certainly do the right thing.

Mrs. Ernest Kortick and Mrs. Roy Lehrer were North and South, East-West vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

S 1♥ W 4♣ N 5♥ E 5♠
 6♥ P P P P

As you can see, both South and West have fantastic distributional hands. There is no perfect way to handle hands such as these. You either do or you don't. Some preempted with South's hand, opening four hearts. Actually, not vulnerable the hand was much too strong for that. That should show a hand with only seven playing tricks whereas that two-suiter can just about make game by itself. It is definitely not strong enough defensively for a forcing two bid opener so the best way to bid would either be a one bid or a Pass. Pass could be good, there is no danger of the hand being passed out and there will be plenty of time to come in later and maybe even get doubled and make the contract.

West also had a problem after South did open the bidding. His hand was similar to South's. He could just about make his game by himself also but he was vulnerable so he leaped right to four Spades and thus gave everyone a problem. North solved hers by raising her Partner's Hearts. East did the same and now back to South. She had absolutely no way of knowing at this time whether her Clubs would be good or not, even whether she was bidding to make six or possibly even taking a sacrifice against West's five Spades. Remember she is the only one at the table who knows that she has a very poor defensive hand especially after she is raised by partner. She bid six and was allowed to play there because no one at the table really knew whether she could make it or not. Some Declarers at Hearts did not make it. They should have for the hand is "cold."

West led the Spade Ace and continued, ruffed by South. At this point all the Declarers in Hearts were quite confident for there appeared to be no problem. Hearts had to split for there were only three out and South had three high ones to pull them. Clubs figured to split too, for there were only five out and also the three high ones. If they split evenly, 3-2, all would be good and if the Trumps broke, even a 4-1 break could be handled.

But West showed out on the first Trump and here is where some went wrong. They drew all of East's Trumps and then, with none in Dummy now, started on the Clubs. They expected them to break but they should have hoped, not expected. When East showed up with four they made but five. If in Slam they went down.

This is what they should have done, as our Declarer did. She did draw one Trump but when West showed out she stopped and then turned to the Clubs. Her idea was to test them. If both opponents followed twice, the suit would break and the remaining Trumps be drawn and the hand spread, all good. If either does show out and ruffs, the hand couldn't have been made anyhow. But now there will still be an extra Trump to take care of the Club to make the rest of that suit good. As the outstanding cards are, East has the four Clubs but he also has the Trump and must helplessly watch as Declarer plays the three high Clubs and ruffs the fourth in Dummy. West has no trumps to use. Now Trumps are drawn and the twelve tricks made. This is an automatic situation.

Moral: If possible, always provide for any emergency, especially when the bidding or your own distribution tells you to expect the worst.

PASS RESOLUTION

CHICAGO — The two-day National Interreligious Consultation on Soviet Jewry passed a resolution authorizing "a direct appeal to President Nixon as the representative of the American people to convey in clear and forthright terms to the Soviet authorities during their forthcoming conversations in Moscow the expectation of the American people — Christians and Jews, Black and white, liberal and conservative — that (the) discriminations and denials of Soviet Jewry and others be stopped now and that fundamental human rights be granted — now."

Jerusalem Names Street After French War Hero

JERUSALEM — The city of Jerusalem paid tribute to a French war hero by naming a street after him, but the strained relations between Israel and France cast a shadow over that event and over others scheduled to take place later this month in connection with the dedication of the new French House on the Hebrew University campus. The street was named after the late Gen. Pierre Koenig, a leader of the French resistance during World War II and a staunch advocate of Franco-Israeli friendship up to the time of his death last year.

A high ranking delegation from Paris headed by Alain Poher, president of the French Senate attended the street-naming event. Poher, who spoke at the dedication, said relations between France and Israel were friendly, apparently meaning on a people-to-people basis. But Transport Minister Shimon Peres, another speaker, said relations between the two governments were strained, though he believed they would improve in the future.

At a press conference here, Foreign Minister Abba Eban criticized French policy toward Israel and the refusal of the French Foreign Minister to visit Israel. Eban also criticized French objections to having Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem speak at the opening of a Paris exhibition at The Jerusalem Municipal Theater later this month.

That upcoming event is scheduled to take place when the Comedie Francaise, a French national troupe, appears at the theater. Kollek is due to hold a reception after the performance. But objections were raised in Paris lest Kollek's role be construed as recognition by the French government of Israel's sovereignty over united Jerusalem. Kollek said, "We will not let them insult us," but added that there was time to settle the dispute.

Abba Eban Accepts Invitation To Austria

JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister Abba Eban has accepted an invitation to visit Austria. The invitation was extended by Dr. Rudolph Kirchschlaeger, the first Foreign Minister of Austria to visit Israel.

Questioned by reporters, Dr. Kirchschlaeger said he favored the punishment of Nazi war criminals but that as Foreign Minister did not want to interfere with the courts. The visit of the Austrian diplomat occasioned complaints that Austria lags in the punishment of Nazi criminals and has failed to make just compensation to the Jewish citizens for the losses they suffered under Nazi rule.

In Halfa Dr. S. Schoenblum, president of the World Association of Austrian Jews, charged that Austrian Jews were "step-children" among all survivors of Nazism. He said the Foreign Minister's visit should be the occasion to raise the question of Austrian Jews' compensation.

DENIES CHARGES UNITED NATIONS — Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah has denied Egyptian charges that Israel has deported more than 10,000 Sinai residents.

ATTEND AIR SHOW HANOVER — Egyptian and Jordanian military attaches attending the International Air Show here visited the exhibit of the Israel Aircraft Industries and showed "great interest in all the company's products."

REFO SYNAGOGUE TEL AVIV — By unanimous vote the Tel Aviv municipal building committee approved a site in the northern part of the city for construction of the first Progressive (Reform) synagogue and communal center.

JDL Members Invade Austrian Embassy

WASHINGTON — A group of Jewish Defense League members invaded the Austrian Embassy this week and traded punches with Embassy officials trying to remove a Swastika flag that the JDLers hung from the second floor balcony.

According to Dr. William Perl, the Washington area chairman of the JDL, a group of seven young JDL members he led into the Embassy building was "attacked" by Embassy officials including Ambassador Karl Gruber. Police were summoned but no arrests were made. After the incident the Ambassador agreed to meet with a delegation of JDLers.

Perl said the JDL entered the Embassy to protest the acquittal in Linz, Austria, of 49-year-old Johann Gogol, a watchmaker accused of war crimes. While on the Embassy premises, two JDL members surreptitiously hung the Nazi flag and the sign from the balcony. According to Perl, Gruber personally removed the flag and tore up the sign following the scuffle. The sign read "Don't Visit Nazi Austria."

A reporter stated that he saw blows traded in the conference room on the second floor of the three-story Embassy building as JDLers apparently tried to prevent Embassy officials from entering the balcony to remove the flag and the sign. The 3 1/2 by 6 foot flag hung from the balcony for 45 minutes before the Embassy staff was aware of its presence.

CONDEMN ESCALATION

NEW YORK — Two Jewish organizations have demanded that the United States pull out of the escalating Vietnam war. A resolution of the national governing council of the American Jewish Congress, condemning the "massive escalation" of the war in Southeast Asia, urged the Nixon administration to set July 1 as the date for a complete withdrawal of all U.S. forces and a cessation of hostilities and the National Council of Jewish Women called on the U.S. government to withdraw all American troops and resume the peace negotiations in Paris.

Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg Elected President Of Jewish Congress

CLEVELAND — Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg, elected last week as president of the American Jewish Congress, is a scholar, an author and, according to his associates, one of the nation's most outspoken preachers. Spiritual leader of Temple Emanu-El in Englewood, New Jersey since 1956, the rabbi angered many of his suburban congregants in 1963 by warning, in a Yom Kippur sermon, against United States involvement in Vietnam. Those whose feathers were ruffled were not only hawks but also those who saw the synagogues as a place for worship, not controversy, particularly during the high holy days.

On another occasion, Rabbi Hertzberg upset the military by suggesting that the chaplaincy drop its officer status and join the ranks. He served from 1951 to 1953 as a chaplain in the Air Force.

The 51-year-old rabbi, who is also president of the Conference on Jewish Social Studies and a member of the Executive of the Jewish Agency for Israel, succeeds Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld of Cleveland, who served for three two-year terms as president of the congress.

In his maiden speech shortly after his election as president, Rabbi Hertzberg characterized modern American Judaism as a "middle-aged establishment with a fringe of youth."

The problem, he said, is the "young married" group that, while still a part of Judaism, has drifted away from the synagogue.

"There will be no vibrant Jewish life within the decade if our establishments become

AID, Israeli Officials Sign $50 Million Grant For Israel

An agreement for a U.S. Government grant of $50 million for Israel was signed May 9 by Dr. John A. Hannah, administrator of the Agency for International Development and Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin of Israel.

The grant was specifically authorized and appropriated for Israel by the Congress in Foreign Assistance legislation for fiscal year 1972.

Dr. Hannah termed the agreement "another example of the friendship of the people of the United States for the people of Israel," and part of a continuing effort to assist Israel maintain economic stability in a prolonged period of heavy defense expenditures.

Dr. Hannah also announced at the ceremony that the President had authorized an additional $2 million to facilitate the movement of Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union to Israel. The funds will be administered by the State Department.

The $50 million in U.S. assistance will be in the form of dollar financing made available to Israel to purchase imports of a variety of industrial and miscellaneous commodities from the United States. Related services may also be included.

The goods imported under the U.S. grant are sold in Israel and the proceeds in Israeli pounds will be applied to general support of Israel's national budget.

It is expected that the Israelis will use the AID financing for trucks, tractors and agricultural machinery, paper, electronic components, medical and scientific instruments, iron, steel and non-ferrous metals, chemical elements and compounds, textile fibers, office machinery and computers, pharmaceuticals, fork lifts, refinery equipment and sulphur.

organization of retired ladies and gentlemen," he warned.

In charting the future of the congress, Rabbi Hertzberg called for what he described as "balance."

"For the past half-century, the attitude of the Jewish community has been that what is good for society is good for the Jews," he said.

When the civil rights movement died and Jewish interests began to come into conflict with those of other groups, we over-reacted and turned inward, sacrificing our traditional concern for universal values in favor of the programs that would emphasize specifically Jewish problems," he continued.

"The time has come to redress this new imbalance," he declared, "to take the middle position which says affirmatively and proudly: we are universalists and particularists, we care for all men and we care for ourselves, we work for what is good for the community and what is good for us, we strive for racial justice to the black man and support Soviet Jewry's struggle to be free."

Other officers elected included Howard M. Squadron of New York City, chairman of the congress's governing council; Theodore Bikel, of Wilton, Conn.; Theodore R. Mann, of Philadelphia and Virginia Shtow of Scarsdale, N.Y., co-chairmen, and Stanley H. Lowell of New York City, senior vice president.

Rabbi Hertzberg was born in Lubaczow, Poland, and came to this country in 1926 with his parents. His father was for 42 years an Orthodox rabbi in Baltimore.

His wife, the former Phyllis Cannon, is a bibliographer.

The younger Rabbi Hertzberg was graduated from Johns Hopkins University, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and was ordained at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. He received his doctorate in history from Columbia University. He is now an adjunct professor of history at Columbia University and has taught at Rutgers and Princeton Universities and at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

He has been a member of the Executive of the Jewish Agency for Israel since 1969. He is also editor of Jewish Social Studies and served as a consulting editor of the new 16-volume "Encyclopedia Judaica."

In 1967 he received the first Amram award, which honors the outstanding non-fiction manuscript of the year in the Jewish field, for "The French Enlightenment and the Jews."

For recreation, the rabbi reads detective novels "and all other kinds of trash" and raps with his children, Linda Beth, 18, a freshman at Yale, and Susan, 16, a high school student in Englewood.

EXCHANGE PRISONERS

TEL AVIV — Four Israelis detained by Jordan, one of them an Arab, were returned to Israel under the auspices of the International Red Cross. At the same time, Israel returned a Jordanian officer captured two years ago in the El Hamma area while participating in the ambush of Israeli civilian workers. The officer completed a two-year prison term.

Berlin is one of the most prolific songwriters in the history of the art. He wrote campaign songs for Al Smith when he ran for president. He also wrote a song for Eisenhower when he felt sure the general would accept the presidential nomination. The song was "I Like Ike," in the musical "Call Me Madam."

Berlin has received many honorary degrees. The Medal of Merit for "This Is the Army," The Legion of Honor decoration, the Congressional Gold Medal for "God Bless America." But his most enduring decoration is the fact that in America, and all over the world, people not only walk out of theaters whistling his songs, but still sing them, play them, hum them, dance to them and derive pleasure from his great talent.

RIGHT FROM THE START?

It's time we knew the facts about the McGovern record.

"... reparations are necessary . . . Israel should compensate Palestinian Arabs . . . (to) cover not only the losses in real property but an adequate indemnity for the psychological loss suffered by Arab people who have no prospect for ever returning to their homes."

Senator George S. McGovern
July 20, 1970 - Congressional Record

Any politician who seeks the Presidency of the United States must expect that his public record will be carefully scrutinized. Surely a candidate whose campaign has been built around the claim that he has been "right, from the start," should welcome public examination of his previous positions.

We have carefully examined Senator George McGovern's record and are shocked by the inconsistencies and incongruities that it contains. The Senator from South Dakota has certainly compiled an admirable record on a number of issues, but he has been less than candid in presenting the entire scope of his performance to the American people.

"... the United States is committed to the preservation of all Arab states in the area . . . that no Arab country should be threatened with dismemberment and collapse because of the aggression of any other country..."

Senator George S. McGovern
July 20, 1970 - Congressional Record

THE WAR

Yes, Senator McGovern has been a leading figure in the anti-war movement in recent years. But he has hardly been "right, from the start."

In August of 1964 he ignored the warnings of Senators Wayne Morse and Ernest Gruening and voted for the infamous Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which put the stamp of legality on America's Vietnam involvement. On February 17, 1965 he publicly supported the American bombing of North Vietnam and on March 1, 1966 he voted against repealing the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Many good men, of course, supported the Vietnam War when Senator McGovern did. Far more shocking was his performance during the historic Civil Rights struggle of 1964.

On June 15, 1964, Senator McGovern joined 22 other Senators (18 of them from Southern and Border States) in supporting a last ditch effort to emasculate the voting rights provisions of the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964. Turning his back on the Kennedy-Johnson Civil Rights position, the Senator from South Dakota voted to delete the vital sections of H.R. 7152 that would allow the Attorney General to request a 3-judge court and would require that the courts expedite suits covering voting rights.

The McGovern supported amendment was defeated 62-23. Among those voting for it were Senators from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia, conservative Senators from Iowa, and Wyoming, and the Democratic Senator from South Dakota — George McGovern.

On May 13, 1968 Senator McGovern joined in supporting punitive legislation that sought to disqualify anyone convicted of participating in a riot from Federal employment for a period of 5 years. This legislation was a thinly veiled effort to "punish" blacks who had participated in the disturbances that followed the King assassination.

THE MIDDLE EAST

As Jewish Americans we are especially concerned about Senator McGovern's record concerning the Middle East.

In the past few months Senator McGovern has made a great deal of his friendship and support for Israel, while conveniently ignoring his public record on this vital issue.

He is the only declared Presidential candidate to speak of internationalizing Jerusalem, of placing limits on the use of defense equipment Israel buys from the United States, and to declare that Israel can't be given a "blank check on the United States Treasury" (July 8, 1971 — Jewish Telegraphic Agency interview).

He is the only candidate to vote against Congressional legislation including military sales credit to Israel, and to declare that freedom of Israeli shipping through the straits of Tiran does not mean continued Israeli control of Sharm-el-Sheik.

Senator McGovern apparently does not understand that it was the Arab states who created the Arab refugee problem in 1948 by calling on the Palestinian Arabs to leave their homes, and that it was these same Arab states who perpetuated their plight for twenty years in order to use them as pawns in a callous game of international blackmail. Otherwise, George McGovern could not have said on the floor of the Senate that Israel should give the Palestinians "reparations" to "cover not only the losses in real property but an adequate indemnity for the psychological loss suffered by Arab people who have no prospect of ever returning to their homes."

Senator McGovern apparently doesn't understand that it was the Arab act of aggression, blockading the Israeli port of Eilat by closing the Straits of Tiran at Sharm-el-Sheik, that started the Six Day War in June, 1967. Otherwise, he couldn't have said on the floor of the Senate "... no Arab country should be threatened with dismemberment and collapse because of the aggression of any other country . . ."

Senator McGovern has failed to understand the realities of the current Middle East situation. He would turn back the clock to the dangerous and unstable situation that precipitated the June 1967 war. He has called for Israeli withdrawal from "all but insubstantial portions of captured Arab territories."

The facts speak for themselves.

McGovern Urges Israeli Pullout

Washington, March 2, 1971 — Senator George S. McGovern joined tonight the Nixon Administration in suggesting that Israel withdraw from all but 'insubstantial' portions of captured Arab territories provided her future borders are adequately guaranteed in a Middle East settlement. The South Dakotan . . . also suggested that one way to solve the Arab-Israeli deadlock over Jerusalem might be to internationalize the city.

On both questions, Mr. McGovern went further than any previous comment he has made on the Middle East negotiations, and took positions that have been challenged by the Israeli Government . . .

Asked if he backed the Administration's position that as part of a peace settlement, Israel should return to the old 1967 Arab-Israeli lines except for "insubstantial" alterations, he replied: "Yes, generally, I do." . . . "Perhaps the solution is to internationalize the City of Jerusalem," the Senator said . . .

Hedrick Smith —
The New York Times

McGovern says U.S. Planes Sold to Israel Not Be Used for Forays Over Arab Territory

Washington, July 20, 1970 — Senator George S. McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who was one of the 76 Senators who last month urged Secretary of State William P. Rogers to sell Israel 125 more jets, recommended today that American planes not be used by Israel for "forays over Arab territory." American aircraft is intended to provide "sufficient airpower to make it clear that Israel could repel any attack that might be launched against it, he advised the Senate, "but armed incursions across the battle lines . . . should be halted. The United States should express clearly its wish that the aircraft sold to Israel not be used for such incursions." Such a directive, he said, "would signal to the Arab leaders the American intention to seek directly some restraint on the part of Israel." . . .

Kahane Calls Aliyah Necessity, Not Luxury

NEW YORK — "Aliyah is no longer a luxury for the American Jew — it is necessary" Rabbi Meir Kahane, national chairman of the Jewish Defense League, said last week.

Citing "the series of crises in America and the climate of bitterness and frustration leading to a readiness to explode against the favorite scapegoat — the Jew," Rabbi Kahane said that only mass aliyah to Israel can save America's Jews from a "violent holocaust."

Rabbi Kahane said he hopes that Return will register hundreds of thousands of potential olim and will establish contact with private investors willing to provide jobs and inexpensive housing for the olim in Israel.

His plan, he said, is to present the Jewish Agency and the Israel government with the names of the olim. "If there's a need for these Jews to go to Israel, we'll dump them there," he said. "We're not going to stand for any red tape."

The JDL hopes to establish settlements in what Kahane calls the "liberated" areas — especially the West Bank — in order to make sure that these areas remain Jewish. "The Jews have problems in both America and Israel," Rabbi Kahane said, "and aliyah is the answer to all of them."

Lothian Says Britain Has No Arms Embargo

LONDON — Lord Lothian, the Foreign Affairs spokesman in the House of Lords, said that Britain does not maintain an embargo on arms sales to either side in the Arab-Israeli dispute and considers each arms request on its merits, taking into account the military balance in the Middle East. He noted that exports of military equipment to 12 Arab states have been authorized during the past two years.

Lord Lothian's remarks came as the Arab League Boycott Committee in Beirut threatened to place the Vickers company and all its international subsidiaries on the Arab blacklist if the firm proceeds with plans to build three submarines for Israel. The threat was made by Mohammed Ahmed Mahgoub, commissioner general of the Arab boycott office who called the submarine deal "an outright alignment with Zionism."

A Vickers spokesman said that the threatened Arab League boycott "would not dissuade us from carrying out our contracts to build submarines for Israel."

The spokesman said the contract called for three small subs of a coastal type, adding that "We are just as willing to build for the Arabs."

Effervescent Profit Pattern At Coca-Cola

Q: We have inherited a good amount of Coca-Cola stock. Should it be held? We know nothing about the stock market, S.P.

A: Coca-Cola (NYSE) recently put the cap on its 13th consecutive year of rising sales and earnings as results for 1971 reached a record $2.82 a share on net sales of $1.73 billion. Sparking this impressive track record is significant growth overseas (company obtains about half of its net from foreign operations, although only 40% of sales), plus improved domestic consumer demand. Margins for the firm's noncola beverages are being widened, while the disposal of low-margin canning operations has also enlarged the rate of return. Augmenting domestic sales have been acquisitions, the latest being Aqua-Chem, a water purification firm. The latter, which has substantial potential, should pick up this year after a sluggish 1971.

Coca-Cola (which appears to be a split candidate) is simply priced on near-term prospects, but is an attractive commitment for the long-term investor. Hold.

Q: Having sold my home, I now have $15,000 to invest in a stock paying 5% or 6%, safe and with good growth potential. What would you recommend? A.M.

A: American Brands (NYSE) is a sound investment offering adequate income (5.2%) and long-term appreciation potential. The firm has been broadening and expanding its sales base through acquisitions in recent years. And although, American Brands derives the major portion of revenues from tobacco products, sales of nontobacco items, such as distilled beverages, food and hardware, have risen 268% since 1966. The most recent acquisition proposal involves Shatterproof Glass Company, which, if purchase would add more than $38 million to total annual revenue, boosting nontobacco revenue to more than $800 million a year.

1972 should be American Brands' ninth consecutive year of uninterrupted sales and earnings growth with profits per share projected in the $4.50 area, 5% more than 1971's $4.30 a share. Buy for income and growth.

Switch, Don't Fight

Q: Because I am retired, income is important to me. My portfolio contains 35 shares of Hershey Foods (NYSE) for which the dividend has not been increased in four years. I have written the company twice about this but have received no reply. Should I sell these shares or write to the company again? L.U.

A: In 1966 when Hershey raised its dividend to the present quarterly rate, the company earned $2.09 a share and paid out 51% of that in dividends. Since that time earnings have dropped so that last year shareholders received 78% of earnings as dividends. Under such conditions it would not have been out of line if directors had seen fit to reduce the dividend rate. Corporate directors who determine the dividend policy must make decisions on the basis of corporate rather than individual shareholder need.

Since you are primarily interested in income, your best course is to switch to a high-return investment.

Q: Would you discuss the potential growth for Mattel, Inc. (NYSE) in view of its intention to build a circus complex near Disney World? C.C.

A: Construction of a $50 million circus complex by Ringling, a Mattel subsidiary, will begin in the fall. However, this 600-acre family entertainment center is not scheduled for completion until 1975. Meanwhile, operations have produced a substantial deficit. For the year ended January 31, 1972, sales fell 22% year-to-year, from restated fiscal 1970-71 revenues. Mattel's former 10% plus share of the toy market was reduced to only 8%, an important factor in the $29.9 million loss reported for the year. On a per share basis the deficit was equal to $1.84. Company was seriously penalized by the West Coast dock strike since a good portion of their toys are manufactured in Hong Kong.

With a strong new product this year, Mattel could readily recoup its share of the volatile toy market and make up the losses suffered on its Hot Wheels line.

Writeoffs Hurt Litton

Q: Would you tell me what the potential is for Litton Industries (NYSE)? We have some stock which has decreased considerably in value. J.H. & R.W.

A: While no consolation, you are not alone in your plight. Hopes for a near-term earnings turnaround at Litton were recently dashed when the company reported a loss for its second fiscal 1972 quarter, through January 31, that drastically reduced first half earnings to a penny a share. Caused by after-tax writeoffs in the $16.8 million area, the loss resulted from a realignment of facilities. It is widely anticipated that this diversified concern will have other writeoffs in its third quarter, which will render 1971-72 profits well below fiscal 1971's depressed $1.27 a share.

In response to this news, Litton shares have plummeted to the lowest level in more than 10 years and may likely remain there until a turnaround is effected. Over the long haul, however, Litton does have the potential for a worthwhile revival as the economy improves. Having only moderate risk at these levels, share may be held for partial recovery.

Q: In 1963 I purchased 11 shares of General Foods (NYSE) at $42 for my son. The price is now $28. Should I sell the shares and take the loss? N.K.

A: The decline in GF's share price is in response to lower earnings anticipated for the year ended March 31. Incidentally, this would be the first annual decline in two decades. In the December quarter $47 million was charged off against fast food operations. Rix Systems will be phased out and Burger Chef cut back to about half its current number of outlets. A realignment of top management was also announced by General Foods.

The FTC suit against four cereal makers including GF has also been a factor in the weak performance of the shares. Settlement of this charge will undoubtedly take several years. In view of the company's aggressive marketing methods, the present earnings setback should be a temporary aberration. Shares have above-average recovery potential.

LEAGUES UNITE

NEW YORK — Latin American anti-Semites have found a new ally in the Arab League, an authority on Latin American Jewry has reported to the American Jewish Committee. Haim Avni, lecturer at the Institute of Contemporary Jewry of the Hebrew University, Jerusalem, in a report submitted to the AJ Committee's 66th annual meeting, stated that the League was stirring up hostility against Israel and Latin American Jewry. As a result, Avni reported, "traditional anti-Semites now use anti-Zionist slogans, even when the content of their propaganda is 'classically' anti-Semitic. Many non-Jews are increasingly identifying with Israelis."

REPUDIATES ANTI-SEMITE BUENOS AIRES — Jose Rucci, secretary general of the powerful Peronista Labor Confederation, repudiated a right-wing politico who has been conducting an anti-Semitic campaign in Argentina. Rucci's remarks on a television interview apparently allayed the uneasiness felt in the Jewish community here over his failure until now to take a position on an open letter addressed to him two months ago by Prof. Walter Beveraggi Allende alleging that Jews and Zionists control Argentina and were plotting its destruction.
