U.S. Takes Strong Stand On Halting Air Piracy

WASHINGTON — The United States Government announced last week that it regarded the halting of air piracy as a "most urgent" matter and was organizing a special State Department task force to spur action by the world community.

The State Department, in reporting the new development, said "the problem of air piracy has reached the point at which it cries out for remedial action."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, who was said to have "very strong views" on the subject, met with his top aides to set up a task force to come up with a program in a few days, the department spokesman, Charles W. Bray 3d, said.

In a related matter, Mr. Bray said that after "intensive conversations" with the Algerian Government, the United States was informed that Algeria "intends to take effective measures to prevent a recurrence" of the incident when a Western Airlines plane was hijacked to Algiers by a self-styled Black Panther and his girlfriend.

Algeria had already told the United States that she was returning the $500,000 extorted from the airline by the hijackers. There was no word yet on whether Algeria would accede to American requests and return the pair to the United States or would instead provide them asylum, or would punish them according to its own laws.

The problem of air piracy has taken on international ramifications with a threatened 24-hour shutdown by pilots of worldwide airline service on June 19 unless the United Nations takes effective action to stop hijacking.

In part, Mr. Rogers was reacting to the threatened action by the international pilots' organization when he called together his chief aides and ordered them to work over the weekend to come up with plans.

Ideas such as a Security Council resolution at the United Nations, boycotts of countries serving as havens for hijackers or even unilateral American diplomatic action were among those under study.

The United Nations received a cable from the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations calling for a Security Council meeting by June 16 to discuss hijacking. The association repeated its warning of a work stoppage June 19 if nothing is done.

In Weiden, West Germany, 10 Czechoslovaks appeared before an examining magistrate facing charges of air piracy following hijacking of a Czechoslovak airliner in which the pilot was shot dead. The seven men and three women asked the West German authorities for political asylum, and Prague demanded their return.

In Washington, the United States Air Line Pilots Association, with 50,000 members, sent a telegram to the international pilots group demanding that the West Germans immediately take steps to return the Czechoslovaks.

In line with the international group's threats to boycott countries that give haven to air hijackers, the American association said, "It should be made clear that unless appropriate action is promptly taken by West Germany, that country will be boycotted from future air service."

"We cannot allow this crime to go unpunished as has happened so often in the past — leading only to the stimulus for even greater acts of terror," the statement said.

German authorities said the Czechoslovaks would be tried under a section of a new law on hijacking that carries jail terms of from 10 years to life imprisonment when the seizure of an aircraft results in death.

The pilot, Jan Mlcič, 52 years old, died after being shot in the back when he refused to obey two men who stormed into the cockpit and ordered him to change course to Germany. The plane, a twin-engine craft, had just left on a flight from Mariánské Lázně, the former Marienbad, to Prague. The co-pilot landed the plane in Germany.

The United States has not commented officially on the latest hijacking. Officials noted that under the Hague Convention of 1970, West Germany was under obligation either to extradite the hijackers or to provide serious penalties under its own penal code.

In a related matter, the Civil Aeronautics Board approved an agreement by five airlines — American, Eastern, Pan American, Trans World and United — to post a $258,000 reward for the capture of hijackers.

Jewish Council Calls Emergency Session Regarding Action In Response To Times Ad

NEW YORK — The National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council, composed of nine lay and rabbinical Jewish organizations and 92 community affiliates, has scheduled an emergency meeting to discuss possible action in response to a full-page advertisement in Tuesday's New York Times condemning President Nixon for "blind support" of Israel. One NJCRAC official said such prompt meetings were not unusual, but one participant described it as an "emergency meeting."

The ad, headed "A Letter to the President," was taken by Norman F. Dacey of Southbury, Connecticut, who described himself as chairman of Volunteers for Nixon in 1968, director of psychological warfare operations for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in World War II, a broadcast commentator and "a reasonably patriotic American."

Advising Nixon that he was now "ashamed of the position of my country in the Middle East," Dacey wrote of Israel's "pure aggression" and "ruthless" expulsion of Palestinians, its "brutal physical torture of Arab prisoners in Israel," its "strictest censorship" of foreign reporters, its "gross violations" of the Geneva Conventions and its "sweet-talking" of the United States into granting its "every wish" militarily. "The knowledge that my country's moral and material support of this politico-military monster is all that keeps it going is a matter of shame and embarrassment to me, Mr. President," he wrote.

Dacey has often written and spoken against Israel, as in the Wall Street Journal of April 6, 1971, in which he scored its "deliberate defiance" of the United Nations in having "seized and annexed the internationalized Holy City of Jerusalem."

In a letter in the Bridgeport Connecticut Post, he condemned Israel for "war crimes" and for "torturing" Arabs, "destroying" their homes and "deporting them." He wrote then that he was not anti-Semitic, but that the "second greatest crime" — after Hitler's attempted genocide — has been "Zionism's unspeakable treatment of the Palestinian people whose land they invaded."

Dacey's Mideast views have been quoted favorably by Alfred M. Lilienthal, the anti-Zionist Jewish editor of Middle East Perspective, who calls him "the well-known publicist." Dacey is best known, however, as the author of the bestselling "How to Avoid Probate," which angered many lawyers. The New York Bar Association sued to prevent distribution of the book, calling it misleading, but lost, and Dacey reaped "a million dollars" worth of publicity," according to Dorothy Beck, assistant director of the United Jewish Council of Bridgeport.

Dacey declared he was "convinced that if you (Nixon) continue your present foreign policy of blind support for Israel which in the UN has isolated us from the rest of the world community, there won't be any United States, economically sound or otherwise." This, he said, was because "with consummate skill and cunning, the Israeli government which we have imposed upon the peoples of the Middle East is turning its conflict with the Arabs into a confrontation between our country and Russia."

Senator George McGovern Concerned With Standing In Jewish Community

NEW YORK — Senator George McGovern, apparently concerned over his standing in the Jewish community, opened his New York Presidential primary campaign by accusing Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of "unscrupulous, underhanded" distortions of his record on Israel.

The South Dakotan charged that he had been subjected to "one of the most unscrupulous, underhanded campaigns — in California that I have seen in my political career" and that he had already heard "rumblings" of a similar campaign here.

The Senator, on his New York visit, told a news conference at the Hotel Biltmore with unusual heat: "I'm going to nail every lie, every distortion, every cheap shot that is taken by my political opponents trying to undercut my position on Israel."

His concern about his support among Jewish voters was buttressed less than an hour later when he drew an audience of under 500 persons in the crowded garment center at noon — the smallest crowd any major political figure has drawn there in the memory of veteran politicians.

"This is Humphrey country," observed one politician familiar with the politics of the largely Jewish garment center.

The Israeli question dominated the day as the Senator obviously intended it would.

McGovern campaign aides in New York declared that reprints of a California newspaper ad attacking the Senator's stand on Israel had been mailed to New Yorkers. The ad was sponsored by Lorne Greene, the actor, and his wife, Mr. Greene frequently accompanies Senator Humphrey on his campaign tours, although Humphrey aides in New York disclaimed any knowledge of the flyer.

Among other points, the flyer charges that Mr. McGovern voted against omnibus bills in 1970 and 1971 that included aid for Israel. It also charges that he "waffles on the Jerusalem issue" and had suggested the possibility of internationalizing the city a year ago.

The flyer also asserts that the Senator declared in 1970 that United States jets sold to Israel should not be used over Arab nations and that he had proposed a withdrawal of Israeli forces from occupied Arab territories.

The McGovern forces have countered by printing in New York along three million pamphlets describing the Senator as a "staunch defender of Israel."

Israeli, Egyptian Planes Clash Over Mediterranean

JERUSALEM — Israeli and Egyptian planes clashed over the Mediterranean Tuesday in the first air battle since the ceasefire went into effect in the Suez Canal area 22 months ago.

An Israeli military spokesman said that two Egyptian MiG-21's were shot down over international waters 25 miles north of the occupied Sinai Peninsula. Two Egyptian pilots were sighted parachuting into the sea, the spokesman said, adding that all Israeli aircraft returned safely from the area, east of the canal.

(In Cairo, an Egyptian military spokesman said that two Israeli Mirage jets were shot down near a point about 30 miles northwest of the canal after 16 Israeli planes invaded Egyptian airspace and were intercepted. He said the Israeli planes fell into the sea and added that two "strictest censorship" of foreign reporters, its "gross violations" of the Geneva Conventions and its "sweet-talking" of the United States into granting its "every wish" militarily. Egyptian jets had been "hit" in the encounter.)

The initial reaction of Israeli analysts was to regard the clash as an isolated incident, not necessarily foreshadowing a new spiral of response and counterresponse.

According to the Israeli military spokesman, Israeli planes were flying a routine patrol mission over the Mediterranean north of the Sinai when they encountered Egyptian planes.

Military sources here said that the Egyptian aircraft — they would not specify how many — approached "in attack formation" in the Port Said sector. There was no comment here to the Egyptian assertion that Israeli aircraft had earlier penetrated Egyptian air space. The spokesman said only that an "air battle" took place.

ARAB STUDENT DROP-OUTS
JERUSALEM — Haifa University is conducting a study to find out why about 25 percent of its Arab students drop out at the end of their first year. Eliezer Rafaei, vice-president of the university, said one explanation of the high drop-out rate is due to the difficulties in the transition from Arabic-speaking schools in the sheltered social climate of the traditional Arab community to the sophisticated environment of a modern Hebrew-speaking university. Another difficulty, he noted, was the need for many Arab students to travel long distances from their villages to Haifa because of the shortage of accommodations in town. Jewish home-owners, Rafaei said, are reluctant to rent rooms to Arab students and Arabs do not usually take in lodgers.

SLOW PACE OF TRIALS
JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister Rudolph Kirchschaeger of Austria says there is criticism in his country as well as Israel over the slow pace of war crimes prosecution in Austria, the many acquittals and the light sentences. Dr. Kirchschaeger, the first Austrian Foreign Minister to visit Israel, expressed that view at a working session with Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Artists Internationales To Present Two Series Of Programs For 1972-73

Artists Internationales announce two series of programs for the 1972-1973 theatre season. One series of programs will be a concert series and the second will be a dance series. Music and dance lovers will be able to purchase tickets to either series or, at a discount rate, a combination of both.

The concert series will begin on Sunday, October 22, at 8 p.m. with a performance by the Frank Lehar orchestra in their first American tour featuring 34 Viennese instrumental virtuosi with two principal singers and two ballet stars from the Vienna State Opera as guest artists in a performance of classical and light classical favorites.

This series of five concerts will continue on Saturday, November 4, at 8:30 p.m. with a recital by the man Time magazine calls, "The greatest tenor in the world," Richard Tucker. On Friday evening, November 24, Artists Internationales will present, during their first American tour, the Hungarian State Symphony Orchestra conducted by Janos Ferencsik with a guest soloist from Hungary, to be announced at a later date.

The series will continue on Saturday evening, February 24, with the duo-piano team of Whitmore Lowe. The concert series will close on Sunday evening, April 8, with a rare Rhode Island appearance of violinist Isaac Stern.

The Artists Internationales

dance series will begin on Thursday evening, October 12 with a performance by the Harkness Ballet Company with full symphony orchestra. On Sunday evening, December 10, during their first North American tour, the gypsy folk spectacle, "Tzigane," starring Gypsy Redzepova, and a company of 40 dancers and singers from Hungary, Russia, Rumania, Spain, Greece, Turkey, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, with a gypsy orchestra will appear. A former member of the State Ballet of Rhode Island, Miss Naomi Chernick, will return with New York City's "Downtown Ballet Company" on Sunday, March 11. The dance series will close on Thursday evening, March 28, with a performance of the Mazowsze Polish Song and Dance Company direct from Warsaw. The Mazowsze is the major dance company being brought to the United States for the 1972-1973 season by Impresario Sol Hurok.

Dr. Earle F. Cohen, president of Artists Internationales, has announced that tickets for either or both series of programs will soon go on sale at popular prices. All the programs will be presented at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Providence.

In addition to the concert and dance series, Artists Internationales will soon announce the completion of negotiations for the presentation during the season of a performance of a fully staged opera.

Soviet Jew Who Married American Arrested As Wife Leaves For U.S.

MOSCOW — A young Soviet Jew who had sought to avoid military service was detained here Monday shortly after saying good-bye to an American woman he married last week in a private Orthodox ceremony.

The activist, Gavrill Y. Shapiro, was seized at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport after his bride, Judy Silver of Cincinnati, had departed by plane for London on her way to New York.

Although Mr. Shapiro, a 27-year-old chemical engineer, was wanted for evading active duty as a reserve officer, he had emerged from hiding to attend the religious wedding at his parents' home near Moscow University.

A religious ceremony has no legal standing in the Soviet Union, and the couple followed through by applying for a civil marriage license without encountering official interference. The bride left Monday because her tourist visa expired, but she planned to return for the civil wedding, set for August 30.

The authorities, having evidently kept the young couple under surveillance, did not act until after Miss Silver's departure. A witness outside the Sheremetyevo Airport terminal said Mr. Shapiro, a red-head wearing a neatly trimmed beard, had been detained by a uniformed policeman and two plainclothes men and driven off in a police car.

Miss Silver, a social worker in her twenties, is a granddaughter of Eliezer Silver, the late Chief Rabbi of Cincinnati. She met Mr. Shapiro on a previous visit to Moscow last August, and they were married last week by Rabbi Harry Kranz of Silver Spring, Maryland, who had come to Moscow for that purpose.

Mr. Shapiro is one of 14 Soviet Jews who were summoned for military service a month ago after having pressed earlier applications for emigration to Israel.

Some of the 14 were found medically unfit, others headed the call-up and still others, including Mr. Shapiro, decided to avoid the summons on the ground that service in the Soviet Army would further lessen their chances of obtaining an exit visa.

FAREWELL COFFEE HOUR

The Sisterhood of Congregation Shaare Zedek-Sons of Abraham will hold a Bon Voyage Farewell Coffee Hour in honor of Mrs. Leon M. Mozeson on Monday, June 19, at 8 p.m. in the vestry of the synagogue.

Rabbi and Mrs. Mozeson are leaving Providence to live in Israel.

PLAN RESEARCH DAY

The tenth annual Research Day of The Miriam Hospital will be held on Tuesday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the Sopkin Auditorium.

The hospital's Research Committee, headed by Dr. Joel K. Weltman, director of the Division of Infectious Diseases and Allergy, has selected six research papers which will be presented to those attending.

The papers, which cover a broad spectrum of subjects, represent the work accomplished over the past months by members of staffs of the Departments of Medicine, Surgery and Laboratory of The Miriam Hospital.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The new officers of the Shalom Chapter of Pioneer Women were installed at their annual dinner meeting held on May 25. Mrs. Robert Custick received the donor and ad book awards and Mrs. Haskel Yanow received the membership award.

Bella Abzug Calls On Nixon To Boycott Beirut

WASHINGTON — Rep. Uella S. Abzug (D-N.Y.) introduced a resolution calling upon President Nixon to express the strong disapproval of the U.S. to the Lebanese and other governments' harboring, aiding or encouraging Arab-sponsored terrorist groups.

The resolution urged Congress to call on all international airlines to boycott Beirut until such time as the Lebanese government takes "strong effective measures to terminate the existence of this group (the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) or any other similar group on its territory."

Political Struggle Rumored Between Sudan And Egypt

UNITED NATIONS — Reports have trickled in pointing to a developing political struggle between President Gaafar al-Nimeiry of the Sudan and President Sadat of Egypt on the issue of ideology. The Sudan, which was originally slated to join the Federation of Arab Republics composed of Egypt, Syria and Libya, has veered away from the so-called 'Socialist' states and sought closer relations with its African neighbors and the West. What has particularly disturbed Egyptians and Syrians here at the UN is the news of a Sudanese purge of Nasserites in Khartoum.

Miss Linda Susan Horovitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Horovitz of 209 Fifth Street, became the bride on Sunday, June 11, of Kenneth Stuart Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Cohen of 304 Fairfax Drive, Warwick. Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the 6 p.m. ceremony which was held at the Green Manor in Sharon, Massachusetts.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long-sleeved, empire waisted gown fashioned with a scoop neck trimmed with pearls. Her matching headpiece trimmed with pearls held her silk illusion veil, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white and purple flowers.

Miss Jacqueline Cohen, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a pink shirtrwaist gown and carried a colonial bouquet of purple flowers. Bridesmaids were Miss Carol Brown and Miss Carol Swartz, who wore pink and purple print gowns fashioned with a scoop neckline, empire waist and skirt with two pockets.

Charles Woolfe was best man, and ushers were Arnold Rose, Lonnie Rose, Steven Horovitz, brother of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to Nantucket, the couple will live in Nashville, Tennessee.

Bush Cancels Out Of Kahane Meeting

NEW YORK — George Bush, United States ambassador to the United Nations, apologized to Dick Cavett for canceling out of his ABC-TV talk show after agreeing to appear with Rabbi Meir Kahane, chairman of the Jewish Defense League.

In a letter to Cavett, the former Congressman conceded that he had agreed to do the show but subsequently "did an in-depth check" with "certain responsible, highly respected leaders of national Jewish organizations" who convinced him that "any move by me that would have even the slightest appearance of giving recognition or credence to Kahane would damage the serious productive and legal efforts that they and thousands of their fellow Jews have been making to alleviate the suffering of their brothers (in the Soviet Union)."

Bush explained that while it had been his original intention to "forcefully" repudiate JDL policy in Rabbi Kahane's presence, he became convinced after speaking with the Jewish leaders that he did not want to "give any standing whatsoever to Mr. Kahane."

This is a "matter of deepest conscience," Bush wrote, adding in a postscript that the arrests in Lido Beach, Long Island, of four alleged JDLers for reputedly planning to blow up the Soviet estate at Glen Cove indicated "the kinds of activities that Kahane by his conduct condones" but that other Jewish leaders deem "outrageously irresponsible."

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Leisure Time Stocks
 Good Investment Play

Q: I have a few thousand dollars to invest for my daughters (five and six years old) so that when they become school age they will have a nest egg for education or whatever. Can you give me a long-term investment for this purpose? M.P.

A: Gladly. With the trend rapidly accelerating toward less work and more play, e.g., four-day work weeks, more holidays on Mondays, etc., an excellent area for future growth is the leisure time field. Despite inflation and unemployment, the average working man and woman now has more buying power than ever before. In fact, it is estimated that consumers' leisure expenditures will reach $105 billion this year — nearly twice the 1965 figure. Among the numerous likely beneficiaries will be American Express (OTC) and Anheuser-Busch (OTC), both of which are suitable buys now. Earnings progress has been excellent at American Express; and the future holds more of the same. The company's credit card business has been experiencing unprecedented growth, with applications received being greater than at any other period in the firm's history. Further, the volume of travelers checks outstanding last year rose 6.5% to $881 million despite mounting competition and the effects of the recession. This so-called "float" of sold but uncashed checks is a significant component of American Express' total earnings for it is invested primarily in tax-exempt bonds. Also an important contributor is the firm's Fireman's Fund American, a leading property-casualty insurance firm, which is benefitting from better underwriting results, portfolio capital gains and investment income.

Disagrees With Segal On Order Of 'Program Of Priorities'

In his column last week, "What's New in Providence," Beryl Segal refers to constructive activities on behalf of Soviet Jewry as "a hysteria." He then proceeds to emphasize how truly unimportant and "foolish" he considers such activities to be, by stating that "we need a program of priorities for American Jews," offering such local problem areas as The Jewish Community Center, The Providence Hebrew Day School, and the Bureau of Jewish Education for the top spots on his "priority list." The tragic ironic implications of these statements caused me great dismay and distress. I do not argue with the concept of a "program of priorities for American Jews;" nor do I deny the importance of our local needs and problems — some quite serious and complex — which must be dealt with, alleviated, and, wherever possible, solved. But — and this is the essence of my argument with Mr. Segal — on any thinking man's list of "priorities for American Jews," what item more suitably, rightfully, urgently belongs near the top, than helping other Jews in other parts of the world who are being persecuted and, in many cases, imprisoned under the harshest conditions, simply because they ARE JEWS!!! As Jews, we have a great traditional responsibility to respond to a cry for help from our fellow Jews, whether they be in Providence, Jerusalem, or Moscow. In fact, that is one of the essential meanings of Jewish Peoplehood.

Mr. Segal asks: "Who gives us the authority to speak for Russian Jewry?" The answer is simple: The Soviet Jews themselves, again and again, as individuals and by the thousands, in letters, and petitions, and speeches, and private conversations, have not only "authorized" our involvement and support, but literally prayed and pleaded for every constructive, non-violent expression of concern and solidarity we can muster! But concern and constructive action to help our courageous Soviet Jewish brethren is much, much more than our "authorized right" — it is our DUTY, our RESPONSIBILITY, and our OBLIGATION. I have personally listened to and/or spoken with many recent Soviet Jewish emigres to Israel, including Alla Rusinek, Rivka Alexandrovich, Julia Libman, Mordechai, Felya Elman, and Boris Kochubievsky (who spoke under the auspices of the Providence Hebrew Day School, incidentally), to name only a few. Without exception, they have consistently, fervently stressed the vital importance of our continued active support — the importance of programs and activities designed (1) to give hope to the Soviet Jews by letting them know they are not alone, by keeping up direct contact with the "blacklisted" Jews — those who have applied for visas to Israel, and (2) to stimulate and influence public opinion in their behalf, via the mass media, via communications with U.S. governmental officials and Soviet governmental officials, through the responses of our Congressional delegation, via petitions, etc. These emigres, whose lives were literally on the

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

My Name Is . . .

By BERYL SEGAL

The name which my parents gave me is Dov-Ber. That was the name of one of my ancestors. Dov means Bear in Hebrew and so does Ber in Yiddish. When I am called to the Torah in the Synagogue, the reader chants: "Yaamond Reb Dov-Ber ben Aaron Halevi," "Let Dov-Ber, the son of Aaron the Levite stand up to the Torah."

But at home they called me Berele, or Beryl, which is the diminutive for Ber, Little Ber.

When I came to this country, I had to take on a new name. It seemed very obvious in those days. No one questioned its validity. A new life and a new name. I had the choice of Albert, Bertram or Bernard. I chose Bernard, and so I am known to the United States Naturalization Office, to my bank, to my employer, and by this name I went through school.

Now I compromise. In all official business, including the bank book, diplomas, scientific articles and whatever dealings I might have with the government, I use Bernard as my name. In all Jewish affairs, including this column, my name is Beryl.

Why am I telling all this?

To show you what transformations a Jewish name goes through and the difficulties of tracing a name to its origin.

From Dov to Beryl to Bernard, and vice versa.

Rabbi Moshe Babin of Temple Beth El in Fall River found that out when he reviewed the names of the children in the Religious School. Rabbi Babin was kind enough to send me the Bulletin of the temple where his survey appeared.

Rabbi Babin writes:

"For my own purposes, I recently reviewed the English (given) names of the children enrolled in our Religious Schools. I thought that you might be interested in the kind of names which our children carry.

"1. Names that are authentically Hebrew or can be traced to Hebrew origins: 25%.

"2. Names which derive from the New Testament or are names of Christian saints or martyrs: 24%.

"3. Names of heroes in German history or of Teutonic mythological gods and goddesses: 12%.

"4. Names of Irish (Celtic) heroes or places: 7%.

"5. Anglo-Saxon names or heroes or places: 5%.

"6. Greek heroes or mythological gods or goddesses: 8%.

"7. Latin names: 5%.

"8. Scottish heroes: 3%.

Rabbi Babin adds:

"We will have to turn to an anthropologist, psychologist, sociologist, historian and linguist to figure out for us the meaning of these statistics. Whatever they mean, I hope you will agree that they are fascinating."

In my time as a teacher in Jewish schools there were still many Moshelech, Shlomolech, Gitelech and Hanalech. These were children of the first and second generation of Jewish parents. Now, with the coming of the third and fourth generation you will hardly find a Moshe or Shlomo in the classrooms. Unless one is a Rabbi, as the author of the above-quoted survey, or a teacher from Israel who instructs my grandchildren and is called Shlomo, these two names would disappear from among us. And these are names of two of our great "heroes." Moshe the Lawgiver, and Shlomo the wisest of kings. As for girls' names, no Jewish mother would name her child Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel or Leah, names of the Mothers of the Jewish people, unless she wants to be labeled "old fashioned."

The truth of the matter is that it is, and is getting more difficult as the years go by, to trace a Jewish name. As the Rabbi confesses, "names whose origin, I could not trace," will soon be more than 2%.

To trace a Jewish name one has to know Hebrew, Yiddish, Russian, German and Polish, and, of course, English. The more languages, the better. And you must have the instinct of a detective.

How could you know names like Kevin and Dexter, and Malcolm, or Ina and Trixie and Juniper? What is their Jewish equivalent? These are names one meets in Jewish children every day.

But even an earlier generation had difficulties with Jewish names because of a meager knowledge of Hebrew and Yiddish. A friend of ours was called Harry. Now Harry is almost a "Jewish" name, and no one bothered to ask him for his given name. Only his wife called him Hershel, which is a diminutive of Hersh, meaning Deer in Yiddish. But Hersh alone is not a given name in Jewish custom. He was also named Zvi, which is a Hersh in Yiddish and a Deer in English. Hence his name was Harry-Hersh-Zvi. But since Hersh was a sickly child, his parents would not take any chances with his health and gave him the additional name of Hayim, which means Life in Hebrew. With the addition to the name also came a prayer that the child might be granted a healthy and a long life. So our friend Hayim was named Zvi-Hersh-Hayim. Now Hayim became, for some reason, Charles, which has nothing to do with health and long life.

And so my friend was called Zvi, Hersh, Hershel, Hayim, Charles, Harry. A mixture of Hebrew-Yiddish-English names that concentrated in the one name Harry.

And that, I must say, is easy to trace in comparison with such names as Sylvester or Percival or Valerie or a girl named Billie. Interesting names for a Rabbi to trace to their origin.

Meat Prices Heading for Peaks

Beef prices are on their way back to the peaks that almost propelled us into the Supermarket War this winter-spring — and it's most likely that prices will set new all-time records before they ease off again.

The wholesale markets are clearly flashing the grim picture for you and me, for beef prices in the major yards at Omaha and Chicago have been surging upward and it's hard to believe these increases won't be passed through to you and me at our local retail food counters. While experts insist that beef prices must fall as more cattle come to market this summer and fall, no one expects these declines to last.

Whatever short-term price relief we get will turn out to be temporary.

The fundamental long-term price trend for meat prices is UP and UP.

Even the conservative Continental Bank of Chicago suggests an AVERAGE ANNUAL increase in beef prices of 3 per cent is probable over the next five years.

What you and I are experiencing is actually a classic case of inflation fueled by relentlessly rising demand, limited supplies and an almost paralyzed political leadership on the issue.

The politics of meat prices and of the farm vote I need not explain (as though you needed any explanations), but below is a brief summary of the economics of it.

(1) You may not like to admit it, but it's a fact your own ever-rising demand for meat is the basic force behind the spiral.

Our per capita consumption of beef alone is now up to 115 pounds a year against only 63.4 pounds in 1950. We are simultaneously upgrading our choices of meats, shuffling off the higher costs even as we bitterly complain. As anticipated, our buying of beef has perked up along with the 1972 economy, and particularly heavy buyers have been our meat-eating youngsters.

(2) At the same time, to bolster meat prices, beef producers have been keeping supplies from rising in pace with demands. While there has been a build-up of breeding herds, increased marketings and all the rest, Continental Bank forecasts that the average annual rate of increase in supplies of beef will be 4-1/2 per cent over the next four years against an average annual rate of increase in demand for beef of 7-1/2 per cent in these years.

We may get some price relief in the fall — but that's the best — the consumer can hope for," says Continental. "Beyond that, prices should continue their upward spiral." And the prediction, I repeat is 3 per cent a year:

SO WHAT CAN YOU DO? ## Take fullest feasible advantage of the advertised meat specials, watch for them, shop (Continued on Page 10)

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand, a defensive problem, absolutely amazed me. Only one pair set the Three No Trump contract when actually setting it should have been automatic. All it takes is a little thought in the right direction. The cards staring East right in the face in Dummy should have told him exactly what to do but he didn't do it. Simple arithmetic and following through would do the trick but quite obviously not enough players follow through enough and even though almost every Bridge player is capable of correctly doing even somewhat advanced arithmetic, too many are too lazy to utilize that ability.

North		East
♠ Q		♠ A 10 9 8 5 4 2
♥ K 9 5		♥ 7 2
♦ K Q J 8 3		♦ A 4
♣ J 9 8 2		♣ 10 3
West		South
♠ K		♠ J 7 6 3
♥ J 8 6 4 3		♥ A Q 10
♦ 9 7 5 2		♦ 10 6
♣ 7 6 5		♣ A K Q 4

Mrs. Philip Finkle and Mrs. Anthony Mast were East and West, East-West Vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

2NT	P	4NT	End

The bidding didn't always go as above but many Souths did bid the Two No Trump after East's overcall of Spades. There wasn't much else they could have bid unless they underbid a bit and just said one. Regardless, North had a good enough hand so that every pair ended in the same game contract in No Trump.

True, two Declarers had it made automatically when West did not lead the Spade King. All they had to do was knock out the Diamond Ace and make eleven tricks; four Diamonds, four Clubs and three Hearts. When West did honor his partner's overcall and lead that King, the hand can easily be set with what should be normal defense. Yet I watched as Declarers now ended with ten tricks or even the same eleven if East failed to cash his Spade Ace and instead still tried to set the hand.

Can you see what East should have done and how he should have known that he had to do it? It really is easy. When West led that King and Dummy's singleton Queen could be seen and would have to be played, this is exactly what should have gone through the minds of every East: "My partner has led the King of my suit. If he had more than two cards in that suit he would have led a low one so that King must either be a singleton or at most a doubleton. Either way South has to have at least two cards to go with the Jack, maybe even three. Furthermore, South did bid No Trump right after the Spade overcall so is very likely to have four spades, and certainly at least three. Even if my partner had another Spade, South's Jack will still be a trick. But if West has a singleton Spade, a likely possibility, and I allow it to hold the first trick, my only entry, the Diamond Ace can be knocked out while Declarer still has the Spades stopped. I have one easy counter-move to that. Without costing me a thing, all I have to do is overtake that King and play my 10 back. This way I can keep playing Spades until South has to take the Jack. My entire suit will now be set up while I still have my Ace. If Declarer can still make enough tricks to make his bid, more power to him, I have done my best."

At this point, Declarer could do one of two things. He had eight sure tricks. He could cash them and then play a Diamond, accepting defeat gracefully for down one if he feels East, with all those good Spades has that Diamond Ace. Or he can hope that West, out of Spades, has it and try for the game by playing Diamonds earlier. If he cashes out and West does have the Ace Heart tricks will be cashable. As the cards are, trying to make the hand will result in a sizable set with the what should have been normal defense. At best, Declarer must go down one by giving up. Yet this hand was made by all but one Declarer. Why? Because all but one East allowed that King to hold the trick. They couldn't bear the "waste" involved in overtaking it.

Moral: There are exactly thirteen cards in every suit. Some you can see, your own and Dummy, the rest you have to figure out the information donated to you either by partner or opponent.

ENGAGED: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Bolas of 3 Andrews Drive, Lincoln, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carole R. Bolas, to Walter J. Scott of Barrington, son of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Scott of 1705 Broad Street, Cranston.

Miss Bolas was graduated from Bryant College with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Education, magna cum laude, and from Rhode Island College where she received a Master of Education degree. She is a former faculty member of Bryant College and assistant Medical Record librarian at The Miriam Hospital.

Mr. Scott, who is a registered physical therapist, was graduated from Moorehead University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration and earned a Master of Business Administration degree and Master of Health and Hospital Administration degree from Xavier University. He interned at the New England Hospital in Boston, Massachusetts.

He is a member of the Mu Psi Alpha fraternity and of Psi Beta Lambda National Business Scholastic Society, as well as "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

Formerly the director of Physical Medicine at North Miami Beach General Hospital, he is now assistant director of The Miriam Hospital.

An August 9 wedding is planned.

NAMED TO COUNCIL: Joseph F. Clark of Lincoln, comptroller at The Miriam Hospital, has been named to the Education and Research Council and the office management committee of the Hospital Financial Management Association.

Mr. Clark, who has been with the hospital for seven years, and comptroller since 1967, will work with other hospital financial managers across the country on special projects and assist local association chapters in the New England area.

Lansky Appeals Decision On Israeli Citizenship

JERUSALEM — Meyer Lansky, reputed American underworld gambling figure, asked the High Court in Jerusalem for "the right to live peacefully" in Israel. Quoting what he said was a Federal Bureau of Investigation report that he has not been active in gambling for years, Mr. Lansky appealed the Government's decision to deny his application for Israeli citizenship.

The Government denied him citizenship on the ground that he had a criminal past. Mr. Lansky, who had been in a hospital for treatment of ulcers, appeared in good health as he testified.

Meanwhile, in New York, Mr. Lansky was indicted by a Federal grand jury on two counts of filing false tax returns. The indictment charged that Lansky tax returns stating income for 1967 as $71,411.27, and for 1968 as $42,563.23, were inaccurate.

Demand Reinstitution Of Halachic Conversion

NEW YORK — A demand for reinstatement of halachic conversions in Israel was made here by 150 rabbis and more than 3,000 other Orthodox Jews at a two day conference sponsored by the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada. (Agudath Horabonim.)

The conference warned that if non-Orthodox conversions were recognized, they would "lead to the opening of doors to Reform and Conservatism from which the Jews in the diaspora are suffering so much."

The conference also reaffirmed the call by the Israeli Chief Rabbinate and the Orthodox Rabbinate in the diaspora for the resignation of the "religious ministers" from Israel's Cabinet. Rabbi Simcha Elberg, chairman of Agudath Horabonim, announced that a large international delegation would go to Israel to try to influence a change in the "Who is a Jew?" law.

The 150 rabbis attending the conference were from the Americas, Canada, Israel, Europe and Australia.

The conference resolved that when the Torah authorities in Israel proclaimed a public fast on the conversion question, Agudath

Horabonim would proclaim it in the diaspora. The conference issued three other appeals: to American Jewry to aid new Soviet immigrants in Israel, especially Georgian Jews; to the Israeli government to let Georgian Jewish immigrants "lead their lives in accordance with their traditions for which they have sacrificed themselves for the last 50 years," and to the Soviet Union to "allow full religious freedom for the Jews in Russia."

Mr. Lax is a member of the Paul D. Heyman Agency with headquarters located at 40 Westminster Street.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

BOXING AND R.I. AUD.: There's talk of boxing at R.I. Auditorium once again, Eddie Imondi being behind a promotion scheduled there for June 23. And so while eyes are on the new Civic Center and the discussions, pro and con, on whether the new site is a good one or not, continue, the old North Main Street arena is still alive. You've heard it and I've heard it talked over and over; the "whethers" and "whys" about traffic congestion and why the new arena is located where it is; why didn't "they" build it some other place, etc. No one has the answer yet and I'm sure everyone hopes the new Civic Center is located in the best place conceivable.

HOWEVER: When the R.I. Reds completed their season at the Auditorium and when the curtain went down on the Shrine Circus, it was wondered if the darkening of the ancient building following those events meant its demise. It didn't because now live boxing comes back on June 23 and closed-circuit television boxing will be shown on June 27 featuring Cassius Clay — ahem, beg pardon — Muhammad Ali and Jerry Quarry.

UNVEILING: In the June 23 ring show, Mr. Imondi will unveil his latest protege before a Providence audience when he presents John Dennis in one of a half dozen bouts. Young Mr. Dennis will be making his professional debut and he should make a popular impression with boxing fans. Adonis-like and lightning-fast, Dennis seems to have what it takes for scaling fistic heights. He could achieve the popularity of a "matinee-idol," a status that assured success when "matinee-idols" were taking their bows. In fact, the entire card appears star-studded; as star-studded as a boxing show can be these days. Tommy Dragon will see action while being urged on by his manager, Charlie Lagor, who will be wearing his derby hat and holding his characteristic seegar between his teeth. Paul Carodoza, a crowd-pleaser from New Bedford is listed for action and so is Jerry Houston, Jr., with others, of course, (as Jim Norman says) also donning the padded mittens. Joe Celletti, ardent advocate of the game and a R.I. State Boxing Official, is enthused over the show, he being one of the hard workers in the interest of keeping the game alive. "I hope it's a big success," Joe said in his excitement about boxing coming back to R.I. Auditorium. "Maybe Barry O'Neil will get a chance to defend his New England Heavyweight Title. Where could he have defended it? There haven't been any shows." In between boxing talk, Mr. Celletti mentioned a bachelor dinner for Arthur Butler that is planned for El Morocco on July 18.

THE BIGGEST: At one time Manny Almeida's Downtown A.C., that promoted boxing at R.I. Auditorium, was the most successful in the land. Yes, it was bigger than Madison Square Garden one year and that should attest to the record that indicates that Almeida was the greatest boxing promoter in the history of Rhode Island. And just to get the tongues wagging, which boxing show drew the biggest crowd at R.I. Auditorium? Was it Young Montreal and Bushy Graham? Or Zannelli and Gavilan? And what about George Araujo's bouts? And Joey Angelo? And how about the time Eddie Holmes was the big attraction and the place was so jam-packed that he had a difficult time getting in to appear in the main event?

ONE OF THE GREATEST: With gossip and comment going on about baseball's Hall of Fame and dyed-in-the-wool fans perusing the piles of records, the question arose, "Who was the first pilot who managed Babe Ruth in the major leagues? The answer, "Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox." A whole lot of water has gone over the dam since William "Rough" Carrigan was a dominant figure in baseball; since he managed and played as an outstanding catcher for the Red Sox. Carrigan led a group of stars of the first magnitude but not prima donnas. In addition to the embryonic Babe, he directed the famed Speaker-Hooper-Lewis outfield and a pitching corps that included Ernie Shore, George Foster, Dutch Leonard, Carl Mays and the great "Smokey Joe" Wood. And so, disturbing the dust and sweeping away the cobwebs through the mists of the dim, distant past, it surely seems that Bill Carrigan is deserving of being a "Hall of Famer" . . . CARRY ON!

The Neighborhood School

The neighborhood school is sacrosanct. It is as precious as the crown jewels. But now its sacrosanctity is continuously challenged. Sooner or later the neighborhood school will be as heterogeneous as Ellis Island in 1880. Perhaps the reason for this is because the neighborhood polling place is not at all sacrosanct.

The various state legislatures must reapportion voting precincts and districts every 10 years when the results of the census are in. One of the interesting phenomena has been to watch the flow of population from New York to California. New York has grudgingly though promptly surrendered seats in the House of Representatives to the plastic, growing west.

It is another kettle of fish within the state. Where a neighborhood or suburban school district demands integrity for its schools, it can hardly muster a whisper about the same geographical integrity for its state senators and representatives.

The Republican legislature in New York took Congresswoman Bella Abzug's Manhattan constituency and told them henceforth to vote in Queens. In Connecticut, the gerrymandering legislature told the constituency in one town henceforth they would vote in 14 different towns near them. In Michigan, Idaho, everywhere, gerrymandering the districts to distribute the vote equitably is no longer an extreme but a matter of canny expertise.

If the legislature is Republican, it zaps Democratic districts out of existence. If it is Democratic, it obliterates Republican districts.

The amazing thing is that the folks live with it. Talking about gerrymanders bores everyone except perhaps federal judges. In North Carolina, peanut farmers near the Atlantic Ocean must make their needs known to a representative from the tobacco industry by the Alleghenies.

But bus a peanut farmer's kid five miles to a school populated by the kids of one-mule sharecropper's kid and the resulting outcry brings the President of the United States to the public forum to promise relief from such imposition, from such distortion of natural geographic boundaries.

In the busing controversy, the folks insist on the priority of individual rights over group rights. In politics, the legislators insist on the priority of group rights — Republican or Democrat — over individual rights.

If we are to have neighborhood schools then I insist I want to go to that school and vote in a neighborhood booth.

Let me pontificate. If the constituency surrenders one claim to its neighborhood integrity, sooner or later, and sooner rather than later, it will surrender the other.

Pincus Says Future Of Aliyah Depends On Proper Absorption

TEL AVIV — Government and Jewish Agency leaders are trying to counter a rising tide of sentiment against immigration which holds that newcomers benefit at the expense of the settled population and the poor.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir, addressing the convention of the Israeli Rotarian Club, cited the record growth of Israel's gross national product and observed that "were it not for aliya these achievements would have been impossible."

Sapir acknowledged Israel's severe social problems and warned that unless they are solved "the whole future of the State is in doubt." But he predicted that it would take a generation to close all the social and economic gaps between Western and Oriental Israelis.

Absorption Minister Natan Peled and Louis A. Pincus, chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive, addressed a meeting of the Labor Party Secretariate and both urged concerted campaigns of education and information to remove the feelings of hostility toward new immigrants.

Pincus said the future of aliya depended on proper absorption and said that many new arrivals felt "out in the cold."

Doctor Acquitted In Mass Murders

FRANKFURT, West Germany — A court here acquitted a former doctor of a charge of helping in the killing of thousands of the mentally ill during the Hitler era. It said his contention that he acted from humane considerations had not been disproved.

Dr. Kurt Born, 62 years old, said he believed he was helping to solve the problem of incurable insanity and that he did not commit murder for "sheer considerations of utility."

He was ordered to take charge of the "killing service" at the National Socialist Institute of Euthanasia at Sonnenstein, Saxony, in 1940.

In a judgment at the end of the five-month trial, Judge Gerhard Schank pointed out that many renowned German psychiatrists and jurists had backed the mercy-killing of so-called "exit cases." The prosecutor had asked for a six-year sentence.

New York Jewish Daily Forward Celebrates 25th Anniversary

NEW YORK — In 1938, shortly after the Nazis unleashed their first major assault against Jews in Germany, several sinister-looking men, appeared at the Jewish Daily Forward and demanded a private meeting with Abraham Cahan, its editor and co-founder.

Against the advice of his chief associates, Mr. Cahan called them into his little office and locked the door.

The visitors were big-time Jewish gangsters. They were prepared, they said, to arrange the assassination of Hitler.

They assured Mr. Cahan they had the money and the technicians. All they wanted from him was his moral support, which in effect meant, to them, the secret blessing of the newspaper they regarded as the conscience of the Jewish people in the United States.

Mr. Cahan dissuaded them, arguing that such an act could bring untold pogroms against German Jews and that Hitler would be replaced by someone equally vicious. Besides, Mr. Cahan, as a Socialist, was against government by murder.

This was one of the stories exhumed from the huge memory closet of the world's leading Yiddish-language newspaper as it prepared to celebrate its 75th anniversary Sunday at Philharmonic Hall with a concert, speeches and an award to George Meany, head of the A.F.L.-C.I.O.

The paper is printing a four-section anniversary edition of 92 pages. One section will be in English and the others in Yiddish, a language that is largely medieval German in origin, using the Hebrew alphabet.

To Simon Weber, present editor of The Forward — among Jews it is called Forvetz — the story was indicative of the enormous influence of the paper among Jews.

Part of the strength of the Forward was its role in shaping the labor movement of the country.

Anti-Communism has long been a major part of this avowedly Socialist newspaper, and it claims world Jews beats in exposing Stalin's anti-Semitism and political mass murders.

"Socialism without democracy," said Mr. Weber, from Mr. Cahan and the gangsters, the office once occupied by "is not worth a damn. That's what you have in Russia. The Communists here consider us their biggest enemy. And they are right."

Equally important to the Forward is the cultural life of what it calls "the Jewish community," meaning Jews all over the world, not just in the Lower East Side, where it was founded to help guide swarms of Jewish immigrants up from the slums.

From its 10-story white-granite Sanhedrin, at 175 East Broadway, the Forward keeps close track on the enormous output of Jewish writers and composers and what is left of the once-thriving Yiddish theater. Its own great writers have included Sholem Asch, L. J. Singer and his brother, Isaac Bashevis Singer, who writes regularly for the Forward under the name of Isaac Bashevis.

Those who write for the Forward — as well as those who read it — feel a special attachment to the paper. Isaac Bashevis Singer's new novel, "Enemies, a Love Story," which will come out next month in English, ran serially in Yiddish in the Forward, and he was paid a tiny fraction of what he will get from the book.

"Who needs to be rich," Mr. Singer said. "When I write for the Forward I am writing in my language and for my special readers. A reader of the Forward reads everything in the paper. God forbid I should make a mistake. I will get 20,000 letters."

A mistake when Mr. Singer first began writing for the Forward in 1935 — "I am a newcomer, an intruder," he said — would have brought twice as many letters. And in 1924, when the paper's circulation was at a peak of about 220,000, he would have been besieged in his apartment.

These days, when the circulation hovers between 65,000 and 70,000, of which about 20,000 are sold outside the city, it has a staff of about 25, plus another dozen who write pieces once or twice a week. It has correspondents in Britain, Israel, France and Germany and stringers in Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Paraguay.

The survival of the Forward — it is the only Yiddish daily left in the nation — is the result of its journalistic and economic innovations.

From the beginning, Mr. Cahan insisted that the paper abandon the podium adopted by so many intellectuals who started Yiddish newspapers. He demanded simple writing and concern for subjects in which the mass of readers were involved. He was contemptuous of ideologues who lectured readers. Twice in the early years of the paper he quit over this issue.

From this folksy approach to journalism came one of the paper's most famous features, Bintel Brief (bundle of letters) — letters from readers on an enormous variety of subjects. A selection of these letters have been translated into English and were recently published as a book called "A Bintel Brief."

Since its start the paper has been nonprofit. The money it made in its many prosperous years was invested and now helps pay its costs. To retain its fiscal health, the paper recently went to the offset form of printing. Its board of directors is chosen by secret ballot by an association of leaders in Jewish affairs.

"One thing I can guarantee," Mr. Weber said. "This paper will never go bankrupt. If the day should come — God forbid — when we have to close, we will have enough for pensions and for severance pay."

Asked if Mr. Cahan had ever regretted aborting the assassination attempt on Hitler, he replied:

"He never mentioned it again."

'Jew Can Be Jewish Anywhere,' Says Elie Wiesel To AJCommittee

NEW YORK — Elie Wiesel, speaking at the 66th annual dinner of the American Jewish Committee declared "He who says a Jew in Israel is better than a Jew in Russia or America or Iraq does nothing but divide our people, and harms it more than some of our enemies." He rejected the idea that Jewish leaders from other countries ought to immigrate to Israel and said "A Jew can be Jewish everywhere, not only in Israel, providing he claims kinship with the totality of his people's experience." Wiesel was presented with the Committee's highest award, the American Liberties Medallion.

Bertram M. Gold, executive vice president, told a Committee's opening luncheon session that an erosion of confidence in American Jewish institutions has been taking place for the past five years. He said "The Jewish community has also experienced a crisis of confidence, a serious questioning of established Jewish organizations, their selection of priorities, their openness to change, their very right to lead." Touching on the emergence of difference between Israel and Jewish communities in other parts of the world, Gold called for the emergence of "voluntary Israeli organizations to which the voluntary organized Jewish communities of the world can relate, instead of addressing themselves, as they now do, primarily to Israeli government spokesmen."

At another session of the annual meeting, Howard J. Samuels, president of the city's Off Track Betting Corporation, reported on the Committee's newly launched program to secure "previously unavailable" bank loans for Hasidic businessmen.

line, believe, and repeatedly affirm, that the weight of world public opinion in their favor has been of incalculable value in their struggle for freedom as Jews. We do not think of ourselves for a minute as "the saviors of Russian Jewry," as Mr. Segal so snidely labels us. But if the Russian Jews themselves (and vast numbers of American Jews and Israelis whose knowledge and expertise I respect and whose opinions I greatly value) feel that we, as fellow Jews, are helping them in some small way — DAYENU!!!!

The following is quoted from an Associated Press news item datelined Moscow, June 7, 1972: "SOVIET JOURNALIST FIRED: A leading Soviet journalist, Victor Perelman, has been fired from his job with the prestigious Literary Gazette and expelled from both the Communist Party and the Soviet journalists union for making application to emigrate to Israel . . . Perelman was ousted from his job as special correspondent and department head six hours after turning in his emigration application . . . Since then, Perelman has become the subject of secret police harassment and rumors . . . Last Monday, Perelman was informed that his request to emigrate had been refused."

If Journalist SEGAL were being persecuted in Moscow for wanting to be a Jew and Journalist PERELMAN were safely ensconced in Providence, trying to influence Jewish opinion in the direction of narrowminded indifference to the struggle of Soviet Jewry, calling support for this struggle "a hysteria" the perhaps Mr. Segal's own words might well make him weep.

Discusses 'Yiddish As A Mother Tongue'

I like to take up the discussion with friend Beryl Segal "Yiddish As A Mother Tongue," published in the May 26th issue of the Jewish Herald. It is indeed a very painful and unhappy problem to discuss.

However, there is always a silver lining behind the dark clouds. While our Jewish people have Americanized fast and now are able to read and enjoy reading the English press, they are at the same time also reading the Jewish Daily Forward. Friend Segal, of course, reads and appreciates this great paper, no doubt.

Many American papers, of old and large circulations, have merged or liquidated, on account of high cost of publication nowadays. The Jewish Daily Forward, now celebrating its 75th anniversary, has fortunately still a large circulation. The Forward, since it has remained the only Jewish daily, has doubled its staff, and is very interesting.

We should not lose sight of the number of weekly and monthly papers and magazines still in circulation. There seems to be, still, a demand, and Mr. Beryl Segal might be right when he states that there is a great Jewish intelligentsia, intellectuals who enjoy and love the Jewish word and its literature.

There is in fact a great renaissance and it is developing in surprising proportions. Every week, almost, there are new books in Yiddish, published in this country, and in Israel. Recently there opened a great Yiddish library in Israel. You, no doubt, read about how Premier Golda Meir addressed a large gathering there in Yiddish and was enthusiastically applauded.

If you want to convince yourself that Yiddish, or as it has been called, Mama Lushon, is still alive, you just take a trip to Miami, and listen to our Jewish people by the thousands, speak a genuine good Yiddish on the street, at their meetings, and sing many Yiddish songs, that would give pleasure to anyone listening.

It might even give you a thrill to know that the University of Miami has a class of several hundred students who have a special curriculum: Jewish. Recently at California State College several hundred students requested Yiddish instruction in history and literature. So have many colleges throughout the country which now have special classes in Yiddish studies. We might expect in the near future that a new stream of highly educated students in Yiddish history, literature and drama will love to fill the long desired gap and become the teachers and instructors in the modern, higher, now cultivated Yiddish.

Yiddish has become more broadened out and has become a more classic language, since there have grown up so many new Jewish writers who have learned the art and culture of the world and carry it over with love into Jewish. You no doubt know of the newest Yiddish dictionary which will soon be in circulation, that will consist of several large volumes. That shows you progress enough to brighten up our atmosphere, not to see gloom and despair but a great ray of hope.

I might add that there are several Yiddish and Hebrew classes here in the Ida Fisher Public School for adult education. There is also The Yiddish Literary and Dramatic Circle under the leadership of S.S. Rosen, planning so to have known, great lecturers at the Miami them, stock your home freezer regularly with the meats you buy on the sales. A casual check I made in my own neighborhood a few days ago disclosed a difference of 32 per cent between the specials and regular prices! That's typical and can translate easily into hundreds of dollars over a year.

Your Money's Worth

Shift your family to less expensive cuts by cooking them in interesting ways. Experiment, with the help of a gourmet cookbook, the less expensive "variety" meats. And study with care canned meats of which every ounce is edible with no waste.

Buy according to the best possible meat values. The true value of any meat you buy is the actual true cost of a given portion of the final cooked serving. Buy in terms of meals; if you have leftovers that are not enough for another round, you are wasting money. Use all the meat you buy; melt down fat trimmings, etc.

Try buying at local discount stores where you can frequently achieve significant savings over supermarkets.

Learn the U.S. Agriculture Department grades of beef and use them to compare price and quality and also as a guide to the best meat for a particular type of meal. For instance, using anything above "U.S. Good" (third in rank) in chopped or stew meat is a waste of money because it doesn't matter how tender the meat is in these.

Check less expensive "bulk" packages of meats. Consider bacon a condiment in view of its high per serving cost and serve it sparingly. And vow not to overload your family with meat.

It cannot be repeated too often or overemphasized; by obeying the basic rules, you can not only offset inflation in food and meat prices, you can also beat it.

Survivor In Israel Reported Calm In Jail

TFL AVIV — Kozo Okamoto, the only survivor of the three Japanese extremists who carried out the Tel Aviv airport massacre, was reported by a Japanese diplomat to be completely calm in prison, asking only to be killed or to be allowed to commit suicide.

The 24-year-old Okamoto is being held in the maximum security cell that housed Adolf Eichmann, the Nazi war criminal who was hanged here 10 years ago.

Jun Matsuji, a Japanese Embassy counselor who has seen Okamoto in prison at least twice, said the young revolutionary had been deprived even of the use of a knife and fork to thwart any suicide attempt.

Israeli police and secret service officials have completed their investigation of the airport shooting, in which 24 persons were killed by the three Japanese and about 70 were wounded, and have forwarded them to the Attorney General's office. Okamoto is expected to appear soon before a military court.

TOP 5,000,000

The Buchenwald Memorial Committee in West Germany has announced that more than five million persons have visited the site of that Nazi concentration camp since its memorial stone was erected in 1958. Last year, there were 387,000 visitors.

Beach Auditorium.

I might conclude that I see happier days ahead. What we need now are well-trained men and women educated in the arts of Yiddish life and culture, those who will love their work of rebuilding the Yiddish that was known to their parents, and better. Then our youth will return to our fold with pride and enthusiasm.

Deriving roughly 95% of earnings from beer sales, Anheuser-Busch is the largest brewer in the industry. Sales and earnings have shown rapid growth over a number of years, bolstered by large and efficient breweries plus extensive use of TV and other national advertising media. This coupled with increases in disposable income, expansion of leisure time and a rising young adult population, should continue to shore up Anheuser's profitability throughout the '70s.

High Yield Bond Speculative

Q: I am retired and have a few thousand to invest. I am interested in Ampex 5-1/2s of 1994 which are currently selling around 50. What is your opinion of this choice? A.L.

A: Not much. Late in April, Ampex Corporation announced that a working agreement with its financial institutions had been arranged. According to the statement the company's credit position had been extended to June 30, 1972. The release did not clarify whether long or short term debt was the subject of the negotiation — at the end of the fiscal 1971 period, Ampex had $195 million in long-term debt, including $60 million of the convertible debenture which interests you.

In fiscal 1971 a deficit of $1.10 a share was reported; company estimates a deficit for the year ended April 30 of $8.25 a share. On the 1971 figure, interest coverage was in a deficit position of 40.23x. A lower return bond would be more secure.

Q: I own 50 shares of Canadian Javelin but have not seen it listed on the American Exchange for more than three months. Can you give me any information? K.M.

A: Trading in these shares was suspended on March 7 by the SEC and A.S.E. and the ban was extended on May 16. Although trading has been suspended also by the Montreal exchange, shares are trading on the Vancouver Exchange at about 6-1/2. The suspension resulted from the ambiguous situation concerning a linerboard mill being built by Canadian Javelin. The Conservative government has recently purchased the mill for $5 million. Half the price has been paid with the balance due in six months. Any amounts which were not spent by Canadian Javelin directly on the mill may be deducted from the second payment. As a shareholder you should have received a statement from the company clarifying these latest developments.

Traditions Die Hard

BankAmerica Corporation, one of the biggest bank holding companies, is listed on neither the New York or American Exchanges. What is the reason for this? J.G.

A: The answer to your question is bound up with history and the traditions of the banking industry. Prior to the legislative acts of the 1930s, which sought to regulate and control the securities industry, banks and other financial institutions preferred to reveal as little as possible to the public concerning their operations. By maintaining privacy, banks could present publicly an image of solidarity and strength. This was largely changed by the various investment acts passed in the 1930s which required publicly-held companies to disclose annually, operating and financial statistics to their shareholders. But tradition dies hard and most companies chose to remain in the unlisted sector of the market which did not impose any additional disclosure rules. In 1964, when the Securities Acts were amended, any publicly-owned company large enough to qualify for listing was required to report as much information, as often and as promptly as a listed corporation. This effectively eliminated any advantage, from a disclosure standpoint, of remaining unlisted.

Nonetheless banks, by and large, made no mass exodus from their familiar investment habitat for the next several years. From 1967 forward, when banks were permitted to form holding companies, the number of banks seeking New York Stock Exchange listing began to mount. Today there are upwards of 40 banks trading on the Big Board. However, BankAmerica, the world's largest bank holding company, has not, as of this date, chosen to move from the over-the-counter market. The decision is theirs, since the company more than meets the requirements of both major exchanges. NASDAQ, the automated OTC quotation system, is apparently satisfactory to management. To date Bank America has not made any statements or gestures which would suggest that they intend to change. Incidentally, their annual report is one of the most readable and informative statements I have seen this year.

Assn. Hopes To Avert Strike

GENEVA — The International Air Transport Association, to which 107 airlines belong, said it hoped that the threatened strike by pilots over the issue of hijackings would not take place.

A spokesman for the association said at a news conference that the airline trade organization "fully understands and shares the concern" of the pilots, but it did not believe that a strike was the best way of meeting the hijacking problem.

Jewish Braille Institute Plants Garden for Blind

NEW YORK — A garden of plants to be touched and smelled was dedicated yesterday for blind people in a courtyard of the Jewish Braille Institute at 110 East 30th Street. In the yard, which is overhung with trees and overshadowed by a large factory building, 70 varieties of plants and shrubs have been arranged in a waist-high planter. There is a handrail on the planter that the blind can use to guide them from one exhibit to another. Before each plant is an identifying sign in Braille. Some of the plants, such as rosemary, rose geraniums and chives, were chosen for their fragrances; others, such as hen and chickens, snake plant and lamb's ear, for their textures. The plants were selected by Dr. Jacob Fried, director of the institute, which provides educational and cultural material for the blind. The garden was built with $50,000 donated by Harry Waxman, a Brooklyn builder.

Much of the pocket change that passes through your hands daily is worth considerably more than you ever get for it. Anything with silver content (nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars dated before 1965) is worth at least 10% over its face value. You can exchange it at this premium at most any coin shop. In fact, the New England Coin Shop at 1487 Broad Street, Cranston, is paying a 12% premium (as of last Friday).

Anyone who wishes to retire early (on reduced social security benefits) can go to Canada to live and after 10 years there qualify for Canada's old age pension ($150 monthly for couples). Meanwhile you'd go right on getting your social security benefits from Uncle Sam.

You only need to spend a minimum of 183 days a year in Canada to collect this old age pension. Ideally you could take advantage of their cool climate in your warm months and spend your winters in Florida or your home state. Moreover you would still retain your U.S. citizenship.
