NEW YORK — The resignation of Rabbi Bernard Mandelbaum as president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America was accepted this week "with regret" by the institution's board of directors.

At the same time, the board announced that Dr. Gerson D. Cohn had been elected chancellor and president of the seminary's faculties.

On July 1, when Dr. Louis Finkelstein becomes chancellor emeritus, Dr. Cohen will succeed him as the chief executive officer, it was announced after the board meeting by Chief Judge Stanley H. Fuld of the State Court of Appeals, the chairman.

Russian Patriarch Visits Jerusalem

TEL AVIV — The head of the Russian Orthodox Church, Patriarch Pimen, arrived in Jerusalem last week for an eight day pilgrimage. It was the first visit by a Russian churchman since the Soviet Union broke diplomatic relations with Israel during the six-day war of 1967.

At Lydda Airport the Patriarch read a statement expressing his joy at the prospect of visiting the holy places and the Greek Orthodox Patriarch of Jerusalem as well as the Russian Orthodox mission.

Israelis believe his pilgrimage has political significance.

As seen here, the Kremlin now feels it hurt its position in the Middle East by severing relations with one party to the regional conflict and is seeking to restore contact with Israel on an informal level. Responsible Israelis have said there would be a response to Soviet feelers if they came through proper channels.

Brojde Reported Weak After 171 Hour Fast

COPENHAGEN — Michael Brojde, a son of World War II master spy Leopold Trepper, was taken to a hospital after fasting 171 hours to protest the Polish government's refusal to give his parents exit visas to Israel.

Doctors said he was very weak and he was reported to have suffered a lapse of memory. Trepper, who headed the Soviet "Red Orchestra" espionage network in Western Europe during World War II, said in a telephone conversation from Warsaw that he wanted his son to end his hunger strike.

He said he had received indications he would soon be permitted to go to Israel. When informed of his father's wishes, Brojde said he would end his fast only on orders from doctors or from Denmark's Chief Rabbi Bent Melchior. He was taken to a hospital in an ambulance on doctor's orders.

Asks Greater Powers For West Bank Mayors

JERUSALEM — Shelkh Mohammed Ali Jaabari, the Mayor of Hebron, has asked Israeli authorities to grant greater powers to the newly elected mayors on the West Bank. But his plea is expected to go unheeded. Jaabari was re-elected without opposition in the municipal elections in the Judean district May 8.

In making the presentation, Gen. Vardi pointedly ignored Jaabari's request that Israel permit the newly elected mayors to hold a congress to discuss problems facing their constituents on the West Bank including the area's future.

Dr. Cohen and Dr. Mandelbaum were named as a team to succeed the 76-year-old Dr. Finkelstein late last year after Dr. Finkelstein said he was resigning.

Rabbi Mandelbaum, who submitted a letter of resignation to the board earlier this month, said his reasons were "both administrative and personal."

In a telephone interview he said there had been "some change of opinion as to the areas of responsibility I was to maintain." He said the extent of such responsibilities had become "very unclear."

"I decided rather than become involved in a continued argument it would be best if I tendered my resignation," he said.

Dr. Cohen refused to discuss what differences might have existed, but said he knew Dr. Mandelbaum for more than 30 years and had told the board that he considered him "my oldest and dearest friend."

Dr. Mandelbaum said that he had taken a year's sabbatical and that his resignation would take effect June 30, 1973. The board adopted a resolution thanking him for his service to the seminary and designating him as emeritus.

The 85-year-old institution, at 122d Street and Broadway, has 1,300 students and trains them for the Conservative rabbinate.

Dr. Cohen, who is also a rabbi, was born in the Bronx on August 26, 1924. He is a graduate of City College and of the seminary, and got his doctorate in Semitic languages from Columbia.

Social Studies Teacher Receives $25,000 In Damages And Fees

NEW YORK, NY — A Texas social studies teacher, who had been discharged for teaching about race relations and prejudice, has been awarded a total of $25,000 in damages and fees by the United States District Court in Houston.

The teacher, Henry Keith Sterzing, was fired by the Fort Bend School District board of trustees after a parent complained about his teaching a six-day unit on race and prejudice to students at the John Foster Dulles High School in Sugarland, Texas. Among the teaching resources used by Mr. Sterzing were human relations films and other materials prepared by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Judge Carl O. Bue, Jr., found that Mr. Sterzing had been wrongfully dismissed without cause or opportunity to defend himself, and ordered the payment of $20,000 in damages and $5,000 in attorney fees. The court heard expert testimony by Theodore Freedman, ADL's Southern director, on the educational quality and merits of the League's materials.

The controversy started in 1968 when Mr. Sterzing, who had built his teaching unit around ADL and other materials obtained through approved school district channels, was discharged by the school board. A request for a hearing resulted in the trustees reaffirming their earlier action, and Mr. Sterzing appealed to the Texas Commissioner of Education. While finding no justifiable cause for the board's action in firing Mr. Sterzing, the commissioner declined to order reinstatement on the grounds that he had no such power.

Mr. Sterzing, who produced evidence of being an exceptionally qualified and effective teacher, was unable to find another teaching post, although he applied to many other Texas school

Tighter Security Check Needed

Israel Asks For Boycott Of Beirut By Airlines

JERUSALEM — Israeli leaders called this week for a boycott of Beirut by international airlines, charging that terrorist attacks on air travelers such as the shooting at the Tel Aviv airport are planned by Arab guerrillas on Lebanese soil.

In a strongly worded address before Parliament, Premier Golda Meir condemned Arabs for "rejoicing" over the airport attack, in which 25 persons were killed and 76 wounded by three Japanese gunmen reportedly acting on behalf of Arab guerrillas. The dead included 12 Puerto Ricans on a Christian pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

Mrs. Meir denounced the guerrillas for recruiting the gunmen, who arrived at the airport on an Air France flight they had boarded at Rome, and she accused the airline and foreign governments of having failed to put into effect security precautions that had long been advocated.

The members of Israel's Parliament stood in solemn respect for the victims of the attack. Of the 25 dead, five remained unidentified. The Government listed eight Israelis among the dead, including Dr. Aharon Katzir-Katchalsky, a leading scientist.

In her address, Mrs. Meir specifically absolved the Japanese Government and people of any guilt in the shootings, which came just three weeks after Palestinian guerrillas hijacked a Belgian Sabena jetliner to the Tel Aviv airport. (In Beirut, a Marxist guerrilla group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, claimed full responsibility for the shootings, said they were carried out to avenge the deaths of two Arab hijackers killed by Israeli troops May 9 in Tel Aviv and warned against reprisals.) "It is no secret," Mrs. Meir declared, "that Beirut is openly enabling the centers of the terrorist organizations to reside in its midst. There they plot, from there instructors set out to various countries and from there come the broadcasts of their great successes. Can it be possible that governments, that aviation companies, should acquiesce in this?" "Is it at all conceivable," she asked, "that a state which harbors and abets the plotting of such crimes, where the terrorist are free to plot, to set out, to hit and return safely with impunity, that on the soil of such a country foreign planes will continue to land?"

After an emergency cabinet meeting this morning, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said of the proposal for an active boycott of Beirut:

"What would Beirut be without its air traffic? The international community has specific pressure to bear within the specific aviation context — so why are not those pressures brought to bear?"

Meanwhile, an Egyptian commentator, speaking over the Cairo radio, said: "The heroes proved they can penetrate the conquered territories to avenge the blood of others. Now Israel has no alternative but to close down Lydda Airport and to prevent tourist visits if she wishes to protect her borders."

To this kind of statement Mrs. Meir replied: "As soon as the news broke joy broke out in Cairo and in Beirut as well over the great victory. Those who were unable to stand up against us in the battlefield are great heroes at hiding explosives in planes, at assaults on planes and passengers."

"This indeed takes great courage," she said with sarcasm. "And if the courage is lacking, the terrorists recruit foreigners for the purpose."

"I cannot understand why the foreign airlines are so indifferent to the problem," said Deputy Premier Yigal Allon. "Today there are electronic methods that could easily have detected the arms hidden in the luggage."

Mrs. Meir drew a sharp contrast between the precautions taken by Israel's national carrier, El Al, and the foreign airlines.

"We in Israel shall do all we possibly can to safeguard our planes — and, indeed, they are secure," she said. "We have taken all the necessary steps to make sure that everybody coming to Israel or leaving Israel in our planes can fly in safety."

"But I have not the slightest doubt that unless other governments and airlines will cooperate and consider this as their concern — and not merely for our sake — the scourge will remain to plague all."

"Only a short while ago, we had the Sabena affair, in which security checks somewhere failed to be carried out," she added. Now, the same thing happened. What occurred could have easily been avoided if the airline concerned had paid proper attention and carried out a check. I am aware that for El Al passengers, this is a nuisance and a loss of time, but against this, they are secure."

Air France Informed Of Airport Attack

PARIS — Employees at Air France's Paris headquarters said that their Tel Aviv airport office had informed them of the attack but were unable to confirm that the attackers had come off an Air France plane.

"Our station called us to say that such an attack had taken place but they apparently didn't know the attackers had come from one of our aircraft," an employee said. "If the attack took place in an airport hall and not near the plane, they would have no way of knowing right away where the men came from."

He confirmed, however, that an Air France plane had arrived at Tel Aviv shortly before the attack.

"Our only flight to Israel today was 132, which left Paris at 3:32 P.M. and stopped over in Rome," the employee said. "It was due to arrive at 8:55 P.M., which makes it just before the attack."

Popular Front Claims Credit For Massacre

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said that it was responsible for the attack in Tel Aviv.

"The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine announces its complete responsibility for the brave operation launched by one of its special groups in our occupied land," a statement issued by the organization said.

The guerrilla group said the operation had been carried out by three guerrillas, whom it identified as Bassem, Salah and Ahmed. They belong to a group called the "Squad of the Martyr Patrick Uguello," the statement said.

"Those three heroes came thousands of miles to take part with the Palestinian people in their struggle against the forces of Zionism and imperialism," the statement said.

The statement said the raid had been made to coincide with the fifth anniversary of the war of June, 1967, between the Arabs and Israel.

The raid also was in reprisal for the killing by Israeli troops of two Arab guerrillas who hijacked a Sabena airliner to Tel Aviv earlier this month, the statement said. The Israeli action had been directed by Israel's Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

"The raid was a revolutionary answer to the Israeli massacre performed in cold blood by the butcher Moshe Dayan and his devils against the martyr heroes Ali Taha and Abdel Aziz Elatrash," the statement said.

It added: "This revolutionary answer was a tribute to the blood of two heroes who fell as a result of a cheap trick," the statement said. "It was also to assure the occupiers that Palestinian revolutionary action can only beget more revolutionary action."

"Let no one be deluded here by pious references to halacha," Rabbi Schindler said. "Halacha is not at stake here but a franchise, the extension of monopoly, political power." ## Gold Cites Erosion Of Confidence In American Jewish Institutions

NEW YORK — An erosion of confidence in American Jewish institutions, paralleling that visible in American society at large, has been taking place for the past five years. This view was presented by Bertram H. Gold, executive vice-president of the American Jewish Committee, at the opening luncheon session of the organization's 68th annual meeting.

"The Jewish community has also experienced a crisis of confidence, a serious questioning of established Jewish organizations, their selection of priorities, their openness to change, their very right to lead," he said. "New anti-establishment groups have sprung up, some activist, some of a more purely intellectual bent, all claiming to speak for the Jewish interest."

Just as a populist movement has arisen in the general society that offers "quick, simplistic solutions" to the nation's problems, Gold pointed to a parallel mood within the Jewish community, citing as illustrations the rise of Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the Jewish Defense League, and "the widening gulf between the leaders and the led."

The differences in American Jewish life show themselves, Gold explained, in a growing rift between rich, upper-class heterodox and poor, middle and lower class Orthodox; and between inner-city urban Jews and suburban Jews. Much of this dissent from Jewish consensus, he adds, comes from what an AJ Committee task force on "The Future of the Jewish Community" has identified as "the neglected Jewish constituency": the poor, the trapped population in the inner city, and the non-affiliated Jews. Gold paid tribute to the enthusiastic manner in which Federation and their affiliated agencies, in cities across the country, had been responding to these newly identified concerns.

In his address, seeking to answer, "Who Speaks for the Jews," Gold also urged creation of "voluntary Israeli organizations" as a way of creating new kinds of dialogues to address themselves to differences between Israel and Jewish communities in the U. S. and elsewhere in the world. "Differences between Israel and Jewish communities in other parts of the world are inevitable," he said. "They can be lessened, not by discouraging dissent but by encouraging an airing of differences; not by unilateral action but by authentic consultation; not by denying the independence and creative future of Diaspora Jewry, but by affirming it."

In that context, he added: "What is desperately needed is the emergence of voluntary Israeli organizations to which the voluntary organized Jewish communities of the world can relate, instead of addressing themselves, as they do now, primarily to Israeli government spokesmen. Gold launched his discussion of Israel-Diaspora relations with what he called "four assumptions on which, I believe, there will be little disagreement".

"Israel plays a vital symbolic role in Jewish conscious and unconscious self-perception, and is today a basic component of identity formation for Jews everywhere in the world." "There is an interdependence between Israel and other Jewish communities, and the behavior and actions of a particular community may have a direct bearing upon what happens to Israel, and vice versa." Israeli decision-makers view Israel as a defender and representative of Jews who are in trouble anywhere in the world . . ." and "The majority of American Jews affirm the viability of Jewish life in the Diaspora."

They reject the classical Zionist ideology that predicts a continuous and irreversible erosion for Jewish life outside of Israel . . .

Gold noted that some strains between Israel and Diaspora Jewry have arisen, particularly in the five years since the end of the Six-Day War in the Middle East. He singled out several areas of tension: containment of criticism of Israeli policies and practices, which, he says, is "galling to many idealistic, committed young Jews"; the growing tendency on the part of young Israelis to look upon American Jewry as "a service community" whose function is to support the State of Israel; and differing perspectives on issues affecting Jews in other countries.

Former Concentration Camp Guard Calls Denials Of Past 'Truthful'

NEW YORK — A Queens housewife who faced possible deportation for failing to tell immigration authorities she had been convicted of torturing Nazi concentration camp prisoners said that at the time she considered her denials of her past "a truthful answer."

The 53-year-old woman, the former Hermine Braunsteiner, said at an Immigration and Naturalization Service inquiry that whenever the question of an arrest came up in United States citizenship procedures "I said no."

The reason, said the woman, now Mrs. Russell Ryan, was that following her release from an Austrian prison in May, 1950, a Vienna court advised her that she never had to report her arrest to anyone.

Mrs. Ryan lost her American citizenship last September. The Government had accused her of concealing the fact that she had been convicted by an Austrian court in 1949 of torturing and mistreating camp inmates while she was a guard-supervisor during World War II. Mrs. Ryan consented to the revocation without saying whether the Justice Department's allegations were true. The deportation proceedings followed.

She entered this country on April 14, 1959, as the wife of an American construction worker. Mrs. Ryan had met her husband while he was working on a project in Germany. She became a citizen on January 15, 1963. The Government began an investigation the following year after she was identified by Simon Wiesenthal, a private investigator of Nazi war crimes.

The Justice Department complaint said that in 1939, at the age of 20, Hermine Braunsteiner became a guard-supervisor at the Ravensbruck concentration camp in Germany. In 1942, she was transferred to a death camp at Maidanek, Poland. She returned to Ravensbruck two years later. The camp was liberated by Allied troops in May, 1945. Mrs. Ryan, who lives with her husband at 52-11 72d Street, Maspeth, answered "no" when asked yesterday by Vincent A. Schiano, the chief trial attorney, whether she had ever done anything she was ashamed of while employed at the prison camps. She acknowledged occasionally hitting prisoners, but "only with an open hand." She had said that she was not aware of what was happening to prisoners in Ravensbruck, but conceded that at Maidanek, she knew it was an "extermination camp." She said that she was "shocked and appalled," but that "it was not in my power to do anything — I was too little." The hearing is to continue at Immigration and Naturalization Service offices at 20 West Broadway at 8:45 a.m. Monday.

The bride was gowned in traditional peau de sole fashioned with a high neck and long sleeves. The bodice and sleeves were trimmed with white lace, crystal and seed pearls. The bride wore a full train and mantilla of white lace.

Carole Olshansky served as maid of honor. She is the sister of the bridegroom. Stanton M. Pikus was best man.

The father of the bridegroom, the late Samuel Olshansky, formerly of New York City, was founder and president of Everlast Pearl Corporation in Providence.

A wedding trip to Europe is planned for early summer. The couple reside at the Presidential Apartments in Philadelphia.

The Russians to the Rescue

Scatter-site housing are multiple-rise apartment buildings, constructed with federal funds, located outside an area of minority concentration whose purpose is to alleviate the plight of the ghetto poor and facilitate integration.

Whether these complexes are low income or middle income, the families who move into them will invariably be, in the main, blacks.

Needless to say, there are no welcome signs in the white city neighborhoods.

In fact, the prospect of a scatter-site housing development in Forest Hills united the Jews of that community in a way only the Six Day War united them. They looked on the project the way the Israelis looked upon the Arabs.

Needless to say, too, the Jews are not alone. A scatter-site housing development can tear apart an Italian, an Irish, a mixed, or a Protestant neighborhood. Property values drop. Crime in the streets becomes a reality, mostly because the people who insist on law and order flee, and the buildings deteriorate.

Scatter-site housing received its impetus in the flush of good will in the early 60s and it is a fact for the present and will be even more palpable a fact for the future.

But every now and then the folks figure a way to wiggle out of their predicament.

The fieldstone site in the west Bronx of New York City was an example. It was a six-acre city tract on which a middle income housing authority had taken an option. It made neither the Irish nor the Jews nor the Protestants happy. The prospect of a scatter-site housing development made them so unhappy they went to the courts to stall construction.

The plaintiffs found a technicality. The City Housing Authority was forced to reconsider and rezone, and the Housing Development money was frozen. The option lapsed.

So the owner sold the land to the Russians. The Russians wanted the land to build the offices for their United Nations Mission. They paid as much for this tract as we paid for Alaska.

The Riverdale community of the Bronx rejoiced. Banner headlines announcing the sale decorated the local newspaper in 12-point type. Ministers in their pulpit welcomed their new neighbors. Rabbis described the UN as the last, best hope of mankind. Catholic priests rejoiced that their parishioners could walk the streets at night because the Russians, wherever they go, go with security personnel.

It is on the whole an interesting development in our foreign policy. In Manhattan, the Jews are inveighing against the Russians on behalf of Soviet Jewry who are held prisoners in Russia. The Pope keeps the names of cardinals behind the Iron Curtain "in pectore" — in his heart — because he fears for the safety of these priests at the hands of atheistic, Godless communists who have proclaimed that religion is the opiate of the people. The Protestants to whose heart nothing is dearer than free enterprise and rugged individualism look upon the Kremlin as a menace to western civilization.

But for the moment the Russians have saved the west Bronx from a fate that 12th and 17th generation Americans would have wished upon it.

OVERFLY ZONE

BONN — The pilot of the Israeli Arava plane which was forced down by the French air force after flying over a "top security zone" said here that he did not know at the time that flying restrictions were imposed in the area. The pilot, Capt. Nachum Yaalom, 39, arrived in Hanover to participate at the international air show. The pilot had been interrogated by French security and the plane searched after French air authorities claimed that it had overflown at a 100-foot altitude the nuclear site of Albion near Lyons.

Freedom of the Press

Freedom of the press seems to be like a great many other things: Everyone talks about it, but practically no one really seems to believe in it.

A newspaper, to be considered a true newspaper, must publish news articles, features, letters to the editor, advertisements, etc., which reflect a great many different opinions. (We draw the line at treason, libel or pornography.) The opinion of the newspaper is given only in the editorials.

The inference that because we published a paid political advertisement (clearly marked as such) with a certain viewpoint means that we agree with it is completely false.

Many readers seem to think that a newspaper should publish only articles with which they agree. This would not make for a very free press.

The news articles, while portraying the activities of many different groups of people, are kept as free of bias as possible. Feature articles and columns portray only the viewpoint of the writers, and advertisements, which are paid for, reflect only the ideas of the people who pay for them.

When we are in favor of anything, or against anything, we write an editorial.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Arthur Miller was the guest speaker at the 92nd Street Y's Conversations With Playwrights series. He said that while he was a student at the University of Michigan, he won a playwriting contest for his first work, "They Too Shall Arise." The prize was $1,250, a large sum for the Depression years. Sidney Howard, the playwright, told Miller not to accept it, saying he should have been given $5,000.

"I froze at the thought of refusing," said Miller. "During the Depression, I could have lived for three years on this amount."

Simon and Garfunkel and Peter, Paul and Mary, the two famous singing teams which broke up, will be reunited for a one-night stand at the Madison Square Garden Concert for Senator McGovern on June 13. Mike Nichols and Elaine May, another former team, will also be together again to perform their comedy at the concert. Warren Beatty and Lou Adler, who produced McGovern's recent concert of stars in Los Angeles, will also do the New York show.

Sir Michael Redgrave took over Sir Alec Guinness' role in the London stage hit, "Voyage Around My Father." Barry Nelson will co-star with Carol Burnett, Walter Matthau and Geraldine Page in Martin Ritt's new film, "Pete and Tillie" . . . Clifton Davis, winner of Grammy and Tony Award nominations, will star in "Together for Days." He's currently starring in "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

Dame Margaret Rutherford, who died recently, complained about an actress with whom she was working in "The Magic Box." "She's pushy," said Dame Margaret. "She has a cafeteria mind — only self-service." When she was filming "on the Double" with Danny Kaye, she complained: "American slapstick is much more strenuous than British — the crust of American pies is harder."

Former Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach will teach the course in Selected Problems of Presidential-Congressional Relations at Columbia Law School in its fall semester. There will also be seminars in the First Amendment and Electronic Media and in Psychoanalysis and Law. New courses will be Sex-Biased Discrimination and the Law and Noise Pollution — the Engineering and Legal Aspect.

At the March of Dimes tribute to producer Alexander Cohen at the Rainbow Room, Mayor Lindsay was asked by an English visitor why he didn't wear his official chains of office, in the style of mayors in England, when they attend public functions. "I wouldn't dare," said Lindsay. "They'd hang me with them."

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Forty-Five Years

By BERYL SEGAL

By coincidence the forty-fifth Annual Meeting of The Miriam Hospital falls on the same year as my graduation from Brown University. It is also strange that the speaker at that meeting was to have been the President of Brown University, Dr. Donald Hornig. To my knowledge, this was to have been a first in the history of The Miriam Hospital. What changes time has wrought in both The Miriam Hospital and Brown University.

Could anyone conceive of Dr. William H.P. Faunce, then President of Brown University, coming to a meeting of The Miriam?

Forty-five years ago, The Miriam was an insignificant hospital in the state. Only a year or so old then, it was housed in a renovated Boarding House and Maternity Ward on Parade Street. It had, at that time, sixty-four patients, including eight cribs for new-born babies.

What could Dr. Faunce of Brown say about the hospital? What could anyone do for the hospital except, perhaps, donate a sum of badly needed money or contribute equally urgent time and work?

Today, forty-five years later, the President of Brown, were he able to address the meeting, would have told the gathering that The Miriam Hospital is an integral part of the Medical School and contributes much to its teaching staff and to its research endeavors.

Miriam and Research
Ever since Mr. Jerome R.

Sapolsky became Executive Vice President of the hospital, the cry of the moment has been Research and Education as well as Patient Care. These three inseparable pillars form a foundation on which every hospital must build its future.

The Miriam, so the philosophy was brought home, must become affiliated with a Medical School. Until the day of the Medical School, The Miriam Hospital must begin a program of Research in the Medical Sciences, and attract great teachers to its staff. An atmosphere of teaching and learning must be established in the hospital for the benefit of both; the physicians on the staff and the patients in the wards.

To accomplish these aims, the Research Department was built and staffed. Interns and Residents were recruited and are being taught. Affiliations were sought with the universities and colleges of the state. Especially were these ties nurtured and strengthened with Brown University. Physicians on the staff of The Miriam are on the teaching faculty at the University. There is a steady flow of students from Brown into the halls and laboratories of The Miriam. Nurses and Technicians come to The Miriam to complete their education at college.

And so we heard at the Annual Meeting reports on the progress of Renal Dialysis and transplantation, on the establishment of a Department of Nuclear Medicine, on shock treatment, on Psychiatric and Neurosurgical programs, on Physiotherapy and rehabilitation (now expanded into a complete new department) and on Diagnostic methods and procedures offered by the Laboratories of the hospital.

And we heard about people. People interested in the welfare of the hospital have always been the main asset of The Miriam. The members of the Board, young and old, especially the young, are being cultivated and indoctrinated. The Ladies' Association with its multiplicity of projects: the Hospitality Shop, the Coffee Shop, the Volunteer Committee, the Mobile Book Cart, and dozens of other facilities. All of these were told about in the reports to the meeting.

But above all we were impressed by the announcement of Mr. Norman Fain, President of The Miriam Hospital, about occupancy. He pointed out that there were days when patients were kept in the Emergency Rooms because of shortages of beds. The hospital runs an average of 90 per cent occupancy in the medical and surgical services. There is talk of opening the fourth floor, now only a shell, in the new wing, and equipping the floor with beds and other accommodations. The great demand for beds justifies the move. That fourth floor, I thought, would accommodate about as many patients as did the original hospital.

Going home after the Annual Meeting, the words of a Board member came to me. Alter Boyman was a supporter of the hospital from the first day it opened its doors to the public, and served on the board in various capacities. He told me that from the very beginning, The Miriam Hospital had a vision. That vision was that some day The Miriam would be to Providence what Mount Sinai Hospital is to New York and what Beth Israel Hospital is to Boston. We would not be satisfied with just another hospital, he emphasized.

Alter Boyman, if he were alive today, would say with satisfaction:

"We are getting there. We are surely getting nearer and nearer to that vision."

Only the Forty-Fifth Anniversary of the hospital, let us wish The Miriam will go from strength to strength, toward that vision held by the pioneers on the Board of Directors.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

An astounding 10 million Americans work for our state and local governments while another 2.8 million work for the Federal government. "The government" — Federal, state and local — has become the nation's biggest single employer in virtually all fields.

About one in four new jobs for men and women opening up in the U.S. is a government job. In some areas (Wyoming, West Virginia, Washington, D.C.), the ratio is one new government job for one new private sector job.

And although cutbacks in city employment are making headlines the nation over — in New York City alone, payrolls have been cut by 10,000 jobs during the past year — the most dramatic growth by far is taking place in jobs at state-local levels.

More specifically, job opportunities in state and city governments will soar by 40 per cent in the 1970-80 period, predicts the Labor Department — double the growth rate for the labor force as a whole. At this moment, estimates the National Civil Service League in Washington, more than 750,000 state-local jobs are opening up annually for people at all levels of educational achievement and across the occupational board.

About a quarter-million of these are openings for professional, administrative and technical (white collar) workers. Hundreds of thousands work in "financial control activities" (taxes) and in protective services (police work and firemen).

"Working for city hall," in short will be among the biggest categories of increasing job opportunities in the 1970s.

The forces behind the upsurge in state-local government employment are fundamental; the relentless population migrations from rural to suburban and urban areas; the exploding demand for essential public services this trend brings; the ever-greater call for more and better education, housing, health services by all age groups.

With the single exception of jobs for elementary and high school teachers, employment in city and state agencies will climb steadily and sharply.

As for pay scales, they have been spiraling upwards — reflecting the movement throughout the country to make pay scales for government workers comparable with those of workers in private enterprise and also the efforts of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes and similar unions to which more than one in three state-local government workers now belong.

In most U.S. cities now,

If you can't afford sable, give her the Herald.

Today's hand is more pointed toward the Duplicate players. However, the same playing situation could easily come up in either Duplicate or Rubber Bridge when that extra trick involved means making a contract or going down. In this hand it meant making an overtrick. In Duplicate every trick counts vitally; you get a point for every pair you beat, half a point for those you tie. Sometimes that extra trick can mean many points and a Tournament might be won or lost by as little as half a point.

There is also a very interesting bidding problem here which knowledgeable players would have little difficulty with but might stump many others.

To comment on the bidding, if partners trust each other they avoid many of the pitfalls that normal partnerships run into. West had a minimum opening bid but definitely should open. Every West did which provided the clues to give the Declarers the opportunity to make the extra trick. Without that bid South wouldn't dare make the key play. After West's opening, North had an automatic Take-out Double, having all of the necessary qualifications. Along with her 15 points she had four cards in the other Major suit and could stand either of the other suits being bid. Also she could even afford her partner leaving the Double in for penalties.

Now for South's response to the Double. She had thirteen points to go with her partner's Double, certainly enough for a game somewhere, but where? Obviously No Trump. Many pairs did not reach this contract but they should have. Some felt that their Heart Queen was not enough of a stopper being fearful that East might get in and lead through it. That was foolish for if they thought just a little and did some simple mathematics they would realize that East could never get in, he could not have any points. That same thinking could govern the play of the hand later but first to finish the bidding.

Hearts were now not too much of a problem but what about those two little Spades? That, too, was not a deterrent for North's Double had guaranteed Spades. With all of that information, and not wanting to give her partner any problem at all, for North could pass most bids, South jumped right to game in No Trump where she played the hand. Many pairs played it there.

Every East led the Heart King and the Dummy was spread. A good Declarer looks over the situation and then counts her tricks. She then goes on from there. She had eight sure tricks in the minors plus whatever others she might gain in the Majors along with the Spade Ace. If West continued with another Heart South's Queen would immediately become another good trick. That did happen a few times and now there were ten tricks. To make an eleventh all they had to do was take a finesse against the Spade King. That might seem to be slightly dangerous for if it should lose the whole remaining Heart suit would be cashed against them but was there really any chance of that finesse losing? No, for West had to have that King for his opening bid so five was quite easy with that defense.

But some Wests switched after the first Heart trick, leading one of the minors. This gave nothing to Declarer for he had all the tricks in those suits anyhow. To stay even or get ahead of the other Declarers, they had to make eleven tricks, too. The only way to do that was to double-finesse the Spades, first putting in the 10 and when and if that works, playing the Queen on the second round. Doubly dangerous you might say. True, but if one simply counts to 12 one would be able to figure exactly the number of points there were out against the Declarer in the combined East and West hands for 28 could be seen in Dummy and Declarer's hands. West had opened the bidding first hand so presumably he had to have all of them which would then include the two Spade honors meaning that both finesses would be sure to work. The few Declarers who did this were tie for top and they truly should have done it in Duplicate.

Moral: Your brain can be used like an adding machine, all you have to do is accurately put in the right figures.

TO BE HONORED: Benjamin M. Falk of Woonsocket will be honored at a breakfast in behalf of State of Israel Bonds which will be held on Sunday, June 11, at 9:45 a.m. at Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket. Lawrence Sadwin is chairman and sponsor of the affair.

Mr. Falk will receive the Israel Achievement Award for his efforts in strengthening Israel's economy. Guest entertainer will be Jack Mallon, comedian and television personality.

Mr. Falk, a former chairman and co-chairman of the Woonsocket Israel Bonds effort, is a past president of Congregation B'nai Israel and the Woonsocket Lodge, B'nai B'rith, which selected him as its "Man of the Year" in 1958. He is one of the five Rhode Island community leaders chosen as the first recipients of Brandeis University's Community Service Awards. Mr. Falk has been a member of the board of directors of the Jewish Home for the Aged of Rhode Island, and is treasurer of the Chevre Kadisha.

Federal Judge Rules City Violates Rights Of Blacks

NEW YORK — A Federal judge ruled here this week that the city had violated the constitutional rights of blacks and others by giving preference to Jews seeking to move into a new public housing project on the Lower East Side.

The 26-page decision, by Judge Marvin E. Frankel, barred the city from renting 197 disputed apartments in the federally assisted project called the Seward Park Urban Renewal area on Delancey Street until the discriminatory rental procedures were remedied.

Judge Frankel said that the city had given preference to Jews in renting apartments because one of the project's two buildings was near a "desirable" synagogue.

"However laudable their motives," Judge Frankel stated, "the officials of the City Housing Authority have allowed themselves to employ a criterion of religious selection which the Constitution commands them to eschew."

He also ruled that the city violated its own regulations by failing to give first priority to former residents of the renewal area who wanted to move into the project.

When construction required the demolition of stum buildings and the relocation of families who lived there, the judge said, housing officials assured all these "site residents" that they would get first priority in renting the new apartments.

MPF Legal Services filed a lawsuit for relocated blacks and others who learned that they were not obtaining the new apartments, while apartments in the project were being rented to nonpriority families.

This resulted when the city decided that former site residents who had been relocated to other public housing had no priority for the new project and that Jewish families had preference for apartments in the project building across the street from an old synagogue.

Judge Frankel said this discretionary preference had already resulted in the rental of 48 apartments to Jewish families who were transferred from other public housing although they lacked site priority.

Of the 1,852 families originally qualified as site residents, only 40 per cent were white, but 64 per cent of the families obtaining apartments so far in the project are white, resulting in "numerically favored treatment" for whites, the judge declared.

"The short of this subject is that the Housing Authority, in dishonoring its own regulations and denying first priority to plaintiffs and others in their class, has denied them the due process of law," he ruled.

The project contains a total of 360 apartments, with the first tenants scheduled to begin moving into the buildings June 1.

Two of the apartments are for resident employees of the Housing Authority, 161 have been rented to former site residents and 197 remain in dispute, including 171 rented to tenants lacking priority and 26 not yet rented.

Judge Frankel's decision means that the tenants lacking priority may be unable to begin moving into the project next Thursday, as scheduled, and that the Housing Authority must consider the rental applications based on priority for area residents without reference to race or religion.

Simeon Golar, the Housing Authority chairman, said the city was considering an appeal.

The disputed housing was planned many years ago to provide homes for Orthodox Jewish families and others, according to Mr. Golar, who said it was not inconsistent with the city's obligations to other ethnic and religious groups in need of housing on the Lower East Side.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Israeli Gen. Ariel Sharon, a leading military figure who has seen action from Haganah days to the Six-Day War, was received here several days ago by Gen. Idalio Sardenberg, chief of the Brazilian Army's General Staff. According to reports, they discussed the possibility of Israel's sale to Brazil of the Israeli version of the French Mirage warplane.

Friends Give Birthday Party For Rabbi Joachim Prinz

NEW YORK — Friends and admirers of Rabbi Joachim Prinz, one of American Judaism's great figures, gave a gala 70th-birthday party for him this week at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

About 600 civic and religious officials and members of Dr. Prinz's synagogue, Temple B'Nai Abraham of Newark, attended the dinner and dance in the Grand Ballroom. Though the dress was black tie, the ambience, at the rabbi's request, was very informal.

"I think it's very wonderful," Dr. Prinz said. "There are friends here I knew before the war." The rabbi received congratulatory messages from President Nixon, Premier Golda Meir of Israel and Jewish communities in 20 countries.

Martin Brody, president of Restaurant Associates, and Arthur Brody, president of Great Western Wines, were co-chairmen of the gala dinner, which was organized by Bernard Feinberg, executive director of Dr. Prinz's synagogue.

Leonard Bernstein Defends His Controversial Mass

WASHINGTON — Leonard Bernstein faced the National Press club here to defend and comment on his controversial Mass.

The work, described by Mr. Bernstein as "a theater piece built around a liturgical core," was written by the composer for the opening of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts here last September. The piece, which has received both praise and attacks from music critics and religious leaders, is based on the celebration of the Catholic mass ceremony.

"I should have thought it was very clear that the intention wasn't to offend but to illuminate, to probe, to seek a resolution," the 53-year-old composer and conductor said.

The work, using the text of the Catholic liturgy as well as additional lyrics by Mr. Bernstein and Stephen Schwarz, employs a melange of musical styles in its story of the celebrant who finds that orthodox religion and its symbols no longer work.

Saying that he wanted to clear up one of the many misconceptions involving the Mass — the reaction of the Kennedy family to the work, Mr. Bernstein had Warren Rogers, president of the Press Club, read from two letters written by Mrs. Rose Kennedy to the composer. In

Hello Again!

YOU WHO KNOW NOT (After your weekly lesson here, you'll know): You and I have both considered the longest name on record to be that which is called "Lake Webster," or didn't you know that Lake Webster is Lake "Chargogagomanchaugogochaubunagungamaug."

Now, after sneezing through that one, may I inform you that its pronunciation is mere child's play when compared with the longest place-name in the world. Take a deep breath and read the name of an 890 foot-hill in the Southern Hawke's Bay District of North Island, New Zealand. Here we go. It's "Taumatwahakatangihangakoauauotamatea (Turipukakapikimaunga-horonuku) Pokaiwhenuakitanatahu." Whew! That name means, "The place where Tamatia, the man with the big knee, who slid, climbed and swallowed mountains, known as Landeater, played on his flute to his loved one." The Lake Webster mouthful means, "You fish on your side; we fish on our side; and nobody fish in the middle." And so we thought we had a champion right in our own back yard only to discover the title really belongs in New Zealand. (All right, all right. Go ahead and check the spelling but don't try pronouncing it without your dentures or false teeth, if you insist. Ha ha.)

GREAT BASEBALL PITCHERS: Big Ed Reulbach pitched the first shutout doubleheader while with the Cubs. He beat Brooklyn 5-0 and 3-0 the same day. Famous? He was employed at the Shipyard in Providence during World War II and no one recognized him! And Joe Oeschger, once with the Providence Grays of the International League, engaged in a pitchers' duel with Leon Cadore that went 26 innings. Oeschger for the Boston Braves and Cadore for Brooklyn pitched almost three complete games when darkness halted them. The score was 1 to 1.

MORE PITCHERS: Back in 1924, Elmer Duggan, pitching for Brown U., struck out 29 and lost a 1 to 0 decision to Providence College and Charlie Reynolds after 20 innings. Reynolds beat Brown again for the Friars the next year, 2 to 1, in 18 innings, establishing himself as an immortal at P.C. where baseball was once more popular than basketball.

ON THE BOUNDING MAIN: A parachute spinaker with an area of 18,000 square feet on Vanderbilt's "Ranger" in 1937 was the largest sail ever made. It would have covered over two-fifths of an acre! The full-rigged auxiliary barque, "Sea Cloud," carried 30 sails, the canvas having an area of 36,000 square feet!

DO YOU HAVE FROG'S LEGS? (Or are your shoes too tight?) Anihoo, a frog in South Africa set a record when it covered 32 feet and three inches. (Thought you'd like to know that) And the "Whale Shark" is a whale of a shark, measuring up to 45 feet, sometimes. It's the largest sea fish and not a mammal.

HOW ABOUT A LIFT? Paul Anderson of Toccoa, Georgia, lifted the greatest lift ever when he raised some weights that tipped the beam at 6000 pounds — three tons.

WRESTLING: Max Klein of Russia and Alfred Asikainen of Finland wrestled Graeco-Roman style for 11 hours in the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm — and — Joe DeVito and John Spellman wrestled catch-as-catch-can style for three and one-half hours in the old Arcadia Ballroom in Providence. After three and one-half hours, one managed to lift the other over his head in preparation for a slam on the mat but lost his balance and the prostrate form of the wrestler being held in the air fell on the man who was holding him and he won the match. Of course, it called for a return engagement.

HORSE-RIDING: Evidence of horse-riding dates from a Mesopotamian statuette dated 2000 B.C. and Pignatelli's Academy of Horsemanship in Naples goes back to the 16th century.

HORSE-RACING: The earliest type of Horse-racing has been traced back thirty centuries. Organized horse-racing began in New York in the 1660s. (I once made a wager on a nag that must have started back there and hasn't come in yet — I don't think it has.) CARRY ON!

Hold High-Yield Airline Bonds

Q: I bought 5M American Airlines 11s of 1988 at par and 5M TWA 11s of 1986 at 108. These were purchased for their high return. Should my wife survive me, her only income would be from Social Security interest and dividends, as my pension terminates at my death. We also hold the enclosed list of common stocks. Should I settle for less income from safer bonds? M.J.

A: Both airlines have experienced a turnaround in operations. As a result of a three-way pact in conjunction with United Air Lines, capacity has been cut on four major domestic routes. The pact, which expires in September, is expected to receive CAB approval for extension beyond that date. TWA increased its load factor on these routes from 33.9% to 49.8% in the six months through March. For the month of May, TWA reported a 7.8% increase in domestic traffic and a 24.4% rise in international passenger revenue miles. American's management expects 1972 results will be encouraging and the second quarter profitable.

Your bonds are selling well above par value indicative of market appraisal of the bonds' safety and investment appeal. Hold for income.

Q: At the present time, I have about a 10-to-12 point loss in Textron. Should I hold or sell? I am interested in growth. R.J.

A: Textron's (NYSE) takeover of American Research & Development has added an important new dimension to the structure of this mammoth conglomerate. A.R. & D's portfolio, after the distribution of Digital Equipment shares, has a value of about $85 million. This venture capital company holds shares of more than 40 companies, many of which are also publicly held.

Earnings for the parent company — A.R. & D will be operated as an independent subsidiary — are expected by management to reach record levels this year. The first quarter, profits rose 10% on a 5.5% gain in sales. Consumer, industrial and metal product groups led, in the order given, the strong showing of the initial quarter. Hold for recovery.

Benefits Seen From Joint Venture

Q: On professional advice, I purchased 200 shares of National Cash Register (NYSE) about 14 months ago. Should I sell this stock or does it stand a chance for appreciation? R.G.

A: NCR should be held for its promising turnaround potential. An anticipated first quarter deficit equal to 31 cents a share resulted from a stroke which was terminated January 31, start-up costs on new products and expense from re-engineering a computer peripheral product.

Full year earnings, however, should make a significant recovery. Three new products will be introduced later this year: a computer and two accounting machines.

Longer term, the recently completed agreements with Control Data should importantly strengthen National Cash Register's position in the computer field. The "close working relationship," if approved by the Justice Department, will broaden product lines, reduce R&D costs as well as product expenses, since duplication will be eliminated and costs shared.

Q: I purchased Hammond Organ about five years ago but it doesn't seem to get anywhere. Also should I sell American Tel. & Tel.? I am 73 years old and alone. L.N.

A: While at this point I would recommend retaining these two NYSE-listed issues, the rationale for doing so is different in each case. Telephone will undoubtedly continue to produce an above-average yield with comparatively little downside risk. Thus, this low-risk, high-return stock is well-suited to your investment needs.

Hammond Corporation (formerly Hammond Organ) is a speculation on earnings recovery and is not the best type of security for your portfolio, long term. However, I suggest holding for the predicted profit rebound which should carry over to trading levels. For the year ended March, a marginal gain in earnings is looked for with significant improvement over the balance of the current fiscal year. A new integrated circuit organ model introduced in January has been well accepted by the trade. Other models are also selling at a brisk pace.

Portfolio Analysis

Q: Approximately eight years ago, I purchased 45 shares of Buttes Oil & Gas at $8 and 10 shares of Lanvin-Charles of the Ritz (now with Squibb) at $17.50. I would appreciate your opinion on these, especially Buttes on which I don't receive dividends. J.W.

A: Unless you are interested primarily in dividend income, both of these securities should be held. Squibb (NYSE), through a series of acquisitions (such as Lanvin-Charles of the Ritz) has established a strong position in a number of rapidly growing areas including ethical drugs, food and confectionary items and surgical instruments. Earnings growth has been well maintained during the past few years, a pattern which is continuing in the current fiscal period. Aided by a stronger economy and a more favorable consumer market, Squibb recorded a 13% profit rise to 60 cents a share in its initial 1972 March quarter on a 9% sales gain to $203.9 million. Although Squibb is amply priced on 1972 earnings estimates, long-pull prospects warrant retention.

Fire Bomb Tossed Into Tass Office

WASHINGTON — A homemade device was flung into the front room of the National Press Building offices of Tass, the Soviet news agency, last week, causing considerable smoke damage and some fire but injuring none and apparently not affecting the communications apparatus.

Police Capt. C. E. Rinaldi showed newsmen a scorched canister found just inside the door. The wall against which it lay was also blackened. The only visible fire damage was a burned pillow on a chair near the front door. Smoke billowed through the inside corridor on the second floor of the press building.

Rinaldi said he was in "no position to say right now who or why" in regard to the placing of the device, but that it was "safe to assume that it was a deliberate act." He called the damage "minor." Rinaldi and Lt. A. J. Mercurio said witnesses claimed they saw a man running down the corridor. Tass has been the scene of three demonstrations for Soviet Jewry in the past 18 months by Jewish Defense League members, but a JDL spokesman denied that the JDL was responsible for the smoke bomb. He said, however, that the organization applauded the act whoever was responsible.

Buttes Gal & Oil (ASE) is more suited to the venturesome investor, having excellent, but speculative, future potential. Several factors enhance the Buttes situation. The company is developing a dual petroleum/agriculture operational base in North America and has launched a major, low-risk foreign oil exploration campaign, the future prospects for which are bright. Through a subsidiary, Buttes is actively engaged in wine producing, a fast-growing area of Buttes operations and the economy as a whole. In 1971, Buttes' 5,000-acre vineyard netted roughly $900,000 in profit, or 22 cents a share.

Buttes posted significant recovery gains in 1971 — 68 cents per share versus 4 cents in 1970 — with 1972 witnessing more of the same. In the first quarter, Buttes earned 13 cents a share, a 43% improvement year-to-year, while sales climbed 35% to $2.3 million. Though more speculative than your other holding, Buttes does offer further appreciation potential and may be held if you are willing to assume a degree of risk.

REJECT LETTERS

JERUSALEM — Rumanian postal authorities have refused to accept letters from Israel bearing a stamp with the slogan "Let My People Go" and are returning them to the senders, it was disclosed here. The stamps were a special issue devoted to the plight of Jews in Eastern Europe. The Rumanian authorities have given no explanation and have made no announcement on the matter. Several Eastern European countries, including Poland and the Soviet Union, have taken exception to Israeli stamps in the past on grounds that they constituted propaganda and have removed the stamps or returned the letters.

Equal But Different Talmud Scholar Says Judaism Supports Women's Lib View

NEW YORK — A Talmud scholar told a group of Yeshiva University undergraduates recently that traditional Judaism entirely supports the women's liberation view that women not be enslaved economically and "not be treated as sexual objects from which to derive enjoyment or benefit."

fulfill certain common needs. Such a marriage can only be tenuous. If the 'male-female' is only interested in her own development, the child will be ruined, thereby creating either a sick or suicidal society."

Rabbi Yehuda Parnes, a member of the Yeshiva University-affiliated Rabbi Isaac Eichenan Theological Seminary, cited Biblical passages and commentaries indicating that a man must consider his wife as a person of worth, as a person in her own right.

With this in mind, Rabbi Parnes continued, "It becomes critical to affirm the Judaic concept of relations between man and woman — that both form part of the family unit, but play different roles — to save the home, the children, and Jewish continuity."

Rabbi Parnes said that according to Jewish tradition, woman was not inferior to man. The difference between man and woman, he said, is that they play different roles. The man, aggressive in nature, plays the dominant role or the role of the leader. "Retiring and sensitive in nature, the woman does not play the role of leader, and must direct her prime energies to the family."

Hold Bar Mitzvah In Moscow Synagogue

The fact that she is the retiring, nondominant partner, Rabbi Parnes said, does not mean "that her interests and talents are to be suppressed. The woman's prime role is as wife and mother, and she is supposed to fill this role to her best capabilities. However, if she has additional time — perhaps she has the means of hiring help to free her from some household duties — then there is nothing to stop her from pursuing her own interests. When the children are older, there is certainly nothing which says she must be tied to the house."

LONDON — The first bar mitzvah in 27 years took place in Moscow's Central Synagogue in Arkhipova Street on May 17. The celebrant was Leonid Slepak, the younger son of Vladimir Slepak, the Moscow-Jewish scientist well-known for his long struggle to obtain permission to emigrate to Israel.

"Where Jewish tradition departs from contemporary women's liberation views is in considering woman no different than man. Jewish tradition says that they are both indispensable and crucial to the marriage unit, but have different roles to play in the unit."

Details were given over the telephone from the Soviet capital by the bar mitzvah himself and members of his family. Leonid read matfir and haftarah.

Under current women's liberation thought, he said, "The woman is no different than man. She is independent and maintains the partnership in marriage to

The synagogue's board of management apparently gave permission for the ceremony to be held without knowing who the bar mitzvah was to be. Slepak announced that it would be his son only after the Sefer Torah had been brought out of the Ark.

That evening 50 people attended a celebration party at the Slepak's flat.

But apart from the bar mitzvah, last week was no different for the Slepak family from previous weeks. The KGB (security police) continued to harass them — and their friends and acquaintances — because they have applied to emigrate to Israel.

Having called at the flat earlier in search of Leonid's elder brother, Alexander, and not finding him at home, members of the KGB called again last week when he was home and took him away with them.

Brown's Arnie Berman To Receive Jewish Bowling Congress Award

Arnie Berman, Brown University senior and Ivy League basketball star, has been named for the second year in succession as the Jewish Athlete of the Year by the Rhode Island Jewish Bowling Congress. The Wally Sundlun Jr. Award will be given him at the 20th Anniversary Banquet and Sports Award Night of the Congress on Monday, June 5, at the Colonial Hilton Motor Inn in Cranston.

Berman is the recipient of a grant of $1,000 by the NCAA as one of the nation's leading student-athletes, and he has been drafted both by the Buffalo Braves (where he was born) of the NBA and the Floridians of the ABA.

Alan Hopfenberg, president, and Malvern R. Ross, banquet chairman, have also announced that the Joseph Dressler Memorial Award for Jewish Man of the Year will go to Max L. Grant, Rhode Island industrialist, financier and philanthropist. Active in the community, he was first president of the Jewish Community Center and first president of The Miriam Hospital.

Johnny Most, the voice of Celtics basketball for 16 years, will be the guest speaker of the evening. Most has a long history in the broadcasting of sports having done the Southern Conference play-by-play and the coast-to-coast NBC games of the week. He has also broadcast West Point football games and those of the New York Giants. Toastmaster will be Ambrose 'Amby' Smith, sports editor of the Pawtuxet Valley Daily Times. This will be the third time he has been toastmaster for the congress banquet.

The Bert Summer Memorial Award will go to Reverend Aloysius Begley for Service to Sports. Father Begley, who retired last year as the director of the Providence College Athletic Program, left behind him a career filled with accomplishments.

Awards will also be given for high scorers in the Congress leagues, both in duckpin and tenpin, as well as to winning teams, and the league championship teams.

Some tickets are still available and may be bought from Congress members or at the door.

If you can't afford diamonds, give her the Herald.

Feels Authors Of Ad Unfair, Misleading

I would like to call attention to the political advertisement concerning Senator George McGovern printed in a recent issue of the Rhode Island Herald. Not only do I feel that the authors of that ad were unfair and misleading (as I will explain), but I would also like to know why the Herald printed the ad directly before the R.I. Presidential Primary without offering any kind of opposing view.

Referring to the ad itself, I think that the issue of Senator McGovern's stand on Israel should be clarified because I'm sure that that is what most interests the readers of your newspaper. I will not argue whether or not Senator McGovern at one time made those statements. I will give the authors of the ad that much credit. But what really counts is what the Senator believes now, not one or two or three years ago. On Sunday, May 28, 1972, on a special "Face the Nation" program, Senator McGovern made the following statement: "I believe we have to do whatever is necessary to secure the defense of Israel: to provide the arms, to provide the aircraft that they've requested."

Now, let's not kid ourselves. That advertisement was by no means an accurate assessment of Senator McGovern's present stand on Israel. It obviously implied that he holds a negative stand on Israel and it may have suggested to quite a few members of the Jewish community that he was anti-Jewish as well. It is clear from his statement on May 28, that Senator McGovern takes just as positive a stand on Israel as any other candidate. I think your readers have a right to know this.

Concerning the references to McGovern's position on Vietnam, the article stressed the fact that while Senator McGovern may now be against the war, it is by no means certain that he always was. On the same "Face the Nation" program mentioned before, Senator Hubert Humphrey made a big deal about the fact that Senator McGovern's slogan, "right from the start," is misleading because he was not against the war "right from the start." To support his argument, Senator Humphrey cited exactly the same references that were cited in the ad in the Herald. My question is, is it not possible that the authors of the ad were not merely warning the Jewish community of Senator McGovern's "negative" stand concerning Israel, but rather that they were out and out supporters of Senator Humphrey? And by printing the ad without any opposing view whatsoever, is it not also possible that the Rhode Island Herald was also expressing its support for Senator Humphrey?

Sincerely,
FRANK BRESNICK

NAACP Withdraws From Convention

NEW YORK — An official of the national Association for the Advancement of Colored People said last week that the civil rights organization's withdrawal from the National Black Political Convention was motivated by principles totally opposed to the Convention's position on Israel and school busing.

In a letter to the Convention, NAACP executive director Roy Wilkins cited its "repugnant" resolutions on Israel and busing.

Dr. John Morsell, assistant executive director, said NAACP support for Israel was always a matter of principle. Dr. Morsell recalled that in 1947, when the UN General Assembly was debating whether to partition Palestine into Jewish and Arab states, the late Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, lobbied vigorously for partition with the delegates from Ethiopia, Haiti and Liberia, and succeeded in influencing two affirmative votes and one abstention.

In his letter, Wilkins took exception to a resolution passed in the closing minutes of the Convention's meeting in Gary, Ind., March 12 which called for the "dismantling" of Israel. The resolution was subsequently revised to condemn Israel for "expansionist policies and forceful occupation of the sovereign territories of another state."

Wilkins wrote that the NAACP's objections to the resolutions were "not reduced by the half-hearted and awkward revisions which they have undergone," as "We believe that they should have been eliminated in toto."

He backed the Convention's opposition to capital punishment and endorsement to aid to Black Africa, but said its "fundamental thrust" was "openly separatist and nationalist."

Conference Censures Israel For Suez Close

SANTIAGO — With the approval of Britain, France and the Soviet Union and the United States abstaining, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) adopted a resolution blaming Israel for the continued closure of the Suez Canal. The resolution, passed by a vote of 70-0 with 37 abstentions, was drafted by the "Third World" bloc of developing nations and reflected Arab influence in that bloc.

It affirmed full support for the Security Council's Resolution 242 and declared that Israel's withdrawal from the occupied Arab territories was a prerequisite to reopening the Suez Canal.

Israel did not participate in the voting and the head of its delegation, Ambassador Gideon Rafael, accused UNCTAD of exceeding its area of competence by entering the field of political issues.

 clerical workers earn more than they would at comparable private jobs; so do those in many data-processing jobs. In New York City, an experienced computer operator earns 11 per cent more working for the government than he would in private industry; a carpenter or electrician earns 62 per cent more working for the city than he would in private industry.

In Boston, an experienced computer systems analyst working for the city earns $1,125 a month; in Chicago, he earns $949. In Boston, a carpenter working for the city earns $666 a month; in Chicago, he earns $1,051. In Boston, the plumber earns $648 a month; in Chicago, $1,077.
