U.S. Intelligence Sources Say Soviet Union Removing Most Of Its Warplanes

WASHINGTON — United States intelligence sources say there are "strong indications" that the Soviet Union is removing from Egypt most of its warplanes assigned with Soviet flyingcrews to the Egyptian air defenses.

These intelligence sources said it appeared that among the planes being removed were most of the 18 TU-16 twin-jet reconnaissance bombers, whose primary mission was to track the warships of the United States Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, as well as some 70 MIG-21 jet fighter-bombers and about 6 highly advanced MIG-23's, all flown by Soviet pilots.

American intelligence said that Egypt, however, would retain over 200 older MIG-19's, MIG-21's and Sukhol-7 bombers, which had been turned over to Cairo over the last five years. These are piloted and controlled by Egyptian personnel.

According to intelligence, the Egyptians will also keep surface-to-air missiles and other armaments that the Russians gave them after the 1967 war with Israel.

American intelligence, which has been carefully watching Soviet military movements in Egypt since President Anwar el-Sadat ordered the departure of Soviet units, is reported to believe that Moscow will withdraw the 10,000 combat troops it is estimated to have there.

The consensus among American experts is that no more than 200 to 300 Soviet technicians will remain to assist the local military operate advanced surface-to-air missiles in the Cairo-Alexandria area and around the Aswan Dam on the Upper Nile.

The intelligence specialists warn, however that they believe the Russians will be allowed to retain their naval facilities in Alexandria, Port Said, Mersa, Matruh and Sollum, as well as some naval personnel.

American intelligence assessments on the extent of the Soviet withdrawal appear to differ in some respects from the Israeli estimates.

Mrs. Golda Meir, the Israeli Premier, said in Jerusalem that while Mr. Sadat's evacuation order affected Soviet operational units integrated into the Egyptian air defense system, it did not "at least at this stage — affect Soviet forces and positions in Egypt, which serve the strategic objectives of the Soviet Union in the region."

In a speech on July 18, President Sadat left it unclear whether he wished all or only some Soviet military personnel to leave.

American and Israeli assessments agree that Soviet-flown aircraft are being removed, that the Soviet naval facilities serving the Mediterranean fleet will remain and that 7,000 Soviet advisers will depart while instructors and technicians stay.

Both the United States and Israel draw a distinction between Soviet advisers attached to Egyptian army units, whose presence was long a source of irritation to the Egyptians, and technicians and instructors with narrowly defined technical and training missions.

Hoffman Says Everyone In Florida Is Jewish

MIAMI BEACH — Abbe Hoffman, one of the "Chicago Seven" whose trial was connected with the 1968 Democratic Convention in Chicago, was back for this one and was staying at Flamingo Park. When asked for an interview, Hoffman made it immediately clear that President Nixon was his major opposition while George McGovern was "a mensch." "Any Jew for Nixon is a goy, even Golda Meir, Hoffman, who is 35, said. "It's incredible that some Jews would vote for Nixon. Too many mink coats and country clubs. Too much assimilation." Hoffman said he was planning to visit Israel in the near future, declaring that "I am very pro-Jewish, but anti-Zionism." Asked what part of the Flamingo encampment crowd was Jewish, Hoffman replied, "In Miami Beach everybody is Jewish, even the Cubans. Che Guevara is Jewish; the Che is Chai."

Premier Golda Meir Appeals To Sadat For New Start Toward Peace In Mideast

JERUSALEM — Premier Golda Meir appealed to President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt to join in making a new start toward peace in the Middle East, to "meet as equals, and make a joint supreme effort to arrive at an agreed solution."

In the Government's first considered statement since the expulsion of Soviet advisers from Egypt two weeks ago, Mrs. Meir said, "It would seem that this hour in the history of Egypt can, indeed should, be the appropriate hour for change — and if it truly is the hour for change, let it not be missed."

But the tone of the Premier's 45-minute address to parliament, was not optimistic. She made more of a plea than an offer. While she stated Israel's longstanding positions on war and diplomacy in soft language, she did not change the substance of Israel's negotiating terms on the occasion of the Soviet withdrawal.

Mrs. Meir warned that premature judgments about a Soviet "exodus from Egypt" would become a source of disappointment.

"The evacuation of the advisers and the experts, the reduction of Soviet units which were integrated in the Egyptian system — these constitute a significant fact, but do not indicate the cessation of the Soviet Union's role in Egypt," Mrs. Meir said. "We have not seen the end of the matter."

But, addressing herself directly to President Sadat, she said, "No foreign country or factor can solve for us, or instead of us, the problems which stand between us."

Mrs. Meir said: "Negotiation for the establishment of peace is no badge of surrender or humiliation. Negotiation for peace is a supreme revelation of sovereignty, of national honor and of international responsibility."

President Sadat has again rejected any thought of direct negotiations with Israel. Mrs. Meir had reportedly planned to include such a proposal in her address, but in final form her call to "meet as equals" did not preclude negotiations through an intermediary.

"Nor do we close the door on interim moves, such as your proposal of February, 1971, for a special arrangement for opening the Suez Canal," Mrs. Meir went on. "We, too, regard such a settlement as a temporary solution," she said — clearly trying to meet the Egyptian leader's expressed fear that a partial settlement would harden into something permanent to Egypt's disadvantage.

"We have not declared permanent borders," she said, "we have not drawn up an ultimate map, we have not demanded prior commitments on matters which must be clarified by means of negotiations. We do not intend to perpetuate the cease-fire lines between us, or to freeze the existing situation." She added:

"Let us sit down together to discuss the peace settlements. Let us search for a way to break the deadlock, lest war be renewed between us."

"This appeal of ours does not stem from weakness, nor out of any desire to take advantage of an embarrassing situation, but rather out of a deep awareness of the need for peace, of the advantages of peace, and the preferability of negotiation over any other alternative."

The Premier gave short shrift to the offer of his good offices by Gunnar V. Jarring, the special United Nations representative for the Middle East, who reportedly hopes to revive his five-year peace-making efforts in New York next month. She recalled Mr. Jarring's "surprise move" last year asking Israel for a prior commitment to withdraw from the occupied Sinai Peninsula.

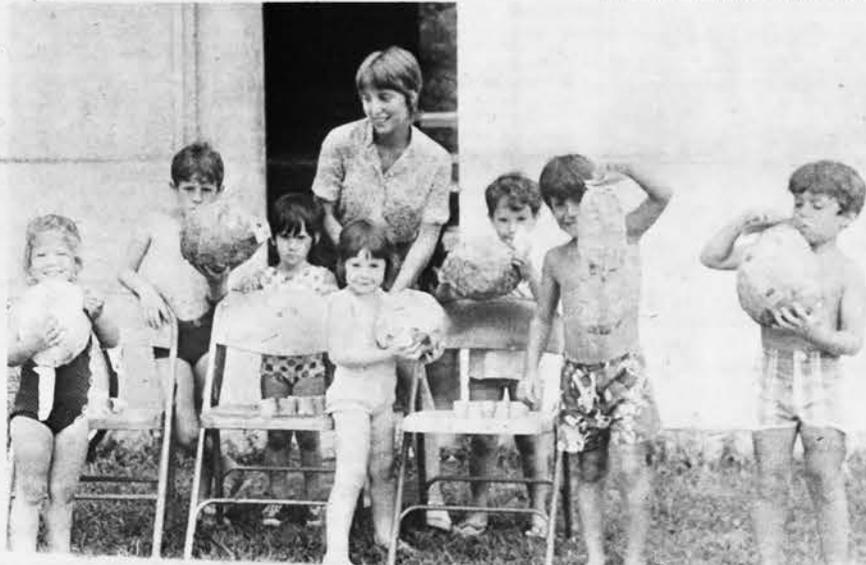

"Up to this day," Mrs. Meir said, "the United Nations representative has not revoked the validity of his memorandum

The principal disagreement between American and Israeli intelligence specialists seems to center on whether Soviet combat units — what Mrs. Meir called "strategic forces" — are being withdrawn.

American intelligence sources, while cautioning that it is still premature to make a full judgment of the scope of the Soviet pullout, said that data obtained earlier offered "strong indications" that Moscow was repatriating a large percentage of the Soviet-flown aircraft based in Egypt.

The best American estimates are that there were five to six squadrons of Soviet MIG-21 jet fighter-bombers — 60 to 72 planes — stationed in Egypt

Artist Enjoys Teaching

By Marcia Harding

Lulu Sarenson, a member of Seekonk's summer colony at Sherwood Glen, is a beautiful, accomplished, successful artist.

She graduated from Pratt Art Institute and studied under Professor Moy in Provincetown. A seascape specialist, her work has been exhibited at the Providence Art Club and at the Hyannis, Provincetown, and Newport Art Associations.

But she shies away from talking about herself. To make her enigmatic doe eyes shine you must ask about her students.

Lulu got involved with teaching accidentally when a little neighbor girl asked for some help in painting. She now has classes with students ranging from 10 to 70.

She teaches all mediums and each student is free to choose his own project and work at his own speed. Lulu guides rather than tells and the results have been remarkable.

Recently, at a Father's Day showing of her pupils' work, held at 9 Parish Street, Pawtucket, over 90 pieces were displayed.

First Prizes were awarded to Susan Bernier, pastels; Ann Margolies, pen and ink; Sarah Weiner, color and theme; Jeanette Bornstein, seascape; Ada Comrose, life.

Medals were awarded to Susan Hyman, Sarah Weisman, Cheryl Mittleman and Carolyn Korn.

Recommends Cut Of 50% In Forest Hills

NEW YORK — Mario M. Cuomo, appointed by Mayor Lindsay to mediate the Forest Hills low-income housing controversy last week recommended a 50 per cent reduction in the size of the project, and was immediately assailed by both sides.

"Time is essential," Mr. Cuomo said at a City Hall news conference, noting that pile driving was well under way on the site, at 108th Street and 62d Drive.

The spirit of his report was summed up by Mr. Cuomo in a citation from Edmund Burke, who said in 1775 that "all government — indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act — is founded on compromise."

Mr. Cuomo's compromise plan was immediately rejected, however, as "outrageous" and "manifestly absurd" by Simeon Golar, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, and as "totally unacceptable" by Jerry Birbach, a leader of the opposition.

Mr. Golar, on vacation at Martha's Vineyard, lamented "the direct loss of 408 desperately needed homes for the working poor" and the fact that city funds would be needed to build the smaller project.

And Mr. Birbach, in a news conference at the site of the project, said Mr. Cuomo's plan "is not scatter-site housing — it will scatter the people."

Arab Terrorist To Be Hanged

TEL AVIV — An Arab terrorist who threw a hand grenade into a group of tourists in East Jerusalem last fall killing an Arab girl and injuring 13 persons, was sentenced to hang by a military tribunal in Lydda. The sentence was one of the rare instances of capital punishment in Israel.

The court imposed the maximum penalty after the defendant, 21-year-old Shabed Hassan who lives near Hebron, failed to show the slightest remorse for his crime. According to the charges, Hassan carried a grenade to Jerusalem for the purpose of causing as much bloodshed as possible. The prosecutor said he followed a group of tourists on their way to the Walling Wall last Rosh Hashana eve and hurled the grenade into their midst as they walked through one of the narrow streets in the Old City. The girl killed was a passer-by.

NO CANCELLATIONS

JERUSALEM — No European or American travel organization has canceled a summer tour to Israel as a result of the Lydda Airport massacre, according to Hanoah Givton.

Obituaries

Love May Be Cause Of Disappearance

JERUSALEM — Constantin Dumitrachescu, the Rumanian diplomat who disappeared after completing his tour of duty in Israel two weeks ago, may have defected for love, according to a theory advanced here by people who knew the 47-year-old official.

Dumitrachescu was known around Tel Aviv as a high-living, hard-drinking man who enjoyed good food, good company and good entertainment. A Tel Aviv jeweler revealed that the diplomat had ordered gold trinkets from him, saying that they were for his wife but requesting the jeweler to keep the purchase a secret from Mrs. Dumitrachescu.

Dumitrachescu was last seen boarding a plane at Lydda Airport on June 23, ostensibly to join his family in Rumania.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

How To Play 'Success Chess'

Is your immediate corporate boss — the person directly superior to you — a "shelf-sitter" likely to stay right where he or she is rather than to move up or be replaced?

If so, you're probably wasting precious career time, for your move up the corporate ladder could be blocked indefinitely by this immobile superior.

Are you traveling the right kind of route to the top — if that's where you want to go in your company? If, for instance, men in marketing or finance usually inherit the presidency in your corporation, are you in marketing or finance?

Or are you in corporate specialties from which men are rarely promoted to the top in your field? Think very hard about where you are on the management ladder and aim for increased exposure and visibility.

Have you kept your options wide open and your opportunities flexible so you can alter your corporate behavior for your own good, if so indicated?

Or are you being stereotyped in your company? If this is so, make a move quickly either within or outside the company to break the stereotype.

Do you, in short, know how to play SUCCESS CHESS?

The middle-management employment market is again in a healthy expansion, reflecting the quickening economic upturn in the U.S. in the second half of 1972.

As a result, large numbers of you are moving into new jobs as middle executives in aggressive, fast-growing concerns. And large numbers of you are moving with the promise of rapid promotion into the upper corporate ranks as part of your deal — as long as top management believes you deserve a promotion because of your superior performance in your starting position.

But you might be stymied by such circumstances as I described above. To help you, here are basic moves in the game of Success Chess as drawn up by a top authority in the field of executive behavior, Eugene Emerson Jennings, professor at Michigan State University.

* Avoid loss of career time by getting away from an immobile superior and by becoming a crucial subordinate to a mobile superior. When your boss moves, you'll move, since you are as important to your superior as he or she is to you.

* Make sure you are traveling the right route to the top, if that is your goal. The top four rungs of the corporate ladder from which executives are being promoted today are: operations-division management, finance, marketing and administration. The least likely specialties for promotions are: public relations, manufacturing, international, research and development.

* Keep your options wide open and practice "self nomination" for the top jobs. Do this by letting those who do the nominating for key posts know that you want a bigger job or at least want to learn how to qualify for that bigger job.

* If, after long and serious deliberation, you decide to quit, rehearse the move ahead of time. Don't be counted among the executives who have fired their corporation in the afternoon and rehired it the next day. Instead, write out your resignation, put it in a safe place in your desk, lock the desk and let at least a week go by before you take it out. Then if you really mean it, rewrite it and submit it.

* Make sure that when you leave your company, you do so on your own terms and that you always leave on the best of terms. And have faith that, if you can succeed in one job, you can succeed in another, even without having climbed a single rung on the corporate ladder. The corporation is a market — not merely a place in which simply to work for a living — and the market is for skills. Your skills are best determined by your basic performance.

* And heed these additional clues on promotions offered by other experts on executive advancement: the great majority of promotions to top spots are made from within the firm, but significant numbers of these were employed by their companies for only a relatively few years; the average age of newly promoted company presidents and chief officers is now 46 and falling steadily; virtually all newly promoted company executives are college graduates and more than one in three holds advanced degrees.

Feels Need For Clarification On Israel Religious Party

NEW YORK — Rabbi Abraham Gross, president of the Rabbinical Alliance of America, said that there was "need now to clarify" whether Israel's National Religious Party "has the authority to speak on behalf of Torah Jewry." He said this was so in light of the NRP's abstention in the halachic conversion bill vote in the Knesset.

Rabbi Gross said the NRP's blanket abstention, except for one of its members, Dr. Avner Sciaky, defied the Israeli Chief Rabbinate and other religious authorities who had made clear their support of the measure.

"Mere support of principles of halacha, Jewish law, and organization captions calling for the land to be according to Torah and then following an act which indicates that a seat in the government is above Torah cannot be condoned," Rabbi Gross declared.

He also sharply criticized Premier Golda Meir for dismissing Dr. Sciaky, the Deputy Minister of Education, because he voted for the halachic conversion bill which the government opposed.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Wunderkind Wankel

Q: I would like your opinion of American Israeli Paper (ASE) particularly in relation to the Wankel engine. Will the stock go higher than it is at present? Z.T.

A: Interest in the Wankel engine has heated up in direct proportion to General Motors' increasingly enthusiastic commitment to the German automotive "wunderkind." Additional stimulus to the Wankel mystique has been supplied by the success of Toyo Kogyo's rotary-powered Mazda. U.S. sales of this automobile reached 22,589 in the first half of this year, up from 6,868 in the 1971 interim. The problems formerly associated with the rotary engine apparently have been effectively eliminated by this Japanese auto maker.

When such a revolutionary concept reaches this stage, investors react and the stock market results can be explosive. Thus, it is safe to assume that any stock even remotely connected with the Wankel will continue to gyrate both up and down. In the first four trading sessions in June, American Israeli jumped 155% from 6-3/4 to 17-1/4. Subsequent profit taking lowered shares several points. AIP, a paper manufacturer, has its foot in the Wankel door through a 50%-owned subsidiary. The subsidiary is licensed to produce 1/2 to 30 horsepower rotaries in Israel for sale worldwide except North America. This size engine would be primarily for golf carts and outdoor motors. According to company chairman Joseph Mazer, no prototype has been developed as yet and production is at least 18 months away. Earnings contributions are not anticipated much before 1975.

American Israeli produces a full line of fine, newsprint, kraft and sulfate papers and accounts for 60% of Israel's paper production. Earnings, unadjusted, have been on a plateau for the past four fiscal years. However, when adjusted for the change in currency rates, net rose from 57 cents a share to 70 cents a share for the year ended March 31, 1972. Based on estimated 1972-73 results shares are trading at an adequate 17x earnings multiple.

Income Fund For Withdrawal Plan

Q: I am 58, a widow and I would like to retire, having worked 20 years. In order to retire at this time I would have to start withdrawal plans on my mutual funds of $300 to $400 per month. I have accumulated 1,272 shares of Dreyfus Fund and 1,608 of Enterprise Fund. Is it feasible to start these plans? Would I have to dip into capital? How long would my capital last? F.K.

A: In order to achieve an income of $300 to $400 monthly, you certainly would have to dip into the $28,000 capital you have amassed. Your two holdings returned an average of 2.5% last year from both income and capital gains distributions, while the minimum income, which you require, amount to a 12.5% return on your capital. In a fund which grows 7% a year, withdrawals of 12.5% would exhaust your capital within 11-1/2 years.

By switching to an income fund yielding 5% to 6% annually, you would reduce significantly the inroads on your invested capital. Harbor Fund, which is under the same management as Enterprise Fund, has not only an excellent growth record but yields an adequate 5% as well. Your Enterprise shares could be transferred at net asset value plus a $5 fee. For a list of recommended income funds, send stamped self-addressed envelope to this newspaper c/o Roger Spear.

Q: Can you give me any information on my 45 shares of Madison Square Garden (NYSE)? The shares keep going down and no dividends are paid. I know the market isn't good but I think I should get something from these shares. N.M.

A: Under terms of various loan agreements, payment of cash dividends is restricted. At the end of fiscal 1971, long-term debt amounted to $162 million, interest on which was $9.6 million. Although total revenues have moved up strongly in recent years, earnings have been sporadic and dividend payment is highly problematic. For this reason, I favor selling the shares and putting the cash in a savings account.

Good Pattern in Sight For House Of Fabrics

Q: I own 100 shares of House of Fabrics (ASE) bought at 25-5/8. I am wondering if I should sell with the competition in this line. M.C.

A: House of Fabrics is the leading domestic specialty fabric chain with 298 retail outlets nationwide. It is highly probable that a shakeout in the industry would be a plus for the firm. While competitive pricing is prevalent, House of Fabrics takes inventory write-downs on a monthly basis to keep prices up to date and to avoid any unusual year-end adjustments.

Following an excellent first quarter, House of Fabrics recently announced that its second quarter profit would be flat due to inclement weather and Easter falling in the first period. Revenues for the period should come in at $12.9 million, a 13% gain year to year.

The second quarter notwithstanding, House of Fabrics is expected to show overall improvement for the year. The present 8% industry growth rate is healthy and with the company's proven merchandising record and buying/distributing efficiencies, House of Fabrics should continue to outperform this pace. Averaging down is justified here.

Q: Kimberly-Clark has been strong recently. Why and is it a buy now? R.D.

A: A leading producer of trademarked consumer products, Kimberly-Clark (NYSE) recently reported second quarter earnings (ended June) of 60 cents a share, a 71% improvement over the 35 cents posted in 1971's comparable period. Sales were recorded at $243 million, up nearly 8% from the $226 million in 1971. This, plus the overall improving trend in the paper industry, has bolstered shares.

The company has compiled a rather erratic earnings pattern over the years, mainly a reflection of the highly fragmented and cyclical nature of the industry. However, as Kimberly's first half statistics indicate, strong gains are being made by most paper companies as production and the pricing structure have improved. Stock offers appreciation potential and may be bought on weakness.

WELFARE ROLLS DECLINE

JERUSALEM — The number of West Bank residents receiving welfare assistance declined from 200,000 under the Jordanian regime to 33,000 Social Welfare Minister Michael Hazani reported. He said that under the Jordanian administration many people received public assistance who did not qualify while many poor families were ignored. Among the current recipients of assistance are families of known terrorists. Government sources announced that more than 70,000 people from neighboring Arab states have crossed the Jordan River to spend their summer vacations in Israel and the occupied territories. Some 2000 people arrive every day from Jordan, Lebanon and Egypt, the sources said. An estimated 180,000 are expected to visit this summer.

NEW YORK: Possible successors of the late Goeran Gentele as general manager of the Metropolitan Opera include Paul-Francoise of the Comedie-Francaise, composer Rolf Liebermann, the Chicago Lyric Opera's Carol Fox, Egon Seefehner of the State Opera in Berlin, and Marcell Prawy of Vienna... Paul Gallico, who will be 75 next week, is working on a novel, a book of poetry and a screenplay.

When Pia Lindstrom of WCBS-TV spoke at the New York Television Academy's weekly Drop-In luncheon, she said she speaks fluent Italian which she used to get interviews during the investigation of the shooting of Joseph Colombo last year. She said her mother, Ingrid Bergman, can't understand how she conducts interviews without "lines" to memorize... "And I can't understand how my mother can work WITH lines."

Upon learning that Grove Press would publish Clifford Irving's story in September, Oscar Dystel, president of Bantam Books, called Viking Press' head, Tom Guinzberg, and got permission to publish a soft-cover edition of "Hoax: The Inside Story of the Howard Hughes-Clifford Irving Affair." Viking published the Pay-Chester-Linklater book May 15. The paperback will be out soon.

Mayor Lindsay's former special assistant, Sid Davidoff, will host a special screening of "Parades" for New York political figures. "Parades" is the anti-army movie... Warner Brothers will turn "Come Back Charleston Blue," the Godfrey Cambridge-Raymond St. Jacques movie, into a television series.

The Actors Fund of America has ordered Downey's team in the Broadway Show League out of the League next year. Also ejected were WCBS-TV, Actors' Studio, the Daily News and UPI teams. The fund, which sponsors the League this year, says it is trying "to limit the League to Broadway shows and legitimate theater groups only." On July 20 the teams from "Jesus Christ Superstar" and the Players Club forfeited their games. They never showed up. "Sugar" has missed two games this season.

When Sally Benson of the New Yorker staff was writing her book, "Junior Miss," she asked her publisher what kind of photograph he wanted for the publicity release. Miss Benson, who died recently, wrote under the pen name of Esther Everts, and her works included "Meet Me in St. Louis." The publisher thought for a minute and then suggested: "Let's use a nude photo of you, lying on a white bearskin." A few days later the photo arrived, with the message:

"Will this do?" It showed Sally Benson, without clothes, but covered by a few veils, lying on her leopard coat.

Receives Light Sentence As Draft Dodger In USSR

MOSCOW — Gavril I. Shapiro, the Jewish activist who has sought emigration to Israel and has evaded active duty as a reserve officer in the Soviet armed forces, was sentenced last week to one year's correctional work without loss of freedom.

The relatively light sentence was imposed on Mr. Shapiro after a three-hour trial. It means that he will probably be assigned to a job in Moscow, with up to 20 percent of his pay deducted by the state.

Judith Silver of Cincinnati, who was married to Mr. Shapiro last month in a religious ceremony not recognized by the Soviet authorities, sought to re-enter the Soviet Union without a visa, but was turned away on arrival at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport.

On her return to the United States she called on President Nixon to intercede on behalf of her Soviet husband by taking time out from trade negotiations with the Soviet Union and looking into "agreements on human and individual rights."

Mr. Shapiro, a 27-year-old chemical engineer, said after the trial in a Moscow borough court that he would appeal the sentence. Outside of the court building he was greeted by friends who gave him flowers and kisses and flung him into the air. The proceedings inside had been barred to foreign newsmen.

A red-haired man with a neatly trimmed beard, Mr. Shapiro credited his wife's vigorous publicity campaign on his behalf in the United States for the lenient sentence. Under Article 80 of the criminal code, covering evasion of a call to active service, Mr. Shapiro could have been sentenced to up to three years imprisonment.

Mr. Shapiro has said that he resisted the call-up on the ground that active service in the Soviet armed forces would expose him to secret information, making it more difficult for him to obtain an emigration visa. An increasing number of applicants are being refused exit visas.

Mr. Shapiro failed to report for a period of active service in May. In June he came out of hiding to marry Miss Silver and to apply for a Soviet civil wedding license. The date of August 30 was set for the civil proceeding.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Shapiro's visa expired and she was forced to return to the United States. Shortly after having seen her off, Mr. Shapiro was arrested on the charge of evading military service, but was released 18 days later on his own recognizance, an unusual step under Soviet criminal procedure and one that is attributed to the publicity campaign on his behalf.

A friend of Mr. Shapiro's,

Mark Nashpits, who has been held on similar charges, has had no advocate for his cause in the United States and has not benefited from such leniency. Unlike Mr. Shapiro, Mr. Nashpits has not been freed and still is awaiting trial.

Judith Shapiro said here that she was "relieved" to hear that her Russian husband had received a relatively light sentence.

NAMED CO CHAIRMEN: Alan Samdperil and James Winoker have been appointed co-chairmen of the Initial Gifts Division for the Providence area for the 1972 campaign of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, it has been announced by Albert I. Gordon, general campaign chairman. Vice chairmen for the Providence area will be announced at a later date. Executive vice president of B.B. Greenberg Company, Mr. Winoker is vice president of Temple Emanu-El. He was associate chairman of the Initial Gifts Division in last year's campaign. Mr. Samdperil, vice president of the New England Metals Company of Providence, is a member of the board of directors of Temple Emanu-El and chairman of the Temple Emanu-El Youth Commission. He was co-chairman of the Initial Gifts Division last year.

Continue Protests Against Opening of London PLO Office

LONDON — British Jewry continued to press its campaign to persuade the government to prevent the opening of a Palestine Liberation Organization office here. A delegation from the Board of Deputies of British Jews visited Home Secretary Reginald Maudling to express the Anglo-Jewish community's concern. The PLO is the umbrella organization for Palestinian terrorist groups.

The Board of Deputies delegation, headed by president Michael M. Fidler, was told again by Maudling that the government had no legal means to prevent the office from opening. He said, however, that he understood the anxiety caused by the planned office and would reflect carefully on the representations that have been made.

The Herut movement here announced that it had postponed plans for a public protest march and would coordinate its efforts against the PLO office with other Jewish bodies. The Herut statement said the postponement took into consideration "the present stage of the campaign and the desirability of coordinated action in this connection." It expressed satisfaction with a decision by the British Zionist Federation to organize a public demonstration against the PLO office if the current campaign yields no results.

(Two leaders of the United Zionists — Revisionists of America disclosed in New York that they had met with two British diplomats to protest the PLO office. Prof. Martin Feinstein, public affairs director, and Joseph Greenblatt, executive director, said they had had "a lengthy discussion" on the issue with Cyril A. Lovitt, the Deputy Consul General of Britain in New York NY, and Stephen Day, first Secretary of the British UN Mission.)

Concurrently, Mrs. June Jacobs, chairman of the Association of Jewish Women's Organizations in the United Kingdom, wrote to Home Secretary Reginald Maudling protesting the opening of the terrorist group office. Voicing her opinion on behalf of the association's 80,000 members, Mrs. Jacobs said: "While appreciating that there is no legal reason why this office should not be opened, I do ask for your assurance its existence could in no way constitute a danger here or abroad."

HUC To Start Construction Of New Multi-Purpose Wing

JERUSALEM — Jerusalemites will soon see new building going up on one of this city's few remaining vacant lots. The lot will be the site of a new, multi-purpose wing of Hebrew Union College. When completed in three or four years, the wing will contain a public library with works in many languages relating to Jews and Judaism throughout the world, a special library for scholars and a world center for Progressive Judaism.

Dr. Alfred Gottschalk, president of HUC, said that he sees in the new wing a symbol of the increasing acceptance by Israel of Reform Judaism, called Progressive Judaism here. Gottschalk called the government's 99-year lease of the lot to HUC "the greatest gesture of confidence a government can show an institution, encouraging it to grow and expand."

Things have not always been easy for the Progressive movement in Israel, Dr. Gottschalk said. He revealed that it took the late Dr. Nelson Glueck, former head of HUC, seven years to complete the school's present building, although two years should have been sufficient. Gottschalk said, "the delay was caused by the (Orthodox) National Religious Party, and if Levi Eshkol, Ben-Gurion and Golda Meir and others in government and municipality circles had not fought on principle to help us, it would have been impossible to complete the building."

In a country where the prevailing attitude toward religion is one of "all or nothing" Progressive Judaism has a difficult task convincing people that religion is open to reinterpretation, the Reform leader said. The movement does have a sizeable following in university and government circles, where there are many who have had exposure to the West.

FILES LIBEL SUIT COPENHAGEN — Dr. Michael Brojde-Trepper who was the head of a Soviet spy ring in Western Europe in World War II, announced here he had filed a libel suit against Jean Rochet, head of the French counter espionage service. Rochet had charged that Leopold Trepper had collaborated with the Nazis during World War II. The case will come to trial October 11.

RECEIVE MONEY NEW YORK — A spokesman for the Jewish Defense League said that some money and pledges had not been received in a JDL effort to raise $105,000 in bail money for three JDL members who were arrested in the January 26 firebombings of two Manhattan booking agencies which handle Soviet artists.

Only In America
Arabs and Jews
By Harry Golden

In view of the many erroneous and unfair statements about the Mideast, the following facts are submitted for your consideration: (1) Palestine was never at any time in all history, an Arab state; (2) Both Egypt and Jordan invaded Palestine in 1947, in defiance of UN partition plans; (3) There were never any "Arab Refugees" in the state of Egypt at any time.
Zionism is a movement to reestablish a "secure" state of Israel to which every Jew may go as of right to live within peaceful borders.
A Zionist is any person who supports that "movement," regardless of race, creed or nationality. Every U.S. president since John Quincy Adams, who in 1812 advocated a Jewish state, were Zionists. Prince Feisel and Pope John were Zionists. One need not be a Jew to be a Zionist, nor a non-Jew to be an anti-Semite.

"National Homeland," as used in the World's League of Nations Mandate in 1922, that specifically incorporated and implemented the Balfour Declaration, means a state, controlled by a specific national and ethnic group.
Israel was not born in 1948. Israel was not conceived nor invented by the UN. Israel was created 5,000 years ago. Israel was merely reestablished in 1948, from the prophetic "dry bones" after a lapse of 2,000 years of foreign rule. Two thousand years is a long time, but their eviction was no fault of the Jews. Israel was not revived to solve a non-Jewish problem.

Annexation is inapplicable to the liberated and reoccupied areas of Israel; areas the Romans renamed Palestine. One need not "annex" that which was rightfully his, nor Parts of Palestine vis a vis Israel.
Rejoining East and West Germany, or East and West Berlin, would not be erroneously called "annexation," by either side of the Rhine. It's reunion. "Annexation" does apply to Jordan's invasion of the West bank and East Jerusalem in 1948; also to Egypt's annexation of the Gaza area of Palestine, and to the Sinai desert less than 50 years ago.

"Arab Refugees" didn't exist before foreign, outside Arab states invaded Israel in 1948. (There were thousands of Jewish refugees during the last 2,000 years.) Displaced Arabs became fugitives from one area of Palestine to another area in Palestine, after Jordan and Egypt "annexed" or misappropriated the areas of Palestine, that these same Arabs were living in, or had fled to.
Direct negotiation has always been the only road to a real peace. But the Arabs refuse to negotiate. The Arabs threaten to solve the foregoing problems by either war, or Israel's surrender. Israel seeks to dissolve these dissolve these problems by peaceful "direct negotiations" without any "preconditions."

Israeli Books Sought
By Arab Readers

JERUSALEM — Israeli books, translated into Arabic, have recently become a sought-after item on the Arab market, more so almost than books on sex — and all this because of compliance with the motto "know thine enemy."
This complaint was issued by the Palestinian writer Mamoud Darwish, in an article in the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram. Darwish, a former correspondent for "Al Itihad," a newspaper which was published in Haifa, expresses annoyance and complains bitterly that libraries in Arab countries have become distribution centers for Israeli books.
"The many downfalls we have suffered, which stemmed from a lack of knowledge of our enemy, have pushed us to the other extreme," Darwish writes.
"So much so, that books on religion and sex in Arab libraries have made way for Israeli literature, which is widely circulated in the Arab countries. The situation has deteriorated to a dangerous level. We have reached a point where the boundaries between "knowledge" and "propaganda" have become blurred.
Ignorance of Israeli society may well have been one of the factors of Arab defeats, especially during the Six-Day War, Darwish notes. "The Arab has almost lost his faith in the

South American Rabbi Heads Chile Congregation

NEW YORK — "Judaism is maintained in South America by a miracle." So says Rabbi Angel Kreiman, a 27-year-old Argentine-born lawyer ordained by the Conservative rabbinical seminary in Buenos Aires.
Rabbi Kreiman flew to Santiago, Chile recently to take over the pulpit at the largest synagogue there, the Circulo Israelita, and to minister to a Jewish community of 1000 families who have been without a rabbi for nearly two years.
Chile, with a Jewish population of 30,000, 90 percent in Santiago, once had five rabbis. By 1970, when Marxist President Salvador Allende was elected, only two remained and they have left since, Rabbi Kreiman said.

But he was not certain whether Allende's taking office had anything to do with their departure.
He said, "There is a problem of leaders, of ideas, of rabbis, of everything. Judaism is maintained in South America by a miracle. The future lies with modern Jewish education that can give South American youth values to be identified as Jews. Jewish religious problems are also social problems. That must be the Jewish purpose and the purpose of a rabbi — not to speak of a theoretical Torah but a practical Torah. Words are not important if there is no actual work. I am going to teach. A rabbi's prime purpose has to be to teach."
Rabbi Kreiman said he would concentrate on youth in his new post because the elders "are already used to having no rabbi." The youthful rabbi is no stranger to Chile. Between 1968-70 he commuted weekly by air from Buenos Aires to Santiago to conduct Sabbath services in the Chilean capital's biggest synagogue which had no rabbi even then.
During 1970-72 he served in Baranquilla, Colombia where, he said, the Jewish community was typical of Latin America. "It had no rabbi for 30 years."
Rabbi Kreiman is a fourth generation Argentinean. He said that his great-great-grandfather was among the first Russian Jews to immigrate to Argentina under the aegis of Baron Maurice de Hirsch, the Munich-born philanthropist who established Jewish agricultural colonies in the Argentine with what Kreiman calls "Jewish gauchos." He said 70 percent of Argentine Jewry now is native-born.
Rabbi Kreiman is married and the father of a daughter. He was ordained by the Seminario Rabbinico Latino Americano, a Conservative seminary founded in Buenos Aires 12 years ago which is affiliated with the World Council of Synagogues. The young rabbi speaks seven languages, including English, Yiddish and Hebrew.
If Santiago now has a rabbi it still lacks other essentials of a Jewish religious life. There is no resident mohel and kosher meat must be flown in from Buenos Aires.

publicity media and therefore, in his search for truth, he turns to the Israeli broadcasts and publications."
The attitude of Arabs as a result of the influx of Israeli books has changed from one of contempt to an exaggerated appreciation bordering on admiration, Darwish writes. Not only that, but the more the Arab press disseminates stories about the Israeli Panthers, which was viewed as an Israeli internal collapse, and frontpaged Moshe Dayan's divorce as a sign of growing immorality, the more Arabs admired Israel.
"In fact, however, those very reports aroused admiration in the Arab public, which saw Israel's society as a true and healthy form of life where workers could strike, and students could criticize government policy, without causing internal upheavals."
Darwish declared that while it is the duty of Arabs to know "the enemy," this obligation must not be confused with a readiness to conduct "his propaganda for him." He calls for "guidance and control" in the dissemination of Israeli books and literature in Arab countries.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Every few months the American Contract Bridge schedules a special Charity Duplicate Tournament which is run simultaneously all over the country. Pre-computer-dealt hands are sent to each of the Clubs holding this game which are kept sealed until game time and then each table makes up a set of boards from a sheet given them. Before they play these boards the first moved is called for obviously no one should play hands he has already seen. At the end another sealed envelope is opened with the expert analysis of all the hands. Today's hand came from the most recent game. It is interesting because the normal result should be down one. In each of the sections one pair was able to make the hand. I was too busy to follow the hand along so I'm not certain how much help they were given by the defenders but there is one good way to try to make the hand.

Mrs. Edith Sudikoff and Alan Gertsacov were North and South, one of the two successful pairs. No one was vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

 W 4♣ End 2♠ P

West's normal lead is the Diamond Jack won by Declarer. Look at all the hands now and see how many possibilities there are. If Trumps are drawn, two Hearts, a Diamond, and a Club must be lost. They would take nine tricks. As you can see, the same nine tricks are right there for the taking in No Trump but no one landed in game there.

If, before drawing Trumps, Declarer decides to try for a Diamond ruff, East will ruff the second high Diamond. Now Declarer will have to be careful or he will go down two as several did. He must ruff that small Diamond later with a high Trump. The best way to try to make the hand, which can always be set with good defense as the cards happen to be, is to go to a high Trump in Dummy and lead a Diamond back to the high ones. If East ruffs you must go down one but he might not want to ruff what could easily be a loser with so many Trumps so he might discard. Now the hand can be made if that small Diamond is ruffed high and subsequently a finesse is taken against East's 10, not too far-fetched when you already know that West has six Diamonds and East only one.

If East had happened to have had three Trumps then that would definitely have been the right way to make the hand for now when that Diamond is played and he ruffs it he will have but two Trumps left. When these are drawn there will still be one in Dummy, those two losing Clubs in Dummy can be discarded on the other two high Diamonds and the deuce ruffed in Dummy. Unfortunately, this can't work when East has the extra Trump but good technique is still good technique and one must give himself every extra chance. If East had had three Trumps the only right way to make the hand was to go to Dummy and lead from there to the Diamond suit.

There was one possible way for the North-South pairs to end in Three No Trump. If, after North raises South to two Spades, South bids Diamonds and North mentions the Heart suit, now South might decide to try three No Trump. North, with only three Spades, might leave it there and be quite happy with the result. I am not saying that that is the right thing to do, I would still go back to Spades but it could happen that way. I am sure that somewhere in the country some pairs did just that. At my game every pair was in Spades.

Moral: If you suspect that a player sitting in front of a high honor is void and might ruff that honor if it is played, arrange to play up to it, letting him ruff a loser instead of a winner, if possible.

Arabs Protest Decision On Return To Baram

JERUSALEM — Former residents of Baram, an Arab village on the Lebanese border evacuated for security reasons in 1948, demonstrated outside the Knesset to protest the Cabinet decision barring their return to the site of their former homes.

The Cabinet held that the security considerations that prevailed 25 years ago were still valid and that the inhabitants of Baram and its sister village of Ikrit could not return.

REAPPOINTED: Edward I. Friedman, Rhode Island attorney, was reappointed as State Committee member, representing the State of Rhode Island, of the American Trial Lawyers' Association.

Mr. Friedman recently returned from a week long legal seminar held in St. Louis, Missouri. Mr. Friedman has served as national chairman of the association's Workmen's Compensation Section, and as a member of the board of governors representing the first circuit which includes Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Puerto Rico.

Representatives of the Baram demonstrators were received in the Knesset by members of the Labor Alignment. They told the MK's they did not consider the Cabinet's ruling final. The issue of Baram and Ikrit was brought to the attention of Premier Golda Meir by Archbishop Joseph Raya of the Maronite church, the spiritual leader of the villagers. He accepted Mrs. Meir's proposal some weeks ago that they abide by whatever the Cabinet decided.

Raya is abroad and could not be reached for comment. Most of the villages presently live at Gush Halab and Raame. But recently they have expressed dissatisfaction with their relocation and the compensation offered them for their lost property. They insist on returning to their old homes even though Ikrit and Baram were razed in 1953 for security reasons and the surrounding land comprises a security buffer zone.

The villagers have won a certain amount of sympathy for their cause from some prominent Israelis. The Cabinet's decision barring their return was not unanimous. It was opposed by four ministers, Natan Peltz and Victor Shemtov of Mapam, Minister of Tourism Moshe Kol of the Independent Liberals and one of the top figures of the Labor Party, Deputy Premier and Education Minister Yigal Allon.

BONN — The Jewish Theater of Warsaw will perform in West Germany for the first time in the theater's history, sources here reported. The group will perform before German audiences in various cities throughout the Federal Republic. Performances will be in German, though the group usually performs in Yiddish. An Israeli theatrical troupe from Tel Aviv is also scheduled to perform in German cities at the beginning of 1973, the sources reported.

PASS BUDGET

JERUSALEM — After 70 meetings, a marathon final session and three readings, the Knesset — three months behind schedule — finally approved the 1972-73 State budget of $3.9 billion.

CLEAR OF CHARGES JERUSALEM — A three-man State committee of inquiry has cleared Mordechai Friedman of all charges of mismanagement and corruption brought against him in his capacity as managing director of the government-owned Netivei Neft Oil Company drilling for oil in the Sinai. Friedman was cleared in a majority report signed by Supreme Court Justice Albert Vitkon, the committee chairman, and one of its lay members, Abraham Kalir, an industrialist. The other lay member, Reserve Meir Zorea, dissented. The hearings lasted over four months. Also cleared of charges was Deputy Finance Minister Zvi Dinstein.

Claims Cigarette Smoking Is Violation Of Jewish Law

NEW YORK — A physician who is an authority on Jewish medical ethics claims in a book just published by Yeshiva University that cigarette smoking is a violation of Jewish laws because it is contrary to the Biblical injunction against intentionally placing one's life in danger.

In a series of topical essays titled "Modern Medicine and Jewish Law," Dr. Fred Rosner, chief of the hematological division at Queens Hospital Center, noted that "in light of the overwhelming medical evidence providing the casual relationship of cigarette smoking to cancer of the lung, heart disease and chronic bronchitis, Jewish law absolutely prohibits this practice."

He cited the Biblical passage (Deut. 4:9) as the injunction against smoking. The avoidance of danger, Dr. Rosner wrote, is stressed throughout the Bible, Talmud and Codes of Jewish law and is exemplified in the positive commandment of making a parapet for one's roof (Deut. 22:8) so that no man may fall therefrom.

Dr. Rosner urged the Jewish community to marshal its forces against smoking. He suggested that rabbis give up smoking "in order to practice what they preach and teach by example."

Hello Again!

ADVICE: "Don't try to throw the knuckleball as an adult unless you threw it as a kid." Now I don't know how many of you are planning to go out in the back yard with Junior and try throwing the "knuckler," but I forward that advice to you as "Lesson No. 1" from Hoyt Wilhelm in a story in SPORT magazine. "Lesson No. 2": "Don't try to be a parttime knuckler." There are five lessons in the article but I'm sure you'll be satisfied for the time being with just two. Wilhelm is teaching Wilbur Wood to become a baffling, blooper, knuckler.

Ralph Ginzburg Paroled After Eight Months In Jail

WASHINGTON — The United States Parole Board granted parole last Friday to Ralph Ginzburg, the former publisher of Eros, a quarterly magazine, who was convicted of sending obscene material through the mail.

Ginzburg, who is 42 years old, will be released from prison October 11. He will have served eight months of a three-year sentence.

Ginzburg was found guilty in 1963 at Federal District Court in Philadelphia of violating an 1872 law against pornography. After years of appeals, the Supreme Court upheld the decision by a 5-to-4 vote and, at the time, created the doctrine of "pandering."

Under that doctrine, the Court said, Ginzburg could be prosecuted because he advertised the sexual aspects of Eros and other publications. The "pandering" standard had not been applied before and has not been used since.

Ralph Ginzburg has published a number of magazines, all of which were given lively promotion campaigns. Eros was a quarterly "devoted to the joys of love." Fact magazine was a venture in muckraking. Avante-Garde was a journal pledged to give "an orgasm of the mind."

Ginzburg's current venture is a consumer newsletter called Moneysworth, which was promoted across the country in advertisements that stated, "You're being robbed." Subscribers were offered as a bonus a home medical guide that was dated 1971 but turned out to have been written in Germany at least 20 years ago.

Ginzburg, who was born in Brooklyn in October, 1929, showed an early interest in publishing.

At 23, he earned $15,000 a year supervising about two dozen other workers and a $2-million advertising budget for Look magazine. In 1956, he became the articles editor for Esquire magazine. He left Esquire after publishing and promoting a book from an article entitled "An Unhurried View of Erotica."

Ginzburg started Eros on Valentine's Day in 1962 because he felt that a "really good magazine on love and sex" could be profitable and because "sex is what life is all about," he once recalled in an interview.

Within the year, with its fourth issue in the mails to about 150,000 subscribers, he was indicted.

Emphasizes Need In Future Of Greater Railroad Network

JERUSALEM — Transport Minister Shimon Peres has outlined a five-point program in the Knesset designed to modernize Israel's transportation facilities at home and overseas. Peres said "it was a mistake and it would be a mistake in the future to let this country's transportation depend on cars and vehicles alone."

Peres was referring to the emphasis on highway transport in Israel and the relative neglect of the country's railroads. One point of his plan calls for an electrified railroad network in the greater Tel Aviv area which holds the country's greatest concentration of population. Peres' plan would cost nearly $38 million in its entirety by the end of 1977. But he said that before this money is committed the authorities must change their outlook and methods of financial calculation.

He said that to facilitate tourism, his Ministry plans to expand Lydda Airport and to build additional air fields capable of handling jumbo jets.

RESUME RELATIONS

WASHINGTON — The United States and Yemen formally resumed diplomatic relations, the State Department announced. The move, symbolized by an exchange of toasts between US Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Yemeni Premier and Foreign Minister Moshen el-Ayni in Sana, ended a breach that dated from June, 1967 when Yemen broke relations with Washington during the Arab-Israeli Six-Day War.

"Look for the story behind the news" while offering advice. When Leo Frye, the famed sportsman- "Tobacco-lycoon" closed his last shop recently, George E. Thornton also went into retirement. Mr. Thornton had been with Mr. Frye for 23 years. And the story behind the story: George Thornton had been night manager for the once tremendously popular Wightman's Diner on the Providence Boston road. Being a true sportsman with a wealth of material for stories. Mr. Thornton recalls when participants and fans ascended on Wightman's every night in the week. And now it is no more. Many memories and many stories could be told.

AN ANSWER: Leo Frye was always the answer to a quandary concerning what to write. His associates number the greatest of the great in the world of sport and he has souvenirs for proof of his acquaintances. Among them: Babe Ruth, Mel Allen, Joe DiMaggio, Benny Leonard (one of the greatest boxers of them all) and others including golfer Tommy Volt with whom Leo toured the fairways in Florida recently. Mr. Frye, when sought out in his last remaining store of a once widely-spread tobacco empire, would always be ready with a yarn, seldom mentioning his many charitable works.

GREAT CATCHER (Also a sports encyclopedia personified): Barney Burke was an outstanding catcher when behind the plate for the Classical High School teams that were coached by a stalwart athlete of integrity, the late and great Gus McNamee. And, an almost unbelievable note, is that the pitcher, in the battery combination with Barney, had only one leg, wearing an artificial kind. A recent item mentioned old theaters, including the "Union Theatre" and recalling its opening which someone said was on a Fourth of July when Willard won from Johnson in Havana. Barney Burke disputed the date, saying that — (Let him tell it "I remember getting out of Classical High at 2 p.m. and going down to Turks Head Square where the Providence Tribune was relaying, to a large crowd, a blow by blow account of the encounter. It couldn't have taken place on the Fourth of July because we didn't have school sessions on that holiday." And Barney, you are so right. John Houston supplies the info concerning Willard and Johnson. Jess Willard kayoed Jack Johnson on April 15, 1915; it was the Jack Dempsey-Jess Willard championship battle that took place on July Fourth and it was in 1919.

GREAT SPORT (But kinda tough on the fish): The Martha's Vineyard Fishing Club, last year's second place club overall in the R.J. Schaefer Salt Water Fishing Contest, is among the leaders again this year. Hmpf, you might say, that's natural for an island club is it? Well, the Woonsocket Striper Club is in ninth place among 23 clubs listed. And you can't say, "Woonsocket By The Sea." ALARMING! The "Schaefer Spotlight" newsletter includes a story that reports bottom-dwelling marine life in the New York Bight (from the eastern tip of Long Island to Atlantic City) has suffered a severe and serious reduction both in numbers of species and total population. The cause: Burial beneath tons of dredging spoils and sewage sludge, oxygen reduction, and poisoning by the heavy metals associated with waste materials! If something isn't done about pollution, including the deafening noise of unmuffled cars and cycles, we humans will be reduced along with the fish. — CARRY ON!

Arab Women On Trial For Part In Hijacking Of Sabena Plane

RISHON LE ZION, Israel — Two young Arab women accused of participating in the hijacking in May of a Sabena airliner bound for the Tel Aviv airport went on trial this week before a military tribunal.

Two men, the principals in the act of piracy, were shot to death when Israeli troops stormed aboard the Boeing 707 at the airport, in an operation directed by Defense Minister Moshe Dayan. A young Israeli woman died later of wounds she suffered in the assault.

The plane, seized during a scheduled flight from Brussels to Tel Aviv, landed at its destination on the hijackers' orders. In return for its release, the hijackers demanded the freeing of about 300 Arab terrorists from Israeli prisons. They threatened to blow up the plane and its passengers if their demand was not met.

The women defendants — Rima Issa Tannous, 21 years old, and Theresa Halasseh, 18, faced the three-member court, including a woman major, in the same barracks at the Zrifin army camp where last month Kozo Okamoto was sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in the airport massacre by Japanese terrorists on May 30.

The two women pleaded not guilty to a four-count indictment without, however, challenging the accuracy of the account of the acts of which they are accused. Their court-appointed lawyers made evident that they intended to concede the essentials of the prosecution's version of the dramatic events in midair and in the long hours on the ground preceding the final shoot-out but would contend that the women acted under pressure exerted by their two accomplices.

Miss Tannous and Miss Halasseh are charged with bearing weapons and explosive charges and planting bombs, and with being members of Al Fatah, the illegal Arab terrorist organization. The death penalty is possible, theoretically, but is unlikely to be requested.

The women appeared in court in sporty, bright slacks and sweaters, their hair carefully arranged and wearing make-up. Despite the heavy security precautions around the courtroom, they were guarded only by two unarmed women soldiers.

As the first witness, an Israeli passenger on the plane, gave a detailed narrative of the journey, the accused appeared composed and interested. Their composure gave way to whispers and angry and hurt looks between them when a long statement made by Miss Tannous after her capture was read.

The statement, in which the young woman depicted herself as neglected and abused since childhood, told also of sexual promiscuity among male Al Fatah activists and their female companions. Miss Halasseh, whose father was in court, flared up when the Tannous statement described her as having a reputation in Al Fatah circles as particularly promiscuous.

For the rest of the session, the women paid little attention to the proceedings and argued with each other and the court interpreter.

Far from espousing the revolutionary ideals of Al Fatah, Miss Tannous in her statement said that she had been coerced into the organization by circumstances and by men, who she said had been unkind to her all her life.

She said that she never knew her parents and was reared in a convent in her native Bethlehem. She said that she was taught nothing, knew more French than Arabic, although she can hardly read or write either language, and was frequently punished by nuns for stealing food brought to the children, who were not orphans, by their parents.

According to her statement she was taken to Jordan during the six-day war in 1967 and was raped by the son of the family that took her in. The physician who attended her after that initiated her into Fatah activities, of which he was a principal organizer, and forced her to become his mistress at the age of 16, the statement added.

When the Jordanian army moved against the Palestinian guerrillas in 1970, Miss Tannous said, she was beaten and tortured by the Jordanian police to make her reveal her knowledge of Al Fatah activities. This incurred for her the hostility of Fatah, who took her to Syria, where she said, she was drugged and raped by guerrillas before consenting more willingly.

After that, she said she was sent to Lebanon for training in the use of arms. It was there that she reported she first met the other defendant and the two male hijackers.

On May 2, accompanied by one of the men, Miss Tannous stated, she left the Beirut airport, a belt of heavy explosives under her dress and a wrapped pistol in her handbag. They joined forces with the other pair in Brussels, but Miss Tannous said she did not know the purpose of the arms and the nature of their mission until they were seated aboard the plane.

Over Yugoslavia, those arms, as well as hand grenades and a wired box apparently containing explosives, were brandished by the four and used to subdue crew and passengers.

France Hopes To Take Role In Middle East Talks

PARIS — Foreign Minister Murad Ghaleb of Egypt is coming to Paris next week on what is styled a private visit. But it is expected that a proposal will be put to him for France to act as intermediary in negotiations between Israel and the Arab countries.

The French would seek to speak on behalf of Europe, since, they believe, both the United States and the Soviet Union have been discredited as useful mediators in the Middle East.

It is felt here that Europe through the voice of France, should try now.

Paris is not planning to offer any substantive suggestions, but rather a new procedure for seeking a settlement. Preliminary soundings have indicated that the Egyptians would welcome the idea since they hope that it would mean that oil-hungry Western Europe would put pressure on Israel through its ability to grant or withhold Common Market trade concessions.

The planned diplomatic initiative consists more of public display than any expectation of actual results. Neither the French nor the Israelis really believe that the initiative can produce much more than headlines, which they readily admit in private, and there is no sign that the Egyptians seek more from a new mediation attempt than some outside pressure on Israel.

Nonetheless, France is eager to demonstrate political leadership in the Mediterranean area — Mediterranean regionalism was an important topic at the high-level French-Italian meeting last week.

The timing is considered all the more favorable because reliable reports reaching Paris indicate that the Soviet Union is withdrawing more of its forces from Egypt than had been anticipated — perhaps more than President Anwar el-Sadat had intended when he ordered Soviet advisers out of the country.

According to these reports, Soviet Missile and MIG-23 crews are going home with their planes but not their missiles, leaving Egypt vulnerable once again to deep attacks by the Israeli Air Force.

Five Sentenced For Massacre Role

MOSCOW — Two brothers have been sentenced to death and three other Ukrainians to 15-year and 10-year terms in labor camps for their roles in a Nazi massacre of 2,500 Jews in the wartime Ukraine, according to a copy of the local newspaper, Pravda Ukrainy, which reached here.

All five served as policemen in the Rafalovka area of the Ukraine and in 1942, during the Nazi occupation, took part in the shooting there of 2,500 old men, women and children from a Jewish ghetto, the newspaper said.

The trial ended earlier this month in the town of Vladimirets, in the western Ukraine. The accused avoided arrest after the war by "camouflaging themselves with the guise of decent people," Pravda Ukrainy said.

Prepare For Demonstrations Against Reopened Sex Shop

JERUSALEM — Jerusalem police were preparing for possible demonstrations by ultra-Orthodox elements against the Eros "sex boutique" which was shut down by the Municipality two weeks ago but reopened in a somewhat different guise.

The shop, which accepted mail orders for erotic photographs and "sexual aids" was closed down because it lacked a license, a move that apparently satisfied the Orthodox who had been picketing and praying in front of the establishment because it "profaned" the Holy City. The shop opened its doors again but only as a place where customers might peruse catalogues of erotica. As no money was exchanged, its owners claimed it is no longer a shop and does not require a license.

The Municipality took no action. A police spokesman said that he was prepared to take Amram Blau, leader of the ultra-Orthodox Neturei Karta sect, into the shop to convince him that it has been "cleaned up." The parent Eros shop in Tel Aviv was fire-bombed three weeks ago.

Two yeshiva students are being held without bail in connection with the bombing.

JUDAIC STUDIES
DETROIT — A $40,000 Jewish Welfare Federation Grant to the University of Michigan will make it possible for Jewish students to major in Judaic studies, according to Federation officials. The program to make such majors possible is being formulated by university officials with the assistance of the Jewish Community Foundation of the United Jewish Charities. The three-year grant from the foundation will enable the university to engage an assistant professor of Jewish history. The appointment will make it possible to round out the present program of Jewish studies sufficiently for a Judaic studies major.

RELEASE ACTIVISTS
NEW YORK — Nine of the 10 Jewish activists arrested in Moscow before President Nixon's visit have been released since the President left the USSR, the National Conference on Soviet Jewry reported.

Any size fits.

U.S. Savings Bonds come in a lot of sizes. So do people. But unlike other gifts, you don't have to match the size of the Bond to the size of the person. Any size fits. That's what's so beautiful about Savings Bonds. There's no guessing. No worry. And no matter what size Bond you give it's a very personal gift. After all, you're helping a person with his future and that shows you care a lot. Give U.S. Savings Bonds. The gift idea that always fits.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Premier Golda Meir Appeals To Sadat For New Start Toward Peace In Mideast

of February 8, 1971, and the Government of Israel has no intention of altering the reply given on February 26 of that year."

About the extent of the Soviet withdrawal from Egypt, this was Mrs. Meir's summation:

"The Soviet Union stationed in Egypt more than 7,000 advisers, experts and instructors in all the armed forces, and close to 10,000 additional military personnel to operate squadrons of MIG-21 and other aircraft, SAM-3 and SAM-6 batteries and personnel in various command formations."

"The Egyptian demand for evacuation affects the entire establishment of advisers and experts, but not the instructors. The latter will continue to function. On the other hand, the demand for evacuation also affects the Soviet operational units which are integrated in the Egyptian air defense system. It appears that the SAM-3 batteries and perhaps also the interceptor squadrons have been handed over to the Egyptians."

"The evacuation decision does not — at least at this stage — affect Soviet forces and positions in Egypt which serve the strategic objectives of the Soviet Union in the region."

U.S. Intelligence Sources Say Soviet Union Removing Most Of Its Warplanes

along with about six highly advanced MIG-23 jets, 18 TU-16's and a number of transport and cargo planes for a total of over 100 aircraft.

The TU-16's, known in the West as Badgers, are normally assigned to the Soviet naval air force. Twelve of them were reported sent to Egypt late last year and six, equipped with air-to-surface rocket-powered Kelt missiles, reportedly arrived in January.

Most of these aircraft, according to United States intelligence quarters, tracked American warships in the Mediterranean from Egyptian bases. Some TU-16's had been spotted flying with Egyptian insignias earlier this year.

Recommends Cut Of 50% In Forest Hills

The project has been a political thorn in the side of Mayor Lindsay, who said that he would study the recommendations before determining whether to submit the compromise plan to the Board of Estimate. The board members also declined substantive comment until they studied the report.

Mr. Cuomo's proposal for the "scatter-site" would scale down the project from three 24-story buildings to three 12-story buildings, reducing the number of apartments from 840 to 432.

The city would be required to provide $2.4-million in construction costs to build the reduced project, because the cost for each unit would exceed Federal guidelines.

"I see it as the necessary price for assuring the project's success," Mr. Cuomo said in a 24-page report. "The amount at stake is nearly incalculable; the investment is a good one."

Mr. Cuomo said that the principal objection to the project on the part of the predominantly Jewish community was "class, not race."

"If you built totally luxurious units, totally occupied by middle-income blacks — lawyers, accountants, media people — I don't think anybody would move out," he told the news conference.

Mr. Cuomo said in his report that the "principal problem" was the concern of many in the community that the placing of 840 low-income units in their midst "would bring as its inevitable concomitant increasing crime, vandalism, exodus and deterioration."

"This fear, in turn, has created hostility," he said. "I am persuaded that unless this fear is in some manner mitigated, the possibility that the project will be jeopardized by large numbers of people leaving Forest Hills is a real one."

Mr. Cuomo said the city would then be faced with "a bizarre irony." "It would then have created by the project precisely what it sought to avoid, another racially concentrated low-income community, and the net result would have been to spread the ghetto instead of containing it."

To assure passage of the compromise proposal by the Board of Estimate, Mr. Cuomo urged that "under no circumstances should the resubmission of the project to the Board of Estimate be framed so as to permit the killing of the entire project."

"I believe it is entirely possible to present to the board a tandem proposition that would replace the present plan and project only if the new one is adopted," the report said.

Israeli Supreme Court Releases Children To Wife

TEL AVIV — The Israeli Supreme Court, in Jerusalem last week, ordered a man divorced from a New York City woman to surrender two of their children to the former wife, ending her year-long battle. He gave her the children shortly afterward.

The woman, Miriam Steinberg of Brooklyn, said that she had arrived in Israel six weeks ago to seek custody of her two eldest children, Joel 10, and Tzipora Leah, 8.

She said that her former husband, an unemployed electrician when he lived in New York had taken them from her in

PROTEST TERRORISM
ROME — The Italian Communist Party sent a special envoy to Egypt, Syria and Lebanon to convey the party's condemnation of the May 30 Lydda Airport massacre and the use of similar terrorist methods. Reno Salati, the CP's representative, is scheduled to meet with government officials in the three Arab countries and with representatives of Palestinian guerrilla organizations. The Party reportedly instructed Salati to stress that terrorism seriously jeopardizes the Bologna Conference, which aims to serve as a bridge between Israel and the Arabs.

Episcopal, Catholic Remarry In Jewish Wedding Ceremony

NEW YORK — A few months before he was to have been ordained as an Episcopal priest in Santa Fe, New Mexico, James Richards and his wife, Wilma, a Roman Catholic, set down and talked about just what they felt themselves to be.

"Mama, we're Jewish," Mr. Richards concluded, and his wife agreed.

That was a year and a half ago. A week ago Tuesday — with their eight children looking on — the couple were remarried in an Orthodox Jewish ceremony at the home of Rabbi Leo Cogan in Belle Harbor, Queens.

The following day the entire family left for Israel to resettle there, in a total commitment to their new faith.

"You don't join the Jewish religion, you become a Jew," explained the 42-year-old groom as his three youngest sons, yarmulkes atop their blond crewcuts, scampered through the Cogan living room.

"We felt God wanted us to be Orthodox Jews," said Mr. Richards. And Israel seemed the logical place for them to be. They

Sister, Brother United In Pa. After 33 Years

NORTHEAST, Pa. — Mrs. Ruchel Szmulewicz thought her brother, Mayer Markowitz, from whom she had been separated in 1939 in Poland, was dead, but he believed she was alive, so he kept looking.

They were recently reunited here after 33 years when Mrs. Szmulewicz, who now lives in Melbourne, Australia, flew in.

The reunion came about when one of Mrs. Szmulewicz's friends spotted a newspaper ad placed by Mr. Markowitz in search of his sister.

The plan could be resubmitted only upon the application of the Housing Authority and Mayor Lindsay. It would then require a majority vote in the Board of Estimate.

Mr. Cuomo said that he expected community-wide support for the compromise, which will include 180 units for the elderly and cost a total of $23.7-million, and compared with $31.2-million for the present project.

"The problem is that only the extremists are heard," Mr. Cuomo said. "If you give the people of Forest Hills a project that they feel they can make work, they'll make it work."

June, 1971, when divorce proceedings were under way. The Steinbergs have two other children, Moshe, 5, and Shoshanna Rachel, 3. A state Supreme Court justice in Brooklyn had granted a divorce in February and awarded custody of all the children to Mrs. Steinberg, she said.

Her former husband could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. Steinberg who said she and her children were receiving welfare payments, said friends had paid for her round-trip ticket. She said that she had been told in New York that Mr. Steinberg had taken the children to Israel and that through friends in Israel she had found him in Tel Aviv four weeks ago.

DENY BOMBING
JERUSALEM — The Israeli Foreign Ministry regards as "utter nonsense" the suggestion by Arab terrorists, that Israel was responsible for the Beirut death of Ghassan Kanafani, a leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Kanafani, together with his 15-year-old niece, was killed when a bomb in his car blew up when he started the engine outside his home in the suburb of Hazmiva.

plan to spend five months at an "absorption center" in Carmel, where they will learn Hebrew, and then move to a frontier town and work in their former fields, Mr. Richards as a social worker, Mrs. Richards as a practical nurse.

The decision to convert did not come suddenly. Mr. Richards had never fully accepted the teaching that Christ was divine, although Mr. Richards was born an Episcopalian, was raised as a Catholic by adoptive parents and then returned to the Episcopal Church as an adult.

On the other hand, it did not occur to him for a long time to become a Jew. "For someone born and raised as a Christian, it's a thing you don't think of," he said.

During a period of almost five years, when he studied for the ministry under the guidance of a priest while working as a prison parole and probation officer in Santa Fe, Mr. Richards became increasingly interested in the Judaic roots of Christianity.

In the course of long discussions, he and his wife came to feel that the "values, life-style and approach" of Judaism coincided with their own. And so Mr. Richards went to see a rabbi one day and "shocked him half to death" by telling him, "we want to find out from Jews if we are Jews."

They started reading Jewish books, instead of reading outside sources about Judaism, and then, Mrs. Richards reported, "all kinds of bells started ringing."

Mrs. Richards took a little longer to reach a firm decision, she said. "It was a large change in my life and I fought (Orthodox observance) for awhile."

"Sure, it takes effort," she added, recalling the need for separate meat and dairy dishes, and the shipments from a Kosher butcher in El Paso. "But it's a very comfortable pattern when you're in it."

In contrast to her hesitation — and somewhat to her surprise — all of the children, whose ages range from 5 to 15 — welcomed the decision immediately with enthusiasm.

Mr. Richards wrote to Yeshiva University here and was referred to Rabbi Israel Klevan, executive vice president of the Rabbinic Council of America, who assigned the case to Rabbi Cogan.

"My first job was to dissuade him," the rabbi reported. It is not Jewish custom to seek or even encourage converts. Mr. Richards was stubborn, however, and there followed a lengthy and often blunt exchange of letters between the student and teacher.

"I don't want to buy a pig in a poke," Mr. Richards wrote at one point, and the rabbi replied sternly that he was not selling him anything and that, furthermore, he did not care much for the analogy.

"I wasn't playing footsie with him," Rabbi Cogan recalled. "If you know everything, you don't have to have faith."

Last December, the entire family was converted in a Reform Jewish ceremony — there is no Orthodox community in the area and the older boys had bar mitzvahs.

The remarriage according to Orthodox tradition was not necessary and at first Mr. Richards thought it might be viewed as a "kind of put-on — like a Super-Jew or something." But the couple wanted to "put the religious seal" on their union. And they wanted the rite to be performed by Rabbi Cogan, for a strong affection had developed between the men in the course of their correspondence.

"You hatched me, now match me," Mr. Richards wrote. One of the characteristics of Judaism that attracted Mr. Richards was that "it involves itself in everyday life."

"Talk about relevancy," he told a visitor. "Judaism makes you aware of the beauty of everything. For everything you do, there's a prayer."

Another characteristic with which the close-knit Richards identified was Judaism's focus on the family. "The Orthodox Jewish parent reads three times a day what in Christianity is reserved for the clergy," he said.

Recently, commemorating the destruction of temples on the ninth day of the month of Ab, the family sat on the floor and recited prayers, with the furniture overturned to represent the event. "In Judaism you become part of the action — it's not something done by others," said Mr. Richards, adding, "Our kids are having a blast."

And, indeed, they appeared to be as they joined in a hora in the Cogan backyard and sang Israeli songs to accordion accompaniment before the start of the outdoor wedding ceremony.

After Mr. Richards had placed the ring on his wife's finger and crushed the traditional glass underfoot, the Richardses and the Cogan and various neighbors and friends embraced. Soon the bride and groom had been lifted in chairs and carried aloft, laughing and holding a lace handkerchief between them.

Before their departure for Israel, Mrs. Richards was asked whether she expected resettlement to be difficult. "I'm sure there will be many problems," she replied rather cheerfully. "Just adjusting to a new country, a new language, a new kitchen."

Twelve-year-old Teresa viewed the prospect calmly. "I think it's really neat," she said, adding, "I just fit into it, I guess."

Premier Denies Razing Of Town

JERUSALEM — Press reports that Israeli authorities plan to raze Kuneitra, a Syrian town in the occupied Golan Heights, were assailed as "untrue and irresponsible" by Premier Golda Meir. Replying to a question at the weekly Cabinet meeting, Mrs. Meir said the government's intention was only to demolish war damaged buildings which have been used as a haven for "rats and terrorists."

Mrs. Meir said similar demolition work has been going on for several years in the Golan Heights in accordance with Cabinet decisions adopted after the Six-Day War.

To Bury Black Christian From Jewish Synagogue

DETROIT — Ordinarily, under Jewish law, only Jews in good standing can be buried from a synagogue.

But Carl Adams, a black Christian, will be buried tomorrow from Temple Beth El here.

Members and staff of the temple where Mr. Adams worked for 49 years believe it is the right thing to do.

"He was a tradition here," said Robert Canvasser, temple president.

Mr. Adams, who was 75 years old, died this week of a heart attack. He had worked at the temple since obtaining a license to work as a building engineer. Even retirement two years ago did not keep him away, temple officials said.

"He was the most devoted member we ever had," said Rabbi Richard C. Hertz.

RUN BY KGB
COPENHAGEN — The Swedish Committee for Soviet Jews claims that a recently formed Jewish organization in Moscow is run by members of the KGB, the Soviet secret police. According to the committee, the purpose of the organization — known as "The Popular Liberation Movement for Jews in the Soviet Union" — is to trap Jews expressing anti-Soviet ideas. The Moscow organization was reportedly formed last January.

Revolutionaries' Relationships With Jews Diaogue Topic

NEW YORK — "The Relationship Between Jews and Revolutionary Forces" was the theme for leading American Jewish and Israeli intellectuals participating in the 10th annual American-Israel Dialogue, sponsored by the American Jewish Congress, August 1 to 4 at the Van Leer Institute in Jerusalem.

In formal papers and free-wheeling debate, the Dialogue participants examined the role that various elements of the Jewish community have played in revolutionary movements, as well as the impact that revolutionary political changes have had — and are likely to have — on Jewish life throughout the world.

Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg of Englewood, N.J., president of the American Jewish Congress and adjunct professor of history at Columbia University, opened the Dialogue proceedings Tuesday, August 1.

In announcing the dialogue, Rabbi Hertzberg said participants would examine, among other specific areas: the USSR and Israel.

The Third World, including their effect on Israel's relationships with the emerging African nations. Latin America, including the de facto dissolution of the Jewish community in Cuba. of the "New Left."

American participants in the four-day Dialogue included in addition to Rabbi Hertzberg:

New Black Publication Hires Jewish Woman

NEW YORK — A new Black magazine, "Encore," has established an editorship on Jewish Affairs and has named Mrs. Jean R. Herschaft, Anglo-Jewish journalist and publicist to the post. Announcement was made by Ida Lewis, publisher and editor.

Judaism and Women's Lib will be the first in a series of articles in the Summer Premiere issue, on the newsstand July 6. A Profile of Soviet Jewish Hero Boris Kuchobievsky will appear in the September issue when "Encore" begins monthly publication.

Mrs. Herschaft is New York Bureau Chief, National Jewish Post and Opinion. She has served as director of public relations of the Conservative United Synagogue of America, in addition to other major Jewish agencies. She penned a column for the Jewish Standard under the name of Tamar Adar, "Spotlight on New York" in 1969.

Mrs. Herschaft is a member of American-Jewish Public Relations Society. She holds membership in Temple Beth El of Manhattan Beach, Sisterhood and served as Vice President of the Parents Association. Talmud Torah of Beth El. In 1971 she was named a member of the board of governors, International Jewish Music Library at Lincoln Center, NYC.

BOMB SCARE

NEW YORK — A bomb scare emptied Philharmonic Hall at Lincoln Center 15 minutes before the Jewish Daily Forward's 75th anniversary concert was to have begun. About 1500 persons in the hall at the time were evacuated by police who combed the building from basement to roof. The bomb scare was phoned by a male caller to the NY Daily News which alerted police. No explosives were found. The audience returned at 3:15. About 2200 persons attended the affair which was highlighted by the presentation of the Forward Association Award to George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, for his contributions to American labor.

TO COORDINATE GROUPS

NEW YORK — The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations announced it had been asked by American-Jewish organizations to coordinate all nationwide activities in connection with Israel's 25th anniversary celebration.

Israel May Prospect For Oil In Sinai

JERUSALEM — The Cabinet is considering a proposal by Deputy Finance Minister Zvi Dinstein that Israel prospect for oil in the Sinai. Dr. Dinstein, who oversees Israel's oil industry on behalf of the Treasury, forecast that the Egyptian oil wells at Abu Rodeis, now being operated at full capacity by the government owned Neivvei Neft oil company, will run dry within 10 years.

According to his report, the Sinai is far more likely to yield oil deposits than any areas within Israel's pre-June, 1967, borders. His report implied that Israel will remain in occupation of the Sinai for an indefinite period.

It is believed that the government's decision on Dr. Dinstein's proposal will be influenced by the increasing pressure the oil-producing Arab states are exerting on Western oil companies.

Podgorny Doubts Arabs' Ability To Handle Weapons

BEIRUT — Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny has questioned the Arabs' ability to use sophisticated weapons and aircraft.

According to An-Hahar, a Beirut newspaper, Podgorny last month told the speaker of the Lebanese parliament that although "the Soviet Union is fulfilling its obligations towards the Arabs, the problem, however, lies in the ability of the Arabs to use modern weapons."

"Egypt has only one-third of the pilots required for the planes in her possession now. In other words, there is only one Egyptian pilot for every three fighter planes. Egypt requires a long time to complete her cadres in the field of modern air warfare."

KALLAH

NEW YORK — Over 200 Conservative rabbis are expected to attend a 4 day "kallah" (intellectual discussion and workshop) in Tel Aviv. Rabbi Stanley Bromnick, of Congregation B'nai Israel of Fair Lawn, chairman of the event which will be at the Hilton Hotel, February 18 through February 21.

Backed By Two Parties

Rabbi Goren Favored For Chief Rabbi Of Israel

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Shlomo Goren, Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv, is widely favored to win the post of Israel's Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi in the elections to be held later this summer. Rabbi Goren gained nationwide popularity during his career as Chief Chaplain of the Armed Forces for over 20 years. More important, he has the backing of both the Labor Party and the National Religious Party in his attempt to topple the present incumbent octogenarian Chief — P Rabbi Isser Yehuda Unterman. A mixed college of rabbis and laymen elect the Chief Rabbis.

Rabbi Goren's popularity, however, is not universal. The Orthodox right wing, both in Israel and in the U.S., broadly represented by the Aguda Party, is solidly against him. They accuse him of deliberately creating the impression that he can solve all Halachic problems whereas in truth he knows that he cannot — if he is to remain within the confines of traditional Halacha (religious law).

The rightists therefore are throwing themselves behind the aged Rabbi Unterman, urging him to stand for re-election and assuring him of their unwavering support if he does so. Rabbi Unterman announced recently that he has succumbed to this pressure and will indeed stand again.

This situation has its bizarre side: Throughout his long life, Rabbi Unterman has been the bogey man of the Agudist right. He was too "Zionist" for them. Now he is to be their saviour against the greater evil — Goren.

The Chief Rabbinate election at a time of crisis in the precarious state and religion balance, and the political support for Rabbi Goren, particularly from the Labor Party, is given on the understanding that once installed he will come up with the solutions to please everyone. The Labor Party, and particularly Mrs. Meir herself, are determined to find a solution to the case of Hanech and Miriam Langer, the brother and sister who were adjudged mamzerim (illegitimates) by a religious court and are therefore not allowed to marry ordinary Jews under the Halacha — and hence / by Halacha.)

Also, Gideon Hausner's civil marriage bill has focused public attention on the problem of the Cohens and divorcees, who are forbidden to marry each other under Halacha.

Rabbi Goren maintains that the Langers are not "mamzers" under Halacha. He says he can solve, Halachically, at least 90 percent of all cases of "mamzer" which could arise. (Such cases are very rare — a "mamzer" is the product of adultery or incest.) Goren has not pronounced on the far more common but less severe problem of Cohen and divorcee.

Rabbi Goren strongly denies the persistent reports that he has made a "deal" with the Prime Minister to "solve" thorny problems. How could he, he says, make any deal which would involve his stepping outside the bounds of Halacha? Halacha does not have the answer to everything, he admits, though it has to most things, he says.

Mrs. Meir and other Labor leaders have said privately, however, that Rabbi Goren's election is in effect the last chance of averting a religious kulturkampf. Only he, they say, with his unquestioned Halachic authority and lenient approach, which takes into account the best interests of the State and the nation, can bring about harmony.

NOT TO MEET ROGERS

JERUSALEM — Deputy Premier Yigal Alon will not meet with Secretary of State William P. Rogers when the former visits Washington in early May. Alon, who will be on a fund-raising mission, will arrive when Rogers is in Europe for a meeting with ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Alon is expected to see other senior diplomats, possibly including Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, the national security advisor.

The Treasure Chest
 Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities
 By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Welcome aboard. Here's what we have for you this week. Am just back from a delightful family vacation. Went to "Storyland" in New Hampshire — storybook world of fun and fantasy, for children of all ages. See for yourself. For their free color brochure write to Box 381, North Conway, New Hampshire. For those of you who are interested in pleasing more than children, and don't mind traveling, here's that little-known paradise I promised you. It's Malaysia. Beautiful countryside, delicious food, good climate and about the friendliest people in the world. And where else can you get a car, chauffeur and guided tour for the day for $5, or a sumptuous meal for under $1, and a delighted gasp from the waiter over the generosity of a 20 cent tip. Yes, my friend, there still are such places... Now, for some overseas treasures: Let's start with souvenirs and jewelry from Thailand (Siam). You can find some unusual items, and at bargain prices, by writing to Tom at Nanta's Jewelry, 374 Sukumvit Road, Bangkok, Thailand and requesting their catalogue. Mention I told you to write for it. (Alan Shawn Feinstein may not register — just say, "Mr. Alan.") Please be prepared for a wait for it though; sea mail takes two or three months. But at least speed up your end by sending your request by overseas airmail. That takes only four days. (If you don't even want to wait that long, you can call him — his number is 915826. It's only $12 plus tax for the first three minutes.) You'll find some extremely worthwhile items here, for gifts, resale or just plain personal pleasure. Thailand is especially noted for its low cost black star sapphires, wood carvings and exquisite silks. That's it for now. But coming up in the next column, something valuable and free. And something else valuable and free. Plus a unique investment opportunity. That, my friends, is for your next week.

Four Organizations Ask For Removal Of Superintendent

NEW YORK — Four Jewish organizations called last week for the removal of Luis J. Fuentes as superintendent of Community School District 1 on the Lower East Side because of what they called his "hostility to Jews." The groups also accused the eight-man community school board of being "determined to foster ethnic conflict" by hiring Mr. Fuentes, despite his "well-documented anti-Semitism." The charges were made by the New York offices of the American Jewish Committee, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the American Jewish Congress and the Jewish Labor Committee. In letters, they called on School Chancellor Harvey B. Scribner and Ewald B. Nyquist, the State Education Commissioner, to nullify Mr. Fuentes' appointment in the 20-school district. And the City and State Commissions on Human Rights were urged to investigate the Puerto Rican activist's alleged bias. Mr. Fuentes, who was named by the local board to the $37,000-a-year post last week, denied the charges. "It's not the first time and it's not fair," he said. "They're not true." He added that he was going to talk with his lawyers to "see what we can do." Mr. Fuentes, who had been turned down when he first applied for his present post three and a half years ago, made the comment at an executive meeting of the school board at the offices of the school board at the offices of the Negro Action Group, a publicly and privately funded educational and antipoverty organization at 270 East 2d Street. Lyle Brown, the group's director and the vice chairman of the District 1 board, also denied the charges against Mr. Fuentes. "I don't even know how to deal with that kind of ugliness," he said. "I guess I'm just not small enough to think that way." More people attend the event that is advertised. Call the Herald office, 724-0200 or 724-0202.
