Sigmund J. Hellmann

New Center Director Sees Exciting Future

By JANICE MILLER

Sigmund J. Hellmann, new executive director of the Jewish Community Center, has come to Providence via a long and tortuous route. His parents were Russian Jews who emigrated first to Siberia and then to Manchuria and Siam. He grew up in the Philippines and left Manila at the age of 20 to attend Hamilton College in Clinton, New York.

There were no Jewish community centers in China and Mr. Hellmann's first experience in a Jewish community was as a camp counselor in New York State. By the time he wrote his master's thesis, "Leisure Time Associations of Jewish Teenagers in Newton, Massachusetts," the future seemed clear.

Besides having a wealth of experience with community centers; among them, those of Trenton, Chicago and Detroit, Mr. Hellmann's most recent position was as executive director of the Jewish Youth Center Camps Arthur, Reeta, and Beker in New Jersey. He hopes to put this camping expertise to good use in the re-forming of the Center day camp at its new 45-acre site in Johnston, next summer.

When Dr. Bernard Carp, then executive director of the Center, announced his intention of retiring as of May 1 of this year, Mr. Hellmann was not even thinking of a new position. But the Jewish Welfare Board sought him out and persuaded him to come to Providence and see the new facility. He was impressed. None of the centers he had worked in had anything near the potential, he felt, for growth and really drawing the community together that the Providence facility had. The challenge excited him. He said yes, and he's here.

"Moving into the new Center is a little like going from a little house to a big house," Mr. Hellmann explained. "There are adjustments to make." The new director estimates it may take one or two years to "grow into the building." Meanwhile, programs must be developed and expanded. Membership, which is now close to 5,000 should be near 8,000 in a few years. The Center must do all these things in order to support itself. In five years, Mr. Hellmann would like the Providence Center to be the "showplace of the nation." So would we.

As to any possible changes in policy or direction, Mr. Hellmann says it's too soon to tell. He would like a six month orientation period to speak with rabbis and community leaders and get to know what the problems and needs of the community really are, rather than what he believes they might be. The temptation is to formalize one's impressions immediately.

Former Irgun Underground Leader Arrested For Activities In Israel

TEL AVIV — Amihai Paglin, a key strategist of the Jewish underground in the closing years of British rule in Palestine, has been arrested here in connection with an attempt to form an anti-Arab terrorist campaign in Europe and America.

The police told a magistrate that Mr. Paglin had been involved in an unsuccessful attempt to smuggle arms from Israel for use by terrorists abroad. The magistrate refused a police request to hold Mr. Paglin without bail for five days, but allowed him to be held until the police could appeal the decision.

The Jewish Defense League, led by Rabbi Meir Kahane of New York, announced last week the formation of an anti-terror organization. The league said it would carry the fight to Europe and America and acknowledged responsibility for the unsuccessful attempt to ship weapons abroad by air. A case containing two sub-machine guns, two revolver three grenades and ammunition was intercepted in Lydda Airport.

The police told the magistrate that Mr. Paglin, now the owner of a stove factory in Petah Tikvah, had packed the illegal weapons in a metal container in his plant.

Abraham Hershkovitz, formerly of New York, was arrested recently and was charged with having tried to ship the arms out by air. He was sentenced to five years imprisonment in New York in 1970 for attempting to carry firearms aboard a plane going to London. It was said at the time he planned to hijack an Arab plane and bring it to Israel.

The potential of the Jewish Defense League for terrorism had not been highly regarded by veterans of the Jewish underground here, but the involvement of Mr. Paglin would make their planned counterterror a matter to be reckoned with more seriously.

Under the code name Gideon, Mr. Paglin was chief of operations of the terrorist group known as Irgun Zvai Leumi, or National Military Organization. He was renowned for his inventiveness. Among his projects was the development of "barrel bombs" that Jewish terrorists mounted on lifting devices that pushed them over the high fences surrounding British police stations.

He planned some of the Irgun's most spectacular actions, including the freeing of 50 prisoners from the Acre prison in April, 1947.

and the explosion of the British government headquarters in the King David Hotel, which killed nearly 100 persons.

His lawyer, Shmuel Tamir, told the magistrate, Aryeh Evenari, that it was absurd that instead of cooperating with the nam with the most brilliant accomplishments in the underground, the authorities had put themselves on the opposite side.

The police prosecutor said that had the arms shipment not been intercepted, it could have caused great harm to Israel.

The magistrate ruled that there was no danger of Mr. Paglin's trial, if it takes place. He also noted that the Jewish Defense League had publicly assumed responsibility for the attempted arms shipment and none of its leaders had been arrested. Under the circumstances, he said he failed to see how Mr. Paglin's release would interfere with the investigation.

Simchas Torah Services To Conclude Holiday

Chief Rabbinate Elections Postponed Until Oct. 16

JERUSALEM — The Knesset approved the postponement of the Chief Rabbinate elections until the new deadline of October 16. A number of members expressed the view that this would not be the last postponement.

On the same day as the Knesset decision, two rabbis walked out of the Chief Rabbinate Council after the Sephardi Chief Rabbi Irzhak Nissim uttered a biblical curse, "May the mouth of the liar be closed," against Rabbi Eliezer Goldschmidt, a judge of the supreme Beth Din.

Rabbi Goldschmidt had recalled an incident 12 years ago when a rabbi appealed against the decision of the rabbinate elections committee and claimed he had been put up to it by Chief Rabbi Nissim.

Both Rabbi Goldschmidt and Rabbi Shaul Israeli, a leading National Religious Party rabbi walked out in protest at Chief Rabbi Nissim's curse.

Joseph P. Lash, Mort Sahl, Jack Anderson To Speak At Temple Sinai Lecture Series

Two of this year's Pulitzer Prize winners and a political satirist are the speakers scheduled for the fifth season of the Temple Sinai author-lecture series.

Joseph P. Lash, winner of the National Book Award and Pulitzer Prize for the biography, Eleanor and Franklin, and its recent sequel, Eleanor: The Years Alone, will be the first speaker on Sunday, October 29, at 8 p.m. A founder of Americans for Democratic Action, he was the United Nations correspondent for the New York Post from 1950 to 1961, and until 1966 was assistant editor of the Post's editorial page.

Comedian Mort Sahl, whose humor and satire have won him both admirers and enemies, will appear on Sunday, November 26. Mr. Sahl has appeared on the late night TV talk programs and the college campus circuit, as well as in nightclubs.

Syndicated Washington columnist Jack Anderson will be the third speaker in the series on Sunday, December 17. Mr. Anderson received the Pulitzer Prize for national reporting for his disclosures of the Nixon administration policy-making during the India-Pakistan War.

All lectures will be held at Temple Sinai at 8 p.m.

Survivors Of Pawiak Prison Hold Gathering In Poland

MAIDANEK, Poland — On January 17, 1943, a train carrying 1,000 inmates arrived here from Pawiak prison in Warsaw. It was only one of thousands of such shipments needed to keep this concentration camp full during the war.

One of the Pawiak prisoners stood here 29 years later, on the stone steps of the brooding memorial that now dominates this place. He said that only 100 of that Warsaw trainload survived the war, and that 40 remained alive today.

Some of them came, however, as a majority do every year on Maidanek Day, September 17, to participate in ceremonies honoring the memory of those who died in this camp, one of the largest maintained by the Nazis. September is the traditional month for war memorials in Poland because that was the month in 1939 when the Germans invaded the country.

Some Honored for Heroism

A few who do not ordinarily attend, like Mrs. Hanna Mierzejewska of Warsaw, came this year only at the insistence of friends who knew she was to be honored with 15 others for a form of heroism that seemed commonplace at the time.

During the ceremony, the survivors clustered behind massed flags. Some of the flags were held by former inmates who wore the striped clothing of the camp and only half listened to the speeches extolling the fight against Fascism.

A damp cold wind whipped the group on the steps and the thousands massed below, now listening to a Russian general who had finally liberated the Maidanek camp in July, 1944 after hundreds of thousands of inmates had been murdered.

One of the women who came this year was Danuta Czaykowska-Medryk. She said she was flying to New York to serve as a witness at Federal deportation hearings for Hermine Braunsteiner, a former member of the SS (Elite Guard) and a guard-supervisor in the women's section, now Mrs. Russell Ryan of Maspeth, Queens.

(In New York, Dr. Dzakowska-Medryk, a dentist, testified that she had seen the guard-supervisor help to select Jewish women to be sent to gas chambers in August, 1943.)

The women here nodded slowly when the name Hermine Braunsteiner came up, but for some the recollections came reluctantly. They come to Maidanek, but to greet each other rather than to recall the horrors of this place.

"Yes, I remember Braunsteiner," one woman said. "We feared her most of all. She was a big woman, and she used her whip a lot."

A friend recalled that although Miss Braunsteiner disappeared after the war, the woman commandant was captured by Polish authorities, tried and executed. Some of the women on the stone steps had testified then.

One of them said, "I used to be called to all of the trials, in Cracow, Lublin, Warsaw, everywhere, until finally I said enough — I can't stand it."

A man with a triangular red patch (for political prisoners) on his jacket threaded his way through the cluster behind the dignitaries to greet one of the women. He kissed her hand, both cheeks, her lips, her hand again and finally hugged her.

One of the women said he had met his future wife in the camp. Although the men and women were separated, "We would get together anyway," she said. "There were many such romances here."

After the ceremony a stream of people, some carrying flowers, took the long walk past the grim barracks, rusted barbed wire and empty fields, now covered with grass, to a second memorial, this one covering a huge earthen mound.

18,000 Killed in a Day

Mrs. Mierzejewska, one of the 2,000 at Pawiak, said that more than 18,000 Jews — "Our Jews and those from two other camps near Lublin" — had been killed by the Nazis at Maidanek on one day, November 3, 1943. The mound consisted of the bones, ashes and cinders of the murdered prisoners.

"They were ordered to run down that slope," she said, indicating a grassy field that now stops where Lublin industry begins. "As they reached the ditches, they were shot with machine guns."

"They didn't want the rest of us to hear, so the loudspeakers were turned up and played music all day," Mrs. Mierzejewska, who is employed in the American School in Warsaw, survived Maidanek, Auschwitz and Ravenbruck.

Later in the day she and the others were lined up, as they had been countless times before, but this time to receive Poland's highest civilian decoration.

The citations were not read out, but the one for "Pani Hanka," as she is known to the schoolchildren who come to her for Band-Aids and know nothing of her background, said:

"From her first day at Pawiak prison she was active in organizational work. Because of her knowledge of German she was chosen as block leader. Thanks to her personal character, her spirit and her ethics, there was an atmosphere of peace."

"She became a pattern and an example. Trust and friendship for her increased every day, and accompanied her through Maidanek, Auschwitz and Ravensbruck. But it was not only her personality. She successfully hid a child in her block. She also hid elderly and sick women, sparing them from heavy work in the fields, for which she was punished by whipping and being forced to stand in barbed wire.

"Her deeds have been testified to by the signatures of people saved by her, as well as a number of other survivors."

Tells How It Feels To Be An Immigrant In Israel

I promised that I would write to you from Israel and so here is the bad penny from Providence.

What is so different about this trip? I am not a tourist — I'm a temporary resident and as such I'm seeing things as they really are and not in a hotel lobby in Tel Aviv, where at the drop of a lira, the Yankee can get his comfort. All the red tape is showing up — all the problems of an oleh are right in front of me. I am in the middle of what we in America call Tzures.

I am now attending an Ulpan in Haifa. Want a Russian, South American, you name, it and we have got it. Sounds simple — all one does is come to Israel, attend an Ulpan, go out into the world of Israel and you have it made — easy? Wrong. For many of these people who came with medical degrees from the Soviet Union there is a major problem — their medical degrees are no longer accepted in Israel. For those who have spent years in dentistry or plastic surgery, it means a program of retraining and examination. It is a pretty rough ball game for one who is on the older side. I am not saying that Israel is wrong — it very well may be that the standards in Israel are now higher and this has to be done. I just want my friends to know, back in Providence, that Israel isn't the perfect setting for an oleh — and the Russians are not getting everything as some imagine. These people came at great risk — some of their relatives are in political prisons in Russia. From what I have learned, anti-Semitism is a fact of life today in Russia. In case anyone thinks otherwise — I got it from the horse's mouth.

Life here is tough. If you are young and healthy and can glean an education from one of the universities here, you have a pretty fair chance of surviving. Israel is education oriented. You either get a degree or you man a mop. Kibbutz living is still available for those who desire it — a good life and a hard one by any Yankee standard. Salaries here are minimal — not many luxuries. There are benefits, medical, etc., but you pay the price in waiting your turn in line and those lines are long. Once you have your mind geared to this, it becomes acceptable otherwise contact a private physician and pay him yourself. It will be expensive — if you earn an Israeli salary. Dentistry and optometry are not free services. You pay.

Why is everyone coming? Because of the political instability and open anti-Semitism in many lands. There aren't many of us left in these countries, with the exception of Russia, but all the hate is there — discomfort — pain — uncertainty. So here they are — and more are on the way and this land will change and conditions will become better with time. Not a Utopia — but someday.

I don't think I have ever written a letter that didn't have a request in it for help of some sort for some group or individual who needed help. I'd like to close, for now, with a request for children's clothes — any age, any size, anything that will clothe a child. These are children who are being taken off the streets by the Pioneer Women here. Some of these youngsters 12-13 years old are in financial trouble and on the streets for prostitution purposes and what-not. For quite a long time Pioneer Women have worked hard to gather these children, house them, feed them and clothe them and even educate them. It's a big job. When you girls get together for a bridge club or meeting, bring a child's dress, shirt or trousers and send them together to Brulia Artel, Pioneer Women, Hecholutz 45, Haifa, Israel. God will bless you for it.

Shona Tova to you all.

Disputes Location Of Medzhibezh

I read with great interest Mr. Segal's column of September the 8th. According to Mr. Segal, Reb Wolf Kitzes lived in Medzhibezh, "in Galicia, Austria," where he met his friend, Reb Yisroel Baal Shem Tov. Evidently Mr. Segal got his information from the "direct descendant of Reb Wolf Kitzes." He may be right as to the blowing of the Shofar incident. BUT — Medzhibezh always was and still is in Ukraine, Russia. A Mezbhizer should know.

My parents, brother, sister, ancestors and I lived and went to Gimnazia in Medzhibezh, Russia. Der Baal Shem lived, died and is buried in Medzhibezh. So, as I said above, a Mezbhizer should know that anyone living in Mezhibezh is a Russian, not a Galicianer.

A Russian does not wish to associate with a Galicianer. I, therefore, am pleased, and am very proud to associate with my wife, who happens to be one . . .

Gives Views On Candidates McGovern And Nixon

There is much nonsense from both sides during a presidential campaign. Senator George McGovern and many of his supporters — as has been evident in some of The Herald's dispatches and letters to the editor — have exceeded however, what I would consider to be "political license."

The senator has attempted to allay Jewish fears of his softness on Israel by sudden pronouncements of strong attachment and commitment and pleas that Jews judge him by his actions. If we examine the senator's actions, however, we discover some not very sympathetic ones. For example, on

A Happy New Year — 1905

By BERYL SEGAL

Mr. Joseph S. Goldstein is on the staff of the Jewish Daily Forwards. Readers of that Yiddish newspaper will remember his column "A Yid Tzu Yidden" (A Jew to Jews). Recently he told in his column a remarkable true story that spans the ocean and three score and seven years in time and space.

The story began with Mr. Goldstein waiting at a taxi station and being picked up by a driver. He told the driver to take him to the Forwards building on East Broadway.

As is the universal habit of all taxi drivers, the man at the wheel wanted to know what Mr. Goldstein was doing at the Forwards, how long he was in this country, and where did he come from originally.

Mr. Goldstein told the taxi driver that he was a journalist, that he had come to this country after the Hitler holocaust, and that he came from Warsaw, Poland.

At the mention of Warsaw the eyes of the taxi driver lit up and as they reached the Forwards Building he turned to Mr. Goldstein and squeezed his hands.

"We are Landsleit. I am from Warsaw, too."

And the taxi driver told him that his grandfather was one of the six sextons in the Great Synagogue on Tlomatzki Street, known in Warsaw as the "German Shul." Such renowned cantors as Gershon Sirota and after him Moshe Kusevitsky chanted in that synagogue. The Jewish composer Leo Liow was the director of music. The taxi-driver's father, Jacob, and the nine-year-old Abraham, who told the story, were members of the famous choir. When the choir sang, it was the duty of the grandfather David Randel, to stand at the gates and keep the crowds away from the Shul. Three generations of Randels were associated with the imposing synagogue, the pride of Warsaw.

The taxi-driver was so excited that he would not part with the journalist until he noted down his name and address and promised to send a photograph of his grandfather and his colleagues, the sextons of the Shul, as they appeared on Rosh Hashanah, 1905.

Several months passed by and Mr. Goldstein did not hear from the taxi-driver, Abraham, now Albert Randel.

Then one day, while hailing a taxi and telling the driver to go to the Forwards Building, the man asked:

"Would you be Mr. Goldstein, the writer?"

Then he told Mr. Goldstein that he was a brother of the previous taxi-driver, that his brother took sick and had died, and that on his dying bed he asked him to find the post card of the grandfather and deliver it to the Forwards.

The picture post card was delivered. On it were six men, in their dress uniforms, the Sextons of the Tlomatzki Shul. Three were sitting and three were standing. They were dressed in black kaftans, priestly collars, square yarmulkes and narrow Taleisim around their necks. On the opposite side of the card were written these words:

L'Shonah Tovah, 5666
Sent by the six Sextons
of the Synagogue number 7 Tlomatzki, Warsaw.

This year is 5733. That makes the card 67 years old. A legacy from grandfather to father to grandchild.

And Mr. Goldstein adds: "The Jewish community of Warsaw was proud of the imposing Synagogue on Tlomatzki Street.

"When I came back to Warsaw in 1946, after the end of the Hitler nightmare, I found a pile of rubble in place of the House of Prayer. Among the bricks and the debris were the broken Tablets of the Law that once decorated the front of the Shul."

All of this happened in our own time.

The German Shul on Tlomatzki is no more. The Jews of Warsaw who survived are dispersed to the four corners of the world. Hitler himself, may his name be erased, has perished from the face of the earth. The six Sextons on the Shonah Tovah card are all that remained from those years. A grandson who is a taxi-driver in New York and a journalist on the staff of the Forwards are now the sole witnesses to the meaning of the six Sextons.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Ireland and Iran

Ireland and Iran are separated by a significant geographical distance. Their climates are diverse. Their languages bear no similarities. Their industries are unrelated. Their political systems are as different as can be. Their gods are different gods. They probably never think about each other. But they should. They have a common problem. The marriage rate is low.

Irishmen and Iranians do not get married because they put such a high value on their women.

The dowry is as much a part of Irish tradition as the Church or revolution. A penniless woman is a spinster. That's the long and the short of it. And there are a lot of penniless women and consequently a lot of young bucks wasting the best years of night and life in pubs. True love conquers time, space and the neuroses, but there are some obstacles too formidable for it to surmount.

Precisely the opposite tradition prevails in Iran. If the Irish husband is the most expensive on earth, the Iranian girl is the dearest bride. The young Iranian is expected to buy his precious object several rings, bracelets, and necklaces of precious stones.

Then he has to outfit his bride. He has to pay for the wedding banquet, and alas, provide her mother with gifts equally as beautiful as those he gave the daughter. It is easy to see what happens when money enters into the marital equation. Not only does the monetary equation result in low birth rates, but the marriage clerks are living in disaster areas.

In Ireland the priests keep repeating Paul's exhortation: "It is better to marry than to burn!" In Iran the government is considering a law to make marriage compulsory. The law would prohibit an employer's hiring any man unable to produce a marriage certificate.

Both Iranian and Irish girls are noted for beauty and fidelity. There aren't better girls in the world to put up storm windows

Israel J. Kapstein, professor emeritus of English at Brown University, will lead the opening discussion on Great Jewish Short Stories by I.L. Peretz, edited by Saul Bellow.

The discussion on Tuesday, October 17, on The Adventures of Menahem-Mendel by Sholom Aleichem will be led by Jeannette E. Resnik, lecturer, translator and poet.

The Dybbuk by S. Anski will be discussed by Melvin L. Zurier, attorney, at the October 24 meeting.

On Tuesday, October 31, Geraldine S. Foster of the Nathan Bishop Middle School English department will lead the discussion on the Travels of Benjamin III by Mendele Mocher Seforim.

There will be no meeting on November 7 which is election day. Salvation, Part Three by Sholem Asch will be discussed by Dr. Arthur I. Geltzer, physician, on Tuesday, November 14.

The final meeting in the series on Tuesday, November 21, will be a discussion of some of the work of Isaac Bashevis Singer with Julie Gutterman, a teacher, leading the discussion.

Members of the committee arranging the series are Ellen Geltzer, chairman, Mardelle Berman, Roz Goldberg, Julie Gutterman, Marilyn Kaplan, Pat Klibanoff, Phyllis Stanzler, Pauly Stein, Janet Zurier and Lenore Leach, ex-officio.

ORGANIZATION NEWS

PLAN KICKOFF RALLY

A kickoff rally for all captains and workers of the Providence area phase of the 1972 campaign of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island will be held on Wednesday, October 4, at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center.

An unidentified recent immigrant to Israel from Russia will give a first hand report on conditions of Jewish residents of that country.

MORALS OF RESEARCH

The question concerning the obligation of scientists to reckon with the consequences of their research will be discussed by Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen in his sermon, "Man's Greatest Dilemma," at the opening late Sabbath Eve service on Friday, October 6, at 8:10 o'clock at Temple Emanu-El.

Services will be conducted by Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman, accompanied by the choir under the direction of Frederick A. MacArthur at the Eva Bader Memorial organ.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL

The Rally for Soviet Jews to be held on Sunday evening after Simchas Torah services on October 1, will be featured on the Israel Broadcasting network, Kol Israel. The event, sponsored by the Soviet Jewry Committee of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston, will be highlighted by a march and rally, the sounding of the Shofar, the display of the Israeli Commemorative Torch of Independence, and a silent Hakafos in which area rabbis will carry Torahs through the gathering. Music by the Ner Tamid (Everlasting Light) and informal dancing will follow the ceremony.

The event will start at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday at Congregation Kehilath Israel at 384 Harvard Street in Brookline, Massachusetts.

Israeli Exhibit At Warwick Mall

A little piece of Israel will be on display at the Warwick Mall from Tuesday, October 3, through Monday, October 16, it has been announced by Max Alperin, president of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island. The multi-media module tells the story of the United Jewish Appeal and the JFRI in its support of worldwide Jewry.

The walk-through exhibit features two slide and sound presentations for the 1972 campaign of the JFRI. They are the story of a young Israeli soldier and Micha, the speech therapy program for pre-school deaf children in Israel. Micha is narrated by Arlene Francis, stage and TV star. The room-size exhibit also features an original 20 foot mural depicting the many faces of Israel's people.

Also feature are Degani, a child's eye view of life in an Israeli border kibbutz, and "Beyond the Mirage" a Jewish Chataqua Society film made in Israel. The film is narrated by Lorne Green, star of "Bonanza."

Opening ceremonies for the display will be held on Tuesday, October 3, at 7:30 p.m.

Candidates To Debate At Community Center

Rhode Island's Republican and Democratic candidates for the Governor's seat in the coming elections will meet Sunday, October 1, at 8 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center.

Herbert DeSimone and Warwick Mayor Philip W. Noel will speak in the second in a series of programs entitled Rhode Island Focus which is being held at the Center. The program is sponsored by the Center Youth Council and is open to the public.

Moderator for the program series is Dr. Edward Beiser.

cratic Socialists (the Nazis). Who is to say it cannot be repeated with McGovern's ravings against Wall Street; a symbol all too often connected with the so-called international Jewish conspiracy?

I do not intend to suggest that President Nixon's administration has been perfect; it has had its blemishes, particularly the utterances of Secretary of State Rogers and former Governor Scranton. But these voices have never been fully heard. The voices of Rabin, many of America's leading Jews, and, of course, Henry Kissinger — a Jew who personally knows the threat of Jewish annihilation — have received a full hearing from the president and, in most cases, have received a very favorable response. Moreover, the president's emphasis upon the positive accomplishments of American "doers" many of whom, as all recognize, have been Jews is a far cry from the implications cited above.

My fear, as a Jew, of any latent anti-Semitism rearing its ugly head or of American abandonment of Israel because of some bombast has given me cause to submit this letter to Rhode Island's most widely read Jewish publications and to hope, as a result, that my words have some affect upon those who are concerned. The recent crimes of the guerrillas in Munich are grim reminders that Jews should, indeed have to be, sensitive to any threats to their survival. Senator McGovern, I believe, is one.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Rebound Expected For Marcor

Q: In 1966 I purchased 15 shares of Montgomery Ward at $43 per share. Now 6 years later, following a two-for-one split and the merger, I hold 30 shares of Marcor (NYSE) worth very little more than I invested originally. Should I switch into a more active issue? K.S.

A: Problems which have contributed to the drop in Marcor's share price appear to be solved and forward progress should continue. Container Corporation, which contributed 34% to corporate earnings in fiscal 1971-72, was the primary factor with a strike and start-up snags at the new Florida mill cutting into profits. However, with the mill boosting the company's containerboard capacity 39%, volume should easily set a new record in excess of $3 billion this year.

Through the first half ended July, earnings were up 24% on a 10% gain in volume. Although the tax rate this year may be greater, higher product prices and an improved level of retail business should lift earnings about 15% to about $1.90 per share. As the market recognizes the improving earnings trend a higher P/E multiple should be accorded the shares. I would advise sticking with this issue which currently has strong turnaround potential.

Q: I feel locked into certain securities because of capital gains. What are tax-free exchange funds and how do they operate? Could you suggest a few that emphasize income? G.Q.

A: Although 23 of the 33 tax-free exchange funds formed between 1960 and 1967 are still in operation, these funds no longer offer any tax advantage. The Internal Revenue Service in 1967 eliminated this tax shelter and new funds have not been recently formed. The funds do permit the direct exchange of your individual shares for fund shares. However, you are liable for the capital gains tax in the year the exchange occurs. Yields on most of these funds are low — 1.8% on average — although Empire Fund, Fourth Empire Fund and Sixth Empire Fund return over 3%.

Switch Advised For Growth

Q: I am primarily interested in safe growth issues and would appreciate information on two stocks. I hold Litton $2.00 preferred (NYSE) and Southland Corporation (NYSE). The former has been very disappointing. Should I sell and add to my shares of Southland Corporation? W.T.

A: The switch, which you are contemplating, has merit considering your investment goal. Litton has run behind schedule and costs have run ahead of contract specifications in its shipbuilding operations. A plant phase-out, transfer of two divisions and write-offs have reduced Litton's earnings sharply in recent quarters and recovery is apt to be a slow process. Shares should be sold.

Your second holding is in sharp contrast, with earnings growing at an average compound rate of 15% annually over the last five years. A 17% gain in net was scored in the first half of this year on a 14% rise in revenues. New store openings have been an important factor in Southland's growth. In the current year approximately 400 new units will be added, raising the total number of outlets to 4,857. A similar increase is planned for 1973. The addition of self-service gasoline units at 125 stores this year, bringing the total to 330 units, will boost sales volume significantly. Shares are presently experiencing a correction to the low 30s and are attractive at that level for long-term

Q: Our investment club owns 50 shares of Telex Corporation (NYSE) at $21. Should we hold or switch to a more promising stock? G.A.

A: The August announcement by IBM of two new computer systems and several new peripheral products, etc., has favorable implications for Telex, a major supplier of IBM-compatible equipment. For the year to end next March revenues are expected to rise by 20% or more, reflecting the phasing out of lease business and retention of rentals. At current depressed levels shares have minimal additional risks, but ample upward potential if anticipated earnings recovery materializes.

Utility Advised For Income

Q: Would you please give me some information on Hilton Hotels (NYSE). We are retired so our other holdings are all income stocks. Don't know whether we should hold Hilton or not. F.H.

A: Room occupancy rates have not shown as much improvement as expected during a 12% gain in occupancy during July but lower room rates negated some of the benefits of the higher occupancy rate. Nonetheless, first half operating results were satisfactory, with gross revenues up 7% and income ahead 15%.

Hilton has postponed temporarily plans for a 600-room hotel in Reno, Nevada. Originally scheduled for 1,000 rooms, the hotel is being held up pending disposal of other Reno real estate. Until the outlook improves shares will probably move sideways. For this reason, as well as the less than generous yield available in this issue, I would advise switching to New England Electric yielding 6.8%. As of June, earnings on a 12-month basis were $2.28 a share, up 10% year-to-year, providing ample coverage for the $1.62 annual dividend.

Q: I sold shares of First Pennsylvania Mortgage Trust on February 8, 1972, the ex-dividend date. I received a dividend check from my broker but sent it back since I did not think I was entitled to it. This happened again and I kept the check. Then later I received a request from another broker claiming the dividend because they held the stock on the record date of the 14th. Who is correct? C.A.

A: The pertinent date in determining who is entitled to a dividend, is the "ex" date. On this day the stock sells "ex" or without the dividend, trading lower by the amount of the distribution. You as seller received less per share, the difference approximating the dividend, than you would have netted on the previous day and you are entitled to the dividend check. The buyer paid less per share because he was not entitled to the dividend.

Bomb Two Synagogues In Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES — Two powerful bombs ripped through synagogues here this week, causing damage estimated at more than $16,000 but no casualties, the police said.

One explosion tore the gates off the Sephardic Synagogue and damaged the neighboring Sephardic Israeli community Association's health center.

The other sent masonry crashing at the central Buenos Aires Synagogue.

Two other bomb explosions here were also reported — one damaged the home of a labor leader but they were apparently unconnected with those on Jewish property and caused no casualties.

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand cannot be made legitimately. However, a very astute Declarer, one who figures exactly what the situation is, and he can if he notes everything that has happened both in the bidding and what has been played, can help himself by creating a very difficult problem for the defense to solve. A Defender equally as sharp can possibly come up with the right solution but see what you would do if confronted with the same Declarer. As we have mentioned here so many times, too few Declarers and Defenders do think correctly, some do not think at all.

North	♦5 4	♥7 4	♠Q 7 6 5 4	♣A Q 6 2
West	♠J 6	♥A K Q 10 5 3	♦J 10 8	♣7 4
East	♦10 3	♥9 8 2	♠K 9 3	♣K 10 9 8 5
South	♠A K Q 9 8 7 2	♥J 6	♦A 8	♣J 3

East-West were vulnerable. West Dealer with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
2♥	P	P	4♠

The bidding went as indicated at almost every table. It is because of West's opening bid that Declarer gets his clue as to how to play the hand differently from normal. West's opening two Heart Bid Vulnerable showed a hand with a good six card suit and somewhere between six and twelve high card points, not a full opening one bid. There is a rule in Bridge that one may not have more or less than that and only high card points can be counted. So West's upper and lower limits were known quantities to anyone who took the time to think about it.

North and East had nothing to say but South certainly did. Most Souths simply took the bull by the horns and jumped right to game. Here is how they failed to make it and they really cannot be faulted for their play. West led the King and Ace of Hearts and then usually switched to the Diamond Jack. Any other lead will allow the Declarer to make the hand but we are assuming the best Defense at least to here. This lead sets up a Diamond trick for the Defense no matter what was played by North and South. Trumps were then drawn and finally the key to the whole hand. Everyone tried the Club finesse. To their chagrin it lost and the Diamond cashed for the setting trick. If the Diamond hadn't been switched to at trick three then the Diamond trick would not be established and it wouldn't make any difference whether the Club finesse worked or not for if it failed the Ace and Queen in Dummy would now be good for a Diamond discard.

Assuming the Diamond was played on time for the Defense it seems as if there is no way to make the hand and truly there isn't if everyone does his part correctly. But here is how the really thinking Declarer does it. He has heard West's opening bid and has stored the knowledge away. He has now carefully noted the fall of each card and now when he has won the third trick with his Diamond Ace and after he attacks the Trumps he thinks to himself: "I cannot make this hand legitimately because I am positive the Club finesse will lose. I know it will lose because West cannot possibly have that Club King. West opened with a maximum of twelve points and has already shown up with nine in Hearts, one in Diamonds and when the second round of Trumps played and West follows with the Jack that makes eleven. Possession of the Club King would give him fourteen, a one bid, not a two bid. So knowing the Club finesse will lose I won't take it. What I will do is go right over to the Ace and play a small one back to my Jack. (This is after Trumps are drawn.) Now, if East plays his King I go down but I would have gone down anyhow if I took the finesse. But will he be so apt to do this now?"

I don't think so many Easts would play that King now unless they thought well, too. Why wouldn't Declarer take the finesse if he had two Clubs? That is the way most players would think. Yet East can count his partner's high card points just as well as South and with no entries in Dummy should go up with his King anyhow. But players too often just pitch out a card with no reason behind it. At any rate, Declarer can make the hand no other way.

Moral: Because there are 40 high card points in a deck, one should realize this and utilize the knowledge. There are many ways.

TO BE GUEST SPEAKER: Miss Jeanne Daman, a member of the Belgian Jewish underground during World War II, will be the guest speaker at the Vanguard and Benefactors dessert hour on behalf of the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island on Wednesday, October 4, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Irving J. Fain of 400 Laurel Avenue.

Miss Daman, a teacher, was instrumental in hiding and rescuing some 10,000 Jewish children from the nazis. After the war, she concentrated on the rehabilitation of Jewish youngsters who survived the nazi concentration camps. Many of these survivors have since emigrated to Israel.

In a special NBC series conducted several years ago, Miss Daman and several other Christians were honored for their efforts on behalf of Jews during the nazi regime in Germany.

Start Celebration This Year Of Israel's 25th Anniversary

NEW YORK — Candles glowed Tuesday on the 25-branch candelabra in the International Synagogue at Kennedy International Airport yesterday as Jews here began a year-long celebration of Israel's silver anniversary as a nation.

Although the 25th anniversary of the founding of Israel in 1948 will not occur until next year, the celebration begins this year.

The theme of Tuesday's ceremony was the traditional Hebrew blessing of "Shehechyanu" — a prayer of thanksgiving that was sung by Richard Tucker, the Metropolitan Opera tenor.

25 Hebrew Letters

The candelabra was made up of 25 Hebrew letters of the prayer, with each letter having a candle mounted on it. The candles were kindled by a torch brought here by Moshe Kol, Israel's Minister of Tourism — one of the 14 survivors of the 37 men and women who signed the Israeli Proclamation of Independence in 1948.

Mayor Lindsay issued a proclamation, citing Israel's achievements in sciences, medicine, social welfare and the cultural arts. Representing the Presidential candidates at the ceremony were Governor Rockefeller, who lighted a candle on behalf of President Nixon, and Senator Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut for the Democratic candidate, Senator George McGovern.

Both Senator Ribicoff and Governor Rockefeller read statements from the candidates. President Nixon said in his statement that "the commitment of our nation to the survival of Israel is an article of American faith." Senator McGovern called for "the right of Soviet Jews to join their brothers in Israel, free from ransom." The 25th candle was lighted by Jacob Stein, president of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, and chairman of the 25th Anniversary Committee, who said: "We express our love — as Jews and Christians."

for. But I doubt you can change Benedicts by law. If the Irish Parliament passed a law prohibiting bachelors from entering pubs and the Iranians pass their law prohibiting employment to single fellows, why, Ireland will become a nation of Teetotalers, and widespread indolence will afflict Iran.

America solved the marriage problem by making divorce easy. While our divorce rate is scandalous, it is still surprising the number of folks willing to try marriage over and over again. That's a step in the right direction. Convince a young man or woman the money doesn't commit them for life. Or the Irish could devalue their pound and the Iranians could up it. Or the other way around, I'm not sure.

Report Nasser's Widow Under Close Surveillance

LONDON — The late President Nasser of Egypt deposited L10 million in a Swiss bank for his wife before he died in September, 1970, and left instructions that the money should only be paid to her personally.

Subsequently, Mrs. Nasser has been under round-the-clock surveillance by Egyptian security men to prevent her from going to Switzerland to collect the money.

Before his death Nasser was reported to have told his then Vice-President, Anwar Sadat, who succeeded him, and Hussein el Shafei, Sadat's predecessor as vice-president, that he had sent the money to Switzerland in case it was needed for a counter-coup in the event of an Army rising against his regime because of Egypt's unending humiliation at Israel's hands. (Shafei was reappointed Vice-President by Sadat later.)

Nasser warned the two men that his wife alone would decide after his death how the money was to be spent and Sadat now fears that Mrs. Nasser and her family may leave the country, collect the money and never return to Egypt.

Mrs. Nasser is reported to have expressed great displeasure at Sadat's rude references to her husband in public speeches and to have told him that he must look elsewhere for financial support to stage a counter-coup should he be ousted.

Last June, Mrs. Nasser sent a secret message to her friend, Mrs.

EXCITEMENT AHEAD: It's time to welcome home "our" R.I. Reds of hockey and I emphasize the "our" because there's been so much written and said about the parent club, the N.Y. Rangers. G.M. Emil Francis of the Rangers has been making big promises concerning the make-up of "our" team and he has appeared very sincere about his prognostications. So, here they come — the R.I. Reds — and they'll play on Cape Cod and in Meehan Auditorium before making their bow in the much discussed Civic Arena. In the meantime, we've been a-rootin' for the Red Sox, the Yankees, the Patriots and so forth, all belonging to other communities. The R.I. Reds are "ours" and we're proud of "G. Sage & Co." We're glad to be tied up with the Rangers and I'm thinking that the Rangers will be just as glad that they're tied up with us. So now, all that awaits is that first night.

QUESTIONS — NOSTALGIA: "Who were the umpires in that historic 20-inning Providence College-Brown U. baseball game? Who was the Brown pitcher? And a hundred other questions that have been asked during the past fortnight, brought to mind when Charlie Reynolds moved on to the greatest of big leagues. Some of the questions could have been only answered by the well-liked Charles who was an easy-going fellow capable of pouring oil on any troubled waters, well liked in many fields of accomplishment, especially in the world of sports. Charlie left an indelible mark on everyone he came in contact with down through the years, remembered as an affable fellow, always ready to help, as much as for the remarkable record-book recorded 20 inning pitching achievement when he shut out the Brown baseball team while winning a 1 to 0 verdict back in 1924.

Third Synagogue Fired In Padua

ROME — Police in Padua said that they believed a neo-Fascist organization was responsible for the fire that engulfed the Padua synagogue only hours after Rosh Hashana services ended.

Police said the inscription "Long Live Freda" was found on the synagogue wall, referring to a neo-nazi presently under indictment for anti-Semitic propaganda and terrorists acts including the December 12, 1969, bombing of the Agricultural Bank in Milan in which 18 persons were killed. No arrests have been made.

The Padua synagogue was the third in Italy to be set afire in recent months. The other two were in Gorizia and Trieste. There were no arrests in either case and the investigations have petered out. The Padua synagogue is located in the old Jewish Ghetto on the site of an ancient synagogue that was burned to the ground by Fascists in 1935.

ANSWERS: For some of those who have asked, here are a couple of answers to some of the questions. The umpires in that memorable game were Jack Finnell and Henry Devron, a pair of the finest baseball arbiters in baseball history. And the pitcher for Brown was Elmer Duggan, a left-hander who fanned 29 in a losing effort. Duggan went into professional baseball with the Yankee organization for a while; Reynolds moved into the Eastern League as a pro for a brief career. Both, apparently, could have stayed if they had desired. Overlooked by many is the fact that Charlie Reynolds faced Brown the very next year and turned in another extraordinary decision when he pitched the Friars to a 2 to 1 decision in 18 innings. Those performances were enough for immortality for Charlie Reynolds who overshadowed them in his personal life everyday in how he played the game. A gentleman who knew how.

WORLD RECORD: Joe Lombardo, Sr., of Waterbury, Connecticut, set a new world record in Duckpins when he averaged 142-48 for 105 games in the 1971-72 season just finished. The former record was held by Vincent Diver of Silver Spring, Maryland. . . . And a 30 woman team in Randallstown, Maryland, set a new World record for a single team game recently with a score of 450. In fact, the Duckpin bowlers must be improving, according to "The Duckpin World," sent out by Executive Secretary A.L. Ebersole. The first page headlines five stories of record breaking games.

STEWART SHAFFER, an ardent archery enthusiast, discussed the "English Long Bow." "It was 6 feet long with a 100 lb. pull," says Stewart. All English boys, back in the 12th through the 15th centuries, had to learn how to use the bow by the time they were seven years old, according to Mr. Shaffer. He says, "English Archers were called 'Yeomen' because of the type of wood; the Long Bow being made from the Yew Tree. In the Hundred Year War between France and England, the French had over 10 million men and the English between three and four million. Mastery of the Long Bow was the determining factor for English victories." No wonder Mr. Shaffer is so interested in Archery! He seems to know his history! . . . CARRY ON!

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE JERUSALEM — A group of Americans living in Israel has founded the "Americans for McGovern Committee" to campaign for the Democratic presidential candidate in the forthcoming elections. Headed by Dr. Miron Sheskin, a Jerusalem resident for two years, the committee includes Hal Lieberman, a New York lawyer, and Samuel Felman of Pittsburgh, an industrialist with interests in Haifa.

Thomas L. DeFelice, Jr., of DeFelice Realtors in North Providence, has announced its affiliation with Data Realty Corporation, the Brookline, Massachusetts, investment property firm.

by Dr. Joseph R. Wilder, director of surgery at the Hospital for Joint Diseases. Dr. Wilder has organized a department of surgery to train black and white residents and interns from foreign lands.

According to Mr. DeFelice, this affiliation gives his organization the added ability to serve the local area with expert assistance in selecting or selling real estate investment properties, including apartment houses, office buildings, shopping centers and land.

Data Realty Corporation handles more than $30,000,000 in real estate investment sales annually and is headed by John M. Peckham, III.

walls of concrete can't keep out the fear.

Imagine living with a constant dread of attack 2½ miles from the border. The inhabitants of the Israeli border town Beit Shean have built cement "guest rooms," individual security rooms for each dwelling with walls of 9-inch reinforced concrete that can withstand all but a direct hit. Perhaps these security rooms will help the people of Beit Shean to sleep a little better. But when they wake there are other things to worry about. Many of them are immigrants from countries of oppression. They must learn new trades and struggle with inadequate housing. The people of Israel must now devote all their resources to defense and cannot help as they did before. These humanitarian needs are now our complete responsibility. Here at home we have added the urgent needs of our elderly to the 26 agencies seeking Federation support. We must meet our obligation to fellow Jews in distress here at home and all over the world. ### Egypt, Libya Agree To Cairo As Capital

CAIRO — President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt and Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, the Libyan leader, recently agreed that Cairo would be the capital of the proposed union between their two countries. They also agreed that the union would have a single president elected by popular vote, a single government and a single political party, but that its regions would have far-reaching authority.

The agreement, reached after three days of talks in Tripoli, Libya, was announced after Mr. Sadat's return here. It was the leaders' first step to carry out their decision, made August 2, to work toward merging their countries before September, 1973. The August decision provided for gradual unification subject at every step to a veto by either country.

The existing Federation of Arab Republics, of which Syria is the third partner with Egypt and Libya, already has a federal Government, with Cairo as the capital and a single President, Mr. Sadat.

Syria has shown no intention to join the new union. President Hafez el-Assad of Syria and Colonel Qaddafi have often been at odds. Mr. Sadat and Colonel Qaddafi said today that the Egyptian-Libyan union would be open to any Arab country that wished to join.

Herb DeSimone on OPEN GOVERNMENT

I believe government by a few, for a few, is intolerable. The people of Rhode Island have an absolute right to know what is happening in their government.

Our state government is no place for closed meetings and secret information. The business of government is the people's business.

As Governor, I will open the records, the meetings, and the hearings of all state departments and agencies to the public and the press — to everyone. The Governor has the authority to do this. And I will.

In addition, I will introduce into the General Assembly a sweeping right-to-know bill. I want to open the committee meetings of our General Assembly — where the crucial decisions are made before bills reach the floor. And I want to open all other branches of state government not under the direct authority of the Governor, such as public authorities and boards that use state monies.

Of course, certain records, such as your health records and tax returns, concerning the privacy of the individual must and will continue to remain confidential.

I will publish the state's financial report on a regular basis so that you will always know the financial status of your government, and so that you can see exactly how and where your tax dollars are being spent.

Rhode Islanders should never again be left in the dark about what's going on in their state government, and especially about the state's fiscal condition.

I call this "Open Government." I believe in it.

Elect Herb DeSimone Governor

Raising Pork In Israel Is Difficult, Profitable

TEL AVIV — It is not easy to raise pork in Israel, but it is profitable. For despite an ancient biblical ban on pork consumption by Jews, the forbidden meat is steadily infiltrating into Israeli menus.

The reason: it tastes a lot better than the low-grade beef sold by Israeli butchers and restaurants.

"Of their flesh shall ye not eat," commands the Bible, "and their carcass shall ye not touch; they are unclean to you" (Leviticus 11:8).

The dietary laws were set down in the Bible but a Tel Aviv rabbi admits frankly: "People want to eat pork and the government won't ban its sale."

The National Religious Party, which holds a key place in Prime Minister Golda Meir's coalition cabinet, would dearly like to institute a blanket ban on pork-raising and selling in Israel.

A supreme court ruling has stopped such efforts, and the government has dodged the issue by allowing local authorities to formulate their own pig policy.

This has resulted in a confusing tangle of legislature whereby pork may be legally purchased and eaten in one town, and be illicit as heroin in another, depending on the size of the religious population.

In Tel Aviv, Israel's largest city with 400,000 residents, the rules ban the display of pork in shop windows, and restaurants may not include the words pork, ham or bacon on their menus.

Thus restaurants advertise "white steak" or "special steak," and price it slightly higher than ordinary beef.

One chain of American-style sandwich stores uses "oink" as its euphemism for the outcast word.

Licenses for pork sale must be obtained from the municipal veterinary departments. But most restaurateurs and butchers believe the department is wholly infiltrated by rabbinical officials who try to block granting such licenses.

Purveying pig without a license can result in a fine of up to $100, and the confiscation of the pork.

However, pork-selling has become so lucrative that even the fines are no deterrent, and dozens of cases are heard in court every month.

The religious authorities hold one trump — the "kosher certificate" which a restaurant needs if it wants to do business with observant Jews.

The government has restricted pig farming to northern Israel, hoping that it will be carried out chiefly by the Christian Arabs living in that area. But Mizra, a Marxist kibbutz near Nazareth, quickly cornered the market and has become the country's main pig-breeder and supplier.

Some Israeli laws dictate that pigs cannot be seen in public, must be raised behind walls and high hedges, and transported in covered trucks.

Nir Yitzhak, another kibbutz, houses its pigs behind a camouflage of chicken coops. Inquisitive visitors are told the kibbutz is working in "animal husbandry research."

But at least in one respect, the stigma of the swine remains in full strength; hazir, the Hebrew word for swine is still one of the most insulting words a person can use in the Jewish state.

ANDRE GREGORY

Named As 'Work In Progress,' 'Endgame' Needs More Work

Samuel Beckett's Endgame — presented at Trinity Square Repertory Company by Andre Gregory's Manhattan Project — is for roughly three-quarters of its unbroken two-hour performance an unsatisfactory production. Mr. Gregory in a pre-curtain announcement billed it as work in progress, which it undoubtedly is; before its production later this year in New York, several matters merit attention.

Above all else, it needs some kind of coherence and focus; these exist in the script, and there are brief lucid moments onstage when the actors are not fumbling through an unplanned, unrehearsed series of improvisations on the play, but such moments were too few for an evening flawed also by lack of visibility, for some of the audience, and by the cast's inability or unwillingness to make themselves heard. Add the unseasonable heat and the director's invitation to everyone to go out for a soda when he felt like it (an invitation liberally accepted), and you have a strange opening night. The Manhattan Project's End- game is an American version, with bright white light instead of the gray Beckett's stage directions call for, and with props more familiar to us than a French equivalent would be. The directions have been changed or amplified, often for an interesting and different effect from that implied in the script. Song tags have been worked in, generally apropos ones. The actors playing Hamm and Clov, who carry the play, suggest possibilities that may be inherent but were not obvious in the script; in fact, some of the improvising (which is what it all seems like) is very good.

Mr. Gregory's opening remarks informed us that the production was a fluid one, and might be acted in quite another way on another evening. What was exciting, in conception, intent, or performance, may therefore be intensified during the three-week run. But it is probable that the major difficulty will remain: that the dramatic company which has worked together intensively since 1968 will continue to present a version of the play so satisfying to themselves that their creativity need not be tempered by disciplined stage movement, by speaking loudly enough to be heard or by pointing their scenes enough to keep the audiences with them. When Hamm said to Clov, "Do you think this has gone on long enough," there was obvious agreement among his other listeners.

LOIS ATWOOD
Endgame was produced by Lyn Austin and Oliver Smith; designed by Eugene and Franne Lee; and performed by four of the following persons: Gerry Bamman, Tom Costello, Saskia Noodhoek Hegt, Larry Pine, John Ferraro, Angela Pietropinto, Wally Shawn and Kathy Tolan. Also in the company is John P. Holms.

Roumanian Yiddish Theater Flourishes

NEW YORK — Jewish theater in Rumania, once a flourishing arena of competing traveling companies, has survived an anti-Semitic dictatorship and the Nazi occupation and is today a thriving testament to ethnic perseverance and the providence of national subsidies, according to a New York Times article by George Gent.

The survivors of those earlier Yiddish companies were incorporated in 1948 into the Jewish State Theater of Rumania, which is appearing here through Sunday at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in "The Dybbuk" and "The Pearl Necklace."

The 36-member company, making its first visit to North America and to a New York that was once a vital center of Yiddish repertory, reports that Jewish theater in Rumania is "alive and well" and seeking new worlds to conquer.

This is taking place despite a dwindling Jewish population, which has fallen from a pre-World War II high of 500,000 to 100,000. The decline is largely traceable to emigrations to Israel.

Members of the troupe were interviewed through a Rumanian Government translator, who travels with them, at the Manger Windsor Hotel on West 58th Street. Despite the flattening effect of such an arrangement, the enthusiasm of the members for the future of Yiddish theater in Rumania and for their first visit here was communicated.

"Before the war," said Franz Auerbach, the manager and artistic director since 1955, "there were several Yiddish-speaking companies in my country, but most of these were forced to perform cheap popular works — melodramas, romances and operettas — in order to pay their way."

"Today, because we are not forced to compete for audiences, we can offer a full repertory of Jewish and international classics, as well as presenting several new Yiddish works each season."

He explained that the theater was entirely supported by the Communist Government, which permitted the company to have a season from October 1 through June 1, with one month of paid vacation.

Sell-Out Audiences

The State Theater, which is in Bucharest, seats 300 and attracts sell-out audiences throughout the year, Mr. Auerbach said. The Yiddish-language performances draw many Gentiles and non-Yiddish-speaking Jews. Headphones provide simultaneous translations in Rumanian, German and French.

The repertory of 14 plays or musicals each season might include Yiddish classics like Ansky's "The Dybbuk" and Gordon's "Hershele Dubrovner," original works like Israel Berkovici's "The Pearl Necklace" and Yiddish translations of works by Moliere, Brecht, Chekhov or

Bolivian Admits He Is Klaus Barbie

LA PAZ — Klaus Altmann, the Bolivian businessman sought by the French as a suspected war criminal, has admitted that he is Klaus Barbie, the wartime Lyons Gestapo chief, according to a Bolivian Government spokesman.

But the spokesman said that Altmann was a naturalized Bolivian citizen and was entitled to the protection of the country's laws and he would not be extradited to France. There is no extradition agreement between the two countries.

He added that a Bolivian court would decide if he was liable to local legal proceedings on the basis of his admission.

Altmann arrived in Bolivia in 1951. Barbie was sentenced to death in his absence by a French military court after the Second World War for torturing and killing hundreds of French Resistance fighters.

Durrenmatt.

Yiddish theater began in Rumania with the now legendary Abraham Goldfaden, who presented the first professional company composed of cantors and choir members from local synagogues, in Jassy in 1876. The great tradition of traveling companies almost died under twin perils of the Antonescu dictatorship and the Nazi occupation during the war.

Yiddish Forbidden

Jews were forbidden to speak Yiddish in public or to participate in Jewish cultural activities. Many Jewish actors were sent to work camps. Mr. Auerbach, who spent three years in a camp, said, however, that Rumania was one of the few countries not to have had extermination camps.

Seidy Gluck, who appeared with Yiddish troupes before the war and whose grandparents were members of Goldfaden's company, served as a hairdresser during the war years. She recalls that the traditions of Yiddish theater were kept alive by clandestine performances in the synagogues of Bucharest.

"We were not permitted to have performances," she remembers, "so the Jewish community would petition the authorities to permit services for a noted Jewish writer. During the services, we would read from the author's poems or plays, and special music would be composed for the occasion."

"Sometimes the same writer was honored three or four times a year. Nothing was said as long as no one applauded. That would have made it a performance."

After the war the Yiddish Cultural Federation of Rumania founded a theater with an ensemble of well-known actors and promising new talent. That company was incorporated into the Jewish State Theater in 1948 and given a theater of its own.

The "wandering stars," as Sholom Aleichem called the traveling Yiddish players of his time, had finally found a permanent home.

Down With The Dollar!

If you had been the chief executive officer of your corporation for many years and you were suddenly informed by your board of directors that they had decided that for your own as well as your company's welfare you should henceforth share your responsibilities with a committee of other executives, how would you react to this decline in your power?

If you had been boss of social activities in your entire community since you were a young lady and suddenly other lesser leaders who had always deferred to your rules told you they were now going to make some rules of their own which you had to obey too, how would you respond to this downgrading in your status?

"I don't honestly know," say you?

Neither does the U.S. know how it wants to respond to very similar changes and challenges affecting us as an economic-political power and, more specifically right now, affecting the U.S. dollar as the once mightiest of all currencies in the world.

If you will try to translate into your own terms the bafflegab of the International Monetary Fund's meetings in Washington this week, you'll get a perspective on the terribly complex — but, oh, so important — monetary debates going on.

Here are the two fundamental points behind everything:

(1) When the postwar monetary system was put together at Bretton Woods in 1944, the U.S. was supreme in the free world.

We were physically unhurt by World War II, immensely wealthy, with a currency backed by enormous industrial power and vaults bulging with gold. In contrast to us, Europe was exhausted by war, impoverished, fragmented.

(2) Now, a bit more than a quarter-century later, the relationships have drastically changed. Without wasting space explaining why, our great trade surpluses have vanished; much of our industrial plant is obsolete; our dollar has been wantonly abused and in recent years has been under ruthless speculative attacks; our gold reserves have been depleted.

Simultaneously, Europe has been molding itself into a Common Market, soon to include Britain and to total 10 nations. Tortuously though the Common Market's progress may be, the trend in Europe is toward unity, common purpose, increasing power.

How do we in the U.S. react to this downgrading in our position? How do we view our new role?

We are really not sure.

It is because of this — as well as wide differences between the U.S. and other countries on such fundamentals as trade barriers, concessions in the area of national sovereignty (the gut of all gut issues!), the importance and price of gold — that only the dim outlines can now be seen of the system which will eventually replace Bretton Woods. But the following are likely to be part of any system:

- Our dollar would continue to be a key world currency — a first among equals — but it would cease to be the pivot around which other currencies revolve. No single national currency would ever again become the currency for all nations.

- Thus, we (our dollar) would give up the intolerable burdens we accepted at Bretton Woods so long ago — but, in return, we would have to play by generally the same monetary rules governing other nations.

- This would mean that when the dollar became overvalued and our international accounts plunged deeply into the red (a huge deficit in our balance of payments) we would devalue our currency and thereby make our goods more competitive in the world markets. And when our dollar became undervalued and our international accounts scared too far into the black (a huge surplus in our balance of payments), we would upvalue our currency and thereby make our goods less competitive in the world markets.

- We would accept more international disciplines in our domestic economic policies than we have ever accepted before.

- Currency rates would change much more frequently and become much more flexible under the supervision of a far more powerful International Monetary Fund.

- As the dollar's role diminished, so would the role of gold diminish in the international monetary system. Gradually replacing them as the world's reserve assets would be Special Drawing Rights.

TO LECTURE: Rabbi Arthur Green of Haverat Shalom College in Somerville, Massachusetts, will lecture on "God and Man in Judaism: The Classical Discussion" on Thursday, October 5, at 8 p.m. at Hillel House. Rabbi Green, who achieved national fame as the leading personality of the Haverat Shalom group, was invited to be guest lecturer for a second year by popular request according to Professor Benjamin Chinitz, chairman of the Adult Education Committee.

Form New Organization To Expedite Contributions

NEW YORK — Two major philanthropic organizations, in an unusual collaboration, announced last week the establishment of a "Jewish Communal Service" to expedite charitable contributions.

The project, described as a "philanthropic bank" to serve the metropolitan Jewish community, will be sponsored by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York and the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York.

Details were outlined in a news conference by Lawrence B. Bittenwieser, president of the federation; Herbert F. Tenzer, president of the United Jewish Appeal, and Frederic S. Berman, who was named executive vice president of the new organization.

Mr. Berman, who was the city's Rent Commissioner during the first Lindsay administration, said in his office at 745 Fifth Avenue that the Jewish Communal Service's main purpose was to "receive, manage and distribute charitable contributions from individuals, families and foundations, and also to aid contributors in meeting their long-term philanthropic goals." He said the service was tax-exempt.

Excess contributions to the service, he said, "may be carried forward as tax deductions for up to five years, as opposed to excess contributions to private foundations, which cannot be carried forward and are lost as deductions."

Mr. Berman, Mr. Tenzer and Mr. Bittenwieser emphasized that the service would not conflict with the annual campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

SEEKS COURT WRIT

HEBRON — Rabbi Meir Kahane, head of the militant Jewish Defense League (JDL) is seeking a court writ against the order issued by the Military Governor of the west bank preventing him from entering this city. The order was issued recently by the military command and delivered to Rabbi Kahane by special messenger. It was aimed at preventing Kahane and JDL members from "harassing" Hebron Mayor Sheikh Mohamed Ali Ja'abari, suspected by the JDL of not being altogether innocent of a hand in the massacres at Hebron and nearby Kfar Etzion in 1929 and 1948.

HELD IN KILLING
TEL AVIV — A clash between Russian emigres and Oriental Jews was narrowly averted in the new immigrant township of Migdal Haemek following the killing last week of a young soldier, Moshe Green, 18, who recently immigrated here from the Soviet Union. Two Oriental youths, were taken into custody and one of them reportedly confessed to the killing, which was the outcome of a brawl.

Phillipines' Woman Ambassador Sets Up Office In Israel

HERZLIA, Israel — Dr. Rafaelita Soriano, the Philippines' only woman ambassador, has brought along her love of art as a companion to her new post as envoy to Israel.

The walls and shelves of her office and residence are showcases of Philippine art, and her handsome stucco residence in this diplomat suburb of Tel Aviv is a virtual museum of Philippine culture and folklore.

Her collection has so enthused Tel Aviv museum officials that they are scheduling and exhibition of Filipino paintings.

But promotion of art is only one of the many activities that has kept the new ambassador busy since her arrival here.

There has been a constant round of introductory visits to Israeli ministries and institutions and the corps diplomatique. Dr. Soriano has initiated a fortnightly newsletter with Philippine news that is sent to more than 800 individuals, newspapers, businesses and institutions in Israel.

Getting to know her new post, her embassy staff, the political issues of the Middle East, preparing reports for Manila and setting up a new residence, have also kept Dr. Soriano busy.

"For the first three months I was working each day past midnight," she said. "Now things are less hectic and I am even able to enjoy the luxury of reading books again."

She pointed out that she had one disadvantage that her male colleagues — the men ambassadors — don't have.

"I have to wear two hats — one as head of the embassy and the other as head of the household."

Dr. Soriano, previous to her appointment, was assistant secretary for United Nations Affairs and International Conferences in the Manila Foreign Office. Her diplomatic assignment means separation from her husband, Dr. Jesus Llandera Soriano, acting head of medicine at the Manila Veterans Memorial Hospital, and from her daughter and grandchildren.

Report Moscow Jews Sentenced To Prison

MOSCOW — Seven Moscow Jews who staged a sit-down protest at Government offices against the new education taxes on would-be emigrants have been tried secretly and sentenced to 15 days in prison, Jewish sources have reported.

Two other Jews including a prominent activist, Aleksei Tumerman, have been put in mental hospitals. At least two more are being held at undisclosed prisons in Moscow, according to information that Jewish sources say was given them by the police.

The arrests were made last week when 40 to 50 Jews took part in or were preparing to take part in protests to the Supreme Soviet or its collective leadership, the Presidium. The taxes were enacted by the Presidium August 3 and were expected to be ratified by the full Supreme Soviet at its two-day session, though the Soviet press did not disclose that any action had been taken.

Jewish sources said about 10 Jews in Vilnius, Kishinev and Tbilisi had paid the education taxes, ranging from $5,000 to over $30,000 and affecting pensioners as well as regent graduates of higher educational institutions. But so far as is known, no one in Moscow has paid the taxes so far.

Chicago To Get Chagall Mosaics

NEW YORK — Marc Chagall has agreed to create a 70-foot-long outdoor mosaic structure in Chicago's Loop, a few blocks from Picasso's Colossus. The work is expected to take form next year on an open landscaped terrace at the First National Plaza. Made of ceramic murals designed by the artist, the work will be 14 feet high and 10 feet thick, covering more than 3,000 square feet.

Mayor Richard J. Daley thanked the artist and the project's sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. William Wood Prince, who commissioned the structure in memory of Frederick Henry Prince, a turn-of-the-century railroad financier. Mr. Chagall is to supervise the realization of the work, the theme of which will not be disclosed until it is completed.

TRANSFERRED TO PRISON

NEW YORK — Sylva Zalmanson Kuznetsov, 28-year-old engineer serving a 10-year strict-regime sentence in the Soviet Union, has been transferred from labor camp to prison for six months, according to Jewish sources here.

High Holiday season will be concluded with the Procession of the Scrolls at this time. Flags will be distributed to all children who participate in the service. A traditional festival Kiddush will follow the service.

On Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock, the festival service will start and will be followed by Yizkor services.

Two names which were omitted from the list of children who were consecrated during the service on the first day of Succos are Michael Idris and Henry Miller.

NAMED COORDINATOR: Jerald M. Engel of 124 Cinnabar Road, Irondequoit, New York, has been named coordinator of the newly established corporate information department office for the Kodak Apparatus Division.

A native of Providence, Mr. Engel began his career at Kodak in 1967 as a member of the public relations department. He was named editor, consumer and personnel news, in 1969, and appointed editor, business and education news, in 1970.

Mr. Engel, a graduate of Providence College, received a masters degree in public relations and communications management from the School of Journalism at Syracuse University.

He has been succeeded by James M. Albright of 11 Chelsea Way, Fairport, New York.

AMERICAN DEBUT
NEW YORK — The Brooklyn Academy of Music will present the American debut of the Jewish State Theater of Bucharest in two classic Yiddish plays. The Dybbuk and The Pearl Necklace. The plays, which will be in Yiddish with simultaneous English translations, will be presented in repertory until October 1. The Dybbuk by S. Ansky is based on Jewish folklore and is a serious treatment of Jewish mysticism. The Pearl Necklace, a musical revue by Israel Erkovici contains 50 of the most beloved Jewish folk songs in 16 scenes.

His oldest daughter, Dvorah, is a sophomore at the University of Wisconsin. Providence is her new vacation home. Sons Benjamin and Joel have found their places at Hope High School and Nathan Bishop Middle School. Mrs. Hellmann has also returned to school to get a master's degree in Art or Recreational Therapy at the University of Rhode Island.

The Hellmanns are looking forward to the challenge of Providence and the Community Center and to becoming an integral part of the community.

New Center Director Sees Exciting Future

rather than remaining open and flexible to change.

Mr. Hellmann realizes that the Jews of Providence have a unique opportunity in the Center in that the community is of a manageable enough size to really bring about the feeling of closeness which binds a group. In cities afflicted with urban sprawl, this feeling would be an impossibility even with such fine facilities as Providence has. The young director would like to see the "community" expand to include all the greater-Providence area.

Creating this center of gravity for a community, not a private club minus a golf course, is what Mr. Hellmann hopes to accomplish. He sees the primary function of the Center as being that of "a place for people to come and express themselves as Jews." It is a supplement to their informal knowledge of Judaism. Ultimately, he wants to "help them to do things that will make them like themselves better as Jews."

Although the expressed purpose of the JCC is to foster a positive Jewish identity, membership is open to anyone who can pay the fees. Those who cannot afford the expense are considered on an individual basis. "Scholarships" are given without regard to religion.

The facilities are exceptional. The Olympic size pool is the largest in New England. Meeting rooms and a social hall that accommodates 350 celebrants are rented out to interested groups. There are junior high dances sponsored by the Center as well as those for the Golden Age group.

The gym and health facilities include a sauna. Sinks, tables and handles in the junior lounges are all built to junior scale. Every kind of hobby and recreational activity is offered. There is a swimming team and a varsity basketball team, including cheerleaders. Bisque pottery, Bargello and Hatha Yoga are only some of the classes offered. The teenagers edit and print a monthly newsletter that says if there's program you want that is not offered, just ask!

The Sigmund Hellmanns like Providence. Mr. Hellmann became familiar with New England while getting his master's degree in Social Service from Boston University. Having played college and semi-professional soccer, he now referees for high school and college games.

The Treasure Chest
Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities
By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello again, my friends. I've just finished two weeks of jury duty. Quite an experience. Why is it so many people tremble at the thought of being chosen to sit in judgment of their peers?

Well, here's what we have for you this week!

Ever hear of a newsletter called Martha's Rare Bargain News? Neither did I until a few days ago. But it contains some of the most outstanding bargains and buys I've ever seen. Published monthly, I believe. You can get a free sample copy by writing 'Martha' at P.O. Box 11, Opelika, Alabama 36801.

Now, did you send a letter to me if you have a complaint against any dentist as I mentioned to you last week?

Most dentists, of course, are fine, conscientious men. But what about the few, as you are liable to meet in any profession, whose services you discover leave much to be desired?

If you have a complaint against a dentist here in Rhode Island, there is a Judicial Counsel you can bring it before. After hearing your complaint and discussing it with that dentist, they might go so far as to advise him to redo the work you found unsatisfactory. But that may be of little use to you. After all, once having gone through the aggravation of dental work only to discover it wasn't done right certainly doesn't leave you wanting that same dentist to ever work on you again. And what about those few unfortunates who find they had dental work done to them that was actually unnecessary? What good is such a judicial counsel to them?

Another avenue of redress, of course, is the courts. But to win a case against a professional man usually requires having a member of his profession testify in your behalf against him (an unlikely happening no matter how just your case may be).

So where does this leave you — helpless? No, not completely!

For instance, supposing you found someone who also had a complaint against the same dentist you did? Can you imagine the punch it would add to your case against that dentist if you could join forces with another of his patients who also had a serious grievance against him? A single patient complaint can often have no more effect than being a mere nuisance. But two unrelated complaints at the same time can be a jolting blow to any professional man's reputation.

If you have a complaint, get your letter in to me — I'm waiting to see them. I'll advise you from there.

Adieu, my friends.

HONOR DUTCH JEW AMSTERDAM — A bridge in the old Jewish quarter was named in honor of Walter Suesskind, a Dutch Jew who saved hundreds of Jewish children and adults from the Nazis. Suesskind, born of Dutch-Jewish parents, settled in Berlin but returned to Amsterdam in 1938. During the German occupation of Holland he was able to rescue Jews who had been rounded up for deportation, with the help of Dutch resistance groups.
