

Controversy Arises Over Naming Of Wehrmacht Officer As First Bonn Ambassador To Israel

JERUSALEM — A growing controversy over the expected appointment of a former Wehrmacht officer as West Germany's first ambassador to Israel reached the floor of Parliament this week.

Israel Barzelai, a leader of the Opposition Mapam party, said that the West German Government was "exploiting" the establishment of diplomatic relations by nominating Dr. Rolf Pauls, now a career diplomat.

The left-wing spokesman said the move was aimed at "rehabilitating all the German soldiers who had served in the war." He called on the Israeli Government to withhold approval.

"If Bonn really had a measure of goodwill and consideration for the feelings of the Jewish nation, where the remnants of the holocaust have gathered," he said, it "would have sought a candidate that had as far as possible no blemish in his past."

Foreign Secretary Golda Meir conceded that "this is not a routine case." But, she asserted, "No-body has been nominated by the Government of Germany, and no-body has been nominated by the Government of Israel."

"It is inconceivable," she added, "that the Knesset (Parliament) should discuss a candidate before there has been a proposal to the Government."

Mrs. Meir encouraged placing the dispute before the Foreign Affairs Committee rather than having an open debate. The House agreed.

Israeli officials have steadfastly declined to acknowledge that

Dr. Pauls has been formally nominated or that Asher Ben Nathan, former director general of the Israeli Defense Ministry, would be sent to Bonn.

However, these have been the only names mentioned in newspaper editorials and among Government officials and members of Parliament.

Mr. Barzelai argued that the Germans wanted the Israelis to believe that the Wehrmacht had "fulfilled its duties to the homeland like the soldiers of the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain."

"But the Wehrmacht was not like the others, and the duties of its officers were different," the Mapam leader declared.

He said they had been told that "a soldier must understand the need for steps that are grave but justified against the sub-human Jews."

Discuss Feasibility Of Merger Of Temples

At the direction of the boards of trustees of Temple Beth Israel and the Cranston Jewish Center, small committees, headed by their respective presidents, met this week to discuss the feasibility of an eventual merger of the two conservative congregations.

It was stressed that these first discussions were merely to explore possibilities, motivated by the desire to better serve the membership of both congregations and the Jewish community as a whole.

Further discussions will be held.

Psychiatrist, Rabbi Differ On Interfaith Dating Practice

BOSTON — Interfaith dating can be an enriching life experience, Dr. Rose N. Franzblau, noted Jewish psychiatrist, asserted in her syndicated column in The Jewish Advocate, Boston.

Dr. Franzblau made the reservation, however, "if youngsters are emotionally healthy and mature, and if the parents do not attach too much importance to it."

Rabbi Victor Weissberg of Chicago, writing in his Temple Beth El Bulletin, disagreed: "Often-times children seeking the novel, do not understand their primary allegiance and where the enduring sources of their happiness lie. The encouragement of our children to interdate must inevitably encourage them to intermarry."

Dr. Franzblau, who has spoken before B'nai B'rith Institutes of Judaism, was answering a mother whose daughter had been courted by a non-Jew at college even though admonished by her parents not to date a non-Jew.

"When youngsters find a boy unacceptable not because of what he is but because of his religious affiliation or his belief, they are violating the very principle of brotherhood their faith teaches."

To the mother, who had threatened to transfer her daughter to another school, Mrs. Franzblau said: "To teach loyalty to your faith and what it stands for, and also to assure that she will carry it on into the next generation, you must show faith in your youngster."

"To impose such severe limitations on her association with youngsters her own age is to fos-

Ben-Gurion Breaks With Mapai Party; Presents Independent Slate For Elections

TEL AVIV — David Ben-Gurion, the former Premier, broke away from the dominant Mapai party, which he founded 35 years ago. Mr. Ben-Gurion put out an independent list of candidates for the general election in November.

The former Premier reached his decision after several hours of discussion with his supporters in his home. The action is the culmination of months of bitter struggle within the party between Mr. Ben-Gurion and Premier Levi Eshkol, the successor he nominated two years ago.

At a rally of his supporters two weeks ago, Mr. Ben-Gurion called on them to withdraw from Mapai, the Israeli labor party. In a vitriolic attack on the present leadership, he said the party no longer had any right to exist.

Last June 3 the Mapai Central Committee nominated Mr. Eshkol as the party's candidate for the premiership in the November elections. Mr. Eshkol received 179 votes to 103 for Mr. Ben-Gurion.

Last month, two Ben-Gurion supporters—the Housing Minister, Yosef Almogi, and the Deputy Defense Minister, Shimon Peres—resigned from the Government because of the deepening rift between Mr. Eshkol and his former chief.

Earlier in May, Mr. Ben-Gurion and four of his top aides resigned from the Mapai Leadership Bureau.

The party rift stems from the 10-year-old "Lavon affair." The details have never been officially disclosed here.

The affair—Israel's biggest political issue—has been depicted in other countries as an abortive Israeli sabotage and spy plot in the United Arab Republic.

Responsibility for the affair was placed on Pinhas Lavon, who resigned as Defense Minister in 1955, denying that he was to blame.

A Cabinet investigation in 1960 exonerated Mr. Lavon, against Mr. Ben-Gurion's wishes, and laid the foundation for the present split. The party's old guard, made up of Mr. Ben-Gurion's former trusted lieutenants, largely support Mr. Eshkol. A younger party group, referred to as the "young lions," favor Mr. Ben-Gurion.

When David Ben-Gurion urged his followers on June 16 to break away from the Mapai party and form a party of "justice and comradeship," he made it clear that he thought little of Premier Eshkol's leadership of Mapai.

Mr. Ben-Gurion was not thought to be interested in a political comeback. It was believed that he wanted to rectify what he considered a blot on his record.

Although the former Premier and Mr. Eshkol had been close associates for many years, their friendship began to wane in 1964.

At that time Mr. Ben-Gurion demanded that the Eshkol Government re-examine a dispute between Pinhas Lavon, a former Defense Minister, and Col. Ben-Yamin Gibli, a former chief of military intelligence.

Ask For U.S. Aid Against Arabs

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Major American Jewish civic and religious groups called upon the United States Government to extend direct arms assistance to the State of Israel and thus assure her "of the capacity to maintain a convincing and effective deterrent to Arab aggression."

At the same time, representatives attending the 21st Plenary Session of the National Community Relations Advisory Council "deplored" the "criminal waste" of water being perpetrated by the Arab states in that part of the country, while at the same time denying Israel the right to implement a plan which would use a part of the Jordanian waters to develop parts of Israel.

In this connection the delegates from 76 community councils and eight national Jewish agencies called upon the United States Government to "condemn destructive acts of water diversion and to make it clear to the Arab countries that such acts constitute aggression which they cannot pursue with impunity."

Failure Of Congress To Include Limits Could Cause Showdown On School Aid

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — An expert on constitutional law last week predicted that failure by Congress to include constitutional safeguards in the aid to Education Action will cause eruption of a series of legal cases to test whether State or Federal funds are being used to circumvent the principle of strict separation of church and state.

Addressing the afternoon session of the 21st Annual Plenary Session of the National Community Relations Advisory Council were a panel of experts discussing the various aspects of church-state relations resulting from the Government's recently adopted Education Act.

Speakers were: Mr. Leo Pfeffer, Special Counsel, American Jewish Congress; Rabbi Balfour Brickner, Director, Interfaith Activities, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Dr. Norman Drachler, Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Detroit; and Mrs. Joseph Willen, Chairman and President of the National Council of Jewish Women.

Mr. Pfeffer saw the failure of Congress to include judicial review in the Education Act as an "invitation to lawlessness." He said, "the administration of the Federal Education Act will usher in an era of court litigation," pointing out that, "in this country, the courts are the ultimate guardian of the Bill of Rights and will act when the other governmental agencies default."

Rabbi Brickner reaffirmed the strong position on strict church-state separation being maintained by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Central Conference of American Rabbis through their joint Commission on Social Action.

The Reform Rabbi also told the delegates that at the CCAR convention last week in Cincinnati, the 900 member Reform Rabbinic Body agreed to serve as "watch dog" committees to check any infringement upon church-state relations and to make certain that funds being allocated under the new Education Bill are not used for sectarian purposes.

Dr. Drachler told the delegates, "I strongly urge that the implementation of the Act calls for the involvement of men and women representing the total community — and not be left merely to the parties most directly interested, school officials of public and private agencies."

"Let us keep in mind that those who expressed concern about the church and state are not anti religious, that the proponents of equal educational opportunities do not represent vested interests, and that the exponents of local school control are not enemies of better education. The cooperative endeavors of all are needed to accomplish the primary objectives of the Federal Education Act of 1965."

Burn Holy Scrolls In Jewish Center

NEW YORK — A number of Holy Scrolls were desecrated and burned last week in the Jewish Center at Rosedale, Queens. It was disclosed by center officials who said the hoodlums smashed the Holy Ark with an axe, ripped Bibles, tore prayer books, defaced prayer shawls and inked filthy inscriptions wherever their filthy hands reached out.

Rabbi I. Birenbaum, spiritual leader, said the congregation was offering a reward of $1,000 to the finder of the hoodlums. The center has a membership of 500.

Jewish Heads Discuss Radical Movements

ATLANTIC CITY — The heads of two major Jewish rights agencies sharply differed today on the strength of the radical-right movement.

Benjamin R. Epstein, the national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said Americans had been "lulled into a false sense of security" because of last November's elections, which delivered a "stern rebuke" to extremism.

He called attention to the recent growth of the right-wing groups, including the John Birch Society, and said the far right had used the elections as a "springboard for greater unification, wider respectability and greater acceptance."

Emanuel Muravchik, the national director of the Jewish Labor Committee, the civil rights arm of Jewish labor groups, said the extremist groups, including the Birch Society, were more isolated from "the mainstream of conservative opinion than they have been at any time since last year."

He said these groups did not present a real danger to the nation because they lacked a "broad appeal to the needs and insecurities of the mass of American people."

Both men spoke at the 21st annual meeting of the National Community Advisory Relations Council, the representative body of eight national Jewish civil and religious groups and 76 local Jewish community councils.

Jewish Agency Warns House Committee

WASHINGTON — A Jewish leader warned Congress this week against proposed amendments to the Constitution that would create a kind of "super-voter" in state elections.

Howard M. Squadron of New York, testifying for 38 member agencies of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, told a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee that proposals to permit apportionment of one house of a state legislature without regard to population would offer a "clear invitation to engage in the most blatant kind of discrimination."

"Apportionment could be made on the basis not only of geography but also of income, ownership of land, sex, religion or race," he declared.

Mr. Squadron, who is chairman of the Commission on Law and Social Action of the American Jewish Congress, told the House Committee:

"There can be no justification for giving state legislatures the power to determine that some citizens are better than others."

Better Golf The E. Z. Way

By Eddie Zaretsky

A centipede, was happy
quite, until a toad in fun, said—Pray, which leg goes after which?
This put his mind in such a fix, He fell distracted in a ditch,
considering how to run.

This little poem describes perfectly the trap we sometimes fall into about this time of season unless we are careful. For those who have fallen into the trap, hitting a golf ball has become a ceremony. They now concentrate on concentrating and literally freeze over the ball. What they have forgotten is that as long as they remain passive the golf club will do absolutely nothing for them. The club is a bad master but a good servant if you swing with authority.

Golf is an extraordinary game in many respects. In almost every case it inspires us to speculate and theorize on the whys and wherefors. Once the average golfer learns the basic fundamentals he must be allowed to theorize to some extent. On the other hand, if he does not recognize hitting the ball as his main business and theorizing as purely recreational, he will probably end up frustrated and susceptible to ill advised gimmicks for improvement.

Learn to get your principles straight and the details will fall in place by themselves. Even after you've eaten you must first digest your food before it does you any good.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Hans Katzenstein of Ticonderoga, N.Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Dania, to Jerald H. Greenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Greenberg of 13 Bull St., Newport.

Mr. Greenberg is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island where he was president and a charter member of Pi Mu Epsilon Mathematics honor society. He is currently employed by IBM in Poughkeepsie, and is studying for his Master's degree in Electrical Engineering at Syracuse University.

A September wedding is planned.

Jewish Family Honors Roman Catholic Priest

NEW YORK — A Roman Catholic priest from Belgium who withstood Nazi pressure and hid a Jewish family during World War II was honored last night by a Queens synagogue.

In the summer of 1942, the priest, the Rev. Hubert Celis, hid a 16-year-old Jewish girl named Regina Rotenberg, her sister and her two brothers. Despite pressure and threats, the priest kept the children safe.

Last Saturday, Norman Wolbrom, the son of Regina Rotenberg, now Mrs. Isaac Wolbrom, celebrated his bar mitzvah. Among the guests was Father Celis, who came from Brussels for the celebration.

Last evening he returned to the synagogue where public reception was held in his honor.

Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Cantor Ivan Perlman officiated at the 4 P.M. ceremony on Sunday June 20 which was followed by a reception at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Gowned in white silk faced peau de soie with an empire waistline, sheath skirt and re-embroidered Alencon lace outlining her portrait neckline, she was given in marriage by her father. Her elbow length veil of silk illusion fell from a headpiece of peau de soie with seeded pearls. She carried a cascade of orchids, phalaenopsis and stephanotis.

Wearing a gown of petal pink chiffon with an empire waistline, Miss Robin Lipson was maid of honor for her sister. Her bouquet was a cascade of hot pink and white daisies.

The bridesmaids were Miss Cynthia Tillman, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Kathryn Costa, Miss Barbara Dillingworth and Mrs. Alan Wineman. They wore matching gowns of pink chiffon and carried cascade bouquets of hot pink daisies. The mother of the bride wore a gown of aqua crepe and the bridegroom's mother was gown in jade chiffon.

Arnold Tillman served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Jeffrey Tillman, David Jacobsohn, Leonard Santopadre and Marshall Strasberg.

The Better Way

It has been obvious for several years that the South Providence area has been rapidly losing a good part of its large Jewish population. The recent population survey confirmed what the congregations in the South Providence area had already discovered.

The younger members of the Jewish population have moved to the suburbs — Cranston, Warwick, Barrington — where there is more room for their children, where land and housing are less expensive. Others, young and old, have moved to the East Side; more keep moving constantly out of the South Providence area as the neighborhood deteriorates, as old neighborhoods do.

At the time of the redevelopment of the Willard Avenue area, several of the small synagogues banded together to form Congregation Shaare Zedek. It was undoubtedly a difficult decision for them to make — instead of being an autonomous unit, each synagogue had to be just part of a larger whole. Certainly there must have been some dissension at the beginning and there must have been some trouble — but common sense helped to save the situation. Although it sounds trite, the old saying "in union there is strength" still holds true. Each one of the synagogues by itself would have had to give up — together they form a congregation.

Conservative Temple Beth Israel is feeling the loss of the Jewish population as are the orthodox Congregations of Sons of Abraham and Shaare Zedek. Without members and without money, enthusiasm and hard work can accomplish just so much.

Temple Beth Israel and the Cranston Jewish Center have started discussions as to the feasibility of eventually merging. There have been discussions of the same sort between Congregations Shaare Zedek and Sons of Abraham.

Neither group has decided on any definite move, and it will take many discussions before anything is done. But the fact that the leaders of these congregations have the foresight and wisdom to consider the possibility that by combining they can accomplish more than each can do by itself, brings the satisfying realization that there are still people who feel that the good of many individuals is worth more than the good of only a few.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

U. S. DOLLAR IN PERSPECTIVE

Q.: What currency of what, leading nation has chalked up the worst record for stability in buying power in the past decade?

A.: The franc of De Gaulle's France. The franc's rate of loss since 1954 has been 4.4 per cent a year—compounded annually. Despite limited price controls and brakes on credit and government spending, the franc still lost 3.3 per cent in buying power last year. This is a brutal financial fact of life which De Gaulle has been trying to cover up by his sniping at the U.S. dollar and his publicized conversion of France's surplus dollars into gold.

Q.: What currency of what leading nation has chalked up the best record for buying power stability in the past decade?

A.: The U.S. dollar. The dollar's rate of loss since 1954 has been 1.4 per cent—and in 1964 alone it was a scant 1.3 per cent. Here are other key facts and related fears.

FACT: A fundamental yardstick of a major currency's worth is the stability of its buying power. Against the dollar's loss of 1.3 per cent in 1964, consider these rates of currency depreciation:

Germany, down 2.2 per cent; Switzerland, down 2.9 per cent; Netherlands, down 5.3 per cent; United Kingdom, down 3.2 per cent; Italy, down 5.6 per cent; Japan, down 3.7 per cent.

FEAR: A renewed wage-price leapfrogging could smear our record. After a period of prolonged stability, wholesale prices have risen 1.8 per cent in the past nine months. Our consumer price index is likely to rise at least 1.5 per cent this year—even in the face of price cuts resulting from excise tax cuts. If corporation profits are squeezed by rising costs, businessmen well may try offsetting price hikes. Accelerating price increases here would undermine both the buying power and the status of the U.S. dollar.

FACT: We are now making remarkable progress in drying up the red ink in our international accounts (narrowing the deficit in our balance of payments). The "voluntary" efforts of businessmen and bankers to curb the outflow of dollars actually have switched our balance of payments into the black in recent months. We are giving other nations a preview of what it will mean when U.S. dollars no longer fuel their economic expansions so freely. We are establishing the background against which we can hold full-scale discussions with other major nations on reforming the free world's monetary system so that the U.S. dollar won't have to carry so heavy a burden and a sufficient supply of funds will be assured to finance expanding world trade.

FEAR: The very extent of the progress made to date will encourage private corporations to relax their efforts—before we've found "permanent" ways to bring our earnings and spending abroad into closer balance. This could shake foreign confidence in our dollar and spur new calls on our gold by holders of U.S. dollars.

The dollar must be in particularly solid condition this fall in case another crisis of the British pound develops. Timing is of the essence—and if ever there was no time for complacency about the dollar, this is it.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

Zero Mostel was among those fortunate enough to attend Vladimir Horowitz' comeback concert at Carnegie Hall last month. In exchange, Mostel supplied the tickets for Horowitz to see him perform in "Fiddler on the Roof." The star of the musical had to buy the tickets from a speculator.

After the performance Horowitz marveled: "You do this every day?" Mostel nodded: "And twice a week I do two performances a day." The pianist shook his head, in awe, and Mostel said: "But how about the way you performed at Carnegie Hall? What a concert!"

Horowitz replied: "Ah, but I do it only once every 12 years."

The same cameraman who photographed the Richard Burton-Elizabeth Taylor wedding for Life magazine—Henry Grossman—also photographed the Sybil Burton-Jordan Christopher wedding. . . Natalie Wood, co-star of "The Great Race," will stay at Warner Bros. for the film version of "Poor Richard." . . The movie of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" will be made in Madrid, using Sam Bronston's great sets from "Fall of the Roman Empire."

Joan Baez, the peculiar folk-singer, attended a party where she met Goddard Lieberson, head of Columbia Records. She said to him: "Oh, you're very boring." . . Lieberson told her: "I would have said you are very beautiful." . . Miss Baez replied: "Well, at least we're both honest." . . "Perhaps we're both honest," said Lieberson, "but I'm afraid we're both wrong."

Steve McQueen flew to Paris to merchandise a line of men's sports clothes he designed, called "Big Chief." He's a major partner in the project. . . Beatrice Lillie will star in "High Spirits" at the Paper Mill Playhouse.

When Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton board the Michelangelo in Naples, Richard Marryman of Life will fly there to join them on the journey to New York.

He'll help Miss Taylor write her book for Harper and Row.

Benny Friedman, the Hall of Fame quarterback, runs a quarterback-training place, Camp Cohut, in Oxford, Me. Friedman, who began in the pre-huddle days when quarter-backs shouted their signals, says he trained his younger brother, Jerry—who became a fullback on the high school team in Cleveland. He checked on why his brother, a better field general, was not the quarterback. The explanation satisfied him: "He can't be a quarterback this year, his voice is changing."

The Philippine Air Lines' routes cover such long distances that it will introduce double-feature films on flights. . . Tuesday Weld, who accompanied Bob Hope on his last GItour, will play Hope's daughter in his new film, "I'll Take Sweden." . . For the ABC-TV special, "Lady Bird Johnson's Washington," her views on the pollution of the Potomac River were filmed during her cruise on the river. The TV crew gave her a movie director's chair marked "First Lady."

The Dowager Duchess of Northumberland, who died at 78 last week, acquired a new daughter-in-law some years ago. She took the bride-to-be to the place where the family jewels have been stored for generations. She sent for the ancient jewel boxes and, as many of her predecessors had done for their daughters-in-law, showed her the collection she'd eventually inherit: "You and I, my dear, are only the pegs on which the Dukes hang their jewels."

Xavier Cugat, a regular at Danny's Hideaway, does caricatures of the other customers there and inscribes them to each—just to keep in practice. . . Producer Sam Spiegel gave permission for Marlon Brando to interrupt filming of "The Chase" to fly East for the huge press preview of his Fox film, "Morituri." . . It will take place at the Concord this weekend. . . An 80-year-old lady refused to be led from the dance floor at Arthur, where she did The Jerk.

A notorious free-loader disregards all insults in pursuing his determination to get into a banquet hall. Last week he telephoned Bob Ullman, the press agent, about obtaining a free ticket to the Tony Award dinner. When he became persistent, Ullman said, "No, Johnny, I tell you no. You are the cheapest, worst, unethical pest I've ever met. I never want to talk to you again," and hung up. . . A moment later, Ullman's phone rang again: "Hello Bob, Johnny. We were cut off. . ."

The late Gregory Ratoff was the first man to buy the movie rights to a James Bond story. He paid Ian Fleming $10,000 for the rights to "Casino Royale." . . Charles K. Feldman, the producer, then bought the rights from Ratoff's widow, for $75,000. . . James Baldwin will write his new novel in Greece and Turkey. . . James T. Farrell, now writing his 42d book, is being published in Rumania, Poland and Bulgaria.

Jan Peerce and Robert Merrill sang "Rigoletto" in Dallas last week. Peerce, as usual, reached the auditorium at 6:30 and Merrill, as usual, arrived in his dressing room at 7. Peerce started to put on his costume—but each time he'd be interrupted by strange men suddenly entering his dressing room. . . Then he learned the reason for these strange visits: Merrill had painted one word on Peerce's door, "GENTS."

Show Evidence Of Soviet Prejudice

GENEVA — Evidence on the persecution of Soviet Jews in the religious, cultural and economic fields was presented here recently at a mass meeting organized by the General Association of students and the Geneva Union of Jewish Students.

Jacques Nantet, Catholic writer and rapporteur of the League for Human Rights, and Ephraim Turi, a journalist, both from Paris, presented documents and illustrations dealing with the problems of Soviet Jewry. The speakers emphasized the systematic denial of the existence of the Jewish community in the Soviet Union.

Buber's I-Thou, I-It Relationships Explained

JERUSALEM — Israel's Knesset rose here during an eulogy by Speaker Luz, honoring the famed Martin Buber. Luz stated that Buber, was one of the "greatest men of the spirit to come forward from the Jewish people in the last few generations."

"He was one of the few personalities who left their mark on the times in which they lived. His influence on the spiritual life of the Jewish people and the entire world will be felt for many generations to come."

The Tel Aviv Al Hamishmar wrote, "With his death we lose one of the titans of our renaissance — a bridge-maker between eras, between creeds, cultural climates, people and nations. Wherever he turned, he brought greatness with him: as thinker, in his research in the mysticism of Israel and other nations, as Bible scholar and master translator, as a seeker of the ways of men and Man's way to God in his heart and last but not least, in arousing and stimulating debate between thinkers, beyond all barriers of prejudice and fanaticism."

The "New York Times" gave him much of the credit for the present ecumenical spirit between faiths. The Times said Prof. Buber "was a theological bridge-builder long before ecumenism achieved its present popularity. He served as a kind of patron saint for towering Christian intellectuals, Paul Tillich, Reinhold Niebuhr, Jacques Maritain and Gabriel Marcel."

"It was he, with his doctrine of 'I-Thou' personalism, who showed the way. For Buber, the God of Abraham was no icy abstraction or loveless Prime Mover but a Person, infinitely lovable and loving. Love, he said, is the key to the mystery of existence and points the way to divinity. 'Every particular Thou is a glimpse through to the eternal Thou.' Men find God by discovering each other; there is no other way."

The N.Y. Times said Buber's philosophy of personalism was an amalgam of religious mysticism, Old Testament inspiration, modern psychology and earthy common sense. It contended that man could achieve an intimate relationship with God through an intimate interrelationship with his fellow man, and that each man's relationship with God and a fellow man was distinct.

Religion for Buber was experience, not dogma. He doubted that man was made to conform with Bible law. The responsibility to be one-self means, in Professor Buber's view, that there is no rigid fate; that man can improve his chances for happiness.

According to Buber, man has an obligation to achieve an identity by refusing to abdicate his will before the monolithic power of party, corporation or state.

Buber pointed to the duality of love and justice, freedom and order, good and evil. He did not suggest a happy middle way between them.

Prof. Buber suggested two forms of relationships for man — an I-it relationship and an I-Thou. The first is impersonal and imperfect.

An example of the I-it relationship would be where one person treats another as a machine, or when lovers find only a projection of themselves in each other.

In religious matters, the I-it is expressed when man abstracts God, or regards him as out of reach, or builds theological systems in which God is remote, or considers God too vast. Professor Buber, however, did not deny that God was the great mystery of the Old Testament, but he insisted that He was also personal.

The I-Thou of Prof. Buber's thinking stands for the kind of dialogue — love or even hate — in which two persons face and accept each other as truly human. There is in such a dialogue, he argued, a fusion of choosing and being chosen, or action and reaction, that engages man's highest qualities.

I-Thou meetings, he explained, are "strange, lyric and dramatic episodes, seductive and magical, but tearing us away to dangerous extremes . . . shattering security."

The I-Thou relationship, because it does away with pretension, permits man to meet with himself, Professor Buber said. And, ultimately, it brings man into contact with God, whom Professor Buber called the "Eternal Thou."

Believing that man's earthly chore is to realize his distinctiveness through the dialogue process, Buber opposed both rigid individualism and collectivism. His social ideal was a small community like the kibbutzim.

Buber also looked at Scripture in a special way. The Bible, in his view, was neither an infallible guide to conduct nor a mere collection of legends, but a dialogue between Israel as Thou and God as I.

Because of this interpretation and because Professor Buber was casual in his observance of Talmudic law, many Orthodox rabbis looked upon him as a heretic. As for Reform Jews, some of them also criticized Professor Buber because they thought he had made too much of the metaphysical Hasidic sect, from which he drew many of his ideas.

Can you change the trump suit in the middle of the hand? Well, not really; but it amounted to that in this hand played by George Levine and Lawrence Gates, both of Providence, South and North. East and West were vulnerable with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
Pass	Pass	2C*	2D
Pass	3D	3H	3S
4H	Pass	Pass	Pass

*South's opening bid of 2 Clubs was an artificial bid showing an extremely powerful hand and was forcing to game when he rebid 3 Hearts. North's hand improved immensely when he heard the Hearts mentioned and he could even envision slam if his Club suit could be brought into the picture. He took the safe course, however, and settled for the game in Hearts.

West led the Diamond Ace, ruffed in Dummy. Despite the fact that this set up declarer's King, it still led to a complication which no South was able to cope with except Mr. Levine; for when he led a low Heart from the dummy to his Ace, West showed out meaning that East had more trumps than the dummy now.

South next played the Ace and King of Clubs and when the Queen fell he saw that he could utilize dummy's Clubs as trumps in this way: He played a small Heart to Dummy's 10. At this point dummy had 1 trump left, the Jack; while East had two, but see how declarer put the Clubs to work for him. He played the good Club Jack discarding a Diamond, then the next Club which East had to trump and South overruffed. This reduced East's trump holding to one which was taken away from him when Declarer played a low Heart to dummy's Jack. The other two Clubs were now used for valuable Spade discards giving South a total of 12 tricks.

By making 6, Mr. Levine received a fine score, and he made it without having to guess the location of the Spade Ace, which he would have probably guessed wrong influenced by West's strong bidding. The other players made either 4 or 5 depending on whether they set up one Club or not. Had the Club Queen not dropped, the alternate play of trumping a Diamond could still have been put into operation.

Today's moral: Do not put all your eggs in one basket unless that is the only one available. When you can play it one way without giving up the alternate method, by all means give yourself every opportunity.

BEEF STROGANOFF

- 3 slices shoulder steak
- 2 large onions
- 2 tbsp. salad oil or shortening
- 1 clove garlic pressed or diced
- 1 can cut up mushrooms
- sliced peppers (optional)
- 1 can tomato sauce

In large covered frying pan or skillet saute the sliced onions in the oil till opaque. Add the drained mushrooms and sliced peppers.
When vegetables are soft, remove from skillet. Cut the meat in 1/2" wide strips. Place meat in same skillet and sear by turning meat frequently. When meat is entirely seared, put the sauteed vegetables over the meat. Add salt to taste and 1 can tomato sauce. Cover, bring to boil, turn heat down to simmer and cook for 1 hour or longer. However, if allowed to simmer 2 or 3 hours, the flavor is enhanced. Served over plain boiled rice or noodles, it makes an excellent meal. Tossed salad as a side dish complements the meal.

UJA Closes In On Goal; $32 Million Collected

NEW YORK — Jewish community central fund-raising campaigns in 1965 in support of both local and overseas needs are running at a 7.4% increase over last year's campaigns and already have remitted $32,100,000 in cash to the United Jewish Appeal for its 1965 global aid programs.

That was the current picture reported to 150 key community leaders attending the meeting of the UJA National Campaign Cabinet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel recently by Edward Ginsberg of Cleveland, Cabinet Chairman.

Speakers at the all-day sessions included Abraham Harman, Israel's Ambassador to the United States; Rabbi Herbert A. Friedman of New York, UJA Executive Vice-Chairman, and Philip Zinman of Camden, N.J., and Philadelphia, Pa., a UJA National Chairman who heads the National Cash Committee.

Israel's Ambassador to the U.S., Abraham Harman, told the leaders that by keeping her doors open to all Jews who wish or need to go there, and diverting such a huge percentage of her national resources to absorb them, Israel is protecting the most vital interests of the Jewish people in this century.

He urged the leaders to remember that Israel is the only country which has as its central purpose Jewish immigration.

"Although we have received more than 1,300,000 Jews within a short period, Jewish immigration still continues. Ours is a wide open door policy which allows every Jew to come in, many of whom would not be eligible for immigration to any other country, and that policy will remain the most dominant factor in our national life.

Rabbi Friedman warned the leaders that the fundraising results reported to them, while showing an encouraging upswing, would fall far short of meeting the total needs this year for the UJA-supported programs in Israel, Europe and other areas of distress.

Rabbi Friedman pointed out that the principal source of contributions to the Jewish Agency for Israel, which is responsible for the transfer, resettlement and economic absorption of Jewish immigrants coming to Israel, is the United Jewish Appeal.

Stating that the current UJA drive is a particularly vital one because the continued heavy immigration to Israel for the fifth successive year has placed a severe strain on the capacity of the citizens of Israel to absorb newcomers into their life and economy, Rabbi Friedman said:

Mr. Zinman, who is leading the UJA's National Cash drive said the $32,100,000 realized by the UJA thus far "was a heartening response from the Jews of America to meet a financial emergency confronting overseas welfare agencies."

This financial emergency, Mr. Zinman noted, was created partially by the comparative level line of UJA fundraising results which had been the norm throughout the United States for the past five years, and by the termination beginning this year of the West German Reparations Agreement which had provided between $7 million and $71/2 million annually, for the past 12 years, for the Joint Distribution Committee's global welfare and reconstruction programs.

Reiterates Position On Soviet Russia

TEL AVIV — Dr. Nahum Goldmann reiterated here Monday that he had consistently supported demonstrations and protests over the Soviet suppression of Russian Jewry's religion and culture but that he also insisted that such actions be based on facts.

His comments on his arrival here were the latest development in an international dispute touched off by a press conference he held in New York on June 10 in which he cautioned against "distortions" in Jewish-sponsored protests on behalf of Soviet Jewry.

He declared at the airport on his arrival here that the Israeli press enunciations of him were based on reports which were inadequate and which did not give a true picture of what he said on June 10.

Insisting that his remarks concerned the form of treating the issue and not the issue of protests per se, he said he had always supported explanatory campaigns on the situation of Soviet Jewry vis-a-vis other minorities in the Soviet Union.

He said that the word "genocide" had been used in some protests and asserted that this was untrue as a description of what was happening to Russian Jewry.

Grants To Eleven

Social Work Students

NEW YORK — Eleven students of social work have been awarded scholarship grants by the National Scholarship Committee of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds. It was announced this week by Mrs. A. Louis Oresman of New York City, committee chairman.

The grants range from $500 to $1500 and are matched by communities sponsoring the students.

Six recipients are receiving scholarships for the first time. They and their sponsoring communities are: Stephen W. Fine-man, the Jewish Welfare Federation of Toledo; Diane B. Gale, the Greater Miami Jewish Federation; Martin S. Kraar, the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Houston; Benjamin F. Lewis, the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Boston; Wesley Nisker, the Minneapolis Federation for Jewish Service; and Eugene M. Walman, the United Jewish Fund and Council of St. Paul.

Five students are receiving scholarship renewals. They and their sponsoring communities are: Myron A. Berezin, the Jewish Federation of St. Louis; Lawrence M. Cohen and Philip Rosenblum, the United Jewish Federation of Pittsburgh; David B. Saltman, the Jewish Community Council of Essex County (Newark, N.J.); and Daniel G. Thurman, the Boston CJP.

In addition, the $1000 Harry L. Lurie Fellowship was awarded to William Rosenthal of New York, who is studying for his doctorate at the University of Pennsylvania.

The CJFWF established the National Scholarship Plan five years ago in order to enable additional students to obtain professional training, especially those committed to careers in Jewish communal service.

Since its inception, the plan has provided some 60 grants totaling about $66,000. In most cases, communities sponsoring individual students have matched the amount of each grant from the Scholarship Fund. As a result, the total from both national and community sources runs to well over $100,000 in scholarship assistance.

In the past year, some 60 communities participated in the Scholarship Plan, donating approximately $10,500 to the national fund.

Protest Rally Rejection By Scientists Criticised

NEW YORK — Four Jewish intellectuals joined last week in rejecting the criticism by two leading Soviet Jewish scientists against the June 3 Madison Square Garden rally on behalf of Soviet Jewry.

The four were novelists Saul Bellow; Richard Hofstadter, professor of American history at Columbia University; Dr. Eugene Rabinowitch, editor of the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists; and Meyer Schapiro, professor of art history at Columbia University.

They declared, in a letter to the New York Times, that they had been "saddened" that such distinguished men as Professors Lev Landau and Yevsel Liberman "found it necessary to put their names to a letter about the situation of Soviet Jewry" which was printed in the Times on June 2.

That letter called the Madison Square Garden rally "provocative" and said it would be filled with "all kinds of fabrications" about the problem and urged Americans to focus instead "on racism and anti-Semitism" in the United States.

The four intellectuals said that the rally had been held because "discrimination against Jews has not disappeared" and because "Soviet authorities are pursuing a policy aimed at the forcible assimilation of Soviet Jewry."

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif. — For his currently shooting film "Truck to Cairo," Audie Murphy will film his "Egypt scenes" in Israel. Well, that's an improvement. . . . Marty Mills and his wife Edie Adams will move out of the Beverly Hills house that Ernie Kovacs, Edie's late husband, built. The surprise of it being that they lived there at all with her memories.

Tony Curtis will accept Russia's invitation to attend its '65 Moscow Film Festival in mid-July. Tony guested at the same event in '63. This year, he'll take along a print of "The Great Race," Warner film in which he co-starred with Jack Lemmon.

Best wishes and a speedy recovery to Robert M. Weltman, MGM's production vice-president, who suffered a slipped disc. . . . Herschel Bernardi, currently starring on Broadway in "Bajou," formed his own independent company to produce television and films. Herschel has been making a pot of money. Now he's asking for a mess of trouble.

Eddie Fisher and his brother "Bunny" (Alvin), who has been his road manager for three years, have split at the seams. Non-singing "Bunny" refused to sing out with any complaints, stating it simply, "We both have our faults."

Publicist Russell Birdwell once received a blood transfusion from a Jewish donor. Ever since, Birdwell has labeled himself as "one quart Jewish." Following the transfusion, Birdwell's boss at the time, David O. Selznick, memored the publicist, "I am Chairman of the Jewish Welfare Drive and because you are now one of us, I am deducting ten percent from your salary for the remainder of the year."

Selznick actually made the deductions which Birdwell laughingly refused to challenge.

Sammy Fain, one of the cleverest Jewish songwriters, of which there are many, is one of the most talented singing songwriters, of which there are few, if any more. Sammy has written the melody for the title song of MGM's "Joy in the Morning."

Said Sammy at the Cocomat Grove recently, "Richard Chamberlain sings the tune in the film and does an unusually good job." Paul Francis Webster wrote the lyrics.

Fain has also written "Paris Lullaby," which Ann-Margret and Louis Jourdan sing in the MGM movie of the same name. Asked to name his first hit tune, Sammy named "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella." It broke in 1925 and where were you then?

Israel had to break its promise to lend The Mirisch Corporation 800 of its crack troops for use in "Cast a Giant Shadow," now shooting (film, not bullets) in Israel. The troops had something more important to do at the time—slap Jordan's wrist.

Harry Karl may insist on equal time for his parish after his wife Debbie Reynolds concludes her starring role in "The Singing Nun." Harry will interplead for something like "The Cantor's Wife."

Did you know that Barbara Rush is married to a nice Jewish boy, Warren Cowan, who helps head the publicity firm of Rogers and Cowan? They handle some of Hollywood's biggest names.

Warren's brother, Stanley Cowan, who also heads his own publicity firm, is not one of our biggest press agents but he's certainly one of the nicest. Stan handles many prominent names including George Jessel, of whom Israel says, "When you handle Jessel, you don't need anyone else." When he goes to heaven, George will be heavily laden with blessings.

Mazeltov to Dick Shawn. His family and friends in Buffalo, N.Y., will be happy to hear that The Mirisch Corporation has signed Dick to a five-picture contract starting with "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy?" I'm laughing already.

France Sells Israel Military Helicopters

PARIS—Israeli officials signed here last week an agreement for the purchase of an undisclosed number of French-made Super-Frelon helicopters which can carry 35 soldiers and equipment plus a jeep and military supplies. The cost of the purchase of the military-type helicopters also was not disclosed.

The agreement was signed by Brig. A. Kasht, director-general of the Israel Defense Ministry and Admiral Mordechai Limon, the ministry's European representative, and Officials of Sud-Aviation, manufacturers of the helicopter signed for France.

The helicopter, which is standard equipment in the French Army, can be used for combat as well as transport missions. Kasht was in Paris to attend the International Air Show. Also present were Brig. Ezer Weizmann, commander of the Israel Air Force, and an 80-man Israeli military mission.

Israel Trade Balance Has Improved By $44 Million

NEW YORK — Israel's trade balance improved by $44,000,000 or 36% in the first four months of 1965, Dr. David Horowitz, Governor of the Bank of Israel declared here last week.

He was the principal speaker at a meeting of the national executive committee of the Israel Bond Organization.

Surveying the current economic situation in Israel, he reported that during the period from Jan. 1 through April 30, imports decreased by $18,000,000 or 6.4%, while exports went up by $25.5 million, or 17.8% higher than the figure for the comparable period in 1964.

He emphasized that "despite fears of a recession as a consequence of monetary restraints, the present year shows continued advances toward economic prosperity with output soaring and full employment."

Although tight money and a balanced budget are popularly believed to result in a recession, "this has never happened in Israel," he declared.

Discussing the growth of exports, he pointed out that citrus sales, which dropped last year, made a strong recovery with an increase of 30% during the January through April period of the current year.

The export of other agricultural products was up by 28.5%; industrial goods by 21.5%; and diamonds for industrial use, which represent the country's number one export, increased by 5.5% during the first four months of 1965.

Dr. Horowitz pointed out that Israel's economic recovery would be endangered by an excessive increase in consumption, explaining that increased local purchases which raise production for home consumption, tend to hamper export trade.

For this reason, he said, Israel is making a concerted effort to reduce consumption without lowering the standard of living.

In 1964, he reported, the population of Israel rose by 96,000, bringing the total to more than 2,500,000. The number of wage and salary earners increased last year by 33,000 to a total of 800,000.

Dr. Horowitz added that the proceeds from the sale of Israel bonds in the United States and other parts of the free world had greatly stimulated the growth of Israel's economy and that they had been of decisive importance in opening up new areas of development, in the exploitation of natural resources, and in the absorption of large numbers of immigrants.

Weaker Boycott Bill Voted By Senators

WASHINGTON — The Senate Banking Committee voted Tuesday by eight to six to reject stronger wording, sought by opponents of the Arab boycott, and retained the weaker House version of the Export Control Bill.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D. N.J.) had attempted to strengthen the anti-boycott measure in committee by offering wording that would "require" non-compliance with the boycott and make Arab practices illegal instead of merely asking the Executive Department to "encourage and request" opposition to boycott tactics.

The Williams substitute would also have provided wording to actually "prohibit" practices inconsistent with the anti-boycott declaration.

It was learned that adequate votes had been pledged to anti-boycott forces but at the last minute, two Republican Senators switched their votes to defeat the stronger measure. They were Sen. John G. Tower of Texas and Sen. Strom Thurmond of South California.

These two conservative Senators reportedly were persuaded at the last minute that American firms should not be hampered in dealings with the Arabs, a position advanced by our oil interests with investments in the Near East.

Officials of the Commerce and State Departments said that they were pleased with the committee's rejection of the stronger anti-boycott provision.

They said they could accept the measure voted by the House because it was sufficiently weak and non-mandatory in terms of actually prohibiting the Arab tactics.

A decision is being made by Senators opposed to the boycott on whether to fight on the Senate floor to strengthen the anti-boycott bill. Final Senate action on the bill will take place some time next week.

Tunisian Scores Both East, West On Stand

NEW YORK — Habib Bourguiba, who created an uproar in the Arab world over his peace move toward Israel, has strongly criticized both the West and East for having done nothing to keep Gamal Abdel Nasser from assuming dictatorial leadership among Arabs.

Interviewed over the "Face the Nation" CBS TV network recently, the Tunisian President declared: "The fact is that with the use of the Arab League by the Egyptian Government, we saw this Arab League become an instrument which allowed President Nasser to present himself as the leader of this Arab League. And," he added, "we should not disregard the fact also that many countries, whether East or West, have done nothing to restrain his feelings of being this leader, and they have even helped him by dealing with him as sole interlocutor."

Bourguiba also stated that "Arab unity is not realizable, not sensible and not practical."

He further indicated that "many newspapers in the Middle East, in Lebanon, in Kuwait, etc., have supported my proposal." (for peace with Israel.)

The panelists interviewing the Tunisian President at his palace at Carthage included Martin Agronsky, Winston Burdett and George Herman.

In another interview with an Egyptian journalist, Bourguiba asked "If Abdel Nasser is so confident of his military power, why does he not attack Israel?"

Beigin Premier? No, Says Liberals

MEXICO CITY — Israel is not ready either politically or psychologically to have Menahem Beigin, the leader of the Herut movement, as Premier, it was stated here by Chaim Telchmann, a leader of the Independent Liberals in Israel who quit the Liberal Party after it decided to join with Herut in presenting a united list of candidates for the forthcoming Parliamentary elections.

Telchmann, a former resident of Mexico, is now on a brief visit here. He warned American Zionist leaders against issuing statements for or against either group of the split Liberal movement, indicating that this was an internal Israeli political affair.

TOPS LAST YEAR

TORONTO — The 1965 campaign of Toronto's United Jewish Appeal, the central fund-raising organ, was closed here with the total reaching $2,750,000 an increase of $200,000 over last year. A total of $2,450,000 has been pledged to date with an additional $300,000 expected to be raised from cards still outstanding.

HOW YOU MIGHT FINISH OFF YOUR PROBLEMS AFTER 65

You are heading toward retirement with some pretty big ideas on what you'll be doing. You have some apprehensions, but you are going to walk tall and things are going to be just dandy.

Here's something you may want to tuck in a vest pocket to pull out and read when, in about two years from now, things didn't quite pan out.

It is the retirement success story of a Mr. Russell W. Scott. "Three years after I retired, when I was 68," says Mr. Scott, "I helped a friend refinish some furniture. I had never done anything of this sort before."

"I got interested in the work and started doing over some old chairs and tables at home. I was quite successful at it."

And today Mr. Scott owns the Scott Refinishing Company.

The route to his success was fairly simple. Neighbors saw the old things he refinished at home, asked him to do jobs for them. He worked out a schedule of prices for his work.

Word gradually spread through the community that he did excellent work at reasonable prices. In time he placed a small ad in the paper.

"And that was it. I have been busy ever since and have turned down many jobs."

The key to Mr. Scott's success has been the change in labor conditions since World War II. The type of labor needed to scrape and sand table legs is not readily available at prices people are willing to pay. The refinishing of furniture is almost entirely labor and time, both of which the idle retired man has in abundance.

"For a retired man, the refinishing of furniture is about 95 per cent profit," according to Mr. Scott. "I have a standard price on only one thing — a kitchen set of table and four chairs. They are all about the same. For this job I charge 75 dollars. The stain, lacquer, etc. will cost less than five dollars. The rest is profit."

Mr. Scott wanted to pass his experience along because "there must be thousands of retired people who at one time or another refinished some piece of furniture at home and certainly could do it as well as I can. Maybe what I have done will help some of the men pass their long dull hours after they get tired of reading and sick and tired of watching TV ... or even their wives."

In building his business Mr. Scott was captain of his life. "I took my own time. Some days I worked three or four hours, some more, some not at all. It depended on how I felt, and there was nothing hard about it."

There are some retired men who thing a furniture refinishing business would be below their dignity. And whose outraged wives would threaten to go home to Mama. It is on this showdown with dignity, pride, reputation, status, or whatever that a successful retirement usually turns.
