Darman, Medoffs To Be Honored At Special Dedication Service

By EDWARD BERMAN

Woonsocket's Congregation B'nai Israel will honor its three major benefactors at a special dedication service next Friday, April 30, at 8:00 p.m.

Honored will be Arthur I. Darman, who served as congregation president for 25 years and was in charge of construction of the outstanding synagogue dedicated in 1962, and Israel and Samuel J. Medoff who, along with Mr. Darman, made the synagogue dream come true.

The three have been active among Rhode Island and national Jewry for many years.

At next Friday night's service, the main auditorium will be dedicated as Medoff Auditorium, and the large hall on the lower level will be rededicated as Darman Hall. It has been known as Founders Hall, so designated by friends of Mr. Darman who formally made the hall presentation at the time of his 75th birthday in 1965.

As a long overdue tribute to these three men, the congregation's officers and board of directors unanimously approved the special tribute. Samuel J. Medoff was president of the congregation during the synagogue's construction and dedication in 1962. Israel Medoff has been a major donor and an inspiration to the congregation membership.

The guest speaker at this special service will be Frank Licht, former two-term Rhode Island governor and former Superior Court justice. Former Governor Licht is a longtime friend and co-worker of the honorees in numerous religious and philanthropic endeavors. He will be introduced by Joseph Shorr, congregation president.

Mr. Darman, 86, an industrialist, has been a philanthropist and active in Jewish causes for many years. He has served on the board of trustees of Miriam Hospital and as a trustee of the Rhode Island Jewish Home for the Aged. Among his many other efforts, he served as chairman of the Rhode Island Building Authority. He has served as state chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and is honorary president of the Rhode Island Zionist Region.

Israel Medoff and his brother, Samuel, operate I. Medoff Company, one of the largest textile converting and jobbing firms in the nation.

Israel, 79, honorary vice president of Congregation B'nai Israel, has been active in synagogue life for more than 60 years. He served as chairman of the building fund for the new synagogue.

He and his brother have been leading philanthropists for many years. Israel Medoff has been active at Miriam Hospital, the Hebrew Day School and the Jewish Home for the Aged, all in Providence, the Maimonides School in Boston and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in New York. Neither of the Medoff brothers has been known to refuse to assist in any worthwhile charitable effort.

Samuel Medoff served as president of the congregation from 1958 to 1963, and again from 1967 to 1969. He now is an honorary president for life, along with Mr.

Darman.

Samuel, 72, also has been active in a wide range of Jewish community and civic endeavors on local and state levels. He is a member of the board of overseers and board of trustees of Miriam Hospital and is a past chairman of the institution's finance committee.

He also is a member of the board of trustees of the Industrial Foundation of Woonsocket and is a member of the board of managers of Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank.

The special service next Friday will be conducted by Rabbi William E. Kaufman, spiritual leader of Congregation B'nai Israel, with Philip Macktaz serving as cantor. An Oneg Shabbat will be served in Medoff Auditorium following the services and the unveiling of plaques in both the auditorium and in Darman Hall.

Sen. Pastore To Be Guest At Independence Day Fete

Friday, April 30, at 8:10 p.m. Temple Emanu-El will celebrate the 28th anniversary of the establishment of the State of Israel during the course of its Shabbat services. Senator John O. Pastore will be the guest speaker at this service in recognition of his constant and continued friendship and support of the State of Israel.

In October, 1975, Senator Pastore announced his coming retirement from the US Senate at the culmination of his present term. John O. Pastore has become in his own lifetime a famous native-born Rhode Islander. The son of Italian immigrant parents, proud of his ethnic heritage, he was born in Providence (on St. Patrick's Day), was graduated cum laude from Classical High School and earned his law degree at the Providence YMCA branch of Northeastern University. He has been showered with honorary degrees from many prestigious universities. Brown honored him by elevating him to trusteeship of the university.

Senator Pastore began his political career as a state legislator in 1934. For over 40 years, as state legislator, as lieutenant governor, as governor of the state of Rhode Island, and finally as United States Senator, Senator Pastore's voice and thinking have influenced the history of our state and country. He is a born fighter and a vocal and outspoken champion of those causes he deems worthwhile. He has had a long, devoted, effective, dedicated and honorable career in public service.

The public of Rhode Island is invited to the service on Friday, April 30, to celebrate the 28th anniversary of the establishment of the State of Israel and to honor Senator John O. Pastore. A reception for Senator Pastore will follow the service.

Finkelsteins Of Prov. Are Boon To Community

By BARBARA WRONSKI

Much of the strength of the Providence Jewish community may be directly attributed to the able leadership of Harry Finkelstein and his wife, Elsie. For one, were it not for the Finkelsteins, Providence may never have seen an unbroken observance of the Third Seder for most of its 51 years of existence. For the duration of the time that they ran the event, there were only two years when time and circumstance did not allow for the Finkelsteins to devote their time and energies, which they have always given so willingly, to its preparation. Every other of those years, the Third Seder has been as traditionally observed as the First and Second.

Although the operation of this year's Third Seder was taken over by the the Dvorah Dayan Club, Mr. Finkelstein continues as honorary chairman, offering both his and Mrs. Finkelstein's experienced assistance. Mr. Finkelstein, who will say that he could never have handled all the work involved were it not for his wife, explained that it has become customary over the past ten years to honor some Providence resident at the gathering. This year's honors, and a lovely bound copy of the Haggadah, went to Mr. and Mrs. Manfred Weil, prominent members of the Jewish community.

The evening's speaker was Pinhas Eliav, ambassador extraordinary — plenipotentiary deputy permanent representative of Israel to the U.N. Guest vocalist was Barbara Moskow.

The Third Seder, now an international event celebrated throughout the US, Canada, South America, Israel and other countries, was pioneered by four Providence residents in 1925. Historically, there are only two Seders at which the prayer, "Next Year in Jerusalem" is recited. In order to reinforce their conviction to this cause, these men ushered in the idea of conducting a Third Seder, the purpose of which would be to raise funds for Israel. The Third Seder, over the years, has been held in such diverse locations as the Narragansett Hotel, the Biltmore, Temple Beth El and, currently, Temple Emanu-El.

Mr. Finkelstein, who is president of the State Sign Company on Eddy Street in Providence, is a native Lithuanian. Orphaned at an early age, he immigrated to New York City, on his own, in 1921. While in Europe, he received his education at an orphanage asylum and later, in New York, attended elementary and commerce schools in order to master the language and learn a trade.

Mrs. Finkelstein was born and raised in New York City. After attending a business school there, she worked for many years at a real estate firm in the Radio City vicinity. She is currently a life member of Club No. One of Pioneer Women and the Home for the Aged. She sells trees for Israel and has been awarded all the charms to make her eligible for the Woman of Valor Award for selling Israel Bonds. A very modest individual, as is her husband, she says that neither

Hellenist, Talmudic Scholar, Belkin, Dies In NY

Dr. Samuel Belkin, chancellor of Yeshiva University, distinguished Hellenist and Talmudic scholar, died recently at the Albert Einstein College Hospital after an illness of several months. He was 64 years old and lived at 101 Central Park West, New York City.

Dr. Belkin had played a major role in the development of Yeshiva. Last year, because of illness, he resigned his post as president, which he had held for 32 years, and assumed the new post of chancellor.

Under his leadership enrollment grew from 850 to 7,000, the full-time faculty from 94 to 1,500, the number of schools and affiliates from 4 to 15, and the annual operating budget from $440,000 to $100 million.

One of Dr. Belkin's major achievements was the establishment of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, a graduate school of Yeshiva, in the northeastern Bronx. It was the country's first medical school under Jewish auspices, admitting its first class in 1955.

Dr. Belkin was born in Swislicz, Poland, studied at religious schools and was ordained at 17. His father, Solomon, a Talmudic scholar, was his first teacher. As a boy he studied at the prominent yeshivas of Radin and Mir, in Poland.

In 1929, he came to the United States, speaking Polish, Yiddish and Hebrew but no English. He studied at Harvard and Brown University, attaining election to Phi Beta Kappa. He received his Ph.D. Degree from Brown in 1935.

In 1935, Dr. Belkin joined the staff of Yeshiva, then a small school with only a single green-turreted building, as an instructor of Greek. In 1936, he also became an instructor in Talmud at the university's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary.

Surviving are his wife, the former Abby Polesie, and two children from a former marriage, which ended in divorce, Linda Rose Schuchalter and Salo Maurice.

The Jews Of Iraq

By DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN

Professional smugglers were able to take out only young, healthy adults, as the route was long, arduous and dangerous. Bedouin Sheiks were bribed to permit the refugees through their territories in the Iraq-Jordan-Syria triangle which ran the length of the Iraq-Haifa pipeline. As usual the Arabs proved unreliable and treacherous. Sheik Aodulla living at the Iraq border and the Emir Shalaan on the Syrian side were bribed to permit a convoy through their territories, but at the border the refugees were robbed not only of their possessions but of their clothing, leaving them without food or water. They struggled back to Bagdad more dead than alive.

Palmach soldiers were assigned to do some subsequent convoys. Refugees made the hazardous journey with great difficulty and some perished along the way. In some cases arrangements were made for the convoy to be met at a designated place by a camel caravan. Occasionally if the Bedouin felt the convoy was of greater value than the payment promised, the guards were disarmed or killed and the passengers robbed.

Despite the approaching end of the Mandate, the British continued to disarm the Jewish defense forces. Raids on the kibbutzim were routine in a general search for arms. As the 15th of May neared, Jewish fears increased. With the tacit consent of the British, armed PLO forces had already entered Palestine. Ben Gurion became concerned that the Arabs could overwhelm the virtually defenseless border settlements before arms could enter the country.

So pressing was the need for the five field guns and the ammunition the S.S. Borea carried, that the Hagana decided to take the risk of bringing her into port 48 hours before the end of the Mandate. In despair they watched as a British destroyer took her in tow and the ship moved to Haifa, where she was placed under close guard until midnight of the 15th, when the Mandate expired.

As the United Nations decision on the partitioning of Palestine drew near, the situation in Iraq worsened. It had been a drought year and the distress of the population was directed against the Jews, who made themselves as unobtrusive as possible. Young Iraqis noisily shouted for a Jihad against Palestine. Prior to the U.N. decision the Bagdad rabbis declared a day of fasting and prayer. The frightened Jewish leaders ordered the Jewish students to refrain from any demonstrations. The leaders of the community sent a servile letter to the authorities regretting the U.N. decision and declaring their loyalty. A fund was raised for those volunteering for the Jihad. While the elders sat in the synagogues in tearful prayer, young Jews, despite the danger, solicited funds for the defense of the Jewish State.

In time the government became aware that despite all warnings and precautions, arrests and fines, Jews were leaving in large numbers, taking their jewels and what assets they were able to convert into cash.

Laws had been passed preventing them from selling or raising money on property. Bank accounts were frozen and only small amounts could be withdrawn.

Parliament finally reached the decision, permitting Jews to leave if they renounced their citizenship and turned over all possessions. Of the 125,000 remaining Jews, 50,000 immediately applied for exit permits. (Continued on page 22)

Your Money's Worth

CHILD DAY CARE HOW AND WHERE

For the first time in U.S. history, nearly half of all school age youngsters — 21 million — have mothers who work outside the home. Moreover, as long ago as 1974, about one in six — 10 million children — were being raised in single-parent families, headed mostly by women.

These figures, based on Census Bureau data, have been compiled by the National Council of Organizations for Children & Youth in a new booklet, "America's Children 1976."

There are, in sum, fewer adults willing and/or able to stay home to care for children — a problem millions of American mothers and fathers have been facing for years. And the problem will get worse as more and more of the post-World War II babies have offspring of their own.

"How and where do I find adequate day care for my children?" will be an increasingly urgent plea.

Day-care facilities do exist, despite the continuing debate over its pros and cons, what it should provide, who should provide it, whether it should be just for the poor, be done in schools or outside of them.

And while the arguments go on, many day care programs have become available, including public and private facilities, non-profit and profit-making, part-time and full-time. Some parents have opted for more informal arrangements with relatives or neighbors. And some simply leave their youngsters to care for themselves — an alternative so common that such offspring are known as "Latch-key children."

To help you, as parents or potential parents, find your answer, here's a rundown on major types of services:

• Family day-care homes: This covers the type of care under which adults look after non-related children usually under age 12 in their homes. You may find this arrangement convenient because it's often available close to your home, it can accommodate irregular working hours, include smaller groups of youngsters and often is less expensive than other types of care. But the arrangements can be unstable because day-care parents

All my life I have spent among teachers, those who taught adults and those who taught children. I am not a stranger to moods of teachers, especially teachers in Jewish schools. One day they are exalted because of success with their pupils, and the next they are in despair because of failures, frustrations and a sense of inadequacy.

But they are always teachers and would not change places with anyone. This is because they know that in teaching one must expect ups and downs, and one straightens out his or her back to full height and continues with the work of teaching.

The same is true of writers on problems of Jewish education. When I hear of teachers or writers who have nothing but successes to report, I either suspect their honesty or question their credentials themselves hate the isolation, may become ill, resent the poor pay. A typical family day-care provider, caring for six children, earns a total net income of $1,286 a year despite minimum wage laws, according to recent Senate testimony. Most homes also are unlicensed and unmonitored.

Remedies have been found in organizing the homes into networks with groups sharing facilities, training, etc.

• Day-care centers: There are only about 20,000 centers in the U.S., providing care for at most 10 percent of preschool children of working mothers. Day-care centers differ widely, depending on whether they are for profit (60 percent are), their location, and so forth. They do provide stable and continual care; are designed for small children; should permit parent participation. But the center may be located too far from home; eligibility may be limited to the very poor or fees may be too high; center schedules may be incompatible with your work hours; the centers may be too large.

• Day-care centers in offices and factories: Rare until recently, these are spreading through the country because they attract workers and reduce absenteeism. About 200 employer-funded day-care centers are operating and the federal government has set up centers in three of its departments.

• Employer-supported centers: In addition to centers in their own offices and plants, some business firms have donated funds to local communities to establish neighborhood centers. Others help employees find care or provide cash subsidies to assist in financing the cost of child care. Employers may also contribute to joint labor-management trust funds for setting up child care centers for preschool and school age children.

• Preschools and kindergartens: Mounting numbers of preschools and kindergartens now enroll children as young as nine months for part of the day. About 78 percent of five-year-olds are so enrolled now; 38 percent of four-year-olds; almost 20 percent of three-year-olds. The schools are relatively costly, operate for a few hours a day. More than half the children in such schools come from families with incomes over $10,000, studies show.

Teachers, Parents
And the Child

By BERYL SEGAL

as teachers and educators.

It was refreshing therefore to hear from one educator who came to Providence at the invitation of the Bureau of Jewish Education and bared his chest of the failures of teachers of Jewish children.

Dr. Harold S. Himmelfarb is Professor of Sociology at Ohio State University, and he is a member of the Institute of Jewish Policy Planning and Research of the Synagogue Council of America, representing all factions in Judaism.

In his article in "Analysis" entitled Jewish Education for Naught, he puts into writing what has been on the minds of Jewish teachers for a good many years.

We all know the cry: Johnny cannot read, Johnny cannot write, Johnny cannot put his thoughts into orderly sentences. We can say the same of Sammy who cannot read, nor write, nor is he a knowledgeable Jew at the end of his Hebrew school years.

Why can Sammy neither read nor write nor know his way around in Jewish life?

The author does not blame the child, nor is it the fault entirely of the teachers or the schools.

The pupils in Hebrew school, those who come in the afternoon, do so at a sacrifice of their free time and only at the insistence of their parents. They are taught a language which they have never used and probably never will, except for a very few who might some day go to Israel and remain there for a while. They are taught the Bible, books which take a lifetime to study and grasp their ideas and concepts. They are taught Jewish history from the beginning of our appearance on the scene up to our own days, a tremendous task for grade school children. In addition, the teacher wants them to know about the Holocaust, about the State of Israel, and about the American scene. And then there are songs to sing and plays to enact, and Holidays to celebrate. All this in about 3,000 hours, if the youngsters attend the school long enough, that is.

Why do the teachers pile up so much work on the children?

Because to the serious teacher, Jewish learning is more than the recitation or chanting of a few lines for the Bar or Bat Mitzvah.

These events may be important as family and friend celebrations, but they are only an infinitesimal part of the child's education as a Jew. The serious teacher knows that there is so much to teach and so little time for everything the child ought to know, and if not now, when will he learn?

As a result Sammy and Bessie go to Hebrew School and learn a lot of things but retain very little. The parents, those who care for Jewish learning, ask questions to which there can be no answers. And the teachers are driven to despair.

But Dr. Himmelfarb offers some solutions. No reason for despair, as long as there are solutions.

In the first place he proposes more time for Jewish studies in school. Teachers and principals must use all their persuasive powers to convince the parents that Bar and Bat Mitzvah are not the end of school for their children. Some parents, a small minority to be sure, are already convinced and they send their children to high school classes. Little by little the fetish of Bar and Bat Mitzvah must be eroded. A celebration is well and good, but do not let the child think that he has arrived. Finished. No more Hebrew school. He further proposes certain changes in the curriculum of the schools. He would like to see greater emphasis on "Practice of Judaism" rather than production of "Scholarly Jews." Let the child know the meaning of Jewish ceremonies, the depth of Jewish values, the How and Why of Jewish practices, and the meaning of being a Jew in a non-Jewish world.

There are other suggestions on how to improve the Hebrew schools. A suggestion to attract and maintain competent teachers. A suggestion to finance the schools through the establishing of a National Fund for Jewish Schools. And many others.

But no matter what the suggestions are, it was good for one educator to come and disturb the teachers of Providence by painting a grim picture of the state of Jewish Education in this country.

One function of the Bureau of Jewish Education is doing just that: Waking up the teachers and the parents.

Working With Troubled Youth Reffkin's Role As VIP

By BARBARA WRONSKI

"If a volunteer could realize what a child can get out of this program, he would get more involved," commented Sanford Reffkin, credit manager for Broadway Tire in Pawtucket, of the Volunteers in Probation program he has been a part of for over six months. An unfunded project, Volunteers in Probation is run by the Rhode Island Department of Corrections in Cranston, headed by Pat Shanley. Other program contacts include Nancy Reed of Child Guidance and Sister Terry of Warwick. All other staffing is volunteer.

In effect since 1972, the program strives to supplement and amplify supervisory service for juvenile offenders. This is not a Big Brother, Big Sister program. The children these volunteers work with on a one-to-one basis might be in a training school for a variety of offenses were it not for their attentions and guidance. Most of the children get involved in the program as a result of court or school referrals.

The most important element of a volunteer's task is that of spending time with the child. Volunteers bring a richness and variety of talents, skills and interests which, coupled with large investments of time and energy, help to meet the normal and special needs of children on an individual basis. During 1975, volunteers gave over 12,000 hours and traveled over 50,000 miles to over 100 troubled youths in Rhode Island. All program expenses are tax deductible.

The potential versatility of specific volunteer roles is practically unlimited. To date, some of these services have included job placement, driver's education, art classes, camp scholarships, tutoring, Boys Club and YMCA-YWCA memberships, drug abuse programs, vocational school placement, home skills, arts and crafts, assistance with military induction, treatment center placement, transportation to medical appointments, pregnancy counseling and placement and teaching fiscal responsibility: bank accounts, credit cards, check books, etc.

All volunteers must be recruited, screened and trained. They spend an average of three to four hours per week with individual youth, agreeing to work with a child for a minimum of one year. Many volunteers have been active for a longer period of time, frequently with the same youth. There is no limit to how long a child may remain in the program. The idea is to help him or her, no matter how long it takes. A child who is not cooperating, however, and does not seem to care to benefit from the program is dropped. "We don't have enough adult volunteers to go around and we can't waste them on children who don't want help," says Mr. Reffkin.

Since he began with the organization over six months ago, Mr. Reffkin has been working with Kirk, a 13 year old boy whose biggest problem had been truancy. He also got himself involved in drugs and larceny. Considerable family strife has kept him away from home and in the streets causing or creating trouble.

"But he's basically a good boy. He has outside interests which can be developed. He loves to bowl as well as roller skate," observed Mr. Reffkin.

He explained that after careful examination of the problems at hand, talking with parents, teachers, principals and guidance counselors, he was able to understand Kirk's truancy and help him. Sibling rivalry was the culprit. Brothers and sisters who were doing better in school than he was were flaunting their superior grades and causing Kirk to withdraw from the academic arena altogether. By helping the family to see the problem, as well as involved school personnel, Mr. Reffkin has helped Kirk to be able to face school more as the challenge it is meant to be rather than the formidable threat he thought he saw. "There aren't a great many guidelines you can go by when judging your success in reshaping a personality, but I feel confident that Kirk will make it. One good sign is that he's spending much more of his time at home, instead of on the street getting in trouble."

Kirk has a case coming before court in several weeks in which he is up for probation on a charge of breaking and entering. In an effort to keep his charge off probation, Mr. Reffkin is trying to talk Kirk into attending summer camp and going to a boarding school in the fall. Courts often accept such options in lieu of probation. Naturally, the family would be required to pick up tuition expenses if no other organization can handle it, so a family's economic solvency may have some bearing on the program's effectiveness and scope.

Mr. Reffkin stressed the importance of developing a rapport with parents as well as children. In order for the program to have optimum success, parents must understand the problems at hand and reinforce the work of the volunteer. He meets with Kirk's parents either before or after every session with Kirk. Phone calls and clear communications are vital as well. Mr. Reffkin always calls Kirk to confirm appointment times, calling well in advance if he must cancel a particular session. "A volunteer must give two things of himself which go a long way psychologically: kindness and consideration," he noted. Honesty is another must. "Let them know before hand if you plan to contact their probation officers."

Are there any problems inherent in the program? Mr. Reffkin confirms that a frequent problem is the initially "gung-ho" volunteer whose interest wanes and who drops out before completing a full year with the program. It leaves the children thinking they aren't worthy or that no one cares about them. "When I first began working with Kirk, he asked me if I was another of those people who stays a few weeks and then vanishes. You can't do that to a formative personality. It's worse than not getting involved in the first place."

"I've noticed something else in this work. I don't know how scientifically sound it is, but I've seen it and I have to believe it. People who don't like pets won't work with children. I guess they don't have the patience they need."

In addition to the regular duties of the volunteer, they are expected to get children involved in some type of independent project, a type of rehabilitation activity to keep their minds constructively involved. Mr. Reffkin has been helping Kirk to construct a pinball machine. Besides supplying materials, Mr. Reffkin helps Kirk by setting short and long term goals toward which he can strive.

Most volunteers have a background of working with children, either professionally or by having children of their own. Mr. Reffkin has done considerable work in this sphere. After his own two boys had joined Warwick Boy Scouts, Mr. Reffkin initiated the idea of a Cub Pack for the area. He is also one of the original 12 pioneers to form the Warwick Boys' Club. He has been active with them for 15 years and currently serves on their board of directors. When getting the club going, meetings were held wherever it was convenient and free...barber shops, bowling alleys, even a bank. Today it is a large institution in Oakland Beach.

Mr. Reffkin is currently trying to organize workshops for the children in the program, in conjunction with local manufacturers, whereby the children could repair damaged merchandise and keep it for their own use. Another option he is considering is to have the materials sent to the state prisons to incorporate in their rehabilitation programs. In turn, his hope is that the materials could be turned over to volunteers after repaired and used in various projects for the children.

One of Mr. Reffkin's sons now lives in California, the other in Texas. The one in Texas is a musician, playing both violin and trumpet, and has performed in concert with Doc Severenson. He has a concert coming up in Baytown, Texas, May 29 and 30.

Volunteers in Probation (VIP) is always seeking new blood and new ideas for the program. Training sessions are held several times per year. Interested individuals should contact Pat Shanley at the Department of Corrections, 400 New London Avenue, Cranston 02920. A highly constructive program, Volunteers in Probation will prove a rewarding experience to any individuals who give themselves the chance to get involved.

Quiros Welcomed In Jerusalem

JERUSALEM: President Daniel Oduber Quiros of Costa Rica was welcomed here recently by Mayor Teddy Kollek with the traditional bread and salt at the start of an official visit to Israel.

Oduber flew into Lod Airport, where he was welcomed by President Katzir and Premier Rabin. Katzir and Oduber in short statements both stressed the close ties linking the two countries.

During his visit, he was scheduled to address the Knesset — an honor reserved for visiting heads of state.

Accompanying Oduber was the President of Costa Rica's State Bank and its Ambassador to the UN, Father Benjamin Nunez, who served for many years as envoy to Israel and won many friends here.

PINCUS FUND

JERUSALEM: The Pincus Fund for Jewish Education in the Diaspora has begun operating and has set priorities for using its funds which comes from the interest on a capital of $5 million. Max Fisher, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Jewish Agency, said the Fund's board, of which he is chairman, has listed priorities as teacher training, educational materials and research and the establishment and expansion of educational institutions. Priority will be given to requests from less well-served communities such as in South America, Europe and the Moslem countries. The late Louis Pincus suggested the idea of the fund shortly before his death and it was later set up bearing his name. The participants in the fund are the Israeli government, the Jewish Agency, the World Zionist Organization and the Joint Distribution Committee.

There are many different kinds of Safety Plays that come up during the play of a hand. Today's hand illustrates one of the most common. Not only that but shows that in this case it is an absolute 100% guarantee. It cannot cost anything to try it. Nevertheless, in the Duplicate Tournament in which the hand was played, several declarers failed to see the play and the result was their going down in a contract that should have been made.

North
 ♠ 9 8 3
 ♥ 8 6 4 2
 ♦ A 8 4
 ♣ K 7 5

West

 ♣ A 10 8 3

East

 ♦ 10 9 5 2
 ♣ 9 4 2

South
 ♠ A K 10 5 4
 ♥ A 5
 ♦ K Q 3
 ♣ Q J 6

No one was vulnerable, North Dealer with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
2♠	P	4♠	End

The only comment on the bidding might be North's raise to two Spades with three small ones and only seven points. You must remember they were opening five card majors so three card support is certainly adequate. Also, a raise from one to two of a suit is not considered a "free bid" meaning that North needed no more to raise his partner after West overcalled than he would have had West passed. In fact he could have raised even with a bit less. That is one of the great beauties of playing the five card Major style of bidding. I am all for it.

Certainly after South heard his partner raise him that was all he needed to go right to game. Every pair did, the problem was to make the hand. It shouldn't have been a problem. The automatic opening lead was always the Heart King won by Declarer's Ace. And now every Declarer tackled the Trump suit. The Club Ace and Heart trick had to be lost, to make the hand the losers in that Trump suit had to be held to one.

I watched this hand just about every time it was played and saw seven out of twelve Declarers play out their Ace and King of Trumps and go down when this gave East two Trump tricks. Yes, the normal break with five out against you is 3-2 and they were unfortunate to get a poor split but this is only true if there was nothing they could have done to safeguard themselves just in case the suit happened to break badly. Also, you must remember that West had made a two level overcall showing a long suit so there could easily be a short one to go along with it. But as the cards are it doesn't make any difference if there were no bidding at all. All the ingredients are there for the perfect Safety Play.

Trick two should still be that Trump Ace but here is where the Safety Play comes in. Just in case East happens to have the rest of the Trumps, as he does, go over to Dummy's Diamond Ace and lead the Trump nine. If East plays low simply let it ride through. You do not care at all if West should win that trick with an honor. One trick had to be lost anyhow and now there will be just one card out which can be taken by that King still in South's hand after he gets in again. Meanwhile, should East split his honors, South wins it and simply gives him his other honor. He has the spots to then capture East's remaining small Trump. Nothing East does can alter this and as long as Declarer takes his safety play the contract is assured.

PERES VIEW

JERUSALEM: Defense Minister Shimon Peres said here that the sweeping victory of Palestinian nationalists and radicals in the West Bank municipal elections Monday should not be viewed as "a day of mourning for Israel" but rather as a challenge which the nation could successfully face. He said that as an Israeli, he was proud that free, democratic elections had been conducted in an orderly manner. Peres' view was echoed by military officials who differed from the widespread pessimism that the election results were a serious setback for Israel's hopes on the West Bank. These officials contended that the newly elected mayors and town councilmen might well prove cooperative and practical-minded

FAY A. SABER of Providence has won the 1976 National Law Student Competition of the American College of Legal Medicine "Letourneau Award" for a paper she submitted entitled, "The DES Problem: Fashioning a Physician's Duty to Warn." The award is presented annually in honor of Charles U. Letourneau, MD, the college's past president, to a law student from the US and Canada who has written on a subject of current concern to both clinicians of law and medicine.

Mrs. Saber, who is a 1969 graduate of Pawtucket West Senior High School, received her AB from Providence College in political science, summa cum laude. She was elected to Phi Sigma Alpha, a political science national honor society while at PC. In May she will graduate from Boston College Law School. She will attend Harvard University Graduate School of Public Health this fall for her masters of public health degree.

Mrs. Saber's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Frank of Cranston. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Sophie P. Samperil of Providence and Miami Beach, Florida.

JDL DENIES

NEW YORK: The Jewish Defense League has denied responsibility for a bomb explosion at an office building in mid-Manhattan housing the Soviet Agroflot and Czechoslovakian airlines, but said it "applauded the action. We believe that Jewish militants wanted to tell the Soviet Union that they will not have their detente with the United States until 16-year-old Marina Tiemkin and all Soviet Jews are allowed to emigrate." The bomb, which went off shortly before midnight, shattered hundreds of windows in the area and left the streets covered with glass. Police said there were no injuries. They described the device as powerful and said that if it had exploded during the day, hundreds could have been killed or injured.

charms nor awards are important to her, only that she believes in the cause and can help in her own small way.

The couple came to Rhode Island in 1942, having neither relatives nor friends in the area. In an effort to meet people, they joined the Labor Zionist Organization. At that time the organization only had 125 members. "Just like one big family," observed Mr. Finkelstein. Shortly thereafter, he became secretary of Farband. Over the years he has served as treasurer as well as holding other offices and continues to work with the organization today.

He organized and took out a charter for another Farband group in Providence. At the time it included 75 members and has, since, joined the original group. Also a devoted worker for Cystic Fibrosis for the past 10 or 12 years, he has assisted in the organization of many of their fund raising projects, such as the sponsoring of various shows and programs, which over the years has netted from $1,000 to $2,000 annually.

Mr. Finkelstein had begun in the sign business in New York. A humorous aside regarding his introduction into this line, he was originally hired, in Cooper Union, New York, to do "art work in a sign shop." To his horror, he found this "art work" entailed climbing high scaffolding and painting pre-erected signs!

After arriving in Providence, he established the State Sign Company where he has continued to work. He is an honorary member of the Rhode Island Sign Contractors Association, where he served as treasurer for nearly 15 years.

He is chairman of Histadruth; board member of the Rhode Island Jewish Federation; honorary treasurer and New England chairman of the Jewish National Fund of Rhode Island; past chancellor (as well as a past "Man of the Year") of the Knights of Pythias, What Cheer Lodge No. 24; a member of the AF&AM Masonic Order, Orpheus Lodge No. 36; and active in the Cystic Fibrosis foundation.

He also serves with Rhode Island Community Relations, the Rhode Island Jewish Bureau of Education, is a member of the South Providence and Hebrew Free Loan Associations, Miriam Hospital, the Jewish Home for the Aged, D.O.K.K. and Central Lion's Club, and serves on various committees at both the Jewish Community Center and Temple Beth Israel.

Notices

We failed to mention in our article last week on Samuel Shlevin's testimonial brunch, to be held Sunday, April 25, at 10:30 a.m. at the Jewish Community Center, that women are also invited to attend. Mr. Shlevin is being honored by the B'nai B'rith Greater Providence Coordinating Committee.

TAY-SACHS PROGRAM

The Providence Chapter-Women's American ORT will hold its April meeting on Thursday, April 29, at 8:00 p.m. at the home of Lynn Grant, 28 Applewood Road, Cranston. Refreshments will be served.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Daniel Perl, medical advisor to the Rhode Island Tay-Sachs Committee and director of the Hematology Lab at Miriam Hospital. He will discuss Tay-Sachs and other "Jewish" diseases.

Prospective members are invited to attend. For additional information about the meeting or about membership, contact Elaine Weiss at 861-1216.

MYASTHENIA CARE

Irving D. Paster, Rhode Island chapter chairman of the Myasthenia Gravis Foundation, announces the formation of a new department of education under the directorship of Eugene De Clemente, special consul, who will supply every myasthenia victim in Rhode Island and adjoining communities with the latest medical information regarding proper preventive care to prolong their lives and avoid emergencies.

Another new project will be to supply leading key hospitals in Rhode Island with a new medical library on myasthenia gravis care, treatment and surgical procedures from the foundation's national medical advisory board. Robert Colwell will be in charge of fund raising for this project.

HMO QUOTA DINNER

The Pawtucket-Central Falls Chapter of Hadassah will hold an annual donor dinner to fulfill its Hadassah Medical Organization (HMO) quota. The event will take place May 2 at 6:30 p.m. at Temple Emanu-El.

HMO is the oldest and primary Hadassah project. The Hadassah Medical Center is considered the most progressive, best equipped and staffed center of its kind. HMO helps train doctors, dentists, nurses, and public health personnel.

The HMO quota is met each year with the proceeds of the dinner and a program ad book. SELF-SERVICE GROWS

After a slowdown due to the oil embargo, self service pumps are now increasing. Today about 12% of all gas is self service and estimates are for 40% by 1980. The lure for the consumer is lower prices — as much as 5 cents a gallon on some brands.

Self service also points to fewer minor repairs and other service work performed at gas stations. Station attendants with mechanical know-how are moving into the independent repair market. Meanwhile the number of service stations has shown a dramatic increase in the last two years, principally gas only stations.

answer may not be simple.

New-model cars with catalytic converters should use the unleaded fuel to protect the converter.

Some cars without converters still may be run with unleaded gas, if the manufacturer recommends.

Owners of older models with low compression engines may or may not be able to use unleaded fuel safely. Those who would like to try it are advised to buy a tankful. If there is no engine knock, then your car can use the fuel safely. But should you hear the knock, indicating preignition or detonation, then go back to your regular brand of gasoline.

Motorcycle Industry Council Formed To Dispel Poor Cyclist Image

The typical person riding a motorcycle today is apt to be an accountant or a fashion designer on the way to the office or a family going to a picnic, yet the public's image of the black leather-jacketed Marlon Brando still lingers as typical of the cyclist.

To dispel this image on behalf of the eight million cyclists (growing by an additional million yearly) and to represent the interests of the cycle makers, distributors and trade association, the Motorcycle Industry Council (MIC) has been formed.

The MIC's latest endeavor, one it shares with the automotive industry, is to work with government agencies such as the U.S. Department of Transportation and Environmental Protection Agency on noise and air pollution reduction for cycles.

Since the MIC speaks for more than 80 companies, it can present the industry's over-all views to the governmental agencies and work with them.

One of the first concerns of the EPA in their research to determine sound levels for motorcycles was the level of technology available in the sound abatement area. Through the MIC they were encouraged to visit various manufacturers' facilities. The manufacturers concerned were completely candid with the EPA officials and actually demonstrated capabilities beyond those that were thought possible.

The noise problem is primarily with the new motorcycles available, for all must meet existing noise level standards in many states. The problem is with modified exhaust systems installed after the customer has purchased the machine. With this realization, the EPA has expanded its efforts beyond controlling noise at the point of manufacture.

Through MIC efforts, legislators realize that motorcycles are a legitimate recreation or transportation vehicle and that the laws and regulations controlling the use of motorcycles may well affect their neighbors if not themselves.

MONTANA'S BIG SKY country is enjoyed to the fullest by a lone motorcycle rider. No longer the domain of the "Wild One" type of rider, cycling now appeals to a wider variety of people. The industry as a whole has become aware of ecological matters such as pollution control, fuel economy and noise abatement according to an industry association Motorcycle Industry Council.

Car Condition, Driving Care Yield Fuel Savings

Little things, particularly in terms of car maintenance, can mean a lot in terms of fuel savings. To prove the validity of the above statement, Shell Oil Company embarked on tests of procedures that could save the average car owner nearly three months worth of gasoline annually.

How much care

How much proper car care and prudent driving habits can save in fuel was the answer Shell sought in its tests. Here's what Shell engineers did and what they found:

A typical company car was taken and put into shape where gasoline waste was probable. The engine was placed slightly out of tune with ignition timing retarded and carburetor idle set too fast and rich.

Radial tires on the car were replaced by ordinary tires and air pressure was lowered from the proper 24 pounds to 19. Wheel alignment was altered and the wrong weight of motor oil was installed.

Group of drivers

A group of 23 drivers was employed to drive the cars so altered and the group averaged 13.6 miles per gallon. Once the cars were put back into proper shape, the test was conducted again. This time, mileage averaged 15.6 m.p.g. — a two mile per gallon improvement.

Driving habits

Drivers involved in the test were given specific tips on how to maneuver their cars for best fuel mileage, as follows:

Accelerate gently without actually creeping away from the stop.

Anticipate stops and take your foot off the gas pedal, coasting to the intersection.

Keep your speed moderate. The most economical speed is 35 miles per hour. Never exceed 55 miles per hour.

Get into high gear as quickly as possible for the most economical performance. Even with automatic transmission, one can get the feel of shifting.

Shell reports that the combination of good car condition and careful driving made the average m.p.g. 16.8. That was 23.5 percent improvement of a savings of nearly three months worth of gasoline.

Car Bodies, Lights Are Leading Safety Factors

A neglected car body rates high among automotive safety factors, according to a report just released by Car Care Council of Canada. The information is based on a survey of inspection records from Windsor, Ontario, where Provincial inspectors examined 809 cars, finding 364 with lighting discrepancies. 216 had headlights improperly aimed.

357 cars had body conditions which were cause for rejection. 243 were found with braking deficiencies and 211 with problems in steering and suspension.

Reasons for rejecting cars for body deterioration included such conditions as gaping holes in floor pans (one opening was large enough for a child to fall through), rusted and improperly secured doors, bumpers or other parts and damaged glass.

Inspectors' concern about body integrity is significant, according to Car Care Council. For years motorists have been aware of the safety hazards of driving with improper lighting, or brakes and steering that are not up to standard. But a neglected body presents a threat to life and limb because this is the protective shell in which we're encased.

Properly maintained, the car's body and frame can maintain the strength necessary to provide such protection in the event of an accident. This maintenance includes repair and painting of sheet metal damage and preventive measures to protect against rust.

Bald Tires Are Now Banned In 40 States

Alabama has become the fortieth state to ban bald tires, with a one-sixteenth inch minimum tread depth law effective Jan. 1, 1976.

Thirty nine states and the District of Columbia now require a minimum tread depth of 1-16 inch, by law or regulation. One state, California, requires a 1-32 minimum.

Cooperation of taxi fleet operators and drivers chauffeuring the greatest number of cabs on the streets of any city in the country, in New York's drive to reduce air pollution, has resulted in a substantial improvement as recounted in the accompanying article. Simultaneously, it has also resulted in a considerable increase in the mileage they are getting per gallon of gas. Some notion of the number of cabs operating in New York may be had from the above photo made in the theater district. Photo by New York Daily News.

NY Aids Air Pollution Cause Through Taxi Safety Program

For all its well-publicized problems, New York City has made impressive progress in at least one important area: air pollution caused by cabs.

A year ago the Taxi and Limousine Commission started a program to make New York's medallion taxis safe and environmentally efficient. And according to statistics compiled by the City of New York's Department of Air Resources and Bureau of Motor Vehicle Pollution Control, there has been a marked reduction in harmful emissions from the vehicles, and a wide variety of dangerous mechanical defects has been corrected.

Prior to the start of the annual check-up, hydrocarbons emitted from taxis in 1976 totalled 2,400 tons. This was reduced to 1,600 tons in 1974 after the program began.

Carbon monoxide emissions went from 37,000 tons in 1973 down to 21,000 tons the following year.

"Since 40 percent of New York City vehicle air pollution comes from cabs, there was a very obvious need for such a program to control carbon monoxide and other harmful emissions," said R. L. Gibney, President of Olson Laboratories which operated inspection facilities.

The taxis undergo a full range of safety and exhaust emission tests. They are also inspected for comfort-related items.

"The results have indicated that cabs which pass the test not only emit less hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide pollutants," Gibney stated, "but also show up to 10 percent increase in fuel savings. When you consider that most taxis are driven 70,000 miles or more per year, this can be a significant cost savings for the operator and makes a substantial amount of gasoline available for other motorists."

Windshield Wiper Care A Maintenance Must

As with so many other vital components on your car, your windshield wipers are most likely to fail just when you need them the most — like during the next storm.

In the summer, heat, smog, and even your service station attendant's windshield washer spray are working together to reduce the efficiency of your wiper system. It's no wonder, after sitting quietly on your windshield and deteriorating day-in and day-out, that they often fail to do their job.

Check when raining

The best time to check your windshield wiper system is during a rainstorm. Or you can check it the next time you go through a car wash. You can also perform a good check while someone sprays your windshield with a garden hose.

However you choose to check your wipers, you should check them on both the fast and slow speeds.

If any trouble symptoms are present, you should replace as much of your wiper system as is necessary to eliminate the problem. In many cases, all that is needed are new squeegees (the rubber parts that contact the windshield).

Replace both blades

When you do replace all or part of your wiper blades, make sure you replace both sides at the same time. If one wiper is shot, it's a good bet the other one is about to go, too. Safe vision during hazardous road conditions is too important to risk for a few dollars.

Here are five visible or audible indicators that will signal the need for attention to your windshield wipers. Clear driving vision is especially important during the bad weather season. Check for the following signs of malfunctioning:

1. STREAKING — arcs of unwiped moisture within the wiping area.
2. HAZING — a thin, hard-to-see-through film covering most or all of the wiping area even after the blade has just been wiped.
3. CHATTERING — a "stuttering" motion of the blade accompanied by a "chattering" noise as the blade sweeps across the windshield, with some areas left unwiped.
4. SCALLOPING — a ragged outer edge in the wiping pattern.
5. RATTLING — no visible signs of problems, but the wiper blade sounds as if it were very loose. Can be reduced or eliminated by switching to polycarbonate blades.

German Authority Gives Gas Economy Recipe

The most efficient recipe for saving fuel concerns both the condition of the car and the attitudes of the driver, says Olfa George William Fersen, German automotive authority, who recommends the following to readers of this supplement.

He holds that if carefully applied, the recipe may well mean a fuel saving of up to 20 percent.

FOR THE CAR

1. Low rolling resistance. This means maintenance of the prescribed tire pressure, brakes that do not bind or grind and well-adjusted, free-moving wheel bearings.

2. Correct adjustment of carburetor and ignition. Clean air filter elements and maintenance of a sufficiently high engine temperature (low temperatures increase fuel consumption).

FOR THE DRIVER

1. Gentle driving, especially when starting from rest and early shifting into the next-higher gear. If transmission is automatic, make it shift upwards and low speeds and use the kickdown sparingly. Brake gently. Remember: high engine revs need more fuel and a lot of energy will be wasted by high braking.

2. Select your speed according to the developing traffic situation. If lights are red, don't rush up and brake, but let the car roll gently, so when the lights change, you can accelerate without changing gear.

3. Every car has a "most economical" speed range. Usually around 50 mph. Keep it to that speed wherever possible. Never "pump" on the accelerator. This squirts raw fuel into the engine — at your cost. Driving at changing speeds is uneconomical — driving at a steady speed saves fuel.

DON'T OVERFILL

Remind your service station attendant not to overfill or "top out" your tank. To avoid overflow when your tank is full, avoid parking on a steep slope.

CHAMPION SPARK PLUG Company's Mobile Proving Ground (M.P.G.) is continuing its 30 city, international test program to determine the effects of tune-up on gasoline mileage and emissions. In early findings, its tests have shown that late-model cars are up to 13 times less polluting than pre-1968 vehicles and are staying well within government standards for keeping the air clean.

THE SCENIC WONDERS of a continent, once only available to the wealthy and the adventurous, can be enjoyed by virtually any family with a car. A sure investment in an exciting, trouble-free vacation this spring and summer is a car that is kept in optimum condition. Good maintenance will help keep the gasoline bill as low as possible as well as avoiding unexpected trouble that takes the fun out of trips.

WORN SHOCKS

Unlike a tire that suddenly blows out with a loud bang, worn shock absorbers can fail with little advance warning. Yet when shocks fail, the results can be just as perilous as a blow-out.

To avoid such a danger, ask your service man to check shocks every time the car is on the hoist for a lube job or similar service.

This is particularly important if your present shocks have more than 20,000 miles of wear on them.

NEW OWNER—JOHN SHERER

The ultimate driving machine.

THIS CLASSY REPLICA of a 1937 BMW roadster is the only one in New England. In the 30s, the BMW was a pace setter in European races and rallies. But this model is equipped with a 1976 BMW 2002 power train and a 5-speed transmission. On a tank of propane gas this unique sport-about can run without a refill for 800 miles! It can be fitted, however, to use gasoline. Knight's Garage at 225 Cowesett Avenue in West Warwick is the exclusive New England dealer and will show the BMW roadster on April 28, 29 and 30.

Check Car's Vital Life Signs

"The Lord helps him who helps himself."

If the above seems to be the motto of a greater number of gasoline retailing outlets, then the facts of life are becoming more apparent. There is a growing trend toward self-service gas stations where the customer pumps his own.

Expensive fuel is a little cheaper to buy under the system. But the car owner who has counted on attendants to do simple maintenance jobs is out of luck.

Car owners who habitually buy gas at self-serve outlets should make sure they know how to check vital "life signs" of their cars. Then they should check at least weekly. Doing this requires a little knowledge of where to look and what to look for. If in doubt, such information is contained in the car's Owner's Manual.

For example, the proper level of oil in the crank-case is indispensable to proper engine operation. You should know where the dipstick is located in your engine. Then know how to "read" the stick to determine whether your car has sufficient and clean oil.

What about the battery? Is the water level high enough to make sure it operates properly? Are the terminals clean and the cables sound?

Check to make sure all radiator hoses are intact and that fan belts and other pulleys are not worn or frayed.

Learn where to check on brake and other fluid levels.

SUDDEN SLOW-DOWNS

When, at high speeds, you take your foot off the gas suddenly, emissions zoom. A gradual stop causes a little extra pollution, but nothing like the pollution your car spits out when stopped suddenly. Anticipation and preparation are the mark of a good driver.

Products Promote Ease Of Keeping Cars Clean

If the grease and grime created by the do-it-yourselfers at your house has you working overtime in the laundry room, the following information may help.

Go to your local automotive supply store or the parts jobber frequented by automobile mechanics, and buy some mechanics' hand cleaner.

Not the old-fashioned abrasive stuff of years gone by, the kind that took the skin away with the dirt... but the new kind of creamy product that won't hurt sensitive skin and really does an excellent cleaning job. Most can be used with or without water.

They are treated with lanolin (or similar products), and even have an antiseptic agent built into the formula to help heal the minor nicks and scratches that are part and parcel of most Saturday afternoon projects.

Most manufacturers supply dispensers to hold the hand cleaner container so that you can dispense the cleaner efficiently and economically. Their low cost permits installation of one in the garage and one in the basement workshop for real convenience.

You will also find the auto store a revelation in terms of household helps that you don't see advertised on TV.

There are bags of easy-to-use floor cleaner that eat up garage floor grease fast and save you the job of cleaning up the grime that used to be tracked into your house. There are adhesives, super lubricants, squeak stoppers, rust and stain removers, sealers, degreasers that you spray or brush on and hose off with water... to mention just a few.

Some of these products you may find in your hardware store, but many are strictly auto supply store fare, because they are the professional materials used by professional mechanics... but many have application in and around the house.

Check in your telephone book under Automobile Parts and Supplies for the auto supply stores near you. Then do a little browsing and ask some questions.

Your pantry shelves may soon be stocked with a variety of auto products right along with your favorite detergents. And pretty soon you'll wonder how you ever got along without them.

That's Oil, Folks On Coding Issue

Oil cans may not be the most stimulating form of literature, but a few seconds spent scanning the can tops may prove worthwhile to the maintenance-conscious motorist. This is particularly true with the new motor oil coding system that recently went into effect.

Under the new code, several parts of the coding system remain constant. The SAE stands for Society of Automotive Engineers and the numerals 10, 20, 30 and 40 still indicate the viscosity or flow characteristics of the oil.

A designation such as 10W30 indicates a multipurpose oil covering a wide viscosity range. The W means the oil is specially suited to wintertime use.

In addition to the SAE viscosity rating, there is an API or American Petroleum Institute classification of ML (Motor Light), MM (Motor Medium) or MS (Motor Severe). All 1964 or later models require the MS class of oil.

While cans bearing the above API designations are still in circulation, they eventually will be supplanted with ones marked SA, SB, SC, SD, SE or CC.

SA through SC are for light duty

THE RHODE ISLAND HERALD, FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1976—C7

use such as lawn mower engines. SD oil is the generally accepted lubricant for most present-day cars. CC will be for diesel engines. The SE oils will be used for future engines with greater heat-resistant requirements. The SE oils might be recommended for your present car if you tow a boat or trailer in high speed conditions on the long trip.

'All Christians Anti-Semitic' Contends Father Flannery

Most of the readers of a national Catholic magazine agree with Father Edward Flannery, a Rhode Island priest, that "all Christians are to some degree anti-Semitic."

In the April issue of U.S. Catholic, Father Flannery blames Christians for failing to learn the history "which chronicles the oppression and degradation of Jews in Christian history."

The magazine, published in Chicago by the Claretian Fathers, asked a sample of readers to respond to the article. Father Flannery, an authority on Jewish-Christian relations, was named by Bishop Gelineau last month to be director for continuing education for diocesan clergy.

From the time of the early church, Christians blamed the Jews for the "killing of Christ" — a charge not repudiated until the Second Vatican Council in 1965, Father Flannery notes.

Then in the Christian civilization of the 5th century "Jews were reduced to second-class citizenship, denied numerous rights and necessities." With the first crusade in 1006 "the attack became murderous, when 10,000 Jews were slaughtered," writes Father Flannery, noting this "massive shedding of Jewish blood" continued through the murder of six million people in Hitler's Germany.

Christians inattentive to this history "are doomed to repeat it," Flannery writes, adding that the "dislike of Jews is transferred to Israel."

He says the "Christian ought to be the first to rejoice in the fact the most persecuted people in Christian history have at last been given a haven in a small part of their ancient homeland."

Most readers (55 percent) who responded to the pre-publication survey agree with Father Flannery that all Christians are to some degree anti-Semitic. And 61 percent agree that those who oppose the existence of the state of Israel are anti-Semitic.

However, only 7 percent agree that the "United States should go to war to ensure the existence of the state of Israel (81 percent disagreed)."

Only 31 percent think it is morally wrong to try to convert Jewish people to Christianity.

Father Flannery's article is insolent, "accuses a Massachusetts man. 'As a Christian he has no right to impugn other people's beliefs and motives in his blanket accusation of anti-Semitism.'"

An Illinois man adds "It is an incorrect to state that 'All Christians are anti-Semitic' as it is that 'All Jews are greedy mercenaries.'"

But a Minnesota reader believes "much of anti-Semitism is jealousy since quite often big businesses that are successful are Jewish owned and/or controlled."

Israel The Official 25th Anniversary Commemorative Album

Abba Eban, Israel's Minister of Foreign Affairs, wrote and narrated the official commemorative album of the 25th anniversary of the State of Israel. It is a collection of speeches and songs — inspiring, ironic, memorable and tragic — extracted from documentaries, recorded on the scene or obtained from interviews, vigorously charting the rise of Israel.

Many-Titled Statesman

Abba Eban is his country's most noted advocate and respected diplomat in the international political arena. Before assuming his present post, he served as Ambassador to the United States from 1950 to 1959, Permanent Delegate to the United Nations from 1948 to 1959, Minister of Education and Culture in David Ben-Gurion's cabinet and Deputy Prime Minister under Prime Minister Levi Eshkol.

Brilliant Scholar

Born in 1915, Abba Eban played an active role in the Zionist movement before the establishment of the State of Israel. At Cambridge University he achieved the highest academic honors and was appointed research fellow and lecturer in Hebrew, Arabic and Persian literature. Since World War II he has stood in the center of his people's struggle for statehood and international recognition.

Album Highlights

What follows are descriptions of many of the songs and speeches contained on the album.

The Declaration of Independence. Mr. David Ben-Gurion speaking at the Tel Aviv Museum, May 14, 1948.

"T'ka Beshofar" — a prayer from the "Amida" of the daily service.

"Artzenu Haktantonet" — "Our Tiny Country" — a song from the Mandate period
Israel's acceptance into the United Nations, May 11, 1949.

Interviews with immigrants from Asia, Eastern and Western Europe, Africa and the United States, who came to Israel in the 1950s.

The Eichmann Trial, 1960. Adolf Eichmann: "In the sense of the charge, not guilty."

President Nasser explaining his decision to nationalize the Suez Canal, 1956.

I only know, that is I believe I know, what is good for the people. For this I have fought all my life and I will continue to fight."

President Nasser addressing Egyptian pilots at an air base in Sinai, May 22, 1967: "The Aqaba gulf is in Egyptian territory, and we cannot afford that an Israeli flag will pass through the Aqaba gulf. The Jews are threatening us with a war. We say to them — be welcomed."

Was Hitler A Tool Of German Jews?

RIO DE JANEIRO: A lecturer at the Federal University in Brasilia has claimed that Hitler was a tool of German Jews who brought him to power because "they expected from him better economic possibilities in Germany."

That version of history was given by Prof. Lucas Wajes Brandao in a lecture titled "A Study of Brazilian Problems." According to Brandao, "the Nazi party in Germany came to power, thanks to the Jews. The Jews placed Hitler in Power. The German capital was Jewish. Hitler never rejected Jewish capital."

Who were the Krupps (the leading German munitions manufacturers)? The proper Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, was of Jewish descent... "Brandao's lecture was recorded in shorthand by one of his students. Manuel Waisman, a member of the Brazilian House of Representatives, brought the transcript before a plenary session of the House and demanded that the ministers of justice and education investigate the lecture.

THE ALIBIS ARE CHOICE

By JULIUS NODEL
(Reprinted from Temple Emanu-El Bulletin. Mr. Nodel is rabbi of Temple Emanu-El in Honolulu, Hawaii.)

Some of the choicest alibis we've heard recently have come from some members of our own Congregation after they received notice of the special, but modest, assessment for the air-conditioning installation and improvement of our Temple. (We do not refer, of course, to those who have legitimate cases of financial inability.)

Examples:
1. "I gave in my generation—let the younger members give now." (He means: "I can save money.")
Note: It's not our fault that God granted him a long life so that he can continue to be of some use and service to the Congregation. Instead of thanking God for the blessing of his life, he takes it out on the House of God. When he was young, he couldn't afford to give as he is able to now, and he expects the Temple to be supported again by the lower income group—the younger men and women.

2. "I contributed to the building of this Temple. That's more than eighty percent of the present members have done." (He means: "I don't want to part with any money today, if I can wiggle my way out of it.") Note: If he gave to the building of this Temple then he's had more use of it than eighty percent of the present membership. Does a person conceive or give birth to a child and then fail to come to its rescue when it needs help?

3. "I don't have any children in the Religious School, so already I'm not getting as much as others do for my regular dues." (He means: Unless I get something out of it, why put anything into it?) Note: Apparently he doesn't help the poor, because he isn't poor. Nor does he give to Red Cross because he hasn't been hit by catastrophe. Nor does he give to the Heart Association because his ticker is in good shape—physically, that is. Wonder if he objects to the public school tax—or is he a good citizen?

4. "I'm willing to pay my dues, but since I don't use the Temple at all it doesn't matter to me whether it's air-conditioned or not." (He means: "I'm not a big user, so why should I do anything to benefit those others who do have religious convictions?")

5. "I wasn't consulted about the assessment so I'm not responsible for paying it." (He means: "One excuse is as good as another.") Note: As a member of the Congregation, he can attend the Annual meetings and vote for the Officers and Board of Directors he prefers. Once elected (whether he was interested in voting or not) they are his representatives in congregational affairs and according to the By-laws of the Congregation, they are authorized "from time to time to fix the dues of members" and "shall have the power to adopt rules and regulations . . . for the good and welfare of the Congregation." Does he expect the Board to take a poll among the 2,500 adult individuals who are members of the Temple before proceeding with any and every action? Did Ford call him to find out if he was willing to pay his taxes this year before the government made a new expenditure?

But, as you see, there are real reasons and there are good reasons. When you are considering your obligation to YOUR Temple, think of the GOOD reason for doing what should be done. Don't try to hide behind the REAL reason which may be personal selfishness, indifference toward religion, lack of community responsibility or the penchant for getting the benefits of progress through the efforts of others.

Cookbooks For Mother's Day A Perfect Gift

A CHANGE FROM MATZOH, A GIFT FOR MOTHER

Mother's Day is only two weeks away! What could be a better gift for mother than a cookbook? Simply Delicious, published by the Miriam Hospital Women's Association, is the perfect gift, not only for mother, but for the hospital, since profits from the cookbook go to the hospital to promote continued excellence in patient care.

Two weeks ago, we published some unusual Passover recipes from Simply Delicious; this week, you're probably ready for leavening. As a change from matzoh, how about some simple — and delicious — breads?

ONION DILL BREAD

mits. However, arranging transportation for such a large number posed a problem.

The safest exit was by way of Iran, although it was considerably longer. Though a Moslem country, it became a sanctuary for Iraqi Jews. During the second world war and considerable number of Jews had been smuggled into Iran. A Hadassah emissary, Shlomo Hillel, met a priest in Paris, Father Glassberg, who agreed to aid in smuggling them into Iran. Shlomo arrived in Iran with forged papers and met Father Glassberg in a monastery. As the project was quite dangerous, the members of the monastery refused to become involved.

Despite many obstacles and the increased big vigilance at the border, about 2,000 were smuggled out each month. Occasionally a refugee was shot trying to cross. To collect a sufficient number to fill a

Canadian Embassy Extolls Protocols

TORONTO: The Embassy of Uganda in Canada has distributed to Canadian newspapers a press release extolling the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

The purported excuse for the Embassy's 850-word text is said to be a criticism by Canadian Jewish groups of, among others, President Idi Amin for his espousal of last year's anti-Zionist resolution at the United Nations.

The release states: "You cannot understand Zionism without reading the Protocols of Zion. This book has been called the greatest lie in history. It has also been called the greatest truth in history. It is both."

The release adds that to ensure Israel's survival the Zionists are plotting "to gain decisive influence over American economic, social, political and military affairs."

ship it was necessary for the refugees to remain in the mountains of Iran for a period of three to four months, living in isolated, unheated shacks during the winter, in weather as low as 28-below zero. Unaccustomed to the cold, many perished. After several years, buildings were erected, able to house as many as 2,000 people, with money contributed by wealthy Iraqi Jews.

Iraq had always treated its Jews abominably and was one of three countries that failed to sign the U.N. Declaration of Human Rights. Yet it is this country which vehemently accuses Israel of mistreating Arabs in the occupied territories, and calls ceaselessly for its annihilation.

The American Joint Distribution Committee provided camp facilities near Teheran, and organized an airlift. Although Iran placed no obstacles in the way of the refugees, it was not enthusiastic about this mass emigration. A cooperative American, James Wooten, president of the Near East Transportation Company, which handled the Yemenite emigration, arranged with the Iraqi government to move the refugees directly from Baghdad, which had never before been permitted. The Iraq government agreed, as it would be easier to sequester their wealth.

The pilots reported that everyone boarding the plane, including the pilots, most of whom were Americans, were subjected to thorough searches. Men and women were forced to strip together, and deliberately humiliated. Iraq police carefully examined each garment, after the refugees were subjected to a thorough physical examination, in a search for gems that may have been concealed. The airline was paid $1,500, per day by the AJDC for every day a plane was idled, and flights would be deliberately delayed. When a protest was raised that this harassment would not be tolerated and the flights cancelled, the police calmly informed them that all Jews that had applied for exit would be placed under arrest.

Often after a plane was loaded, and the passengers waiting to take off, a few would be removed, and the plane delayed for hours. This mental torture as they sat in the hot, steamy, crowded planes had a demoralizing effect. Occasionally, after holding up the departure for hours, all passengers would be ordered to disembark for further questioning, and taken back into town. Flights would be delayed for hours, and sometimes for an entire day, while the refugees sat about listlessly in stark despair. Before they were permitted to depart more than $500 million in cash had been turned over to the authorities, in addition to jewelry or personal possessions of any value.

Clothing seams would be ripped open, often for no apparent reason. Every scrap of paper was thoroughly scrutinized. To avoid anyone having a last minute opportunity of hiding or disposing of possessions, less than 24 hours notice would be given. Only one suitcase of clothing was allowed, and hours were consumed in examining it minutely. Bill Troster, an American pilot, reported how men and women were forced to strip together, under glaring headlights.

Any document was considered to be incriminating and a cause for delay, while they were studied. Occasionally the holder would be returned to town for interrogation. The refugees were finally advised to leave all papers, regardless of their insignificance, to avoid delay and aggravation. Anyone attempting to conceal even a petty bauble was subject to arrest. Hours were spent in endless questioning and often the

Eli, Bessie Cohen Camps Expand

Numerous improvements and enlargements are in progress at the Eli & Bessie Cohen Foundation Camps. Camp Pembroke, for girls 8 to 14, has just completed the construction of a residence building for male staff members at its Cape Cod site in Pembroke, Massachusetts. Coed Camp Tel Noar in Hampstead, New Hampshire, is adding a building to house counselors-in-training, in addition to enlarging its kitchen and refrigeration facilities.

The largest project is at Coed Camp Tevya, Brookline, New Hampshire, which is in the process of construction of a multi-purpose recreation building. These quarters will be large enough for a full basketball court or two volleyball courts. On the main floor will be a full stage to allow for the expansion of the camp's popular dramatics program. The lower level will include a large area to accommodate Tevya's enlarged arts and crafts facilities.

Additional indoor programming space will be available during inclement weather and for evening activities. The counselors will also be able to utilize the new recreation building after hours as a social center.

A unique feature of the well-designed building is an entire wall of overhead doors which can be opened to bring in the prevailing breezes from Lake Potanipo which it faces. Division of the campers by age groups will also be possible by utilizing both the new recreation building and the camp's existing social hall.

There are limited openings for registration at each of the camps, although a number of groups are now full. The Eli & Bessie Cohen Foundation Camps offer complete and well-rounded summer camp programs in a warm and meaningful Jewish living experience. For information concerning Camp Pembroke contact Hadassah Blocker, 344 Kenrick Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02158, or call telephone (617) 332-5375; Daniel Fishbane, 57 Broadlawn Park, Apt. 5, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts 02167 (telephone (617) 327-8647); or Camp Tel Noar: George Marcus, 37 Orchard Circle, Swampscott, Massachusetts 01907 (telephone (617) 598-2758). Information is also available at the Camp Office, 66 Prospect Street, Manchester, New Hampshire 03104 (telephone (603) 668-7610).

way a refugee escaped detention was for the AJDC agent to pay the fine imposed. Even tho flagrantly exorbitant and unreasonable, it was still cheaper than holding up the passengers with the $1,500 per diem.

An American pilot lodged a complaint with the American Consulate in Tel Aviv, about the abuse the refugees were subjected to. The Consul declared that it was outside the scope of any government to interfere in the internal affairs of a foreign country regarding the treatment given its own nationals. When the British Mandate ended in Palestine, a batch of letters mailed by Palestinian Jews to relatives in Iraq before May 15th, 1948, which had not been forwarded, were turned over to the Iraqi authorities. The mere receipt of such a letter brought charges of Zionism with an automatic sentence of three years at hard labor. Some Jews in Zkhu were observed dancing. Witnesses testified that it was the Hora. Each received the same sentence. Ezra el Saigh age 85, visited his son in a village at Nasiriya. A witness testified that he brought news from Israel. He was sentenced to three months at hard labor and died in prison. Often the papers reported stiff sentences and fines, without specifying the crime. Jews accused of Zionist activities or Zionist sympathies were tried by court martial. All trials ended in fines in addition to prison sentences. The fines helped fill the depleted treasury. In addition to actions taken against individuals, the government introduced sweeping measures against Jewish commercial interests or the Jewish community as a whole. This policy of discrimination was designed to terrorize and pauperize the Jewish population.

On Sept. 22, 1948, a few months after partition, Shafiq Ates, one of the wealthiest Iraq Jews, was hanged in public. He had never displayed the slightest interest in Israel or in Zionism, considering himself completely assimilated. He was a businessman who had been prominent in the building and beautification of Baghdad, and had been honored for his civic activities on many occasions. His firm was one of the oldest commercial companies in Iraq, with important branches in Syria and Lebanon. Ates was tried in a military court and two of the judges were known Nazis. The independent news media reported that it was probably instigated by business rivals.

The government wanted to set an example that even the most important or most influential Jew was not immune, and took advantage of the opportunity to confiscate his wealth. Diplomats appeared indifferent to these illegal arrests, regardless of how they violated the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights.

Among the accusations leveled at Ates were that he preached anarchy, ridiculed Arab Nationalism, praised Zionism and supported the partition of Palestine. This was reported in the Baghdad papers. The trial which took a mere two days, was held behind closed doors. While the details of his trial were brief, that of the hanging was reported graphically in the Baghdad papers: "We publish the story of the execution of Ates, the dirty Zionist criminal...near the place which he intended to be the future consulate of the imaginary State of Israel...which he had built on the pattern of a military fortress, the sketches of which were made in Tel Aviv...When the criminal was asked

Jewish Activists Criticize Shots Into Soviet Mission

NEW YORK: The firing of shots into the Soviet Mission to the United Nations in New York has been condemned as a "terrorist act" by eight Jewish activists in Moscow, according to the National Conference on Soviet Jewry. The NCSJ said the activists issued a statement in which they also said that the "use of terror" is "morally unacceptable" and "would only harm the cause and struggle for the right of the Jewish people to live in their own country and for the right of the Jewish State of Israel to exist. Such actions constitute a danger for Soviet Jews as well, as they might be used by the authorities as a pretext for new repressions and for instigating anti-Soviet hostilities."

The statement, according to the SSSJ, was signed by Vitaly Rubin, Dina Beilina, Josef Beilin, Vladimir Slepak, Alexander Lerner, Anatoly Sharansky, Isosif Begun and Zeev Shaknovsky.

Meanwhile, the Jewish Defense League has sent letters to President Ford and Secretary Henry A. Kissinger saying that the violence attributed to the Jewish Armed Resistance will only end when Soviet Jews "win complete freedom of emigration." Dov Fisch, the JDL's associate director, urged Ford and Kissinger to accelerate activities for free emigration for Soviet Jewry. The JAR has claimed responsibility for the shooting at the Soviet mission as well as an earlier shooting at the Soviet diplomatic compound in the Riverdale section of the Bronx.

whether he had any statement, he arrogantly replied, "I am innocent!"

"People from the entire city and the provinces came to witness the execution of this traitor. He was hanged amidst victorious cheers of the crowds who cried, 'Long live justice! Long live the Iraq army! Long live the Arab people!' Many of our refugee Palestinian brothers were present at the execution of the man who participated in making them homeless. The crowds were estimated at over 15,000. The court imposed a fine of $425 million dollars and seized all his property." Other wealthy and prominent Jews were also arrested, including Chief Rabbi Sasson Kadoury. They were ultimately released, but heavily fined. Subsequently, a number of Jews were arrested as "spies" and after secret trials were also hung in public. This is the country that earnestly assures the world that Jews lived in "harmony and freedom."

Recently a Dutch born Jew, Leon Aaronson, who devoted his life to help the sick in the underdeveloped countries of Africa and Asia was executed as an Israeli spy by Iraq. Mr. Aaronson was a nurse on a medical mission to the Kurds in northern Iraq, when captured, a year ago.

Jan Beerkmann, a Dutch M.P. was informed when he was in Iraq earlier this year that Mr. Aaronson was alive, and the country was shocked when it was announced that he had been executed, months ago. Iraq claimed that Aaronson held dual Israeli citizenship, but being a Jew was sufficient to condemn him, aside from the fact that he was aiding Kurds, whom the government was trying to liquidate.

When the Dutch Parliament began to press an inquiry, it probably hastened Mr. Aaronson's death. Interrogation by the secret police is not a gentle process and it might have been awkward to have him seen in the condition he was probably in. The execution disposed of what threatened to become a troublesome international scandal. Iraq never signed an armistice with Israel, and still considers herself at war.

A small number of Jews still live in Iraq - if such a term can be truthfully applied. They are not permitted to live or leave, but are kept hostage, and terrorized when the Arabs suffer some humiliation at the hands of Israel. Periodically, although they are under constant and careful scrutiny, one or more are executed publicly as Israeli "spies" for the gratification of Arab "honor."

Rabbi Contends That Age Should Be Raised

PHILADELPHIA: A Conservative rabbi has expressed the view that the age for Bar Mitzva and Bat Mitzva should be changed from 13 years to around 16 because 13-year-old boys and girls now have not yet reached a point in their development that enables them to make a real commitment to Judaism.

Rabbi Elias Charry, rabbi emeritus of the Germantown Jewish Center, made the suggestion at a meeting of the Young Women's Group of the Federation of Jewish Agencies. He said that in the Middle Ages, the age of 13 was a time for a Jewish boy to decide whether he would study or work as an adult.

He said that, at 14 or 15, the boy was married and considered to be an adult. He said the Jewish Scriptures does not mention A Bar Mitzva observance at age 13 but refers to 20 years as the age of maturation.

He added that in the 15th century Bar Mitzva ceremonies were common and youngsters were supposed to display their knowledge. Elaborate social gatherings were held then, indicating that the "extravaganzas" of the present time are not a recent idea, he said.

DENY NUCLEAR ARMS

JERUSALEM: Israel officials have again denied that their country has nuclear weapons. The latest denial came after Time Magazine said that Israel prepared 13 atomic bombs for use in the Yom Kippur War should the Jewish State be threatened with defeat.

1st TV Broadcast On Homosexuals

JERUSALEM: Israeli homosexuals came out of the closet and into the national spotlight in a three-and-a-half-hour television panel discussion, the first ever in Israel to deal with the problems of homosexuals in this country.

The program featured two male homosexuals who readily identified themselves and several others whose faces were concealed from viewers. Two psychiatrists and two MKs were also on the panel.

The MKs took diametrically opposing views on the issue of liberalizing Israel's strict laws proscribing homosexual acts. Ms. Shulamit Aloni of the leftist Yaad faction, declared that the laws must be changed because homosexuals have the same right as all citizens to follow their own life-style in private without fear of blackmail and loss of jobs. She rejected the claim by one of the psychiatrists that homosexuality was a disease.

Yedidia Beeri, of the rightwing Likud faction, said he would fight against liberalizing the laws because he believed that lifting the ban on homosexual acts would be to admit they were "a good thing" and permissible.

I. Angel, an admitted homosexual who participated in the discussion, disclosed that for the first time that an organization exists in Israel for homosexuals and lesbians. During the course of the program, unverified reports were mentioned that about five percent of Israel's male population was homosexual.

Israeli officials repeated Premier Yitzhak Rabin's assertion that Israel is not a nuclear power and will not be the first to introduce nuclear weapons into the Middle East. Simcha Dinitz, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, made the same assertion in response to questions at a news conference in Montreal.
