The Silvers Reminisce Upon Return From Iran

By BARBARA WRONSKI

Dr. Carroll Silver, orthopedic surgeon with professional offices at 160 Wayland Avenue, accompanied by his wife, Macey, spent this past October in Iran where he had been asked to return as visiting professor at the Shafa Rehabilitation Hospital in Tehran, Iran's capital. He made a similar visit four years ago. Following are some of Dr. and Mrs. Silver's reflections on the geography, the culture and the economy of Iran.

"The hospital is very well run and the orthopedic surgeons on the staff are excellent. It is a fine institution," Dr. Silver said of the Shafa Rehabilitation Hospital, a 250-bed facility with a staff of 15 orthopedic surgeons and 32 residents. The resident program, instituted by Dr. Motamed, former director of orthopedic surgery at Shafa, is a new concept in medical training in Iran. Interestingly, Dr. Motamed came to the States shortly after Dr. Silver's visit to Iran four years ago and now practices with the Orthopedic Group of which Dr. Silver is a member.

Dr. Silver explained that his average work day began at 7 a.m., when he would be picked up and brought to the hospital. Surgery began by 8 and continued for several hours. A few hours in the morning were likewise devoted to the heavily-trafficked out-patient clinic.

"We would then break for lunch. This frequently consisted of lamb and yogurt — it's very good for you, you know," Dr. Silver advised.

Afternoon sessions were devoted to the residents, discussing any problem cases slated for the next day. Cases of severe deformities are relatively common in Iran, as are cases of cerebral palsy and birth defects. Polio vaccine has only recently been introduced in the country, however, and many patients never see a doctor until the manifest symptoms of a disease have seriously progressed. Transportation is not readily available to the poorer village dwellers, nor do they have the money for medical fees. The government under the new Shah is correcting these problems by providing the people with free clinics and often sending doctors into the villages to work.

Dr. Silver showed several slides of some of the deformities he treated while in Iran. One boy had such severe club feet that they appeared to be turned around backwards. They were corrected through surgery and "will be much like anyone else's feet, only a little stiffer," Dr. Silver explained. He also showed a slide of people who were left with one short leg as the result of polio. To correct it, "we stretch the legs a millimeter per day for up to five weeks," he said.

Shafa Hospital has its own brace department where all required braces are custom-made right on the premises. When the initial need for braces arose, the idea of independent brace suppliers, so customary in the United States, was not even considered. Their own method seemed far more expedient. Frequently Africans apprentice in these shops to learn the trade and return home to teach or institute brace departments in their own hospitals.

With the advent of oil exploitation, Dr. Silver pointed out, Iran has become a very wealthy country. This is no where more apparent

Israel To Join Operation Sail

TEL AVIV: Two missile boats will represent Israel in Operation Sail and the International Naval Review in the waters around Manhattan on July 4 to mark the United States Bicentennial. The decision is a reversal of the earlier stance taken by the Israeli government.

The vessels sailed from Haifa on June 18 with crews of 45. The boats were built in Israel.

The Israeli government had originally contended it would not participate in the United States' celebration because the $300,000 expenditure on the good will gesture would be hard to explain in light of their slashing social services and seeking financial aid from the United States.

The government reconsidered its stand when it learned that most of the Arab navies were taking part in the international display of friendship for the American people. It had been argued that Israel could not afford to be missing from the event.

Israelis Will Participate In Barrington-Sponsored Races

Israel's 420 Class yachting team will be participating in the Yachting World Championships at the Barrington Yacht Club between July 2-20. In conjunction with the event, Alan Nathan, volunteer coordinator of the event for the Sports Federation of Israel, is striving to raise $1800 in funds to sponsor the seven member team.

The team possibly represents Israel's best hope for a medal in the Summer Olympics in Montreal. It is one of the most successful yachting teams in the world, having taken the world championship in 1969, the world team championship in 1970, the single-hand world championship in 1971, 1972 and 1975, and the youth world championship in 1972. In addition, the team has won numerous second and third places.

The Israeli team will be using the Snafir 420, a boat manufactured in Israel which has carried many competition-winning teams in the United States.

A number of local families have already agreed to entertain the team at parties in their honor during their visit here. Sailing enthusiasts or those who are interested in helping Israel establish itself in the sporting world are asked to contact Mr. Nathan at 781-6500 for details on making contributions.

JULY 4 FETE IN ISRAEL
JERUSALEM: The Hebrew University of Jerusalem is celebrating the US' 200th birthday by sponsoring three bicentennial-related events. Tourist Visa Applicants Are Scrutinized For Fraud

TEL AVIV (JTA): U. S. Consular officials are giving special scrutiny to the flood of applications from Israelis seeking tourist visas to visit the United States. The reason is that in the past, too many of the "tourists" decided to remain. Immigrants from the Soviet Union who apply for American visas receive the most careful checks as it is suspected by U. S. officials that many of them do not intend to return. An estimated 40,000 Israelis are expected to visit the U. S. this summer despite serious economic difficulties. The American Consular Offices had been jammed for weeks. Clerks are dealing with as many as 200 applicants a day, which is an unusually large number. According to John Peters, first secretary in charge of Consular operations, only five percent of the applicants are rejected. However, most of the others have a long wait because of the work load and tighter checking processes.

CHESS BOYCOTT

JERUSALEM: Israel has expressed regret over a decision by the Soviet Union to boycott the Chess Olympiad which will be held in Israel in October. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that "Israel believes that despite political differences, cultural and sports events must be held in a spirit of universality. Israel has acted so in the past and will do so in the future," he said.

JEWES OF HONG KONG

By DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN

Iraqi Jews had been migrating to the Far East since 1820 when Daud Pasha, the new ruler of Bagdad began arresting wealthy Jews and holding them for ransom. David Sassoon, whose father had been Nasi, the lay leader appointed by the Caliph as Chief Banker and responsible for the collection of taxes from his co-religionists. The Nasi was usually the wealthiest and most respected Jew in Bagdad. It worked well for both sides. The Caliph had a shrewd advisor whom he could flatter with ceremonial honors, and the Jews had a friend at court, who could act for them when the need arose.

Daud Pasha, the new Caliph, considered the collection of taxes too slow and decided to extract greater sums by holding the affluent Jews for ransom. The present Iraqi government also found this method effective. After David was released, the family fled Bagdad, leaving behind them almost their entire wealth. They first went to Persia, and eventually made their way to Bombay, India.

Bombay came into British possession as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza on her marriage to Charles who leased it to the East India Company for ten pounds sterling a year. The rent was low as the city was disease ridden and consisted of miles of stinking mud flats, with lakes of stagnant water, which bred swarms of mosquitoes. Life expectation for Europeans was brief, but immigrants like David Sassoon were immunized by the heat and dirt of Bagdad. They cheerfully accepted these hazards for the religious freedom and protection offered by the British flag.

The Sassoons were greeted by the Mississ and Gabbais who had earlier fled the wrath of Daud Pasha. Like the Sassoons they also arrived virtually penniless, and in a new environment and without capital, failed to prosper. Because of the Sassoon reputation, a friend Samuel Zacharia of Persia, offered financing. David Sassoon also had the goodwill of the British Agent who had once been a guest at their Bagdad home. The new Sassoon fortune began in Bombay and later increased substantially in Shanghai and Hong Kong.

The life of the Jews in China is tied up inextricably with Shanghai, the largest city in China. The city was opened to foreign trade in 1843 and because it was located near the Yangtze River Delta, became one of the greatest ports and leading financial centers of the world. Shanghai was particularly attractive to foreigners because of its principle of extra-territoriality, which placed citizens of foreign nationalities under the exclusive jurisdiction of their own countries.

These legal rights gave foreigners special advantages in business and helped secure their property and liberty.

The Portuguese first introduced opium to the Chinese as a specific for gastric disorders. The Chinese masses found solace in the drug and its use spread rapidly. It soon became the East India Company's most profitable commodity. It was imperishable, compact and vastly profitable, in a safe market with a constantly rising demand. By 1830 nearly a third of Bombay's trade came from the export of opium.

Smuggling bases were established on Lintin Island, off Canton. The East India Company's ship docked at Shanghai in 1832 eager to trade tea and silk for their opium. The Chinese were angered at the defiance of their prohibition against the importation of opium, but unwilling to attack the ship of the powerful East India Company, finally raided warehouses on Lintin Island, seized and burned 20,000 chests of the smuggled opium, valued at 2 million sterling.

This was the opportunity the British had been waiting for and they came to the aid of these honest merchants "in the sacred name of free trade." It would be analogous to the Turkish government demanding the right to import their opium into the United States without restraint by our government.

The Chinese were easily defeated and as a result of the so-called "Opium War" of 1842, the Chinese were compelled to pay for the opium destroyed, and forced to sign the Treaty of Nanking. In addition to Canton, four additional ports were opened to the British. Since Canton continued hostile, the British traders moved to Shanghai. As these ports were opened to commerce, Jewish merchants from India soon followed and set up trading posts in Shanghai and Hong Kong, along with Jardine, Matheson & Company, who as British enjoyed certain privileges. In their wake came a horde of thugs, smugglers, thieves and the scum of the earth.

Shanghai long had the reputation of being one of the most wicked cities of the world. Its extra-territoriality provided easy access to criminals who flocked here from all parts of the world, able to enjoy freedom from extradition. We who are so deeply concerned with crime on our streets should realize that in 1935 the Shanghai Municipal Council collected 5,600 corpses from the streets, who died from starvation, were frozen or simply murdered. Kidnapping was common and its frequency gave the name of "shanghaiing" to this practice. Foreigners as well as Chinese were snatched off the streets, often in broad daylight, by roving gangs of hoodlums, with these captives sold as ship crews or as coolie labor on the East Indian plantations.

There was a tiny group of Chinese Jews that had somehow survived for generations. Most were small traders, but some were scholars and held high office in the government. They presented a startling sight as they stood in the synagogue in quilted robes, with pigtailed dangles over their tallithim. Their prayers in Mandarin Chinese owed more to Confucius and Buddha than the Law of Moses. These Chinese Jews of Kai-Feng-Fu gradually integrated into the Chinese population and by 1900 were completely absorbed and lost to the world Jewish community.

The Sephardic Jews were orthodox and dutifully attended the Synagogue. The wealthy usually also maintained a chapel in their homes for private worship. Often they were also furnished with imposing scrolls of the Law. Halak-hah was scrupulously observed. The cooks were of course Jewish and a resident shochet ensured (Continued on page 11)

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY THE GRADUATES

By BERYL SEGAL

This is the time of the year when in many homes Jews are celebrating the graduation of their sons and daughters from universities and colleges. Parents will look back on the day when their children were small and made their first steps in kindergarten and then at grade school. Only yesterday, they will remember, the day when the boy or girl walked down the aisle to receive the high school diploma. And now the time has come when they will step out into the world to make a place for themselves.

But will they?

Mr. Smolar says that over 20,000 Jewish students were among the graduates this year. Most of them will find difficulties in obtaining jobs for themselves, unless they find places in the businesses of their parents.

Most of the girls graduating from college were prepared for teaching jobs in high schools. These jobs are at a premium today. Teachers are being dismissed daily because of tight budgets. The budgets are also tight in colleges where students with master's degrees and Ph.D.s could apply. There are unfortunately even now in New York taxi drivers with advanced degrees. Of course, the jobs are only temporary, but who knows how long these temporary jobs will be only "temporary."

The situation is not better in the social service markets. City and municipal and federal jobs are at a premium. The word is now economy in spending. No new social workers. No replacements when one retired.

The research and advanced studies stipends at universities to which many Jewish men and women were attracted, have become limited because of the scarcity of funds. Heads of departments are being told that the fat years of scholarships are a thing of the past.

The universities are very budget conscious.

Young people with Ph.D. degrees in Philosophy, Psychology, Economics, Political Science have few chances of working at their specialties. Few, very few, will remain at their universities as teachers and scholars.

Even the practice of law is limited. Unless a budding lawyer joins a law firm of a relative or friend who is on the way to retiring, he will find it very difficult to establish himself or herself in the practice of law.

Better off are the doctors. There is a scarcity of physicians in the land. But not all graduates can apply and be admitted to the schools of medicine. Besides it is a profession that requires at least ten more years of studies before one may open an office or join a medical group.

Physics, Chemistry, Biology, Engineering and all the electronic sciences of which Jewish mothers spoke so proudly whenever the subject came up among friends and neighbors (My son, the Scientist; My daughter the TV Personality), are no longer easily available to the graduates. These fields too have come under the knife of cutting out, making do with what is already on hand. The country will some day regret the waste of talent and ingenuity, but it will not help the graduates of this year.

Lack of employment among college graduates is not limited to Jewish men and women only. It applies to non-Jewish graduates as well. Their only hope of finding employment either in business establishments, preferably of parents or family, as managers, accounting, advertising and field representatives or go into business by themselves.

Teaching in public schools, in colleges and universities, civil service in the Federal government or in the municipalities, research in the exact sciences, opportunities in great corporations are all a thing of the past. These will not be available to this year's graduates at least until the economy of the country has improved. Since no one can predict when this will happen, these graduates will have to work at whatever they can get and hope for the best. Already there are taxi drivers in New York and in other cities who are college graduates of last year and who gave up waiting for jobs in their chosen fields.

Something must be wrong with a country which cannot employ her children and thus give them their share of happiness.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

Two Issues with Diverse Outlook

Q—For many years, I have held 81 shares of Great Northern Iron Ore (NYSE) and 100 shares of Bobbie Brooks (NYSE). Being now in my sixties, I wonder if these are suitable investments. Should they be unloaded? E.W.

A—A sharp increase in royalty income has been reflected in the trading level for Great Northern Iron Ore shares. It is now within hailing distance of your cost price. Nevertheless, these certificates will appear to have upside potential. Higher prices for ore and a continued high level of mining activity should boost royalty income again over the balance of the year. With earnings expected to reach $1.65 a share, an increment in the dividend should follow. Hold.

Bobbie Brooks is another story — a marginal operator in a very volatile "rages-to-riches" industry. While some strengthening of the balance sheet has been seen recently, earnings have been erratic and dividends non-existent. I would sell this speculative apparel stock on any upturn.

Q—We are in our late seventies and need more income. Our list of stocks, bonds and mutual funds are enclosed. We have about $4,600 in income from Social Security and $20,000 in savings. Your opinion on our holdings would be greatly appreciated. T.T.

A—Your mutual fund is growth rather than income oriented and pays a very modest income dividend. It should be sold. As a replacement, no-load Northeast Investors Trust (50 Congress St., Boston, MA 02109), yielding close to 9%, is recommended. While Warner-Lambert (NYSE) is a long-time growth favorite of mine, it yields under 4%. By switching this into American Electric Power (NYSE) you would more than double the return from this capital. In fact, the two suggested changes would up your total return by 25%. All told, your current yield would be a generous 8.5%. Inasmuch as you are in your late seventies, have no heirs and have assets worth $95,000 (including H-Bonds, savings and securities), you might give thought to using a small portion of this capital to cover unusual expenses.

Bargains in Drug Stocks

Q—I have held off buying drug stocks because they seemed overpriced based on earnings. Government regulations have also concerned me. Would you say this is a good time to buy and if so what company or companies. G.P.

A—Actually most drug stocks, along with a lot of other high P-E issues, have lagged the market for a year or more. For the most part investors have been overlooking the excellent earnings gains made by most drug manufacturers. Even during the last 5 years, which included the worst economic setback since the 1930s, these companies have averaged 12% per year growth in income.

While a 12% average annual growth may not sound like much, it will double per share earnings in 6 years. With the people of this country determined to live long and healthy lives, there is little reason to expect any slowdown in drug company growth. Meantime, the stocks in this industry have lagged enough to look like excellent long term values. Three with historically reasonable P-ES of 13X to 15X are: Abbott Labs, Squibb and Warner-Lambert, all on the Big Board.

Q—Most of the stocks in my portfolio have done very well for me. However, 5 NYSE stocks which I have held a number of years show varying losses—Comsat, General Motors, Mesta Machine, Southern California Edison and Xerox. I am in good health but I have been trying to get my affairs in order so when something happens to me everything will be taken care of. I do not need the money on these stocks but your advice on them would be appreciated. R. D.

A—You may sit back and relax; all five issues are rated hold. Comsat is doubtless going to report lower earnings this year in view of the rate cut expected. Long term, however, prospects continue to look excellent. Even though General Motors has a long way to go to reach your cost price, earnings recovery should accelerate with share price moving apace. Mesta Machine is another cyclical issue which is now turning around. A good gain in operating results was reported in the first quarter, and the dividend was raised.

Hydro-power contributions vary from year-to-year, as do earnings at Southern California Edison. Earnings and dividend quality is nonetheless above the norm and the shares should be held for yield. Although profits at Xerox are temporarily stalled, momentum should be restored as 9200 duplicator introductory costs ebb and placements strengthen. Management is aiming for 15% earnings growth in 1977, after a possible flat 1976.

MAX-KIRSCH

Miss Barbara Ellen Kirsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Kirsch of 318 East 41 Street, Paterson, New Jersey, was married at the Marriott Hotel in Saddle Brook, New Jersey, at an 11 a.m. ceremony on June 6, to Bert Steven Max. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Max of 12 Greaton Drive.

Officiating at the service were Rabbi David H. Panitz, and Cantor David Lefkowitz of Temple Emanuel in Paterson, New Jersey. A brunch followed the ceremony at the Marriott Hotel.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown of white chiffon with matching hat. She carried a sheath of pink talismans which covered her grandmother's white Bible.

The bride's twin sister, Mrs. Joe Herrmann, served as matron of honor, wearing a gown of pink and white dotted swiss with matching hat and carrying a sheath of white rose buds with pink baby's breath. Maid of honor was Michelle Wager of Elmont, New York. She wore a gown of pink quiana with a pink flowered jacket and matching pink hat. She carried a nosegay of white rose buds and pink baby's breath.

Serving as best man was Howard Herman of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Ushers included Barry M. Kirsch, brother of the bride, and Keith Fishbein.

The bride received her degree in business administration last month from Montclair State College and will begin working as a management trainee with Industrial National Bank. The bridegroom received his bachelor's degree in political science from Temple University in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and is currently pursuing a master's in business administration at the University of Rhode Island.

Following a wedding trip to Elbow Beach, Bermuda, the couple will reside at 101 Oaklawn Avenue, Cranston.

Intermarriage Deterred By Parental Objection

JERUSALEM: "Parental objection is the primary factor common to most cancelled engagements. Parents must realize this and take action," said Kalman Packouz in announcing publication of "How to Stop An Intermarriage," described as "a practical guide for parents."

Packouz, a psychology graduate of the University of Washington, is the author of the book and the vice chairman of the Intermarriage Crises Conference.

"Some parents," Packouz continued, "wrongly believe that they have no right to object to their child's proposed intermarriage. They think that because they have not provided a strong Jewish home or education they must be consistent with their past actions. This is just not so. A parent must clarify what he values and be consistent with this."

One parent said, "We're not so religious, so how can I object to the marriage?" Yet, if that same parent had been asked — before the situation arose — whether he was proud to be a Jew, whether he wanted his child to marry a Jew and whether he wanted to see the Jewish people survive — he would have answered with a resounding "Yes" to all three questions, said Packouz.

Jewish parents really do care deeply about the survival of Judaism, the Jewish people and their own Jewish posterity. They just don't know that they have a chance of success to prevent an impending intermarriage. Any parent who has this appreciation and makes a determined effort with clear and careful planning has a good chance of preventing an intermarriage, he said.

"How To Stop An Intermarriage" offers information on how to formulate a plan, begin communication and convince someone who is already emotionally involved. It also contains 20 case histories of successful efforts in preventing an intermarriage or the personal tragedies resulting from an intermarriage; who to contact for help; the facts on conversion and chapters for family and communal longterm preventive planning.

The hardbound volume is available by mail only for $6.95 ($9.95 air mail) from the Intermarriage Crises Conference, P. O. Box 14149, Jerusalem, Israel.

Packouz is a third-year rabbinical student at Yeshivat Aish HaTorah in Jerusalem. He spent two years compiling the book.

Workmen's Circle Attacks Imperialistic Aggression

TAMIMENT, PA: In a strong foreign policy statement attacking "latter day forms of imperialistic aggression practiced by Communist adventurers and expansionists and in the Middle East by obdurate Arab nationalism and petrodollar blackmail," 1,000 delegates to the national convention of the Workmen's Circle concluded their four-day session here.

The delegates, while supporting the concept of detente, warned that "it can work, if all parties involved accept the responsibilities inherent in it, and observe the understandings and agreements which constitute it."

The Jewish labor fraternal order's delegates also lashed out at the failure of the United Nations to remain more than "a platform for demagoguery and hypocrisy, particularly in its attacks on Israel" while, at the same time reaffirming its faith in the concept of the UN.

pavilion at the Inter-national Fair on Modern Living which recently opened at the Tel Aviv fair grounds has raised some eyebrows here. It will be the first time the United States has not participated in an international exposition in Israel. Notice of the cancellation was received only last week and the reasons given were technical. But Elisha Almagor, director general of the fair grounds, said this explanation did not seem reasonable.

It was learned meanwhile, that the U.S. had intended to have a pavilion centered around the bicentennial celebrations. But there is a similar exhibition at the U.S. Cultural Center here and since the material for the pavilion did not arrive when expected, it was decided to cancel the fair ground exhibition. There will be over 1000 exhibitors representing 23 countries, including Great Britain and West Germany.

League of Arab States Plans Isolation Of Israel By 1980

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y.: The League of Arab States, headquartered in Cairo, has set 1980 as the target date for isolating Israel politically and diplomatically and is carrying out a five-year, $30-million worldwide propaganda master plan to do the job, an official of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has charged.

Jerome Bakst, Anti-Defamation League national director of research and evaluation, said the master plan is being implemented in the United States, Western Europe and Latin America. Bakst was the principal speaker at the ADL seminar of the B'nai B'rith District Three 124th Annual Convention in the Concord Hotel.

Meyer A. Bushman, chairman of the B'nai B'rith District Three ADL committee, presided. Serving as consultants for the seminar were Samuel Lewis Gaber, ADL regional director for Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Delaware, and Harold L. Adler, ADL regional director for New Jersey.

"The most noticeable evidence of the new climate of opinion in the United States with respect to the Middle East," Bakst added, "is a growing trend toward acceptance of the notion that the Palestinian issue is the core of the Middle East problem, rather than the refusal of the PLO and its Arab League sponsors to end their 30-year war to destroy Israel, make peace, and recognize Israel's right to exist as a sovereign and independent Jewish state in the world community of nations.

"The propaganda campaign," he continued, "is closely linked to Arab economic warfare in the United States and other countries, aimed at strangling Israel economically — especially the Arab

The major concentration for Sugar Cane, which will be giving two shows nightly at 10 p.m. and midnight in the PPC-Providence Provisions' Company Lounge, is contemporary and pops, with a strong preference for show tunes.

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand contains another defensive situation that should have been solved by every West and the hand set. But because so few Defenders actually think things through far enough, most of the Declarers were allowed to make the hand. See what you would have done at trick two.

East and West were vulnerable, West dealer, with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
1♥	Dbl	2♥	4♦
P	P	P

To discuss the bidding, after West opens, North's only call can be a Take-out Double. He has all the necessary ingredients, including four Spades, the other major. East's raise to two Hearts is a very weak bid showing Heart support and about 3-6 points. Although South had but six points, he should feel that his distribution is so good that he might just as well go all the way to game. His attitude should be that if his side couldn't make four Spades, the opponents could then likely make four Hearts. He had no defense.

The vulnerability stopped West from making a sacrifice at the five level where he would be down two, losing three Clubs and one Spade. But even if the vulnerability were the other way and the sacrifice supposedly worthwhile, it would be foolish when the hand should be set. Here is what happened at most of the tables.

West naturally led a high Heart and after seeing Dummy felt that the only safe play was to continue that suit. He would wait for his Diamond King and hope the other tricks came from somewhere. Declarer ruffed the second Heart, drew Trumps and then played a Diamond toward Dummy. He could hardly go wrong playing that suit for West will have to play either the King or Jack. So Declarer winds up losing but two Clubs to make the game.

How can West defeat the hand? He must realize that Declarer must be out of Hearts after the first trick as East would not raise with but two so Hearts leave no future. Clubs are hopeless and whatever Trump tricks will come will not disappear. The only place tricks will come must be in Diamonds. If by some not so remote chance East's one high card happens to be the Diamond Ace, the hand can be set. Remember, East has only one point in Hearts and none in Clubs. West knows that.

So at trick two, before Trumps are drawn, West must shift to his Diamond King and pray his partner has the Ace. Now East can win the continuation, play a third Diamond and West's ruff sets the hand. Declarer, realizing what is about to happen, is actually helpless and this is the way the defense should go. If you really think about it, the only card East could have is that same Diamond Ace.

Moral: While defending a hand, try to place possible cards in your partner's hand and then govern yourselves as if you know they are there. Occasionally you will give up a trick but much more often you will gain.

WASHINGTON: Rep. Joshua A. Eilberg (D.Pa.) has announced that the State Department will terminate within six months its 20-year policy of granting diplomatic visas to students from Kuwait and Saudi Arabia who are studying in the United States. Eilberg, chairman of the House sub-committee on immigration, citizenship and international law, has been seeking an end to the practice since last October.

He said he has received "personal assurances" from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the students will have their visas converted to either "foreign student" or "cultural exchange student."

Meir Claims Biggest Lie Is Israel's Love Of Territories

By Yitzhak Rabi

NEW YORK, (JTA) — Former Premier Golda Meir said recently that most Israelis will be prepared to compromise on the West Bank in return for peace with Jordan. But, she said, the Israeli settlements along the Jordan River are a security line for Israel in case of a Jordanian attack. Addressing an enthusiastic gathering of about 1000 United Jewish Appeal community leaders at a luncheon at the Pierre Hotel, Mrs. Meir declared "the greatest lie in the world is that there is no peace in the Middle East because we fell in love with the territories." She reiterated the Israeli contention that the Arabs were not willing to reconcile themselves to Israel's existence even before the June 1967 war when Israel did not control the West Bank, the Gaza Strip or parts of the Golan Heights and Sinai. The former Premier, whose speech marked the end of her current American speaking tour, said that the Palestinian problem should be resolved through negotiations between Israel and Jordan. She noted that most Palestinians are Jordanian citizens and that there is no room for a third state between Israel and Jordan.

Mrs. Meir castigated the United Nations for treating Israel "as a culprit of the world." She noted that while a "terrible tragedy" is taking place in Lebanon, nobody is concerned about it. "Pretty soon they will blame Israel for the Lebanese tragedy," she remarked with obvious sarcasm. Mrs. Meir reiterated that the future of Israel and the Jewish people is in the hands of the Jewish people themselves and that therefore Israel will never be destroyed. Frank Lautenberg, general chairman of the UJA, announced that the 1976 campaign has reached a total of $500 million to date. He said that pledges have come from 800 Jewish communities across the country. A check for $12 million raised by 92 communities for Israel was presented to Ambassador Chaim Herzog, Israel's envoy to the United Nations.

Israeli Woman Gets War Medal

JERUSALEM — This is the story of an Israeli heroine, a young girl who watched the human tragedy of the Yom Kippur War, who shared the agony of the bereaved and who has now become the second woman in Israel's history to be awarded a medal for exemplary conduct.

Twenty-three year old Dina Selitz was a lieutenant in the tank division which blocked the Egyptian attack across the Suez Canal. As the young men she knew so well were killed or wounded, Dina took on the task of trying to bring order into the chaos of battle. The lists she drew up were of soldiers who fought and fell. By patient questioning of survivors she found out about the missing and the wounded. Gradually, Dina formed contacts with the bereaved families, some of them in dire need. To each and every one she offered assistance; from blankets or a heater in the winter to help behind the counter in a shop a father felt he could no longer manage after the death of his son.

And then came the search for equipment, the last souvenirs of the dead soldiers. Dina went from the site of one battle after another. Once, she found the kitbag of a soldier who had been killed. It was typical of her approach that, upon opening a kitbag and finding the belongings dirty, she would wash them all before handing them over to the mourning parents. Dina received her medal on Independence Day.

Staple Commodities Face Price Increase July 1

By David Landau

JERUSALEM (JTA): Flour, rice, frozen meat, hard cheeses, fancy breads — these are among the staple commodities whose prices will go up eight percent July 1, with the introduction of the value added tax (VAT). Nine others of the 14 subsidized staple products — including bread, milk and milk products (soft cheeses, yogurts, etc.), eggs, sugar, frozen chicken, public transportation and cooking oil — will remain the same through increased government subsidies.

This was decided jointly by the government and the Histadrut. The decision was a compromise. The government had originally sought to raise the prices of more products, while the Histadrut had initially demanded that all 14 of the subsidized staples remain stable. Other basic items that will go up by the eight percent include gasoline, heating oil, cooking gas, electricity and water.

Israel Participates Despite UN's Invitation Withdrawal

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The Jerusalem municipality took part as planned in the UN-sponsored "World Environment Day" June 5 despite the UN's last-minute withdrawal of its invitation to Jerusalem to participate. The withdrawal, revealed by the Jerusalem Post's correspondent to the "Habitat" conference in Vancouver, came as a result of pressure from Arab delegations there.

The UN environment program Secretary General, Mustafa Tolba, sent an urgent cable to Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kollek June 2 cancelling an earlier invitation to Jerusalem to be one of 1600 cities the world over asked to close a central street to traffic June 5. A UN official at "Habitat" told the Jerusalem Post that the invitation had been withdrawn "because of UN resolutions on Jerusalem going back to 1948." That year the UN voted Jerusalem an international city. The resolution has never been formally revoked. The official acknowledged that the cancellation followed Arab involvement in the affair.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Normand N. Solomon of South Orange, New Jersey. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Diamond of Riverside.

Mrs. Diamond received her bachelor of arts degree from George Washington University in Washington, D.C. She is employed by Bamberger's of Plainfield, New Jersey.

Mr. Diamond received his bachelor of science and master of business administration degrees from Babson College, Wellesley, Massachusetts. He is an operations executive with Bloomingdale's of New York City.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Israeli's Are Watching Soviet Naval Build-Up

TEL AVIV (JTA): Israeli circles are keeping a careful watch on the build-up of Soviet naval strength in the Eastern Mediterranean. While the Russians normally deploy about 40-50 units in the region, recent reinforcements have increased the number to 75 vessels, approaching the size of the fleet on the eve of the Yom Kippur War, when Moscow apparently had advance intelligence of the impending Egyptian-Syrian attack on Israel.

Israeli sources expect additional Soviet naval units to join the Mediterranean fleet from the Black Sea, bringing the total to about 90 combat ships and auxiliaries. More significant, perhaps, is the arrival of the Russian missile cruiser Uchakov in Eastern Mediterranean waters with the Soviet Chief of Staff, Gen. Victor Kulakov aboard. His presence means that local Soviet commanders can make spot decisions without referring back to Moscow for orders, Israeli circles say.

2 Charged With Complicity For Ben Gurion Explosion

AMSTERDAM (JTA): Two young Dutchmen, 25-year-old Hugo Muller and 26-year-old Rudolf Meyer, were remanded for one week today by a Dutch magistrate. The two men, both known for their contacts with leftist organizations, are suspected of complicity in the May 25 Ben Gurion Airport explosion.

A man who died, when his suitcase exploded when opened by security agents, carried Muller's passport. Muller himself reportedly told police first that he had lost it, then that he had given it to a member of the Baader-Meinhof group to enable him to flee West Germany where he was wanted by police. The arrests involved the Baader-Meinhof group in the airport explosion. Dutch police said more arrests are likely to follow.

strength is seen as a warning against any unwarranted intervention in the Lebanese conflict, Reserve Adm. Abraham Botzer, former commander of the Israeli Navy, said today. Botzer said the possibility of Soviet intervention was small. Although the Russian navy could land token units in Lebanon, it does not have the equipment for a full-scale military operation there, he said. Moreover, he said, the U. S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean is more than a match for the Soviet navy in the region, even with the addition of the newly-built aircraft carrier Kiev which has greatly increased the Russians' fire power. Botzer said the Sixth Fleet, deployed around the aircraft carrier Saratoga, constitutes a counterforce that will limit Soviet actions to muscle-flexing.

Unauthorized Talmud Banned From Use By London Bet Din

LONDON — The London Bet Din has banned the sale, purchase and use of unauthorized copies of the famous Soncino Talmud. The Rabbinical Council of America and the Rabbinical Board of Greater New York have taken similar action.

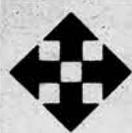

S.M. Bloch, president of the Soncino Press, has announced that applying well established principles of Halacha, a number of recognized rabbinic organizations in the United States and England have concluded that not only has the copying been done without the permission of the Soncino Talmud, which itself is a violation of Jewish law, but in addition, the sale, purchase and use of such volumes also violated Jewish law.

Bloch pointed out that notice of this ban is particularly important to teachers, students and scholars who might inadvertently use the unauthorized edition.

THE JEWS OF HONG KONG

that all meat was ritually slaughtered. There was an outhouse for the ritual bath. One room was filled with sacks of wheat from the previous year and kepy strictly isolated to be used to bake the matzos for Passover. All business activities ceased from Friday afternoon until Monday.

The majority of the Jews that originally settled here were refugees from the 1917 Russian Revolution, who made the long and arduous journey across Siberia into Manchuria and Harbin, on the trans-Siberian railway. All were destitute as what little they had been able to take with them had long since been spent or confiscated by officials or soldiers on the long journey. The trip took weeks and often months as they made their way across this enormous wasteland. They were often held up for hours on a railway spur to permit the passage of troop trains as the Red Army sought its foe.

These Jews were suspect to both sides and equally abused by both armies. Although they carried passes from the proper Bolshevik committees, as the distance from Moscow increased, the value of the passes lessened. It would have made little difference if their passes had been signed by Lenin himself, if the leader of the armed mob who held their destiny in his hands was unable to read. Terror rode the rails with them. People would be shot for little reason by these undisciplined soldiers when sober, and for no reason when drunk. The village peasants fared no better.

Although the revolution made them all comrades, the flourish of a pen could not erase the hatred and suspicion of these peasant soldiers who for centuries had been nourished on distrust of the "Christ killers" and the bourgeois Jew. Here in the vast waste of Siberia these unruly soldiers were a law unto themselves and subject only to their own whims.

The Red soldiers were suspicious of anyone fleeing "Holy Mother Russia" instead of fighting for the glorious revolution. To the White Army anyone not in their uniform was a Bolshevik and an enemy. People were shot by either army on the slightest suspicion.
Those who died on the way were merely left along the road bed when the train stopped as the ground was too hard to dig a grave, and the refugees had lived with death so long that life had lost its value. The dead were often envied.

From Harbin they moved on to Mukden and eventually reached Shanghai. A small number elected to go on to Japan. While many of us feel a grave injustice was done Japanese-Americans during the war, when they were confined to concentration camps, the Japanese deported their entire Jewish community to Shanghai when the war began.

Two Jewish families dominated Jewish life in Shanghai and Hong Kong during this period and both were from Bagdad. One was the fabulous Sassoon family and the other the Kadoorie brothers. Any trader able to compete with the entrenched and well financed British, Chinese and Indian companies had to be unusually astute. These Jews were. They soon branched out into banking, finance, real estate and land investments and both families became enormously wealthy. They not only had the ability to make money, but were extremely liberal and their philanthropies endless.

GREGERMAN-GREENBERG

Miss Susan Greenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Greenberg of 255 Fifth Street, married Abbott Gregerman at a June 20 ceremony at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Mr. Gregerman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gregerman of 12 Foster Street in Barrington.

Rabbi Joel Zaiman and Cantor Ivan Perlman officiated at the garden ceremony. A reception followed on the premises.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory merricaine with a halter bodice and flowing A-line skirt. Accenting the gown was a long sleeve bolero jacket of venise lace appliques. She wore an arm bouquet of white daisies, orange Belinda roses, yellow sweetheart roses and baby's breath with green variegated pittisporum.

Maid of honor was Marilyn Greenberg, sister of the bride, who carried a cascade bouquet of yellow daisies, orange Belinda roses and baby's breath.

Robert Cohen, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Following a wedding trip to California and Las Vegas, the couple will reside in Warwick.

KIBBUTZIM
JERUSALEM: In the year 1975 all of Israel's kibbutzim managed to settle—approximately 1,200 new-comers. However, it was learned that 25% of them left after a short time. Most of the new immigrants came from the western countries of the free world.

Scientist Complains Son Is Harassed
"My children now sit at home, afraid to go into the street," declared Solomon Alber, a Jewish mathematician and former director of a computer research laboratory, in an interview shortly following charges he made that his 15-year-old son had become a target for an officially inspired campaign of threats and violence since the family applied to emigrate to Israel.
Mr. Alber said his son, Mark, was beaten twice by schoolmates but that the police had refused to take action against the assailants even though their identities were known.
He said that a three-ounce metal ball was shot through the window of his son's third-floor bedroom over a week ago. Neither Mark nor his 10-year-old brother, Ilya, were in the room at the time and police chose to dismiss the incident as a prank, according to Mr. Alber.
He told interviewers that the trouble started shortly after he and his wife, Yeva, a physician, applied for emigration visas in March of 1975. He was demoted in the laboratory and his wife lost her job as a pathologist, he said.
Word spread quickly on the family's application for the visa because the scientific community outside of Moscow where they reside is small. His son very shortly began having trouble at school.
Mr. Alber said his son was beaten by three boys, adding that a boycott of silence was waged against him. As the boycott wore off, Mr. Alber said the youngsters began taunting him and calling him, "Jew, Jew, Jew." They then struck him, he said.
"On June 7, he was beaten again by an older and very strong boy. He lost consciousness and fell down. We made a complaint to the police, but the police did nothing," Mr. Alber said.

 than in Tehran, the capital, where the current Shahanshah (King of Kings), a benevolent ruler in the opinion of the Silvers, has overseen the building of schools, hospitals and numerous other public facilities.

Asked to respond to a recent column by Jack Anderson citing the Shah as a highly pompous, egotistical emperor, Mrs. Silver commented, "Anyone in such an exalted position is open to this type of negative criticism. I would think any person striving for a presidency must be somewhat of an egomaniac." Citing the institution of compulsory education, free health care, new hospitals, public housing, general wage increases, more doctors and the practice of sending them into the villages to work, she added, "A great deal more is being done than was ever done before. In the end, you must judge people according to their achievements."

In contrast to our own country, Iran has no unemployment. There is a dark side to this picture, however. A major problem that the country now faces is the lack of trained personnel required for many jobs. A shipload of imported trucks have been known to rust right on the docks where they were unloaded. There are no workers available to operate them.

Tehran has a rapidly growing population, now estimated at 3.5 million of Iran's overall 35 million. The figure is unimpressive until viewed in retrospect: ten years ago, the city's population was only 350,000. This sudden surge in growth is due, in part, to the influx of village dwellers resettling in the city for the proximity to much-needed facilities which it affords. Dr. Silver cited a paradox of this rapidly growing metropolis: numerous ultra-modern high rises, and peddlers with donkeys across the street.

Iran has 80,000 Jews (.002% of the population) and 60,000 of them are in Tehran. All Iranian Jews are Orthodox; many are rug merchants. Dr. Silver pointed out that anti-Semitism in Iran was not of an overt nature, but that it was latent much like in the United States. He noted that one of the high advisors to the Shah is a Jew, as is the manager of one of the leading hotels and several members of parliament. El Al Airlines has a scheduled daily flight between Tehran and Tel Aviv.

Dr. Silver warned about a common misconception regarding Iran. Many people confuse the country with Iraq. "Iran is a Moslem, not an Arab, country. Iran supported Israel during the 1967 War by supplying them with oil." Iranians are insulted to be called Arabs, considering themselves descendants of the ancient Aryans from the northeast of Europe. The Aryans migrated to Tehran when Cyrus (circa 550 BC), the first great ruler of Persia, invited the Jews of Babylon to rebuild their temple in Tehran. He offered them as much of Rome's gold as could be spared for the enterprise. Resultantly, he continues to be held in love by the Jews some 2,500 years later. The Hebrew derivative of Cyrus, Kourosh, is borne throughout Tehran on the exterior facades of schools, hospitals and other institutions.

"Iran is a country in transition," Mrs. Silver brought out. In conversation with an older, native woman over the queen's interest in women's rights, the woman told Mrs. Silver that this was not really a new development. She herself had received a degree in business administration and had served on several bank boards in Tehran. A strict double standard is much more manifest among the poor. Most women wear a chador, a type of shawl, over their heads. Stricter observers of the practice clench a bit of this garment in their teeth at the same time, in order to partially cover their faces. The queen is trying to encourage women to discontinue the practice. Again, strange paradoxes become common sights: a man on a motorcycle accompanied by a woman with a chador; a woman in a short skirt and high heels modestly dons a chador on her head.

The Silvers payed several visits to local temples and were fascinated by the manner in which certain customs colored the country. Much pomp and circumstance surrounded departure from the temple in Tehran following the service. The rabbi, accompanied by two other high officials, bathed all attendees hands with rose water, offering fresh flowers, raisins and nuts. In Isfahan, capital of Persia in the 17th Century, the Silvers were most struck by the Persian atmosphere, rather than traditional Hebraic, which prevailed throughout the temple. Mrs. Silver attributes this primarily to Isfahan's geographical location, in west-central Iran, which isolates it from Western influences far more than Tehran. Most women in either of these temples, however, had their heads covered with a chador.

Dr. Silver noted that Iran and the US have similar problems with their youth drawing away from religion. "A bold move on the part of an Orthodox congregation was the formation of a youth choir to boost service attendance among children." He also mentioned that inter-faith marriages were likewise becoming a problem.

A particular highlight of their trip was a flight to the city of Persepolis in the southern part of the country — the capital of ancient Persia. Here, nearly 2500 years ago, Darius the Great, emperor of Persia, had a city built which was used only once a year for spring rites, when emissaries from conquered nations came to pay their tribute. Following Alexander the Great's sacking of Persepolis, it took 30,000 camels to return all the confiscated gold!

ZEEV RAVIV rehearses with students at the Brown University Summer Theatre for their current production of Desire Under the Elms which will continue through July 4 at the University's Faunce House Theatre on Waterman Street. No performances on Mondays and Tuesdays. Curtain time, 8 p.m.

Zeev Raviv Of Israel Directs Brown Summer Theatre Opener

By BARBARA WRONSKI

The Brown University Summer Theatre's opening production this season, Eugene O'Neill's Desire Under the Elms, is under the direction of Zeev Raviv, an Israeli who is currently associate professor of theatre arts at Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts. A guest director at the Brown Summer Theatre, Mr. Raviv describes the play as, "a pressure cooker: isolated, boiling, ready to explode."

The heavy tragedy is quite a turn from The Owl and the Pussycat, a very light comedy which Mr. Raviv directed for the summer theatre last season.

"Without problems there is no challenge," said Mr. Raviv of theatre direction in general. Of the particular production which opened Wednesday, June 23, at Faunce House on the Brown campus, he cited the actors' removal from the characters they were trying to portray as a primary problem.

Mr. Raviv, currently residing with his wife and one of two sons in Framingham, Massachusetts, has been involved in professional theatre for the past 25 to 30 years, and in the capacity of actor, director or stage manager has participated in some 60 or 70 productions. He received his early theatre education at Habimah, Israel's national theatre. He holds an MFA and a DFA from the Yale Drama School, and has both acted and directed in Israel. It was at Yale that Mr. Raviv first met James O. Barnhill, full time director of the Brown Summer Theatre.

Born in Poland, Mr. Raviv emigrated to Israel in 1934, serving in the army there during the war of liberation. He has been married 26 years and has two sons, one of whom is currently serving in the Israeli army. He is presently in the States to visit, but will return to Israel in July.

Mr. Raviv explained that he and his wife are torn over whether to remain in the States or return to Israel. Primarily involved in academic theatre, he has found it difficult to integrate himself back into Israeli professional life. Although professional theatre in Israel flourishes, there is only one academic theatre. Mr. Raviv feels his real strength is working with students of the theatre and finds there is much more freedom on the academic stage.

Mr. Raviv, who taught at Hebrew College in Boston for a while, has a scholarly interest in Yiddish theatre. He is currently writing a book, with one of his colleagues at the University of Connecticut, on this topic. The work is tentatively due for publication next summer.

He lived in Givatayn, a suburb of Tel Aviv, while teaching at Tel Aviv University before settling in the United States. His father and the rest of his family are still living in Israel.

Desire Under the Elms will continue through July 4, excluding Mondays and Tuesdays, with curtain time at 8 p.m. Reservations may be made by contacting the theatre at 863-2838 or in person at Faunce House on Waterman Street.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

What Are 'Closing Costs'?

You may think that you know what closing costs will be, if and when you buy a house in these peak home-selling months of '76. But do you really know what items are included in closing costs? Are you fully aware of all the charges you may find on your settlement statement? Do you know approximately how much money you will need — in addition to your down payment — to cover closing costs?

Before you prepare to sign a foolproof home purchase contract, here are key questions and the accurate answers, obtained from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development:

Q. What precisely are closing costs?

A. All the charges and fees incurred in transferring ownership of your new home to you. Among the charges: processing the loan papers required before your lender will forward to the home seller the funds being provided to help you finance your purchase; taking the steps necessary to assure that your lender will have a valid lien against your property as security for the repayment by you of your home loan; adjustments to be made between you and your seller for certain yearly payments, referred to as "prepaid items" for which you may be charged on a pro rata basis.

Q. What "prepaid items"?

A. Depending on where you live, these are typical charges you may find on your settlement statement:

- Title search. A title or abstract company or a lawyer will search through records of previous ownership and sales to establish the right of the seller to sell the property to you.

- Title insurance. A policy which protects the lender's interest in the property against any title defects not disclosed by the title search. Whether the buyer or seller pays for this varies with local custom. Only one premium payment is required, at the time the policy is issued. If you, the buyer, want protection for yourself, you must request an additional policy and pay the premium.

- Attorney's fees. Even if you do not hire your own, the lending institution may require you to pay a fee for its lawyer to handle the closing or advise concerning the title.

- Survey. The lender may require a survey to determine the precise location of the house and property.

- Preparation of documents. The deed, mortgage, other papers necessary to transact the sale must be prepared by a lawyer, the lender, or some other appropriate source.

- Closing fee. A charge may be made for handling the settlement transaction.

- Credit report. Your credit history will be requested by the lender.

- Termite inspection. Many lenders request that the property be checked for harmful pests before granting a loan.

- Initial service fee, or origination fee. This is the lender's fee for originating the loan and usually is a small per cent of the face value of the mortgage. In FHA and VA transactions involving existing structures, the origination fee can be no more than 1 per cent of the mortgage total. On transactions in which the lending institution makes inspection and partial disbursements during the construction of a structure, both FHA and VA permit an origination fee in excess of 1 per cent.

- Appraisal fee. The lender will request an appraisal of the property. In case of a HUD-insured or VA-guaranteed mortgage loan, the fee is established by government regulations.

- Mortgage discount "points." Discounts (points) are a one-time charged assessed at closing by the lending institution to increase the yield on the mortgage loan to a competitive level with the yield on other types of investments. East "point" is 1 per cent of the original mortgage amount. You, the buyer, are not permitted to pay points in FHA and VA transactions. No limit, however, is placed on the number of points which may be paid by the seller.

- Recording fee. The local authority's charge for recording documents pertaining to the sale.

NEW YORK: Peru and Venezuela are interested in buying the Kfir fighter plane, according to Aviation Week. The $4M Israeli-made aircraft is a development of the French Mirage used by both South American nations. The magazine said Israel Aircraft Industries is projecting $100M in exports for 1976 — double the figure for 1975 — principally in sales of the Arava twin turboprop light transport, the Westwind 1124 business jet and the Gabriel missile.

Incidentally, all Persian rugs are hand-woven; each tuft individually hand-tied. The art of rug making was originally practiced exclusively by women and children during the long and cold winter months. However, with the advent of compulsory education, extinction of the art is threatened. Mrs. Silver believes that eventually rug manufacturers will work on a set wage scale.

Dr. and Mrs. Silver spent time visiting the bazaar in Tehran, a shopping center composed of 40,000 individual stalls where nearly anything purchasable may be had. It is the largest shopping bazaar in the Middle East, forming a maze in which one may easily become lost.

The couple also paid a visit to Rey, another former capital of Iran, where the mosque could only be entered by Moslems. By sporting guises (Mrs. Silver wore a chador) they were able to gain entry. This city, with an original population of one million, now has a drastically reduced populus of 105,000.

Respect for the Shah is almost worshipful. The Silvers were among 100,000 guests who were invited to attend an arena gathering on the Shah's birthday. Of those in attendance, 3,000 sat in a special section and, upon cue, changed the colored cards they were holding in order to shape the national flag and a variety of scenes representing the Shah and his family.

But it is poets, not statesmen, who are truly worshipped throughout Iran. This is evident upon viewing the numerous statues which have been constructed in the memory of various poets. The Silvers visited the tomb of Sadai, a poet who lived circa 1300. The interior walls of the tomb are inscribed with the ancient poets verse.

Iranian food, according to the Silvers, consists primarily of rice in all forms (sweet, saffroned, etc.) and a wide variety of kebabs, often of lamb, served with yogurt. They described a dish called chicken or duck fezanjan, which is served in a blend of pomegranate juice and ground walnuts. They were surprised to note that Iranian bread was not stiff and dry, as it appears, but is much more like a chewy pancake.

Dr. and Mrs. Silver had the opportunity to have one meal in a lovely museum-restaurant constructed in what had formerly been an underground reservoir. Here they first tasted Persian melons which they described as similar to honeydew melons, only much more flavorful. Dr. Silver mentioned that pistachio nuts are served everywhere before meals as an appetizer, much like our own custom of serving peanuts.

The doctor also noted that Persian caviar is noted to be among the finest in the world — but that it is rapidly losing this status. Apparently Russian water traffic in the Caspian Sea is polluting much of the waterway, resultantly killing the delicate roe.

Accompanied by Iran's minister of social welfare, an orthopedic surgeon, the Silvers were flown to the Caspian Sea in an aircraft reserved for government officials and dignitaries. Mrs. Silver noted the beauty of this area, pointing out that a great number of modern hotels were being erected in anticipation of developing the area into a popular resort. She felt that, particularly for Americans, the proximity of Russia's borders just a few miles across the sea was a breathtaking reality.

Polo is a sport which was originated in Iran. According to Mrs. Silver, the country is trying to maintain its traditional sports and cultural practices, but is likewise updating itself in the field by becoming involved in tennis and other popular sports.

Much of the beauty and richness of the country was best expressed through a series of slides the Silvers took during their visit: • A brass relief map of the country. Dr. Silver highlighted, "The country does tremendous work with metal."
• The couple stayed at the Tehran Hilton Hotel, overlooking the treeless, arid mountains.

• The stairway leading up to a famous Iranian mosque, lined on either side with stone carvings of the subjugated peoples paying tribute to Darius.

• The country has no traffic laws and, consequently, serious traffic problems.

• The Peacock throne at the palace of the previous king is still used for coronations. The present king was coronated there.

• All architects are native Iranians. The Silvers were guest of honor at the Majlis (parliament), reminiscent of many other congressional meeting places — with one major difference: a 30' x 30' 'theatre box', with walls of inlaid bone and ivory, used exclusively for visits by the king and queen.

In addition to Dr. Silver's activities as a visiting professor, he delivered a speech before the Iranian Orthopedic Society. The couple will return to Iran next April, where the doctor will again devote a month as a visiting professor at the Shafa Rehabilitation Hospital.
