Council Of Congregation Presidents Approaches Problems Pragmatically

By BARBARA WRONSKI

"We're a low-key group" says Bernard C. Gladstone of the Rhode Island Council of Jewish Congregational Presidents. The council was formed in July of 1975 with the purpose of providing for a meeting of the minds among leaders of the state's 19 diverse Jewish congregations over common problems and issues of common interest. A Providence attorney and legal counsel for the Rhode Island State Lottery, Mr. Gladstone is president of Congregation Beth Sholom. In his capacity as chairman of the still youthful organization, he was interviewed by the Herald regarding its activities.

The council, which meets approximately every other month but on no rigid schedule, is composed, as its name implies, of all of the presidents of all of the synagogues and temples in the state—whether they be Reform, Conservative or Orthodox. "Everyone realizes that there are common problems. (The council) is an attempt to meet these on a one-to-one basis, by the people who have to deal with them on a daily basis in terms of their own synagogue activity. Each is aware of exactly what is needed and where the gaps are. Most of the problems have no black or white solution; it is a question of creating an approach," Mr. Gladstone said.

There has been no instance of philosophical cacophony within the group. The organization is not trying to change services or tread on individual beliefs. It is a forum which, according to Mr. Gladstone, "serves a very fine purpose, because it makes us realize that there is virtually no difference among us in what we ultimately want to achieve. What that is, basically, is a viable synagogue activity life in the state of Rhode Island, where the temple or synagogue acts as the centrality of Jewish thought. From this can emanate all of the things that are necessary for a viable Jewish community."

BERNARD C. GLADSTONE

Among issues the council has touched upon has been "making the people in the community aware of their responsibility to belong to the synagogue of their choice." In this regard, they have run ads in the Herald and will be running similar ads in the Jewish Community Center's Community Voice. The group is striving to create an environment where there is an interchange of information between temples. In one instance, Mr. Gladsone pointed out, "if a person belongs to a temple and wants to join another temple, we have an interchange of information to see that they have met their obligation to the previous temple before they are accepted for membership in the temple to which they desire to change.

"At the same time, we discuss the finances of the individual temples, to get an exchange of ideas as to the mood of the people in the state of Rhode Island in terms of meeting their financial obligations, as well as methods of financing for individual temples. We know that these are common problems and we don't feel that we are isolated, like it is unique to any one synagogue."

Hebrew Schools

Another issue to which the group is addressing itself is the low attendance at Hebrew schools. "The fact that there are so many less Jewish people who have their children attend Hebrew schools," Mr Gladstone explained. The council is trying to create regionalization approaches, with an interchange of teachers, curriculums and programs, in an effort to strengthen the individual temples' schools. Citing "general apathy" as the main obstacle in this regard, Mr. Gladstone told us, "We Jewish people are crisis people. We respond to crises and now — when there is no particular crisis— there is an apathy. We are trying to get the message across that the way in which parents are going to project the need for their children to become involved is by exposing them to the education. The sheer magnificence of our religion — the reasonableness and the sensibleness of it— will create an attractiveness, but the children must be exposed."

Jewish Federation

"Just recently we have been working hand in glove with the Jewish Federation. The temples have just completed being part of the most successful Israel Bond drive in the history of Rhode Island. Utilization of the synagogues allowed for the greatest exposure to the common denominator of people. More people were involved and it was tremendously successful," Mr. Gladstone said. He also cited current cooperation between the council and the federation in regard to the individual temples encouraging their congregants to stay involved in various Jewish organizations. Through such vehicles as temple bulletins and the pulpit, during the High Holy Days, the group is trying to remind the people that all of these organizations — the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Bureau of Jewish Education, the Federation and others— affect them. "When they are contributing either activity-wise or financial-wise, they are doing it for themselves. They are not only doing it for their brothers in Israel."

Leader Claims College Is Not 'Economically Unjustified'

WASHINGTON: The biennial convention of B'nai B'rith was told to "reject the growing notion that going to college has become economically unjustified," by a prominent economist who is also a Jewish communal leader.

According to the economist, Dr. William Haber of the University of Michigan, former head of B'nai B'rith's Hillel Foundation, the present surplus of today's professionally trained youth who cannot find jobs raised "serious questions" as to whether college students were being educated "for occupations that are declining or will soon disappear" in the technological revolution.

But the same revolution—"a $30-billion-a-year investment in discovery of the new that is making yesterday obsolete tomorrow"—is creating an American economy in which "knowledge and ideas are as important as natural resources and capital," Dr. Haber said.

His address, pointing up that 90 percent of Jewish youths of college age are now on campus, was one of several at sessions devoted to youth problems at the six-day convention.

Some 1,500 delegates—the largest convention in B'nai B'rith's history—participated in the convention at the Washington Hilton Hotel. The organization which has a membership of 500,000, re-elected David M. Blumberg to a final two-year term as president.

The delegates called for legislative action against the Arab boycott, a United Nations convention against terrorism, support for the Congressional commission proposed by Representative Millicent Fenwick, a Jersey Republican, to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki Agreement and Congressional action to require "licensing and registration of privately owned firearms."

Concerned That Israel Is Eliminated On Maps

TORONTO: The Canada-Israel Committee is concerned that Israel has been eliminated in maps of the Middle East printed in the magazines Construction Today, Middle East, and the July/August issue of EnRoute Magazine published by Southam Murray for Air Canada.

The Air Canada magazine showed Israel as "Palestine" in a travel story about Jordan. An inset map omitted any name for the area, which appeared as a southern extension of Syria.

Air Canada told the Canada-Israel Committee that it would not withdraw this issue of the magazine from circulation, but it would print an apology and a correction in the next issue.

JDL Member Under Indictment Will Turn State's Evidence

By Ben Gallob

NEW YORK (JTA): Thomas MacIntosh, 36, of Woodbury, N.J., one of four Jewish Defense League members arrested on an 11-count federal indictment stemming from alleged harassment of foreign officials, has decided to turn state's evidence and will be a witness for the prosecution, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learned Sept. 2 from reliable sources. MacIntosh, described by the JDL as a convert, was arrested by the FBI June 8, with Steven Ehrlich, 21, of San Francisco, on Staten Island. Both were en route from New Jersey. The FBI said the car in which MacIntosh and Ehrlich were riding contained explosive materials. The JTA also was informed that MacIntosh has been held in protective custody since his arrest. JDL officials declined to comment on the report about him.

Ehrlich came here from San Francisco and was arraigned last week. He was freed August 31 on $25,000 cash bond, the same arrangement on which Russel Kelner, 35, of Brooklyn, former operations officer of the JDL, and Jeffrey Weingarten, 21, of Brooklyn, were released after a hearing on August 19, the day the federal indictment was handed up. The indictment charged the JDL members with participating in a conspiracy which allegedly included shooting into the Soviet Mission to the United Nations and into the Soviet residential complex in Riverdale, N.Y. and with an alleged pipe-bombing attempt at the Iraqi Mission to the UN and alleged pipe-bombing of a Gulf Oil service station. The arraignment hearings were held before Judge Henry Werker, of the Southern District federal court in Manhattan, who came under criticism by both the JDL and the National Jewish Commission on Law and Public Affairs (COLPA) for ordering a JDL spectator, Sheldon Fine, at the hearing to remove his yarmulke or leave the courtroom. Fine left. Judge Werker, in issuing his order to Fine, declared that his court was not a temple. When Ralph Naden, Kelner's attorney, objected, declaring that Fine's "hat" was a religious article worn by observant Jews, Judge Werker replied he did not care what the head covering was and that "no one wears a hat in my courtroom."

COLPA sent a letter on August 25 to Judge Werker, asking for "clarification" of his order to Fine. COLPA September 1 released a reply from the judge in which the jurist declared that when he issued his order to Fine "I was unaware of the nature or significance of the constant wearing of the yarmulke by certain observant Jews." He added that "I have since been advised with regard to this and will bear this in mind in future proceedings." Sidney Kwesterl, COLPA president, indicated that on the basis of Judge Werker's response, COLPA considered the matter closed and planned no further action. But Bonnie Pechter, JDL national coordinator, recalled that the JDL had publicly demanded that Judge Werker be removed and that until he was removed, he should be barred from sitting on any cases involving Jews. Informed of Judge Werker's letter, Ms. Pechter said the JDL was not satisfied and did not consider the matter closed. She said the JDL would, "at an appropriate time," take legal action against Judge Werker.

Controversy Over Report Seeking Population Curb

JERUSALEM: There is a sharp controversy here over the publication of a confidential report suggesting ways to curb the number and influence of Israeli Arabs in the Galilee. The report, written by Israel Koenig, the Ministry of Interior's chief official in the Galilee region, claims that by 1978 Israeli Arabs in the region will outnumber Jews, raising the question as to whether Israeli rule in the area might be threatened.

The report additionally recommends that a hard line be taken against the growth of the Arab population through steps that would include a rapid increase of Jewish settlements in areas of heavy Arab concentrations, a decrease in state subsidies to Israeli Arabs with large families and a program encouraging Arab youth to go abroad to study and then remain there.

The report was said to have been written late last year after an Israeli Arab, Toufik Zayad, a Communist, won election as Mayor of Nazareth. It is claimed to have been circulated about six months ago, at a time when Arabs were rioting in the Galilee district. At that time, six Israeli Arabs were killed and many injured in the first general protest among the 450,000 Israeli Arabs since the State of Israel was founded in 1948.

Danger Stressed

The document was published yesterday in Al Hamishmar, the newspaper of the left-wing Mapam Party, to call attention to what the paper termed "the grave and dangerous nature of the report's findings." If the authorities had accepted some of these proposals, the result would have been a serious deterioration in the relations between Israel's Arabs and the Jewish population," Al Hamishmar said.

The newspaper called for the removal of Mr. Koenig from his post because "an individual possessing an outlook as potentially damaging as Koenig's should not be responsible for so sensitive an area as the Galilee." The publication of the report again brought into focus one of Israel's touchiest social questions — the role of Israeli Arabs, who have often been labeled "second-class citizens." Its disclosure prompted a spate of editorials in papers representing the full political spectrum.

Yediot Ahronot, an independent publication, said that Mr. Koenig's report pinpointed "a demographic threat in the Galilee that should not be lightly dismissed" but that his proposals "do not accord with Israel's democratic regime and its world image."

At the end of 1974, Israeli Arabs constituted about 47 percent of the 520,000 residents in the northern Galilee district. According to the Koenig report, the figure will rise to 51 percent in two years.

Hatzofeh, the organ of the National Religious Party, praised the report, saying that Mr. Koenig had taken "pains to warn us in good times of the dangers lurking in the northern part of the country where, if something is not done, the Arabs may well constitute a majority within two years."

War Breaks Out In Newsprint

TEL AVIV: War broke out in Israel Sept. 1 and the weapon was newsprint. After weeks of delay due to technical and personnel difficulties, the long awaited newspaper Hayom Haze (This Day) edited by former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, made its appearance to challenge the hegemony of Israel's two mass circulation afternoon dailies Maariv and Yediot Achronot.

The first edition contained 24 pages, only four of which carried news and two of the latter were devoted to sports. There was no article by Dayan who has become a controversial figure since the Yom Kippur War and a thorn in the side of the Labor Party establishment.

Hayom Haze is backed by two advertising agencies and the first edition was adorned by many more advertisements than is usual for a new, untested paper.

Maariv and Yediot, each of which claims over 200,000 daily circulation and more than a quarter of a million weekends, were ready with their own big guns. Obviously prepared well in advance for the press war, Maariv came out with regional special editions that devote several pages to local items from various parts of Israel. Yediot, on its part, brought forth a magazine-type second edition.

SADIE WILNER

Funeral services were held on Friday, September 10, for Sadie (Rosenfield) Wilner, 87, at the Sugarman Memorial Chapel. A former resident of Providence, she had moved to Miami Beach, Florida, where she died August 8 in South Shore Hospital. She was the widow of Morris Wilner. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

She was born in Russia on September 26, 1888, and was a resident of Providence for 75 years before she moved to Miami.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Benjamin Kornfeld of Hallandale, Florida, and Mrs. Harry Sherman of Framingham, Massachusetts, two grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

WILLIAM FRIEDMAN

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday, September 14, at Fisher Memorial Chapel for William H. Friedman of 30 Hood Avenue, East Providence, who died September 12 at The Miriam Hospital after a week's illness. He was the husband of Florence (Mack) Friedman. Burial was in Hebrew Cemetery, Fall River, Massachusetts.

Mr. Friedman was a native of Boston, a son of the late Jacob and Minnie Friedman.

Besides his wife, he leaves three sisters, Ida Bolotow and Jessie Torgan, both of Providence, and Charlotte Fox of Riverside; and a brother, Melvin Friedman of Brookline, Massachusetts.

ALEXANDER GREENFIELD

September 10 funeral services were held at the Fisher Memorial Chapel for Alexander Greenfield, 57, of 345 Post Road, Warwick, who died September 9 at Rhode Island Hospital. He was the husband of Anne (Smith) Greenfield. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Greenfield was born in New York City on February 15, 1919, a son of Cecelia (Ungar) Greenfield of Reseda, California, and the late Joseph Greenfield. He lived for five years in Warwick and for more than 30 years in the Providence area.

He was an employee of Briggs Ltd. in Providence.

Surviving besides his wife are two daughters, Mrs. Richard Bonomi of Huntsville, Alabama, and Lois Greenfield of Berlin, Massachusetts; one brother, Milton Greenfield of Brooklyn, New York; and one sister, Mrs. Jerome Lerman of Bayside, Long Island, New York.

HARRY GOLDSHINE

Funeral services for Harry Goldshine of Sarasota, Florida, who died Sunday, September 12, in New York City where he was visiting, were conducted Monday, September 13, at the Riverside Memorial Chapel in New York. He was cremated and the ashes were to be scattered in the Gulf of Mexico.

The husband of Sylvia (Cohen) Goldshine, he was born in Providence and lived there 72 years, until he retired in 1972 and moved to Sarasota.

A graduate of Boston University Law School, he had practiced as a lawyer until 1926, and had resumed his practice in 1966. He had operated the wallpaper and electrical fixture department in the Outlet Company for about 20 years.

Mr. Goldshine was a member of the Roosevelt Lodge of Masons; Temple Beth-El, The Miriam Hospital and the Ledgemont Country Club.

Besides his wife, survivors are two daughters, Jane Kolber and Caryl Sheinblatt, both of New York City, and two grandchildren.

Contributions in Mr. Goldshine's memory may be made to the Rhode Island Heart Association.

Jewish Show At Mystic Seaport

"How the calendar reflects the life of the people who formulated it" is the theme of the "Jewish Lunar Calendar," a special planetarium show at Mystic Seaport being given from September 23 through October 4, the season of the Jewish High Holy Days.

The program will focus on the use of readily observable heavenly phenomena and on the emergence of an ancient people's society and religion, as each affects the development of a calendar system.

The skies of the planetarium will show the moon and its phases and the position of stars as all would be seen in ancient times at Latitude 32 degrees North in the biblical lands. The elementary lunar calendar is explained as it results from these simple observations by the nomadic Hebrews. In detailing the effect on this calendar system when the Israelites turned to an agricultural life, a life dependent on the solar year, the narration includes the Jewish festivals of Succoth, Pesach and Shavouth, which related to seasonal events. Consideration of the impact of the Hebrew people's emerging spiritual life on the already complex calendar system completes the presentation.

Music selected by Don Treworgy, supervisor of the planetarium and co-author of the narrative, is from the traditional Jewish liturgy and serves as background. The show includes illustrations of life in the biblical era and of religious objects, including the shofar (ram's horn) still blown in synagogues to welcome the New Year on Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. Mr. Treworgy is co-author of the script, assisted by Rabbis Leonard Goldstein and Irving Spielman, both formerly of Congregation Beth El, New London, Connecticut.

The show is offered free of charge for museum visitors Monday through Friday at 2 and 4, Saturday and Sunday at 12 noon, 1,2,3,4 and 5 p.m. Special showings, available between September 15 and October 30, can be arranged for interested groups by reservation. Reservations and further information may be obtained by contacting the planetarium at Mystic Seaport, Mystic, Connecticut 06355. Telephone (203)536-2631, ext. 255.

Grand Opening For Firestone

The new Firestone store at 510 Taunton Avenue in East Providence will continue its grand opening celebration through Saturday, September 18, according to store manager and part-owner Alan Kushner.

Firestone moved to the new site, formerly Big Ralph's Wholesale Tire, from 220 Elmwood Avenue in Providence on September 1.

The complete line of Firestone tires for cars, light trucks and recreational vehicles is available at the store. Car services offered include tune-ups, suspension service, brake overhauls, transmission fluid and filter changes, exhaust system service and complete lubrication. On display inside are major appliances, car care supplies and custom wheels.

Mr. Kushner, 30, joined Firestone in Providence in 1971. In 1973, he became manager of the company's Brockton, Massachusetts, store and earlier this year managed a store in Providence.

He is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island and a Sargeant First Class in the Rhode Island National Guard. He and his wife, Cheryl, have two children.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

People Forget

TRUE TALE: A resident of Jersey City, N.J., recently borrowed — at 12.65 per cent interest — $1,500 from his local bank to finance some home improvements. He had forgotten that eight years ago he had elected to allow the dividends on his $30,000 term insurance policy to accumulate at interest — and his dividend account now contained $1,468.

RESULT: he was voluntarily forfeiting more than $100 a year in unnecessary bank interest charges. Reminded a month later during a routine visit from his insurance agent, he drew out the dividends, placed the money in the bank and persuaded his banker to reissue the debt as a low-interest passbook loan.

TRUE TALE: A Denver resident, widowed for 10 years, remarried at the age of 67, died five years later and left his own widow nearly destitute. His life insurance had been made out to his wife. But he forgot that it had been made out to "my wife, Mary." His second wife's name was Hilda.

RESULT: The $25,000 in proceeds passed to the estate of his first wife, who, it developed, after making specific requests to her husband and others, had left the remainder of her estate to a favorite niece. The favorite niece gets the $25,000.

People forget.

"And the thing that people most often forget," says Robert Waldron of the American Council of Life Insurance, "is that life insurance is a legal contract carrying all the force of law.

"The next thing they forget is that the passage of time can all too easily convert yesterday's wisdom into today's folly."

For many, many years, conventional wisdom has held that women, the major beneficiaries of life insurance, are incapable of managing their own financial affairs in widowhood. As a result, husbands often have elected to have the proceeds of their life insurance doled out to their widows in monthly instalments.

Even during periods when the value of the dollar remains fairly stable, you, a policyholder and, you, the intended beneficiary, should examine this procedure with utmost care. But in eras of inflation, the consequences of deciding on the sufficiency of a fixed income can be doubly destructive.

A widow — with, say, $50,000 of insurance — could find herself strapped to an insurance income of $400 a month, with no way to reach the principal sum. Legally the money is hers. And just as legally the insurance company is bound by a contract which prevents her from drawing out any part of the principal in an emergency.

In response to anguished complaints of affected widows, many life insurers a while ago undertook lengthy and costly campaigns among policyholders who had elected the option, urging them to reconsider. Many policyholders did. Many who should have, didn't.

There are an estimated 150,000,000 policyholders in the U.S. If even one per cent of them have forgotten they have tied the hands of their beneficiaries this way, it means there are 1,500,000 time bombs ticking away.

"It's really frightening," Waldron emphasizes. "The income option can rescue people from paying unnecessary estate taxes. And if there are other assets a beneficiary can get at in an emergency, it's one way of being sure they can't outlive their incomes. But if it's used to insulate the widow from decisions about money, it's misused and can really hurt her."

If you doubt your beneficiary's ability to make sound decisions, leave a letter of instructions and suggestions. Or set up a life insurance trust. And certainly, insist that your wife learn the basics about handling money (while you're alive).

More shocking than the above are the instances of policyholders forgetting to tell their beneficiaries — or anybody else — that they have life insurance at all. Many forgotten term policies, for instance, would simply be carried in the records as having lapsed when, in fact, they had been in force and payable at the time of their owners' death — if a claim had been made.

"The companies," states Waldron, "stand ready to honor a valid claim years, even decades after it was due. But if that claim isn't made, there's frequently no way of telling the difference between a lapsed policy and a lapsed memory."

Israelis Say Lebanese Beat Off Palestinians

TEL AVIV: According to recent frontier reports, armed Lebanese Christian villagers beat off renewed attacks by Palestinian guerrillas close to the Israeli border. Ain Ebel, a southern Lebanese village, was said to be the target of the attack. The same village was hit earlier in the week, leaving four guerrillas and three Lebanese dead.

According to reports from the villagers, the Palestinians were attempting to disrupt growing cooperation between Israelis and the southern Lebanese. They further reported that the harassment they were receiving was due to their acceptance of medical aid at an Israeli frontier clinic, jobs in Israeli forestation projects, Israeli food and the opportunity to visit relatives across the border.

Shimon Peres, Israel defense minister, expressed confidence that the villagers were sufficiently equipped to take care of themselves.

Pleas Reported

BEIRUT, Lebanon: Beirut newspapers gave prominence to reports that the residents of Ain Ebel had received assurances of aid from the Israelis in the event of reprisals by Palestinians.

Lebanese leftist sources said the commander of the guerrilla forces in southern Lebanon, Maj. Abu Mussa, had ordered his men to use restraint so that there would be no pretext for Israeli intervention in the border area.

Meanwhile, attention was focused here on a statement by the Damascus radio that the Syrian role in Lebanon, where Syria has 20,000 troops, would continue until the Lebanese crisis was over. The broadcast was reporting on the discussions on future Syrian-Lebanese relations held yesterday in Damascus between the Lebanese President-elect, Elias Sarkis, and the Syrian President, Hafez al-Assad.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

By BERYL SEGAL

We went to Israel to see with our own eyes the delegates from sixteen countries and to hear with our own ears the words spoken at the World Conference in Israel for Yiddish and Jewish Culture, a matter of deep concern with us.

Four hundred men and women delegates gathered in Jerusalem for a four day conference, the second since 1908 in the city of Chernovitz, to hear and to tell of the fortunes of Yiddish in the world.

And these fortunes are not too happy. In East Europe we have been decimated, uprooted and driven to the four corners of the earth. We lost our tongue, we are in danger of losing our youth, and we look for continuity and there is none.

What can we tell our children? That we had a language, a literature, a theater, a way of life that expressed itself in Yiddish?

"What have you now?" they will ask.

And so we came to Jerusalem to take advice with one another. In the words of the prophet: Come let us take council together.

Why Jerusalem you will ask.

And here we find the right answer in the very first sentence of the Declaration of Principles:

"From Jerusalem, the eternal Jewish city, comes the call to all Jews of the world to strengthen and to nourish the Jewish language and culture."

This is an affirmation that from Jerusalem will come, and only from Jerusalem will have to come needed help. To Jerusalem the eyes of the Jew are turned when he is in distress.

And indeed only in Jerusalem could the opening of the conference be so festive, so impressive, so promising.

In the beautiful City Theater, a theater built for such occasions, before an audience that filled the hall and overflowed to the outside, the World Conference on Yiddish and Jewish Culture opened. In the presence of the mayor of the city, the ministers of the interior, of education, of labour and representatives of Israeli writer and cultural and community institutions, the people sat quietly and listened to the addresses of the various delegates and drank in every word. Where did these thousands of people come from we asked ourselves. Is there such an interest in Yiddish in Israel today?

There is apparently a great interest in reviving the language and all it stands for in many places in Israel as well as in other countries. For one thing, the High School curriculum in Israel includes Yiddish among the subjects. At the colleges in Israel students study Yiddish as the language that sustained the Jew for nearly a thousand years. They do not reject Yiddish. There was this rejection at the beginning of statehood. But it was only because of fear that Hebrew would not become the language of the people. Hebrew is spoken everywhere in Israel today. It is one of the great miracles of our times that a nation has converted, in less than half a century, a language of the book to a tongue chattered by children on the streets as well as in schools and at home, a language considered to be a "sacred" language only. Hebrew is the language of the children and grown ups.

No. Hebrew has nothing to fear from any other languages spoken by Jews in various lands. Hebrew can afford now to investigate the legacy of Yiddish and Ladino and any other tongue that contributed to the heritage of the Jews.

In the United States and in Canada too, Yiddish is undergoing a revival. In more than forty colleges and universities, it was reported, students learn Yiddish, receive higher degrees in the study of Yiddish.

The time and the place were most propitious. The delegates felt it. The representatives of the Israel government gave the conference a special meaning. The bitterness of the language strife of yesteryear was all but forgotten. Yiddish does not claim to be the "mother tongue" as Yiddishists of old asserted, but neither is it the language of servant girls and thieves as the Hebraists declared once upon a time.

The World Conference for Yiddish and Jewish Culture has, therefore, rightly proclaimed the role of Yiddish as a deterrent against assimilation and demanded its right to exist side by side with Hebrew.

The conference could not make any decisions; it could only issue declarations. The implementation of these declarations are in our hands.

What can we do, everyone in our own localities?

We can demand that courses in Yiddish be offered, as it is offered at Temple Emanu-El and at the Hillel House, to adults.

We can persuade community leaders that Yiddish is an instrument of continuity of Jewish life in the Diaspora and must be nurtured with every means at our disposal.

We can help spread the Jewish book in whatever language it is published and encourage translations from Hebrew to Yiddish and from Yiddish to Hebrew. Both of these languages are bulwarks for Yiddishkeit without which all our teachings at school are of no avail.

Encouraged by the outstretched arms of the government of Israel, the delegates felt that something would come of that conference.

Message From Ford For Rosh Hashanah

WASHINGTON: President Ford said in a Rosh Hashanah message to American Jews that in the celebration of our nation's Bicentennial "it is only fitting that we express our pride in the indelible stamp of Jewish wisdom and experience on our way of life" which was "strong and vital from the moment the American continent became a promised land of hope and opportunity." In extending greetings on behalf of Mrs. Ford and himself, the President observed that "Our early settlers closely identified with the teachings of the Prophets and dedicated themselves in this spirit to building a land that would make the vision of the Prophets a realtiy." He noted that "This was the spirit that sparked our independence and sustained us through many difficult struggles on the way to becoming a nation. It is also the spirit that has sustained the Jewish people and brought about the creation of the modern State of Israel. It is the same spirit that marks the special friendship of the American and Israeli peoples and guides us in our commitment to preserve the independence and security of both our lands." The President said that "American Jews can take satisfaction in their unsurpassed record of humanitarian concern, civic responsibility and devotion to justice. As individuals and through their organizations, they have worked tirelessly and unselfishly to live up to the faith of their fathers and the aspirations of the Founding Fathers of our country."

International Institute Plans Citizenship Day Reception

The International Institute of Rhode Island, a United Way agency specializing in social services for the foreign born, will hold a Citizenship Day Reception, Sunday, September 19, from 3 until 5 p.m. at the Cranston Public Library, 1825 Broad Street, in Edgewood.

James G. Giles, chairman of the event, announced that besides commemorating the significance of citizenship and the meaning of our Constitution, newly naturalized citizens will be welcomed. The highlight of the ceremonies will be the presentation of the Institute's "Outstanding Citizen Award" to Bela Enyedi, an immigrant from Budapest, Hungary. This distinction is given to an American citizen of foreign birth who has set a personal example in adjusting to and making a successful new life here, and therefore contributing to the community and the state.

Mr. Enyedi was chief of the Internal Revenue Service in Budapest and was imprisoned for his anti-communist endeavors and sentenced to death. Liberated by the 1956 Revolution's freedom fighters, he later had to flee his country when the revolution was crush by Russian forces.

He asked for political asylum and came to the United States. Already at an advanced age and speaking no English, and in spite of holding three university degrees, he began his new life here as a janitor. However, with his background in accounting, he later became a certified public accountant in Providence, establishing his own business. Now semi-retired, he is well-known within the Hungarian community of Rhode Island.

A social hour will follow the program. Mrs. Hrach Kazarian is in charge of refreshments. The public is welcome.

Plan Reinterment

LONDON: Plans for the reinterment of the remains of one of Anglo-Jewry's most famous figures, Sir Moses Montefiore, and those of his wife Judith have come to a temporary standstill because of the "stupendous cost," due to inflation, of the removal of the sarcophagus from Ramsgate in Kent.

No final decision about the reinterment had been made by the Board of Elders of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation, of which Sir Moses was a very prominent member.

APPROVES SETTLEMENTS

JERUSALEM: The establishment of four new settlements has been approved by the Ministerial Settlement Committee. Two of the settlements are in Israel proper and two in the administered areas. However, the committee has made no decision on where to settle the Gush Emunim squatters who the cabinet said must be removed from Kadum in Samaria.

May Allow Lebanese To Study In Their Universities

TEL AVIV: Foreign Minister Yigal Allon has revealed that Israel is considering allowing students from southern Lebanon to study in Israeli universities. Addressing a Labor Party meeting in Holon, Allon said an arrangement for this will be worked out if there are enough students who are willing to take a crash course in Hebrew and pay tuition. Lebanese universities have been closed for some time because of the war there.

METAL SCULPTURE EXHIBIT: An exhibit of metal sculpture by Ellie Frank, professional artist, will be on display at the Jewish Community Center from September 19 through October 10. The public is invited to attend a Meet-the-Artist reception on Sunday, September 19, from 12 noon until 5 p.m.

Two Jewish Members In Carter's Inner Circle

WASHINGTON: There is some talk going around about the tightly-knit group of followers President-elect Jimmy Carter will bring to Washington with him, should he be elected to the office in November. These old and close associates are not intimidated by the prospect of running the United States.

Carter's chief advisers, upon whose performance he is often judged, are easy-going Georgians. These non-idealogical strategists, now exclusively devoted to getting Carter elected, were responsible for what many regarded as a miracle in getting this country boy nominated.

Two members of the Carter inner circle, Lipshutz and Rafshoon, are Jewish. Lipshutz, like Kirbo, is a wealthy Atlanta lawyer in his 50s who sees a great deal of Carter although as campaign treasurer his chief concern has been raising and allocating funds.

Lipshutz is actually involved in all aspects of the campaign including selling Carter to business and to Jewish groups throughout the country. Jewish groups sometimes use him as a conduit to Carter and he in turn assures them of Carter's abiding concern for Israel's survival.

Of business Lipshutz says: "The public perception of business integrity is even lower than the public's perception of government integrity and that's pretty low. For their own self-interest many business leaders are supporting Carter because they believe he'll restore public confidence. So do I."

Rafshoon, 42, an Atlanta advertising executive, is an adopted Southerner but he has the same drawl and the same easy-going style as the rest of the inner circle. He has directed Carter's media campaigns since Carter ran for governor in 1966 and Carter trusts him to the extent of not even looking at Rafshoon's television commercials of him until they are aired.

Rafshoon is now working on a series of television ads for the election campaign which will start appearing next month. In some Carter is to be portrayed as a down-to-earth farmer-statesman in Levis and workshirt talking sense to the American people. In others he will have an earnest idealistic air speaking from his book-lined study about his dream for America.

Rafshoon and Carter are good friends. Even so Rafshoon has been quoted as saying: "You don't get that close to Jimmy because he retreats. His wife, Rosalyn, is his best friend."

'Preparing For Retirement' Offered By URI Extension

"Preparing for Retirement" is being offered by the University of Rhode Island Extension Division, free for everyone 60 years of age or over, excepting registration fee. The ten-session evening course begins Tuesday, September 21, at 7 p.m. Registration is now in progress at the University of Rhode Island Extension Division, Gaspee and Promenade Streets, and at the Providence Adult Education Department, 396 Smith Street.

The course has been planned to help those approaching and in retirement better understand the economic, social and psychological problems inherent in the aging process and in retirement.

The course, continually conducted since 1963, will focus on issues of direct concern to seniors including Social Security legislation, housing, the National Health Security program, job opportunities in part-time and full-time work and investments.

In addition to retired persons and prospective retirees, the course has attracted social workers, clergymen, doctors, personnel directors and other professionals who are frequently called upon for counseling in retirement problems.

MILLION $ BREEZE

JERUSALEM: One company, Pri Hagalil, has invested one million dollars in a refrigeration system in Kibbutz Marom Hagaolan, on the Golan Heights. It may be taken as a sign that the government does not intend to withdraw from the area. The tempo of building in the new city of Yamit, at the northern end of the Sinai, has been speeded up, a further sign that peace with the Arab states is still very distant.

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand is a fine example of how Declarers who really think things through can gain from it. Only one Declarer made the hand because he took the pains to see what his problem was and then did everything he could to give himself the best chance to make his contract. All the others played the hand mechanically and went down. Had I not said anything about it later each one of the Declarers thought he had done nothing wrong and that the making of the hand had merely depended on a successful finesse. When it lost they shrugged and thought nothing of it especially when they saw they had loads of company.

West was Dealer, East and West vulnerable with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
1♣	Dbl	2♣	4♠

I'm sure the bidding didn't always go exactly that way but every West opned the bidding and most Norths, with their two Majors and an opening bid Doubled. East, with but four points, could not bid at all if North had done anything else but Doubled but a simple raise after a Double shows very little more than Trump help. After that South would either jump directly to game or is he only went as high as three, North went on to game anyhow.

Now the problem was to make the hand. This is what happened to all but one; they ruffed the second Club lead, drew Trumps, took the Diamond finesse which lost and then had to go down when they lost two Heart tricks because the Ace was in the wrong place. Actually they hdn't deviated from the normal and most Declarers would have arrived at the same fate. Furthermore, they would have been right had there been no bidding. For had West not opened the bidding, East would have been more likely to have held some high cards when the first two tricks showed West's Club honors.

But West did open and East had made a bid showing something. South could afford to lose the Diamond trick but he could not stand losing that and two Hearts, too. What could he do? For his opening bid, West had to have at least one of the two key cards, the Diamond King or the Heart Ace but not necessarily both. Now remember, you can't afford to lose three more tricks so the best play after drawing Trumps is to lead a Diamond toward Dummy's Queen. If you are thinking one must be out of his mind to ignore a finesse and actually give it away see what happens. As West has the King and the finesse would have lost anyhow, it makes no difference what he does. If West ducks, you lose no Diamond tricks and can afford to lose two Heart tricks. If he takes his King, as he likely will, you can now discard those two Hearts to hold the loss in that suit to one. If it were East who held that Diamond King so that the finesse would have worked, don't feel too bad for that would mean that the Heart Ace would now have to be in front of Dummy's two honors so that leading toward them twice would result in the loss of but one trick there.

True, had those two key cards been reversed, an overtrick could have been made but this way guarantees the contract and as those cards were, that way would have paid off. Strangely, again as the cards were, the hand could always have been defeated had West led a Heart before he played the second Club. That would have set up two tricks in that suit while he still had control of the Diamonds but no West did that. One would have to feel very sorry for a Declarer who ran into that defense.

Moral: Not too often does a pair arrive at game after an opponent opens the bidding. So when they do, not only safeguard that good contract if you can but also take advantage of the information that bid provided.

DEDICATION OF TABLETS

Families and friends are invited to attend the annual dedication of memorial tablets in which departed loved ones and friends are remembered, at the Jewish Home for the Aged.

The dedication will take place on Sunday, October 3, at 10 a.m. Services and prayers will be conducted in the synagogue of the Home by Rabbi Jacob Handler.

'I.F. STONE'S WEEKLY'

"I.F. Stone's Weekly," a film about investigative news reporting and the man who believed in the public's right to know, will be shown at the Pawtucket Public Library on September 21 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Rhode Island journalists Arnold Bailey and Jack White will discuss news reporting. The program is open to the public and is free of charge.

'AZELIA MOUNTAIN'

On Sunday, September 19, at 2:15 p.m., the Pawtucket Public Library will present "Azelia Mountain," a free film sponsored by the US-China People's Friendship Association.

This is a film version of the Peking Opera with ballet, acrobatics and swordsmanship. The story is set during the civil war following World War II. The film runs 130 minutes and has both English and Chinese subtitles. The public is invited.

CLUB EM

Club EM, the non-profit social group of Temple Emeth, invites singles between 24 and 39 to a "Yom Kippur Dance," featuring the Castlestones.

The dance will be held Monday, October 4, at 9 p.m. at the Hotel Sonesta, 5 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Information may be obtained by contacting (617)695-7735.

FIRE MARK SOCIETY

Ronald A. Cruff of The Cruff Agency in Providence has again met requirements for membership in the Insurance Fire Mark Society of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents.

Mr. Cruff has qualified for this producer's group for the fourth time by achieving an outstanding sales record in 1975, and also by practicing the society's high standards of ethics and proficiency in his agency operations. The society has more than 300 members across the country.

PRE-SLICHOT SOCIAL

The Sisterhood of Mishkon Tfiloh will sponsor a Pre-Slichot Social on Saturday, September 18, at 10:30 p.m. in the social hall.

Rabbi Emanuel Lazar will conduct a seminar on the composition of the New Year liturgy — Malchiot, Zichronot and Shofrot. During the seminar, Rabbi Lazar will answer questions by the assembly pertaining to these divisions of the service.

At 12:30 a.m., the congregation will adjourn to the sanctuary for the midnight Slichot service.

NEW CORPORATION

LONDON: Maritime Fruit Carriers has formed a new corporation jointly with the American firm Sea Containers. The new company will operate 20 of MFC's freighters.

The shares of the new corporation will be divided evenly between MFC and Sea Containers. The American firm will provide capital for MFC to clear up some of her debts that have endangered the giant shipping concern.

It seems, though, that the eight MFC refrigerator ships sailing under the Israeli flag will be possessed by creditors, since these ships were the most heavily mortgaged. According to a spokesman for the Israel Ratings Union, the ships to be saved are apparently registered in Germany and Great Britain.

SCHWARTZ BUST

JERUSALEM: A marble bust of Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, the late former director of the overseas operations of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee and its Vice-Chairman has been presented to the Hebrew University by the JDC.

ISRAEL DOES UN JOB

NEW YORK: The President of the National Conference of Christians and Jews has declared that "Israel was simply doing the United Nations' job" in staging its commando raid into Uganda to rescue hostages being held by terrorist hijackers.

Temple Beth Am Has A Radical Face Lift

THE HIGH HOLY DAYS will be met by a new face this year — that of Temple Beth Am, itself. The Warwick temple's "face lift" is the outcome of extensive refurbishing, remodelling and expansion programs completed this summer. The new addition, to be dedicated this fall at a yet to be announced date, encloses the former patio, providing an estimated 15% extra space for such activities as meetings, school classes and social events. A section of the enclosure has been partitioned off as a permanent daily sanctuary, apart from the main sanctuary. The main sanctuary and social hall, too, have been refurbished and redecorated. Airconditioning has been improved; ceilings have been lowered to cover previously exposed beams and ducts; and carpeting is to be installed in the lobby area. At the same time, the temple's main entrance has been modernized and the landscaping has been "spruced up."

THE TEMPLE OFFICERS this year, all of whom are Warwick residents, are Abraham Aron, president; Louis Friedman, first vice president; Robert Silverman, second vice president; Franklin Shatz, third vice president; Max Dressler, treasurer; Harvey Silverman, financial secretary; Joyce Friedman, recording secretary; and Toby Horowitz, corresponding secretary. Jane Silverman is president of the Sisterhood and Larry Alkins is Men's Club president.

APPEARANCES are good, but appearances aren't everything. The real news at Temple Beth Am, rumor has it, is that the Hebrew school enrollment there is up to 130 over last year's figure of 110. They're doing something right. Community take note.

3-Year Sentence For Arab Charged With Being In Service Of Terrorists

TEL AVIV Youssef Yaakub Roffah, a 43-year-old (JTA): Arab receptionist at a Jerusalem hotel, has been sentenced to three years imprisonment and to an additional three years suspended sentence on charges that he was in the service of Arab terrorists who planned to kidnap a top Israeli security official. Roffah, who was sentenced last Thursday by a military tribunal in Lod, confessed to the charges.

According to the prosecution, he had also relayed information to the terrorists about a top security official who was living in the hotel. The terrorists planned to kidnap the security official and hold him hostage until Israel released Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, currently serving a jail sentence for aiding terrorists.

Another charge against Roffah was that he recruited drivers for cars carrying explosives. The court handed down a relatively light sentence, taking into consideration Roffah's cooperation in the investigation and the fact that he is the father of six children. He is a resident of Beth Hanina near Jerusalem.

The tribunal also ordered the detention of Amjied Omari, 20, of Kalandia, who is suspected of placing an explosive charge near a Jerusalem bus station. He was injured when a bomb he planned to place in another public place exploded in his hands last June.

EL AL IN HONG KONG

TEL AVIV: Israel's government has obtained rights for El Al, the national airline, to introduce services to Hong Kong. This is a step in ths plans for flights across the Pacific to the west coast of the United States which Israel has been seeking to introduce for some time.

The furthest point east to which El Al aircraft fly at present is Tehran, the Iranian capital.

ENCOURAGING TALKS

NEW YORK: Jack Jones, head of Britain's largest trade unions, the 1.3 million-member Transport and General Workers' Union, has revealed that he is trying to get Israeli-Arab talks going through trade union channels and has the confidence of the Histadrut in this venture.

Department Of Commerce Accused Of Collusion

WASHINGTON: It has been asserted that the United States Department of Commerce acted in collusion with some American concerns to uphold the Arab boycott, according to a recent Congressional report on the impact of the boycott against companies doing business with Israel.

James H. Scheuer, a Democrat of Brooklyn and Queens who helped to draft the report, charged on the basis of the investigation that "several billions of dollars" in American exports to Arab countries in 1974 and 1975 had been conducted in compliance with boycott restrictions.

He believes the report shows that the Department of Commerce "sabotaged" the United States law regarding the boycott — more specifically, the Export Administration Act opposing "restrictive trade practices or boycotts fostered or imposed by foreign countries."

The investigation shows that for 10 years, until last fall, the Commerce Department confidentially advised American businessmen that they need not comply with a US Government request to file information about Arab boycott demands, Mr. Scheuer claims.

An Advisory Statement

He cited the department's notice catalogued as DIB 621-P, which called on American exporters to report boycott demands and then carried an advisory statement saying that compliance with the boycott was not illegal, and that it was not mandatory to file information on boycott demands. The advisory statement was later trimmed from the department notice.

As a result of "this wink, this nudge," Mr. Scheur said, few American exporting companies bothered to file information about Arab boycott demands.

Asked to respond to Mr. Scheuer's charges, J.T. Smith, general counsel of the Commerce Department said he would have to wait until he had seen the subcommittee report.

Mr. Smith said that the department had "opened up our files" to John E. Moss, the California Democrat who is chairman of the subcommittee. He added that some members of the subcommittee might have had difficulty in reconciling the Commerce Department's dual roles of "fostering business and opposing the boycott."

The Arab League's boycott against Jewish and Israel-related enterprises began in 1945 and was widened in 1951, when a special boycott office was established in Damascus, Syria.

The boycott is directed with vary-

Spitz-Wattman Realtors Open Providence Office

Two members of the Providence Board of Realtors have recently opened their own real estate firm. Saul Spitz and Irving Wattman are partners in the new firm of Spitz - Wattman, Realtors, with offices on Hope Street, Providence.

Mr. Spitz, who has been active in the real estate field for 25 years, is a board member of Statewide Multiple Listing Service and is a property appraiser. Mr. Wattman has been in the construction and estate business. The two men said they hope to specialize in the sale of residential, commercial and investment properties as well as real estate counselling.

Uncover Terrorists

TEL AVIV: Israel security forces uncovered two Fatah terrorist groups in the Nablus area. One of the groups included two Israeli Arabs, one from Jaffa and the other from the village of Bareh. Security officials said they found arms and ammunition and explosive material used for making bombs. The security forces also uncovered a workshop where the terrorists were making pistols.

Avoiding Confrontation Over Damaged Equipment

WASHINGTON (JTA): The State Department said it hopes the United States and Israel will be able to "minimize the possibility of a confrontation" over the oil explorations by an American company in the gulf of Suez. Department spokesman Frederick Brown denied that the State Department had expressed anger when it complained that Israeli naval units had damaged equipment owned by Amoco which is drilling for oil in the gulf for the Egyptians. "We made our position clear to the Israelis," Brown said, adding "the legalities are complex." The "main thing," he said, is that "we are talking."

The Israelis have used naval patrols to keep the oil drilling in what they consider the Egyptian-controlled part of the Gulf of Suez and not Israeli-held waters.

Brown said the Department believes that the American company has the right to explore the gulf in the area in which Israeli patrol boats ripped up the oil drill's moorings. Replying to a question, Brown said that during the incident, the Israelis had shot at some markers but not at any of the Americans. Undersecretary of State Philip Habib and Israeli Ambassador Sincha Dinitz discussed the incident at the State Department. An Israeli Embassy spokesman said the meeting was "routine." Discussions on the topic had been held in the past and will continue, he said. He added that it is untrue to speak of the possibility of a confrontation over this "small matter."

OLYMPIC AIRLINES

ATHENS: Olympic Airways, the State-owned Greek airline, is extending its flight schedules to include Libya (Benghazi) and Dubai, on the Persian Gulf. This is a facet of Greece's intensified diplomatic efforts to strengthen links with the Arab world. Olympic also operates regular services to Israel.

Enrollment Up Slightly For Hebrew Day Schools

NEW YORK: A slight increase in the number of Hebrew day schools opening for the 1976-77 school year, compared with that of the prior school year, has been reported by Torah Umesorah, the National Society for Hebrew Day Schools.

Thirteen new schools were organized for 1976-77, compared with ten new schools opening in September 1975, which was a drop from the 13 new schools listed for September 1974. As in the previous year, the 13 new schools this year are all in the United States. The number of Orthodox-sponsored day schools in Canada remained at 52, of which 36 are elementary and 16 are high schools.

The 13 new schools include seven elementary and six high schools, bringing elementary day schools in the United States to 296 and high schools to 142, for a total of 438. One high school was closed in New York and one in St. Louis last year. The national and New York City totals do not include Reform and Conservative day schools but do cover the traditional community, including day schools of the Hasidic groups.

In the New York City area, the site of the major concentration of day schools, there are now 131 elementary schools and 73 high schools, for a New York City area total of 204 such traditional schools.

Canadian Head Is Named Judge

OTTAWA: Sydney M. Harris, national president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, has been named a Judge of the Provincial Criminal Court of Ontario. The news of the appointment came on Harris's 59th birthday.

Called to the Bar in 1942, he has been active in Jewish community work, particularly in the Canadian Jewish Congress, since the mid-1940's. He has represented the Congress at conferences in Geneva, Jerusalem, London and New York. He was elected for a three-year term as its president in 1974.

HOLY SITES FILMS

JERUSALEM (JTA): South African TV has signed a contract with the Herzeliya Studios for the production of five half-hour documentary films on Israel and its holy sites. The series will be featured on the South African National network. The agreement was announced here by Robert Schmidt, director of religious programs on South Africa's radio and TV.

Israeli Visitors Found 'Big Apple' Has Worms

NEW YORK (JTA): Moshe Tzahar, the Mayor of Tiberias, his wife and 33 other residents of that Israeli biblical city were visiting "The Big Apple" as part of their American tour. The group, which includes 10 teenagers comprising a dance and singing troupe, earlier visited Allentown, Pennsylvania, which became a "Sister City" of Tiberias last year. A delegation from Allentown went to Tiberias last year and the Tiberians now returned the visit.

Tzahar, known affectionately as "the little Ben Gurion" throughout Israel and who served in 1948 as Israel's first acting Premier, met Mayor Abraham Beame at a City Hall reception where the teenage troupe serenaded New York's chief executive and guests. During the reception, Tzahar, 72, and Beame, 71, engaged in light banter in the spirit of comradeship and affection. Beame presented Tzahar with a lithograph of City Hall and Tzahar reciprocated by presenting the New Yorker with a reproduction of a coin used in Tiberias almost 1900 years ago.

But it wasn't all fun and games for the Tiberians. There were no mishaps in Allentown or on their bus tour of Niagara Falls, Toronto and Washington, nor for that matter in New York where they visited Wall Street, Chinatown, Staten Island and Rockefeller Center.

But a visit to the Lower East Side jolted their equanimity and left them minus eight suitcases filled with an estimated $4000 worth of heirlooms, presents and two passports. As far as they could reconstruct the rip-off caper, it happened while they were having lunch at a deli. While they were eating there, their bus driver was eating at a dairy restaurant around the corner. The thieves apaparently looted the bus at that time. The Tiberians didn't miss their luggage until later that night.

The visitors were crestfallen but said they couldn't blame the city. Tzahar appealed to the thieves to return objects that could only be of sentimental value to their owners.

ing degrees of intensity against concerns that have branches in Israel or produce goods with Israeli components, companies that ship goods to Israel as well as Arab countries, insurance companies and banks linked to Israeli or to Jewish interests and companies that have Jews in top management positions.

Although the report does not specify any cases, Mr. Scheuer said: "There is no question that some companies have fired people to comply with the boycott demand on top management, particularly in architecture-engineering companies."

Mr. Smith, commenting on this charge, said that judging by the large flow of boycott reports into his office, the main thrust of boycott demands was currently aimed at Israeli enterprises. "There have been some ugly demands concerning Jews in top management of American companies," he went on. "But they have only run about one in 2,000."

Confidential Advice

He charged that the Commerce Department, far from clarifying its stand on the Arab boycott, had confidentially advised American businessmen that they could avoid the effects of it by exporting through foreign subsidiaries.

A similar charge was made Wednesday in a syndicated column by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten. That same day, according to a department spokesman, Commerce Secretary Eliot C. Richardson wrote Mr. Anderson saying the column "inaccurately and unfairly describes Department of Commerce policies regarding the Arab boycott of Israel."

The Anderson column apparently drew on a memorandum of a meeting March 25 about the reach of American Law on the boycott between Commerce representatives and businessmen. The memorandum was written by a businessman.

Congress is currently considering various kinds of legislation to combat the impact of the Arab boycott.

One bill before a House-Senate conference committee would deprive American companies of tax benefits if they were found to be complying with the boycott. A Senate bill would amend export laws to require filing of public notice on boycott activities. A House version of this goes even further, prohibiting American concerns from complying with boycott provisions altogether.

The Arab boycott was a subject of acrimonious exchanges between former Secretary of Commerce Rogers C.B. Morton and Mr. Scheuer in House hearings a year ago.

Mr. Morton for a time claimed that executive privilege protected department files on boycott matters. But the House subcommittee pressed hard until the department allowed perusal of its documents last winter.

Blind Cantor Celebrates 50 Years Of Service

CAPE TOWN: Cantor Abe Immerman recently celebrated 50 years of service to the Jewish community here as a citizen and teacher. To mark this long service, made even more tremendous because Cantor Immerman has been blind from birth, past pupils, family and friends paid tribute to him at a gathering held at the Herzila Highlands School, and a scholarship in his name was created to enable blind children in Israel and South Africa to continue their studies. His name was also inscribed in the Golden Book.

Cantor Immerman overcame his disability and learned the entire Bible by heart before there was even a Braille version of Hebrew. When he responded to the tributes, he said: "You have kindled a light in the depth of my soul. It is gratifying to know that my name will be perpetuated by the school and by the children whom I love so much." He added. "There is no greater joy in life than to be of service."

Israelis Won't Pardon Greek-Catholic Leader

JERUSALEM: An appeal by the Greek Catholic Church to pardon Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, head of the Greek Catholic community in Jerusalem, was turned down by Israel recently. The Archbishop was convicted in 1974 of running guns for Arab guerrillas, according to Justice Ministry sources.

The Archbishop was one of the prisoners whose release from Israeli jails was demanded by the three Palestinians who hijacked a Dutch KLM Airliner to Cyprus recently. The ministry sources said Justice Minister Haim Zadok had told the head of the Greek Catholic Church in Israel, Maximus Salum, that the government had no reason to change its position on Archbishop Capucci, who is currently serving a 12-year jail term.

SIEGEL - ROBINSON

Miss Debbie Robinson of Riverdale, New York, daughter of Janet Robinson of 35 Church Street, East Providence, and the late Lester Robinson, was married on August 21 at a 7 p.m. ceremony at Temple Beth El to Harvey Siegel, also of Riverdale, New York. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Siegel of Riverdale, New York.

Officiating at the ceremony was Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman. The bride, given in marriage by her brother, David Robinson, wore a gown of white quiana with a V-neckline, empire waist and long, fitted sleeves. It was trimmed with imported Venice lace. The headpiece was a Juliet cap with Venice lace. The long veil was of English tooling bordered with Venice lace. She carried phelinophes, Stephenotis and a white orchid.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Joseph Weinberg, sister of the bride. Maid of honor was Miss Susan Young. Each girl wore a yellow gown of her choice. Bridesmaid was Miss Audrey Kaestner. She also wore a yellow gown of her choice and carried yellow pompoms and baby's breath.

Best man was Joseph Weinberg, brother-in-law of the bride. Ushers were Michael Sklon and David Robinson.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Riverdale, New York.

Group Of Jewish Women Opposed To Masculine Terminology In Liturgy

NEW YORK: A campaign to eliminate the masculine terminology in Jewish liturgy was begun recently by a task force on equality of women in Reform Judaism.

Their main accomplishment has been a mimeographed glossary of words to substitute "Lord," "Master," "Father," "King," "His," and other terms considered to be masculine. "God" was considered to be permissible and non-sexist. Instead of "Lord" the glossary suggests "God," "Almighty," "Blessed One," or "Creator."

It further suggested that "Father" could also become "God," and "King" and "Master" simply "Ruler."

A special liturgy committee of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, an arm of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, prepared the glossary. The task force met at Hebrew Union College, Jewish Institute of Religion, at 40 West 68th Street.

Call to Worship

The call to worship, a prayer said at every Jewish service, reads, "Priase ye the Lord our God, to whom all praise is due." The women would simply drop "the Lord our."

In the First Commandment, which reads, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," the women proposed the deletion of "the Lord."

Edith J. Miller, chairman of the liturgy committee and assistant to the president of the Union, told the group that "we can no longer accept the use of masculine terminology on the basis that it is 'generic' and covers all humankind."

"We want language which utilizes words encompassing male and female, together and as one," she said.

Change From Within

Cecile Fallon, moderator of yesterday's meeting and regional administrator of Catholic Charities' Community Life Center in Patchogue, L. I., described the task force as "made up of well-educated, hard-working female congregants who wish to change things from within, because we want our daughters to remain Jewish."

"They will not work for a community and pray, using a liturgy that systematically excludes them," she said.

Mrs. Fallon, who is Jewish and is married to a Roman Catholic, thanked the college for the use of its facilities and said: "In recognition of the differential in attendance today, the men's room on this floor becomes the women's and the women's room upstairs becomes the men's."

Rabbi Chaim Stern, editor of the Union's yet to be published new High Holy Day Prayerbook, was an invited guest.

In an interview, he said he had "no quarrel with the women in principle," but described his "problem" as one of "practical application."

According to Rabbi Stern, "Lord" and "King" are archaic words with no "reference to reality." He described them as non-masculine because "here we have no lords, no kings."

East Germany Drags Her Feet On Compensation To Victims

WASHINGTON: In September 1974 East Germany agreed for the first time to discuss the possibility of compensation to Jewish victims of Nazi war atrocities. Previously, the German Democratic Republic had consistently refused to review the matter on two grounds; that they were not the successors of the Nazi State and hence held no responsibility for its acts, and that they had repaid their debt of this nature to the Soviet Union.

In negotiations prior to the establishment of diplomatic relations the United States was insistent that the GDR "discuss compensation for Nazi victims." They agreed — though clearly not committing themselves. Since that time no progress has been made in securing these claims.

Rabbi Israel Miller, a former chairman of the Conference of Major American Jewish Organizations, said the Presidents' Conference is "not too hopeful at this stage" but is continuing its efforts and remains in close contact with the State Department.

Recently, an Administration Bill was introduced in the House of Representatives by Jonathan B. Bingham (Dem. New York) and Edward G. Beister, Jr., (Rep. Pennsylvania), and in the Senate by John Sparkman (Dem. Alabama). It seeks to "amend the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949 to provide for the determination of the validity and amounts of claims of nationals of the United States against the German Democratic Republic."

The Bill concerns compensation for American businesses and individuals whose property was expropriated by the Nazis and has since been nationalized by East Germany.

It is intended to authorize the adjudication of such claims. The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission reports that 2,022 claims have been submitted, totalling some $460 million.

PERONISTS SUPERSEDED

BUENOS AIRES: Argentine Jewry, along with most other citizens of the country, is relieved that the Peronist regime has been superseded by the new military government.

For the past two or three years, Jews in the Argentine have been living a nightmare life attacked from all sides by anti-Semites. The local Nazi and fascist elements, backed by the Arabs, have turned the country into a center for a vicious campaign against Jews, Israel and Zionism. The Arab League office here did not hide its anti-Jewish and anti-Israel activities, often using radio and television for its attacks. There have also been many bomb attacks on communal institutions and on synagogues.

Student Program In Tel Aviv To Aid NY Medical Schools

TEL AVIV: Hopefully beginning next fall, the state of New York will be helping students to become physicians by way of a four-year program at Tel Aviv University. The innovative program should help to ease the crowded situation in New York medical schools.

The program is patterned after an arrangement between the state of Vermont and its university, and it is the first involving a school outside of the United States. New York State will pay $6,000 a year for each student, while students will pay another $6,000 tuition but will be eligible for scholarships and loans available to any others in the state.

An innovative requirement in the program is that students completing their medical training there work three or four years after graduation in areas of medical need in New York. Those areas will be designated by the state.

Await Approval Letter

Provided no unforeseen problems arise, classes are slated to begin in September 1977. It has been determined that forty students wil be admitted annually.

In July the study arrangement was adopted overwhelmingly by the State Legislature and Governor Carey signed a bill for its authorization. The Senate and the board of governors of the university likewise confirmed it. Still awaited is a letter of approval from the Israeli Minister of Education, which has been assured.

Academic details are being worked out by the university's Sachler School of Medicine with the Regents of the University of the State of New York. The diplomas of a corporation to be chartered in New York to conduct and operate a graduate school in Tel Aviv will be recognized as equivalent to those of any medical school in the state. The corporation will undertake to raise $2 million for dormitories, lecture rooms and equipment.

The program will be open to all New Yorkers on the basis of academic standards. Students will be selected in New York by an admissions committee to be nominated by the American corporation and to include members of Tel Aviv University.

The project has stirred some controversy here since the four Israeli medical schools—in Jerusalem, Haifa, Beersheba and Tel Aviv—have been accepting only 300 of the 2,000 who apply annually. It is estimated that 1,500 rejected students attend medical schools in Europe, mainly in Italy.

Michael Bessos, vacationing after a year's study at the University of Florence, said Israelis on Italian campuses were furious when they heard of the arrangement. Mr. Bessos, who was rejected by two Israeli schools complained that "they always told us it was a problem to find facilities."

Prof. Haim Ben-Shahar, president of Tel Aviv University, said the limiting factor was not facilities but budget. He said professors and doctors were available to train more students and there were affiliated hospitals where they could get clinical training.

The cost of training a medical student is $12,000 a year, he said, with tuition covering 5 percent of the cost and public funds the rest. The Government decided that 300 doctors a year were enough to meet needs and was not willing to subsidize any more, Professor Ben-Shahar explained.

Doctors Have Jobs

There are 7,000 doctors and they all have jobs, according to Prof. Arieh Szeinberg, dean of the Sachler Medical School.

Classes for the Americans at Tel Aviv University will be conducted in English in the first two years, but they will be required to study Hebrew. In the third year, when they start clinical work, an attempt will be made to mix them with Israeli students and they will have to work in Hebrew.

"You can't teach medicine without contact with patients," the dean remarked.

Admission requirements will be similar to those in American schools. Applicants will have to have bachelors' degrees, with physics, mathematics, chemistry and biology obligatory. They will also take medical college admission tests.

Professor Szeinberg said his school would come under the surveillance of the American medical-education system and would benefit from it. "It will prod us to raise standards and to use the latest teaching methods and equipment," he said, adding, "It's good to be in such good company."

Tokyo Author-Rabbi Leaves For Israel

TOKYO: After eight years as rabbi of the Jewish community in Japan, Rabbi Marvin Tokayer, 39, has left to settle in Israel, together with his wife and three children, two of whom were born in Japan. Soon after his arrival, he officiated at the opening of the Tokyo community's new Beth David synagogue.

Rabbi Tokayer, who was also the JCNS's correspondent in Tokyo and taught classical Hebrew at the city's Waseda University, collected extensive material on the history of the Jews in the Far East during his stay in Japan.

He is the author of 12 books, eight of which have been published, including studies of the Talmud, Jewish humor, Jewish proverbs, Jewish insights on the Bible, the theory of the common origin of the Jews and the Japanese and Japanese society. His latest book on Japan and her educational system and current spiritual values is a best-seller in the country.

Forida-born Rabbi Taokayer, who began his ministry at the Jewish Community Center in Tokyo in 1968, served in Japan between 1962 and 1964 as a U.S. Air Force chaplain. He married his Israeli-born wife in 1967.

Some 600 Jews live in Japan, with about 120 families in Tokyo and about 25 families in Kobe.

Beigin Warns 2000 Listeners Of Israel's Present Dangers

BUENOS AIRES (JTA): Menachem Beigin, a leader of the Likud, warned here yesterday that the proliferation of Nazi publications in this country must be taken seriously in view of the Nazi experience in Europe. Beigin addressed some 2000 persons who crowded Metro Cinema at a meeting organized by the Revisionist-Herut Party. He also called for international sanctions against hijacking, warned that the PLO threats to destroy Israel should be taken literally and noted that Mideast peace will come when the Arabs convince themselves that they cannot subdue Israel. He also stated that the survival of Christians in Lebanon is due to the aid provided by Israel.

Jewish Homes Struck By Vandalism, Car Burning

HARTFORD, Conn: Five Jewish homes in West Hartford and a number of cars in their driveways were the targets of vandals who scrawled anti-Israel slogans and set fire to one of the cars. Police have not found the perpetrators but Chief Francis G. Reynolds has promised that patrols in the area will be increased, the Connecticut Jewish Ledger reported. Spokesmen for the Hartford Jewish community have expressed grave concern over the incidents. According to the Ledger, four of the homes were in the heavily Jewish populated King Philip section of West Hartford and the fifth home was some distance away, separated from the others by the St. Joseph College campus.

One of the homes is the residence of a prominent Jewish community leader. The Ledger has withheld the names of the victimized families to protect them from further harassment. The Ledger reported that according to police accounts, the vandals set fire to the gasoline tank of one car but firemen put out the blaze before an explosion occurred. Another car in the same driveway was doused with gasoline but not set on fire. On one of the homes, the slogans "Avenge Entebbe" and "Free PFLP" were scrawled with a felt-tipped pen. Other slogans included "Liberate Palestine" and "Kill White America."

In the latter, the "i" in "America" was replaced by a swastika. The slogans appeared to be references to the Israeli commando raid that freed 106 Air France hijack victims at Entebbe Airport in Uganda last July 3. The PFLP, which stands for Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, is the terrorist organization that claimed responsibility for the hijack.

Jerry Wagner, chairman of the community relations committee of the Hartford Jewish Federation, said in a statement to the Ledger that he could not recall any similar acts of bigotry or violence aimed against private homes in the greater Hartford area. He said it was too soon to decide whether the incidents were the isolated work of "crackpot hate-mongers" or an organized campaign against the Jewish community. He said the community relations committee and the regional office of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League were serving as liaison with the State Police and the FBI in the matter.

According to the Ledger, the FBI was called into the case initially but is not now involved. The Ledger said it was told by special agent Thomas R. Dugan, who is in charge of the FBI's Connecticut headquarters in New Haven, that no federal violation had been detected. Meanwhile, an anonymous donor, who may or may not have been one of the victims, has offered a $250 reward for the arrest and conviction of the vandals.

World Is Thirsting For 'Drip Irrigation'

NEGEV: This desert area six miles from Beersheba is the locale of kibbutz Hatzerim, manufacturers of the most efficient irrigation systems in the world. The 100 families who live here also earn their income by growing fruit and vegetables for market and plants and flowers for nurserymen. Only an occasional date palm reminds visitors that this is desert.

The juxtaposition of farm and factory is no accident, nor is the arid setting. According to Ya'ir Kurtz, farm manager and export sales director, "Not only do we supply about 90% of the Israeli market in drip irrigation; we also do about 90% of the country's research in our own orchards and hothouses."

Drip irrigation is a web of plastic piping which feeds the water straight to the roots of plants. Developed far beyond the experimental stage, Israeli farmers have been installing the system for more than a decade.

Demand, home and abroad, is expanding so fast that Hatzerim, which does not believe in employing outside workers, had put the factory on a three-shift regime. The 35 regular staff have been reinforced by every member of kibbutz, doing at least one shift a week on top of his own job.

Exports last year topped $1 million to the United States, Latin America, South Africa and Europe. Spurred by the drought, British water authorities and farmers' cooperatives have written for advice and specifications. The Israeli embassy in London has been tapped for information.

Ya'ir Kurtz, a moustachioed Sabra (native Israeli) with an American accent, ticks off the drip system's advantages over conventional, sprinkler irrigation. The original idea, he says, was to conserve water, especially in arid areas. The problem was how to make the best use of the small quantities of water available.

"To our surprise," he said, "we found that the average rate of conservation was not all that high, between 10 and 15 per cent compared with sprinkler irrigation. The real gain, which we had not predicted, was that we got much bigger crops with much higher quality."

Growing tomatoes, for instance, Hatzerim produced 104 tons per acre for the same amount of water as had produced 60 tons under sprinklers. The pear orchards yielded as much as 22 tons per acre, compared with an old average of 12 tons. The harvest of grapes doubled in the vineyards to more than 20 tons per acre.

The drip system, which gives a plant the same quantity of water (often enriched by nutrients) over a longer period and wastes nothing on the surrounding landscape, has also meant bigger and better produce. Hatzerim is now growing apricots the size of a large peach. The crops are ready for picking earlier, which can mean a higher price in the market. In some cases the growing cycle has actually been accelerated; during a tour of the plantations I was shown avocado trees bearing fruit after only three years, instead of the normal four.

Drip irrigation is less sensitive to external conditions — wind and changes of temperature — than sprinklers. It can also use water of lower quality.

Sea water is, however, not pure enough, though Hatzerim has experimented with vegetables and fruit trees irrigated with water containing up to 650 milligrams of chlorine, more than double the concentration in "good" water.

Near Jerusalem, the Israelis are also growing a plantation of fruit trees, recycling sewage water by the drip method. The results are encouraging, but Ya'ir Kurtz is cautious in his assessment.

"The only advantage is that the water is applied directly to the roots. Drip irrigation avoids the public health problem. The sewage water doesn't get to the fruit or the leaves." And the disadvantages? Mainly the cost of installation. The drip system is only economical for intensive crops. In Israel it is used for vegetables, fruit and nurseries. "We don't use it for grain, cotton or sugar beet." Ya'ir Kurtz explains. "But this is probably going to be our next step."

Soviets Adopt New Strategy To Prevent Jewish Emigrants

NEW YORK: (JTA) In separate letters to President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the International League for the Repatriation of Russian Jews called attention to a new violation of the Helsinki agreement and urged U.S. intervention. Rabbi Benjamin Blech, League president who made the announcement, said his group has been informed of a new strategy that has been introduced by the Soviets to prevent reunification of families in direct violation of the Helsinki accord and Soviet law which specifically permits emigration for the purpose of reunification with family and one's ethnic group. According to Blech, within the past three weeks Soviet Jews applying for visas have been called to the "ovir" and interrogated for hours about their relatives who have invited them to come to Israel. "Emigration papers, painstakingly assembled after months of hard work, are torn up in front of the applicant and they are forced to sign statements denouncing relations in Israel," Blech reported. "Many such incidents have already been reported in Moscow, Leningrad and Odessa." In his letters to Ford and Kissinger, Blech urged that the U.S. government take this matter under advisement and call these violations to the attention of the Soviet government.

In another issue, the League, which describes itself as an "American social service agency dedicated to the resettlement of Russians and East European Jews through its program of education, counseling and research," again called upon the Polish government to withdraw its plans for uprooting the Jewish cemetery in Warsaw to replace it with a housing project. Blech said that the League had written in January to W. Trampcynski, the Polish Ambassador in Washington, and New York Consul Z. Demoski with a similar request.

Dissidents Set Russian History

WASHINGTON: For the first time in modern Russian history, Soviet Jewish and non-Jewish dissidents have joined together formally in a public action group to inform the world of Soviet violations of human rights. The Washington Committee for Soviet Jewry has published two documents received by the Union of Council for Soviet Jews, with which the Washington area group is affiliated.

Formation of the Soviet organization and the open announcement by its organizers of their intention of contacting governments and peoples concerning Soviet violations of human rights is considered unprecedented. Herefore even minor indications of such opposition have been swiftly punished.

Although many leading Jewish names appear on the documents, most of the signers are non-Jewish.

The new organization in Russia designates itself as a Public Action Group for the Implementation of the Helsinki Agreements in the USSR. It was formed May 12. The first statement issued by the group states its purpose as seeking to assure the observance of humanitarian articles put forth in the Helsinki accord, which Soviet leaders signed.

The document asserts that its "first and foremost objective is to inform all heads of states, ... as well as the public at large, of cases of flagrant violation" of the humanitarian articles of the Helsinki agreement.

The group, according to the statement, will receive written complaints from Soviet citizens concerning violations and collect information to be sent to heads of state and to the public-at-large. Eleven signatures are attached to the first document.

The second document, which deals with implementation of the Helsinki accord, was signed by 32 Jewish and non-Jewish names from Moscow, Lenningrad, Minsk, Tbilisi and Vinnitza, with telephone numbers included.

Jewish Prairie Settlement To Mark Centennial

TORONTO: To commemorate the centennial of Jewish settlement in the prairies (1877-1977), the Jewish Historical Society of Western Canada is sponsoring a series of lectures on Jewish subjects and an essay competition on a subject connected with the history of the Jewish community in western Canada.

The series is partially funded by the Samuel and Saidye Bronfman Family Foundation. Judge I. Finestein, a past president of the Jewish Historical Society of England, will present the first lecture Sept. 19, at the Planetarium Auditorium in Winnipeg, on "The Struggle of Religious Minorities for Civil Rights in 19th century England." All entries for the Centennial Essay Competition have to be in by Oct. 1.

"Journey Into Our Heritage," the traveling exhibit on the Jewish communities of western Canada, has opened in Edmonton at the Provincial Museum. The exhibit was already presented in Vancouver, Victoria and Calgary, with thousands of visitors viewing it.

Sponsored by the Jewish Historical Society of Western Canada, the exhibit will be in Edmonton until Oct. 24. It opens in Saskatoon Nov. 4, at the Saskatoon Gallery and Conservatory and in Regina, Dec. 16, at the Museum of Natural History. It will return to Winnipeg for showing during the summer of 1977.

ELECTIONS PREDICTED

JERUSALEM: Former Defense Minister, Moshe Dayan, predicts that new elections to the Knesset will have to take place even this year. At a closed meeting with former fellow-members of the "Rafi" faction, Dayan disclosed that Premier Rabin was told in Washington what the U. S. expects in the way of a settlement with respect to the West Bank. But the Israeli government cannot proceed without honoring its pledge that the electorate will be asked to decide on this matter. Therefore, according to Dayan, new national elections must take place. Dayan also made it clear that he, personally, would support the party which was on record as opposing a withdrawal from the administered Arab territories.

Of the two-way benefits obtained from the groups' cooperation, Mr. Gladstone added, "it creates an environment where the Jewish Federation gets its message across to a greater number of people and, by its very activity, strengthens the individual temples or synagogues. We get to the nitty-gritty of issues, and we don't pull any punches. There is sometimes a very strong exchange of ideas, but we come up with a synthesis of thinking."

New Year's

New Year's falls on Shabbos this year, so that New Year's Eve is on Friday night. The council and the Board of Rabbis is concerned over the matter. Mr. Gladstone said, "We have had an exchange of thinking as to how we can get the message over to the general public that it is necessary to honor the Sabbath before you celebrate the New Year." The group has drawn up a letter which will be circulated among congregants of all temples and synagogues, discouraging celebration of the New Year this year. In conclusion, Mr. Gladstone told us, "We are trying to be a group which simply acts as a method of exchange of ideas and dissemination of certain information that is universal to all. And if — God forbid — there is a problem that arises, this would be a focal group which could be utilized for rapid dissemination of information or whatever would be needed."

The Presidents

Presidents of the 19 state synagogues and temples are Lawrence Sadwin, Congregation B'nai Israel; Elliot Brown, Congregation Ohawe Shalom; Isaak Berger, Congregation Shaare Zedek; Jack Glantz, Congregation Sons of Jacob; Jack Platkin, Congregation Sons of Zion; Edward C. Spencer, Congregation Mishkon Tfiloh.

Also, Abraham Aron, Temple Beth Am; Samuel C. Kagan, Temple Beth David - Anshei Kovno; Mrs. Newton Cohn, Temple Beth El; Carl Lefkovitz, Temple Beth Israel; Bernard C. Gladstone, Temple Beth Sholom; Oscar I. Cohen, Temple Beth Torah.

Also, Manfred Weil, Temple Emanu-El; Dr. Stephen Kaplan, Temple Habonim - Barrington Jewish Center; Sherwin Zaidman, Temple Judea; Paul Zatz, Temple Shalom; Jerome Kaplan, Temple Sinai.

Also, William Dannin, Touro Synagogue; and Alton Brody, United Brothers Synagogue.

Votes Continued Opposition To Tax-Supported Assistance

WASHINGTON: The B'nai B'rith Biennial convention, meeting in the Washington Hilton Hotel, rejected in committee a proposal that they support state aid to religion-sponsored schools "for services and activities that are wholly secular in nature" after a three-hour heated debate. A convention committee on "religion and the state" recommended, 7-2, that the 500,000-member Jewish service organization continue its traditional opposition to any tax-supported assistance to sectarian schools.

Committee arguments were presented by representatives of the Anti-Defamation League, B'nai Brith's civil rights agency. It is expected that further debate will be evoked when the recommendation is presented to a convention plenary session of 1,500 delegates before a final decision is made.

Proponents of a change in B'nai B'rith policy cited the "child benefit" theory and its rationale that providing sectarian school pupils with such services as transportation, hot lunches, health facilities and textbooks for secular studies are for the individual child, and the "indirect assistance to religion" is inconsequential.

They also argued that a change of policy would "recognize that the parent of a sectarian school pupil is a taxpayer supporting public education," and that "expanding the 'child benefit' principal in ways wholly unrelated to religious study or indoctrinization would give him some relief" and would be "equitable."

Steven J. Riekes of Omaha, who cast one of the minority votes, rejected the argument that such aid created constitutional fears of religious encroachment. "What is the danger of providing math textbooks to parochial schools?" he asked. "Those who oppose sound as if the Inquisition is around the corner."

But Meyer Eisenberg, a lawyer of Potomac, Md., warned that aid for parochial schools "is a piece of a fabric, a wedge for other intrusions; the theory that we should aid the child is merely a method of siphoning funds for parochial schools."

Both the Roman Catholic church and secular and religious leaders of Orthodox Judiasm favor governmental aid for parochial schools. Orthodoxy and the Lubavitch Movement, the world wide body of Hasidic Jews, maintain large networks of such schools.

Rabbi Walter S. Wurzburger, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, the Orthodox body, reached by telephone, expressed hope that B'nai B'rith "will change its policy."

B'nai B'rith Accuses Soviet Lecturer Of Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON (JTA): B'nai B'rith has cited the activities of an official Soviet propagandist, a professional public lecturer and writer, who accuses Zionists of being anti-Semites bent on world domination as evidence that "anti-Semitism remains very much a Kremlin political ploy." David M. Blumberg, B'nai B'rith president, charged Dr. Valery Yemelyanov, an academician and a member of the "Znanie (Knowledge) Society," with "promoting uninhibited anti-Semitism" in his government-sanctioned lectures and writings.

The Znanie Society conducts public lectures, a popular activity in the Soviet Union. According to a Communist Party journal, some 20 million lectures reached more than a billion persons in a single year.

Blumberg said that Yemelyanov's career as a lecturer is sponsored by the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party, giving "an official imprimatur to his rabid anti-Semitism." Yemelyanov, posing as a "scientific specialist" on Zionism, has described the Zionist movement as possessing "strictly secret frameworks" that include "almost all the presidents and parliaments of the developed capitalist countries, and especially those of the U.S."

Blumberg said that in "similar absurdities," Yemelyanov claimed that "80 percent of the economy and 95 percent of the mass media in the capitalist world are Zionist-owned," that Zionists are the secret owners of foreign oil companies in Arab lands, and that the Torah was the "blackest book" ever written.

Protest To Ambassador

Blumberg, who said B'nai B'rith would protest Yemelyanov's lectures and writings to the Soviet Ambassador, noted that the Russian's lectures were exposed by the Soviet Jewish underground. Recent Soviet emigres, Blumberg stated, say that lectures "are a powerful force in the Soviet Union, much more believable than the press." Blumberg also said that Yemelyanov's propaganda was spotlighted by the Palestine Liberation Organization in an interview published by "Falastin al-Thawra" (Free Palestine), in Beirut.

In the interview, Yemelyanov claimed that "Russian Zionists" were conducting "anti-Semitic terror designed to provoke Jews to emigrate. Zionism and anti-Semitism are "two sides of the same medal," he said. Yemelyanov called for a world coalition, led by the Soviets and Arabs to combat Zionism. The struggle would be "extraordinarily bloody," he predicted.

Networks Advised To Use Care In Covering Terrorism Issues

RADNOR, PA: Television news organizations throughout the world have been advised to downplay and even omit the names of terrorist groups that "claim credit" for violent acts.

The suggestion was one of several proposed by a panel of experts on terrorism and reported in TV Guide magazine (Aug' 7 issue). The suggestions included:

- Minimize the "how-to" aspects of terrorists acts to prevent their being repeated by other terrorists who might learn specific details of how to plant bombs, hijack planes or abduct hostages.
- Limit live coverage of kidnappings, skyjackings and other crimes involving hostages.
- Give proper emphasis to the inhuman and barbarous aspects of terrorists acts and not only to their action-adventure aspects, which sometimes tend to appear glamorous when described by TV reporters.
- Refrain from routinely interviewing terrorist leaders on camera, to avoid conferring upon them an unwarranted respectability.
- Give air time to terrorist acts only in realistic proportion to their objective news value, no matter how exciting the news film one happens to have on hand.
- Emphasize statistics that indicate the low likelihood of success for such crimes as abduction and hijacking, thereby discouraging would-be offenders.
- Provide documentaries and thoughtful analysis on the range of problems facing a community or a country, and even access to the airwaves for the voices of reason among dissident groups, thereby reducing the likelihood of their resorting to violence to have their grievances heard.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

PLANNING AN EARLY RETIREMENT

Q — If possible I plan to retire in 12 years at 60. So far my holdings are: 150 Armco Steel, 275 Fort Howard Paper, 100 Gulf Oil, 300 U. S. Industries and 100 Woolworth, all NYSE. I would like to diversify. What other stocks do you think are advisable for me? R. G. Wisconsin

A — Your portfolio is heavily represented in cyclicals (in terms of the dollars invested), so that any new acquisitions should be in less economy-sensitive areas. Two growth stocks which have above-average appeal are: Dr. Pepper (NYSE) and Procter & Gamble (NYSE). The latter, a high-grade blue chip, reported a 20% jump in earnings for the June fiscal year. Bolstered by a 33% jump in the final quarter, net reached $4.86 a share up from $4.05 in fiscal 1975. Expanded distribution of several paper products allowed greater plant utilization and operating efficiency at P&G's paper plants. Consumer product unit volume set records both here and abroad. At only 17X estimated fiscal 1977 net of $5.60 a share, P&G is trading at the historically low end of its P/E ratio. Buy.

Although not of the same quality as Procter & Gamble, Dr. Pepper has strong growth potential. Sales have increased 5-fold in the last decade while earnings have grown at an 18% average annual rate. Aggressive marketing focuses on national advertising, promotions and sponsorship of events such as the Miss Teenage America Pageant. With only 5% of the domestic market, Dr. Pepper should grow much faster than the industry.

And, the strong financial position of the company should be a plus — last year cash items alone were 2½ times greater than current liabilities. This issue will help balance your present stocks, all of which should be retained.

Q — I have 300 shares of Monroe Auto Equipment (NYSE) that cost me $18 per share. Should I sell and take my loss or do you think it has a chance to come back? J. K. Oklahoma

A — It looks as if the worst is now behind for this leading shock absorber manufacturer. Earnings for the year ended June were off 10¢ a share on a 14% increase in sales. However, for the last two quarters, year-to-year earnings comparisons showed improvement. Replacement parts account for 81% of Monroe's sales and the original equipment market the balance. In recent years competition has cut into the company's domination of this specialized field, although it still accounts for about 50% of the market. A newly introduced oil filter system has been scheduled for national distribution by the year end in order to get the jump on competition. Hold for recovery.

BUYING GROWTH STOCKS

Q — My wife and I are 35 years old and both work so we are interested in capital gains rather than income for now. Is there some way we can invest about $300 per month and have the dividends reinvested? J. F. Louisiana

A — Many companies today are offering not only dividend reinvestment programs but also the option of adding cash to the dividend for investment. Typical company plans allow a minimum of $10 up to a maximum of $1000 per month to be invested whether the dividend is reinvested or not.

While most companies providing these programs are higher dividend paying, cyclical firms, there are some good-quality growth companies that allow monthly investment of cash. This normally is accomplished with a commission savings. Furthermore, the reinvestment of dividends gives you the advantage of compounding. I am sending along to you our report on "Portfolio Building With Dividend Reinvestment Plans" which includes data pertaining to the dividend reinvestment plans of some 400 corporations. You will find data on some of my growth favorites including BankAmerica, Eastman Kodak, Warner-Lambert, Xerox and Union Oil of California, all NYSE-listed.

Any readers with similar interests in companies providing dividend and cash reinvestment programs can write to me c/o Successful Investing, 210 Newbury St., Boston MA 02116.

Foreign Currency Is Now Tax Exempt

TEL AVIV: Tourists in Israel now can save a substantial portion of their hotel bill if they pay in foreign currency, according to the Tourism Ministry. The Israel government has exempted tourists paying in foreign currency from local taxes, which could be as much as 28 percent.

If hotel bills are paid in Israel lirot, the special exemption is lost and the tourist is liable to all local taxes. In any case, hotel guests are still liable for the usual 15 percent service charge. Payment in foreign currency may be made in cash, travelers' checks or by credit card.

The tax exemption is also applicable to all hotel bookings and tour packages sold through U.S. travel agents in U.S. dollars.

Tourists exchanging their dollars (cash, travelers' checks or State of Israel Bonds) in Israeli banks can receive special bankers checks in Israel lirot which are eligible for tax exemption in the hotels just like foreign currency.

A tourist wishing to pay a hotel bill and get the 28 percent exemption with a State of Israel Bond can cash it at a bank for a small service charge and get the full face value of the bond in bank checks or travelers' checks in lirot. Bond holders cannot redeem more than 2,500 lirot per month of stay. Tourists may pay travel agents or tour operators in Israel for services ordered abroad with lirot obtained by redeeming Israel bonds.

The current rate of exchange is 8.12 lirot per U.S. dollar. However, this figure changes frequently.

ISRAELI EXCLUSION

JERUSALEM: Israel will not acquiesce in the decision by the Asian Games Federation executives to exclude her from the 1978 games. The president of the federation, Miraj Khalid, a Pakistani Minister, said at its meeting in Malaysia: "We are fully aware of the problems the host country would have if Israel participated."

Shmuel Lakin, who heads Israel's Sports Federation, said here that they would appeal to the International Olympic Committee.
