

Day School Graduates Say Double Curriculum Helps To Adjust To Later Studies

The curriculum presents a challenge and teaches the student how to study, but it is not particularly difficult, seems to be the consensus of opinion of graduates of the Providence Hebrew Day School.

Students at the Day School take a course which includes all the subjects presented by the public schools and also presents a full course of Hebrew study which includes the language, history and customs.

There are 46 graduates of the school which was started 17 years ago. Although most of them are still in school, they have shown in the honors which they have received and the work which they have done, the benefits which have been derived from learning how to study at an early age. They have found that entering a public school after leaving the day school does not require a difficult adjustment, and many feel that their adjustment has been easier since they have been accustomed to studying and to homework from the early grades in school.

Many of the graduates have gone on further in their Hebrew studies, attending Yeshivas or Stern College for Women; many have added Hebrew studies to their regular curricula — the double program does not phase them.

Dina Sternbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sternbach, who will be graduated from Classical High School this June, and who is a ninth grade graduate of the Day School, is planning to continue her education at Barnard College in New York. Dina, who recently was named the 1964 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow for Rhode Island, is interested in a career in journalism. While attending Barnard she intends also to attend the Stern College for Women's Teacher Institute evening classes where she will continue her Hebrew studies.

She feels that it is important to learn about one's Hebrew heritage from an early age. Her attendance at the Day School caused her only minor inconvenience when she was younger — she lived on the opposite side of the city from the school and so would arrive

Soviet Union Shows Increase In Jewish Cultural Activity

MOSCOW — An increase in Jewish cultural activity has been evident here since the recent publication abroad of charges that Soviet authorities are discriminating against Jews according to a New York Times article.

The Yiddish-language magazine Sovetish Heimland (Soviet Homeland), which started in 1961 on a bimonthly basis, is making plans to become a monthly publication. It is also preparing to print books in Yiddish.

Aron Vergelis, the magazine's editor and a poet, as well as other Yiddish writers, has started a promotion campaign by visiting major centers of Jewish population throughout the Soviet Union for meetings with readers.

A Jewish professional drama group, established in Moscow two years ago by Benjamin Shvarts, is getting ready for a tour of Soviet cities. Mr. Shvarts, 70 years old, has been on the Jewish stage for many years.

These and other developments were disclosed in a lengthy account in the newspaper Sovetskaya Moldaviya, the Communist party and Government organ of the Moldavian Republic, which has a Jewish population of 100,000.

Reply to Westerners
The article, designed as a reply to Western charges of discrimination, is one of the most complete surveys of the role of Soviet Jews to appear in the official press. Its theme is the Jewish effort to retain cultural identity despite an increasing move into the mainstream of Soviet life.

Recalling the publication of five books of the works of Sholom Aleichem and other Yiddish classic writers in the last seven years, Mr. Vergelis, who wrote the article said:

"We are now getting ready to publish additional books in Yiddish."

The lack of publication of Yiddish books has been one of the chief complaints made by Jewish groups abroad.

The editors of Sovetish Heimland are understood to have rejected the idea of an expansion of the present circulation of 25,000 after an advertising campaign in areas with a potential Jewish readership failed to elicit a substantial additional number of subscriptions.

On the other hand, a survey of the present readership disclosed a large demand for additional Jewish literary material.

According to Mr. Vergelis, the journal now has 140 contributors, poets, prose writers and critics writing in Yiddish. It is understood that expansion of the journal is limited not so much by a shortage of available Yiddish writing as by the need for additional editorial and technical help to handle increased volume.

The first stop of the current promotion campaign, which began a week ago, was Vilna, capital of the Lithuanian Republic and still a Jewish cultural center despite the extermination of virtually the entire Jewish population by the Nazis.

According to an account made available to Novosti, the Soviet feature syndicate, an audience of 1,000 out of a total Jewish population of 15,000 gathered in the Vilna Philharmonic Hall to hear a speech by Mr. Vergelis, readings from poetry and prose and a concert by Nehama Lefshits, a Jewish woman folksinger.

Vilna Jews have organized drama, dance and folk singing groups, a string orchestra and a jazz band under the supervision of Emmanuel Lurie, a theatrical director formerly associated with the Jewish State Theater in Moscow, which was closed by Stalin in 1948.

In the limited revival of Jewish cultural activities under Khrushchev, the theater has not been reopened. Mr. Vergelis's explanation is that Jewish cultural needs are now better met by an expansion of amateur arts.

Congress Names Ronnie Rothstein As R. I. Jewish Athlete Of Year

Ronnie Rothstein, the field general of the University of Rhode Island basketball team and its captain during the past season, has been selected as the 1964 Jewish Athlete of the Year by the R. I. Jewish Bowling Congress. Allen Young of Brown was last year's recipient.

Ronnie will receive the Wally Sundlin Jr. Award at the 12th Annual Banquet and Sports Awards Night of the Congress Monday night at the Colony Motor Hotel. His coach, Ernie Calverley,

American Jewry To Offer Prayer For Soviet Jews

The Rhode Island Rabbinical Association has requested Rhode Island Jewry to join Jews throughout the nation on the Sabbath of May 23 in offering a special prayer in behalf of their brethren in the Soviet Union.

The prayer which they have asked to be used is:

"Hear our voice as we lift it in prayer unto Thee, O Lord our God. Be merciful and compassionate unto all Thy children. Where they are in bondage of body or spirit — may the hope of ultimate liberation give them strength never to surrender. Where they are oppressed and persecuted — may their spirits be sustained by the knowledge that though weeping carries through the night, joy cometh in the morning's dawn. Where they are frightened by their loneliness — may they be reassured that we, their brethren, are eager to help them and that Thou, the Eternal God, art their dwelling place. Where iron curtains enclose them — may they yet hear our heartbeats for them and the whispers of our prayers in their behalf."

Refuse Permission To Picket Jordan's Pavilion At Fair

NEW YORK — Robert Moses refused last week to allow the American Jewish Congress to picket the Pavilion of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan at the World's Fair.

Mr. Moses, president of the World's Fair Corporation, sent a message to Joachim Prinz, president of the congress, which said: "The position of the fair has been fully explained in a short, considered statement, copy of which is attached. We shall not license picketing to encourage international incidents in a fair primarily devoted to promoting friendship through increased understanding."

The "short, considered statement" referred to was a telegram Mr. Moses sent to the American-Israel Pavilion on April 25. The pavilion had asked the fair to direct will be one of four recipients of the Bert Summer Memorial Award for Service to Sports at the same event. Others who will share the award with Mr. Calverley are basketball coaches, Joe Mullaney of Providence College, Tom Sheehan of R. I. College and Stan Ward of Brown.

Associate Justice Alfred H. Joslin of the R. I. Supreme Court will be honored as the R. I. Jewish Man of the Year. Governor John H. Chafee will again attend to present this award for the Congress.

Almost 300 Attend Service Of New London Synagogue

LONDON — Nearly 300 persons attended the first service of the New London Synagogue last week in defiance of Britain's Chief Rabbi, Dr. Israel Brodie.

The congregation, until last week, as the New West End synagogue. It withdrew its obedience to the Chief Rabbi when he refused to accept its appointment of Dr. Louis Jacobs as its rabbi. Dr. Brodie said he could not countenance the critical approach of Dr. Jacobs to the fundamental tenets of orthodox Jewish faith.

Unlike the United States, Britain has in the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Commonwealth a formal organization of all Jewish churches. The congregation could not disobey the Chief Rabbi and continue in the organization.

Expelled by National Council
The congregation was formally expelled last week by the Council of the United Congregations.

The service today was held in Montefiore Hall in the Maida Vale section of London; in the neighborhood at least one Jewish household was not altogether friendly.

From a garden next to the hall, pop music shattered the Sabbath calm with as many decibels as could be squeezed out of a small record player.

An occupant of the house said afterward: "We object to Dr. Jacobs. We resent it very much."

The noise could hardly be heard inside the hall, where Dr. Jacobs had taken as a text Leviticus XXV, 10: "and ye shall hallow the 50th year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

The 43-year-old rabbi said that throughout history the Bible had inspired movements toward freedom. He said that while there was a need for ritual in religion, there was also a burning need for man to be free of outworn ideas.

It is Dr. Jacobs's thesis that the Torah, the first five books of the Bible and the basis of Jewish law, owes something to human wisdom and historical development, as well as to its original divine inspiration.

Dr. Brodie has declared that there can be no compromise with the traditional Orthodox view that the Torah was revealed by God to Moses on Mount Sinai and has been divinely preserved in its original form ever since. Any other view, he has warned since the dispute with Dr. Jacobs would set Judaism on a path where its beliefs and values would eventually be lost.

Today Dr. Jacobs said that, while Judaism had continued through the ages as a single concept, it had expressed itself in every age and generation in a slightly different form.

"We had to move," he said, "because we believe it is more important for men to speak the minds than to mind their speech."

Briscoe Says Daughter 'Radiantly Happy' Since Becoming Nun

DUBLIN — Robert Briscoe, the Jewish former Lord Mayor of Dublin, said recently that his daughter Elise was radiantly happy serving as a Roman Catholic nun — and that's what matters most with him.

He added in an interview that he would be happy if the freedom of religious choice he gave his daughter might contribute even slightly to religious tolerance everywhere and help "end bigotry and fanaticism."

Miss Briscoe took the final Carmelite vows and became Sister Miriam Teresa. The ceremony in Dublin's Carmelite Convent, was attended by her parents, two of her brothers and a sister. Also present were Ireland's president, Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister Sean Lemass and Foreign Minister Frank Aiken, all close friends of Mr. Briscoe, who is a member of the Dail Eireann and a Dublin businessman.

Although Miss Briscoe began her novitiate four years ago at the age of 21, her final profession in the strict Carmelite order caused a stir here and abroad.

The elder Briscoes are practicing Jews. Mr. Briscoe is the first Jew to rise to the heights of Irish politics, and he did it as a patriot, up from the ranks of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and a charter member of President de Valera's Fianna Fail party. Mr. Briscoe is a former New Jersey resident.

He was Lord Mayor twice — in 1956-57 and 1961-62 before entering the Dail.

Adopts Measure To Curtail German Scientists In UAR

JERUSALEM — The Knesset, Israeli's parliament, unanimously urged the West German Government last week to adopt without delay measures that would stop German scientists from working in the United Arab Republic.

A resolution to this effect was adopted after the legislators had heard a statement by the Foreign Minister, Mrs. Golda Meir, and speeches by opposition members.

Mrs. Meir charged that President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the U. A. R. threatened Israel with rockets produced with the aid of German scientists.

Mrs. Meir Speaks

TEL AVIV — Mrs. Meir declared that Western scientists are producing weapons to destroy Jews who survived the Hitler terror.

In a statement to the Knesset (Parliament) in Jerusalem, she chided the Government of Chancellor Ludwig Erhard for delay in enacting measures to recall German scientists said to be helping the United Arab Republic develop rockets.

"The German Government cannot remain indifferent to the fact that, 19 years after the fall of the Hitlerite regime that caused the destruction of millions of Jews, members of the same people are again involved in actions aimed at helping Nasser attack the state of Israel, in which the survivors of the holocaust and the destruction have gathered," Mrs. Meir said.

She asserted she was not charging West Germany with having sent the scientists to Cairo. But she said it was the only Government that could and should do all in its power to effect their return.

She said she was sympathetic with the West German Government's desire to safeguard the Constitution and to maintain democracy and the freedom of individuals.

"But," she said, "we cannot accept the view that the choice facing the Bonn Government is one between assuring the freedom of the individual and refraining from action to prevent its citizens in Egypt from aiding in the preparations."

Mrs. Jagolinzer was born in Austria, a daughter of the late Israel and Nettie Spahn and had lived in Providence for 65 years. She was the wife of Ben Jagolinzer.

Besides her husband, she is survived by four daughters, Mrs. William Botvin, Mrs. Sidney Priest and Miss Esther Jagolinzer, all of Providence, and Mrs. Milton Kline of Sharon, Mass.; a sister, Mrs. Samuel Liebowitz of New York City; two brothers, Israel and Harry Spahn, both of New York City, and seven grandchildren.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

Behind Stock Market's
'All-Time High'

We met our broker in Wall Street to review our list of stocks on a recent day when the Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks hit an all-time peak. A handful we own have been performing magnificently, moving with the average to the highest levels ever. Several are well below their record prices but comfortably above what we paid. Two are dullards which we'll dump if they don't redeem themselves soon.

Our personal financial record underlines points which cannot be overemphasized today — for signs are multiplying that individuals are returning to the market in rising numbers, prices on average are high by all historic yardsticks, the now-and-then outbursts of gambling in "overnight glamour" issues are disturbing. Specifically:

While this most widely watched market average is reflecting the general direction of stock prices, it is a far from complete index of what's happening within the market to individual stocks.

The Dow-Jones average is heavily weighted by blue chip stocks which have been leaders on the upswing. In the face of the fact that the over-all index has shattered records this month, only five of the 30 stocks have reached all-time peaks so far in May!

Today's stock market is rudely — even maddeningly — selective. Day after day, 50 to 60 stocks on the "Big Board" reach new 1964 peaks, and simultaneously 40 to 50 touch new bottoms for the year.

You can't buy an "index" and if you try, you can be violently whipsawed. Assuming you are investing — not gambling — you must, as always, buy on the basis of your most considered judgment about a corporation's earnings prospects, management, financial stability.

You can't buy a "great name" and put the shares away in confidence that it will remain a great name forever. One of the stocks in the Dow-Jones average is Anaconda. It hit its all-time peak back in 1929, its post-World War II peak back in 1956.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif. — Vikki and Jack Oakie attended the opening of Reuben's Restaurant & Delicatessen on Santa Monica Boulevard. Noticing the menu's unintentional omission of his favorite soup, Oakie gave owner Jerry Refold "my old family recipe for the most delicious borscht this side of Israel." Vikki said, "Jack just has to be the only Christian who makes his own borscht." . . . I don't get it. Steve Allen is half Jewish (on his mother's side) although he was raised as a Christian. But when Eartha Kitt beautifully sang a Yiddish song on his show, Steve didn't recognize one word, whereas other Christian guests singled out many Yiddish words they had learned. How does one deny completely the heritage of a parent by not learning something about its language, especially in the case of Allen, a brilliant and knowledgeable man? Usually, I admire and respect this guy but he hurt me.

It did my heart good when Eartha slapped down Allen's reference to the song as "foreign" by advising him in no uncertain terms that it wasn't foreign; it was Yiddish and he should learn something about it. He treated this reply with surprising lightness and indifference, whereas he usually delves into a subject on his show with educational meat. As I said, I don't get it, and I wonder how his mother, Belle Montrose, former vaudevillian, feels about it.

Anyway, as I saw it from my seat, a Negro vocalist with Jewishness in her heart set a lesson for a famous comedian with Jewishness in his blood.

JERRY LEWIS indicated at the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas, that he has finally captured the elusive quality — humility — that has avoided him for many years. Now that Jerry has discovered that he, too, is human, I predict he'll return to television sadder but wiser and make ABC-TV choke on its Madison Avenue roots.

As in other major hotels, the busy casino in the Sands is strangely quiet now that silver dollars are among the missing. Press Chief Al Freeman continues to

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY Cornerstone For Miriam

By Beryl Segal

January 9, 1907.
November 15, 1925.
May 20, 1951.
May 24, 1964.

Four dates, four milestones for Miriam. And what a distance between milestones the hospital has travelled! How it has developed in these years!

In 1907, twelve women applied for, and were granted a charter from the State of Rhode Island to operate and conduct a non-sectarian hospital in Providence. They named it the Miriam Hospital, and by that name we know it to this day.

What were their motives, and what their purposes?

Two problems were facing Jewish patients in those days.

Kosher food, and the Yiddish tongue.

Patients wanted to get the food they got at home. They wanted Kosher food. And that, they could not get any where in town. Food had to be brought from home, and it was an imposition on the hospital and a difficulty for the patients.

Patients wanted to tell the story of their ailments to the doctors. They could do it best in Yiddish. These were the days when thousands of immigrants were coming daily to our shores. The English language was as new to them as the American ways of life.

Let us not minimize these motives. Hospitals were built for lesser purposes. As a result of these we now have a hospital, that is a blessing to patients and a shining monument to the twelve women who have since gone to their eternal reward.

The second date, November 15, 1925, was the year when a group of men joined the women and bought the buildings on Parade Street. They remodeled an old boarding and maternity home and equipped it to be used as a General Hospital.

The hospital was to be a non-sectarian, inter-denominational house of healing, without regard to race, creed or color. It still is, and will forever be.

While there was no urgency of the two previous problems, namely Kosher food and language barriers, another motive was now added.

The immigrants of 1907, for whom the hospital was founded, begot sons, and these sons went to colleges, and some of them became doctors. Doctors need a hospital. A hospital is to a doctor what a workshop is to an artisan. In the hospital he can learn from older men. In a hospital he can prove himself. From the hospital his skill becomes known in the community. The Miriam gave them this opportunity.

Some of the doctors who interned and practiced at Miriam went on to become well known in their fields and valuable members on the staffs of other hospitals.

But no sooner was the Miriam established on Parade Street than it became evident to those concerned with the welfare of the hospital that newer and larger quarters would have to be provided. The demand for beds was greater than the hospital could supply.

In order to keep up with the new trends in medicine, the hospital had to install new equipment, and new equipment meant more space, and space was at a premium.

It was felt that as long as the hospital remained in the same place, it was doomed to be a second rate institution no matter how skillful the physicians were, and how efficient the staff worked, or how pleasant the atmosphere was for the patients.

A good example is the story of the whirlpool.

At that time, Physio-Therapy became the newest thing at hospitals. Patients with arthritis, fractures, poor circulation or sprains were thought to be relieved of their pain by means of Physical Therapy.

One of the machines was the Whirlpool bath. The patients immersed their aching limbs in the bath and the water was whirled around by electricity.

The hospital bought such a machine and it was duly installed in the sun parlor of the maternity ward. That was the only available space in the hospital.

But then the problem of water became apparent. Water had to be brought in buckets in order to fill the whirlpool — there were no water outlets in the sun parlor. An even greater problem was electric power. When the machine was plugged in, the entire hospital was robbed of light.

The house was not wired for such machines. To operate the whirlpool required a rewiring of the whole house.

This is one example of many others, even more exotic than this.

And so on May 20, 1951, the cornerstone of the new Miriam Hospital was laid.

The hospital had no need to justify its existence. It was accepted by the community as an important institution for the healing of the sick, a hospital sponsored by the Jewish people for the health of the entire community. The Miriam was needed, and no one questioned its purposes.

On Summit Avenue the new Miriam became a hospital in the full sense of the word. It had all the departments and services, the personnel and equipment, of a first-class hospital. The Miriam pioneered in many fields and introduced to Rhode Island many innovations.

Suffice it to say that in 1960, the executive director of the hospital, Dr. I. Herbert Scheffer, stated:

"It can be said that we have attained our ultimate capacity for the accommodation of in-patients within our present resources."

Dr. Scheffer, I might add, is the first executive director trained to administer to hospitals, and had extensive experience in the building and directing of them in the City of New York, before he came to Providence. That in itself gave the Miriam high standing among the hospitals of the state.

The hospital today, as they prepare to lay the cornerstone again for a new and greater Miriam, is in the best tradition of good hospitals in the country. Its occupancy is beyond all expectations.

Patients come from all parts of the state and from distant communities. Some of them come because the fame of a specialist attracted them to Miriam. Some come because of the facilities and the personnel that the Miriam can offer them. Others come because the Heart Association or the Cancer Society, or the Multiple Sclerosis Association has recommended the Miriam.

They come to find healing and relief. They fill every available bed.

That is really the greatest testimony to the efficacy and the purposefulness of the Miriam Hospital.

Will the cornerstone to the greater Miriam be the last milestone in the history of the hospital?

That depends on the administration and the board and the community. Medicine has many long distances to travel. The Miriam Hospital will travel with it, just as it kept pace with the Science of Medicine in the past.

Cornerstones — milestones. Never to stand still. Never to be satisfied. Always looking for new ways of service. That is the spirit of the Miriam Hospital, from its founding days in 1907 to this day in 1964.

The Lyons Den

POLITICIANS: On the dais at the Cardinal Spellman dinner last week Louis Nizer drew on his napkin a sketch of Mayor Wagner. He put a caption on it, "Vice President Wagner," and presented it to the Mayor. . . . Wagner then drew a sketch of Nizer on a napkin. And, before presenting it to the lawyer, he wrote a caption on it, "Senator Nizer."

ARTIST: Ardit Blatas' new exhibit at the Hirschl & Adler Gallery features his portraits of the masters he met when he first came to Paris — Braque, Chagall, Matisse, Picasso. He first started sketching Picasso when they both went to Perpignan, near the Spanish border, to see a bullfight. One bullfighter, past 40, was in desperate needs of funds.

Picasso remembered him as a proud and brave bullfighter. Blatas watched Picasso buy a fistful of lottery tickets, saying they were for a bullfighter, and pocket them. The fighter's wife wanted to copy down the number of the lottery tickets, but Picasso said he'd handle it.

The next week Picasso sent the man his lottery "winnings" a million francs. Thus was he able to give a brave man a handout without injury to his pride.

BUSYBODY: When Robert Moses arrived at Roosevelt Hospital for a checkup, he brought along two secretaries who, in turn, had two secretaries — all working on speeches and articles. Their clatter disturbed patients in the nearby rooms, who complained. Moses was asked to desist, or else move. The secretaries departed.

INTRODUCTION: Harry S. Truman was guest of honor at the UJA luncheon the other day, where a scholarship fund in his name was set up. He was introduced with a glowing tribute, by Jerome Hyams. Truman acknowledged the introduction: "I wish I knew that man he was talking about."

TRAGEDY: The sudden death of Carol Haney cut short a career that held promise of enduring brilliance. She came to Broadway 10 years ago, an unknown — to audition for "Pajama Game." When she left the show she was an established star. She flew 3,000 miles for this audition and read only one line.

Miss Haney's line was: "I know I'm beautiful — probably the most beautiful girl north of Keokuk, Iowa." . . . Abbott interrupted her to say, "Fine. You're hired."

Gene Kelly taught her how to choreograph a show, and before that it was Jack Cole who instructed her. She said of Cole: "Jack is a perfectionist. If he worked for

United Moes Chitim Fund Shows Slight Revenue Loss

Dear Editor:

Once again I wish to take the opportunity to report to the Community through the columns of the Jewish Herald upon the 1964 United Moes Chitim Fund campaign. For the first time since the raising of funds for Passover Assistance was started upon a community-wide basis the total sum raised viz. $5,941.70 failed to exceed that of the previous year by about $150.00.

More disturbing however than the slight loss in revenue is the fact that a substantially smaller number of persons made contributions for said purpose. Fortunately no one was hurt hereby as the demands for assistance also declined somewhat and also we were able to reduce substantially the expenses of printing and postage in connection with this year's campaign. The decline in the amount received and in the number of givers, small as it may be, is worrisome as it denotes a failure among many in our Community to appreciate an obligation to extend a helping hand at Passover to those who need assistance to observe the holidays.

This year we rendered direct assistance to approximately 437 persons who were members of 314 family units. These ranged in size from the single person, widow or widower to families of eight persons. The grants ranged from $17.00 to $75.00 for the eight day holiday period. In addition, through the services of the Festival Committee of the various ladies' aid associations of our Community, a Passover service was offered and Passover foods were distributed to the 175 inmates at the State Institutions in Cranston and in Exeter.

In addition to the above comment with respect to the smaller number of givers and the smaller amount received, two other observations on this year's campaign should be noted. The first is the surprising number of people who generally contribute and contribute liberally to all charitable and community appeals who postponed their contributions to this basis charity until it was late. The other observation concerns a relatively large number of persons who contribute religiously for Passover assistance but whose scale of giving does not take into consideration the shrinking value of the dollar and what it can buy. A prime example of this type of person is the one who gave $2.00 for Moes Chitim in 1930 and has given the same amount ever since. A moment's thought would clearly make such a person realize that their 1964 dollar probably buys less than 25¢ would have bought in 1930.

In conclusion may I once again express the thanks of the hundreds of recipients of Passover assistance to all who have contributed anything to our Passover Fund. I also wish to extend my personal thanks and the thanks of the officers and directors of the United Moes Chitim Fund to you, to Mr. Beryl Segal and particularly to Herman L. Goldberg.

Views Attempts At Legislation On School Prayers With Concern

Dear Sir:

(Rabbi Robert Layman, as chairman of the School Council of the Bureau of Jewish Education, has sent the following letter to Representative Emanuel Celler.)

Dear Congressman Celler:

The current attempts to introduce legislation that would create an amendment to the Constitution allowing the introduction of prayer recitation into the public school system are to be viewed with grave concern. We who are religious educators are aware of how impressionable young children's minds are and we strongly oppose any infringement upon the guaranteed separation of Church and State which is inherent in the First Amendment. As an editorial in the New York Times (May 10, 1964) states, "It is not up to State officials to say which prayers shall be read, if any. That is up to the individual". We wholeheartedly concur with this statement and we urge that the Judiciary Committee overrule any attempts that would introduce obligatory religious observances into the public school no matter how innocuous they may appear to be on the surface.

Certain fundamental questions arise when we consider the prospect of even the smallest breach in the wall of separation of Church and State. These questions are well articulated in the aforementioned editorial, "How is a community to decide which religion's prayer will be read — by the majority vote of the community, or in each school? Or should there be a 'non-denominational' prayer, and if so, who is to write it? Just to state such questions is to indicate the divisiveness that would result from allowing local school authorities to enter the realm of religious devotion".

On behalf of the administrators of the Jewish religious schools of Executive Director of the Jewish Family and Children's Service and to his dedicated staff without whose assistance our campaign would hardly get off the ground.

My personal thanks are also due to my fellow officers and directors of the United Moes Chitim Fund and to the officers and directors of the Jewish Family and Children's Service whose wholehearted support made our efforts successful.

May I also at this time express the hope come next year the contributors to Moes Chitim may increase both in numbers and the amount of their gifts.

Yours truly,

Edmund Wexler, Chairman

home late and thus usually be a little late for meetings or clubs. The only other minor adjustment she says she had to make was when she entered high school. She found that occasionally she would use a Jewish or Hebrew word while talking and receive a look of bewilderment in return. This problem was soon solved, and she says that her fellow students are curious about the Day School and ask her about it which gives her a rather nice feeling.

Dina, who goes to the Community Hebrew High School, although interested particularly in literature and journalism, has many other interests as well. She is feature editor of the Classical High School newspaper, the "Classical Review" and on the review staff of the "Laureate" the school literary magazine. She has played the piano since she was 9 and is particularly interested in classical music, and while at the Day School she learned to play the Chaili (recorder), a reed-like instrument.

Graduates of the Hebrew Day School are planning careers in every imaginable field. They are interested in mathematics, engineering, computers, medicine, chemistry, social work, dentistry, law, accounting, nursing, public relations, linguistics, rabbinic, etc. The Hebrew Day School which originally had only a few grades, now goes from pre-kindergarten through the ninth grade. After its move from the building on Waterman Street which had housed it for many years, a new school building was erected on Elm Grove Avenue with the help of the Rhode Island Jewish community.

that kind of life — to live with people like me."

To Shira, Judaism is a way of life. This feeling she has obviously picked up from her parents. Mrs. Keller says that it is up to the parents to offer their children Judaism — the child has the privilege to discard these additional values when he's older if he wishes.

Without Judaism, Shira says, a person is missing something very essential. The basis of Judaism is the home, but it must be continued in school. As for the extra work involved in the Day School curriculum, Shira feels that "most children don't work hard enough". If a child is presented with more work, he will be more apt to work up to his capacity — she adds, "it's amazing what a child can do, if he wants to."

Her main interest outside of Judaism is a "passion for music" — mostly classical, and Hebrew music. She plays the piano, the guitar and the chaili. During the summer she was music counselor at Camp Kennesharim, a Hebrew speaking camp.

To the question of whether she would like to go to Israel, Shira says "I'd go tomorrow." She intends to continue her studies in Biology at the Hebrew University in Israel, and perhaps to live on a Kibbutz for a while. If she could, she would like to spend her junior and senior years in Israel.

Enrolled at the University of New Hampshire where he is studying Mechanical Engineering under the sponsorship of the government, Theodore Grossman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Grossman feels that his background in German, gained at the Providence Hebrew Day School has taught him how to search for solutions to scientific problems.

In a letter, Theodore says "I feel that the Providence Hebrew Day School has given me an appreciation and a sense of pride for my religion and heritage. I also feel that my Hebrew studies, especially my Talmudic studies, at the Day School have helped me excel in science and math courses. I highly recommend the Day School to other people, and hope they will profit from it as I have."

Theodore attended the Ner Yisrael Rabbinical College in Baltimore, Md. for one year and then attended Hope High School.

He has been accepted by the Naval Base in Portsmouth, N.H., as a student-in-training, and works there during the summer. At the University he runs the radio station, is manager of the basketball team, and has been asked to become president of the Hillel organization on campus.

Arthur Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Smith, feels that "anything you learn does you good." At the Hebrew Day School he feels that he learned to study a little bit better. He spent six years at the Day School and was graduated from Classical High School in 1960.

From the standpoint of Jewishness, he feels that at the Day School one learns what it means to be a Jew, and gives one an appreciation of Jewish philosophy.

Arthur is a senior at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he is majoring in Electrical Engineering. He is a member of the Institute of Electrical Electronic Engineers. He also assists in a course of computer programming at the Boston University Medical School. His future plans include attending the M.I.T. Graduate School and continuing on to teach on the college level.

He feels that the Day School tends to produce better students because of smaller classes and more personal attention from the teachers, and the intensive educational program which teaches the students how to study.

A graduate of Simmons College in 1963 with a degree in Mathematics Education, Gloria Korn Janavitz (Mrs. Carl) is teaching emotionally disturbed children in the McLean Hospital in Belmont, Mass. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Korn, Gloria comments "I think that the double curriculum and the Hebrew background makes you work harder and prepares you for working after school. It makes elementary school more interesting." Although she feels that the intensive Hebrew education given at the Day School may be more important for a boy than a girl, she says that it certainly gives a student a greater feeling for his religion.

The records of the graduates of the Hebrew Day School — and there are many many more whose records are just as interesting and as brilliant — seem to show a greater degree of cleverness than the records of pupils of other schools. The feeling of graduates and teachers, however, is that the intensive study which is needed if a student is to complete two courses at the same time, and the personal care which can be given by teachers in small classes simply makes a child do his best.

ARNOLD BLASBALG

One of the first graduates of the day school was Arnold Blasbalg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Blasbalg. He attended the school when it first opened and went from the third through the sixth grade. He recalls that he was graduated from the school with two others, Phoebe Berger and Irwin Max.

He feels that the Day School offers a great Hebrew education which he would not have been able to get anywhere else — one learns to speak the language to understand it, to understand one's heritage, traditions and customs.

Graduated from Classical High School, magna cum laude, he is a 1962 Brown University graduate, and is presently a junior at the Boston University School of Law. He found the training which he received at the Hebrew Day School made it easier for him to study when he went on to public school and college. Because of the small classes at the school, he feels that pupils receive a great deal more attention and more help if necessary. He is a member of the School Bar Association, and belonged to the French Club and the Political Science Club at Brown University. A fellow law student with him is Hershel Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Smith, who is also a Providence Hebrew Day School graduate.

A freshman at the Stern College for Women, Shira Keller, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Morris Keller, has lived in New York since the age of 13. After her graduation from the Providence Hebrew Day School, there was no Hebrew oriented school closer which she could attend. She is working for a Bachelor of Arts degree as well as a Bachelor of Religious Education degree. To the Kellers brought up in the Hebrew tradition this was the best way of furthering her Jewish education and getting a secular education.

At 13 Shira went to the Yeshiva University High School for Girls. She says of New York that she would hate to live in New York proper because it is so busy and rushing. But "as far as Yiddishkeit is concerned," she says, "New York is 'out of this world.' I love

STEPHEN BERGER

BARBARA FEIT

Being exposed to more than one culture and a strict discipline both in school and in home work helped him to be more successful in the academic world, says Stephen Berger, an eighth grade graduate of the Providence Hebrew Day School. A pre-medical student at Columbia University, Stephen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Berger.

"I was made to work harder and think earlier," Stephen says, "and as a result I was able to get more 'out of material at hand.'"

ELLIOTT BRODSKY

MERRILL HASSENFELD

Aerodynamics Engineering is the interest of one of the earlier graduates of the Hebrew Day School. Graduated from the sixth grade, Elliott Brodsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Brodsky, went to Classical High School. A senior at Brown University, he is taking a course in aerodynamics engineering.

Scholarship alone does not interest Merrill Hassenfeld, the son of Mrs. Gertrude Hassenfeld, and the late Jack Hassenfeld. A senior at the Boston University Law School and senior editor of the Boston University Law Review, he was a member of the All-State Track team when he attended Classical High School, and a member of the track team at Brown University where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree.

BARRY DUBOVICK

Barry Dubovick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dubovick, was graduated from the Providence Hebrew Day School seven years ago. When he was in the fourth grade, he so far outdistanced his class in Hebrew studies that he threatened to become a disciplinary problem. He was withdrawn from the class and placed on his own by Rabbi Akiva Egozi, dean of the Day School. He was given individual assignments and progressed so rapidly that after two years of independent work, he was able to obtain, at the age of 11 1/2, a full scholarship to the Telshe Yeshiva in Wycliffe, Ohio, one of the Yeshivos Gedolos (The Great Yeshivas) in the United States. In addition he was allowed to skip from the sixth grade at the Providence Hebrew Day School to the eighth grade at the Yeshiva, where he was graduated from high school at the age of 15. In his final high school examination given by the state of Ohio in his English studies he placed third in the entire state. He is entering his third year at the Telshe Yeshiva Rabbinical College in September.

At 18 his ability to absorb and understand and interpret the difficult passages that encompass the body of the Hebrew traditions is such that his teachers have predicted that he will be one of the Gaonim, a religious and scholarly light of this generation.

COLLEGE HEAD RETIRES
CHICAGO — Rabbi Oscar Z. Fasman, president of the Hebrew Theological College in Skokie, Ill., since 1946, last week announced his retirement, effective Oct. 1. His resignation was accepted with regret by the board of directors. By unanimous vote, Rabbi Fasman was named as president emeritus.

WATER CRISIS
ROME — An Israeli specialist on arid zone research, Dr. Rueven Katz, warned that Israel would reach a critical point in water needs within 15 years unless all known methods, including desalination, were applied to "stretch" present water resources.

'Distinctiveness Of Culture' Causes Continuing Alienation Of Jews, Says Sociologist

NEW YORK — Dr. Robert M. MacIver, president of the New School for Social Research, suggested last week that American Jews are partly responsible for what he called their continuing alienation from the rest of American society.

Part of the problem, he said, arises from "the distinctiveness of the Jewish Culture and the conditions this imposes on certain forms of social intercourse," including the Saturday Sabbath, food taboos and a reluctance to intermarry.

Dr. MacIver told the annual conference of the American Council for Judaism that these difficulties would be less severe "were it not for the secretly entertained conviction that overtures for more social brotherhood would be unwelcomed by the majority groups."

He cited two other ways in which, he said, the Jewish community has tended to hamper its integration into society as a whole:

"The training for minority living in Jewish schools and homes which, while properly cultivating group values, may have a tendency to instill counter-prejudice because of the impression that Jewish culture is both separate from and incompatible with the prevailing culture."

The establishment of separatist organizations for the pursuit of interests that are shared within the inclusive society. Certainly there is no need for a separate organization of, say, Jewish chiropractors or chemists or engineers or dentists or social workers."

Dr. MacIver, a sociologist, was retained 15 years ago by a group of Jewish organizations to assess their work. The result was a 75,000-word report called "The Jewish Community Relations Agencies," published in 1951.

At a panel discussion of Zionist and United States politics, Donald R. Heath, former Ambassador to Lebanon and to Saudi Arabia, called on Israel to take unilateral action to solve the Palestinian refugee problem.

Urges Steps Toward Peace

"Some steps toward peace must promptly be taken in this dangerous situation," he said. "Only Israel, victorious in her wars and with a strong and stable government, could now undertake the first step toward solution of these problems."

Mr. Heath criticized both Israel and the Arab states for their conduct toward each other — the Arab states for "their refusal to negotiate," and Israel for "her failure to provide some compensation for refugee property."

Leonard Sussman, the council's executive secretary, denied that it had barred Gershon Jacobson, a reporter for The Jewish Day-Morning Journal, a Yiddish-language daily, from council meetings.

Mr. Sussman conceded that Mr. Jacobson had been told he could have no texts of speeches until after they had actually been delivered. Advance texts were supplied to other newspapermen so that they could meet early deadlines.

Excessive speed continued to be the number-one killer on the nation's highways in 1963. More than 14,000 traffic deaths were directly attributable to speeding.

Broken Home Brings Teenage Problems

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "What advice would you give to a boy with a special problem? His mother and father are separated. One has remarried. The boy is living with one parent, and is unhappy. He knows that he will be just as unhappy living with the other parent. He has lost interest in school and in other activities, everything except going steady with a very nice girl. In danger of "flunking out" of school, he considered entering military service, then rejected the idea. His parents are still in favor of this, saying it would probably 'straighten him out.' What do you think?"

OUR REPLY: There can be no real substitute for a happy home.

New Israel Chief Rabbi To Visit United States

NEW YORK — The newly elected Chief Rabbi of Israel, 78-year-old Rabbi Iser Jehuda Unterman, will arrive in this country next month to participate in the celebration of the 16th anniversary of the establishment of Israel. The state was proclaimed in May, 1948.

On June 17 Rabbi Unterman will address a dinner meeting of the Religious Zionists of America in the Americana Hotel and on June 23 will speak at the annual convention of the Rabbinical Council of America in Fallsburg, N.Y. He will return to Israel before the end of the month.

Additional events marking the anniversary have been scheduled in Jewish communities over the country during the summer and fall. Joseph Ratner, chairman of the board of the American-Israeli Religious and Cultural Society, is chairman of the 16th anniversary celebration committee.

AD MAN OFFERS JOB CHART FOR CAREERS AFTER AGE 65

A retired advertising man, with a little more savvy about the world than some, has come up with a "How To Get A Job" chart for various categories of retired men.

His name is John W. Blanchard, a New York ad agency man, who now has his third retirement job. His chart:

ADVERTISING MEN — Be a press agent for a large shopping center that is just getting off the ground (Blanchard's first job); an ad salesman for a small magazine or newspaper that is not fussy about employees over 65; an editor of an employee magazine published by an institution or an association, most of which do not stick too strongly to the age-65 limit.

MEN OF THE ARMED SERVICES — Be a special assistant to the president of a manufacturing concern, if you are a colonel or better, and if the company sells anything to the Armed Services; a technical consultant to any manufacturer who makes for the Armed Services any equipment in which you have specialized.

RETAIL STORE MEN — Be a sales consultant to a major supplier or merchandise to your particular type of store—if you have been at an executive level; if you have been below executive level recognize your experience is not very salable and seek a position in the state or regional office of your church, your fraternal organization, your civic club, your college, or any welfare, charitable or educational society.

CIVIL SERVICE WORKERS —

Be an expeditor for any business concern that has business with the government, provided you are fully familiar with government red tape and know how to find what guy down which corridor makes the decisions.

INDUSTRIAL PLANT MEN — Be the Heaven-sent angel to the buyers of whatever your plant makes—as the fellow who knows how to keep it running. From the company that buys locomotives to the housewife who buys a clothes washer there is almost constant demand for a repair man.

Mr. Blanchard says that probably 80 per cent of retired men can get a job if they will give a few hours of study to just what they have to sell, where they can sell it . . . and then use a little sense of timing in their approach. "The shopping centers and the home projects for the elderly are natural right now," he explains. "So is the repair service thing—we've filled this country with home appliances and automobiles that almost nobody can, or will, fix without waiting a week."

"While the fellow who knows his way around government offices is worth his salt to any business, and will continue to be as the complexities of government grow."

"And this War on Poverty business is going to open up all sorts of secretarial and promotional jobs on the local level as welfare organizations move to get in on the money. . . ."

New GOLDEN YEARS 36-page booklet now ready. Send 50¢ in coin (no stamps), to Dept. CSFS, Box 1672, Grand Central Station, New York 17, N. Y.

By C. D. Smith

It is distressing to see a home "break up" when children are involved because it takes away from them a sense of security and belonging. It deprives the teenager, at a critical time in his life, of needed parental supervision and guidance. Sometimes it forces him to choose one parent in preference to another. It forces other decisions which the teenager is not prepared or willing to make.

The best thing a teenager can do is face the issue squarely. For the sake of his own future, the teenager should finish high school—and begin to make some plans of his own. There is time later for military service and when this time comes, the boy can "join up" without the sense of "running away" from trouble and obligations.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

START: George Price, the vaudeville and musical comedy performer who suffered a fatal heart attack last Sunday, also was a member of the Stock Exchange for 30 years. He once told me how he managed to earn and save enough to buy a seat on the exchange.

When Al Jolson was Broadway's No. 1 star, he refused to sign with the Shuberts for a new show. They therefore signed Price in his stead, to a long-term contract. No specific show was mentioned — only salary, travel expenses and a term of years. When Jolson and the Shuberts were reconciled, Price refused to step aside. He insisted on the fulfillment of his contract.

He was sent to perform in dingy theaters in small cities, sometimes traveling by baggage car. He often worked in blackface with quick-change roles — and a dressing-room on the top floor. He was given billing, as was his due, but in the tiniest letters.

George Price obviously could never be discouraged. The Shuberts finally settled the contract. Price had enough to be able to afford a new career in Wall Street.

It gets a workout as my indispensable standard for quick reference, such as the numbers of religious congregations in the U.S. in 1960: Jewish, 5,500,000; Roman Catholics, 42,104,899; Baptists, 21,374,126; Methodists, 12,585,394; Lutherans, 8,101,306; Presbyterians, 4,277,947; and Protestant Episcopalians, 3,444,265.

Bonn Government Ousts Charges Of Arab Aid

BONN — The Government dismissed a British press report contending that West German scientists had helped President Gamal Abdel Nasser achieve a "breakthrough" in his alleged plan to make the United Arab Republic a minor nuclear power.

The report said two dozen West German scientists in President Nasser's "permanent employ" had made the breakthrough in the field of light, easily transportable missiles containing limited quantities of radioactive material.

An official Government statement on the report said:

"Precise investigations on both the German and allied sides have produced not the slightest grounds to believe that German scientists are engaged on development of nuclear weapons in Egypt."

Government officials said that of about 500 German scientists and technicians now working in Egypt, 350 were engaged on aircraft production and the rest on rocket development. They said that as far as was known no German nuclear scientist was in Egypt.

So You Want to Retire in Israel?

THE network of Batei Avot—homes for parents—established in 1952, by Mishan, the Histadrut welfare agency, has grown to five establishments accommodating 800 elderly men and women who have retired from economic activity, according to a report brought to America by Zev Weiner, director of Mishan. A plan to triple the number of living places in the near future has been approved by the Histadrut Executive, which delegated Mr. Weiner to the United States for the purpose of seeking financial backing as well as to recruit Americans who wished to settle in Israel in their later years.

The expansion program is prompted by the increase of the number of workers facing retirement. Membership in pension funds rose from 1958 to 1962 by 27%, while the number of retirees increased by 134%. There were 3,527 Histadrut members over 65 in 1958; today there are 17,600 in that age group.

The Batei Avot are modern communities where retired workers can spend their days in comfort, dignity and meaningful social and cultural activity. The Mishan homes cost the residents only a third of the monthly maintenance charges made by private establishments. Admission fees are likewise lower in the Mishan homes.

A growing number of Americans, particularly members of the Farband Labor Zionist Order, have settled in Mishan homes in recent years. Other friends of Histadrut are also eligible. Although presently the waiting list is long, the expansion program will provide 1,600 additional places, of which about 400 will be reserved for American and Canadian applicants.

Mishan residents have a choice between two types of Homes—the individual type and the collective. In the former, residents have more privacy, do their own cooking, if they like, and engage in light housekeeping. For more elderly and infirm persons, the collective style is more suitable, as meals are provided as well as complete housekeeping.

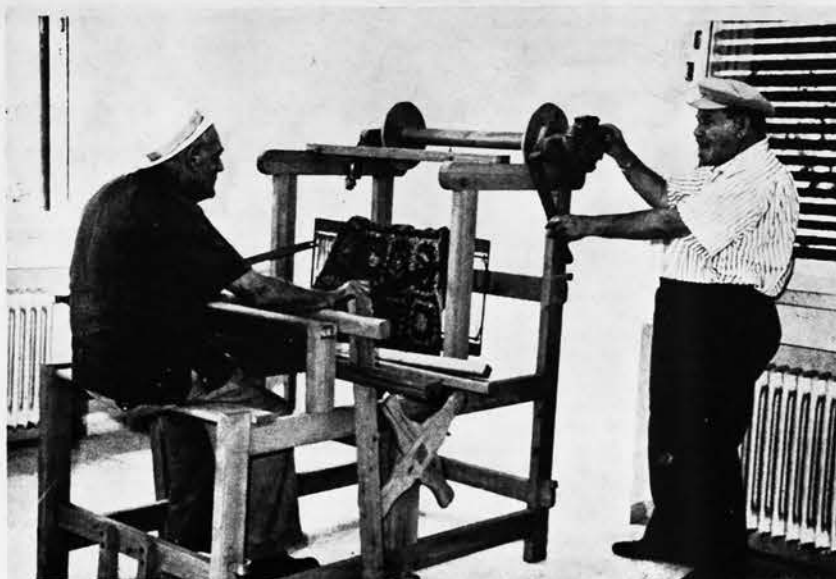

The five existing Homes are in the Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa area, and a sixth one is planned for Tivon, in the hills above Haifa. When the expansion program is completed, each locality will have individual and collective type units available, thus enriching the community atmosphere.

Kupat Holim maintains a free clinic at each Home, but hospital care is available under an insurance plan based on the regular Histadrut fee schedule.

Several dozen Americans already live in the Batei Avot, and find it financially feasible even on social security income.

Admission fees for the individual type home are $2,500 for a single person and $3,500 for a married couple. Monthly maintenance charges are $25 and $35 respectively. For the collective type Home, admission fees are $1,000 per person, double occupancy, and $2,000 for a married couple. Monthly maintenance, which includes full board, is $85 per person, or $160 per couple.

The Batei Avot are far from being islands of isolation. Mishan is aware that the years of retirement can be exciting ones, full of activity and self-expression. Facilities are available at each Home for recreation, hobbies, cultural events, and trips are made to various parts of Israel.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, the union's president, said this would go into operation this fall at Warwick, N.Y. Experimental programs, he said, will be aimed at developing Jewish life in the "areas of worship, Jewish thought and religious action."

Testify On Behalf Of 200,000 Jews

BONN — More than 50 Jewish leaders from all over the world testified in the West German Parliament recently in behalf of 200,000 Jews who are ineligible for indemnification under current law.

The issue of amending Bonn's indemnification law has been before Parliament for years. The problem facing West German lawmakers is to decide how Jews who were permitted to leave Communist nations in Eastern Europe since 1953 are to be compensated for their suffering under the Nazi occupation. Laws now stipulate that claims for compensations are valid only if made up to October 1, 1953.

Bonn has generally agreed to compensate Jews who came to the West after that date and has suggested a 600 million mark ($150 million) fund to be used by Jewish claims organizations. Jewish representatives have contended that two to three billion marks are needed.

NEW YORK — Film producer Otto Preminger was honored last week by the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York for using his motion pictures "to create greater understanding and compassion among all races and peoples."
