French Government Tightens Security At Orly Airport

PARIS: Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski announced a further reinforcement of security measures at Orly airport in the hope of thwarting terrorist attacks like the one last Sunday.

Under the security order, the airport's observation terraces were closed to visitors, the contingent of guards assigned to the airport was increased to 800 and a higher perimeter fence was ordered.

Earlier, the guards were increased to 750 and sharpshooters were stationed on an upper observation area during the arrival and departure of planes of certain airlines.

Security measures, Mr. Poniatowski said, will also be bolstered at Le Bourgat and Charles de Gaulle Airports and the new antiterrorist measures will be gradually extended to all French airports.

The French Foreign Ministry said there was no intention of seeking the extradition of the three terrorists who carried out the Orly attack on Sunday. They were arrested in Baghdad, Iraq.

The three men wounded eight people seriously during the attack at Orly and held 10 others at gunpoint for 17 hours in an airport washroom. They released the hostages in return for an Air France Boeing 707 and a crew to fly them out of France.

The pilot, Jean Vignaud, who along with the two other crew members flew the plane back to Paris said that the leader of the terrorists was an Algerian and that the others were a Palestinian and a Lebanese.

He said that they had wanted to go to Jidda, Saudi Arabia, or Aden, Southern Yemen, and had been sorely disappointed to learn that these and other Arab countries refused to permit them to land.

The Iraqi Embassy here issued a statement denouncing the three terrorists, saying they "in no way serve the Palestinian cause."

The statement said the Air France plane had been allowed to land at Baghdad only because it was low on fuel and the crew was exhausted. The permission followed a plea on behalf of the crew by the French Ambassador, Pierre Cerles.

Interior Minister Poniatowski who spoke at a news conference, suggested that governments of the world agree on a code for the punishment of terrorists.

The courts of countries where the attacks take place, he said, ought to be able to judge "these terrorist-assassins" themselves.

The Interior Minister did not specifically demand that the three men being held in Iraq be returned to France for trial. But the spokesman here for the Palestine Liberation Organization, Ezzedine Kalak, said in an interview that his group would call for the "extradition" of the gunmen.

"But," he added, "you must understand that we cannot always get them handed over."

Israeli Army Units Intensify Campaign Against Guerrillas

JERUSALEM: Israeli Army units on the Lebanese border have intensified a campaign in recent weeks to carry their battle against the Palestinian guerrillas to the Lebanese side of the frontier.

The Israelis are using almost daily artillery fire, commando sweeps and night raids against selected villages to create what army sources here describe as a "military curtain" north of the border through which the guerrilla bands will have to pass to reach the frontier and the Israeli settlements to the south.

The objective is to keep the guerrilla units off balance by constant harassment and, if possible, to confine the shooting to the area of the "curtain."

Israeli soldiers in armored personnel carriers have been rolling across the border nearly every night on search-and-destroy operations in several areas of southern Lebanon. Special demolition squads have been sent in to destroy buildings where guerrillas are believed to have taken shelter and to blow up bridges just north of the border. Last week, for the first time in more than two years, Israeli tanks were used to shell suspected guerrilla targets.

Guerrillas Forced Eastward
As a result the guerrillas have been forced to abandon the rolling terrain along the central border region and to concentrate their units in the more protected mountainous areas to the east. This region was the target of most of the Israeli operations last week.

The new Israeli strategy of carrying the battle across the border seems to have succeeded in its principal objective so far. Despite repeated attempts by the guerrillas, who have also stepped up their operations, no Palestinian squads have managed to penetrate any of the Israeli settlements for more than a month.

The last successful penetration was on December 18, when a band of Palestinians broke through the defense perimeter of the Hanita kibbutz, near the Mediterranean coast, and wounded one civilian.

The aggressive new Israeli strategy has not been without casualties, however. Twenty soldiers have been wounded and one killed so far this month in battles with guerrillas in the "curtain" area. The Arab casualties have been higher, but no figures are available here.

Nor has the strategy been without controversy in Israel. Most commentators have applauded the army's stepped-up tactics. But Hanah Zemer, the respected and influential editor of Davar, the Labor party paper, has questioned whether the results justify the effort and risks involved.

"The answer is probably 'yes, but—'" she wrote. "By continuous (Continued on page 16)

Aliens Must Report Addresses By Jan. 31

Frank P. Castelnovo, officer in charge of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service in Providence, has urged all aliens in Rhode Island, who have not yet done so, to fill out alien address report forms before January 31 at the nearest Immigration & Naturalization Service Office or local post offices.

Mr. Castelnovo pointed out that the Immigration and Nationality Act requires all citizens to report their addresses to the government each January. This law does not apply to aliens here in diplomatic status nor to those foreign representatives of international organizations of which the United States is a member such as the United Nations. The parents or legal guardian of an alien child under 14 years of age must submit an address report for such alien child. Any alien who is temporarily absent from the United States in January must report his address within ten days after his return.

The alien may go to any United States post office or any Immigration and Naturalization Service Office and ask for Address Report Card, Form I-53. When he has filled in all the items, he should sign the card, place a stamp on the reverse side which contains a pre-printed address and drop it in any mail box.

MAY DISAPPEAR

PARIS: The French weekly news magazine Nouvel Observateur reports that 10 percent of the French population believes that the State of Israel may disappear in 1975. However, only three percent of the population favor such a development and 26 percent would fear the outcome of such a development. Sixty-nine percent said they did not believe Israel's disappearance was feasible in 1975.

Israel Asks United States For More Than $2 Billion

WASHINGTON: Israel has asked the United States for more than $2-billion in economic and military assistance for the next fiscal year, over three times what she currently receives from Washington in aid, American and Israeli officials said.

About $1.5-billion of the request is for military aid, either in credits or outright grants, reflecting Israel's heightened concern about a possible outbreak of a new Middle East war.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon discussed the unusually high request with President Ford, Secretary of State Kissinger and Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger during his recent visit here and said he had gotten "satisfactory results."

A state Department official said the Administration was studying the Israeli request—the largest ever made by Israel, except for the $2.2-billion in military aid allocated to her in the aftermath of the October, 1973, war—but that no firm decisions have been made.

In the last year, the United States has pledged to give aid to Israel a high priority, in part as an inducement to persuade her to take a flexible attitude toward further negotiations with her Arab neighbors.

Congress so far has not only supported the Administration's request but, in the current aid-authorization period that runs through June 30, has increased the amount allocated for Israel.

Mr. Kissinger, who is seeking a new Egyptian-Israeli accord on the Sinai front, has agreed to visit Israel as part of another Middle East trip and has sent Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts back to Cairo to seek the assent of President Anwar el Sadat.

American officials, meanwhile, are tentatively planning on a Kissinger trip to the Middle East about Feb. 17 for a week or so, to seek agreement on the scope of the next accord.

The dimensions of the Israeli request can be measured by the fact that the entire foreign aid authorization for the current fiscal year amounts to $2.7-billion.

Of that amount, Israel has been authorized $324.5-million in supporting economic assistance and $300-million in military credits.

Food and Resettlement

In addition, Israel receives $40-million to help resettle Soviet Jews and $9-million in long-term food at concessionary rates. All these make a total of about $674-million. Of the military credits, up to $100-million in debts can be "forgiven"—a euphemism meaning the credit is an outright grant.

For fiscal 1976, the Israelis are asking $1.5-billion in military aid. The exact amount in credits and grants has not been specified, but the Israelis would like as much as possible to be in grants.

They have requested about $250-million either in concessionary food sales or in other aid to help in importing commodities.

The Israelis would also like to receive supporting assistance at about this year's level of $324.5-million. They also would like additional help for resettling the Soviet Jews, the amount depending on the number of Jews permitted to emigrate to Israel.

Austerity Move Cited

American officials said that the Israeli request not only reflected the concern in Israel over a possible renewal of fighting, but the financial plight that produced an emergency austerity program in November.

The officials said this was not a one-time request. The Israelis have made it clear that they intend to ask for $1.5-billion in military assistance not only for the fiscal year beginning July 1, but for the next two fiscal years as well.

The Israelis considered asking their supporters on Capitol Hill to press for a $45.5-billion authorization in military aid over three years, but were advised that such a large sum would cause them problems, given the recession in this country. They were advised

Asks End To Bonn, Israel Special Relationship Of Past

Bonn: The Secretary General of the Free Democratic Party believes that West Germany's "special relationship" with Israel has become obsolete and should be replaced by a relationship based on the democratic institutions the two countries hold in common. Martin Bangemann, who just returned from a visit to Israel, said he discussed this and other points of German-Israeli relations with Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon.

Bangemann also said that West Germany "should take a more realistic attitude toward the Palestine Liberation Organization." He said that while Israel was justified in rejecting any international recognition of the PLO as long as Yasir Arafat refuses to recognize Israel, "a word of clarification from Arafat" on this subject would ensure the PLO of observer status at the planned European-Arab dialogue on future relations with Israel.

Regarding West Germany's special relationship with the Jewish State, stemming from the Nazi past, Bangemann said that "a moral obligation to maintain a special relationship based on the past" was "inadequate and fragile." He said efforts should be made to put German-Israeli policy on the basis of what the two countries had in common, such as similar democratic constitutions and support for Israel's right to exist. The maintenance of special relations was "correct and reasonable" in the past but in the future this could become merely a "hollow phrase," Bangemann said.

Rostow Claims UN Resolutions Are Illegal

WASHINGTON: Eugene Rostow, former Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs in the Johnson Administration, has claimed that the two pro-Palestinian resolutions adopted by the UN General Assembly are illegal under the UN Charter and conflict with the only legal and historic definition of Palestine in modern times — that given by the League of Nations Mandate in 1922.

Speaking at a press conference during the meeting of the Coalition for Democratic Majority, Rostow, a former Dean of the Yale Law School, said the Assembly resolutions have "absolutely no legal or political effect" on Security Council Resolutions 242 and 388 which "remain the law." He said that during the life of the League mandate given Britain, "the word Palestine meant the territories of what are now Jordan and Israel and the lands in dispute between them. This is the only possible meaning that world politics and international law can give to the term Palestine and Palestinians.

remarks. According to some of the callers, this graffiti began to appear about the time that PLO leader Yasir Arafat addressed the United Nations General Assembly.

A spokesman for the Transit Police Department said that, "Action will be taken to correct the situation. We are going to track down the location of this train car and clean it up." He also said the transit police will make a concerted effort to clean up other anti-Semitic graffiti, "as we are doing with graffiti in general."

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

What 1975 Will Mean To Your Pocketbook

What will 1975 mean to you—as an individual consumer, jobseeker, jobholder, borrower, saver, investor in stocks, user of energy, taxpayer?

It will start out as the most miserable year in the entire generation since World War II—but it should end better than it is beginning. This brightening can be only a guess, however, for it assumes that, despite intense pressures, there will be no military catastrophe or breakdown in the world monetary system.

If these assumptions are warranted, there are your more specific "pocketbook" prospects:

(1) As a typical consumer, your cost of living will continue to rise relentlessly—but the good news is that the pace of rise should become considerably less intolerable than in 1974.

Against the slump in the economies of most of the Western world, the law of supply and demand must become more operative, and downward price trends already apparent in many raw materials and crucial commodities must be translated into prices at the retail counter. With any decent luck on crops, the upsurge in food prices should abate in the second half of the year. With evidence growing that producers of other basic raw materials cannot form cartels similar to that formed by the oil producers, declines in these prices must slow down prices of many finished goods to us.

The double-digit inflation which cursed us throughout 1974 should become single-digit inflation in 1975. The pocketbook pinch will remain but it won't be so excruciating.

(2) As a new job-seeker, you'll find the market very tough to crack, particularly if you are inexperienced, young, or over 45 years of age, a member of a minority without special skills.

(3) And as a jobholder, you'll find the pressures increasing to improve your productivity and your striving for excellence—key secrets to a return to economic stability in our land.

Unemployment well may break the postwar peak of 7.9 per cent set more than a quarter-century ago in the recession of 1948-49. It's most improbable that the rate will fall rapidly, even if the economic recovery is a lot stronger than appears plausible. And even this won't reflect the millions working part-time because they can't find full-time jobs or the huge numbers (of women particularly) who will drop out of the work force because they are utterly discouraged.

(4) As a borrower, you'll find it easier and a bit cheaper to get loans, but that's about all.

Interest rates cannot drop much so long as the inflation rate remains so high, because lenders are understandably reluctant to tie up (Continued on page 10)

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Sabbath Eve in Miami

By BERYL SEGAL

Each year, around New Year time, we visit our children in the Miami area. And each time we read of Rabbi David Raab's prediction of things to come during the coming year.

According to the Miami Herald, the most popular newspaper in Southern Florida, the Rabbi's predictions are over 60 per cent accurate. The Orthodox Rabbi speaks at Temple Beth Solomon, and the newspapers record his annual "Looking at the Year Ahead." And people read it with great interest.

Among the things that Rabbi Raab correctly predicted last year were:

1. The admission of Red China to the United Nations.
 2. The Yom Kippur War between the Arabs and Israel.
 3. The resignation of Golda Meir as Prime Minister of Israel.
 4. The placing of a man on the moon.
 5. The awarding of the Nobel Prize for peace to Dr. Henry Kissinger.
- This year's predictions include such things as:
1. The resignation of Henry Kissinger.
 2. Patty Hearst, the now famous heiress to the Hearst family fortune, who has been missing for almost a year, will return to her home.
 3. The Miami Dolphins, the pride of Floridians, will not go to the Super Bowl in 1975 just as they did not make it in the year 1974.
 4. Casino gambling will not be legalized in Miami although there is a Casino Gambling lobby which has advocated the passing of a bill to legalize it in the state for many years.
 5. There will be a new Pope in Rome, and in general the Vatican will go in a more liberal direction than it has until now.
 6. There will be a change of leaders in Red China and in Formosa; both of the Presidents in these countries are old men.
 7. A cure will be found for viral cancer during the year.

Talking of predictions, Rabbi Maxwell Berger, Conservative, observed that this year might well see the end of Democracy in the world.

The new century was ushered in with high hopes for Democracy. The age of Monarchy had ended and the advent of Democracy was to inaugurate an era of equality, justice and peace among nations.

But, alas, it was not to be. Fascism, Nazism and Communism and wars among nations have thrived instead. Democracy is shrinking in the world, said Rabbi Berger.

The tendency, however, can be reversed by a united effort of the democratic peoples of the earth, and by the rise of "giant leaders in democracy," the Rabbi said.

As against this dire prediction of Rabbi Maxwell Berger, a ray of hope for the world was held up by one Rabbi in his New Year's sermon.

Rabbi Leon Kronisch, one of Miami's most famous communal leaders, and an ardent Zionist who is not content with words only, but who works for every effort for Israel, took heart from the pages of the New York Times and from Time magazine. Both of these publications have published leading articles on the subjects of Prayer and the Bible.

Dr. Kronisch of Temple Beth Shalom, Reform, sees in these articles an indication that "the Eternal Truths of Judaism" are valid for our troubled times as they were valid for the millenia in the past.

The Time magazine examines again the stories in the Bible and concludes that the moral values they contain are to be explained in modern terms, and that they are as relevant today as they were the day they were revealed to mankind.

And Rabbi Joseph B. Narot of Temple Israel, Reform, was elated by the decision of the French court that it was not the Jews who were to blame for the crucifixion of Jesus but the Romans who were the rulers in Israel at that time.

The Rabbi sees in that decision of the court a "Religious Enlightenment" that deserves to be applauded.

The court decision to which Rabbi Narot refers is, of course, the famous case of the priest versus a lawyer who wrote a book proving that the crucifixion of Jesus was not because he preached differently from the Rabbis but because he was the leader of a sect which was against the Romans. The priest took the lawyer to court and the court decided for the lawyer and the accusing priest was fined one dollar for defaming the reputation of the lawyer-author. The book in the meantime got a boost in sales, thanks to the court decision.

There are some sixty old synagogues, temples and "shtiblech" in Greater Miami and wherever you stay for vacation you can, if you wish, visit any of them on a Friday night. You will be welcome there. Most of the worshippers are tourists like yourself . . .

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

THE MISHNAH AND ITS LAWS

By JACOB NEUSNER

(Dr. Jacob Neusner is professor of religious studies at Brown University, and the author of numerous scholarly books and articles. His most recent book is Invitation to the Talmud: A Teaching Book (Harper & Row, N.Y., 1973).

Section Four: "Damages"

We eat. We live from day to day. We create families. And families live together in society. They bump up against one another. They hurt one another, damage one another's property, and come into conflict with one another. What is that deep sense of order, balance, wholeness which governs the conflict between individuals? That is the natural next problem, and it is dealt with in the fourth division of the Mishnah, which is called — given the nature of the human heart and the duality of human relationships — "Damages." For when people come into contact, they commonly come into conflict. And it is conflict, aggression, and property rights which have to be worked out in an orderly way.

Curiously, it is at this point that the Rabbis of the Mishnah introduce how we transfer property from one person to another, how we adjudicate conflicting claims of all sorts. I suppose the reason took is that they recognized, account of, and meant even to sanctify that "base" but natural component of everyone's heart: owning things, property. And, since families are built upon homes and possessions which one generation means to assemble for the benefit of the next, it is natural that after we attend to the basic building block of society — the family and the woman who makes the home — we turn to the dynamic relationships within society: property, damages of persons and property, and the like.

This is the point at which what you understand by "law" and what Mishnah gives us as halakah come together. If you were to go to law school, you would study a great deal about torts and damages, property and the transfer of property, the rights of individuals to own and to dispose of the fruit of their labor, not to mention the way courts are set up and how they do their business (in the Mishnah, Tractate Sanhedrin), oaths in court and oaths for other purposes, and the like.

There is nothing surprising here except for one fact: To Judaism, all of this is part of Torah, a matter of religion. Indeed, if you study in a yeshivah, it is likely that one of the first talmudic tractates you will learn will be selected from this fourth division of the Mishnah. And the reason is that holiness is not merely rite, ritual, or "taboo" — something in our minds and imagination — but, especially, holiness governs the conduct of everyday life, of law in the commonplace practical sense.

The Fifth and Sixth Sections

That fact is so obvious that we may proceed forthwith from the most obvious to the least obvious, from the first four divisions of the Mishnah to the last two, one on the "Sacrifices" and how they are to be offered, the other on "Purity" and impurity.

The fifth division takes up those many biblical laws on how God is served through sacrifice. What the Rabbis try spell out the deeper meanings of those laws. Obviously, we could compose many tractates for our modern Mishnah on the service of God through rite. We should have a tractate on conduct in the synagogue or temple. We should want a tractate on prayer, on the organization of our service of worship. Those who construct "creative services" may want to figure out some logic, some order, for their work: On the Sabbath, one play a guitar with five strings; when singing Haskivenu, we do not use trumpets but only violins.

And then there is that mysterious division, the sixth division of the Mishnah on purities. To understand the dynamics of these laws, we turn first to an analogy. There are things which we cannot see but which we know are present. Take, for instance, atomic radiation. If you were to go into an area contaminated by radiation, you might see nothing and feel nothing, but that does not mean you are not affected. You are contaminated; and, if you do not wash or wear protective clothing against severe radiation, you become very sick and may die.

If you want to know about Aliyah, ask the people who used to live next door.

You want to know all about Aliyah. How do you find out? Whom do you ask?

Since 1967, nearly 35,000 Jews from all over the United States and Canada have gone on Aliyah and made Israel their home. They came from communities both large and small. Some of them from your very neighborhood.

Ask them. From February 23 to March 23, some of them are coming back to tell you what it's like for an American living in Israel. They will tell you why they went and why they are staying. They'll tell you how they built a home, found a job, and were integrated into the mainstream of Israeli life. And they can tell it to you like no one else can. From personal experience. Because it's one thing to get the bare facts and quite another to hear the personal story behind them.

Take this opportunity to find out what life is like for an American in Israel. From the people who know. The people who used to live next door.

The time is now.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

Dissimilar Funds Achieve Similar Results

Q: I am a 32-year-old attorney with a gross income of $50,000. Recently, I started on a Keogh plan, investing $60 monthly in Keystone S-4 and $40 in Keystone B-2. Should I continue with these two funds, increase my monthly investment or change to another fund? P.W.

A: If you are in the position to afford it, it would be to your advantage to increase the amount of income you are sheltering from tax through a Keogh plan. As for your two funds, an interesting fact emerges when you compare their long-term performance records — despite their disparate investment objectives their results are very close. While B-2, the bond fund, has plodded along on an unspectacular course, S-4, a low-priced common stock fund, has bounced around like a yo-yo. Yet, in the decade through 1973, S-4 was up 54% in NAV, while B-2 rose 57%. Neither fund did as well as the Standard & Poor's 500 Average, which increased 80%.

Despite these funds' below-average performances, there are some cogent reasons for retention. B-2 offers a high yield, currently close to 10% and protection of capital in declining markets — in the 1973-74 period B-2 dropped 7.8% versus a 25% drop in the S&P Average. Conversely, S-4's record in bear markets is poor. In the 1973-74 period, this fund declined almost 80%. Recovery potential is equally dynamic. In the 1970-72 market, S-4 rose 91% and in the month of October, 1974, it jumped 20%. Additional contributions to Keogh could be invested through one of the good quality, no-load growth funds, such as David L. Babson Investments or Johnson Mutual.

Q: We have found certificates for 500 shares of Goldfield Somerset Mining Company, dated 1907. Where may I find out the present status of these very old stock certificates? J.K.

A: Your best bet is to write to R. M. Smythe & Co., 170 Broadway, NYC, New York 10038. This firm specializes in tracing appraising securities of obsolete and defunct companies and will track down any information on the value or lack of it for the certificates you have unearthed. There is a nominal fee for the service.

Pennwalt For Yield And Safety

Q: What stock would you advise for someone nearing retirement? I am interested in a safe stock with a good dividend. J.S.

A: In the past three years, Pennwalt Corp. (NYSE) has vastly strengthened its business. As a result, the dividend has been raised twice in the past three quarters to $1.36 a share annually and currently provides a yield of over 8%. Furthermore, because of its very low P-E ratio, the stock has limited downside risk and therefore seems ideally suited to your investment goals.

One of the favorable aspects in this situation has been the buildup in working finances — helped in 1974 by significant tax savings. The recent change to LIFO inventory accounting, while penalizing net by about 9% saved around $4 million in taxes. Also, an acquisition brought additional tax savings from depletion. Now favored by good price-cost relationships, operations are strong in the company's three broad areas of business. Earnings should have reached $2.75 per share in 1974 and management aims to double that figure by 1979, for a 15% annual growth rate.

Please explain the newspaper quotations for Treasury Bills. Where do you buy the ones a trade on the secondary resale market? A.L.

A: To the best of my knowledge, newspaper quotes for Treasury Bills are given on an annualized discount basis. Thus, in your paper, the first item you would read (moving from left to right) is 1-23, 2-13, 4-10, etc. These are the month and day on which these particular bills mature. The next two figures — 7.55 6.81 — are the bid and ask discount (unless otherwise noted). The discount is stated on a 360-day basis or a bank discount basis. The difference between the bill's face value and price you pay is the discount. Some, but not all newspapers, also include the change in the quote from the previous day, which would appear as +.01 or -.07, etc. A final figure, not always given, is the equivalent bond yield. After initial offering, Treasury Bills trade over-the-counter. These previously offered Bills may be purchased through bond dealers and most brokers.

Computing Declining Profits

Q: My husband will retire this year and we think this might be a good time to put extra funds into stocks. We like Honeywell, Inc. (NYSE). What do you think of its prospects? J.S.

A: While I agree with your idea, I do not concur with the stock you have chosen to implement your plan. Despite the sharply depressed level at which Honeywell is trading, I do not consider the shares attractive for investment at this time. Honeywell, an old line manufacturer of commercial and home heating controls, ventured into the computer business 20 years ago. Internal expansion, as well as the takeover in 1970 of General Electric's computer division (81.5% owned by Honeywell), pushed HON to the number two position in the industry with an 8%-10% share of the market versus a 6% share for IBM. Computers account for about half of Honeywell's volume, while contributing only one-quarter of earnings. It is the less glamorous controls business which has historically come through with the bulk of the company's profits. But in 1974, this perennially reliable source of cold cash was hurt by the sharp drop in building. Coming as this has in tandem with some very basic and not readily cured difficulties (imbalance in lease to sales ratio, soaring interest costs, higher than expected costs on the Series 60 computers and problems melding the GE and HON operations) in its computer operations, Honeywell may be reporting some rather dismal fourth quarter 1974 results.

These well publicized problems, coupled with the company's making some rather heavy cutbacks in costs and personnel in its Information Systems Division (computers) resulted in widespread rumors that Honeywell was considering selling its computer division. This has been denied by management. An alternative, and in my opinion, currently more promising investment, is Sterling Drug (NYSE). Strong in pharmaceuticals, specialty chemicals and waste treatment engineering, Sterling's product line also includes the well-known brand names of Bayer, Phillips and Lysol. The company's long-term record of annually increasing earnings (24 years) and dividends (12 years) should continue in the coming years. Buy.

What Is The Reason?

BY RABBI YAAKOV UVSITZKY

(Rabbi Uvsitzky has requested the following space to present the Orthodox viewpoint on certain Jewish customs and procedures.)

Why is it customary that the bridegroom be led down the aisle to the marriage canopy by two people?

This custom dates back to the marriage of Adam and Eve. We are told that Adam was accompanied to the marriage canopy by the angel Michael on his right and the angel Gabriel on his left.

Why is it customary that some people make the wedding ceremony under the stars?

The reason is to show that the children of the newly married couple should be as many as the stars in the sky which is a symbol of fruitfulness.

SUPPLY KNOW-HOW?

TUNIS: Muhamed Mahgab, Director of the Arab League's Boycott Committee Against Israel, told newsmen here that the US "Ring Corporation" has supplied Israel with atomic know-how which is being used in Israel's two atomic reactors at Dimona and Nahal Shurak. The Arab spokesman declared that in the past few years these reactors have produced sufficient plutonium for the production of 10 atomic bombs with an explosive force of 25 kilotons. Mahgab further stated that he has reliable information to the effect that in furtherance of an agreement between Israel and Brazil to work together in the field of atomic energy, two Israeli experts are now working in Brazil's experimental atomic institute at San Jose.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

I have often told my pupils that one of the best bids in Bridge is PASS. That call gives so much information in so many ways. However, it also can be used to good advantage by the opponent of the Passer if he considers just what that pass meant as far as telling what the Passer could not possibly have or he wouldn't have passed. Too few players, either Declarer or Defender, do take these meanings into consideration. Today's hand is a perfect example of what advantage a sharp Declarer might have taken when his right hand opponent failed to open the bidding.

North

 ♥ 10 8 4 2
 ♦ A 10 7
 ♣ Q 6 3

West

East

 ♣ A K 8 2

South

 ♣ 7 4

East was Dealer, all vulnerable with this bidding:

P	4♥

Some Easts, with their 12 points, did open the bidding. When that happened, no clue was given to South. Most Easts did pass. You might wonder about North's Two Diamond response. If you think about it you would realize that he actually had no good Heart bid at that time. He was too strong for two, too weak for three and not nearly distributional enough for four. So he had to make a temporizing bid fully aware that South could not pass as a change of suit by responder is forcing. He would get to Hearts later and make certain the hand would eventually end in that suit. Every pair ended in game in Hearts but I am sure there were many different bidding sequences.

West had a natural Lead, the Club Jack, with three rounds played, Declarer ruffing the third. They all now pulled Trumps quite happy to see East's Queen fall. Now they took the Spade finesse and when that lost to East and a Spade came back they all now knew that the success of the hand would depend on locating the Diamond Queen and that it could be finessed both ways. I watched as most Declarers pursed their lips, looked at the ceiling for help from no one knows where and then guessed, some right, some wrong.

If East had opened the bidding they might have had good reason for misguessing that Queen but now think about what had already happened to make East's opening pass absolutely tell the Declarer just where that Queen had to be. What had East shown up with already? The Ace and King of Clubs on the first two tricks, the Trump Queen which had fallen and the Spade King when that finesse had been taken. Add those points. Without an adding machine you should have come to 12. If East had also had that Diamond Queen it would give him 14 points and he would certainly have opened the bidding. So that should tell any Declarer who took notice of this information exactly how to make the hand. True, the poor Declarers who had the misfortune to play against an East who opened the bidding could easily go wrong.

Moral: Don't just let the word pass go by without storing that information in the back of your mind for future reference. You will be amazed at what you can learn by figuring out what the pass meant when made at certain times.

about me except one thing — that a pitch I threw caused a man to die." — "of pitchers who have won 200 or more games in the major leagues, I have the fourth best winning percentage — the only ones ahead of me are Pete Alexander, Christy Mathewson and Eddie Plank." Mays is reported as saying. He was correct. "No one remembers that. They just remember the accident."

THE ACCIDENT: It was baseball's only tragic fatality and it happened in August of 1920 at the Polo Grounds. The Yankees were at home with Cleveland. It was before Yankee Stadium was built. The Yanks were behind, 0-3, in the top half of the fifth inning. Ray Chapman, a speedy, capable shortstop for the Indians was the leadoff hitter and the count was one and one. Mays was preparing to throw a low fast ball when he noticed Chapman shift his back foot to the position he took for a running bunt. At the last split second Mays changed the pitch to a high strike pitch. Chapman, draping himself over the plate, was hit by the pitch, succumbing to a double fracture of the skull. Maybe because of that tragic happening alone, the name of Mays should be in a special part of the Hall of Fame. And whether he is liked or not, his record seems to command a niche for him. WHO DID IT? (And it doesn't refer to a Whodunnit.) It came to mind the other day while I was reading a column by Red Smith. Red was writing about Luis Tiant and his salary as the best Red Sox pitcher. "Tiant has been a 20-game winner three times and in 1972 he led the league with an earned run average of 1.91, the best for a Boston pitcher in 55 years." It was noted in the story that the last man based in Fenway Park who could hold the score that low was Carl Mays in 1917. And that brings us to the "Who did it" subject.

VOTING: It brings us to another column, one by Tim Horgan, who writes, "I firmly believe that the 'Hall of Fame' (Baseball) was originally intended only for absolute 'greats' of the game — Ruth, Cobb, Hornsby, Gehrig, Feller, Hubbell — names that'll ring a bell in the year 2001, heroes whose records you don't have to look up in the book." And so I submit the name of a famed pitcher who doesn't seem to receive any votes despite a most unusual record, the name of Carl Mays who was the last of the Red Sox moundsmen to hold an average as impressive as that posed by Tiant.

COMMANDS ATTENTION: The late Mr. Mays was the greatest "underhand" pitcher baseball has known; "underhand" meaning that in delivering the ball, his knuckles almost touched the turf, or mound, as he threw in an unorthodox manner. Of local interest is the fact that he was the leading pitcher, not Babe Ruth, on that much-discussed with pride, champion Providence Grays team of the International League in 1914.

LOOK AT THE RECORD: The great Roy Howard of newspaper fame advised, "Report the news objectively." It seems that Howard was interested in "what happened" more than "whose friend is or was he?" And it seems that in some of the Halls of Fame, it's a question of "who knows him and where does he live?" rather than "what did he do?" After graduating from the Providence Grays, Mays was a 20-game winner in both the American and National Leagues. In fact, the "submarine" thrower, as he was called, won 20 in the American League four times, winning 26 with a third-place Yankee team in 1920 and 27 when the Yanks started their American League domination in 1921. In the National League, Mays won 20 for Cincinnati in 1924 and 19 in 1926.

MORE RECORDS! He pitched and won both games of a doubleheader for the Red Sox against the Athletics to clinch the championship in 1918, allowing the A's only one run during the afternoon. He won two games for the Red Sox in the World Series against the Cubs that year, including the fourth and deciding victory. It was also Mays who clinched the Yankees first championship in 1921. He then went on a pitched three World Series game against the Giants without walking a batter. He held the World Series record of 31-2/3 consecutive innings without issuing a free pass and shared a World Series record with Deacon Phillippe of pitching five consecutive complete games. That record was broken by Bob Gibson in 1968. Mays held a record of the most consecutive victories over one team, the Philadelphia Athletics, beating them 23 times in succession and was the only pitcher to lead both leagues in complete games pitched.

TRAGEDY: A book of recent vintage by Bob McGarigle mentions Mays as saying, "Nobody, it seems, ever remembers anything

Mr. Radtke and The Library

When the city alderman convened after the great fire had destroyed Chicago, they opened a letter from Queen Victoria. Inside was a check for $5,000. The Queen was donating the money to help the aldermen replace the library books consumed by the flames.

The council addressed a joint letter of thanks to the Queen, noting that before the fire Chicago did not have a library but thanks to her generosity they would when the alabaster city was rebuilt.

An equal poignant episode has transpired in the life of the great New York Public Library. The library has become the beneficiary of over $300,000 from the estate of an immigrant Jew who grew rich while using the library.

Martin Radtke was a Lithuanian immigrant who judiciously invested in the stock market after a generation long study of economic texts and business magazines.

The library, hard pressed for money in this last decade, has celebrated Mr. Radtke's generosity with a marble plaque placed conspicuously in the lobby.

Of course if Mr. Radtke had chosen to inform the Wall Street brokers of his research, they would have put up a bronze statue free of charge in the Stock Exchange.

Oh, Radtke, Wall Street has need of you now!

Libraries generally are in bad shape. Either they don't have the money like the New York Public Library or they don't have the books like the Charlotte Library which has a new glass-walled building with quiet carpets.

Mr. Radtke's example may have a salubrious effect all around. Those old men in the libraries may not be seeking warmth on a cold winter's day. They may be studying the commodities market on their way to accumulating a second million. They may leave some of this to the library. Henceforth they should be encouraged. In fact, libraries should provide ashtrays for every one of them.

Librarians for their part ought to concentrate on how the library is more than a cultural center; Mr. Radtke proves it is also a business adjunct of the community. The prospect of big money within those covers ought to lure schoolboys and the unemployed by the thousands.

It is also true that in a library you can if you put your mind to it find out what Allen Ginsburg and John Crowe Ransom had in common and Ulysses S. Grant and Black Jack Pershing.

Find the Names

Today in this column we are going to play a little game. Read the story that follows and try to find the hidden names of several famous people. If you can uncover 11 names, you are a genius. Actually there are only 10. Hint: They are all involved in the same profession.

A competitive element will add a filipp of excitement. Readers who discover the key to the game after reading the first paragraph deserve a prize. If you succeed in doing this, go to the nearest supermarket and tell the manager that you want a can of contaminated tuna fish free of charge. If he refuses to cooperate, tell him he's a bad sport and blow him a raspberry.

CPAs Advise Unemployed On Speeding Tax Returns

(As a public service, the Rhode Island Society of Certified Public Accountants has developed a series of articles giving timely advice to the general public. These articles have been reviewed by the society's tax division and are accurate.)

Each year, through excessive withholding, millions of taxpayers overpay their income taxes so that, when return filing time rolls around, they are in line for refunds rather than further payments.

This year the depressed economy has placed in this category many additional Americans — those who were out of work for at least part of 1974.

During the time they were working, taxes were withheld at a rate based on the assumption that the taxpayers would be earning the same incomes all year, which proved not to be the case.

How can those with refunds coming get the money Uncle Sam owes them, without delay? The only way is to file income tax returns early, and unfortunately returns must be accompanied by W-2 forms from employers, stating total wages paid and income taxes, Social Security and other payments taken out of it.

Employers have until January 31 to send these forms to employees still working, while those who were laid off with little likelihood of being rehired before the end of the year should have received their W-2s no later than 30 days after they were paid their final wages.

A person whose W-2 forms could be delayed until as late as January 31 might consider preparing the tax return in advance, using data from his paycheck stubs, and having the return all ready to mail off as soon as the W-2 comes through.

A person unemployed from a date prior to the end of the year will, of course, have received his W-2 and been able to file sooner.

The 30-day and January 31 deadlines for delivery of W-2's are the maximums allowed. Internal Revenue Service urges employers not to wait until the last minute, and there is nothing to prevent an employee from seconding that motion, asking a present or former employer to speed up the W-2 as a personal favor.

Persons with moderate incomes sometimes fail to file tax returns because they know the full tax on what they earned has been paid. They overlook the fact that any overwithholding will not be refunded unless they send in a return.

Does the receipt of unemployment benefits, welfare payments and food stamps affect one's tax liability? It does not; these are nontaxable forms of income.

Lebanon Lodges Protest In UN Against Israel

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.: Lebanon last week lodged a strong protest with the Security Council over recent acts of aggression by Israeli forces.

The Lebanese representative to the U.N., Edouard Ghorra, said that the Council had a duty to enforce its previous resolutions, but he did not request a new meeting of the 15-nation body.

In a letter to the Council President, he said. "The Government of Lebanon wishes to lodge its strongest protest with the Security Council against Israel's repeated and condemnable acts of aggression.

Mr. Ghorra charged Israel with conducting a "campaign of terror," particularly against the population of southern Lebanon.

The Lebanese representative charged that as a result of Israeli aggression between January 3 and 13, three civilians had been wounded, three houses destroyed, 21 houses damaged and one bridge has also been caused in large farming areas he said.

Report Shelling

TEL AVIV: Israeli artillery and tanks shelled southern Lebanon intermittently according to a broadcast by the Israel defense forces radio.

A newsman in the area said that clouds of smoke and dust covered the mountain slope near the village of Shuba, which the Israelis have attacked nightly for several days. Israel says that the village is a base for Arab guerrillas.

Military headquarters said that several shells fired from Lebanon exploded in the Metulla area. The Israelis returned the fire, it was stated.

Lebanese Use Artillery

BEIRUT, Lebanon: A Defense Ministry statement said that Lebanese artillery opened fire last week on an Israeli armored column near Shuba.

West Berlin Acts To Deter
Soviet Jews From Settling

BONN: The West Berlin Senate has taken steps to deter any more Soviet Jews from settling in the city. By the beginning of December about 500 had arrived in West Berlin with the intention of staying there.

The authorities have been most reluctant to talk about this immigration, not least because the Palestine Liberation Organization had threatened that reprisals would be taken against West Germany should West Berlin be allowed to become a transit camp for Soviet Jews.

This placed the Senate and the West German Government in an embarrassing position as, for historical reasons, it is hard to place any barrier against Jews wishing to come to this country.

Since the Soviet Government began to allow large-scale emigration of Jews in August, 1973, about 80,000 have arrived in Israel. A small proportion, not more than 2,000 could not settle down and have left. Over 800 are now in Belgium, several hundred in France, and some in Holland. Most of these, it is believed, are hoping for permission to go to the US.

Soviet Jews in West Berlin, however, are anxious to stay there. They are mostly highly skilled and they believe that West Berlin, in spite of rising unemployment, will in the long term offer them a good living.

Apart from this, West Berlin has the biggest Jewish community in Germany, some 5,500, equipped with a kindergarten, a school, and an adult training college.

Those youths who spend at least a year in Israel have Israeli passports. Most of them have no legal right to stay permanently in West Germany. In principle they are entitled to German nationality only if they are of German ethnic origin (about 200 are said to fulfil this requirement).

In future Jewish immigrants will be treated by the Senate strictly according to the aliens' law; those arriving in West Berlin will be allowed to stay for a maximum period of six months, after which they will be asked to return to Israel.

The spokesman of the West Berlin Senate, Herr Struve, said that Berlin could not be expected to continue treating Soviet Jews differently from other aliens. He claimed that this decision had been taken in full agreement with the chairman of the Jewish community, Herr Galinski.

It is hard to believe there was such an agreement. Herr Galinski has written to the West Berlin Mayor, Herr Schutz, expressing "understanding" for the Senate's decision, but pointing out that perhaps a larger number of Jews could have been admitted, especially as about 1,000 Palestinians were estimated to be living illegally in West Berlin.

He suggested that the Mayor should try to persuade the "Lander" of West Germany to accept a similar number of Soviet Jews as West Berlin had done. Only then could one speak of a solution to the problem which would be acceptable in respect of the Federal Republic—'also taking into account obligations that arose in the past.'

dollars at lower rates of interest than the erosion in the buying power of those dollars. You'll get a better deal than in 1974, however.

(5) As a saver, you'll continue to get comparatively rich returns on cash in savings accounts or in fixed-income securities.

This is because interest rates will, I repeat, remain higher than in past eras.

(6) As an investor in stocks, you should find 1975 more rewarding than 1974 was.

That's not saying much, considering that 1974 was a year of disaster for millions. But assuming lower interest rates, no worldwide crackup, a recovery in the economy beginning in mid-year or so, stock prices should perk up.

(7) As a user of energy, you'll find the squeeze will be on and you'll have to cut the amount of oil and gas you use.

Whether the emphasis will be more on mandatory controls or will be directed toward voluntary curbs, there is no doubt that we'll be forced to reduce our dependence on Arab supplies.

(8) And as a middle-income taxpayer, you'll be paying a higher Social Security tax—for the amount of your pay subject to this tax is now up to $14,100 against last year's base of $13,200. Your tax if you earn $14,100 or more from a job will be $824.85, up $52.65 over 1974; your tax if you are self-employed and earn this much, will be $1,113.90, up $71.10 over 1974. (Employers must match the employee contribution dollar for dollar.) As for income tax cuts, if any, they will be concentrated among lower-income groups.

In sum, a grim year but brightening as it rolls on.

THE MISHNAH AND ITS LAWS

Further, things which you wear may be contaminated and they may, in turn, infect others with contamination.

Now, in the books of Leviticus and Numbers, the Written Torah tells about various sources and modes of contamination, of things which make a person unclean. In all ways, the result is the same: A person who is "unclean" cannot come into the holy place. These various sources of contamination have one thing in common: They break the order of nature, the wholeness and completeness of life. Death breaks the balance of life. The corpse is unclean. Various sorts of animals or insects are conceived — for reasons that do not concern us — as "unclean". If you touch them, you are unclean. Since it is in the sanctuary, the holy temple, that the wholeness or completeness of life is most fully realized, the person who has somehow broken with the natural balance and order of creation cannot go there. The Rabbis of the Mishnah take up this conception and work it out in exquisite detail.

A Modern Example

I suppose it would be hardest to write our modern version of that sixth division. Yet perhaps there are unseen realities, unfelt yet deeply perceived relationships, which can serve as an analogy in our own day for the strange and mysterious concepts of "cleanliness" and "uncleanliness" of the time of the Mishnah. I offered earlier a very significant analogy, contamination by unseen radiation. Yet, are there spiritual comparisons which we can draw? Is there something a person can do, for example, which so transforms him or her as to remove that person from the realm of the "normal?" And I do not mean some practical deed which is unethical or immoral. I mean, can we go to some place which is "unclean" which leaves us with a sense of filth and disorder, even because of our mere presence at or contact with that place? I tend to think that My Lai in South Vietnam is such a place — a place in which our mere presence leaves us with clean. And there are such places, and uncleanness applies not only to place but also to persons, even to objects.

So, in a few brief words, that is the Mishnah — the Torah which contains, in its few brief words, the whole concept of reality constructed by the Rabbis of ancient times and conceived by them to have been revealed by God at Mount Sinai to Moses, along with the Written Torah which we call Ranakh or the Hebrew Bible, and the Christians call the Old Testament.

Classical Judaism always understood revelation or Torah to come in two parts, the Written Torah and the Oral Torah of the Mishnah. It is easy enough for us to study the Written Torah, the Bible, and to perceive there the word of God. The Written Torah, after all, is open and accessible to us.

But the Oral Torah, the Mishnah and all that goes along with it, is not open and easily accessible. It is difficult to understand. It must be learned from a teacher and carefully explained by the teacher. Yet, when we come to a true understanding of the Mishnah as Oral Torah, I believe we learn precisely what the Rabbis who gave us the Mishnah wanted us to learn: the meaning and dimensions of holiness.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT FORD

From the day you took office as our President, my hopes for a better tomorrow for our country began to rise because you were a man of idealistic compassion and untainted reputation. On November 5 many of our old and tired politicians were voted out of office and a new breed of political leaders were elected to work with you to get our country on the road to recovery from both the Watergate scandal and an economy that was in the throes of a recession and slowly heading toward a depression. Today, at the start of this New Year I am disillusioned, discouraged and very much disturbed at the rhetoric that you and your advisors are indulging in. Don't insult our intelligence, Mr. President, with talk of what is wrong with our country — we know what is wrong. What we need is a strong, determined, and non-political leadership from you to present a plan for a better way of life for all in this great country.

You, your cabinet, and our Congress have failed us, so I am submitting my thoughts on the five most important problems besetting us at the moment. "One man's opinion for an economic and moral recovery from one of the greatest tragedies in the history of our country."

Unemployment: Unemployment could probably be cut in half by just giving some thought to the NRA and CCC of the thirties. Put the unemployed back to work on government projects such as construction, maintenance of government owned recreation facilities, clerks in government facilities, subsidize added personnel to our overworked police and fire departments. All of this, in addition to — not instead of — the normally employed personnel thereof. Declare a one-year moratorium on energy measures that have increased the cost of operating a business to a point where many businesses have had to close, thus adding to the unemployed; energy measures that result in higher prices on automobiles which cause sales to drop which cause more unemployment; energy measures which cause delays in oil pipeline construction, thus causing more unemployment.

Price and Wage Controls: The key here is imposing both together and enforcing both together. Do not limit free enterprise which is the greatest incentive for productivity, but legislation must be enacted to roll back prices to a level where industry will easily survive, but not allow astronomical profits at the expense of the consumer . . . simultaneously, wages must be kept at a level to allow industry to survive. Industry will not have to keep raising prices because labor unions keep demanding increased wages if these demands are curtailed, and these demands can be stopped, if industry stops increasing prices. It is a vicious circle of which comes first, "The chicken or the egg." Labor unions strike for higher wages because of the increased cost of living. Industry raises prices because they give the unions these higher wages, and then it starts all over again.

Let our industrial leaders show the way by initiating salary cuts for themselves and their top executives, and let them start a round of price decreases; meaningful salary cuts and meaningful price decreases. Let the top officials of all labor unions do likewise as an example to their followers and also stop their demands for wage hikes during this period. Have the auto industry prove their good faith by an immediate reduction in automobile prices, and the oil giants do the same on home fuel and gasoline; have the people who control our food prices reduce them at once.

The other side of the coin must have labor willing to work for a livable wage, but not one that forces prices up, thus resulting in consumer goods becoming financially attainable by 'Middle America.' We need a forceful and capable leader who, together with a Congress working for the good of the country, who will enact legislation to make this mandatory, not voluntary. Enact legislation making mandatory for a period of one year, a moratorium on all price and wage increases, a moratorium on all labor union strikes, a moratorium on "phony man-made shortages" of consumer goods, a moratorium on utility price increases, and then each and every one of us must live and work within this framework of legislation for this one year and prove that we can overcome this cancer that is eating away at the structure of our great country.

Taxes: The inequities in our tax laws have long burdened the life blood of our country — those people with incomes from $10,000 to $25,000. We must have laws that will eliminate taxes on incomes of $8500 and less. Have a small but fair tax on incomes of $8500 to $25,000 — then work out an intelligent scale of taxes for incomes from $25,000 to $100,000, and then a much greater emphasis on incomes being taxed on $100,000 and over. We must eliminate the many tax loopholes available to those with the "oil depletion allowances," to the businessmen who engage in sports activity businesses like baseball, basketball or football team investments, and then write off the many tax deductions. We must change the procedure that currently allows the entertainers and the athletes to incorporate themselves to avoid paying the proper and moral taxes on their multi-million dollar contracts — the pay structure which now allows those who earn fortunes outside of the USA not to have to pay taxes on that income but still enjoy the privileges and benefits of being a citizen of the USA — the tax structure which allows millionaires to pay ridiculously small taxes in many cases because all their expenditures seem to fall into the categories of "Charitable deductions." We cannot allow these loopholes to remain as part of our tax laws so that people with incomes from $100,000 to $500,000 continue to pay taxes percentage-wise, comparable to those people earning $20,000 to $35,000.

Welfare: Probably the most confused and abused agency in our government — on all levels — federal, state and city. I would eliminate cash payments for any reason. Every bit of welfare aid should be in the form of vouchers. Vouchers for rent, vouchers for food, vouchers for all utilities, for heating oil, for clothing, for house furnishings, for medical aid — for the purchase of anything deemed necessary for the survival of any recipient. All too well do we know that the money intended for the above in many instances ends up being spent on liquor, gambling and sometimes for drugs. The children in these cases are usually the losers. In this regard, the vouchers must be non-transferable and never negotiable for cash. Secondly, a person should not be eligible for welfare if he or she is physically and mentally fit to work — some kind of work should be made available commensurate with the income normally provided them by the agency. If the work is refused, then the welfare allocation should be rescinded and some provision made for the care and well being of the children only. Honest and hardworking people should not have to carry the burden — through our tax system — of supporting those unwilling to support themselves. Unwed mothers should not be 'rewarded' with more welfare aid every time they have another child. We should not tolerate the statement made by many welfare recipients that "our country owes them." Our country owes them nothing but the opportunity to make a living and try to better their living standards. It is then up to each of us to take advantage of that opportunity.

Energy Program: Many times during the past few months, Mr. President, have you and Mr. William Simons mentioned the possibility of a tax on gasoline of 10¢ or 15¢ per gallon — this supposedly to discourage the use of same. Again, as in the case of many of your energy saving suggestions, will the people least able to afford it be the ones to be penalized — a salesman who uses his car for the pursuit of his living to provide for his family; a person living in a remote area needing his car to drive to and from work. These people will not use less gas, they will just be spending more to live. However, the motorist in the high income bracket using his car for pleasure could hardly care less about the cost of gasoline.

If there really is a gasoline crisis, then rationing is the only equitable answer — rationing and lower prices if possible, so that those needing it for business purposes — privately owned ambulances, emergency tow trucks, etc. — can get more for less. Regulating the price of home heating fuel is a must. Infants and the elderly catching pneumonia but using less oil is not the answer to saving on home heating fuel. Non-essential and wasteful use of oil must be regulated but never at the expense of the consumer's health or well-being.

I'm sure that the Watergate investigation was necessary and good for our country. The time devoted by Congressional committees to debate on the 'Reserve Clause in Baseball' or to the 'Rozelle Clause in Football' or to the proper TV programming was probably necessary and good for our country, but if the same time, money and effort was spent in doing something concrete about the health of our economy, about the inequities in our tax laws, about the unemployment situation confronting us, about lawlessness and the morality or immorality of the "new way of life," about the military powder keg we are sitting on — only then can we take heart in the knowledge that the rhetoric is over and our President and our policy making leaders are doing something constructive about curing the ills that are slowly but surely destroying us.

Mr. President, our future is "now". You and our Congress must put political partisanship aside, and you must act firmly, forcefully, and aggressively in the best interests of our country. Our industrial and labor leaders must put aside all desire for personal gain and they must act in the best interests of our people — all of our people — and finally, the people themselves must abide by whatever legislation is enacted to provide for the best interests of all of the people.

The survival of our country is at stake.

Soviet Jewish Activists
Call Trade Veto Setback
For Freer Emigration

MOSCOW: A group of Jewish activists agreed this week that the nullification of the Soviet-American trade agreement was a tactical setback for their effort to gain the right to emigrate freely.

The activists said they felt, however, that the effort — including Congressional amendments to a United States trade bill — had resulted in a strategic victory for Soviet Jews. This victory was said to involve relatively less oppression of Jews, increased actual emigration and an improvement in relations between Moscow and Washington.

The views were expressed at a news conference in the Moscow apartment of Dr. Aleksandr Lerner, who acted as spokesman for the 14 activists present and moderated a discussion of their opinions. The sum of what was said by the activists indicated that they were somewhat disappointed but not depressed, angry or apprehensive.

No Hint of New Curbs

The activists said they had seen no indication of tighter restrictions on emigration since Soviet rejection of the trade agreement was announced a " " Since then, several activists said, there has been some rudeness toward Jews in Government offices handling emigration papers but no evidence that exit visas were becoming more difficult to obtain.

In the past week, it was said, three or four Jews received permission to leave and several were refused. There were reports,

Anti-Semitic Article
In London Journal
Arouses Surprise

LONDON: An anti-Semitic article has appeared in "Beaver," the journal of the London School of Economics Student Union.

The article, entitled "Zionism — Another Word for Nazism," is by Roman Brodskye, professor of modern history at the University of Lvov, and ideologue on Jewish matters for the Ukrainian Soviet Authorities.

Brodskye is also author of the 1973 book, "The Class Essence of Zionism."

The article says among other things: "Zionism seeks to sow national discord among working people. It preaches that Jews are mankind's elite and that people of other nationalities should be slaves to Jews...."

"Different Zionist organizations working in contact with the Nazis sent the refugees to Palestine refusing to cooperate with, and even hindering those who wished to go to another country.

"Towards the end of the war, when it became clear that the Nazis would have to answer for their crimes, important Zionists readily entered into talks with them concerning their future plans and relations.

"The Zionists did not fail the Nazis. Thanks to their Zionist protectors, quite a few Nazis escaped the hangman's noose."

The publication of the anti-Semitic attack in the LSE Journal has aroused great surprise and anger.

AHEAD ON PLEDGES

NEW YORK: Frank R. Lautenberg, newly elected general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, said that the UJA is already ahead on pledges compared to this time last year but he was not sure that "we are going to reach the goal of last year." The 1975 target is $750 million. Addressing a press conference at UJA headquarters here, Lautenberg cited the declining American economy and said that if it gets any worse, "we are going to be affected. The question is, to what degree?"

the activists said, that several persons considered troublemakers by Soviet officials have recently received permission to leave. They declined to speculate whether this signaled a move to get prominent activists out of the country.

"We do not think," Dr. Lerner said, "that the Soviet authorities, will put revenge on the back of the Jews. This is a possibility but not a probability."

He said that if the trade agreement had gone into effect many more Jews would be applying for visas. He added that the number desiring to emigrate would not decrease but that there were no reliable statistics to illustrate the current pattern.

More Jews Leave Israel To Settle Elsewhere

JERUSALEM: About 15,000 to 20,000 Jews left Israel in 1974 to set up homes elsewhere. Only about 5,000 of these were recent immigrants; the rest were established Israelis.

Last year's exodus compared with about 13,500 emigrants in 1973 and about 12,000 in 1972. Mr. David Neumann, spokesman for the Government Bureau of Statistics, said that Israel had experienced nothing like it for the past decade.

The highest increase seems to have been among "old timers," From 1964 to 1970 they represented between 31 and 40 per cent. At this stage, the numbers can be no more than intelligent estimates by the Statistics Bureau and the Ministry of Absorption. Definitive totals become available only after four years.

The final count of emigrants may turn out to be even higher than the estimate. The difference between Israelis leaving the country and Israelis coming back during 1974 was 26,800, twice as high as 1973. No one could be sure how many of them will trickle home in the next few months.

To leave Israel carries a taint of betrayal. People tend to go quietly. There can, therefore, be no scientific study of why they emigrate. But 1974 was a year of few secrets here. Israelis were shocked by the Yom Kippur War, disenchanted with their leaders and increasingly pessimistic about the future.

Many, even those who could ill afford it, took holidays abroad simply as a safety valve. After months in and out of the Army they had to get away — before another war and before austerity and inflation caught up with their bank accounts. Others evidently decided to get out for good.

Israel's post-war security and economic crisis is also making an impact on the number of Jews leaving the Soviet Union who drop out in Vienna, going straight to North America or Western Europe. About 17 per cent failed to come here last year, compared with 4 per cent in 1973. The proportion rose steadily month by month, reaching 20 per cent in August and 35 per cent in December.

Mr. Samuel Adler, special advisor to the Minister of Absorption, acknowledged that the military-political situation was a factor. "Some of the Russians are afraid of coming into the Israeli situation," he said. "They worry about Army service. Soviet Jews tend to have small families, and they fear they might lose their only sons."

But Mr. Adler argued that this was not the main factor. "The most important reason," he said, "is the snowball effect. More and more Jews realized they could get out of the Soviet Union. So many with no real Jewish motivation began applying. These people never felt

Tel Aviv University To Receive Archives

TEL AVIV: Tel Aviv University has confirmed that it has been selected to receive the Wiener Archives, said to be the world's largest collection of material relating to Nazi war crimes and the Holocaust. The collection established in Amsterdam in 1934 by Dr. Alfred Wiener, a Jewish Orientalist and community leader, was transferred from Holland to London in 1940, where it is presently located. Under terms of an agreement, it will be shipped to Israel in 1980. The trustees selected Tel Aviv University as its final repository.

The collection, founded as the Central Jewish Information Bureau, provided material used in preparing the Nuremberg war crimes trials. Dr. Wiener was a German-Jewish refugee who died in London.

Israel was their spiritual homeland."

The majority of the drop-outs came from metropolitan Russia, a pre-revolutionary heartland. These, according to Mr. Adler, were the most assimilated of Soviet Jews. Among the more traditionalist Jews — from the Baltic States, from the parts of Rumania and Hungary annexed as a result of the Second World War, and from Georgia and Bokhara, the rates of those failing to arrive here was almost nil.

Once the Russians do reach Israel, however, they are more likely to stay than other immigrants. Of the 100,000 who have come over the past four to five years, three and a half per cent have left.

his long-time administrative assistant, Burt Lee, was quitting, he was upset. "Look here, Lee," he said. "You've been with the company a long time, and before you sever, I'd like you to reconsider."

Lee stood there unmoved. For years his wife Kay had been urging him to retire, and he knew that if he went back on his decision now his name around the house would be mud.

"Burt," said the chancellor, "I'd really like to see you stay on. Now—ah—the reason—er—is not exactly simple to explain, but I assure you it's sincere. Let's just say I need you."

"Sorry," Lee replied. "It's not a hasty decision, and I'd rather not discuss it."

"But it's a shame!" the chancellor expostulated. "Don't you realize that you're on the brink, Lee, of a retirement bonus? And think of your poor wife! How would Kay feel if she knew you were about to give up five hundred dollars just to satisfy an impulse?"

"She wouldn't mind," the assistant replied. "She's tired of the noise and glare of the big city. She wants to get away someplace—" "Then you've made up your mind?" asked the chancellor. "Utterly," Lee assured him.

"Well, let me make one more point," urged the chancellor. "Chronologically, you're the man with the longest term of service around here. And you know how important chron—"

"Kite! Go fly a kite," Lee interrupted, his patience finally at an end. He wanted to get home in time to watch the newscast on TV. It was his favorite time of day. As for company—well, they could always get a new man.

Says USSR Merchant Condemned Because He Is Jewish

MOSCOW: Sofia Leviyev a heavy-set woman of 49, sat in her family's well-furnished apartment here and said that her husband, Mikhail, had been sentenced to death not because he may be guilty of economic crimes against the Soviet Union, but because he is a Jew.

Mrs. Leviyev said it was not important whether the conviction of her husband was based on facts. Mr. Leviyev, the 58-year-old former manager of a popular Government-owned shop in Moscow, was convicted last month of bribe-taking and illegal dealing in gold, and was sentenced to die.

His wife said that the last possible appeal, to the Soviet Supreme Court, was filed January 13 and that it would normally take a month for the court to decide whether to reopen the case. The appeal, she said, asserts that serious legal errors were made at her husband's trial, which ended December 13.

Charges Criticized

She said that her husband was convicted for capital crimes, while he should have been tried only for crimes that do not carry a possible death penalty. The men accused of having been her husband's accomplices, she said, were convicted of virtually the same crimes, but were given prison terms. In the case of one of those accused of having been an accomplice, a non-Jew, she said, the state prosecutor has asked the court only for a maximum 15-year prison term.

The lenient treatment, she said, was given to the others because they are ethnic Tadjiks and Russians, while Mr. Leviyev is a Jew.

Mrs. Leviyev, who broke into sobs several times during the interview, said she could not remember whether her husband had admitted any illegal activity at his trial. She insisted that this was irrelevant, and said she was afraid she would never see him again. She said that since her husband's arrest and detention in 1972, she had had three operations for cancer.

In front of her was a stack of legal documents, awards her husband was given by the state, and sympathetic letters from people in Los Angeles, London and Tel Aviv.

Earlier Conviction

She said Mikhail Leviyev had served five years of a prison term in the early fifties after having been convicted of an anti-Soviet crime. The conviction, she said was based on the fact that "he kissed the hem of Golda Meir's dress when she was ambassador here." At the time, under Stalin, this was considered treason, she added.

Her husband was officially rehabilitated, she said, and eventually became manager of the Tadjikistan shop, which specialized in silks and other goods from the Tadjik Republic in Central Asia. In the last three of his 13 years as manager of the shop, he arranged to have goods rechanneled from Moscow to Dushanbe, the Tadjik capital.

For this he was charged with having received bribes, she said, when the charge should have been, at most, illegal speculation. He was also convicted of having been an intermediary in the illegal sale of gold.

ADL Takes On Women's Rights

NEW YORK: The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has added a new dimension to its 62-year history of fighting discrimination—women's rights as a separate issue.

The ADL campaign to change the way society thinks of women, and the way some women think of themselves, was launched with the first of what will be a series of audio-visual and printed materials designed for use by government agencies, universities, labor organizations, management training programs and other groups.

Entitled "Women vs. The System or The Games Men Play," and produced in cooperation with the New York Chapter of the Women's National Book Association, it consists of a discussion guide and an album of recorded discrimination women face in business and the social world.

SCHWARTZ DIES

NEW YORK: Joseph J. Schwartz, who as director general of American Joint Distribution Committee, supervised relief and welfare programs in 30 countries for more than 1 million persons, died here at the age of 75. Jewish leaders throughout the world expressed grief at his death and more than 300 people, representing a cross-section of Jewish communal organizations here and abroad, attended the funeral services at the Riverside Memorial Chapel. Dr. Schwartz was JDC secretary from 1939-40, chairman of the European Executive Council from 1940-49 and director general from 1950-51. He was also the executive vice-chairman of the UJA from 1951-1955 and was vice-president and chief executive officer of the Israel Bond Organization from 1955-70.

NON-JEWS INCREASE
 JERUSALEM: Israel's population at the end of 1974 was some 3.4 million, the Central Bureau of Statistics announced.

Some 2.9 million were Jews, including 20,000 potential immigrants, most of them holding the status of temporary residents; about 514,000 were non-Jews.

Mapam Political Secretary

Chance Meeting With PLO Member Starts Bitter Controversy

TEL AVIV: Mapam has decided to support its political secretary, Naphtali Feder, in a bitter controversy over what Feder has described as an unplanned, casual meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization in a Prague hotel restaurant last month. The meeting occurred while Feder was in Prague to attend an unofficial gathering of multinational peace committees during which, he freely reported, he had met with and in fact was sought out by delegates from Egypt, Iraq and Lebanon.

His brief meeting with a PLO man, which he had failed to mention in his initial report, set off a political storm in Israel. Likud circles demanded that Feder be prosecuted for contact with an enemy agent. Likud filed a Knesset motion for an urgent debate on the matter. The motion was rejected, although the Knesset agreed to discuss the matter when it comes up in the normal course of debate.

But even some members of the Labor Alignment have been critical of Feder. Shoshana Almoshino charged at a Labor faction meeting that Feder's contact with a PLO man was "a knife in the back of the nation." Others claimed that Feder had weakened Israel's resolute attitude to have no contact whatsoever with a terrorist organization.

Feder gave his version of the incident on television. He said he was sitting at lunch with three other people when a fourth man approached, asked if he could join the group and introduced himself as a PLO representative. "We exchanged some polite remarks and then a few words over our respective attitudes, after which it became evident that there is no room for talks with the PLO," Feder said.

He did not identify the PLO man by name, but said the man had asked him if he was not afraid of legal consequences when he returned to Israel, as a result of their conversation. Feder said that he had replied that his was a democratic country where people can talk freely.

Mapam Secretary General Meir Talmi declared that the party stood solidly behind Feder. "He did the right thing and violated no decision of the party," Talmi said. He charged that opposition circles were trying to inflate the incident to gain political capital for themselves. M. Ben Ze'ev, an attorney and former legal advisor to the government, pointed out that the law prohibiting contact with enemy agents had a qualifying clause which stated that the contact had to be made with intent to damage the State or have no acceptable explanation in order to justify prosecution. He said these provisions could not be claimed in a chance meeting such as Feder described.

Herut Wages Bitter Campaign To Stop Goldmann's Reelection

TEL AVIV: The Herut World Movement is waging a bitter campaign to prevent the re-election of Dr. Nahum Goldmann as president of the World Jewish Congress. Their efforts are doomed to failure, most observers agree, but they are expected to enliven the WJC's plenary assembly which opens in Jerusalem February 3.

They are also expected to consume a great deal of time which might be put to better use tackling such issues on the plenary agenda as assimilation; safeguarding Jewish rights; the right to emigrate; growing anti-Semitism and aid for needy Jewish communities, especially in countries where regimes have changed.

Nevertheless, Herut seems resolved to push the anti-Goldmann movement as far as it will go. Joseph Klarman, a Herut member of the World Zionist Organization Executive, raised the issue at an executive meeting in Jerusalem. "I have nothing personal against Goldmann. We are good friends. But I do not see how he can continue in his office

Condemns Statement Lauding UN Assembly

NEW YORK: David Blumberg, president of B'nai B'rith, has condemned a joint statement issued by 14 Christian religious organizations which lauded the "positive" accomplishments of the United Nations 29th General Assembly. Blumberg said "it requires moral obtuseness to see positive values emerging" from that Assembly session.

The 14 religious leaders, speaking as individuals, took issue with a United States denunciation of the 29th Assembly as one dominated by Third World nations that used their numerical strength to exercise a "tyranny of the majority." That phrase was used by John Scali, U.S. Ambassador to the UN, in declaring that U.S. support for the UN was eroding because of a trend toward approving unrealistic resolutions and making "self-centered decisions" on the Middle East and Africa.

after all of those statements he made," Klarman said.

He was reflecting Herut's distaste for Goldmann's moderate, frequently dovish views on the Middle East situation, his past criticisms of Israeli policies he believed to be rigid and his suggestion that Israel will one day have to deal with the Palestinians, even with the hated PLO.

According to Klarman and his Herut colleagues, such views expressed by the president of the World Jewish Congress are politically harmful to Israel and the Zionist movement. Klarman urged the WZO Executive to revise the terms of its agreement with the WJC. Under the agreement, the WZO has greater representation on the governing bodies of the WJC in consideration of the fact that the activities of both organizations often overlap.

But the WZO as such has no control over WJC organizational matters. The WZO Executive reflected Klarman's demand that it go on record in opposition to Goldmann's re-election. But he asked to be permitted to continue the struggle because "it is a matter of conscience for me."

American Orthodox Rabbinate Deplores Vatican's Failure To Acknowledge Israel

WASHINGTON: The American Orthodox rabbinate this week deplored the failure of recent Vatican guidelines on Catholic-Jewish relations to "forthrightly acknowledge that the land of Israel is central in the theology of Judaism."

Rabbi Fabian Schonfeld, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, expressed hope that the church would "rethink this aspect" of its guidelines.

The council—the nation's largest body of Orthodox rabbis held a three-day convocation, dividing the sessions between the Orthodox synagogues in this city. The recent Vatican guidelines on ties with Jews served as a major theme at the sessions, and resulted in the adoption of a policy statement based on Rabbi Schonfeld's remarks.

Rabbi Schonfeld called on the Vatican to establish diplomatic relations with Israel. Its failure to do so, "while maintaining formal relations with small countries throughout the world, cannot be viewed as an oversight," Rabbi Schonfeld contended.

The council's statement was similar in viewpoint to that already expressed by the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations, a coordinating body embracing various religious and secular Jewish organizations.

The Vatican guidelines, otherwise commended for their condemnations of anti-Semitism and of any anti-Jewish interpretations in Catholic worship and teaching, were prepared by a church commission on relations with Judaism and announced earlier this month.

Israeli Religious Figures Attack Vatican Guidelines

JERUSALEM: The Vatican set of guidelines "on the relationship of the Church to non-Christian religions" issued recently came under withering attack here from Religious Affairs Minister Yitzhak Rafael. He declared that he could not see the document as "an outstretched hand towards the Jewish people" as, he noted, had been described in some quarters. The Minister was joined by Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren who stated that he was less than enthusiastic about the Vatican document.

Rafael blasted the document for failing to mention the existence of Israel and for endorsing the ancient Christian version of the crucifixion; that the Jewish leaders of that time were responsible for decide. This teaching had caused "rivers of holy and innocent Jewish blood" to flow through the centuries," Rafael said, and the Vatican showed in its statement that the church leaders of today remained faithful to it.

Rafael conceded, however, that the guidelines' statement freeing

Jews from the guilt of decide in generations after Christ was a positive step. He commended the paragraph that condemned anti-Semitism, adding, that it "remains without any practical consequence."

The Vatican declaration as a whole was "an expressly Catholic document," Rafael declared. It was written "out of deep identification with the historic approach of the Catholic Church towards Judaism, and it is therefore difficult for me to find in it any message of significant change...." The Minister said he could "not see in the statement's four sections paths of understanding between Christians and Jews." The four sections dealt with Christian-Jewish dialogue, liturgy, teaching and education, and joint social action.

The Vatican statement revealed the fact, Raphael added, that the church had still not forsown the hope that some day the Jews will accept Christianity, though it did dissociate itself from aggressive forms of missionary activity.

Little Known Episode Told By Gen. Ze'evi

TEL AVIV: A fascinating, little-known episode in the history of Palestine is told by General Rehoboam Ze'evi, writing in Yediot Ahronot.

He tells how, during the long period of Ottoman rule of Palestine, it was the practice of the Turks, on the day of the death of the Sultan, to deliver the keys to Jerusalem's city gates to the Chief Rabbi who held those keys until a new Sultan was crowned. The keys were turned over to the Jews to symbolize their right and title to the city of Jerusalem.

This transfer ceremony, the writer goes on, was conducted by the Moslem governor with the agreement of the Moslem Mufti and the Moslem Cadi. Ze'evi cites a description of the ceremony written in 1861 by a Turkish engineer in Jerusalem.

Yigal Allon Of Israel Meets With President On Mid-East

WASHINGTON: President Ford stressed to Foreign Minister Yigal Allon of Israel last week "the seriousness" of the situation in the Middle East the White House announced.

Following an hour and 40 minutes of talks by Mr. Ford and Mr. Allon, the White House said that the President had also "repeated his commitment" to assisting Israel and the Arab countries to move toward a negotiated settlement.

Mr. Ford has been telling visitors lately of his deep concern that failure to move ahead in the Israeli-Egyptian talks now being discussed could heighten tensions and provoke a new round of fighting.

Mr. Allon, according to the White House statement, "assured the President that the Israeli Government shared his desire for a negotiated settlement."

The White House said that the two sides in the meeting, which was also attended by Secretary of State Kissinger and the Israeli Ambassador, Simcha Dinitz, had discussed "possible approaches" toward the next stage of Israeli-Egyptian talks.

Cairo Rebuffed Israeli Plan
No details were made public to indicate whether the Israelis had made any changes in their last reported offer to Egypt — rejected by Cairo — to pull back an additional distance of 18 to 30 miles in return for political concessions over a period of years.

Earlier, after a two-hour session at the State Department with Mr. Kissinger, Mr. Allon said, "We are still in the middle of our discussion and there is not much to say now."

Mr. Allon confirmed to newsmen that he had a brief meeting at the Capitol with the Soviet Ambassador, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, whose Government broke relations with Israel following the Arab-Israeli war in 1967.

But the Israeli Foreign Minister said the encounter had involved no more than a handshake, after Mr. Dobrynin had asked Ambassador Dinitz to introduce him. They were at the Capitol to listen to Mr. Ford's State of the Union address.

Israel's Budget Reflects Its Economic Difficulties

JERUSALEM: A record IL 55 billion budget for fiscal 1975-76, that reflects Israel's serious economic difficulties, has been proposed to the Cabinet. Although the budget is the largest ever drafted in Israel's history, it falls short of IL 10 billion of the cumulative demands of all ministries and pre-supposes drastic cuts in many government activities and services.

If the budget is approved by the Cabinet and the Knesset, the government will be forced to freeze such expenditures as paving new roads. Construction for social purposes, such as housing for young couples, will be limited. Fewer new schools will be built, forcing the institution of morning and afternoon shifts at schools and the abandonment of free education for tenth graders and above, which had been the original development plan of the Education Ministry.

The proposed budget would also make inevitable lay-offs in the government bureaucracy, a degree of unemployment in other areas of the economy and a reduction of government investments in the economy. Officials said after the Cabinet meeting that the draft budget was not fully discussed and would probably be reviewed in greater detail at the next Cabinet session.

Canadian Executive Says Jews In Cuba Treated Well

MONTREAL: Alan Rose, executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, has reported that on a recent visit to Cuba he found that the Jews are treated with every consideration by the Cuban government and that there had been no change in the status of the 1700 Cuban Jews because of Cuba's severance of relations with Israel.

Rose said the Zionist Center, the Jewish Library and a public kosher restaurant were functioning normally, as was the Albert Einstein school where 45 Jewish children, ranging in age from 6 to 12, receive regular Hebrew instruction. He said the pupils receive lunch at public expense and are bused to and from the school.

Through special arrangements with Cuban authorities, the CJC has sent Passover supplies to the Cuban Jewish community for several years. Rose said he arranged for Passover supplies and other items to be shipped from Canada to Cuba in the near future. He said he had several meetings with Moises Baldas, president of the Comissar Coordinadora de Las Sociedades Religiosas Hebraicas Cuba, the representative organization of Cuban Jewry.

NAMED PRESIDENT
TEL AVIV: Yosef Tekoah, Israel's Ambassador to the United Nations since 1968, has accepted the post of president of the Ben Gurion University of the Negev in Beersheba, it was announced here.

POPULARITY DOWN

AMSTERDAM: Israel's popularity in Holland has slightly dropped this year as compared to 1973. A public opinion poll conducted here recently by The Netherlands Institute for Public Opinion reveals that 37% of the population is pro-Israel, compared to 40% last year.

 military action against southern Lebanon we can perhaps achieve limited blocking aims against terrorist action, but it could also bring about a change in the political and military make-up of Lebanon, pushing it into the extremist camp."

"Of course terrorism is a danger, but mainly to public morale," she wrote. "We tend to exaggerate its real dangers, and over-react militarily for insufficient returns."
 The question of finding the right balance between military action to curtail the guerrillas and at the same time to avoid endangering the essentially moderate Government of Lebanon has always been a major problem for Israeli policy makers dealing with the northern border. The policy that Israel has pursued for the last two years has had two major objectives.

The first objective is to neutralize the guerrillas militarily and keep their attacks on Israeli civilians to an absolute minimum. To this end, Israeli jets have bombed suspected guerrilla encampments in the Arukh region, while ground forces have patrolled and carried out operations on both sides of the frontier. In addition, Israel has spent millions of dollars on an electric fence along the border.

Secondly, Israel wants to apply pressure on the Lebanese Government to take all the steps within its power to curtail guerrilla action in southern Lebanon, if not to eliminate it altogether as Jordan did in 1970.

Israeli officials readily concede that this tactic has had only limited success. They realize that the Government in Beirut is weak and probably could not survive an all-out confrontation with the Palestinian organizations, particularly if the guerrillas received active support from Syria. But the Israelis feel that within certain limits, the Lebanese can control the activities of the Palestinians.

More recently, the Israelis have been attempting to warn Lebanon of the consequences of allowing Syria to assume an active military role in southern Lebanon.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres and other Israeli leaders have spoken out repeatedly in recent weeks stating that Israel would regard the stationing of any Syrian units in southern Lebanon as a warlike act. This campaign reached a peak earlier this month during a meeting between the Lebanese President, Suleiman Franjeh, and the Syrian President Hafez al-Assad. Military cooperation was said to be one of the top items on the agenda.

No significant transfers of Syrian units have been detected. But there have been reports — still unconfirmed by Israeli intelligence — that a battalion of Palestine Liberation Army soldiers has moved from Syria to southern Lebanon.

The unit, reportedly equipped with Soviet-made vehicles and light anti-aircraft guns, is said to be under the operational control of the Syrian Army headquarters in Damascus.

The Palestine Liberation Army consists of regular army units that are ostensibly under the command of the Palestine Liberation Organization, headed by Yasir Arafat. According to Israeli military sources, however, the units are for all practical purposes parts of the armies of the countries in which they are stationed.

The Palestine Liberation Army units in Syria, for instance, are armed and maintained by the Syrian Army, take orders from Syrian headquarters and are activated by the operations branch of the Syrian command, the sources said.

The assumption of most Israeli analysts is that Syria is seeking an arrangement with Lebanon under which Syrian Army units could cross through southern Lebanon into northern Israel in the event of a new war. This would permit the Syrians to outflank the main Israeli force stationed on the Golan Heights and to strike directly into northern Galilee.

Israel Asks United States For More Than $2 Billion

 instead to limit their request to one year at a time.

Position Is Sensitive
 The large aid request has placed Israel in a particularly sensitive position toward the United States. Although officials on both sides assert that in the current peace efforts, Washington has not put pressure on Israel, Israelis acknowledge that Jerusalem must pay attention to Washington's desires, and that any break with the United States on important issues might imperil the American help.

On the other hand, supporters of Israel on Capitol Hill assert that if the Administration wants a foreign-aid bill, it must take care to include provisions for Israel's needs. Otherwise, they said, the Administration runs the risk of having Congress—which has been unenthusiastic about aid in general—block any future aid bill.

Say Soviets In Favor Of Israeli Independence

MOSCOW: A scholarly Soviet journal, in an apparent easing of official policy, has proposed that Israel be guaranteed independence as part of any Middle East peace settlement.

Arab diplomatic sources said they viewed the statement as the Soviet Union's most favorable comment about Israel in recent months.

The proposal was advanced in the December issue of "Asia and Africa Today," a specialist monthly devoted to essays by Soviet experts.

An article entitled "For Peace in the Middle East" restated the Kremlin's position about the region, including a call for immediate resumption of the Geneva (Switzerland) peace conference.

The peaceful solution of the Middle East problem should include recognition of sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence of all the states in the Middle East and their right to live in peace, which, of course, refers to Israel also," the magazine said.

The article also said that any peace settlement must include Israeli withdrawal to 1967 borders and the creation of a Palestinian homeland. The article also charged that world opinion was turning more and more against the Jewish state because "the leaders of Israel reject the very possibility of creating a Palestinian state."

Police Minister Hillel Patrols Neighborhood

JERUSALEM: Residents of Jerusalem's Kiryat Hayovel quarter feel a bit safer now with its newest Civil Guard recruit.

He is Police Minister Shlomo Hillel, who patrols the neighborhood with a partner four hours every Friday night.

The only minister to volunteer so far, Hillel went through the same procedure as any other Civil Guard applicant. The police checked his record for past criminal offenses.

Then a Druse Border Patrol officer trained him in the use of the lightweight, M-1 semi-automatic carbine once used by American marines in World War II and now being introduced in the Civil Guard.
