JOINS FEDERATION STAFF. The appointment of William Robin to the position of assistant executive director of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island has been announced by Dan Asher, executive director.

Mr. Robin will leave his position as the general manager of Weight Watchers of Rhode Island and Eastern Massachusetts to assume his new position. He will be working in the areas of community relations, women's division and development of suburban areas.

Administrator of Temple Beth El from 1962 to 1966, Mr. Robin has been chairman of the Jewish Community Relation Council's committee on interfaith and intergroup relations, board member of the JFRI and immediate past treasurer of Temple Beth El.

He currently serves on the board of directors of the Jewish Community Center, the Jewish Bureau of Education and the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association.

A member of the school committee of Easton, Pennsylvania, where he resided before returning to Providence of which he is a native, he was also a member of the Providence School Committee from 1966 to 1968. He is a graduate of Brown University and served in the 76th Infantry Division of the US Army during World War II.

Israel, Egypt Said To Agree On Key Issues Regarding Sinai

WASHINGTON: Egypt and Israel were reported to have narrowed their differences significantly on one of the key remaining issues holding up completion of a new agreement on the Sinai Peninsula.

According to well-placed and reliable informants, a general understanding has emerged in recent days on the disposition of early-warning systems in the Sinai passes, where 100 to 200 American civilians would be employed as part of a compromise arrangement.

In what is regarded as a major Egyptian concession, Cairo has agreed to let Israeli technicians continue to operate the large Israeli early-warning system at Umm Khisheib, to the west of the Gidi Pass, one of two passes that will be evacuated by Israeli forces as part of the projected agreement being negotiated by Secretary of State Kissinger.

Some American technicians will be assigned to Umm Khisheib as part of the arrangement being worked out.

This became known several hours before Mr. Kissinger's scheduled departure for the Middle East on his latest "diplomatic shuttle" aimed at concluding the drawn-out negotiations.

Mr. Kissinger, who had said he would not go on another "shuttle" unless assured of success, will shuttle between Israel and Egypt to wrap up the final details. He also plans to visit Jordan, Syria and Saudi Arabia on the trip that is intended to last no more than 10 days. His first stop will be Israel.

The Israelis had insisted that in return for their withdrawal from the Gidi and Mitla passes, they had to retain for security reasons the Umm Khisheib facility, with its elaborate electronic equipment able to detect Egyptian military movements far to the west.

The Egyptians initially objected to a continuing Israeli presence in the passes, which under the projected accord would be part of a United Nations buffer zone. The Egyptians suggested a "third party" might be acceptable, such as the United States.

Under the compromise plan being negotiated, a small detachment of American civilians will be assigned to Umm Khisheib.

In addition, American technicians would operate four smaller observation posts and share their information with Israel, Egypt and the United Nations. If the Egyptians desire, a station comparable to Umm Khisheib could be built in which Egyptians and Americans would watch Israeli movements.

Vote by Congress Stressed

Although there appear to be no legal barriers for American civilians to serve as volunteer technicians in the passes, Mr. Kissinger has said that no Americans would be involved unless Congress first gave a vote of approval. This would be done to avoid charges the Administration was trying on its own to "involve" the United States in a possible Middle East War.

State Department officials said that the technicians could be drawn from private industry or from Government agencies such as the Defense Department, the Central Intelligence Agency or the National Security Agency. It is also presumed that civilians attached to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration could operate the sensor devices.

The possibility of American involvement was raised when Mr. Kissinger met with Premier Yitzhak Rabin in Bonn last month. President Ford gave his approval about July 15.

The issue of American presence has become a controversial aspect of the projected accord. A Senior State Department official said that he believed Congress would approve the sending of Americans to the Sinai passes, since they would not be military and would have no combat function. A sampling by the White House of about 30 members of Congress found no opposition, he said.

The Administration, aware of concern that the Americans should not become the forerunner of a larger American military presence in the Middle East, is privately stressing that the Sinai will not be another "Vietnam," in which a small American involvement gradually but steadily multiplied.

Compromise Is Possible

The other major issue still unresolved is the line marking the eastward advance of Egyptian forces under the accord. At present, Egyptian forces are at a line just to the east of the Suez Canal.

The Israelis want the Egyptians to advance no further than the width of the present United Nations buffer zone separating Egyptian and Israeli forces under the disengagement accord of January, 1974.

The Egyptians, however, want to advance further eastward into what is now Israeli occupied land. Mr. Kissinger may be able to obtain a compromise in which the Egyptians move further eastward in return for satisfactory arrangements on the early-warning system.

As in the 1974 disengagement accord, this agreement, if concluded, will also have so-called "limited zones" in which both Egypt and Israel accept constraints on the sizes of their military forces facing each other across the United Nations buffer zone.

The details of this arrangement, which will not be made public, have not yet been concluded.

ADL Charges Dept. Of Commerce With Assisting In Arab Boycott

NEW YORK, N.Y.: The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has charged that the US Department of Commerce is itself "cooperating and assisting" in Arab boycott operations against Israel while reminding American firms that federal law requires them to report boycott requests.

In a letter of protest to Rogers Morton, Secretary of Commerce, Seymour Graubard, national chairman of the League, said that the Department is disseminating foreign tenders which include boycott provisions against Israel. He specifically cited a nationally disseminated letter from the Department's Office of Business Research and Analysis to which was attached a June, 1975, communication from Iraq seeking to purchase 3,550 precast buildings. Included in the specifications, terms and conditions, was a boycott provision reading as follows: "Country of Origin: The tenderer should not incorporate (sic) this tender any material that has been manufactured in Israel or by companies boycotted officially by Iraqi Government."

When the matter came to ADL's attention, Graubard went on to say, the League telephoned the Commerce Department desk which circulated the mailing and was advised that "it is routine practice" to disseminate such tenders. In some cases, ADL was told, the Commerce Department "writes them up," and in other cases, the distribution is arranged by computer. Graubard said the League was also informed that the tenders are received by Commerce from the U.S. State Department. The letter itself states that Commerce received the tender from a "U.S. foreign service post."

Under the direction of Arnold Forster, ADL's associate director and general counsel, a League representative visited the Department of Commerce and examined tenders distributed by its Office of Domestic and International Business Trade Operation from about 1974 to the present. The League only spot-checked tenders from Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Libya, Syria, Qatar, Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan and the United Arab Emirates, and found one other instance in which the Department distributed a tender containing Arab boycott provisions and other questionable informational requirements.

In addition, the ADL search of Commerce files turned up informational requirements which if complied with, Forster said, would enable the Arab country to take the next step of rejecting bids that violate boycott rules.

ADL Forster said, also communicated with the State Department and talked by telephone with the director of the Office of Commercial Affairs, who promised to look into the matter. Graubard said however, that because the subject is so important, he had written to the Secretary of Commerce, with a copy of the letter to the Secretary of State.

"It is ironic," Graubard declared in his letter to Mr. Morton, "that the Commerce Department distributes warnings to American companies to remind them that the provisions of the Export Administration Act require a report to the Department of any request for boycott compliance — while your Department itself is disseminating proposed purchases which include requests for Arab boycott. We wonder how many companies receiving these mailings have reported, as required under the Act, that the Commerce Department itself is guilty of violating the law."

He asked that "the Commerce Department comply with American public policy as set forth in the Export Administration Act, which opposes submission to boycott demands of friendly countries by other foreign powers."

Earlier this month, Commerce Department officials reported that the Department's Office of Export Administration had sent a letter to more than 30,000 U.S. firms which export goods abroad in order to remind them of a 1965 federal law that requires them to report boycott requests. According to the OEA, a total of 1,800 such requests were reported in April, May and June.

bold and courageous steps you (Ford) 100 per cent," in a comment to newsmen.

In a statement left at the White House made available to the media, the visitors said "the bold and courageous steps you (Ford) have taken in reassessing our policies and your fair and even-handed approach to the problems of the (Middle East) area can only enhance the United States' image and further improve our relations with traditional allies."

The request for recognition of the PLO as the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and a condemnation of Israel for attacks on terrorist bases in Lebanon were contained in a statement given to the President by Mowar.

Ford Receives Delegation From Arab-American Group

WASHINGTON: A delegation of 11 leaders of the National Association of Arab-Americans visited with President Ford at the White House and posed with the President in a group picture after presenting him with a request that he recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The meeting, which lasted about 20 minutes, marked the first time that an Arab-American group has been at the White House since the Six-Day War, according to the visitors.

Edward Howar, the Association's president, said "we are behind him (Ford) 100 per cent," in a comment to newsmen.

In a statement left at the White House made available to the media, the visitors said "the

Histadrut Stopped AFL-CIO Sponsorship

TEL AVIV: The Israeli labor federation stopped accepting A.F.L.-C.I.O. sponsorship of Asian trainees for labor courses here in the nineteen-sixties after it was suspected that the American Central Intelligence Agency had a hand in these sponsorships, it was reported here.

The Israeli federation, called Histadrut runs courses for trade unionists from third-world countries.

Israel Herz, deputy director of the Histadrut international department, said that in the sixties the A.F.L.-C.I.O. had asked Histadrut to admit candidates from several Asian organizations to its courses. The Americans paid the trainees' travel expenses and Israelis covered local costs.

He said that when reports were received of connections between the C.I.A. and the American labor movement, the Histadrut's secretary general at that time, Reuven Barkait, ruled all candidates would have to apply directly to the Histadrut's institute or to Israeli embassies.

DEVALUE POUND

TEL AVIV: The Israel Pound was devalued two percent recently, which means that the U.S. dollar is now worth IL 6.24.

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

Regulating the TV Eye

Arresting Statistic: The average US youngster watches more than 22 hours of TV a week. By the time your child reaches 18, he or she will have spent more time gazing at TV programs and commercials than in class.

The economic (not to mention the social and psychological) ramifications are enormous. Over $400 million a year is spent on TV ads aimed at very young consumers — and the expenditure is not wasted. Mothers buy an additional $1.5 billion a year of particular products and brands to satisfy little John or Mary Jane, calculates Mel Helitzer in his book "The Youth Market."

In response to these facts, the federal government and the broadcast industry's own National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) have in the past few years begun to issue program codes designed to limit the impact of brutal or violent programs on juveniles, curtail certain advertising practices and the quantity of commercials to which youngsters are exposed.

But the codes or guidelines do not carry the force of law. They merely place broadcasters on notice that if they advertise in a way not in conformity, they may be facing a potential lawsuit or at least a complaint from either the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) or the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

What are these guidelines?

Basically, they establish specific blocks of time as "family viewing" or children's viewing time and impose certain restrictions on shows and commercials in those periods.

* Beginning next fall, for instance, only shows that are appropriate for "general family audiences" — not containing sex or violence — may be shown between 7 and 9 p.m.

* From shows primarily aimed at youngsters under 12, the NAB has already banned commercials for supplemental vitamins and over-the-counter drugs. Advertisers also are no longer permitted to encourage child viewers to seek products through give-away premiums, contests, cut-out box top toys and club memberships.

* As of January 1, 1976, time allotted to commercials during Saturday and Sunday mornings will drop to 9½ minutes per hour. Youngsters' shows once included 16 minutes per hour of commercials; this past year, 10 minutes was the limit; now, it's to be the same as on network commercials during adult prime time.

Sounds reasonable enough. What, then, are the problems?

Segments of the broadcast and advertising industries feel these regulations unduly restrict free enterprise and free speech, resent the NAB's efforts to cooperate on codes with federal regulatory agencies. But consumer groups — such as Action for Children's Television (ACT) and the Council on Children Media and Merchandising (CCMM) — argue that the broadcast industry's self-regulation efforts are far from adequate.

The NAB guidelines don't apply to "about 90 per cent" of the programs viewed by youngsters, the two protest groups have told the FTC in a petition. Eight of the ten most popular children's shows are aired between 7:30 and 9 p.m. and are thus free from restrictions on ads shown weekend mornings.

It's more than a problem of dollars and cents. According to the Food and Drug Administration's National Clearing House for Poison Control, of the more than 100,000 children under five accidentally poisoned during 1973, over 12,000 were pre-schoolers who swallowed vitamins, household cleaners and disinfectants with which they became familiar through TV commercials.

What might be solutions by the NAB itself, or failing voluntary industry action, by the regulatory agencies?

(1) No dangerous or hazardous products would be advertised to children before 9 p.m.;

(2) All ads for potentially hazardous products for children would include written and verbal warnings about misuse;

(3) No ad for over-the-counter drugs would show a child in the picture at any time of day or night;

(4) Broadcasters, particularly those who air commercials for hazardous products or drugs between 7 and 9 a.m. and 7 and 9 p.m. would be required to carry spots identifying the phone number and location of the nearest poison control center.

$100 Million Saudi Loan To AT&T Will Not Influence Company Policy

NEW YORK: The loan of $100 million by Saudi Arabia to the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. "in no way compromises AT&T's commitment to make every effort to recruit and promote the most qualified candidates into its jobs, including Jewish men and women," says Charles L. Brown, executive vice-president of AT&T.

Brown made the statement in response to an appeal by the American Jewish Congress that the utility state publicly that the loan would not influence employment policy toward Jews, "either at home or abroad, and that your company has not surrendered to the Arab boycott of Israel or of firms doing business with Israel." Asked whether the reply referred to hiring of Jews for employment in Saudi Arabia, Brown said, "We have no employees in Saudi Arabia."

GATHERING CLOUDS OVER ISRAEL

By DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN

Twenty-seven years ago the majority of the members of the United Nations voted for the establishment of the Jewish State. No sooner did this take place than seven Arab states, well armed and in overwhelming numbers, immediately invaded with the avowed intent of destroying the infant state.

Israel not only had to face these invaders unaided, but was also handicapped by a complete arms embargo. The United States, France and England refused the arms so sorely needed for defense. Not only did they refuse to sell arms but assiduously prevented any reaching Israel from other sources. Such weapons as did reach Israel during its War of Independence had to find their way through "illegal channels."

When the State of Israel came into existence its armament consisted largely of a hodgepodge of homemade mortars and grenades, antiquated rifles and machine guns, many of WWI vintage. Some guns had been purchased from British soldiers, and some were smuggled in at considerable personal risk.

Although the United States promptly recognized the provisional government as the "de facto" authority, it was still zealous in its efforts to prevent any arms from reaching the beleaguered state. Police and government agencies were assigned to ferret out hidden weapons. In New York City a cache of rifles, guns and ammunition, painstakingly assembled, was discovered concealed in bales of clothing destined for Israel. Two young Zionists were arrested and charged with violating New York's Sullivan Law.

Some arms arrived from Czechoslovakia. Although the decision to sell these weapons to Israel was the decision of the entire government, the secretary of the Czech Communist Party, Rudolf Slansky, was later charged with participation in a "Jewish Zionist" conspiracy. He was tried, sentenced and executed. The Soviet Union was one of the UN members which not only had voted for the establishment of the Jewish State, but had vigorously supported it. Even at that early date Russia was pursuing her own devious policy.

The conclusion of the War of Independence did not bring an end to the arms embargo. In 1951, the United States, England and France publicly announced their tripartite agreement on an arms policy for the Middle East. Although the Arab States were receiving a constant supply of sophisticated weapons, Israel was denied arms from any of the three great powers.

Israel's armament picture still remains bleak. The United States is the only country which is willing to supply Israel, but is currently undergoing a policy of "reassessment." Even Jordan which has openly professed its alliance with Syria and Egypt, and has agreed to permit terrorists to renew operations from her territory, is being supplied by us with squadrons of jet planes, surface-to-air Hawk missile systems and anti-aircraft guns, while massing troops and armor at the border.

The State Department insists that Israel yield to Egypt's demand for a total withdrawal from the Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai. To prevent a repetition of the surprise attack of October 1973 a multi-million dollar early warning system was built on a 2,500 foot peak at the Gidi Pass, near the canal. Since the Yom Kippur War an additional $30 million was spent to modernize and automate its earlier equipment.

From it a network of sensing devices covers an area of over a hundred miles extending into Egypt, which is able to detect and distinguish not only types of planes, but also movement of mechanized equipment.

Egypt suggested that the United States take over the operation of this early warning system, but Israel prefers to depend on her own army. They have learned from past experience that going through normal State Department channels can be a long, complicated and frustrating procedure, even when the department is inclined to be cooperative. The security of Israel cannot be trusted to others. History repeats itself and those that fail to profit from past errors are bound to repeat them.

Yielding the passes would seriously weaken Israel's defensive positions. It was only because Israel controlled the passes and the air in the War of 1967 that it was able to destroy Egypt's armor and army trapped in them. Surrendering them to Egypt would enable her to send her tanks through unhindered, which could fan out to threaten not only the Negev but also Jerusalem.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres as a military man vigorously opposed surrendering the passes without a reciprocal concession on the part of Sadat. Considerable pressure is exerted for him to concede, which would jeopardize the country's security. However, when you are completely surrounded by hostile neighbors bent on your destruction, you have little choice when the only country willing to supply you with arms resorts to pressure.

Washington, fearful of disrupting her "detente" with the Soviets is unwittingly making demands that could well prove suicidal to Israel. She has yet to learn that detente means give and take. So far we have given and been taken. It is tragic that the greatest, strongest and most affluent nation in the world is supinely yielding her supremacy to the Soviets. Ignoring warnings, President Ford rushed off to Helsinki to sign a treaty legalizing Russia's rape of Eastern Europe. As she was signing the treaty agreeing on non-intervention in the affairs of other countries, the Soviets were already aiding the Communist takeover in Portugal.

When the German Kaiser in 1914 cynically declared that a treaty was only a scrap of paper, he ushered in an era of hypocrisy. No provocation is necessary for hostilities to occur. War begins when the aggressor is prepared, without need of a formal declaration of war. Hitler repeatedly referred to his "Final Solution" and was ignored. The Arabs have made it quite clear that they are dedicated to the elimination of the State of Israel, and it is time Jews paid attention.

Militant Arabs feel that time is on their side, without need for concessions to Israel. They have seen South Vietnam abandoned after eleven years of war, with 46,000 dead and the expenditure of over $100 billions. They have seen Turkey abandoned, an old and valued ally. It is obvious that although we still have 40,000 troops stationed in South Korea, that should the north make another invasion attempt, we will refuse to sacrifice more American lives. The Arabs feel that it is only a matter of time before Israel is also abandoned, should it entail a confrontation with the Soviets.

Israel has never been in greater danger than at present. Not only have Syria, Egypt and Iraq been lavishly supplied with sophisticated weapons by the Soviets, but Jordan and particularly Saudi Arabia are also being supplied heavily by the United States. Sadat boasts that he is prepared to sacrifice a million soldiers in another war. To Egypt soldiers are statistics. To Israel they are fathers, husbands, sons and brothers.

Since a free and secure Israel in the Middle East is important to the United States, it should be urged to supply her with the means to defend herself, without being stripped of her defenses, unless a definite peace agreement with the Arabs can be reached.

As the black African countries were wooed away from Israel by promises of financial aid, so the oil rich Arab countries are tempting American business, which is scrambling for a share of their new wealth, if this country would only "urge" Israel to retreat to its pre-1967 borders. The State Department has been traditionally unsympathetic to Israel. It aroused President Truman's anger by attempting to jettison his recognition of Israel. It remains to be seen whether President Ford will be as determined.

The Morro Castle

The first warning of what our dedication to comfort and high living portended came to us on a rainy fall day in 1934. The worst of the Depression was over and people were once more trying to find some fun.

Off Barnegat Point in New Jersey a luxury liner was steaming back to New York on the return trip from Havana. It was a vacation cruise.

That night, while the rain fell heavily, there was the traditional ship's party. People were intent on enjoying themselves, intent on drinking and eating, on making love and on planning next year's trip.

They were so intent on these activities they did not even notice when the captain withdrew from his table quite ill and went to his cabin. An hour later the captain of the Morro Castle, R. Wilmott, was dead.

Chief Officer William F. Harms became captain and within hours his command was over. For late that Saturday night flames raced through the ship and the new captain, faced with this sudden crisis, kept his ship at 19 knots into gale winds. The Morro Castle hadn't a chance.

The crewmen deserted in panic. Passengers trapped below in their flaming cabins could see lights twinkling on the Jersey shore. They could see other ships standing off from the Morro Castle. They could see the panic-stricken crew in lifeboats rowing away.

swelves into the sea to escape the intense heat. Those of the crew who stayed did not know how to manage the fire fighting equipment. Lifeboats hung uselessly in their stays.

What made the Morro Castle so startling a symbol was that as she was towed still flaming and smoking toward New York by a Coast Guard cutter, she ran aground on a sandbar off Asbury Park, right

Cinematographer Suslov Arrives In New York City

NEW YORK: Renowned Soviet cinematographer Mikhail Suslov, whose two-year struggle to emigrate won the attention of Jean-Paul Sartre and Simone de Beauvoir, arrived at New York's JFK Airport, with the help of United HIAS Service. Until his departure Suslov was regarded as a major figure in the dissident movement and went on a hunger strike to dramatize his position. He was joined by writer Felix Kamov and journalist Evgeny Baras.

The 36-year-old Suslov has made more than 30 films in the Soviet Union. His production of Chekhov's "The Seagull" won the silver prize for film photography at the 1973 International Film Festival in San Francisco. Another film, "The 6th of June," about the Russian Revolution, was considered a milestone in the Soviet film industry and was seen by over 40 million Russians.

Suslov had been out of work since applying for an exit visa in 1973. He and his family existed on small amounts of money sent by anonymous friends in America and Europe. During this time his films were shown throughout the Soviet Union, but his name was deleted from the credits.

Arriving with Suslov were his wife Irina, their 16-year-old son, Vadim, and Mrs. Suslov's parents and sister. His brother, Ilya, a journalist, and parents previously settled in Cleveland, also under HIAS auspices.

Fifty-one other Soviet Jewish emigrants arrived in the United States on the flight with the Suslov family. HIAS has resettled more than 2900 Russian refugees in the United States during the first six months of 1975.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Before playing to the first trick, COUNT YOUR TRICKS. How many times have I stated those words in this column and how many thousands more have I said it to my pupils. Yet many of them still refuse to do it; often it costs them. Today's hand should have been an easy one but turned out not to be probably for the above reason. Curiously I filled in at the first hand for a partner who hadn't shown up yet. The second time at the end when someone had to leave. This does happen once in a while in Club Tournaments. Both times I bid the hand normally and did what my partner told me to do then watched helplessly as Dummy. Club, the other the singleton Trump. Now, you tell me how many tricks you can make on this hand before playing to that first trick. If you say thirteen you will be right yet both of my "partners" held themselves to twelve. They drew Trumps in three rounds leaving but one in Dummy and then either ruffed a Heart after cashing the Ace or gave up a Spade to the Ace making the twelfth trick with the King in Dummy. They had five tricks in each minor suit plus the Heart Ace to start with.

On seeing the opening lead they should thank their opponent for not cashing his Spade Ace and then count their tricks for he can get to thirteen very easily. He can ruff two Hearts while drawing Trumps. All he has to do after winning that opening lead is play the Heart Ace and ruff a Heart, and then play a Trump to the Ace and ruff another Heart. Now draw Trumps and see how many tricks that adds to: thirteen, that's how many.

I then made the remark, more emphatically to the one who led the Trump, that on that bidding it would seem quite appropriate to try to cash as many Spade tricks as possible before they are discarded on those Clubs. That's the way it sounded to me. The Trump leader said he was trying to stop Heart ruffs in Dummy. I said this was not that kind of hand but rather one would try to stop discards which indicated the lead of the Spade Ace. This was a hand where you try to cash out quickly. Of course, after the Spade Ace is cashed seven is no longer possible but it certainly is there without that lead.

Moral: Do not let the fact that an Ace is missing deter you from going on to Slam. Often that will mean your partner has more and better Kings and Queens to make that Slam even easier.

That is exactly how the bidding went both times I played the hand. Each time I pointed out to my partner after the hand that there was no reason to stop below Slam despite the fact that an Ace was missing. After all South had a singleton in the suit missing the Ace. The opponents certainly could not take two tricks before Declarer was in. Nevertheless, practically no one reached this Slam. One Defender on lead, led a

Ethnic Heritage Studies Of Bureau To Continue

The Ethnic Heritage Studies program sponsored by the Bureau of Jewish Education of Rhode Island has completed its second year and is preparing an expanded program for the coming school year.

Authorized by Title IX of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and receiving its impetus from the successful efforts of the Black, the Spanish speaking and other minority groups in the country, the Bureau of Jewish Education in 1973 initiated exploratory discussions with the public school authorities with a view towards the establishment of courses in Hebrew language, Jewish history and literature, enabling students to earn credits towards high school graduation and for college admissions.

Through the efforts of Louis I. Kramer, former superintendent of schools, and an active member of the Bureau board, the officials of the State Department of Education, the superintendents and high school principals gave their approval of the program which got under way in the fall of 1973 with three classes — a Hebrew language class in the Providence area, a Jewish history class in the Cranston area, and a second history class in the Warwick area. The classes were conducted by teachers who were certified by the state and active in Jewish teaching for many years.

During the first two years of its operation, the Ethnic Heritage classes included 75 teenagers coming from schools in the Pawtucket, Providence, Cranston, Warwick and Barrington school systems. Several of these students were non-Jews who were interested in learning about the Jewish culture. The others were former students of the Day School and congregational school who had discontinued their Jewish education after Bar/Bas Mitzvah or confirmation.

This year two Hebrew classes are projected for the Providence area and two history classes are projected for the Cranston-Warwick area. Classes meet twice a week for four hours, enabling the students to earn credit towards graduation and transcript of their records to the college of their choice.

Enrollments are now being taken at the Bureau office. Further information may be obtained by calling Mr. Schwartz at 331-0956.

CHESS OLYMPIAD

COPENHAGEN: The International Chess Federation (FIDE) is canvassing its members over the possibility of holding the 1976 chess Olympiad in Israel. The Israeli Chess Federation has agreed to host the tournament and pay the participants' expenses, it was learned here. Sweden, which was first on the list of possible host countries, agreed to organize the games but would not pay the expenses. The Swedish Federation said, however, that it would participate in the tournament if it is held in Israel. Iran, the only other Middle East country on the list, has refused to organize the games.

HONORED: Hadassah Blocker, director of Camp Pembroke for 30 years, was honored on the anniversary of her leadership at the observance of the 40th anniversary of the camp which is sponsored by the Eli and Bessie Cohen Foundation.

Guest speaker was Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Temple Emanuel of Newton, Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. Cohen also spoke.

Forty-six of this year's campers are daughters of former campers or counselors. Among them are Amy and Rina Cohen and Barbara Barry of Providence; Jodi Klein of Fall River, Massachusetts, and Cyndie Litchman and Robin Arrick of Somerset, Massachusetts.

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

HALL OF FAME: Even before the famed "Hall of Fame" was established at Cooperstown, a pitcher who accomplished a "no hit, no run" performance was said to have entered the "Hall of Fame" because of his unusual deed. His name was not placed in that mythical edifice because of a popularity contest but because he had done something different; had achieved a special niche on the shelves of memory. And in my opinion, this voting someone into any "Hall of Fame" is not the correct procedure for stamping indelibly the name of someone in the annals of anything. His or her name should be permanently recorded because of an unusual achievement or happening.

FR'INSTANCE: There's the name of Carl Mays. "Who's he?" someone might ask while walking through the "Hall." And the answer would be, "He's the pitcher who set high marks in both the American and National Leagues while using an "underhand" or "submarine" delivery. Unusual? Famed for it? Of course. And then there's the name of Chapman and the question again, "Who's he?" The answer: "He's the only major league baseball player who became a fatality when hit by a pitched ball." Then there could also be the name of Hans Lobert who raced and beat, a horse and an automobile around the base paths. And the name of Eddie Gaedel which probably wouldn't mean too much to an onlooker until the explanation showed that he was forty-three inches "short" and that, as a midget, he was banned from baseball. And I don't think the above could be "elected" to the baseball "Hall of Fame" in a popularity contest but they could be interesting additions. There are many players who have been part of unique happenings for which they have gained fame if not the "Hall of Fame."

ODDITY: It is said that the very first salaried baseball player was an Englishman who was born in London. He was Alfred James Reach, said to be the first to be paid for playing baseball, an American game.

DIFFICULT TO EXPLAIN: Although bicycle enthusiasts have increased during the past few years after diminishing when the motorcar took over the streets, it is difficult for many of them to picture "bike-racing" as the great sport it was when crowds jammed wooden saucers to watch it. Belying the years that must have ensued since he was a "motor-pacer" for bicycle racers, Jimmy Ferruolo stopped to discuss the sport last week. It would be interesting for current bike riders if they'd gather sometime for a lecture by the colorful Jimmy.

THE CYCLEDROME: "Cycledromes were located in many sections," Ferruolo was telling an audience of one on Dyer Street. "Huge banked wooden tracks with seats for spectators around the rim. Great riding athletes like Vincent "Poosha" Madonna, Chapman, Carmen, Verkyn and others thrilled big crowds as they pedaled behind pacers who rode motorcycles. And you had to be good on those motorcycles, too. Not too fast and not too slow but just right for the rider who followed. And what a sight to see three of them abreast and neck and neck roaring around a steeply banked turn!"

THE SIZE! Just to give an idea of the size of the bowls, the Providence Professional Steamroller Football team won the National League championship while using the infield of a Cycledrome, located off North Main Street at Providence-Pawtucket city line, for a home field. Jimmy Ferruolo knew its size immediately. "It was only four times around it to a mile," he said. And, "If someone would build one today, motor paced bicycle racing would again become a major sport. What a television picture it would make!"

WORLD CHAMPION: Eddie Imondi could maneuver his star protege into a world championship; his star protege being undefeated John "Dino" Dennis of Attleboro. "Dino" has won all 24 of his boxing bouts including 24 by the KO route. Muhammad Ali isn't getting younger and Dennis is on the way up. Somewhere in the future, John "Dino" may find himself "in there" with Muhammad at the right time. Dennis will box in the live part of a program at Providence Civic Center on September 30 when Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier will be seen in closed circuit television. Our old friend Sam Silverman is promoting it as was predicted here several weeks ago. — CARRY ON!

ISRAELI HATS IN BEIRUT

TEL AVIV — The Beirut newspaper "Al-Yom" wrote that Israeli-made hats with a Tel Aviv manufacturer's label have been found in Beirut shops and markets. The newspaper said "one of our readers brought one of the hats to our offices and laid it into our arms, which are already burdened by carrying machine-guns and cannons so that some of us (Arabs) can kill each other, while the enemy swamps our markets with such attire."

ABSENTEE BALLOTS
JERUSALEM — The Knesset has passed on first reading a bill introduced by Dr. Boaz Moav, of the recently formed Yaad faction, that would permit Israelis living abroad to vote by absentee ballots in national elections. Dr. Moav said the voting privilege should be extended to students and other Israelis holding valid passports and living abroad but not to "Yordim" (expatriates) who left Israel with no intention to return.

What Is The Reason?

RABBI YAAKOV UVSITZKY

Why is it a custom to begin sounding the shofar on Rosh Chodesh Elul and sounding it throughout the month?

Because it was on Rosh Chodesh Elul that Moses ascended Mount Sinai to receive the second set of Tablets. During that time the sound of the shofar was heard throughout the camp of the Children of Israel calling upon them to repent of the sin that they had committed in making the Golden Calf. The Rabbis therefore said that the shofar should be sounded on Rosh Chodesh Elul and throughout the month to bring the people to repentance.

Why is the shofar not sounded on the Eve of Rosh Hashanah?

This is to stress the distinction between the blowing of the shofar during the month of Elul which is voluntary and based on Rabbinical ruling and that of Rosh Hashanah which is mandatory having been specifically commanded in the Bible.

Why is Rosh Hashanah called Yom Hazikaron (Day of Remembrance)?

Because all our prayers and supplications on the day of Judgment are fervent prayers that the Lord in remembering our merits and the merits of our fathers may show us mercy in the year to come. Rosh Hashanah is called Yom Hazikaron because it is the first day of the Ten Days of Penitence and the only way to show penitence is by remembering that there is a G-d above.

Mrs. Douglas E. Marlowe

The wedding of Miss Celia Muriel Rosen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Rosen of 134 Elton Street, to Douglas Edward Marlowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman C. Marlowe of Rockville Centre, New York, was held on Sunday, August 17, at Temple Beth El. Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman officiated at the noon ceremony. A reception followed at the Cocks N' Kettle Restaurant in Uxbridge, Massachusetts.

The bride is the granddaughter of Samuel Goldin of Providence. Given in marriage by her parents, the bride carried her confirmation Bible covered with a cascade of white roses and stephanotis. Mrs. Daniel Rosen was matron of honor for her sister-in-law. David Marlowe served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Joel Rosen and Daniel Rosen, brothers of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Rochester, New York.

The bride is a 1975 graduate of Rhode Island College and the bridegroom is a 1975 graduate of Rochester Institute of Technology. They will both continue their graduate studies at the Rochester Institute of Technology.

Israel Has Openings For Tax Comptrollers

Israel is in the process of reforming its entire tax structure. Following the Ben-Shachar Commission, the Minister of Finance, Yehoshua Rabinovitz, has decided to implement the commission's recommendations and has termed the changes that will take place as revolutionary. Because of these drastic changes, there will be a need in Israel for new manpower to carry out the reform.

The Jewish Agency, in cooperation with the Ministry of Finance, has decided to embark on a program of recruitment among potential immigrants to find candidates for the Israeli Internal Revenue Service. During the latter part of the summer, a representative of the Israel Ministry of Finance will come to the United States to interview applicants. He will be authorized to guarantee employment and in-service training program for suitable candidates.

Candidates to be considered will include people with a background in bookkeeping, accountants, people with a background in business administration and/or economics.

All candidates found suitable will be required to go through an individualized training program which will include an Ulpan course at one of the Jewish Agency absorption centers. Special consideration will be given to university graduates in economics and to certified public accountants.

During the period of in-service training, candidates will receive a living allowance and housing accommodations.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the Israel Aliyah Center, 31 St. James Avenue, Park Square Building, Boston, Massachusetts 02116, or calling 617 423-0868.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

How To Buy Bonds

Q: Will you please give me your opinion on how I may get the highest return on $80,000 from the sale of some property? I am 72 and have no knowledge of investments. I was planning to put the money in a six-year term certificate, but friends have told me I would get more in utility bonds. How do you buy them? O.M.

A: Since you live near a large metropolitan area, you should have no trouble locating a satisfactory brokerage firm. In fact, your friends could probably give you the name of one. Opening an account is no more complex than opening a charge account. When you open your account make certain that you and your account executive fully understand each other. It is up to you to clarify your goals — high income and capital preservation — and it is his responsibility to guide you within these limits. Oftentimes, people blame a broker for putting them in speculative stocks, which at the time they were only too eager to buy in hopes of making a "killing."

There are literally thousands of attractive bonds available for investment. In addition to any suggestions your broker may have for you, I will list a few which seem to fit your requirements. Recently, Consumers Power offered a 9 3/4% Note, due in 1980. This BBB rated issue is trading at par ($1000) and pays interest on the first of January and July. Indiana and Michigan Electric 10 3/4s of 1982 carry the same rating and pay interest on June and December 1. Niagara Mohawk Power 12.60s of 1981, which are non-callable, trade at a substantial premium to yield 11% currently. This means that when the bond matures in 1981 you would receive only $1000 for each $1090 invested, but during the life of the bond, the company could not call in the bond. Interest on this bond is paid on April 1 and October 1.

International Harvester Credit has notes due in 1982 and paying 9.15%. This A-rated note pays interest on March and September 1. Or if you prefer a somewhat longer maturity, this same issuer also has a debenture, 8-5/8s of 1991, which sells at a 10-point discount from par. If you stick to bonds that carry one of the top four ratings, have reasonable earnings coverage, relatively short maturities and sell at a price where the yield is commensurate with other good quality bonds, you should be very satisfied with your investments.

Exchange Privilege Saves Load Fee

Q: Would you please advise on exchanging Massachusetts Financial Bond Fund. Does the latter pay more than the other funds in the group? Last year, I only received $80 per each $2,500 invested. I also wonder if I should switch some Aetna Fund to MFB? R.R.

A: Within the Massachusetts Financial Services group of funds, the bond fund provides the highest return, with Massachusetts Income Development ranking second. Based on the current net asset value for each of these three funds and income distributions of the last twelve months, the annual return on $2,500 invested would be as follows: MFB — $215; MID — $185, and MIT — $105. Since you are interested in income, Massachusetts Financial Bond Fund seems to be the best choice. Of these three, MFB was the only one to pay a capital gain distribution in the period. A similar exchange may be made within the Aetna group, which would save you the expense of paying a load fee to change to another fund group. Aetna Income Shares, which pay dividends monthly, are currently yielding 8.8%. Using the same criteria as in the above examples, the return on a $2,500 investment would be $220 annually in this bond fund.

Q: I am enclosing a list of the stocks I own which I hope you will review. Most of these were inherited from my dad, the rest I purchased over the years. Considering the amount invested, I am not getting a very big income. This is my only income other than occasional part time work. How can I improve the return on this portfolio?

A: Your annual income from these stocks, at $3,500, is certainly modest by comparison to the $82,000 current value of the portfolio. One very easy change from Putnam Growth Fund, paying you $720 in annual dividends, to Putnam Income Fund, which will return $1,840 on the same capital, is my first suggestion. You hold three stocks which have either omitted the dividend or have never paid one. Sale would yield $9,400 to invest in income-producing securities. By investing this in equal dollar amounts of American Electric Power and Cleveland Electric Illuminating, both NYSE listed, you will receive $900 in added dividends. All told, these few changes will give you over $2,000 extra yearly income.

How To Find Out Who Owns What

Q: I have been told that a number of brokerage companies own a large percentage of the stock of Plant Industries (ASE). Is there any way of finding out if this is true? Wouldn't this make the stock speculative? Are there any SEC regulations concerning ownership of stocks by brokers.

A: For publicly owned corporations, information on the individual ownership of blocks of 5% or more of the outstanding stock is considered public and is available at the Public Reference Room of the Securities & Exchange Commission (SEC). You may obtain the information either in person or by writing to this agency at 510 North Capitol Street, Washington, D.C.

The Arabs May Be Right:

A Little

Israel is too much in the right. The Arabs are too much in the wrong. This is a sure way to have a quarrel. No one likes to be wrong.

Generally speaking, when a man is really wrong, he figures that the only way to prove he is right is to keep on doing exactly as he has been doing, only harder. He can't possibly change, because to do so he would have had to have been wrong.

On the other hand, when a man knows he is mostly right, he can't afford to have a little bit of what he's doing be wrong. He has enough rightness to more than balance the wrongness. This man can change.

I think what we need to do is find some way the Arabs can be right. This may be difficult, but I'm sure we Jews can do it. Just like finding some way a chicken with a big blood blister can be kosher when you know the woman who brought it to you will go hungry on Shabbos if you don't.

If we find a way the Arabs can be right, even a little thing they're doing that's right, they'll feel better. They won't have to try so hard to be right by being wrong.

Although I am unable to find any confirmation of your contention in my files, several officers and directors of Plant Industries do own over 700,000 shares (26%) of the outstanding stock. In spite of this, the floating supply exceeds 2 million shares, which appears to be a sufficient number to meet any demand, judging from the narrow trading range for the shares recently. When there is a limited floating supply of stock available for trading, price action is apt to be highly volatile, sharply exaggerating any corporate developments. This has not been the case in these shares. The issue is speculative, but on the grounds of the company's poor financial position rather than for the reason you cite. At the end of 1974, current assets exceeded current liabilities by only 1.05-to-1 with inventories accounting for close to 50% of these assets.

While no specific SEC regulation prohibits the ownership of stocks by a brokerage house, transactions by brokers for their own accounts are carefully monitored by this agency. As a matter of self-protection, brokerage firms holding a position in a security will generally state the fact on any written buy/sell recommendation for that stock in order to avoid the charge of benefiting from their own advice to their clients.

Q: Recently you mentioned Government and Agency bonds. What do these bonds pay in interest, on average, and where are they purchased? L.G.

A: Treasury Notes due in 1 to 2 years are yielding an average of 7.6% currently. Longer term notes and bonds which are due in 3 years up to 25 are returning 7.8% to 8.5% depending on maturity, with the best yields on the longest maturities. On agency issues, interest rates range about 20 basis points higher than for Governments with similar maturities. You should be able to buy these debt issues through any broker/dealer or from a commercial bank.

Of course, they may resent us for figuring it out for them when they couldn't figure it out themselves. We'll have to do it without making them wrong even more.

Two men had a dispute and could not agree, so finally they took the matter to a rabbi. The rabbi listened very carefully to the first man's explanation.

"Very interesting," he said, "And you are right."

Then the second man began to explain his side of the issue. He was as excited as the first man. The rabbi listened to him, too. Finally he was finished with his argument and the rabbi spoke.

"Very interesting," the rabbi said, "and you are right."

At this a student of the rabbi's, who had been in the room and could not help overhearing all of the arguments, spoke up.

"Rabbi," he said, "I must speak. I do not understand how you can say this. You listened to the first man. He told his side of the story in such a way that would exclude any possibility of the other man's being right. You said the first man was right. Then the second man spoke, and if what he said was true at all, the first man must be a liar, a thief and a boor. You listened to him and then you said he was right. Rabbi, I respect you, but this is impossible."

The rabbi listened very carefully to his student, and when the student finished his protest, the rabbi spoke again.

"Very interesting," the rabbi said. "And you are right."

Israeli Authorities Report Arrest Of Several Terrorists

TEL AVIV: The fathers of two young terrorists from Nablus who were captured with high explosives at Ben Gurion Airport, and the brother of one of them, are among an undisclosed number of terrorist suspects taken into custody since the incident, security sources have disclosed here.

They also reported the arrests of nine terrorists from the Tulkarem area suspected of planting booby-trapped bicycles in Natanya last month and laying explosive charges near the Beth Lid road junction where Israeli soldiers congregate to hitch rides.

Kamal Ya Yish, a Nablus travel agent, was arrested following questioning of his son, Amad, 19, who was apprehended by an alert border policewoman at a Ben Gurion Airport checkpoint.

The investigation revealed that young Ya Yish was selected for the sabotage mission because he was familiar with the airport, having worked for his father as a tourist guide and escorted tourists to and from the air terminal.

Questioning of his companion, Louis Abud, led to a search of the latter's house in Nablus, where a large cache of explosives and detonators was found.

Abud's father, a horse-trader who frequently crossed the Jordan River bridges, was taken into custody on suspicion of smuggling the detonators from Jordan.

Another of Abud's sons was also arrested.

An army spokesman announced that nine members of the Tulkarem gang were arrested as a result of an investigation that began after booby-trapped bicycles exploded near a Hapoel Hamizrachi youth club in Natanya July 14.

All were identified as members of the Iraqi-sponsored Popular Struggle Front. They are also believed responsible for the explosives found at the Beth Lid junction June 9.

General Headquarters, meanwhile, has warned Israeli soldiers not to hitch rides in unknown cars and not engage the use of cars and drivers who appear suspicious to them.

The warning was issued after intelligence sources established that terrorists were resorting to an old ruse of offering rides to hitchhiking soldiers in order to kidnap them as hostages or murder them.

The terrorists employ cars with counterfeit Israeli license plates. Usually the seat beside the driver is vacant but two or three "passengers" occupy the back seat.

An Israeli paratrooper, Eli Lupo, was murdered on Dec. 21, 1973, after accepting a ride. Lately, similar attempts have been made to pick up Israeli soldiers, but none was successful, apparently because the soldiers were suspicious.

PARTICIPATES IN INTERNSHIP: Charles Granoff of 258 Merry Mount Drive in Warwick, participated in the Senate internship program operated by Senator Claiborne Pell in Washington, D.C. for students at Rhode Island colleges and universities. Mr. Granoff is entering his senior year at Hamilton Country Day School and plans to attend either Georgetown or George Washington University. The Pell Senate Internship Program, which began when Senator Pell came to the Senate in 1961, has already brought close to 900 Rhode Island students to Washington for a week of experience in the peration of the United States Senate and Senator Pell's office.

Sunshine Boys At Matunuck

Neil Simon's latest Broadway comedy hit, The Sunshine Boys, will be the final production this summer of the 42nd season at the Theatre-by-the-Sea in Matunuck. It will play Tuesday, August 26, through Monday, September 1.

This comedy tells the story of two ex-vaudeville performers (now in their 70s) who try to make a comeback.

In the Theatre-by-the-Sea production, which will be directed by Arthur Walsh, will be Frank Sullivan and Herb Aronson.

Others in the cast include Michael Hirsch, Brenda Johnson, Nanci Rueger, Jay Martino and another actor named Frank Sullivan from Boston. Scenery and lighting are by James Franklin and Phillip Evola.

There will be two matinees, one on Wednesday, August 27 and the other on Thursday, August 28, both at 2 p.m. A special gala farewell performance, to be given on Labor Day, September 1, at 7 p.m., has been added to mark the end of the season.

PLEDGE REQUIRED

NEW YORK: Ernest Kohn, acting superintendent of the New York State Banking Department, has pledged that an Arab-sponsored bank that plans to open in New York shortly will be required to give a pledge of non-discrimination before it receives a charter from his department.

Expect Humorous Lecture; Hear Feminist Speaker

NEW YORK: One hundred young Jewish leaders of the future met in Howard Samuels' West Side apartment last week, expecting to hear titillating things about the so-called Jewish American Princess. Instead, they got a lecture on feminism.

In fact, the Jewish American Princess was hardly even mentioned at all, even though the speaker, a Jewish feminist, was supposed to talk about "From Yiddishe Mama to Jewish American Princess in Three Generations."

"Jewish women live in a twilight zone of myth," said the speaker, Aviva Cantor Zuckoff, one of the founders of the Jewish Feminist Organization and associate editor of Hadassah Magazine.

"They are programed to be enablers," she said, "to do whatever they have to do — housework, cooking, taking care of the children — to enable Jewish men to do their thing. They do it because of the myth that they have this honored and important role in Jewish survival, and that if they don't the Jewish people are going to fall apart."

Future Leaders

The 34-year-old Mrs. Zuckoff, who is married with no children, spoke to members of the Manhattan Leadership Development Program, a year-and-a-half-old group that is training young Jews for future leadership positions in the United Jewish Appeal and Federation of Jewish Philanthropies whose fund appeal Mr. Samuels will head next year.

Many of them had come expecting a humorous speech, but the humor was mixed with heavy doses of feminism that resulted in several audible snorts from disapproving members of the audience.

"Home is the ghetto for the Jewish woman," Mrs. Zuckoff told the audience, which was about half men and half women, some married, some single, mostly in their 20's and 30's. "She can come and go, but she has to be home to make dinner and take care of the kids, and have floors so clean that guests can eat off them, and be able to prepare a huge platter of food if guests unexpectedly arrive from Israel."

The laughter was nervous. The Jewish woman, she went on, "is programed to be of service to men — father, brother, husband and sons — and to be supersensitive to their needs; programed to bask in the sunshine of one's husband's accomplishments — and oi vay, if he doesn't have any accomplishments. In essence, she is trained to be a victim."

Guilt is also heaped upon the Jewish woman because she is almost solely responsible for her children, Mrs. Zuckoff said. "If they turn out badly, it's her fault. She thinks, 'If I'd only stayed home,' or 'If I'd only worked part time,' or 'If I'd only volunteered,' or 'If I'd only gone home at 3 p.m. and given them milk and cookies.'"

Mrs. Zuckoff denounced the dearth of women rabbis and cantors ("If no sexism existed, I would have been Cantor"), the lack of Jewish day care centers, and what she called the "poor quality" of Jewish education.

Critical of Volunteers

She was especially critical of volunteerism, which she believes attracts many wealthy Jewish American Princesses who are rarely paid for their work.

"Women are trapped into volunteerism," she said. "Jewish society wants our work, wants our skills, but they don't want to pay for them. Maybe if Jewish women didn't take these jobs, needy women would be paid to do them."

The feminist urged more Jewish women to join consciousness-raising groups (she belonged to one for two years), to get involved with the Jewish Feminist Organization, and to organize Jewish day care centers so they could have decent places to leave their children while they worked.

Talents Called Wasted

Needless to say, there was much disagreement in the small group discussions that followed her speech. Several men said they, too, felt oppressed, because they did not like the aggressive masculine sex roles assigned to them; and several women said they liked being "Jewish American Princesses" and catering to men.

"Too many alternatives can create problems, too," sniffed a divorced man in aviator glasses.

A woman who once worked for the Jewish Family Service said she thought it was untrue that the Jewish woman had no power of her own.

"These families would come in for counseling," she recalled, "and everytime the man would try to open his mouth, the wife would say, 'Shut up!'"

But, somebody asked, remembering the theme of the evening, is there really such a thing as a Jewish American Princess?

"The same quality exists among gentile women, too," said one.

"Oh, let's face it," cut in a young businessman, "Jewish fathers and husbands tend to elevate their wives and daughters more than other societies. A couple of generations of this, and a woman begins to think that things have to be done for her."

Court Of Appeals Dismisses Appeal For Kosher Food For Prisoners

NEW YORK: The issue of whether Jewish inmates in federal prisons can have kosher food on request remained unresolved after a ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in New York.

The appeals court dismissed on technical grounds an appeal by two Jewish Defense League members seeking such food as prison inmates.

Richard Huss, 19, and Jeffrey Smilow, 20, were sentenced here last year to a year in prison by Federal Judge Thomas Griesa for refusing to testify in the trial of two other JDL members, Stuart Cohen and Sheldon Davis, in the January, 1972 fire-bombing of the Manhattan offices of Sol Hurok and Columbia Artists Management. Huss and Smilow are serving out their terms at the Federal Youth Correctional Facility in Ashland, Kentucky.

Kosher food is not available in any federal prison. Judge Griesa denied the application of the two youths for kosher foods during their imprisonment; the denial was appealed to the appeals court.

In a related development, supporters of Rabbi Meir Kahane, the JDL founder, picketed the offices of Matthew Walsh, director of the federal half-way house in Manhattan, where Kahane is serving a one-year term for violation of parole.

The picketing was done under auspices of the Jewish Identity Center, described by Sheila Lidz, its executive director, as the educational branch of the JDL and the Union of Jewish Prisoners, of which Mrs. Lidz is chairwoman.

Mrs. Lidz said the purpose of the picketing was to focus public attention on "the suit filed by Rabbi Meir Kahane's attorney against the Justice Department for willfully violating" a ruling by Federal Judge Jack B. Weinstein, who sentenced Rabbi Kahane, that "all Jewish

Oral Law Conference Holds Annual Meeting

JERUSALEM: Mercy-killing (euthanasia) is forbidden by Jewish law under any circumstances, Rabbi Simha Hachohen Kook, rabbi of Rehovot, told delegates to the oral law conference (Tora Shebaal Peh Conference) here.

The conference is an annual event held at the Rav Kook Institute here. The Rehovot rabbi is a great-grandson of the first Rav Kook whose name the institute bears. This year's conference is on halacha and medical problems. Rabbi Kook said the ban applied even when the patient was suffering terribly and there was no hope whatever for saving him.

Haifa's newly elected Sephardic Chief Rabbi, Eliahu Bakshi-Doron, considered the question of plastic surgery performed for cosmetic purposes. He said that if the patient had a noticeable physical disability which obviously caused him grief and anxiety, then it would be permitted to undertake cosmetic surgery to remove or minimize it.

But cosmetic operations were prohibited when they were undertaken solely for beautification purposes when no glaring flaw in the patient's appearance was noticeable. In such cases the operation would be considered by the halacha an unnecessary wound — and therefore unlawful.

ENGAGED: Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Fishman of New Rochelle, New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mindy Robin, to Larry Philip Berstein, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Berstein of 352 Grotto Avenue. Miss Fishman, 1973 valedictorian of New Rochelle High School, is a first year medical student at Boston University School of Medicine. Mr. Berstein, a 1972 National Merit Scholar and summa cum laude graduate of Classical High School, is enrolled in the second year at the same medical school. Both are Dean's list students in the Boston University's six year medical program. Miss Fishman's father is treasurer of Commons Brothers, Inc., Pharmaceutical Distributors of New York City. Dr. Berstein is an obstetrician-gynecologist practicing in the Greater Providence area. A summer wedding in 1976 is planned.

Hadassah Medical Organization Threatens To Withdraw From WHO

SAN FRANCISCO: The Hadassah Medical Organization, an American affiliate of the World Health Organization, said this week that it would withdraw from that body if it "did not cease conducting a political campaign against Israel."

The threat to withdraw was made in a letter to Dr. S. A. Malafatopoulos, president of W. H. O. Hadassah protested that body's recent resolution condemning Israel's medical treatment of Arab inhabitants on the West Bank, and its recommendation that the Palestine Liberation Organization provide health services to the Palestinians.

Hadassah, holding its 61st annual meeting at the Hilton Hotel maintains a comprehensive network of health, educational and social service programs in Israel and plays a major role in cooperating with the Israeli Government in providing health aid for the Arab population in the administered territories.

Faye L. Schenk, chairman of the Hadassah Medical Organization, said, "we question the morality of continuing membership in the W.H.O." She said that the W.H.O. resolution "politicizes a United Nations agency and denigrates its value to all people of the world and renders it liable to suspicion of its motives."

In a report to the 2,500 delegates representing various sections of the country, Mrs. Schenk said that the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center in Jerusalem provides "sophisticated and costly medical services for the Arab population of Gaza, the West Bank and even Jordan."

Arabs, from neighboring countries, she said, regularly visit the Jerusalem Medical Center "through contact they have with relatives living in Israel and the West Bank."

She cited the cooperative effort of Israeli and Hadassah medical personnel in improving the health and living conditions of Arabs in the West Bank, Gaza and Sinai. Infant mortality, she said, was 30.7 per 1,000 against 100 per 1,000 in some neighboring countries. The expectation of life, she added, had risen faster into higher levels than that of any other territory in the Middle East (69 years for men — 72 for women.)

She pointed out that the World Health Organization provided $194,000 last year while Israel spent $16.8-million for the West Bank, Gaza and Sinai.

"As to involving the P.L.O. and medical services," she added, "the P.L.O. is an organization dedicated to terrorism, has no legal status in the administered territory and could not provide health services of any kind at any level."

Mrs. Schenk documented the medical assistance programs that Hadassah and Israel's Ministry of Health has provided since 1960 to those countries that are critical of Israel.

Western Experts Replace Soviet Oil Consultants

KUWAIT: Syria has terminated the services of scores of Soviet petroleum consultants and replaced them with Western experts, Adnan Mustafa, Syrian oil minister, said in an interview.

Mustafa said, "The results of the last 20 years with the Soviet experts proved much less than we expected of them. We aren't ready to wait long enough until oil erupts from our ground by mere chance or by itself."

His complaint echoes the disappointment of other Middle East countries, such as Egypt, with Soviet oil exploration methods. These are said to comprise a very

New Majority At UN Causes Rusk Concern

WASHINGTON: Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the House International Relations Committee that, "If the General Assembly were to repeat what it did last year with respect to South Africa and expel Israel, I think that the United States should withdraw from the United Nations."

Rusk, who served in the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations and is presently a professor of international law at the University of Georgia, testified at the committee's hearings on future foreign policy. He said that the new large majority at the UN causes him concern. "I would hope that this large majority would not become so foolhardy as to destroy the very organization which gives it its place in the sun by destroying the basic charter and treating it with contempt," Rusk said.

He added: "I think we have to give these nations some friendly warning that if they are not careful they themselves may destroy the UN...I think it is important for the principal members of the UN to make it very clear that this majority cannot simply run away with it."

NO PROBLEM
 TEL AVIV: Ireland's Foreign Minister Garrett Fitzgerald sees no difficulties in carrying out the trade agreement between Israel and the European Economic Community. Fitzgerald, who was chairman of the EEC's Ministerial Council when the treaty was signed last month, admitted that the Arab states had objected to approval of the treaty with Israel before treaties had been negotiated with the Arab countries.

thorough "shotgun" style of survey work, compared with more selective Western methods.

Mustafa didn't specify the nationalities of the Western experts he has brought in. But he did mention Hungarians and Rumanians were among the new partners. And one U.S. company, Tripco Petroleum Inc. recently was awarded an exploration contract off the Syrian coast. Companies among the seven top Western international oil companies aren't included, Mustafa said.

The basic Syrian arrangement for oil exploration allows foreign companies 40% of any oil discovered and produced until their investment is repaid. Their share then drops to 9% for 20 years, Mustafa said. This is similar to production sharing contracts in other countries.

The minister said Syria expects to become a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by the end of this year when its production reaches 200,000 barrels a day.

Arabs Will Accept Peace On Israel's Return To '67 Area

WASHINGTON: Former Sen. J. William Fulbright, linking American interests in the Middle East to a continuing, assured supply of oil, especially from Saudi Arabia, and the avoidance of a new war that would precipitate another oil embargo and possibly a confrontation with the Soviet Union, has endorsed Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's view of the situation and his policies in an article published in the Washington Post.

The Arkansas Democrat, who formerly headed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that "having returned from an extended tour of the Middle East, I am filled with a strong sense of both the import and urgency of the Secretary's observations. Time is working against us and against our interests."

Fulbright said that his visit to the Middle East convinced him that "the principal Arab countries — including Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia — are all led by moderate and responsible men" who are "united in a consensus for making peace with Israel on the basis of the 1967 borders."

"All of them say so explicitly and without qualification, and the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization Yassir Arafat says so, guardedly and by indirection, but to my ear unmistakably", Fulbright wrote.

He viewed "this consensus for the acceptance of Israel as the most important and promising development in the Arab world since the 1967 war" but warned that it would soon dissipate if no progress were made for peace.

"The continued occupation of Arab lands is a threat not only to Arab moderation but to the moderate leaders themselves," the former senator said.

He said that for the United States, "logic suggests that if we are to give all out support to current Israeli policy we should be taking drastic measures of energy conservation against the inevitable embargoes, or if we are to allow our dependency on Persian Gulf oil to continue to increase at its present rate, it would be prudent to draw back from our financial and political support of continued Israeli occupation of Arab lands."

Fulbright stressed the importance of the American relationship with Saudi Arabia and insisted that the two main issues — the supply of oil and its price, are related to the Arab Israeli conflict.

"A settlement could not be expected to result in an immediate sizable price rollback," he said.

But it would, however, "eliminate the only outstanding issue between the United States and Saudi Arabia — especially if provisions were made for the restoration of East Jerusalem to one form or another of Arab sovereignty."

Fulbright argued that Israel's only security in the long run lies in a return to its 1967 borders "with insubstantial changes," because the only secure borders are those accepted by one's neighbors.

He warned that Israel's qualitative and technological advantage over its foes is "transient" as the Arabs are "advancing rapidly in education and technological skills, and when these are added to their vastly greater numbers and wealth, the balance of power will swing in their favor."

Fulbright asserted that "except from Israel herself, there is a virtual world consensus" that a solution of the Middle East conflict requires a return to the 1967 lines, the establishment of a Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza Strip with demilitarized zones manned by the United Nations and firm guarantees from the United States and the Soviet Union.

According to Fulbright, the Soviets are prepared to offer Israel the strictest guarantees under an appropriate agreement but the U.S. cannot "count on the Soviets to renew their offer to cooperate if we do not hold them to it now."

DESECRATE CEMETERY

LONDON — Jewish sources in the Soviet Union reported that unknown vandals desecrated the Jewish cemetery in the Slobodka quarter of Odessa, a Soviet city on the Black Sea. According to the report, scores of tombstones were shattered and many graves were destroyed. The police claimed they were unable to trace the miscreants. One of the famous Jews buried in the Odessa cemetery is Mendele Mocher Sefhorim.

Authorizes New Version Of Oberammergau Play

DUESSELDORF: Oberammergau village council has agreed to authorize a new version of the passion play which it stages every ten years after receiving new criticisms that it was anti-Semitic from international Jewish organizations and Catholic groups.

Meeting in secret, the council of the Bavarian village have chosen a text performed between 1750 and 1850 as the basis for the next presentation in 1980.

Written by a Benedictine priest Ferdinand Rosner, this text attributes responsibility for the crucifixion to the devil. The text performed during the last century was written by Alois Daisenberger, an Oberammergau priest.

Jewish organizations have campaigned for many years for a revision of the play which was first performed in 1634 and their pleas have recently been supported by Catholic and other groups, including the Association for Christian - Jewish understanding in West Germany.

When Hans Schwaighofer, director of the 1970 production of the play, suggested revisions in 1966, the passion play committee rejected them and he resigned.

After the 1970 performances, Mr. Ernst Zwink, the Mayor of Oberammergau, claimed that the reaction of 95 percent of the 530,000 visitors was "positive" and so there was little need for "basic change." Now this view has been overturned.

SHOULD PRESS CHARGES
BRUSSELS: Nazi victims should help bring war criminals to trials by pressing charges against former SS men and other Nazi officers, Maurice Pioro, president of the Belgian Union of Deportees and Families, has urged.

PERES URGES FREE CHOICE
JERUSALEM — Defense Minister Shimon Peres has urged the Labor Alignment to begin considering his proposal for a federation between Israel and the West Bank. Peres' plan would give Arabs both in Israel and the administered territories a free choice of citizenship with those opting for Israeli citizenship being able to vote for the Knesset. Peres said there should be a high degree of autonomy on a local regional basis for the West Bank. He said the plan should be done in stages.
