Dr. Israel Goldman To Appear At 50th Anniversary Services

In continuing observance of its 50th anniversary celebration, Temple Emanu-El will hold a weekend of events starting on Friday, November 1, with reunion as the keynote and Dr. Israel M. Goldman, Temple Emanu-El's first rabbi, as its featured guest.

Dr. Goldman, who was rabbi at Temple Emanu-El for 23 years from the time of its inception in September, 1925, will be the guest speaker at a special Sabbath Eve service to be held at 8:10 o'clock on Friday, November 1, when "Temple Emanu-El — The First 25 Years," will be the subject of his sermon. An Oneg Shabbat will follow the service which is open to the community.

During the years Rabbi Goldman was at Temple Emanu-El, he was responsible for the establishment of its religious school program and the initiation of an adult institute of Jewish studies which has since grown from its original lecture series format to its present Adult Education Institute which is offering more than 70 courses this year.

It was Rabbi Goldman who inaugurated the temple's program of late Friday evening services, established the program of daily chapel services, and created the foundation for a congregation which has grown into a membership of more than 1100 families.

At present he serves as rabbi of Chizuk Amunoh Congregation in Baltimore, Maryland, where he has been since 1948 and he has also served as president of the Rabbinical Assembly.

On Sunday morning, November 3, Rabbi Goldman will be the guest speaker at the Men's Club breakfast meeting.

A special reunion sherry hour will be held on Sunday, November 3, from 2 to 4 p.m. for the people who were members of the original temple families or who were associated with the temple or its school during its first five years. More than 300 of these people have been traced by consulting temple archives, lists and photographs and have been invited from all over the country. Abbott Lieberman was chairman of this project.

Mrs. Haskell Frank is in charge of arrangements for the Friday evening Oneg Shabbat; Dr. Richard Kumins planned the Sunday morning Men's Club meeting, and Dr. Joseph G. Fishbein is over-all chairman for the temple's 50th year celebration.

TO BE GUEST SPEAKER: Ethel Halpern, a member of the national women's board of the United Jewish Appeal, will speak at a luncheon of the special gifts group of the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island on Thursday, October 31, at the home of Mrs. David Maidman. Mrs. Maurice Shore is chairman of the special gifts group.

Mrs. Halpern, who lives in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, serves on the board of that community's federation, women's division, and numerous other organizations, and was the first woman recipient of the Zionist Organization of America award for community leadership. In addition to her position on the UJA board, she is the national UJA women's vice chairman of Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Military Duty For US Israelis

TEL AVIV: In a move aimed at increasing available manpower, Israel's chief of staff has announced that a senior officer will be sent to the United States to begin arrangements for classifying Israelis living there for military reserve duty.

The New York Times reports that the project, which would also involve visits to other countries, was calculated to add "many thousands" to the Israeli military forces.

Speaking in an interview broadcast by the defense forces radio, Chief of Staff Gen. Mordechai Gur said the Israelis in the US would be assigned later to military units.

MRS. DAVID HOROVITZ

Friends Of PARI Elect Officers

Mrs. David Horovitz will be installed for her second term as president at the meeting of Friends of PARI, an organization devoted to aiding paraplegics by purchasing a bus with hydraulic lifts for wheelchairs and by legislation to eliminate architectural barriers. Senator Claiborne Pell will act as installing officer.

Other officers of the organization are John Feeley, vice president; Mrs. Fred Abrams, vice president; Mrs. Herman Bromberg, vice president; Mrs. Frank Darman, treasurer; Miss Lillian Slatoff, recording secretary, and Mrs. Jeffrey Bender, mailing secretary.

Members of the board of governors are Dr. Stanley Aronson, Eleanor Botvin, Mrs. John Feeley, William Dougherty, Mrs. Edward Foss, Mrs. Karl Foss, Mrs. David Golden and Mrs. Leonard Y. Goldman.

Complaints Bring Apology

WASHINGTON: The National Geographic, for the first time in its 86 years responded to reader pressure and admitted that it had erred in an article it carried on the situation of Jews in Syria.

In the magazine's November issue, on the newsstands, the editor, Gilbert M. Grosvenor, said that an article that appeared in the April issue about the city of Damascus "failed to reflect the true situation" of Syrian Jews.

Phil Baum, associate executive director of the American Jewish Congress, replied that the National Geographic "deserves commendation for its decision, albeit some months late, to concede that inadequacies in its original treatment, which stated that the Jews of Damascus are relatively free from persecution and oppression."

Mr. Grosvenor, in a column citing Jewish protests to the Article, said that the magazines had "difficulty" in obtaining reliable nonpartisan information.

"Many of our Jewish members sharply criticized us for not delineating in great detail the harsh conditions under which that small (Syrian Jews) community has been forced to exist since 1968," he said. He added:

"We began to wonder if we had unwittingly failed to reflect the true situation. Now, after months of carefully reviewing the evidence, we have concluded, that our critics were right. We erred."

The Jewish protests against the article included picketing of the Geographic's office and threats by Jewish subscribers to cancel their subscriptions.

Business-Finance Hit Hard By Millionaire's Collapse

JERUSALEM: Reports of the "liquidity problems" of Swiss Jewish financier Tibor Rosenbaum's financial empire flooded the Israeli press and gave further cause for concern among business and finance circles here, and among Orthodox circles, both of which have been hit hard recently by the financial collapse of Jewish millionaires abroad.

While the extent of Rosenbaum's problems were not immediately apparent, moves were reportedly proceeding in Frankfurt in the hope of selling his "International Credit Bank of Geneva" and thereby perhaps saving his vast business and financial empire.

Economic commentators here noted that no matter what the eventual fate of the bank, there was good reason to hope that Rosenbaum's interests in Israel would not be affected by his crisis.

These interests include large shares in two major textile concerns as well as real estate and other ventures.

Rosenbaum is the third prominent Orthodox Jewish millionaire in Europe to fall upon hard times this year. The earlier two were William Stern, his brother-in-law from London who is a real estate magnate, and Harry Landy, also from London whose Israel-British Bank crashed first in Tel Aviv then in London and brought down others of his family's ventures with it.

All three were intimately connected with Israel's economy: Stern had last year bought up "Pan-Lon," Israel's largest private building company.

He was forced to sell it when his empire in England crumbled. He is reputed to have other, smaller interests, too, in Israel. Landy, head of the well-established Williams family, owned, apart from the bank, the "Eliaz" wineries here and several real estate and other concerns.

The extent of the government's losses in the Israel British Bank is not yet fully known, and its former managing director, Landy's brother-in-law, Yehoshua Bension, is still awaiting trial.

But over and above dollars and cents, Israel has suffered severely in these instances. Both banks were known to be closely connected to Israel.

The Orthodox sector here will particularly suffer from these three otherwise unconnected setbacks.

The Mayor of Cranston claims that he has not raised the taxes in the last three years. This is stressed above all else in his advertising.

FACT NO. 1: Spending has increased 43% since he was elected.

FACT NO. 2: The tax rate was increased in 1971 by $6.60.

FACT NO. 3: The Democratic city council REDUCED the tax rate by $1.00 in 1972.

FACT NO. 4: Cranston received $2,000,000 in Federal Revenue sharing in 1973 — passed by a Democratic Congress.

FACT NO. 5: The Mayor proposed that we use $2,000,000 of 1975 tax money to avoid a 1974 tax increase.

The most important fact to remember is that Cranston Taxpayers have paid more taxes in the last four years than they should have, and THE REPUBLICANS ARE PLANNING A VERY LARGE INCREASE IN THE TAX RATE FOR NEXT YEAR. Carlo Spirito promises to hold the tax line by restoring some sense to the way your tax dollar is spent.

Expressing Our Interdependence

By JACOB NEUSNER
Brown University

(This is the conclusion of a three part series. Professor Neusner is editor of Contemporary Judaic Fellowship In Theory and In Practice (Ktav) and other books.)

Zionism and the State of Israel indeed are central to the world-historical existence of the Jewish people. But so far as Jews live and suffer, are born and die, reflect and doubt, raise children and worry over them, love and work — so far as Jews are human and live, to be sure in a most particularistic and idiomatic way, within the human condition, Zionism and the State of Israel cannot and do not form the center of their lives. Indeed, they have virtually nothing to say to the enduring and eternal issues of life: the issues of suffering and death, of love and of home. To those issues answers must be found in another place entirely. Zionism never raised the question (nor should it have raised the question) of Jewish existence as it is phrased by Judaism, and the State of Israel hardly can claim to be central to the formulation of answers to those questions.

What, then, are we to make of Ahad Ha'Am's conception of a spiritual center? So far as he claimed that the State of Israel would constitute "the center of Judaism," then I think the very metaphors of the circle and the center by definition are hopelessly irrelevant. There can be no "center of Judaism," but where we find ourselves and live Jewish lives. Naturally, for the Israeli, the State of Israel is the center. But for us to say the same is not so natural at all, and contradicts the facts of our everyday lives. Let us begin with the obvious. How can American Jews focus their spiritual lives solely on a land in which they do not live? It is one thing for that land to be in heaven, at the end of time, or across the Sambatyon for that matter. It is quite another to dream of a far-away place where everything is good — but where one may go if he wants. The realized eschaton

New Year's Service Aboard Soviet Liner

NASSAU, Bahamas: This resort city was the site of a minor moment in Soviet-American detente recently when Jewish passengers aboard the Soviet luxury cruise liner "Maxim Gorky," docked in Nassau harbor, were able to hold Rosh Hashana services in the ship's chapel. The formal celebration of the New Year aboard the liner was a first for the Russian Black Sea Shipping Company, which runs the cruise ship between Nassau and New York.

Wine and fruit were sent to the congregation by the captain. Several Russian Jewish crewman attended the religious rites. The services were held at sundown shortly after the ship had docked at Nassau's Prince George Wharf.

is insufficient for a rich and interesting fantasy life, and, moreover, in this-worldly terms it is hypocritical. It means American Jews live off the capital of Israeli culture which is itself impoverished. Reliance on the State of Israel furthermore suggests that to satisfy their need for fantasy, American Jews must look forward to ever more romantic adventures reported in the press, rather than to the colorless times of peace. American Jews want to take their vacations among heroes, and then come home to the ordinary workaday world they enjoy and to which Israelis rightly aspire but do not own. The 'enlandisement' of American Judaism — the focusing of its imaginative inner life upon the land and State of Israel — therefore imposes an ersatz spiritual dimension. We live here as if we lived there — but do not choose to migrate.

It furthermore diverts American Judaism from the concrete mythic issues it has yet to solve: Why should anyone be a Jew anywhere, in the USA or in Israel? That question is not answered by the recommendation to participate in the spiritual adventures of people in a quite different situation. Since the primary mitzvot of US Judaism concern supplying funds, encouragement, and support for Israel, one wonders whether one must be a Jew at all in order to believe and practice in that form of Judaism. What is 'being Jewish' now supposed to mean?

The underlying problem, which faces both Israeli and American Jews, is understanding what the ambiguous adjective Jewish is supposed to mean when the noun Judaism has been abandoned.

Just what is important about being Jewish and in Judaism? In my view, the answer must pertain both to the State of Israel and to the Golah communities in equal measure. It cannot be right only for American Jewry, for we are not seeking a Galut ideology and no one would accept it. Such an ideology — right for her but irrelevant to Israelis — would obviously serve the selfish interests and the peculiar situation of American Jews alone. But the answer cannot pertain only to the situation of the Israeli Jews, for precisely the same reasons.

What is important about being Jewish is the capacity of the Jewish people and its mythic creations to preserve the tension between the intense particularities of their life and the humanity they have in common with the rest of mankind. That tension, practically unique to Jewry, derives from its exceptional historical experience. Until now, it has been the basis for the Jews' remarkable role in human history.

Ahad Ha'Am claimed, and Israelis believe, that if you want to see the genuine type of Jew, then "go to the Land of Israel and you will see it." This most concrete expression of the circle-metaphor also is its refutation. For until we have determined what we mean by "the genuine type of Jew," we cannot take out a map and see where to find it. And the definition of what is "genuine," what is a Jew, and similar, long-veiled theological or ideological questions is not going to derive from propagandistic claims. It is not going to be imposed upon people by engines of politics and power. Rich Jews cannot purchase our minds. Political Jews cannot manipulate our hearts. For the religious Jews, theological discourse and debate, in which we do not despair of persuading one another of the rightness of our perceptions and convictions, are the only way. For the secular Jew, ideological discourse and debate are of equivalent meaning.

Having attempted to show the uselessness of prevailing metaphors and available definitions of the meaning of the State of Israel to the Golah, let me close by offering my own. The Israelis make much of Massada. I believe that, had they not repudiated the whole history of the Golah from 70 to 1948, they would have come to a more profoundly Jewish understanding — historical analogy — of who they and we are and what they and we have accomplished. They would have discovered the meaning of our accomplishments not in the ultimate symbol of barren, fantastic Messianism, Massada. They would have seen what to me is obvious: we are building not Massada but Yavneh. Their task is not to impose a new Messianic claim in place of an old discredited one, but to seek to salvage hasalah purta — to save what can be saved — in the aftermath of the disaster of European Jewry.

It was they, more than we, who saved the remnants of European Jewry, and it was they, more than we, who gave the Jewish people something to live, hope, and dream for.

The State is the creation of European Jewry. It is the monument to European Jewry. As in the trivial case of its Jewish scholarship, so in much else, the State of Israel is the last, best thing we have from our common heritage in Europe. From Jerusalem to Yavneh, from Warsaw or Berlin or Amsterdam or Paris to Tel Aviv — and to Jerusalem — these seem to me, in a very simple way, parallel paths.

What Yavneh meant in the history of the Jewish people and in the history of Judaism can be stated in a few words: hope beyond disaster, building in the aftermath of catastrophe, the courage to go forward against the evidence of the day. Yavneh epitomizes the Jewish people.

I. AMUDIM AWARD

My brother Isaiah and sister-in-law, Anna, are among the founders of the Hebrew Day School of Providence. For 30 years they have been the staunchest supporters and the most eloquent advocates of the Hebrew Day School idea in town.

The idea is very simple. We Jews have a great treasure of knowledge, ideals, values, and traditions. Our children grow up without understanding these values, cherishing these traditions, or carrying these ideals in their hearts.

Why? Because we do not provide for their education adequately, nor is it possible for the afternoon schools to transmit this treasure to the children.

What is the solution? We have to do what the parochial schools do, what the privately endowed schools do. We must take the children out of the public school and build schools of our own. We cannot expect the public schools to teach them what we are most anxious to give the children. The public school can provide for them the best education but it will not be a Jewish education.

This idea, the founders of the Hebrew Day School, and my brother and sister-in-law among them, kept hammering away at the consciousness of the community for 30 years. You cannot escape it after talking to my brother and sister-in-law for five minutes. The idea of the Hebrew Day always comes up in the conversation. It is their life, absorbing their whole being.

Let me quote from a letter received from the National Society for Hebrew Day Schools, Torah Umesorah, written by Dr. Joseph Kaminetzky, Director of the Society:

"It would take reams to describe your devotion to the Day School in Providence. You know that I know of all the years of sweat and toil that you and your dear wife put in to establish the Day School there, how you worked in those early days and you certainly merit this distinguished award."

The award of which the letter speaks is called the Amudim Award. Amudim, for those who do not know Hebrew, means Pillars. It is given annually to builders and supporters of the Day

Schools at an annual dinner of recognition in New York. It is a kind of Nobel Prize for noble work for the Jewish education of our children.

My brother Isaiah and his wife Anna merit this award. They have been repaid for their work even without the award. Their son, Aaron, is a graduate of the Hebrew Day School, and now Aaron's son, Yomi, is a pupil there. Three generations live and breathe in the atmosphere of the Hebrew Day School.

The award comes at a time when my brother prepares for an important birthday. It is a day when most people say to the world:

"I did my share. You carry on. I will enjoy myself."

Not Isaiah. He will continue to work and watch over his creation, the Hebrew Day School in Providence. He carried on the tradition he received in his parents' house. They had sent us at cost and inconvenience to a strange city to study in a Yeshiva.

More power to him.

2. THE SALESMAN

During the installation of Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman as Senior Rabbi of Temple Beth El, Rabbi Emeritus William G. Braude, his predecessor, told this story:

When Rabbi Gutterman came to Providence three years ago a member of the congregation, an avid fisherman, invited the new Rabbi on his boat to Block Island where the fishing is always plentiful. But when they came off Block Island, the seas became choppy with high winds blowing and the boat rocking. The host then turned to Rabbi Gutterman and said:

"You are a Rabbi. Can't you do something about the weather?"

To which Rabbi Gutterman replied:

"I am only in sales. I am not in management."

The Manager of this world is above me. I am only selling His wares. He does not consult me on how to manage His world. He knows what He is doing.

The story sounded very much like the Hasidic story I heard long, long ago about the merchants of the Shtetl who came to the Rebbe complaining about the rains that always fell on the days of the Yarith, the Market Day.

The Rebbe sighed and answered:

"What do you want of me? The Holy One, Blessed be His name, sends the rain for good reason. They might interfere with your Yarith this year, but they might be needed by the fields and pastures so that next year the crops will be bigger and the cattle will be fatter for your Yarith."

The Rebbe, who is only a salesman, cannot tell the manager of the world what to do and what not to do.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

DISPUTE ON MOVIES

TEL AVIV: The Likud-Religious Bloc coalition that governs Tel Aviv is threatening to come apart in a dispute over Friday night screenings at a municipally supported "Cinematique." The National Religious Party and Aguda members say they will leave the coalition unless the Friday night movies, a local youth project, are banned. Non-religious members of the Council say the "Cinematique" is valuable because it keeps youths from roaming the streets Friday nights.

MRS. ALLEN GERSON

Temple Beth El, was the setting at 1 p.m., Sunday, October 20, for the marriage of Joan Hannah Nathan to Allen Gerson, an associate professor of law at the New England School of Law in Boston. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi William G. Braude and Rabbi Hershel Schachter.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nathan of Providence and the granddaughter of Henry Gluck of Providence and Miami. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Morton Gerson of New York City and Netanya, Israel.

The bride wore a gown of white peau de soie with chiffon sleeves made by Mrs. Gerson. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sisters-in-law, Elizabeth Fain Gerson and Virginia Winnicki Nathan. The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Samuel Gerson. The bride's brothers, Alan and Richard Nathan, were ushers.

After a trip to Vermont, the couple will reside in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The current Mayor claims to have conceived the idea for transvan. The fact is that the idea had already been developed and the city would have been negligent if it did not begin the program.

What is not mentioned by the Mayor is his proposal to drastically curtail the services of transvan during the "Energy Crisis" in early 1973.

Carlo Spirito showed how the gasoline could be obtained, and saved the program from being cut back.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Every so often I receive some comments that I don't put in enough easy hands for the Novices to be able to see easily. The strange thing is that some of the hands I have shown are easy enough so that everyone should see them but even some better players fail. Today's hand is a perfect example for although there are thirteen tricks right there for the Declarer to take, three experienced players had one track minds and deservedly had to pay for their poor play. All even a beginner has to do is count his tricks and think where the best place to get the other trick he needs is. This should have been an easy hand.

the suit as responder so South was going to make forcing bids until he found all he needed.

When North raised the Hearts it made South perk up even more but how could he find whether North had a good two Heart bid or a bad one? Make another change of suit for when one Major is agreed on another suit bid is absolutely forcing. But now when it came back to North he just didn't go back to Hearts, but rather took the opportunity to show his partner that he had the top of his bid including four Hearts. So he now jumped right to game. From here South used the Blackwood Convention to find out about Aces and Kings and landed in seven, a Grand Slam.

West's lead made no difference, the play is the same. Here we are again counting tricks. Right off the top, as long as Trumps are better than 4-0 we can see five Hearts, three Clubs and two in the other suits, totalling twelve. Where is the best place to make the thirteenth? Either by taking the Diamond finesse, which has but an even chance of succeeding, or by an absolutely certain way, getting a ruff in Dummy. Yet I watched three Declarers take the Diamond finesse. It might have worked but justice prevailed and when it failed and they went down they really got what they deserved for there is an absolutely sure way to make the hand.

All they had to do was after drawing Trumps, they can even stand a 3-1 break, play the three rounds of Clubs discarding one of Dummy's small Spades. The third Spade in Declarer's hand can be ruffed in Dummy for the thirteenth trick. It really is easy, isn't it?

Moral: Only take a finesse as a last resort. Often there will be some way better.

You might wonder why South, with such a strong hand, didn't jumpshift after North opened the bidding. Actually he had such a strong hand he felt it would be better to proceed slowly so that he could find out more about North's hand. As the bidding went he was able to find just about all he needed to know. Had he gone faster he would have had to grope a bit more. The opening bidder cannot pass when his partner changes

HONOR PRESIDENT

The Providence Chapter of Mizrahi Women honored Mrs. David Friedman Sunday at their donor dinner and installation. Mrs. Robert Berlinsky and Mrs. Alex Goodblatt were cochairmen of the event.

Mrs. Friedman completed three years as president of the group. She has been a member for the past 26 years and has held every office. She also served as president in 1951 and 1952. She was presented with a scroll by Mrs. Moses Dyckman of New York, honorary national president of the organization, who was also the guest speaker.

A top fund raiser for Mizrahi Women, Mrs. Friedman is also a life member of The Miriam Hospital, as well as a board member of the Pioneer Women's organization. She is a member of Temple Emanu-El Sisterhood, the Jewish Home for the Aged and a past secretary for the Pythian Sisters.

PYTHIAN SISTERS

Pythian Sisters Grand Temple officers and deputies were elected and installed at a special Grand Temple session which was held on October 16 in Cranston.

Installing officers were Amy DeWolfe, supreme chief; Eldamae Cooper, supreme Manager and Nellie Gebler, supreme grand senior. Mary Birkbeck, assistant grand secretary and Agnes Olson, assistant grand treasurer.

manager; Nellie A. Gebler, grand secretary; Aleida I. Hall, grand treasurer; Eva Moore, grand proctor; Helen Voit, grand guard; Mildred A. Dean, past grand chief, and Annie D. Wood, grand pianist and press correspondent.

Grand trustees are Katherine Coken, Anne Altman and Eldamae W. Cooper.

WELCOME BACK

Seven young people who journeyed to Israel this past Summer, will describe their experiences at a special Sabbath Service at Temple Beth Am, on Friday, November 1, at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the Bureau of Jewish Education of Rhode Island, the "Welcome Back" service and Open-End discussion, will enable the Jewish community to learn about recent events in Israel as seen through the eyes of High School and College age people who spent seven weeks in a study-tour program conducted by the National Ramah Seminar and the Zionist Youth Foundation.

The participants will be James Boxser, Jerry Gold, Fred Mossberg and Shulamith Klein of Warwick, Peter Greenberg and Susan Rappaport of Providence, and Alan Mittleman of Brandeis University.

The entire community is invited to join in saying "Baruch Haba" to the students and to hear about the Bureau's plans for the summer year of 1975.

A collation will be offered following the program.

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

LEE ANN INGRAM
Pinch-Hitting

SUNDAY'S HEROES: The name refers to those football gladiators who are helping in the energy crisis by keeping folks glued to their television sets and out of their cars on Sunday afternoons. Oh sure, a lot of cars are used getting to the games but that's only a small percentage compared with the vast TV audience. And wasn't that Patriot-Buffalo game exciting! I'm picking Minnesota to win by seven on Sunday although my heart will be with the Pats. It's kind of a mandatory selection on my part because Sol Yas, an astute man of statistics, is choosing Boston and I was forced to take the Vikings. A tremendous wager of a cup of coffee hangs in the balance so my selection will be in jeopardy as I root against it in favor of the Patriots.

FRIDAY'S HEROES: That's another title and it refers to Willie Pep's interesting book. Pep, who appeared in an exhibition boxing bout with Paddy Reed at "Rhodes" last week, is listed among the all-time greats of boxing. His book is fascinating and will bring back to your mind some of those awaited Friday night televised boxing shows. It's intimate and revealing, easy reading and great to keep for reference.

AMAZING: Surprising was the interest shown in that boxing show - sponsored by Cranston FOP at "Rhodes" last Friday. In addition to the exhibition by Pep was an exciting offering by Ralph Zannelli and Dick French with the ever-popular "Zee" as popular and capable as ever. Ralphie looked in good shape and French proved the right opponent for bringing out all the maneuvers that made Zannelli an attraction when he faced the greatest in the land. Joe Celletti did a great job in promoting with the assistance of Cy "Chuck" Conti, whose wide acquaintances brought an overabundance of talent for the show. It was a complete presentation, even including the bell used at Madison Square Garden which was provided by Bob Grundy of Central Falls Gym and also an appearance in a wrestling match by "Beautiful Bobby," a matman who looks the part of a well-conditioned athlete.

VIGNETTE AND ANSWER: It takes a most unusual girl to participate in the "Shot Put" and "Javelin" events in a Track and Field program. And when such a young lady becomes a national champion EIGHT times and holds the American record for the "Shot Put" and also becomes "Pan-Am Javelin Champion," she certainly is a girl of rare distinction. Amelia Bert of Providence answers that description and she appears as charming as well as athletically fit today as she did a decade ago when she was amazing everyone from coast to coast with her prowess in the field of competition. Why isn't Miss Bert competing today? Did such strenuous effort in putting the shot and throwing the javelin take devastating toll of her muscles? No, it was one of life's little pranks that rendered Amelia hors de combat. She fell down a flight of stairs, injuring the shoulder part of the anatomy and being forced to the sidelines.

AT: Extraordinary congratulations are in order for Mrs. Jennie Amalfetano and her personable son, Frankie. The Amalfitanos, sponsors of baseball teams, are looking forward to next season after their little league team won a championship during the season just past. It was the very first champion "Jennies" team in FORTY-FIVE years. There have been "Jennies" teams in speedy semi-pro competition and in the old Tim O'Neil Providence Ama-

FUND-RAISING DIRECTOR: Gertrude K. Schwartz of Wakefield, Massachusetts, has been appointed fund raising director for the New England regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, according to an announcement made by Bertram R. Paley, chairman of the New England ADL board. Mrs. Schwartz will serve as staff director for the Society of Fellows of the Anti-Defamation League in New England.

Mrs. Schwartz has had extensive experience in fund raising and campaign development over the past 20 years including work with the State of Israel Bonds organization in New York, Boston, Worcester, Miami, Florida and North Carolina. She also worked as an area director for the Bonds organization in Western Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. Prior to coming to the ADL, Mrs. Schwartz was New England area director of development for the National Jewish Hospital at Denver.

Israel Population Up; Non-Jews Increase

JERUSALEM: At the beginning of Rosh Hashana the population of Israel was 3.4 million, the Central Bureau of Statistics said. That figure included some 2.9 million Jews, and more than 500,000 non-Jews. Nearly all the non-Jews are Arabs. According to the Bureau's spokesman, the Israeli population rose by 2.8 percent during the outgoing Hebrew year. The Jewish population rose by 2.6 percent, compared to a 4 percent increase among the non-Jews.

There were 93,000 more Israelis on August 31, 1974, than on September 1, 1973. Some 75,000 of them were Jews, and 18,000 non-Jews. Some 61 percent of the additional Jews (45,500) were the result of natural growth, and 40 percent were olim. All the additional non-Jews were due to natural growth.

EXCITING BY ANY NAME: Do you call it "rodee-o," or "ro-day-o?" Webster explains it as "a public performance presenting the chief features of a roundup." You may enter the World Championship Longhorn Rodeo that will be at Providence Civic Center tonight (Friday) and through this weekend. You'll be competing with over 100 contestants from all over the nation if accepted at Rodeo Headquarters at the Civic Center. Events will include bareback bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, saddle bronc riding, cowgirls barrel racing and bull riding. I'd rather be among the spectators because there must be a safer way of earning a living. Yippee! — CARRY ON!

ISRAELI HAPPENING

The Jewish Community Center will present an Israeli happening of song, dance and culture, especially prepared for American audiences by Israel's leading performers, on Monday, October 28, at 8 p.m.

The purpose of the performance is to communicate to the participants a taste of life in Israel. The show will include an introductory message in English, special scenery and film sequences which blend with the music.

The performers are a cross section of Israeli life, kibbutz members, city dwellers, immigrants and Sabras, army officers and civilians.

Tickets are available at the Center.

DEMOCRATIC REPRESENTATIVE IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY District 4

Victoria LEDERBERG

Vote Nov. 5, 1974: 1st Column, Last Name Lederberg for House Committee, S. Lederberg, Treas.

Robert DiLeonardo designs interiors. Some simple. Some elegant. Some electrifying. But each a carefully created reflection of the people or profession he designs them for. And equally as distinctive.

DiLeonardo is not the typical interior designer. His works have earned him wide recognition as one of New England's most outstanding talents. Designs which can be found at the most prestigious addresses and the most modest as well.

 R.C. Morse (Emerson '74) has been named coordinator of the Career Discovery Program at Harvard University's Graduate School of Design. The Career Discovery Program is open to college and post college people contemplating a career in the design professions: architecture, city planning or landscape architecture, and is held for six weeks in the summer.

Mr. Morse, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Morse, 249 Gallatin Street, Providence, will also coordinate the Graduate School of Design's annual conference on the professions during which the Gropius Lecture is delivered by a distinguished member of the field.

The Wooden Needle Press which Mr. Morse edits was a recent exhibitor in the annual Boston Globe Book Festival, an event known throughout New England.

ZIVIA MOZESON WED
 Rabbi and Mrs. Leon M. Mozeson of Syracuse, New York, formerly of Providence, announce the marriage of their daughter, Zivia, to Shmuel Mordecai Polsky of Chicago, Illinois. The ceremony took place on Sunday, October 13, at the Young Israel of Syracuse with the father of the bride officiating.

The bride received her B.A. in Sociology from Hebrew University and the bridegroom is in his senior year at Bar Ilan University majoring in political science. The couple will reside in Kiryat, Ono.

BAR MITZVAH
 Gary Bruce Halpern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Halpern, will become Bar Mitzvah at an 11:15 a.m. service at Temple Sinai, Saturday, October 26.

FIRST CHILD BORN
 Rabbi and Mrs. Bernard Rotman of Warwick announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, Elisa, on Thursday, October 3. Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Israel Bass of Worcester and great grandmother is Dora Sloninsky, also of Worcester. Paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Murry Rotman of Worcester and great grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kaplan of Hull, Massachusetts.

DOHERTY-SEGAL
 Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Doherty, Jr., of Sawyer Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Sheila Ann Doherty of Shoreham Court, Pawtucket, to Joel Marc Segal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Segal of Cambria Court, Pawtucket.

Miss Doherty is a graduate of St. Mary's of the Visitation, St. Joseph's Hospital School of Nursing and Chapter I Model Agency.

A graduate of Pawtucket West High School and Providence College, Mr. Segal is vice president of Barton's Furniture.

A November 23 wedding is planned.

TO STUDY ABROAD
 Barry Field, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Field of 26 Wilcox Avenue, Pawtucket, will study abroad this fall with the Beaver College Semester in London, England.

A 1972 graduate of the Moses Brown School, Mr. Field is a junior at Lafayette College where he is a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

CORRECTION
 The name of Steven A. Resnick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Resnick, who became Bar Mitzvah on September 28 at Temple Beth Torah, was incorrectly given in last week's Herald. The Herald regrets the error.

Russell Chernick Wins Contest

Russell L. Chernick, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Chernick, of 46 Eldridge Street, Cranston, has been named winner of the Muscular Dystrophy Association of America's (MDAA) 1974 Christmas Card Contest.

Russell's design was chosen by a panel of judges composed of members of the art department of Benton and Bowles, MDAA's volunteer advertising agency. Entries were received from hundreds of MD patients throughout the country in the Association's second annual contest.

As award winner, Russell travelled to Las Vegas with his parents to be Jerry Lewis' guest at the 1974 Labor Day Telethon, at the Hotel Sahara. The winning Christmas card will be offered for sale by MDAA later this year.

Russell plans to become a scientific researcher, hoping to make a contribution to the research for the cause of and cure for muscular dystrophy. He has prepared a number of high school science projects dealing with neuro muscular disorders, and he received the U.S. Army Medal at the 1974 Rhode Island Science Fair for a project on Muscular Dystrophy.

A former Rhode Island state poster child, Russell is confined to a wheelchair, but his talents have not been impeded. An honor student and former vice president of the Student Council at the Hugh B. Bain Junior High School, Russell is now a freshman at Cranston High School West.

Trinity Players In 'Well Hung'

The Trinity Square Repertory Company's American premiere production of Well Hung by Robert Lord, directed by Adrian Hall, will open on Thursday, October 31, and continue through December 1, at the Lederer Playhouse.

After drawing wide critical acclaim last year for productions of the play in his native country, New Zealand, and in Australia, Mr. Lord has joined Mr. Hall and the company for rehearsals of his first American production. The 29 year old playwright has authored over 10 works which have been produced for radio television and stage since 1971. This is his first visit to the United States.

The play Well Hung blends farce, slapstick and sharp satire as it shows the operations of a small town, two man police force in Pukukawa, New Zealand. Actors Robert Black and Richard Jenkins portray the local officers. When George Martin as Inspector Smart comes into town to investigate an unsolved murder, he disrupts the force's routine of questionable activities. Other members of the cast are Mina Manente, Marguerite Lenert, Tom Griffin and William Damkoehler.

Well Hung will run Tuesday through Sunday with evening performances at 8 p.m. and Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

Oil Field Is Key To Israeli Crude

TEL AVIV: An official of an Israeli oil company said that the country's petroleum reserves put it in a better position than many other countries to weather a new round of "extortion" by the Arab oil-producing countries. Moshe Bitan, director general of Paz, Israel's largest oil distribution company, said on a radio interview that Israel has managed to accumulate significant oil reserves that will last for some time, though at considerable expense. But in the event of a new war in which the Arabs use oil as a weapon, Israel and other oil importing nations would be seriously threatened, he said. Bitan noted that 40 percent of Israel's present oil consumption comes from the Abu Rodeis fields in Sinai. If Israel were to be deprived of that source in a new war, the situation would be grave, he said.

Open Employee Development Center At Main Providence Post Office

NEW CENTER OPENED
 The opening of the Postal Employee Development Center (PEDC) at the Providence Main Post Office was announced Monday, October 21, by Northeast Regional Postmaster General William F. Bolger.

Using modern education techniques and equipment, the new learning center will serve employees in 82 postal facilities throughout the state of Rhode Island and in Bristol County, Massachusetts.

The PEDC program is designed for employees to develop skills to increase the efficiency of postal operations and provide better public service. The centers are professionally staffed and offer 67 training programs, ranging from customer services to electronics.

"Results have thus far begun to show improved postal efficiency and a steady whittling away of a number of complaints," according to Mr. Bolger.

The over all program is conducted by the Postal Service Training and Development Institute, with headquarters in Bethesda, Maryland.

JET UNVEILED

LOS ANGELES: Preliminary technical specifications and performance details of Israel's newest executive jet aircraft, the Westwind 1124, were disclosed here at a meeting of the National Business Aircraft Association. The 10-passenger twin-engine jet that will be priced at about $1.5 million, will have a speed of 500 mph, a ceiling of 41,000 feet and a 2800-mile cruising range, according to S. Samach.

RUNS FOR REELECTION: Senator Lila M. Sapinsley is running for reelection as Senator in District 2 in Providence.

Long active in community affairs, Senator Sapinsley is on the board of The Miriam Hospital and Temple Beth El, and was formerly chairman of the board of trustees of state colleges.

She also serves as vice president of the board of Butler Hospital, the first woman in Rhode Island to be in line for president of a hospital board of trustees.

A graduate of Wellesley College, Senator Sapinsley received an honorary doctor of pedagogy from Rhode Island College and was awarded the Distinguished Alumna Award by Wellesley College in 1974.

Her husband, John Sapinsley, is an associate professor of economics at Rhode Island College. They have four daughters.

"I'm running as the first woman for Lt. Governor to open the doors of the state house to all."

Women and other minorities will never have equal representation in the State House until one of us holds a top administrative office.

Let's face it-women's issues are people's issues! In representing women and minorities I will be representing all progressive thinking people in Rhode Island. Only in this way will the Lt. Governor's office be made a viable post. But, I'll really need your help. It's an uphill battle all the way. We women must work together. Although we are considered a minority we control 53% of the vote! We must use this combined vote to get women elected!

Ford and Nixon

We do not have a Ford in the White House, we have an Edsel.

In the late 1950s, the Ford Company was not wrong in mass producing a new car model, it was the car model they produced that was wrong.

There probably is nothing wrong with pardoning Richard Nixon. It was the way he went about it that created the tumult.

I am somewhat of an expert on executive pardons. I myself have been pardoned by a president -- but I was pardoned almost 40 years after I had served my sentence.

In the late 1950s Billy Graham, the evangelist, and I, asked Governor Luther Hodges of North Carolina to pardon a labor leader named Boyd Peyton, who was serving a sentence for conspiracy to call a strike. The labor leader was himself a Methodist minister.

Luther Hodges wanted to pardon this man, but he knew better than to contradict the judgment of the courts. Instead, he brought in religion.

I was the representative for the Jewish interests, Billy Graham for the Protestants and I believe there was a letter from Bishop Waters of the Carolina diocese.

This was the way in which President Ford should have proceeded with the Nixon pardon. He should have asked Billy Graham and Barry Goldwater and Rep. Charles Sandman and other Nixon partisans to bring him petitions signed by the cardinals, rabbis and bishops asking for clemency. Should they have refused, which I doubt, the President would have done well to think it over and ask at a later date.

But he didn't do this. He promised an open administration

Young Israelis Try To Settle West Bank

JERUSALEM: Israeli Army units using helicopters, observation planes and command cars, searched ravines and dry beds between Jerusalem and Jericho rounding up several hundred young Israelis who renewed attempts to establish unauthorized settlements in the occupied West Bank of Jordan River.

The confrontation between the Government and the would-be settlers continued after new groups of Israelis managed to elude army roadblocks and penetrate the West Bank, which was conquered from Jordan in the 1967 war.

The entire area was closed to civilian traffic for the day.

More than 100 would-be settlers were holding out in caves near a spring at the bottom of Wadi Kelt, a deep rift that runs down to Jericho. Their food supplies were low but not their spirits. The settlers, mostly young members of the right-wing National Religious party, spent the early evening singing and dancing the hora around campfires.

Unable to persuade the settlers to leave the area voluntarily, a military spokesman said, the army decided to permit them to remain overnight.

"After a chilly night in the wadi," one officer said, "they'll be ready to come home."

The would-be settlers represent the wing of the Israeli political spectrum that contends Israel has a religious right and duty, specified in the Bible, to settle the whole of the original land of Israel.

Their bold attempt to establish new settlements in the territories taken during the 1967 war has ignited a major political controversy in Israel just before the arrival of Secretary of State Kissinger. The settlers are adamantly opposed to any withdrawal from the West Bank, which they regard as an integral part of the Biblical Israel.

Their move has been denounced by most of the Israeli center and left including the left-wing Moked party, which staged a counter demonstration outside the office of Premier Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem. More than 100 persons marched in front of the building most of the day carrying placards condemning the settlement attempt.

ENROLLMENT UP

GENEVA: Enrollment in ORT's worldwide vocational education program in the 1974-75 school year will be considerably higher than it was last year, according to M.A. Braude, World ORT Union Director General.

ENGAGED: Mr. and Mrs. Irving Schlesinger of Fifth Avenue, New York City, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marcia Schlesinger of Boston, Massachusetts, to Paul G. Roiff of Boston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Roiff of Brookside Drive, Cranston.

Miss Schlesinger is a graduate of Calhoun School in New York City and Boston University.

Mr. Roiff was graduated from Cranston High School East and Boston University.

A May 24 wedding is planned.

ENGAGED: Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Buckler of Fairfield Road, Cranston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ann Cheryl Buckler of Evanston, Illinois, to Reid Addis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Addis of Glencoe, Illinois.

Miss Buckler, who was graduated from Cornell University, is attending Northwestern University in Evanston.

Mr. Addis, a graduate of Cornell University, is working in Chicago as an architect.

and for its first significant act, he acted in secrecy. Summoning economists for a day-long debate on the economy is hardly my idea of penetrating the inner sanctum.

It wasn't what the president did, it was the way that he did it. He has left more than a bad taste, he has left a suspicion.

It is quite obvious that Richard Nixon was in no position to bargain with anyone. But it is quite possible that General Haig and Ron Zeigler were in a position to bargain; they could have promised that in exchange for a sure pardon they would prevail upon the President to resign immediately. Why not?

If this is absurd, if men of honor don't act in this manner particularly when the very state of the country is in danger, what is more absurd than trying to pardon everyone and succeeding only in freeing the mastermind.

The Golden Plan for Busing

Invariably the people opposed to busing are also opposed to the Supreme Court decision which prohibits teaching of religion in the public schools.

So I say put them both together; have the prayers on the buses and that will settle the whole thing. The mothers who are now demonstrating like mad will put their little darlings on buses and say "start praying." Praying on the bus could possibly solve the entire problem.

There was a recent flareup against busing in Boston. About 110 black children walked quietly off school buses into the South Boston High School amid cat calls and obscenities voiced by anti-busing demonstrators, who were all white and mostly women.

The demonstrators in Boston, as they did in Michigan, as they have done in other cities around the country, object to white children being bused into the black neighborhoods.

The demonstrators forget that busing is a means and not an end. One can discard any number of means to reach an end. But in this instance, the only end is to insure equitable education for all children. The demonstrators forget that in Boston black children have been bused across two counties to get to their school. No one raised an objection when black children were being bused. So all the excuses the demonstrators give about "neighborhood schools" and "long-distance busing," are mere euphemisms for race hatred.

This hatred goes very deep and knows no boundaries. It's the same in the North as in the South, except that the South has come to more or less accept the busing problem.

In fact the South has performed a great miracle. It eliminated a racial pattern which existed for 150 years and it did it all within 20 years. It came about through law. During those 20 years there wasn't a single voluntary act by a single governor, mayor, or member of a city council.

At no time did a Southern official stand up and say, "Tomorrow let's desegregate the swimming pool" for example. It all came about because of law; the fear of injunction and the fear of loss of federal funds.

And this is a word to the officials in Boston. Law does not change the hearts of men, but it changes their practices. And the enforcement of law and the allocation of federal funds will bring about peace and an end to the busing problem.

WANTS INSPECTION

WASHINGTON: The United States government, prodded by Egypt, wants Israel to put all of its atomic energy facilities and material, regardless of source of supply or time of acquisition, under both international and U. S. inspection as a condition for obtaining future American nuclear equipment and supplies.

The Mayor of Cranston claims to have added 19 patrolmen to the Police Force and 28 firefighters to the Fire Department.

The fact is that this was primarily supported by the Democratic City Council and met resistance from the Mayor.

Carlo Spirito is also responsible for the improvements in Cranston's safety services, and he has proposed that the city enter a lease-purchase arrangement for SAVING MONEY on our public safety purchases.

The Mayor of Cranston, in his political advertising, claims that "elderly homeowners now receive a $2000 tax exemption . . ." What he fails to mention is that this was proposed by a Democrat and passed by the Democratic city council. The Mayor reluctantly approved it and now takes credit for it.

Carlo Spirito not only gave his wholehearted support to this proposal, but he is now proposing further property tax relief for elderly homeowners living on fixed incomes.

COULD STOP TERRORISTS
TEL AVIV: A captured terrorist who admitted he was on a mission to seize hostages in Israel said on a television interview that the Lebanese authorities and army are fully aware of terrorist movements in southern Lebanon and could stop them at any time if they so desired. ATHENS: Temple of Olympian Zeus. (2nd century AD)

THE FATE OF THE JEWS IN GREECE

By DR. JAY N. FISHBEIN
(Jews have been present in Greece since the destruction of the second Temple in 70 A.D. and have always lived peaceably with their neighbors.)

Salonika and Portugal were the only countries of the NATO alliance that permitted us the use of bases for refueling during the Yom Kippur War. The relations of Greece with this country and with Israel has been good.

As a result of bungling during the recent trouble in Cyprus, anti-American sentiment was aroused, which every effort should be made to overcome. . . .

We have witnessed the rise and fall of many great civilizations. In almost every corner of the globe some advanced civilization arose while the rest of the world was in darkness. We marvelled at the degree of knowledge of the Assyrians and Babylonians during the years we were puzzling over their cuneiform inscriptions. We were amazed at the engineering skill of the ancient Egyptians in the construction of the pyramids, and the manner in which they moved and fitted the tremendous granite blocks.

Civilizations are judged only by the extent they benefit those that follow. We gaze with admiration at the Great Wall of China, extending for thousands of miles, which was built for defense. The Acropolis was also designed for protection, yet of the two the Parthenon contributed much more that was meaningful to the succeeding generations. It remains an altar of beauty that still attracts the admiration of the world, even after 2500 years of neglect, pillage and wanton destruction by numerous invaders. The Acropolis rising 200 feet high was both a fortress and the sanctuary of the goddess Athena. For three years the Greeks endured the sight of the hated Nazi flag flying from it.

In their day the Greeks excelled in the arts and sciences and were outstanding in the ancient world. Centuries before the Christian era they had already determined that the world was round and made an attempt to calculate its circumference. They estimated that our planet turns on its own axis, and reasoned that it revolved about the sun. Hippocrates took medicine from the realm of the witch doctor and converted it into a science, for which humanity is deeply indebted.

Greek cities dotted the seacoast of Asia Minor. They colonized the entire Mediterranean coast and the islands to such an extent that for a thousand years it remained a Greek lake. Trade grew to the point that barter became ineffective and coins were introduced as a simpler and more satisfactory substitute. Of particular interest to us is the origin of the dollar ($) sign. It originated in the 9th Century B.C. The two pillars represent the arms of Hercules supporting Athens. The "S" represents a snake, the symbol of fertility. President Jefferson selected it as the symbol for our dollar.

It is interesting to note that eugenics was practiced as far back as the 9th Century B.C. Marriage between men and women with physical or mental defects was forbidden. The Spartans encouraged the citizens to lend their wives to men of intellectual achievement, great valor or outstanding physical strength, to ensure a more perfect race. Malformed children were tossed from the top of a cliff. Hitler, centuries later, devised a simpler, more efficient solution for those he considered inferior. He gassed them.

Greek democracy ended with the conquest by Philip of Macedonia. He was followed by his son Alexander the Great, who founded an enormous empire. When he died there was no one able enough to hold it together and it was divided among his generals. Palestine came under Seleucid rule. Many Jews were influenced by the Greeks and aped their customs. This resulted in constant friction between the pro and anti-Greek factions in Jerusalem and was intensified by Antiochus IV who assumed the name Epiphanes, meaning illustrious.

Antiochus considered Greek culture the acme of human progress and perfection and was determined to "civilize" his dominions. Even Temple priests in Jerusalem were converted to Hellenization. The Greek rulers made any practices of the Jewish religion a penal offense. These oppressive measures finally resulted in a revolt by Mattathias of the House of Hasmon, ending in the destruction of the pagan altars. It has been perpetuated as the annual "Feast of Dedication," or Hanukkah.

Greece has always been a religious state. Inter-marriage requires conversion of one party or the other. There is a tacit understanding between the Chief Rabbi and the Greek Orthodox Bishop to discourage inter-marriage and a waiting or "cooling off" period is required. Proselytizing is not only discouraged but is an offense punishable by law. This custom dates back to 1054 when the Greek Orthodox separated from the Church of Rome.

Greece is still a comparatively young state. It is comparable to Israel in many ways. Like Israel, the people are virtually obsessed with politics. Ben Gurion once remarked that if five Israelis got together it resulted in six political parties. Like the Israeli, every Greek feels that he would make a better prime minister than the incumbent. Although Greece like Israel has doubled in size since it was formed, it is still a small country. Like Israel much of its land is useless. A large part of Greece is mountainous. Israel also has considerable land that is barren or desert which the country is trying to make productive through reforestation and irrigation.

Athens is a cosmopolitan capital that not only had to repair the ravages of war, but also to build for a rapidly growing population. The Greeks are grateful for the help given by our country during reconstruction, under the Truman Plan. On the way to Athens from the airport is a park that has a statue of Harry Truman.

Although most of Athens was laid out in logical grids, with wide streets and avenues, the old quarter called Plaka, which lies between Syntagma square and the Acropolis is a warren of narrow, winding streets so different that it does not seem to belong to the rest of the city. This section was the center of Athens when it was liberated from the Turks in 1834 and has a flavor all its own. There are numerous stalls selling flowers, curios or souvenirs of all kinds, pistachio nuts or souvlakia, which are skewers of broiled veal.

Holocaust Exhibit In Poland To Reflect Jewish History

LONDON: According to information reaching here from Warsaw, the Jewish Historical Institute decided to reorganize and extend its exhibits of the Holocaust into a full-scale Jewish museum, which will reflect "a thousand years of Jewish history in Poland." This task could not be undertaken without the Polish authorities. The Polish government will decide upon the exhibits, their interpretation and the whole purpose of the museum.

According to reports, the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Culture, Jozef Teichma, told a delegation from the Jewish Historical Institute that the government would adopt the project and its financing.

He reportedly approved of a plan to hold an exhibition depicting Jewish life in Poland until the year 1795 (the final partition of Poland between Germany, Russia and Austria). This is in keeping with the policy of the government to divert attention from the battle of the Warsaw Ghetto and other feals of Jewish resistance, and focus attention upon Jewish life in Poland in past centuries.

Your Mail Order Rights

Not long ago, the Federal Trade Commission issued a cease and desist order prohibiting the following practices by a mail order firm operating in the New York area:

Promising that all merchandise would be shipped to customers within 24 hours, with prompt delivery "guaranteed." (FTC complaint: customers were subjected to delays ranging from a month to a year, orders were lost on the way to their buyers, no record of certain shipments was kept.)

Offering a "no-risk, money back" guarantee and refunds to customers who were dissatisfied with their orders for any reason. (FTC complaint: the company instead hassled customers seeking refunds or replacements, agreed to honor the "guarantee" only as a last resort.)

Claiming that prices advertised in catalogues were "wholesale prices" and that discounts offered amounted to 50 per cent off the retail price. (FTC complaint: the "wholesale prices" claim was phony and actual advertised prices were in some cases higher than those charged by retail stores.)

Telling customers that the $1 charged for the catalogue would be reimbursed if the customer simply used a $1 credit against payment on his first order. (FTC complaint: customers were later told, after they had bought their catalogues that they could not get this credit unless they placed a minimum first order of $20.)

On top of all this, the company quoted inflated retail prices for goods and failed to respond to letters or inquiries about non deliveries or refunds and didn't even list a business phone number.

The above capsulizes mail order representations and agonies to which so many who shop by mail order are subjected today to agonies which will multiply as the Christmas catalogue shopping season swings into high gear in the next few weeks.

Of course the overwhelming majority of mail order houses are honest, efficient and do indeed offer major savings on many products. This should be stressed. But there is an undeniable fringe of fly by night gypsters now cashing in on the booming mail order business. Some engage in flagrant, fraudulent deception; others go bankrupt and disappear; still others postpone ordering merchandise from suppliers until catalogue orders are and so, they have no idea what or how much is actually available. It is against this minority that you must be on guard, particularly in the next 90 days.

You, the customer, have a right under today's FTC regulations, to expect that mail order advertising will be honest.

You have a right to demand, if an item you've ordered is out of stock, either a refund or notification of a delivery date.

You have a right to expect a reasonably adequate and effective system for handling your complaints and inquiries when goods you have ordered go astray.

You have a right not only to protection against outright illegal gyps and rackets but also against gross carelessness. In the words of Richard Givens, New York

Tour Mission To Study Jewish-Christian Links

NEW YORK: A Roman Catholic religious order and the American Jewish Committee plan three inter-religious study missions to Jerusalem and Rome to investigate "the Jewish roots of the Roman Catholic Holy Year."

The missions, which will be started next year, are co-sponsored by the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute of the Atonement Friars of Garrison, N.Y., and the A.J.C.'s Christian Visitor to Israel Program.

They have been officially approved by the Vatican Central Committee for the Holy Year in 1975, which has been proclaimed by Pope Paul VI as a time of "renewal and reconciliation" for Catholics.

At a news conference at A.J.C.'s headquarters at 165 East 56th Street, Catholic spiritual leaders and rabbis who will direct the tours emphasized the theological and social roots that link Judaism and Christianity.

The Rev. Charles Angell, associate director of the Graymoor institute, said that the tours constituted "joint Jewish-Christian witness to our concern for the reconciliation of all peoples in today's world."

Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, national interreligious director of the American Jewish Committee, who with Father Angell will serve as co-leader of the first tour, from Jan. 15 to 30, called the study missions "a major advance in the promotion of understanding between Christians and Jews on an international level."

A Catholic spokesman said that the Holy Year proclaimed by Pope Paul "traces back to the Jewish jubilee year, which has been practiced in the Holy Land for centuries."

Spokesmen for the tours said those who were interested could apply at A.J.C. headquarters or at the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute at Garrison.

Rabbi Tanenbaum said the tour groups would attend lectures by Jewish and Christian scholars at Hebrew University in Jerusalem and would be received by Pope Paul and other high-ranking officials in the Vatican. The next tour is scheduled from November 19 to December 4.

IMMIGRATION QUICKENS

JERUSALEM: Immigration from the USSR quickened during the month of August; more are expected in September. Total immigration to Israel since the first of the year now stands at 22,409. Pinhas Sapir, head of the World Zionist Organization, expects immigration from South America alone to be 20,000 each year.

Your Money's Worth

regional director of the FTC: "Even sloppy management can amount to deception and, if deliberate, even to fraud. The customer has a right to expect that if the seller both runs an ad and accepts his money, then the seller is in a position to supply the goods. If not, the customer should be given a prompt refund.

To help control late late deliveries and non refunds on mail orders, the FTC has been considering for three years a new trade regulation which would, among other things, require mail order companies to offer full refunds to shoppers who ordered prepaid merchandise if the orders were not shipped within 30 days. The shipper would be permitted to delay the shipment only if he notified the customer of the delay and got the customer's written consent to the delay.

So strong is the industry's opposition to this rule, though, that it's impossible to forecast when it might be adopted. Meanwhile, where might you complain about mail order problems?

If the company is within your state, contact your state's attorney-general's office. If it does business in more than one state (as most do), contact the Postal Inspector via your local Post Office and/or the FTC. The FTC has regional offices in 11 major cities.

If the FTC in turn has received many complaints and if there's evidence of a widespread ripoff, it can issue a cease and desist order or under certain circumstances, even a preliminary injunction to halt the operation.

Diversify To Spread Risk
Q: If I were to sell my 3,000 shares of American Express Income Fund they would, despite reinvestment of all distributions, be worth less than I paid. It occurs to me by plowing back distributions, I am compounding a bad situation. I have adequate income and am interested in preserving capital. Should my quarterly distributions be invested in another fund? R.H.

A: Although American Express Income Fund has performed better than average in declining periods, it has failed to do as well as average in the past decade. The yield, however, is currently 7.6% from a good-quality balanced portfolio. Future distributions should be used to buy no-load Johnston Fund, an excellent long-term performer. This move will also help spread your risk.

Q: I have 500 shares of Champion International (NYSE) costing 11 7/8. Would you advise me to switch or do you think the stock has potential? A.C.

A: These shares, now trading at about 4X projected 1974 results (the lowest P/E in a decade), have thoroughly discounted the slump in the building industry and declining lumber prices. Building materials accounted for 53% of sales and 65% of operating profits in 1973. As the company is currently set up, some 37% of its building products volume is purchased from others, which tends to reduce profit margins. This situation should be corrected, however, buy the $1.25 billion 5-year planned capital expansion program, designed to increase capacity primarily in its building products operations.

Paper continues to be in tight supply, although some easing in demand appears to be stabilizing prices. This segment of Champion's business contributes 35% of sales and 29% of pre-tax earnings. Profits here should continue strong for the next several quarters, balancing any weakness in the building products area. The third major division, household furnishings, was able to widen profit margins on higher sales last year, a condition which should continue. Shares have above-average potential and should be held for higher levels.

Load Vs. No Load
Q: I would like to know the differences between (advantages and disadvantages) of load and no load funds. J.C.

A: The investor selecting a mutual fund today is confronted with more than 700 choices and new ones rare being formed continually. In making selections, overriding considerations should be performance and portfolio quality rather than the presence or absence of a load fee. Over the long term it is good and consistent investment management that brings the best rewards. Other things being equal, there is no question that as between a load and a no-load fund, the buyer of the former will start out with a handicap. However, things are seldom equal.

Basically, the only difference between loads and no loads is the sales fee. The load fund sells its shares through brokers, dealers or its own salesmen. The one-time charge or load (usually 8 1/2% of the offering price, 9.3% of the net asset value) pays for the sale effort. No loads are sold directly from the sponsor to the buyer at net asset value. Annual management and expense fees as a percentage of total assets normally run around 0.5%-0.75% in either case, load or no load. Most no loads are affiliated and managed by recognized stockbrokerage and investment counsel firms. As a class, the 170 or so no loads represent around 14% of the total assets of the industry.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

You should determine your own investment goals, be they growth, income, preservation of capital or any combination of these, then select a fund which has similar aims and has performed accordingly. Reading a prospectus will give you an excellent overall view of the fund's goals and present portfolio. Comparing funds' long-term (5- and 10-year) performance records covering both up and down markets is important. Some funds may be fairly adroit in bull markets while losing sorely in declining markets. Take as much time deciding where you will invest your money as you have taken to accumulate it.

Rules For Convertibles
I have $100,000 in U.S. Treasury Bills which I have been rolling over as they mature. Recently I have been seriously considering investing this money in convertible bonds. With this in mind I have chosen a list (enclosed) of 10 bonds which would pay me $24,200 annually in interest on a $110,000 investment. Within 20 years I would receive $440,000 back in principal. What do you think of this idea? J.B.

A: Your idea makes good sense but your bond choices are questionable. The 10 issues which you have selected yield 22% on average. A yield this high definitely indicates serious doubt on the part of the market as to the viability of the issuing companies. In addition all 10 of these convertibles are trading at excessive premiums (up to 900%) over their conversion value in common stock, thereby making that particular feature of this type of bond academic.

In general, corporations use lower coupon rate convertible bonds to avoid paying out high interest rates on borrowings. Additionally they assume that a good proportion of the issue will have been converted to equity well in advance of maturity, allowing the company to avoid a sizable capital outlay for redemption. In many cases the indenture requires retirement (after 5-10 years) of a certain percentage of the issue, although conversions often count in making up the required amount. It is vital to read indenture terms prior to buying a convertible bond, particularly if you are paying more than par value.

In selecting a convertible bond you should be reasonably impressed with the company's growth prospects. In today's market, with yields on common stock high, choose a convertible which yields at least 1% more than the common.
