Temple Sinai Selects New Religious Leader

The congregation of Temple Sinai has selected Rabbi George J. Astrachan of Temple B'nai Israel, Elmont, New York as its new religious leader, effective August 1.

Rabbi Astrachan succeeds Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland, who had been with Temple Sinai for 15 years and has moved to Miami, Florida with his family.

Rabbi Astrachan has been active in family, youth, and senior citizen activities during his seven years at Temple B'nai Israel. He previously served for three years as rabbi of Temple Beth El in Glens Falls, N.Y., after two years as an Army chaplain at Fort Dix, New Jersey. While in the service, he received the Army Commendation Medal and was honored with the Certificate of Merit by the New Jersey Jewish War Veterans.

A 1961 graduate of Miami University of Ohio with a bachelor of arts degree, he attended the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion at Cincinnati and was ordained a rabbi in 1967. At Hebrew Union College, Rabbi Astrachan received his bachelor and master of Hebrew Letters degrees.

The Rochester, N.Y. native is 39 years old and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Astrachan of Brighton, N.Y. He and his wife, Rita, are the parents of two sons, Bruce, 14, and Jeffrey, 10. They will move to Cranston in August.

Rabbi Astrachan was president of the Long Island Association of Reform Rabbis

RABBI GEORGE J. ASTRACHAN

during the past year and served on the board of trustees of that association and the Long Island Board of Rabbis. He was president of the Elmont Clergy Council from 1975-1978.

Rabbi Astrachan has served on the Committees on Church and State and on Conversion of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. While at Elmont, he was active on the Nassau County Council, Department of Senior Citizens Affairs, and was appointed to the White House Conference on Aging in 1974 and 1975.

Israeli-Egyptian Talks On Autonomy Continue

By David Landau and Yitzhak Shargil

JERUSALEM (JTA): Israeli and Egyptian officials trying to hammer out an agenda for the next round of autonomy talks ended two days of discussion at Herzliya with no sign that any substantial progress was made.

Meir Rosenne, legal advisor to the Foreign Ministry who headed the Israeli team, told a reporter when the meetings ended that "certain progress" had been made and that he and the Egyptian delegates would be reporting back to their respective governments.

It was indicated that further contacts on the "experts" level will be held before the full Israeli, Egyptian and American delegations resume the autonomy negotiations at Herzliya next week.

There was no authoritative word on the nature of the obstacles.

Observers here speculated that the Egyptians wanted to introduce the questions of Jerusalem and Israeli settlements on the West Bank to the agenda but Israel balked.

In addition to Rosenne, Israel was represented by Prof. Ruth Lapidoth, his designated successor when he takes over his post as Ambassador to France and by Gen. Abraham Tamir, head of the Defense Ministry's planning division.

Egypt was represented by Ibrahim Wahabi and Moussa Amr of the Foreign Ministry in Cairo and Col. Muhammad Faïd of the Egyptian Defense Ministry. The American delegation was headed by David Korn, Israel Desk Officer at the State Department.

If the talks produced nothing of substance, the Egyptian visitors nevertheless enjoyed Tel Aviv nightlife as guests of their Israeli hosts. They were taken on a tour of the city capped by a late dinner at the Dan Hotel on the seashore. The Egyptians reportedly were impressed by the crowded streets, cafes and restaurants that were open at a late hour.

Dairy Farmers Strike To Protest Veal Subsidy

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): Israeli dairy farmers went on strike creating a severe shortage of milk and its by-products. The purpose is to pressure the government to end its subsidy of imported frozen veal which competes with home-raised poultry. Milk was available, however, for hospitals, the army and infants.

The subsidy has kept the price of veal low, resulting in a sharp drop in the sale of poultry, thousands of tons of which are in cold storage. The farmers want price parity to stimulate poultry sales.

The government, however, intends to maintain the subsidy and the farmers are threatening to withhold other produce from the market. In addition to dairy, they have already cut down on potatoes.

The Ministry of Commerce supports the government's stand while the Agriculture Ministry is backing the farmers. The public is bearing the hardship.

May Lead PLO To Recognize Israel Prince Fahd Wants U.S. To Begin 'Dialogue' With PLO

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia: Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia has recently presented to the United States a proposal that talks between the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization start immediately.

This "dialogue, as the Prince terms it, could lead the PLO to accept United Nations Resolution 242 of 1967, and formally acknowledge the right of existence for Israel.

In addition, Saudi Arabia would be prepared to make peace and help assure the security of the borders of Israel, if that country would withdraw to the borders that existed before the 1967 war.

Of course, Saudi Arabia's acceptance of Resolution 242 and Israel's right to exist is necessary before any talks with the U.S. would occur, according to American policy established by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory and for establishment of secure and recognized borders. Saudi Arabia has interpreted the resolution to require complete withdrawal from all territory occupied in 1967, including the Old City of Jerusalem.

The Prince reiterated the criticism that Saudi Arabia and most other Arabs have made of the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. He said Israel had made it clear that the approach to peace agreed upon last September at the Camp David talks could not solve the Palestinian problem.

But disagreements over the American approach to the Middle East should not affect good relations between Saudi Arabia and the United States, he went on.

Prince Fahd spoke of his warm feelings for President Carter and dismissed rumors that Saudi Arabia would not go ahead with its purchase of 60 advanced F-15 jet fighters from the United States.

Very Cold Words for Sadat

The words used by the Prince in reference to President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt were very cold. He said the Saudis bore Mr. Sadat "no personal grudge" but he suggested that the Egyptian leader had misled him along the way to the Camp David talks. If a more radical government replaces Mr. Sadat, he said, it "would not be worse" in Arab terms.

The general tone of the interview on Middle East questions seemed to contradict Western speculation that the Prince, the leading figure under King Khalid, is less critical of the Camp David accords than some others in the Saudi royal family. He said emphatically that there was no disagreement in the royal family on the issue.

The Palestine Liberation Organization receives major financial support from the Saudis and stays on close terms with them. The P.L.O. chairman, Yasser Arafat, was in Riyadh in recent days and met with Prince Fahd and King Khalid.

"We have a genuine desire that a dialogue should start immediately between the U.S. Government and the P.L.O.," the Crown Prince said. "The Saudi Government would be more than prepared to contribute to this taking place."

"It is incumbent on the U.S. to talk to the P.L.O. because it is a, if not the, political fact in the conflict. It is the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

And after all, talking does not entail any prior commitment."

Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory and for establishment of secure and recognized borders. Saudi Arabia has interpreted the resolution to require complete withdrawal from all territory occupied in 1967, including the Old City of Jerusalem.

Prince Fahd was asked whether Saudi Arabia would make formal peace with Israel if it withdrew to the pre-1967 borders and whether it would also help guarantee the security of the borders. He answered: "Certainly."

An Issue of Political Rights

He said Saudi Arabia had hoped the Camp David agreements would lead to "implementation of 242, but unfortunately they did not." His criticism was that the accords had not assured the political rights of the Palestinians, now or after a five-year transition period envisaged in the agreement.

"And what has transpired has proved our point," Prince Fahd said. He referred to the position taken by Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Israeli Government on the meaning of "autonomy" for the West Bank and Gaza.

"Begin insists that autonomy is for the people, not the territory," the Prince said. "And Israel is not withdrawing from these territories. Apparently Israel has a different concept of 242 — to them it does not mean withdrawal."

The Saudi attitude has puzzled Washington. At the time of the Camp David talks, the Saudis took a reserved stance, one of nonsupport but with no harsh criticism of President Sadat and no specific measures against him.

An angel food cake must be cooled completely before being removed from the pan. . . Inverting and suspending the pan keeps the cake in suspension, allows it to stretch, and prevents it from settling. . . Removing the cake from the pan before it is completely cooled, or letting it cool in the pan upright, will result in a soggy product. . . Your Guide to Non-Prescription Pain Relievers

VITAL FACT: Every year, you and I, America's citizens, spend more than $2 billion on non-prescription pain relievers — selecting from over 500,000 over-the-counter medicines available through drug stores and other outlets across the U.S.

While we all have our favorite remedies for pain, in the past 10 years the soaring number of new non-prescription pain relief (analgesic) products has made it tough for us to choose and use them properly. As with all medicines, you must have basic knowledge of the medicine you take, what it contains, how it works.

There are thousands of products on the market, but there are actually only two generic non-prescription pain relievers available: acetylsalicylic acid (aspirin) and acetaminophen (most commonly known as Tylenol). Both drugs are equal in their ability to relieve pain and reduce fever, medical research has established.

Aspirin has been the traditional choice for relief of minor ailments for generations, but, in recent years, acetaminophen has been in an upsurge because it does not have aspirin's possibly adverse side effects. In Great Britain, where it has been used for more than 40 years, it is even more popular than aspirin.

Which pain reliever for you? Keep these points in mind:

(1) Know what you're taking. If you have stomach disorders or ulcers, any medication containing aspirin should be avoided, for aspirin can cause local irritation of the stomach lining. If you have an iron deficiency anemia (common among the elderly), choose acetaminophen since it does not cause gastrointestinal irritation or blood loss.

If you are an aspirin-sensitive individual, carry a medic-alert card to notify any physician unfamiliar with your condition.

(2) If you are pregnant, don't take any medication without consulting your physician, particularly during the last three months. If a pain reliever is necessary, ask your doctor what to take.

(3) If you have arthritis, learn which of two major types you have — osteoarthritis (most common) or rheumatoid. Either aspirin or acetaminophen can effectively relieve the pain and stiffness resulting from osteoarthritis. But only aspirin can treat the inflammation involved in rheumatoid arthritis.

(4) If you're preparing for surgery, ask your physician what to choose, advises Dr. Thomas Gates, of the Tylenol Information Service. Acetaminophen is generally recommended, because use of aspirin a week or two before any surgery, including tooth extraction, can increase bleeding at the time of surgery.

(5) Don't mix medicines. Always avoid taking more than one medication at a time without a doctor's advice, Dr. Gates cautions. When your physician prescribed a medication, be sure to ask about its possible interaction with your pain reliever, if you are taking one. Alcohol is a drug, too — so it is not advisable to drink if you are taking any medicine.

(6) Take care with children. Both aspirin and acetaminophen are effective in reducing fever and relieving pain in children. But repeated dosages of aspirin given to a feverish, dehydrated infant or a young child for more than two days can build up in the body with serious side effects. Telltale signs include worsening of the fever and rapid breathing.

(7) Always follow label directions. Do not take any medicine for a prolonged period without the guidance of your doctor. Strictly avoid larger doses than recommended. Overdoses of any drug can cause serious side effects.

(8) If you accidentally overdose, call the local poison control center, emergency room or your physician at once. And always keep in mind: there is no substitute for your physician's advice. Call your physician any time pain persists or is of an unusual type or severity.

There is no doubt that we are moving toward a new era in which we will save countless tens of millions of dollars a year in our purchases of drugs — prescription and non-prescription — by buying under their generic (rather than their well-advertised brand) names.

There is also no doubt that when we do buy medicines this way, we will be compelled to be more knowledgeable about what we're buying, for what purposes, how to use the drugs and in what amounts. The debate over the side effects of aspirin has been going on for years — and the cons as well as the pros have been widely publicized. This sort of public education is clearly beneficial — and should be a model to be copied in other areas.

OPENS PROCEEDINGS

BONN (JTA): The public prosecutor in Baden-Baden, Bavaria formally opened proceedings last Thursday against a fugitive Nazi war criminal whose whereabouts have been unknown since he disappeared 17 years ago to avoid arrest. The defendant, Dr. Aribert Heim, "is accused of the murder of an unknown number of Jewish concentration camp inmates at Mauthausen," Chief Prosecutor Hehling Von Lanzener said. He said "their death followed injections" allegedly administered by Heim. Heim vanished in 1962 and there has been no trace of him or any "hot lead" Von Lanzener said at a press conference.

Luxuries and Necessities In the Jewish Community

By BERYL SEGAL

The Jewish Federation of Rhode Island has supplied us with a detailed accounting of "Where Our Money Goes." The account pertains to the monies collected from you and me in 1979. I hope you can find the printed account. It is in the form of a pie cut into various sections, a section to each of the organizations and agencies, here and abroad, to whom the money was allocated according to their importance.

First, the amount collected. According to a revised version, as reported by the President of the Federation at the Annual Meeting, Mr. Marvin Holland, the total amount was close to three million dollars. In these days of inflation the sum is not too great. Consider the cost of a loaf of bread or a pound of meat and certainly a gallon of gasoline in the past year.

The United Jewish Appeal, the agency for all aid to Israel, has suffered from the cut-back policies of the Federation. We remember the days when the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) got the lion's share of the money collected. This year 1979 only fifty-four percent was allocated to that agency, which means that only one million five hundred dollars was given to Israel from Rhode Island. It is a pity, because Israel needs greater sums from us than ever before.

I agree that it is time for cutting back. Even the Federal Government is cutting back, the Governor of our state is urging economy, and the City Mayor is in a battle with city agencies who demand more and get less. But we seem to cut back on an agency in whose name the whole campaign is conducted. The average giver is under the impression that he is giving to Israel, and also to other agencies. The truth of the matter is that the average giver is hardly aware who those local and national institutions are and what they stand for.

In the 1950s when this column was in a running battle with some of the organizations who even then, in my opinion, were taking away money that was meant to be given to Israel, I conducted a questionnaire among a selected group. They were asked to identify in a sentence or two who was the American Jewish Committee? What does the American Jewish Congress do? What is the Anti-Defamation League? Do you know that part of your money is allocated to these organizations? It was an unscientific questionnaire, but it was revealing just the same.

The results were a total ignorance of the purpose of the organizations, their function on the American scene, and what they are doing with the money given to them.

Would anybody asked the same question about these three national organizations, who are the recipients of over twenty thousand dollars of Federation money they would be at a loss to answer them properly even today.

But this year there are other questions to ask of the Federation. These refer to the local organizations, namely the Jewish Community Center, the Home for the Aged, the Bureau of Jewish Education, the Jewish Family and Children's Service, and the allocations under the title of Local Beneficiaries. The four organizations mentioned above were allocated a total of $735,000 in the year of 1979. Granted that they deserve our aid, but in times of such an emergency for Israel, in whose name we came to the community for help, couldn't we be less generous to them and make our contribution greater for Israel? Our fathers paid tuition for their children. The Community Center, which charges for every service, every meeting in their rooms, could afford to cut down on their expenses when necessary. The Russian Jews will survive in the new land with less assistance; they have been living on less before they came here and will be willing to live with less as long as they are free.

Or must we support Brown University and URI and the School of Design students in the Hillel House? These are luxury expenditures, but in times of emergency we dispense with luxuries.

I know there are pressures from interested groups. But somebody must stand up for Israel, and if not we, who will?

When two waves are approaching, we go to the rescue of the boat in the path of the highest wave. When two people are running from danger, one from a ferocious animal and the other from an imaginary evil, we come to the rescue of the one who is in immediate peril.

These are the things we ought to consider in allocating funds entrusted to us by a community. Certainly not who has the greater clout in the community.

Think about these things during the summer.

I will say goodbye to all my readers. Have a good summer.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Q—I am an 80-year-old widow in need of investment advice. Looking over my enclosed list, can you advise me how to increase my income? In the few remaining years of my life, I would like to do some of the things my husband and I had saved and planned to do together. H.C. New York

A—Your invested assets are worth $165,500, and it would take you a long time to use up this amount. Assuming your assets can earn an average of 8% annually, you can withdraw 11% ($18,200) a year without exhausting your capital until you are 96. This is twice the life expectancy of an 80-year-old female.

Your only stock is Morton-Norwich (NYSE) and it is worth $62,000. This is far too much in one stock, a stock yielding only 5%. I would gradually sell down to 1,000 shares. But the first $5,000 realized should be used to fulfill your long-awaited dreams. This will leave $28,000 for reinvestment, to which you should add the $20,000 now in six-month certificates which mature in May. Including the $5,000 in spending money, this capital now generates $2,500 in income.

My choice for this money is no-load growth/income Windsor Fund. Over the last five years, it has grown an average of 15.6% annually. By placing the $48,000 in a withdrawal plan, you should be able to withdraw $5,000 a year without fear of outliving your capital.

Q—I have 2,000 shares of a high-yield utility. I do not need the income and am considering selling to invest in IBM, Louisiana-Pacific, Georgia-Pacific and Wang Labs. What do you suggest? J.S. Illinois

A—With the exception of Louisiana-Pacific, which should be held but not bought, I agree with your choices. Management at Georgia-Pacific (NYSE) is well regarded, and deservedly so, considering its performance in the highly cyclical forest products industry. In the last decade, sales, earnings and dividends have quadrupled. Buy.

International Business Machines' (NYSE) upcoming four-for-one split will give the shares broader market appeal. A 15% annual earnings gain, to $24.50 a pre-split share, should be reported for 1979. The shares are a buy for consistent long-term growth.

Wang Laboratories (ASE) is a more speculative selection than your two other choices. Nonetheless, the Class B shares are an attractive buy for the aggressive investor. Wang's revenues have tripled since 1975, with new orders up 89% in the December quarter alone. The company concentrates on small business systems and word processors. Earnings for the year to end in June should reach $2.20 a share up from $1.38 last year.

Q: Between the high price of oil and the nuclear plant troubles, it seems to me that coal stocks should be good investments. I own 100 shares of Pittston (NYSE) and all it does is go down. Why? P.O. Minnesota

A: Strike activity last year caused a sharp drop in profits to 67¢ a share from $2.14 in 1977. This was reflected in the trading price of the shares. Normally coal activities account for about 80% of net and 48% of sales, so a disruption in this division has a major impact on earnings. Metallurgical coal for steel makers accounts for 70% of Pittston's production; the remainder goes to utilities.

Q: I am 71, my wife younger. We are interested primarily in safety and income. Over the next three years, we will have $15,000 to $18,000 annually to invest. We have $35,000 in Municipal Investment Trust Fund from Merrill Lynch, $40,000 in Nacional Financiera bonds paying 16% after Mexican taxes, and $20,000 in a cattle feeding operation. E.W. Louisiana

A: For a person seeking safety, you have some rather risky investments. The Mexican bank bonds are safe in that these banks are heavily regulated by the government, but they are vulnerable to potential devaluation. Mexico has a problem with inflation which could result in another peso devaluation, such as the one in 1976. If this occurred, you would lose out in the currency translation, both on interest and principal, when the money was repatriated.

Your cattle feeding operation provides some tax shelter, even though many of the benefits were written out in the 1976 and 1978 tax revisions. A rise in the price of feed or a drop in the price of beef could easily turn a profit into a loss. Once the present program expires, I would bow out of this high-risk investment.

The new cash should be used to purchase stocks with above-average yields and rising dividend patterns. In this category are: American Telephone, Central & South West, Household Finance, Oklahoma Gas & Electric and United Telecommunications, all on the New York Stock Exchange.

TAX EVASION

JEEUSALEM (JTA): Israel's Income Tax Commission has begun a crackdown on Israeli Arabs whose rate of tax evasion, it claims, is much higher than in the Jewish population. Dozens of tax collectors, escorted by teams of police, moved from village to village questioning Arabs suspected of non-payment of taxes. A number of private vehicles were confiscated. The operation, which is expected to continue through this week, encountered no difficulties so far although one person was arrested after a scuffle.

Clark Stalls Switch To Jerusalem New Canadian Government Hurt By Embassy Position

OTTAWA: Newly-elected Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark's promise to take the Canadian Embassy out of Tel Aviv and locate it in Jerusalem is causing an unforeseen backlash in his new government.

Although the campaign pledge undoubtedly resulted in additional votes for Clark, he has backed down on actually implementing the change in location for the time being, due to pressure exerted by Arab governments and Canadian businessmen who fear losing Mideast business.

The delay in making the switch, however, has failed to reassure the Arabs that the pledge will not be kept at a later date.

The latest Arab protest came from the Arab Monetary Fund, an Abu Dhabi-based organization formed in February 1977 to help coordinate the monetary policies of 20 Arab countries. The fund reportedly has decided to boycott all Canadian banks and financial institutions.

The decision prompted a drop in the Canadian dollar to 84.72 U.S. cents, but it partially recovered to close in Toronto at 85.02 U.S. cents, down from 85.23 cents.

Finance Minister John Crosbie declined comment on the Arab Monetary Fund's action until he received a full report on the matter.

Financial analysts said the Arab fund's initiative is worrisome because it could be taken as a cue for similar action by individual Arab countries. The fund is affiliated with the Arab League, which is due to meet in Tunis June 27. An Arab source said the Canadian embassy issue would be on the league's agenda.

Royal Bank of Canada, meanwhile, said in a statement that Arab reaction to the planned embassy move could hurt the operations of Canadian banks in the Mideast as well as the banks' "international money-market operations here in Canada."

The bank, Canada's largest in terms of assets, said it "believes the potential damage to the Canadian economy and to Canadian trade and exports" of the threatened Arab reaction has been "underestimated."

So far, the only company believed to have a Mideast contract in immediate jeopardy is Westinghouse Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Westinghouse Electric Corp. of Pittsburgh. It has been negotiating to sell generators to Libya at a projected price of about $85 million.

Asked to comment on reports that Libya had broken off contract talks because of the embassy issue, Westinghouse Canada said: "The commercial aspects of the negotiations with the Libyan authorities are at a very late stage and are delicate enough as it is. We don't want to compromise our position by expanding further on the matter."

Sam Hughes, executive director of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said there are some indications that the Arabs mean what they say about breaking off economic relations if Canada proceeds with the embassy move.

He said Canadian businessmen have reported that it is taking them longer to get visas for Arab countries. Although he said he didn't know of any Mideast contract cancellations, he said the Arabs do seem to be backing off from Canada.

The Canadian Export Association said it too has noted that visas are more difficult to get for Arab countries. The trade group's members are "very concerned" about the likely impact of the Canadian embassy move and have made their concern known to the Canadian government, said the association's president, Thomas Burns.

Bell Canada, which has a $1.1 billion (Canadian) contract to expand and modernize Saudi Arabia's telephone system, said it is worried about losing the Saudi business if the embassy move is made.

A spokesman for the telephone utility termed the situation "serious." Bell Canada recently reported that it was discussing an expansion of its Saudi project with the Saudi government.

Jay Scott, president of Atco International

Ltd. of Calgary, said his company, which makes mobile homes and does about $100 million (Canadian) of business annually in the Mideast and North Africa, has appealed to the Canadian government not to proceed with the embassy move. The Arab countries have made clear that the move would result in a severance of trade relations, he said.

NAMED DIRECTOR: Arlene Eisenstadt of Cranston has been named marketing director of the North Dartmouth Mall in Massachusetts.

Her appointment was made by the North Dartmouth Mall Merchants Association, Inc., and Arlan Management Corporation, operator of the 72-store 90-acre facility.

Eisenstadt previously was program coordinator for the National Foundation, Rhode Island Chapter March of Dimes. The 25-year old was graduated from Rhode Island College in 1976 with a degree in elementary education and psychology. She is a graduate of Cranston High School East.

In her new position, she will coordinate all marketing, advertising, and promotional activities for the mall.

Robbins, state chairman, Jeffrey Gordon, Rabbi Leslie Gutterman, and Edward Goldin, temple president.

Boston Doctor Charged With Unprofessional Conduct

The New England regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has filed a complaint with the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine alleging unprofessional conduct on the part of a physician at Faulkner Hospital, in Jamaica Plain, who refused to sign a physical examination form for a student desiring to emigrate to Israel.

William R. Sapers, Chairman of the New England Regional Board of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, announced that ADL Civil Rights Director, Leonard Zakim had investigated the complaint of a student who had gone to Faulkner Hospital to take a physical exam required by the Israel Aliyah Center prior to emigration to Israel.

Upon nearing completion of the exam it is alleged that the examining physician, Dr. James Ryan stated that he opposed the existence of the State of Israel and believed that "all Jews should be pushed into the sea." Ryan then refused to sign the physical examination form.

In a letter to the Board of Registration in Medicine, Zakim informed them of the incident and stated, "...let me assure you that we do not seek to deny Dr. Ryan his right to freedom of expression of his political views however much we find them annoying, insulting and undignified. However, we charge Dr. Ryan with an inexcusable, intolerable breach of his professional ethics and responsibilities."

Zakim added that the Faulkner staff and administration had been very apologetic and cooperative over the whole matter. The ADL feels that the incident in no way reflects the views of the staff of Faulkner Hospital or the administration of the institution.

He noted further that, "the action of Dr. Ryan in refusing to complete the requested physical examination form was that of Dr.

Ryan alone." The public policy of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is not to suppress the rights of people to speak their mind. Instead the organization has engaged in a long struggle to combat discrimination wherever and whenever it appears.

While the ADL supports Dr. Ryan's First Amendment rights to any political point of view, such rights do not include injecting such viewpoints into his doctor-patient relationships.

According to Sapers, the ADL has requested the Board of Registration to hold a hearing in regard to the incident. Sapers said, "the ADL is ever vigilant in our efforts to protect the rights and dignity of the American Jewish community. This case is a blatant example of the forces still present in American society that make it necessary for us to continue our work and vigilance."

Stars Out For Israel Bonds

WASHINGTON (JTA): Some of the brightest stars in the entertainment galaxy, leading members of the Carter Administration and Congress and other distinguished guests joined more than 1000 members of Washington's Jewish community at a gala Independence Ball at the Washington-Hilton Hotel last week to celebrate Israel's 31st anniversary.

The affair, sponsored by the Israel Bond Organization, was highlighted by the presentation of separate awards by the Israel government to actors Joel Grey and Herschel Bernardi and songsmith Sammy Cahn.

The presentations were made by the Israeli Ambassador to the U.S., Ephraim Evron. Grey, who won an Oscar for his performance in "Cabaret," was given Israel's Humanitarian Award in recognition of his artistry which has "captured the hearts and minds of men and women in every corner of the earth." Cahn, a five-time Oscar winner, was recipient of Israel's Cultural Award and Bernardi, star of "Zorba the Greek" and an essayer of the role of Tevye the milkman in "Fiddler on the Roof" was given Israel's Friendship Award.

Vice President Walter Mondale was chairman of the honorary committee for the affair which included House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, seven members of President Carter's Cabinet, leaders of both major parties in Congress and Mayor Marion Barry of Washington. More than a dozen diplomats, nearly all of them ambassadors, attended the celebration. Alexandro Orfila, executive head of the Organization of American States, and Mrs. Orfila were among the guests. The chairmen of the ball were Melvyn and Suelle Estrin. Herbert Haft and his wife Gloria were chairmen of the ball's patrons.

New York Celebration

At an Independence Ball held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York just a week earlier, the coveted American-Israel Arts, Sciences and Humanities Award for distinguished service to Israel was presented to five show business personalities and one architect. They were Metropolitan Opera star Robert Merrill; entertainer Sammy Davis Jr.; playwright Arthur Miller; choreographer Jerome Robbins; actress Elizabeth Taylor; and R. Buckminster Fuller. All were cited for their outstanding contributions to the cultural and material development of Israel.

The keynote speaker of the evening, Israel's Ambassador to the United Nations Yehuda Blum who was patron of the ball, spoke of the "great steps initiated towards peace" and expressed hope for a long-lasting cessation of hostilities.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand is another that has to be handled correctly at trick one or the hand will be doomed to defeat. We have all heard of End Plays and Avoidance Plays. This is sort of a combination of the two. Every Declarer should have been able to have foreseen his problem and thus have tried to do everything possible to keep the danger hand off lead yet only one Declarer managed to see how. When you look at all four hands, I'm sure it will seem very simple to you but something does happen right at the table to make everything much more difficult to see.

North		East
♦ A 3	♠ 10 8 7 5 2	♦ 7 6	♠ Q J 10
♥ K Q 10 2	♦ 10 6 2	♥ 3	♠ 8 6
♦ K 7 5 4 3		♦ A Q J 9 7
♠ 8 4
West		South
♦ K Q J 9 4	♥ A J 9 8 5 4	♦ 6	♠ A 9 2
♥ 3	♥ A 9 2	♥ A 9 2	♠ K 5 3
♦ A Q J 9 7

East and West were vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

1H	1S	3H	P
4H	End

I watched this hand every time it was played. The bidding usually went as shown with most Wests hesitating just a bit before selling out. This should give a sharp Declarer some extra information but in this hand he really doesn't need any more. West's vulnerable overcall should readily pinpoint the whereabouts of that Club Ace. When two Norths responded Two Diamonds and South rebid his Hearts, the Wests sitting at that table both did bid their Clubs but both Declarers either failed to listen or couldn't see how to avoid their problem.

What usually happened was that West led his Spade King won in Dummy. Each Declarer drew Trumps and then all turned their attention to their long Diamond suit. Obviously one trick has to be lost in that suit before it can be set up and that is the key to the problem, to whom? When they play the Ace, King and then the third, unfortunately it is East who wins. He wastes no time switching to a Club and South's King becomes a useless card. Oh, yes, four is made all right but there was a sure over-trick if trick one was handled right as long as the Diamonds break normally. It doesn't matter which opponent has the extra, winning Diamond.

Remember, the key is to keep East off lead while establishing Diamonds. Impossible? Not a bit. Simply allow West to win the first trick. The rest is easy. No matter what happens next, eventually discard one of South's Diamonds on the Spade Ace and now Diamonds can be set up easily after drawing Trumps by playing the Ace, King and then ruffing out the third. There are plenty of entries in Dummy to do everything necessary.

What you are actually doing is transferring the loser from one suit to another while at the same time "End-playing West" and "Avoiding" East. And remember, West's behavior at the table certainly should have told everyone exactly where sits that Club Ace. In Duplicate that over-trick is so important but the time may come when a play like this means making or going down.

Moral: Supposedly, in Bridge, one draws his inferences at his own risk. True, but a good drawer will come out far ahead. When bidding tells one just what to do, no inferences are needed.

ACCEPTS REFUGEES

JERUSALEM (JTA): Israel is ready to absorb another 200 refugees from Vietnam. This is the result of Premier Menachem Begin's call on all nations of the free world to open their gates to the Vietnamese refugees.

Yemenite Leader Dies At Age 59

TEL AVIV (JTA): Former Knesset Speaker Yisrael Yeshayahu, a leader of the Yemenite Jewish community in Israel, died after a long illness. He was 59. His body lay in state at the Knesset before burial.

The Knesset stood at attention in his honor when news of his death reached it shortly before the end of a recent session. Knesset Speaker Yitzhak Shamir said that Yeshayahu had contributed enormously to the growth of the Israeli parliament. Labor Party leader Shimon Peres praised his contributions to the party.

Born in Saana, Yemen April 15, 1920 as Yisrael Yeshayahu Sharabi, he dropped his last name after immigrating to then Palestine at the age of nine. He entered public life in the Histadrut's Department for Oriental and Yemenite Jews which he headed from 1934-48.

In 1948, he was named by the Israeli government and the Histadrut to head "Operation Magic Carpet" which brought the Jews of Yemen to Israel. He entered the Knesset in 1951 and during the years was frequently in dispute with the Labor Party leadership over what he termed discrimination against his advancement because he was a Yemenite. In 1967, Premier Levi Eshkol named him Minister of Posts.

In 1971, he was elected secretary general of the Labor Party and in 1972 he became Speaker, a post he held until 1979. He was not selected for the Labor Party's 1979 election list.

During his lifetime, he published numerous articles on the history and folklore of Yemenite Jews and on problems of absorption into Israeli society.

Ida Nudel Remembered

NEW YORK (JTA): The outgoing chairman and chairman-elect of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry (NCSJ) urged Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to release Ida Nudel from exile and allow her to emigrate to Israel. Eugene Gold, who will end his three-year chairmanship on Aug. 15, and Los Angeles attorney Burton Levinson, declared "In the spirit of good will and cooperation of the SALT II accords, we urge the Soviet Union to release Ida Nudel and allow her to join her sister in Israel."

June 21 was the first anniversary of Nudel's exile to a small colony a few kilometers from the tiny Siberian village of Krivosheyno. Known as the "Guardian Angel" of other Jewish "Prisoners of Conscience" in the Soviet Union, Nudel first applied to emigrate to Israel in 1971.

Repeatedly detained and interrogated by the secret police, she placed on her apartment balcony a sign that read, "KGB, give me my visa." That defiant act precipitated her four-year exile for "malicious hooliganism."

Meanwhile, the Long Island Committee for Soviet Jewry commemorated the first anniversary of Nudel's exile by dedicating two benches on the grounds of the Nassau County Supreme Court building in Mineola in her name.

In a related event, a special vigil was held outside the Soviet Consulate in San Francisco. The Bay Area Council on Soviet Jewry, which sponsored the event, declared the week of June 14-21 as Ida Nudel Week, as part of the international campaign to gain her release. In Israel, a group of women demonstrated in front of the Finnish Embassy, which handles Soviet affairs, urging Nudel's release.

BAT MITZVAH: Laura Lee Jacobs, daughter of Donald and Martha Jacobs of Clarence Street, Cranston, became Bat Mitzvah at Temple Beth Israel on May 26. Following the services, a reception was held at her home. Laura is the granddaughter of the late Rebecca Sirkis and the late Sadie and Louis Jacobs.

LECTURE HELD

The first Nathan Chaset Memorial Lecture, sponsored by the Miriam Hospital Staff Association, was recently held at the Miriam Hospital.

Robert J. Krane, M.D., associate professor of urology, Boston University School of Medicine, and director of urology, Boston City Hospital was the guest lecturer. Dr. Krane spoke on the "The Neurogenic Bladder."

The Nathan Chaset Memorial Lecture is an annual lecture, established in memory of Dr. Chaset, who served as director of the division of urology at the Miriam Hospital from 1954-1970 and as president of the staff association in 1959.

ARRIVE IN ISRAEL

JERUSALEM (JTA): The first among the 8000 youth expected to arrive this summer on the Jewish Agency "summer project" arrived last week. Some 100,000 Jewish youth have visited Israel since 1948 in the "summer projects." This year, the visits will emphasize education and not tourism, Avraham Katz, head of the Jewish Agency's youth and hechalutz department said. The common denominator of the various courses the youth will take is the deepening of knowledge on the subjects of Judaism and Zionism.

In Accordance With New York Bill

Responsibility Of Jewish Groups- Foster Children In Jewish Homes

By Ben Gallob

NEW YORK (JTA): The sponsor of a bill requiring major changes in child welfare practices in New York State, which has been approved by both houses of the Legislature, stressed that the measure placed on Jewish organizations the responsibility for ending the placement of Jewish children in non-Jewish foster homes.

Assemblyman Howard Lasher (D, Brooklyn), himself an Orthodox Jew, introduced the New York State Child Welfare Act of 1979 in the Assembly. An identical bill was introduced in the Senate by Sen. Joseph Pisani (R, New Rochelle). Gov. Hugh Carey was expected to sign the measure into law promptly.

Lasher said the measure emphasizes preventive services to help keep children in their natural homes, as well as efforts to find permanent adoptive homes, if keeping them in their natural homes is not possible, thus de-emphasizing foster care. Lasher said the new legislation establishes a framework which provides both the opportunity and the responsibility of the Jewish community to find Jewish families "willing to adopt hard-to-place Jewish children, many with severe physical or emotional handicaps."

The new measure requires the state Department of Social Service to issue regulations providing the procedures "reasonably necessary for the placement of children" in accordance with the measure's requirements that children be placed in adoptive homes of their own religious background "where practicable."

'Unique Opportunity' Offered

In a letter to Jewish leaders about the new legislation, Lasher declared that while the measure was long needed in the child care field, "it also presents a unique opportunity to permit the addressing" of the problem of placement of Jewish children in non-Jewish homes, a longtime scandal in the Jewish community.

Lasher said the language in the measure providing for maximum efforts to place Jewish children in Jewish homes was inserted in consultation with the National Jewish Commission on Law and Public Affairs (COLPA). Lasher said that procedures in the placement process developing over many years and the lack of a large pool of Jewish families available in which to place hard-to-place children had led to no more than lip service being paid to the legal requirement that placements be made with the faith "where practicable."

Howard Zuckerman, COLPA president, said the goal of the Jewish groups was to seek to put some teeth into the "where practicable" element of the law. COLPA took part in both the drafting of the language and in meetings with Commissioner Barbara Blum of the Social Services Department on behalf of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, Young Israel, the Rabbinical Council of America and Agudath Israel.

Lasher said he had had several meetings, since the drafting of the new measure, with Blum and Dennis Rapps, COLPA executive director, when the major concepts of the regulations mandated by the new legislation were developed.

Lasher said one of the major points agreed on was that "religious matching" would become an integral element of the entire placement process. Another key point agreed on was that personnel involved in the placement process must be appropriately trained and monitored. Also agreed to was creation of some kind of coordinating council, to be made up of representatives of all Jewish social work agencies, to be the working agency to find the needed homes and to persuade Jewish parents to adopt the children.

Zuckerman said a key element to be incorporated in the rules to be promulgated by the Social Service Department is one to provide additional support — including psychological counseling, therapy, homemaker service and caseworkers — to help the natural parents keep their children.

Seek Willing Jewish Homes

If that fails, Zuckerman said, an effort will be made to place the child in a permanent adoptive home of that child's faith. The strategy worked out by the Jewish groups is aimed at creating a broad and sustained effort to find willing Jewish homes for such children. That effort will be made by the projected coordinating council, on which representatives of interested Jewish agencies will serve at the invitation of the Social Services Department, Zuckerman said.

Under the regulations agreed to at the meeting between Blum, Lasher and Rapps, whenever a Jewish child is under consideration for placement in an adoptive or institutional foster care agency, notice will be required to be given to the coordinating council, which will have the function of locating a Jewish home for the child, by use of such modern systems as computer listings and matching. The coordinating council's work will be funded under the new legislation.

COLPA officials said they had been informed by Jewish agencies that the agencies were convinced there are Jewish parents who would be willing to accept such children if they were sought out and that the problem is not lack of such parents but lack of knowledge as to where they exist, a gap which the coordinating council will seek to fill in a scientific rather than by the present haphazard approach.

Zuckerman said promulgation of the rules to implement the new legislation will take several months and that formation of the projected coordinating council will not take place until after the rules have been issued and put into effect. Meanwhile, he said, COLPA has been consulting, on behalf of the other Orthodox organizations, with the Ohel Children's Home, the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and the Mishkan Home for additional information and evaluation of the major changes the new legislation requires.

Hospital Trust Forms New Department

Hospital Trust Corporation recently announced the formation of a corporate communications department encompassing the advertising, public relations, community affairs, and audio-visual functions of the financial services institution. Phyllis W. Jackowitz has been promoted to vice president and is in charge of the new department.

In addition to the formation of corporate communications, the first step in forming marketing and product management entities within each division was taken with the appointment of Alice C. Macintosh, vice president, to the new position of marketing manager for the trust and investment management division. She will report to John W. Wall, executive vice president in charge of the division. Both the communications and divisional marketing functions are an outgrowth of the former marketing administration department.

Mrs. Jackowitz joined the marketing administration department as a public relations officer in 1975 after a 12 year career as senior campaign associate and director of operations with the United Way of Southeastern New England, Inc. In 1977, she was named assistant vice president serving as executive assistant to the president.

Yeshayahu, who was born in Yemen in 1911 and immigrated to Palestine in 1929, was buried on Mt. Herzl in a plot set aside for national leaders.

Emunah Women's Convention

Stein Supports Settlement Push

NEW YORK: "It is incredible that the United States has been labeling Israel intransigent during the peace negotiations, when it is she who has made all the vital concessions," Andrew Stein, Manhattan Borough President said yesterday.

Addressing the Annual Donor Luncheon of Emunah Women of America at the Waldorf Astoria, Stein blasted the State Department for its unfair pressure on Israel to give up its territory "when ironically the United States itself refused to concede the Panama Canal which has absolutely no validity to our safety at all."

Stein told the audience that he was "deeply concerned about the mood in the U.S. and its discernible shift away from its former pro-Israel stance. Noting that "in the final analysis we have only ourselves to depend upon," the Borough President lashed out at those American Jews who call upon Israel to make compromises."

"It is absolutely important that American Jewry give Israel her wholehearted support," Stein declared. "Prime Minister Begin is totally correct in his refusal to give up the settlements to which Israel has a historic right and which it needs for vital security purposes."

Stein called upon American Jewry to throw its support behind Begin. "Let's support the new settlements," he urged, and let's not allow the editorial board of the New York Times to dictate our foreign policy."

Also speaking at the Emunah Donor Luncheon was Israel Consul General Paul Kedar, who issued a strong plea to American Jewry to make the existence of Israel "central to its thought and central to its life."

"Two of the dimensions that have characterized the uniqueness of the Jewish people," he told the Emunah women, "have been our refusal to accept the Galut, and the centrality of Eretz Israel to Jews all over the world. If this centrality is lost, then the uniqueness of the Jewish people is lost as well."

Kedar also appealed to American Jews to support Begin thereby strengthening Begin's stance in the autonomy negotiations by throwing their unwavering support behind him.

Results Of ADL Survey

U.S. Public Opposes Settlements

By David Landau

JERUSALEM (JTA): Current and recent data collated by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith shows that "U.S. public opinion views recent settlement activity as going beyond the appropriate line of activity by Israel."

This was reported by Maxwell Greenberg, president of the ADL, who said his organization was "concerned" and that he would be reporting these findings to Premier Menachem Begin.

The ADL study of U.S. opinion focussed on the Alon Moreh settlement recently set up just outside Nablus on the West Bank. On the vexed issue of the legality of Jewish settlements on the West Bank, Greenberg criticized the Carter Administration and the State Department's legal aides for stating repeatedly that such settlement is illegal.

His own position as a lawyer, he said, and the position of the ADL National Commission, was that settlement is "not clearly illegal as the Carter Administration asserts . . . It is a very debatable issue of law."

Greenberg was not prepared to say, on the other hand, that settlements are clearly legal. On the U.S. Administration's assertions that settlements are "an obstacle to peace," Greenberg said he suspected President Anwar Sadat of Egypt was "less exercised . . . feels less strongly" about them than the Carter Administration. Sadat seemed to think the settlements were negotiable and not a factor destroying the peace prospects, he said.

One of the main points made by the ADL president was that "there is a virtual unanimity of editorial opinion in the U.S." criticizing the Alon Moreh settlement.

The ADL monitors regularly some 50 leading American newspapers across the nation. The ADL would be failing in its responsibility, Greenberg said, if it did not bring this fact to the attention of Israeli policymakers.

Israel was still the "most favored nation in the Mideast" in U.S. opinion polls. But the "trend" was not positive, said Greenberg and Perlmutter, and this latest criticism over Alon Moreh has not helped.

Sadat's popularity on the other hand was steadily rising. "Israel's policy need not be determined by U.S. public opinion," Greenberg said. "But it is a factor to be taken into account."

Scores Carter's Comments

On the legality of settlements, Greenberg said that Jordan's sovereignty over the West Bank from 1948-1967 was not widely recognized and therefore Israel's occupation of the area in a war of self-defense against Jordanian attack did not necessarily fall under the terms of the Fourth Geneva Convention, upon which the State Department's legal aides base their "illegality" contention.

"State Department legal aide Herbert Hansell's documents fuzzle over this issue," Greenberg charged. "The Carter Administration should stop perpetrating these inaccuracies."

At the same time, however, Greenberg declined to state that the settlements are legal. Last Thursday, Theodore Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, after meeting with Begin, said that "the consensus" of the Conference and of U.S. Jewry was that the settlements were legal and necessary.

"If that's the consensus," said Greenberg today, "then we are not part of the consensus. It will not be the first time. . . Mann did not poll all the 31 presidents of the Presidents Conference . . ."

As for the settlements being an obstacle to peace, Greenberg and Perlmutter said it could well be that Carter's repeated assertions to this effect were becoming themselves an obstacle to peace.

Mother Of 13 And Grandma Of 5, Roman Catholic Scholar Earns PhD

CINCINNATI - "I like to think that all of our students are exceptional, but one, at least, is unique," said Dr. Alfred Gottschalk, president of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion at commencement time.

The "one" is Mrs. Paula Bowes of Indianapolis. A German-born, Roman Catholic woman of 55, Mrs. Bowes is the mother of 13 children and grandmother of 5 more. At commencement exercises of Hebrew Union College's Cincinnati School early in June, Dr. Gottschalk conferred the degree of Doctor of Philosophy upon her.

Mrs. Bowes' children—seven boys and six girls range in age from 14 to 31. The grandchildren range from three to ten.

Mrs. Bowes has been a Christian Fellows scholar at Hebrew Union College's School of Graduate Studies for the past six years, commuting to Cincinnati from her home in Indianapolis to complete her course requirements. Her dissertation title "A Literary Interpretation of the Court Narrative."

Her husband James, a physician, and nine of their children were on hand to see Mrs. Bowes receive her degree. When the exercises ended, they surprised her with a cake upon which was inscribed, "Congratulations Doctor Mom PhD."

Mrs. Bowes, born Paula Josephine Haller in Murnau, near Munich, Germany, came to the United States at age five. She lived in the mid-Manhattan area of New York City and, after attending secondary school in Westchester County, studied at St. Joseph's College in Brooklyn where, in 1944, she received the bachelor of arts degree with a major in English literature. Years later, already the mother of 13, she enrolled at the Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis and, in 1971, earned the master of arts degree in religion.

While pursuing her PhD degree at Hebrew Union College, Mrs. Bowes has been teaching courses in Old Testament to high school seniors at St. Mary's Academy in Indianapolis. "I would like to be a part of the growing movement to stimulate study and appreciation of the Bible for everyone, especially adults," she says.

NEVER TOO OLD: President Alfred Gottschalk of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion congratulates Mrs. Paula Bowes after conferring PhD degree upon her as her husband, Dr. James Bowes, and nine of their 13 children look on. The new holder of the Doctor of Philosophy has five grandchildren.

Bundestag Pressed For Early Decision On Nazi War Criminals

By Alfred Schroeder

BONN (JTA): The Bundestag's momentous debate over the extension of the statute of limitations for the prosecution of Nazi war criminals is nearing a climax with supporters demanding an early decision and opponents pressing a string of proposals that could, in effect, allow most Nazis still at large to go scot-free. Herbert Wehner, the Social Democratic Party floor leader has urged that a vote be taken before parliament recesses for the summer in mid-July. The statute is due to expire on Dec. 31 unless extended or abolished.

"This is a burning issue which must be settled at the soonest," he said, noting that "the discussions are now in a critical phase. We must have a clear decision and I won't tolerate any tricks and maneuvers to postpone it any longer. And I reject attempts to reverse the basic intentions of the law," Wehner said. Former Justice Minister

Gerhard Jahn, deputy chairman of the Social Democratic Party, supported Wehner. He noted that "certain Bonn parliamentarians" are trying to "push through special regulations for criminals who committed crimes during the Nazi time."

He was referring to a series of proposals by the opposition Christian Democratic Party including one that "minor Nazi criminals" should be exempted from prosecution "if the accused was in a subordinate position and carried out orders."

Another proposal by the Christian Democrats' legal advisor, Benno Ehrhard, would drop cases where the "moral and social behavior of the accused permits the conclusion that he won't commit any more crimes." That was not supported by the opposition party, however, and is given little chance of acceptance.

Wehner characterized the various opposition proposals as tantamount to "a sort of amnesty." Nevertheless, there appears to be a considerable number of Bundestag deputies who prefer the statute of limitations — extended twice in the past 20 years — to expire, thereby conferring immunity on war criminals whose whereabouts are presently unknown. Wehner said he was astonished that such sentiments should exist "in a country where a growing number of books and records demand tough counter-action before a threat materializes."

Heinz Galinski, chairman of West Berlin's Jewish community, said he suspected the Ehrhard proposal was intended to relegate Nazi war crimes to the category of "trifles and petty cases." He said that gave rise to fear that the effort to continue the prosecution of Nazi criminals may not command a parliamentary majority.

Keeping Kosher Prices Kosher

FALLSBURG, N.Y. (JTA): A "selected boycott" of the kosher food market was urged by Rabbi Bernard Rosenzweig, president of the Rabbinical Council of America. He denounced "the profiteering which exploits Jewish consumers," at the 43rd annual convention of Orthodox rabbis at the Pineview Hotel here.

"The prices of kosher foods, particularly prior to Jewish holidays, is unconscionable," he said. "The ensurment of kashrut in itself cannot account for such astronomical prices which reflects greed without conscience. Young couples struggle under the impact of such exploitation and undoubtedly as a result, find themselves unable to maintain their religious observance."

"I suggest," Rosenzweig added, "that organized Jewish communities undertake selected boycotts to force legislation of unjustifiably high prices. There is ample Talmudic precedence for such action. In the long run, such exorbitant pricing will drive marginal Jews away from kashrut and therefore, be most hurtful to the entire kashrut industry."

Israeli Winners Of UJA Contest

NEW YORK (JTA): Irwin S. Field, national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, announced the names of the three Israeli UJA 40th Anniversary Essay Contest winners. They are: Yosef Zaguri, 17, third year high school student from Tel Aviv; Galia Bernfeld, 16, second year high school student from Arad; and Moshe Blockerkovski, 17, fourth year high school student from Kiryat Bialik. Field said the essays "demonstrated the success of the contest as a way of introducing a new generation into the process of understanding and awareness of Jewish communal life which creates a continuity of UJA leadership," and said that the 10 American winners will visit Israel this coming August and be hosted by the three Israeli winners.

Dr. Eliezer Shmueli, the director general of Israel's Ministry of Education and Culture, who served as the chairman of the UJA 40th Anniversary Public Committee in Israel, said that while the American part of the contest, which produced 10 winners was aimed to make today's youth aware of ongoing Jewish humanitarian and philanthropic efforts throughout the world, the Israeli contest emphasized the Talmudic injunction of Jewish unity — "All Jews are responsible one for each other."

Begin Opposes Price Hikes

By Gil Sedan

JERUSALEM (JTA): Premier Menachem Begin rejected today any increase in the price of basic consumption products. "Inflation is a disease that can be cured," he said.

Begin spoke at a closed session of the Likud Knesset faction, in which he urged members to speak openly on their questions of government policy. Members did not hold back criticism, and some warned that unless the government changed its economic and social policies, Likud would lose the next elections.

Track Program to train and recruit people for middle-management and executive positions in Federations.

Mandel said key provisions for the new by-laws adopted at the special General Assembly specify that community delegates to the CJF General Assembly be appointed at the beginning of each calendar year, and be involved in guiding CJF programs throughout the year; enlargement of the CJF Board of Directors to include leaders from more cities; and reorganization of CJF committees.

Says American Jewry Could Be Endangered

FALLSBURG, N.Y.: Citing such diverse factors within the Jewish community as its spiraling intermarriage rate, plummeting birth rate, and disproportionate number of senior citizens, the executive director of the Jewish Community Relations Council of New York warned this weekend that "American Jewry is sitting on a powder keg."

Addressing the national convention of Emunah Women of America held at the Pine View hotel in Fallsburg, NY, Malcolm Hoenlein declared that American Jewry was a fast-disappearing community "and that we may well be the 21st Century's Mohicans."

Noting that the intermarriage rate has sharply risen to 50-60 percent within some communities, Hoenlein stated: "Even those who marry within their faith are not having enough children to replace our losses. We are also an increasingly older community, and a poorer community with 20 percent of New York Jewry living at or below the poverty line."

Aside from its internal problems, Hoenlein saw American Jewry threatened by such external elements as the growing rise of evangelical groups within our country, the alarming trend towards greater anti-Semitism within the black community, the political danger posed by the electoral college issue, and the lure of the cults for alienated Jewish youth.

Calling for a greater understanding of and responsiveness to the needs of alienated Jewish youth, Hoenlein also lashed out at the benign neglect on the part of the Jewish community of its mentally retarded, and urged that they may be given opportunities for greater participation within Jewish life.

Hoenlein also told the Emunah audience that he foresaw the possibility and need for establishing coalition with various ethnic groups and urged "greater efforts to reach out to Hispanic Americans who share many common values."

ROLLING ALONG: The 11th annual Miriam Hospital Employee Outing, which drew over 600 employees, their families and friends, was held on Saturday, June 16, at Goddard Memorial Park. The warm summer weather made for a relaxing day of softball, volleyball, and other adult and children's games. Members of hospital administration cooked the picnic fare. Co-chairmen of the event were Floyd Connelly, radiology manager, and Maryellen Rapa, infection control officer.

CJF Approves Study Charting Plans For Federations In 1980s

DENVER (JTA): A three-year study charting the future of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds and their umbrella agency, the Council of Jewish Federations, for the 1980s was adopted at a special CJF General Assembly here by an overwhelming majority of the 300 delegates representing most of the 190 member Federations in the United States and Canada.

The community representatives adopted the final review report which emerged from three years of analyses and consultations involving more than 1500 community leaders in the United States and Canada. Morton L. Mandel of Cleveland, CJF president, said the review report examines every major aspect of the CJF philosophy, operation, and objectives and how the CJF can best meet the needs of its member Federations.

Review committee recommendations approved by the delegates covered the following areas: strengthening communities and Federations; United Jewish Appeal-CJF relations; priorities and planning; national and overseas Jewish agencies cooperation; governance of CJF; communications; human resources and staff organization; and budget. Mandel said periodic evaluations will be made of the implementation of the recommendations and results reported to the Federations.

Mandel said the review "took account of the major changes taking place in Jewish life both here in North America and in Israel and overseas. The CJF has a responsibility to identify and anticipate change and to help communities cope with them as quickly and effectively as possible." He added that the review "recommends a number of specific revisions in the Council's services, procedures, structure, staffing and budget. All the recommendations are in the context of developing more cohesive and stronger Jewish communities."

Personnel Program Approved

The delegates also unanimously adopted the report of the CJF Personnel Task Force recommending a comprehensive personnel development program to meet the professional staff needs of Federations. The delegates also changed CJF by-laws implementing key provisions of the review report providing for greater involvement of community representatives in the governance of CJF. The necessary budget changes also were approved by the delegates to permit implementation of the review recommendations to begin in September.

More than 140 communities were visited during the review process to obtain information, with Federation officers, executive committee members and staff professionals contributing their views.

The review committee which drafted the final document was headed by Raymond Epstein of Chicago, former CJF president. Forty lay and professional community leaders worked with him, as did a CJF professional consultant/staff team headed by Henry L. Zucker, vice president emeritus of the Jewish Community Federation of Cleveland.

The CJF Personnel Study Task Force report was presented by Samuel J. Silberman of New York. He noted the three key Task Force recommendations: extension of the CJF Federation Executive Recruitment and Education Program (FEREP), which provides scholarship/loan assistance to outstanding young people to undertake careers in Federation fields; continuing professional education programs to advance the knowledge and skills of present Federation professionals; and an Alternate

Former A.D.L. Exec Joins N.Y. Law Firm

NEW YORK - Arnold Forster, who retired recently as associate director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, has joined the New York law firm of Shea, Gould, Climenko, and Casey.

"Although relinquishing the responsibilities of associate director with regret and sadness, it will enable me to concentrate on my first love, the law," Forster said, "and I will be associated with my long-time friends, Milton Gould, Bill Shea, and their other partners in the firm."

"I will continue to act as general counsel of the A.D.L., thus holding fast to a part of my life that has spanned four decades."

Mr. Forster and Mr. Gould have been friends since the late 1930s, when the latter joined the U.S. Justice Department to ferret out illegals in the United States. Their paths crossed naturally as Mr. Forster was deeply involved in the investigations of domestic Nazi activities at the time. More than once, Mr. Gould has represented Mr. Forster in the courtroom battles arising out of his work.

In his capacity as lawyer, Mr. Forster has written innumerable briefs for the appellate courts and for the U.S. Supreme Court, primarily in major litigations involving civil rights and liberties.

He has written nine books on prejudice, Anti-Semitism, and Middle East affairs. Three became best-sellers, and others have earned their place as standard textbooks in college political science courses.

Mr. Forster also created the largest radio program aired in America originating from Israel: twenty-six 15-minute programs broadcast over 500 American stations annually. Similarly, in television, Mr. Forster created a series of award-winning documentaries entitled "Dateline Israel" and released on a semi-annual schedule. He will continue with both programs.

Halpert, Arthur Poulten, David Sholes, and Ben Rabinowitz, board members, Judah Rosen, chaplain, and Irving Wolpert, board member. Gerald D. Hodosh, treasurer, is not shown.

Charge UNIFIL Aids Terrorists

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): Senior Israeli military officers charged that officers and soldiers of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) were cooperating fully with Palestinian terrorists in south Lebanon, allowing them, among other things, to retain bases in UNIFIL controlled territory.

Speaking to military correspondents, the officers, who were not identified, claimed that UNIFIL personnel are bribed to help the Palestinians in various ways and, in every instance, surrender to demands by the Palestine Liberation Organization. The officers said that this compliance was in addition to the smuggling of arms by UNIFIL officers to terrorist agents in Israel. Two weeks ago, Lt. Col. Alfred Gom of the Nigerian contingent was arrested after two valises crammed with weapons and explosives were found in the trunk of his car as he drove to Jerusalem. A Senegalese Captain was arrested under similar circumstances last February.

Aside from this, the Israeli officers said, UNIFIL officers have been caught filming military positions in the Christian enclaves in south Lebanon. The Christian militia, commanded by Maj. Saad Haddad is supplied and supported by Israel against the terrorists, they said.

But most serious, they contended, is the fact that the terrorists have established 15 bases in the UNIFIL zone in south Lebanon surrounded by 500-meter strips that are out of bounds to UNIFIL troops. According to the Israelis, these bases are occupied by some 500-600 terrorists well equipped with mortars, self-propelled rocket grenades and other weapons.

According to Israeli sources, the Tyre region controlled by terrorists, is a heavy arms base equipped with 130 mm. artillery with sufficient range to shell Acre on Haifa Bay.

Meanwhile, exchanges of fire between Israeli artillery and terrorists rockets continued across the border. The terrorists lobbed Katyusha rockets into Upper Galilee, causing some damage but no casualties among civilians who took to their bomb shelters. Israeli artillery shelled the terrorist bases.

Young Zionists Form New Group

A call to infuse new energy in the American Zionist movement was heard in San Francisco, resulting in the birth of a new, and different, Zionist organization.

Attending a convention with over 100 other delegates, Georgi Jacobs, director of the Colorado Zionist Federation, said that what happened at that convention may very well turn into something big.

Those attending were primarily representative of young Zionist leadership in America. After two intense days of workshops and discussions, Telem was born.

Telem stands for T'nua L'tziounut Magshima — Movement for Zionist Fulfillment. This young group wants Zionism to regain some of the original goals and ambitions they feel Theodor Herzl wanted it to have.

"A few people clicked their fingers, and we all knew," Georgi says. "It was there." Zionism, the new members of Telem seem to agree, is not meeting the challenges facing it.

As the organization's manifesto states: "The Zionist movement has lost sight of its original goals. Its original priorities of education, Jewish identification and aliyah have been pre-empted by partisan politics, fundraising and a lack of commitment to the fulfillment of Zionism."

Growing assimilation, declines in the Jewish birth rate, and an inability to effectively counter anti-Zionist efforts are among the many signs, Telem feels, that something must be done.

As if to underscore that point, Telem delegates in San Francisco were shocked to read a local article about a Berkeley-based group calling itself, "The Jewish Alliance Against Zionism."

"We're in a crisis," Georgi says. "Not only is the Zionist movement in great danger, but the survival of Jews as a people is in danger."

She acknowledges that Telem shares many of the same goals of existing Zionist organizations. "They share many of the same attitudes and priorities but there's one basic difference. For this group, the ultimate commitment is going to Israel."

That commitment is Telem's cornerstone. All members are required to sign a pledge to make aliyah within six years of their membership. If that promise is not kept, they will cease to be members.

Another difference will be Telem's activities in Israel. "When we go to Israel that will not be the end of it," Georgi points out. Members who have made aliyah will continue support and leadership activities in Israel.

The idea is to replenish the movement's ranks. "The Zionist movement is not replenishing itself," Georgi says. "The other day, locally, the Farband organization failed. The reasons given were classic symptoms of all Zionist federations that are folding — lack of support and lack of replenishment."

Telem will do its utmost to stress aliyah to the Jewish community, something that they feel has been sadly neglected for too long.

Georgi estimates that Telem will have as many as 50 chapters nationwide within six months.

Telem is recognized by the World Zionist Organization (which will soon determine how much funding to provide) and is encouraged by letters of support from Menachem Begin, Moshe Dayan, Leon Dulzin, Shimon Peres and the Israel Aliyah Center.

Although the group will not be formally associated with Jewish federations, they hope to use volunteers to work for federation-sponsored aliyah programs.

Telem would like to see federations form "aliyah centers" which would set up loans for students intending to make aliyah, publicize Israel-oriented programs in the media, sponsor professional internship programs and set up family support groups for families considering aliyah.

Jewish Community Centers and rabbinical organizations will also be asked to conduct such efforts within the areas of their respective responsibilities.

"We'll do the work," Georgi says. "It will mean more people for the federations."

Georgi calls Telem the product of "second generation Zionists." These young activists, she feels, are becoming increasingly polarized with Zionists who ignore aliyah. Most of those youths are planning aliyah themselves.

They aren't seeking a confrontation with other groups whose stands may differ. Telem, Georgi says, is interested only in recognition and cooperation.

"I don't think you'll find anybody as committed to Israel as some of the Zionist leadership. I can't negate their feeling of love for Israel — their love for Zionism."

But, she adds, "In order to define Zionism and to live by that definition, then Israel is the conclusion."

Neither does Telem negate UJA/federation efforts. "They're contributing hard work to earn that money to donate to Israel," Georgi says, "but these people are contributing their lives. They're equals."

The convention in San Francisco, Georgi says, was the most enthusiastic and encouraging thing she has experienced in her years of work with Zionism. "It felt like Abraham was in the room," she says.

"It's such a positive thing right now for the Zionist movement," Georgi continues. "You have people who really don't want to give up and who want to start something new."

"In the years I've been in the Zionist movement I saw despair. But what I saw in San Francisco was hope."

Weizman: To Resign?

By Gil Sedan

JERUSALEM (JTA): Defense Minister Ezer Weizman is reported to have threatened to resign from the government and Premier Menachem Begin is said to have told him he would accept his resignation but not at this time. The issue is the controversial Gush Emunim settlement of Alon Moreh near Nablus on the West Bank which the government claims is necessary for security purposes. Weizman was one of the Cabinet minority who opposed the settlement and questioned its security value. Nevertheless, he did nothing to alter a letter signed by Chief of Staff Gen. Raphael Eytan at Begin's request, claiming that Alon Moreh was vital for defense because it controlled communications in northern Samaria. The letter was submitted to the Supreme Court which ordered the temporary suspension of work on Alon Moreh pending the outcome of an appeal by local Arabs whose land was seized for the settlement.

According to unconfirmed reports, Weizman met with Begin recently to express his unhappiness with the present state of affairs and told him he was considering resignation. Begin reportedly said he had full confidence in Weizman as Defense Minister but told him "I would accept your resignation if it were handed to me a year from now."

STAY INFORMED. Read the Herald.

RE-ELECTED: Edward P. Aronson was re-elected to a second term as president of the Providence Hebrew Day School at the school's annual meeting. Also elected to serve were Ruth Berkowitz, Bart Schiavo, and Alan Zuckerman, vice presidents, Stanley Smith, secretary, Alan Brier, financial secretary, and Lewis Korn, treasurer. The honorary presidents are Archie Smith, esquire, (deceased), Max Brodsky, (deceased), Thomas W. Pearlman, esquire, Dr. Joseph J. Fishbein, and Sheldon S. Sollosy. The board of directors was also chosen.

Following the election, Aronson read a letter of resignation from Rabbi Nachman Cohen as Dean of the Providence Hebrew Day School and the New England Academy of Torah. Aronson also exercised the provision of the by-laws which permit the president to appoint six additional people to the board by naming David Korn as his first appointment. Annual committee reports were made, and the annual budget for the coming-school year was adopted.

Egyptians Find Remains Of 11 Israeli Soldiers

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): Egyptian officials attending a meeting of the joint Israeli-Egyptian military committee in Beersheba reported that the remains of 11 of the 23 Israeli soldiers listed as missing in action since the Yom Kippur War were found recently in the course of development work along the Suez Canal. Israel had requested permission to search for the MIAs.

As a result of the new information, the Israeli Army chaplaincy corps is expected to make arrangements immediately for the transfer of the remains for reburial in Israel.

ADL Urges United Effort To Aid Vietnam Refugees

NEW YORK: A national Jewish human rights organization today urged the United States to take the lead in "spearheading an international movement to open up the doors of nations for the homeless victims of Vietnamese cruelty."

Maxwell E. Greenberg, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said that in support of such an effort, the ADL plans to "convene a meeting of leaders of religious and other groups concerned with human rights to devise plans for mobilizing their constituencies and all Americans in behalf of the relief and rescue of these victims."

In a report to the 66th annual meeting of the League's national commission at the Plaza Hotel last weekend, the ADL leader commended the United States and other nations which have opened their doors to these refugees. He noted that the U.S. has "responded to this international tragedy" by taking in 210,000 refugees with 7,000 more being accepted every month.

"It is clear, nevertheless," he pointed out, "that continuing cruelties are producing more refugees in numbers that exceed the presently available places of asylum."

He went on to say that it is a tragedy that is assuming "world proportions" which requires the mobilization of world opinion against "the mounting inhumanity of the Hanoi regime."

He stressed that Jews, having been refugees throughout history, are particularly sensitive to the plight of the hundreds of thousands of men, women and children whom the Communist government of Vietnam have made homeless in a "racist onslaught against its entire ethnic Chinese minority."

Israel Supreme Court Issues Injunction Alon Moreh Construction Halted

By Gil Sedan and David Landau

JERUSALEM (JTA): The Supreme Court ordered a halt to the construction of Alon Moreh, the controversial Gush Emunim settlement near Nablus and gave the government 30 days to show cause why the settlement should not be removed and the Arab lands expropriated for it returned to the owners.

The temporary injunction was issued after a panel of three justices heard testimony in an appeal by 17 Arabs from the Nablus area against the seizure of their land. The court forbade any new settlers from taking up residence at the site while the injunction is in effect.

Although the court's ruling has doubtlessly embarrassed the government, legal experts here expressed the opinion that the government eventually will prevail over the appellants by correcting the defective legal procedures by which the land was confiscated.

The appeal was based on the contention that the government's claim that the settlement is necessary for security reasons was false and that the land-owners never received a legally valid notice of seizure.

The most dramatic highlight was the testimony by two reserve generals, Haim Barlev, a former Chief of Staff and Matityahu Peled, flatly contradicting a statement signed by the current Chief of Staff, Gen. Raphael Eytan, which claimed that Alon Moreh was of strategic importance to Israel's defense.

Eytan signed the statement yesterday and it was read to the court today. He claimed that the hill on which Alon Moreh is located controls communications in the Samaria region of the West Bank and therefore is vital to security.

But Barlev, who was Chief of Staff after the Six-Day War and is presently Secretary of the Labor Party, declared in a written statement that Alon Moreh does not contribute to the security of the State because it is located far from any major roads and is in the heart of a heavily Arab populated region.

He stated further that, in the event of war, the settlement will not be able to defend the road to Nablus and that in any case, there is a military base not far away that controls the network of roads around Nablus.

The same view was expressed by Peled who is a leader of the Sheli faction.

Chief Criticized

Their statements were presented under oath by Elias Khouri, an Israeli Arab attorney representing the appellants. Such was not the case with Eytan's testimony which was introduced only as a written statement. This aroused the ire of Justice Moshe Landau who expressed astonishment that the government did not find it necessary to bring the Chief of Staff to testify.

"With all due respect for the Chief of Staff, there is no special legal procedure for him," Landau said.

He noted that the appellants questioned the honesty of the security argument and "we have no denial to that under oath."

The land at the Alon Moreh site was seized last week "for security purposes." A group of Gush settlers rushed to the scene where, protected by the army and provided with earth-moving equipment, tents and prefabricated huts by the World Zionist Organization's settlement department, they proceeded to build an access road and lay the foundations for the settlement.

Apart from the controversy over the settlement's security value, the Supreme Court appeared to accept the appellants' complaint that they had not received legal notice of the expropriation of their land. "The proper way to seize land is to notify the landowners before the actual seizure," Justice Landau said.

Alon Moreh Settlers Counted

Meanwhile, the Military Governor of Nablus visited Alon Moreh to count the number of settlers. His intention was to ascertain that no more enter the settlement in violation of the Supreme Court's orders.

There are presently about 15 families and a number of single males at the site. The Military Governor acted as the Gush Emunim attempted to reinforce the settlement.

Several dozen Gush vehicles carrying would-be settlers were stopped by the army and turned back several miles from the site.

Likud hardliners were gravely distressed by the Supreme Court's ruling and a number of them are blaming Defense Minister Weizman. They allege that Weizman had prevailed upon the Chief of Staff not to submit a sworn statement on the alleged security value of Alon Moreh but only a signed letter.

That was one of the technicalities that resulted in the Supreme Court's injunction. One Likud MK, Yigael Hurwitz, demanded today that Weizman resign or that Premier Menachem Begin demand his resignation.

He charged that Weizman was willfully undermining the government's settlement policy and the Likud Party platform.

Lamm Attacks Fragmentization Among Orthodox Jews In U.S.

FALLSBURG, N.Y. (JTA): Dr. Norman Lamm, president of Yeshiva University, recently decried the "intolerant fragmentation which endangers the continued vitality and creativity of the Orthodox Jewish community in the United States."

Lamm made his comments in an address to 400 delegates at the annual convention of the Rabbinical Council of America here. He said "a monistic approach within Orthodoxy which imposes a homogenized sameness in thought and practice is both religiously inauthentic and socially destructive. It has the virtue of consistency but it lacks a communal conscience. Unity is confused with uniformity and a divisive intolerance is rampant within our ranks."

"Diversity within the discipline of Jewish law," Lamm explained, "is a reflection of the dynamics of our faith. The sages of the Talmud offered varying opinions but a harmonious unity emerged to guide Jewish practice. In philosophic thought a variety of systems coexisted, each reflecting one of the 70 faces of the Torah. A mutual respect of each other's singularity in interpretation and style generally prevailed."

Lamm also said "one can even respect the dissenting views of the Satmar Hasidim in their anti-Zionism but one must utterly reject their going public, thereby giving encouragement and strength to the enemies of our people. One can allow for the good intentions and integrity of the so-called 'doves' in Israel who argue for greater concessions to the Arabs but it is irresponsible and indefensible to express these views through the columns of the anti-Zionist press. Within Orthodoxy, pluralism is to be welcomed as a healthy phenomenon. A narrow authoritarianism which assigns perjorative labels to contrary views must be resisted as totally destructive."

At the same session, Julius Berman, president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, declared "there are urgent immediate problems facing the Orthodox Jewish world which require the cooperation of all groups, regardless of their differing ideologies and emphases, if we are to survive the dangers which threaten us all. The competitive intolerance and divisive parochialism within Orthodoxy drain our strength and dilute our effectiveness. The common enemy is secularism and religious ignorance, and it is imperative that we find a common ground on which to cooperate in the preservation of our Torah way of life."

'David' Loses To 'Goliath'

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): The Soviet Union defeated Israel by 98-76 last week to win the European basketball championship in Turin, Italy. But Israelis were still excited that their team was the runnerup, the highest finish ever achieved by an Israeli quintet.

The Israeli team's surprise showing in the finals came after it beat Czechoslovakia by one point last Sunday night. Israel then lost to the Soviets but when the Italian team was also beaten, Israel earned its chance to play in the championship game.

Paul Klein, the Israeli coach, said prior to the game that it was a battle of "David and Goliath," little Israel against the giant Soviet Union. All Israel came to a standstill as Israelis watched the game on television. Even the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra performed its concert two hours earlier than scheduled so that the audience could see the game. Many people went to the Western Wall to pray for victory.

UCal Not Dealing With Anti-Jewish Acts, Says ADL

LOS ANGELES (JTA): The Pacific Southwest Regional Board of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has filed a formal complaint charging the administration of the University of California, Riverside, with abdication of responsibility in failing to deal with anti-Jewish activities on its campus.

In a four-page letter to the Regents of the University of California, ADL regional board president Joshua Kheel cited numerous incidents of verbal and physical abuse of Jewish students at UCR and asked that they be investigated and appropriate action concerning the situation taken. The ADL said that: On Feb. 14, 1979 the head of the Iranian Student Association assaulted the coordinator of the Jewish Student Union for having photographed him distributing an inflammatory flyer charging that "Israeli (sic) food is made with the blood of Arab children." The Jewish student Union was prevented from participating in a "Rally Against Racism" (sic) by the Organization of Arab Students (OAS) and other student groups because, in the words of an OAS spokesman, "Jewish students are pro-Zionism, Zionism is racism." The OAS students distributed a flyer showing a swastika superimposed on the Jewish Star of David with the caption, "Zionism-Nazism." In addition, an OAS member invoked the Christ-killer libel by displaying a six-foot cross on which Palestine was crucified by a distorted Jewish Star of David to make it look like a dagger.

Despite repeated requests by ADL, the UCR administration has refused publicly to denounce the bigoted activities of the OAS on campus, the ADL charged. Kheel described the inaction as "negligence" and an "abdication of responsibility in failing to deal, in any way, with the several ugly and potentially dangerous incidents on the campus."

Israel Is Fast Becoming The Land Of Milk, Honey, — And Smoke

HAIFA: The American people, it can be stated emphatically, do set the trend for decadent practices in many areas. We overeat, overdrink, and oversleep as much or more than any other nation; we are greedy in our pursuit of capitalistic interests; and we bug out our eyes over x-rated films of sex and violence.

There is one unhealthy area, however, that we no longer lead the world in. That area is cigarette smoking.

And the country with the dubious honor of reporting a trend toward more increased smoking by every element in the population is Israel. Whereas 37 percent of American males are considered regular smokers the corresponding figure for Israelis is 45 percent. Further, while 30 percent of American women smoke, the Israeli figure is 34 percent. Some cigarette vendors, although the figures are not totally reliable, state that some 12 and 13-year-olds in Tel Aviv smoke up to a pack a day.

There has been some talk of an anti-smoking campaign, but it never really has gotten off the ground. The Israel Cancer Society campaigns against the tobacco habit every year, but their promotional material can barely be seen through the haze of smoke. As a matter of fact, the contrary is happening, with the mass media promoting the smoking habit. Billboard and large newspaper advertisements make it clear that strong men and beautiful women — the kind of people that many people wish they were — are the ones who smoke like chimneys.

Nothing is said about ill effects. Cigarettes sold here do not carry any warning on the packages that smoking may be harmful to the health, and even brands imported from the United States are in "special edition" packages without the usual warnings.

Israel's leading brands bear such non-Hebrew names as Time or Europa and the price is about 40 cents a pack of 20. The average smoker may spend about $20 or $30 a month. That may not sound like very much, until one realizes that salaries here may be from one-third to one-fifth what they are in the United States. Imported brands, of which Kent and Marlboro are the most popular, cost about a dollar a pack or more, and that can run up to $60 a month for those with expensive tastes.

Despite the extensive advertising of the many local brands, it appears that the purpose is not to promote competitive sales, but just to get people to smoke — any brand. You see, all the domestically produced cigarettes come from one big company which has a national monopoly. No matter what Israel brand you buy, the Dubek Company profits.

Cigars are still uncommon. They are regarded as emblems of the bloated capitalist, and outside of the upper financial circles the few who smoke cigars in public subject themselves to good-natured ribbing.

Pipes have been given much publicity of late, since Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Yadin is seldom seen without one. Sadat has now added to the popularity, and if these things go according to seasonal style, we may expect the fad to develop in the coming months. Besides, Israel is now beginning to produce its own pipes as well.

In her day, of course, Golda Meir was a walking, living ad for the tobacco interests. She was almost never seen without a cigarette.

Recent surveys have shown that about 50 percent of Israel's smokers would like to stop, but can't. Well, a labor dispute has helped them in recent weeks. The wholesale distributors claim that the three percent commission they get from the Dubek Company is not enough, and they have gone on strike.

Local cigarettes disappeared from the shelves. Chain smokers had their choice, either to stop smoking, or switch to the highly expensive imported brands. As this is being written it appears that the commission will be raised, and the smoke fiends will get their dried weeds back again, but at a price increase.

Nobody seems to care about the health factor. Indeed, why worry about the dangers of smoking when your chances of getting hurt in car accidents are far greater?

ZOA Raps Criticism By LZA

NEW YORK (JTA): The leader of the Zionist Organization of America has accused the leader of the Labor Zionist Alliance of acting contrary to the desired goal of a "united Jewish community" in support of Israel. Ivan J. Novick, president of the ZOA, took LZA president Prof. Allen Pollack sharply to task for a statement issued by Pollack a week ago criticizing Israeli Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon's recent call for intensive Jewish settlements on the West Bank and Gaza Strip over the next 20-30 years.

In a letter to Pollack, dated June 12, Novick wrote: "You state your concern for the need of a 'united Jewish community.'"

The very fact that you issued a public statement serves the opposite purpose. The Labor Zionist Alliance should carefully review the intent of your statement and its implications, especially for the non-Jewish world as well as to Israel's antagonists in Washington and elsewhere." Novick added, "I am deeply disturbed that you felt it necessary to take your action at a time, as you clearly stated, is a 'sensitive period.' I pray that your action will not be misread by Israel's detractors at a time when the unity you professed was so vital, must be preserved."

Imprisoned Journalist Awarded Freedom Prize

NEW YORK: The Hubert H. Humphrey Freedom Prize was presented in absentia today to Jacobo Timerman, the imprisoned Argentine journalist whose case has aroused international protest, at a luncheon of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

More than 300 Jewish community leaders from all parts of the country attending the luncheon at the Plaza Hotel also heard a memorial tribute to the late A. Philip Randolph by Bayard Rustin, president of the A. Philip Randolph Institute.

Principal speaker at the event — a highlight of the 66th annual national commission meeting of the League — was Senator Paul S. Sarbanes (D-Md.).

The Freedom Prize, which was made possible by a grant to ADL from the Dwayne Andreas Foundation, was presented by Benjamin R. Epstein, executive vice president of the ADL Foundation.

It was accepted by one of Timerman's three sons, Hector, who took his father's place as editor and publisher of the independent newspaper, La Opinion, until it was confiscated along with his father's other properties by Argentine authorities. The younger Timerman came from his home in Israel to stand in his father's place.

Additional Speakers

Others who addressed the luncheon were: Maxwell E. Greenberg, ADL national chairman, who presided, and Representative Benjamin A. Gilman (R-NY) of the 22nd Congressional District.

Senator Edward Kennedy, in a message to the luncheon, called upon the Argentine government to release Jacobo Timerman and "give a prompt accounting for the fate of thousands of people in Argentina currently held by the military government for political reasons or who have simply disappeared."

Congressman Gilman said that Timerman has become the symbol of oppression of the press and the oppression of freedom in Argentina.

He pointed out that President Carter, Vice President Mondale, Secretary of State Vance and many members of Congress have made direct appeals to the President of Argentina, the Foreign Minister, the ambassadors, with no success.

"Quiet diplomacy has fallen on deaf ears," he declared. "The time has come for overt action."

Senator Sarbanes said that "the Timerman case is our business."

"The rule of law has been cynically laid aside," he declared, by the Argentinian authorities in the imprisonment of Mr. Timerman.

He went on to say there is "no question of modifying the ban on aid to Argentina as long as basic human rights continue to be violated."

In making the Freedom Prize presentation, Mr. Epstein said that Jacobo Timerman, who is now under house arrest in Buenos Aires, "has come to personify the worldwide struggle for freedom of the press."

He noted that Timerman is "the most prominent of more than 600 journalists and writers who at this very moment are victims of repressive government action in some 55 countries."

"Best and Brightest"

Within Argentina, according to Mr. Epstein, Timerman "is one of 119 journalists — the best and brightest of the country's newspapermen — who have either been imprisoned, placed under house arrest, or forced into exile."

Declaring that history has no exact parallel to the persecution of Timerman, Mr. Epstein said that Peter Zenger "was permitted to plead his case and defend his right to press freedom" and even "Dreyfus was brought to trial, and though falsely convicted, was able to defend himself."

"Not so with Mr. Timerman," Mr. Epstein declared, "he has had no day in court. In fact, the Supreme Court of the Argentine has decreed that there is no basis in law, no charges have been presented, and there are no grounds for detaining him. The anti-Semitism has not come out into the open, but it lurks in the shadow behind the official silence."

Hector Timerman said that although Argentinian authorities "have been unable to explain the reasons" for his father's arrest and their refusal to obey the order for his release issued by the Supreme Court of Justice, there is "a conspicuous reason."

This reason emerged, according to Mr. Timerman, "during frightful questioning" when his father was asked "about his links with the Elders of Zion and his activity in behalf of projects for world dominance by Jews."

He went on to say that "only in a country wherein anti-Semitism is well rooted can official inquirers pose such unheard of questions."

He pointed out that Jacobo Timerman's activity was a representative of the Argentine Jewish community and as founder and editor was "open and well known" but that he could not go "unpunished" because at all times he "defended the interests of the Jewish community and waged war against manifestations of anti-Semitism."

"Such an attitude," Hector Timerman said, "requires unique daring in the climate of prejudice and anti-Jewish hostility endured in Argentina."

He went on to say that "Jacobo Timerman is paying the high, the painful, price for such an attitude, both as a man and as a Jew."

Canadian Cabinet Discusses Arab Financial Threats

By Michael Solomon

OTTAWA (JTA): The Inner Cabinet, after meeting last week to discuss Arab threats to suspend all financial transactions with Canada, refused to disclose what if any decisions were taken. While lower echelon officials indicated that any Arab actions would have minimal effects on the Canadian economy, Industry Minister Robert de Cotret said that "Arab and Canadian business reaction warrant continued attention."

He said any guess at the level of Arab investment in Canada "would be a real stab in the dark but I will be very surprised if it amounted to $1 billion." That was the figure contained in a report from Bahrain, Abu Dhabi announcing that the Arab Monetary Fund, an Arab League agency has halted all financial dealings with Canada and would withdraw Arab funds from Canadian banks because of the government's stated intention to transfer its embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

A Finance Department official said that little was known here about the Arab Monetary Fund but he thought any investments in Canada "would be relatively small." Dr. Michel Kelly, director of the Finance Department's international division, also thought that "the direct implication of the announcement by the AMF would appear to be minimal."

But Roland Frazee, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, the country's largest bank, said that he was "worried about what can happen to major contracts Canadian companies have in Arab countries for housing, building and communications projects. We cannot afford to jeopardize that business." Although Frazee told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency on Tuesday that "I have never heard of the Arab Monetary Fund," his bank apparently does a significant amount of business with Arab countries.

Before last night's Cabinet meeting, Immigration Minister Ron Atkey assured Canadians that "If the Arabs want Canadian products they will buy them. The Arabs' bark is worse than their bite," he said.

Orthodox Group Forms Unit To Combat Inter-marriage

FALLSBURG, N.Y. (JTA): The formation of a national commission on Jewish survival headed by prominent scholars, educators and rabbis to combat assimilation and intermarriage was announced by Rabbi Bernard Rosenzweig, president of the Rabbinical Council of America.

Rabbi Rosenzweig made this announcement in addressing the 43rd annual convention of the Orthodox group at the Pineview Hotel here.

"Inter-marriage has reached catastrophic levels," he said. "In many communities the rate exceeds 50 percent. If this trend is not reversed, the whole fabric of Jewish communal structure will suffer irreparable damage. The problem of intermarriage among our college youth is particularly severe and constitutes a serious threat to Jewish communities and to the survival of traditional Judaism."

The commission will be headed by Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman of Lawrence, N.Y. as chairman, and Rabbi Rafael Grossman of Memphis, Tennessee as co-chairman. "This commission," Rosenzweig indicated, "will be broad-based, and will welcome participation from other Jewish groups which are committed to Jewish survival as a primary goal."

The commission seeks to stimulate action within and outside the synagogue. The commission also plans a counselling service for college students and adults, and a seminar and lecture series.

Reform Rabbis Criticized

Rosenzweig also criticized those Reform rabbis who solemnize intermarriages. "We must not become tolerant of this cancerous growth which can only destroy Jewish ranks," he declared.

Rosenzweig also decried the recently announced campaign of Reform Judaism to actively seek converts from unaffiliated Christians. "This is an irresponsible and shocking endeavor which can only evoke the enmity of the Christian world toward Jews," he said.

Petition To Stop West Bank Settlements Causes Stir In Israel

JERUSALEM: Prime Minister Menachem Begin has recently received a message from 59 prominent Jewish figures in the United States, voicing criticism over the new outposts Israel has begun to establish in the densely populated Arab areas in the West Bank.

The Americans' message to Begin expressed "distress" over the proposed establishment of such Israeli outposts in the West Bank, and asked the Prime Minister to reconsider such strategies.

"A policy which requires the expropriation of Arab land unrelated to Israel's security needs," the petition reads, "and which presumes to occupy permanently a region populated by over 750,000 Palestinian Arabs, we find morally unacceptable, and perilous for the democratic character of the Jewish State."

The petition is one more reaction of American Jews to what is the hottest topic in Israel's press for the last week.

An initial series of statements from officials of American Jewish Organizations upheld the Israeli government's settlement policies, until the recent petition which stirred up much controversy.

The English-language Jerusalem Post said in an editorial last week: "Israel should, of course, not determine its policies at the behest of American Jewish leaders. As far as is known, the responsible American Jewish leadership has never asked for such power. But the considered opinions of American Jewry should be one of the elements in the formulation of policies that must take into account the possible reactions of American Government and public opinion."

The mass-circulation Yediot Aharonot, on the other hand, suggested that what it called a "war of declarations" by prominent American Jews for or against the settlement policy was being manipulated in the United States. The newspaper expressed the suspicion that American Jewish criticism was being "set up" by the State Department, which has condemned the creation of new Israeli outposts, as has President Carter.

It was signed by prominent figures including Saul Bellow, the author and Nobel laureate, and Leonard Bernstein, the conductor and composer.

The text was read at a rally of the Peace Now movement in Tel Aviv last Saturday night. Several thousand people attended the rally, which had been organized to protest the creation earlier this month of a new Israeli outpost near Nablus, the largest Arab city in the West Bank. Peace Now is supported chiefly by Israeli liberals and leftists.

Mr. Begin, in a reply to the signers, took exception to the fact that their message had been made public before he had received it. "This is a questionable procedure in communicating with anyone," he wrote, "be he a young student or an old Prime Minister."

The Israeli leader contended that Jews had the absolute right to live anywhere in "the land of our forefathers," including the West Bank. "This right of our people is inseparably bound with the needs and demands of our vital national security," he said.

Those signing the message to Mr. Begin were:

Robert B. Alter, professor of comparative literature, University of California at Berkeley.

Kenneth J. Arrow, Harvard University, Nobel Laureate.

Daniel Bell, Harvard University.

Pearl K. Bell, literary critic.

Saul Bellow, writer, Nobel laureate in literature.

Leonard Bernstein, composer and conductor.

Theodore Bikel, actor.

Rabbi Eugene B. Borowitz, Hebrew Union College, Jewish Institute of Religion.

Rabbi Balfour Brickner, Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Edgar M. Bronfman, chairman, North American division, World Jewish Congress.

Jacob Cohen, Brandeis University.

Mitchell Cohen, editor, Jewish Frontiers magazine.

Saul B. Cohen, president, Queens College in the City of New York.

Steven P. Cohen, Graduate Center, City University of New York.

Lucy Dawidowicz, historian.

Alan M. Dershowitz, Harvard University.

Amram Ducovny, vice president, Brandeis University.

Leonard Fein, editor, Moment magazine.

Franklin M. Fisher, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Paul A. Freund, Harvard University.

Erwin Glikles, vice president and publisher, Harper & Row.

Rabbi Ben Zion Gold, Hillel Foundation, Harvard University.

Marshall I. Goldman, Wellesley College.

Merle Goldman, Boston University.

Anna Maria Gorini, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Irving Howe, author and critic.

Hans Jonas, New School for Social Research.

Alfred Kazin, author and critic.

Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, New York.

Walter Laqueur, historian and political analyst.

Irving M. Levine, American Jewish Committee.

Morris L. Levinson, honorary national chairman, United Jewish Appeal and member of board of governors, Jewish Agency.

Rabbi Eugene Lipman, Washington.

Seymour Martin Lipset, Stanford University.

Jesse Lurie, executive editor, Hadassah magazine.

Sydney Morgenbesser, Columbia University.

Alfred H. Moses, vice president, American Jewish Committee.

Weizman Off Negotiating

JERUSALEM: The Israeli Cabinet today granted a request by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman that he be dropped from Israel's negotiating team in talks with Egypt and the United States about Arab self-rule on the West Bank and in Gaza.

Before the full Cabinet formally discharged the Defense Minister from the bargaining group, he met privately with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, and they ostensibly patched up a quarrel that had led to speculation that Mr. Weizman might also resign from the Government.

Political sources said that the basic disagreement between Mr. Weizman and the Prime Minister, who is backed by a hard-line majority in the Cabinet, was unresolved. Mr. Weizman, a former commander of Israel's Air Force, criticizes the establishment of Jewish settlements on the West Bank and advocates a flexible strategy in negotiating with Egypt.

The Defense Minister will be absent when the talks on Arab autonomy resume tomorrow in Herzliya, a seaside resort north of Tel Aviv. Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, recovering from minor abdominal surgery today, will also miss tomorrow's meeting.

Question About the Reasons

After today's Cabinet meeting, reporters asked Yosef Burg, the Interior Minister and chairman of the bargaining committee, why Mr. Weizman had wanted to be removed. "This goes into psychoanalysis and psychology," said Dr. Burg, denying that any disputes had come into the open.

Because Mr. Weizman was appointed to the committee by the full Cabinet, Israeli procedures required that the full Cabinet revoke his membership. Mr. Weizman was not replaced on the committee, which also includes Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, who is also in charge of settlement activity and is the Cabinet's foremost hard-liner, Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir and Minister Without Portfolio Moshe Nishim.

Aides to the Defense Minister said he had found the six-man committee "too cumbersome."

Actually, Mr. Weizman showed uneasiness about the autonomy negotiations even before they started. He and Mr. Dayan insisted on the withdrawal of a set of hard-line terms that the Prime Minister and other members of the Government wanted to present to the Egyptian side at the outset. The terms were then declared to be only "internal guidelines."

These terms put forward, among other things, Israel's right to establish new settlements anywhere on the West Bank or in Gaza, to control the water resources in the territories and to provide internal security, meaning the police, among the Arab population.

Loss on New Settlement Issue

Later, Mr. Weizman, Mr. Dayan and Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin joined in opposing establishment of an Israeli settlement near Nablus, the biggest Arab city in the West Bank. They were overruled, and militant settlers took over the hilltop site. However, Israel's high court last week froze the project with a temporary injunction on the ground that there had been procedural irregularities in the seizure of the Arab-owned land.

Little if any progress has been made in the autonomy talks that started in Beersheba in southern Israel on May 25 and were continued in Alexandria, Egypt, and Herzliya earlier this month. Only procedural questions have been discussed, and Israel and Egypt are far apart even on these.

It is widely thought here that substantive issues will be broached only when President Carter's new envoy for the Middle East, Robert S. Strauss, participates. Mr. Strauss is scheduled to tour the countries in the region beginning July 1 and to attend the next negotiating round of talks July 5 and 6 in Alexandria.

According to a timetable of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, the negotiations on self-government for the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs living in the Israeli-occupied territories are to be completed within a year.

The Egyptian delegation at the Herzliya talks tomorrow and Tuesday is expected to be led by Prime Minister Mustafa Kahlil, who is to arrive at Ben-Gurion Airport near Tel Aviv tomorrow morning.

From Paraguay To West Germany

Helms Asks Senate To Urge Extradition Of Mengele

By Joseph Polakoff

WASHINGTON (JTA): Sen. Jesse Helms (R.N.C.), acting on requests from Jewish leaders associated with tracing Nazi war criminals, has asked the Senate to help bring about the extradition of Josef Mengele, the "Angel of Death," from Paraguay to West Germany to stand trial for the killing of more than 200,000 children.

Helms introduced a sense-of-the-Senate resolution asking the government of Paraguay to apprehend and extradite Mengele. The resolution was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which Helms is a member. It says that Mengele, while resident doctor at the Auschwitz concentration camp "was responsible for the torture and death of more than 200,000 children" and "conducted cruel and inhuman surgery and experiments upon children to develop ways to manipulate the genetic structure of human beings." In addition, the Helms resolution said, Mengele "worked to develop new methods of sterilization to promote acts of genocide against Jews, Slavs and other European peoples."

The fact that Josef Mengele should remain today in freedom, never having been brought to trial, "makes him a living symbol of the Holocaust we cannot continue to tolerate," Helms said.

Paraguay Denies Mengele There

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency asked the Paraguayan Embassy about Mengele and Minister Gilberto Caniza responded that Mengele "is not in Paraguay." Caniza said that "We hear from time to time that he is in Paraguay" but he insisted he is not in that country.

"It would be very difficult for a person to hide in Paraguay," he said, noting its small population. "If Mengele were in Paraguay," he added, "his presence would be denounced not only by the Paraguayan people as a whole but by the Jewish community there." He acknowledged that Mengele received Paraguayan citizenship along with other Germans who arrived there after 1945.

As Well as Spiritual

Need For 'Physical Jerusalem' Stressed

By Judith Rosen

NEW YORK (JTA): Dr. Emil Fackenheim, a noted Jewish philosopher, said recently that while the "spiritual Jerusalem" is important to all Jews, the need for a physical Jerusalem is necessary as a safe harbor for all Jews in times of oppression. Fackenheim addressed a "Convocation on Jerusalem" sponsored by the New York Board of Rabbis at the National Conference of Christians and Jews headquarters in New York. The Catholic and Protestant perspectives on Jerusalem were also presented.

Fackenheim, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Toronto, spoke of the "relationship between the Jerusalem above and below" — the physical and spiritual aspects of the city. Fackenheim emphasized the political explosiveness of the Jerusalem issue in noting Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark's campaign promise to move the Canadian Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, as a formal recognition of that city's rightful claim as Israel's capital. He said this has sparked unprecedented hostile attacks on the Clark government.

Rev. William Harter, chairman of the National Council of Churches Committee on the Status of Jerusalem and Human Rights in the Middle East, said Jerusalem was a "symbol of survival" with an "infinite capacity to astonish." Harter cited the rise of Jerusalem after 1948 as ruining the theory of the destruction of Jerusalem as told in the New Testament. "Jerusalem is being freed by God to be renewed to bear God's revelation, today," Harter said. He stressed that we mustn't "reduce the present and immediate future to allegory and symbol. The Jerusalem to come must not cancel out the Jerusalem that is."

Dr. Eugene Fisher, executive secretary of the Secretariat for Catholic-Jewish Relations of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, presented a Catholic perspective on Jerusalem. Fisher outlined the traditional outlook on Jerusalem and the "Holy Land," and emphasized that the church "was deeply committed to Eretz Yisrael."

He noted that as a result of the Second Vatican Council, there is "no fundamental core interest conflicts in our views" with the Jewish faith. Fisher did note that the official church position on Jerusalem still favors some sort of internationalization to guarantee the preservation of the holy sites and to protect Christians living in the city and in Israel. But he personally hopes that Jerusalem will be "one city and a city of peace."

May Lead PLO To Recognize Israel

Prince Fahd Wants U.S. To Begin "Dialogue" With PLO

Saudis End Aid to Egypt

Then, at the Baghdad conference in the spring, Saudi Arabia joined in a pledge to boycott Egypt. Since then, it has cut off substantial aid, including $527 million promised to Egypt to pay for 50 F-5E jet fighters from the United States.

Prince Fahd was on a six-week holiday in Europe during the Baghdad meeting and this led to speculation that he disagreed with the policy.

In the interview, he dismissed the speculation but did not offer any explanation for the toughening of the Saudi attitude, saying merely:

"Even after Camp David we were hoping that the U.S. Government would push in the direction of getting Israel to withdraw to its 1967 boundaries and recognize the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. But the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli treaty shattered all hopes."

He was asked whether Sadat had not in fact achieved Israeli withdrawal from Egyptian territory by his approach.

Comprehensive Settlement

"Any Arab leader could have achieved what Sadat has achieved," he answered, "if the question were withdrawal from one territory. At earlier stages there were withdrawals from both Sinai and the Golan Heights without the concessions Sadat has made. But what we are after is a comprehensive withdrawal and settlement."

The Prince went into some history, evidently to indicate that he had been misled by Mr. Sadat, and spoke of the Egyptian leader's trip to Israel in November 1967.

"Five days before his trip to Jerusalem, Sadat was here," Prince Fahd said. "We spoke with him, and he never mentioned anything about his projected trip."

"The discussion centered on the reconvening of the Geneva conference. Sadat said he was 'ready to go to Geneva myself to speak for Arab rights.'"

For that reason, Prince Fahd said, the Saudis were "shocked" when Mr. Sadat went to Israel. The Prince also mentioned a more recent occasion when he felt Mr. Sadat misled him.

'He Said It Was Not True'

"I spoke to Sadat personally more than a year ago," he said. "I told him there were rumors that he might sign a bilateral treaty with Israel. I told him my fears. He said it was not true, because the problem was an Arab one, not Egyptian — and the problem of the Palestinian people. Unfortunately, shortly afterward we were faced with the peace treaty."

"We have no personal grudge against Sadat," Prince Fahd went on. "But the way he has handled the matter has not brought us nearer to peace. I am afraid it may have brought us nearer to war. I still sincerely hope that he will succeed in getting Israel to withdraw from all occupied Arab territories and to recognize the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. But all indications are that he will not."

The Prince was asked whether the Saudi Government was worried about a possibility that the Arab boycott might lead to Mr. Sadat's fall and replacement by a radical regime. He answered:

"We don't know who may succeed Sadat, but a more radical government would not be worse in terms of the situation his policy has placed us in."

He declined to be drawn into a discussion of reports that the Saudis were uneasy about United States inaction when the Shah was forced from Iran and deposed by Islamic revolutionaries. Asked whether he was disappointed by United States policy, the Prince replied: "No. We believe the U.S. Government does not interfere in the affairs of other peoples."

He spoke favorably about emergency American shipments of military supplies to Yemen recently to help the country resist an invasion by Southern Yemen.

Referring to reports that the Saudi Government was thinking of establishing diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, Prince Fahd said: "There has been no talk about the idea, but it is not far-fetched. It remains a probability."

After the interview, the Prince and members of his family drove off in an American-built station wagon. He said they were going to spend the night at the farm of a friend who is married to a member of the royal family.

Protest Settlement Policy

By Yitzhak Shargil

TEL AVIV (JTA): Some 30,000 persons, responding to a call by the Peace Now Movement, massed in Tel Aviv to protest the government's settlement policy and specifically the controversial Gush Emunim settlement of Alon Moreh near Nablus. A cable was read, signed by 62 prominent American Jews, warning that the new settlement undermined Israel's credibility in the eyes of the world. Among the signatories were Saul Bellow, winner of the Nobel Prize for literature, conductor and composer Leonard Bernstein and the actor, Theodore Bikel.

The Prime Minister's Office claimed that no such cable had been received. An American academician, Prof. Leonard Fein of Harvard, and editor of the Jewish magazine, Moment, who addressed the rally, questioned a statement made in Jerusalem recently by Theodore Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, that the consensus among American Jews was that the West Bank settlements were "legal" and "necessary" for Israel's security. Mann did not specifically mention Alon Moreh in that connection. Fein declared that there is no consensus of American Jewry in support of the settlements. He said there are many American Jews who feel that Israel's settlement policy, as it is being carried out, can create serious divisions.

The cable from the U.S. expressed anxiety over the decision to set up yet another settlement on the West Bank on the eve of negotiations with Egypt and the U.S. on the future of that territory.

PLEA TO FREE

VIENNA (JTA): The United States has asked the Soviet Union to free Raul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat missing since 1945 who is credited with saving 25,000 Hungarian Jews from deportation to the Auschwitz death camp. According to Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Nazi War Crimes Documentation Center here, Wallenberg's name was on a list of Soviet dissidents which U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance handed to the Soviet delegation at the Salt II summit talks in Vienna last week.

Canada Asked To Cancel Biased Plane Repair Contract With Saudi Arabia

NEW YORK (JTA): The Canadian government was requested to abrogate an Air Canada aircraft maintenance contract with Saudi Arabia which bans firms in Israel or owned by Israeli nationals from participating in sub-contract repair work on a Saudian Lockheed 1011 aircraft at Montreal's Dorval Airport. The request came from the Workmen's Circle, the Jewish labor fraternal order.

"We have asked Don Mazankowski, the Canadian Minister of Transport, to investigate who is responsible at Air Canada for entering into such a discriminatory and inflammatory agreement," Bernard Backer, president of the Workmen's Circle said. Air

Canada is a state-owned airline.

"For one nation's ethnic discrimination to be hung as an albatross on another nation is, we feel, invading Canada's long-time effort to end discrimination among people and to promote human rights for all," Backer said.

Knesset Urges Germany To Continue Prosecuting Nazis

By Gil Sedan

JERUSALEM (JTA): The Knesset called on the West German government and the Bundestag to abolish the statute of limitations on prosecuting Nazi criminals and see that all are brought to trial.

The Knesset unanimously demanded the government continue its efforts to convince West Germany to do so. The Bundestag is expected to vote on the issue within the next few days. Likud MK Moshe Meiron left for Germany in order to exert his influence there among Bundestag members.

The Knesset discussed the issue at the request of Meiron and Independent Liberal Knesseter Gideon Hausner. Hausner, head of Yad Vashem, said that the Bundestag members would have to decide on an issue which had a unique moral and historical dimension. NRP MK Pinhas Schoenmann warned that if the statute of limitations remains in force, thousands of Nazi criminals will serve as the spearhead for the revival of the Nazi movement whose buds can already be seen.

Democratic Movement Knesseter Akiva Noff said that whoever would vote for the statute would vote for abetting murder. If the Bundestag votes to release itself of the responsibility, Israel should reconsider the relations between the state of the victims and the state of the murderers, he said.

In 1976 Entebbe Affair

Air France Cleared Of Blame In Hijacking

PARIS (JTA): A French Court of Appeals cleared Air France of any direct or indirect responsibility for the Entebbe hijacking of June - July 1976 and decided that the French air carrier is not liable to pay damages to the passenger victims. The court's ruling came in reply to a request by an Israeli couple, Joseph and Lisette Hadad, for compensation. The two Israelis were on the plane when it was hijacked to Uganda by terrorists.

The three-man court said "Air France has no police responsibility and no right to check passengers at a foreign airport. The company cannot exclude passengers from boarding the plane on the basis of their physical appearance. It is thus unable to take all necessary measures to prevent such an incident from occurring."

Legal experts noted that, had the court found in favor of the plaintiffs, it would have created a serious precedent which might have influenced the interpretation of the "Warsaw Convention," which prescribes the responsibilities of air carriers.

associate national director of the ADL, who is attending the ADL's National Commission meeting in Jerusalem, said at a press conference that he did not want to compare the situation in Argentina with that in the Soviet Union.

However, he said, experience has shown that "countries do care about their image."

Logical Deduction.

Are bills turning your life story into "The Case of the Disappearing Paycheck"? Does all your hard-earned money seem to vanish without a trace left to save?

Then perhaps you should investigate United States Savings Bonds.

Because saving with Bonds is so simple, it's elementary. Especially if you join the Payroll Savings Plan.

Once you sign up, you see, a small part of each paycheck is automatically set aside to buy Bonds.

Which means as soon as you're paid, you save. Before you're left trying to deduce where it all went.

Buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. And take the mystery out of saving.

LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN

JERUSALEM (JTA): The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has embarked on a campaign to arouse world opinion to the lack of human rights in Argentina which increasingly affects the Jewish population of that country, an ADL official said here today. Abraham Foxman,

Minister Urges Israel To Halt Push In Disputed Land

Following a month-long fact-finding tour of the Middle East, the Rev. Paul G. Gillespie, executive minister of the Rhode Island Council of Churches urges Israel to halt its push into occupied territories.

Speaking before 150 people attending a dinner held by the American Friends Service Committee of Providence, Rev. Gillespie said that the United States, in order to retain its credibility in the Middle East, must take strong action to curb Israeli settlements in disputed lands.

He commended the courage and patriotism of the Israeli people for their determination to forge ahead and carve out more of a homeland, however, he expressed doubt that settling into occupied territory is the proper course of action.

"The security of Israel must be protected at all costs," said Dr. Gillespie. "And perhaps something can be worked out by allowing Israel to maintain bases in a possible new Palestinian homeland, in the same way that we maintain a base at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba."

He called President Carter "weak" in exercising influence in the Middle East.

"We may have to wait until the next election before anything can be done, and that may be too late," predicted Dr. Gillespie.

The minister toured the Middle East for 28 days along with a contingent of about 20 journalists, writers, peace negotiators and religious leaders.

Countries visited were Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, and Israel. They met with Abba Eban of Israel and PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Author Of "Holocaust" Receives Gold Medal

NEW YORK - Gerald Green, (right), author of the teleplay and book "Holocaust: The Story of the Family Weiss," received the National Mass Media Gold Medal from Dr. David Hyatt, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Green was cited by the NCCJ for his "outstanding contributions to human relations and the cause of brotherhood."

Dr. Hyatt also presented him with a special framed citation for his "brilliant authorship in bringing before a television audience of millions the real life drama of the Holocaust," and for his "tremendous understanding of the necessity to awaken the conscience of humanity to the dangers of anti-Semitism and indeed all forms of religious and racial prejudice."

Green received the honors at the recent international colloquium on "Religious Responsibility and Human Rights" attended by 200 people from 19 countries.

Wagner's Only Regret: Germany Lost The War

By Maurice Samuelson

LONDON (JTA): Gustav Wagner, a former commandant at Sobibor concentration camp where 250,000 Jews were exterminated including several of them at his own hands, made it clear here last week that his major regret was that Germany had lost the war.

Wagner was speaking in a BBC television interview filmed in Brazil. The program included four of the handful of Sobibor survivors who said Wagner would never enjoy his lunch until he had first personally murdered two or three of the inmates.

The 68-year-old gray-haired Nazi insisted, in subdued tones, that he had personally never murdered anybody. The extermination program was top secret work for the German Reich which he was sworn by oath to carry out, he said. He and his colleagues were merely carrying out orders: "We were small fry. I am an ordinary man, like others. I feel no different," he said.

He said that he had seen people exterminated "who were really innocent," but he would have been shot if he had not done his duty. Germany had called him to make war and given him a job to do, Wagner said.

"But now they punish me for it. Everything went wrong once Germany lost the war," he concluded.
