Andrew Young Resigns

President Carter accepted the resignation of U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young yesterday. The move came a full day after the facts regarding an unauthorized meeting between Young and the P.L.O. became fully known by the State Department.

During a press conference at the State Department, Andrew Young said that the resignation was his own idea, and that he regretted nothing he has done. Young stated, "I don't feel I'm a victim," and that "I've enjoyed my work in this administration." He went on to say that in order to keep working with the Carter administration, he would have had to apologize for his recent conduct, and give assurances that such incidents would not occur in the future. He did not feel he could do that, because he was not sorry, and if he had to do all over again, would do it all in the same way.

Young stated that he thought it was bad policy for the United States not to recognize the P.L.O. He had also become frustrated by the slow pace of the current Middle East peace negotiations, and felt that his initiative had been made in the best interest of the nation.

His decision to submit his resignation to Carter came in the aftermath of the full disclosure of his talk last month with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the P.L.O. observer to the United Nations.

Account of the Meeting

Late in July, when the Security Council was considering a change in the wording of Resolution 242 which would make mention of rights of the Palestinians to practice self-determination, the State Department asked Young if he would try to bring about a postponement of the debate. A U.S. veto of the resolution at that time would have been particularly embarrassing to the Administration, both because the proposed changes in wording paralleled similar language used previously by Carter, and because of the delicate state of the ongoing

Javits Calls For Senate Hearings

Senator Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) has called for a Senate hearing to investigate Andrew Young's meeting with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the P.L.O. observer to the U.N. During the course of a news conference at the Suffolk County Airport, Javits voiced the opinion that it would be a diversion from the implications of the meetings to call for Young's resignation.

Javits, who is the ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said: "I prefer to hold his boss responsible — to wit, the President." He also said that on a personal level, he hopes that Young will find "an appropriate place for his undoubtedly high talents."

The Senator made his comments while vacationing at his summer home in the Hamptons. Senator Frank Church of Idaho, who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had not yet been in communication with him regarding this issue.

Soviet Immigrants To Give Concert

Ludmilla sat down on the piano bench, carefully trying different positions until she was totally comfortable. Her twin sister, Sophia, plucked a few strings on her violin until she was thoroughly satisfied that it was in proper tune. The two women were ready to play.

The first few notes of a melancholy sonata by Grieg travel through the air and find their way through the window to the street below. Outside of their Medway Street apartment on the East Side of Providence, the sisters have again attracted an appreciative crowd.

The women finish their piece, and the people who have stopped to listen extend a few claps of the hand. They like what they have heard.

The sisters hope that the applause they receive for their practice sessions is greatly augmented when they perform at Brown University's Grant Recital Hall on August 23 at 8:00 p.m. Ludmilla Lifschitz and Sophia German, 34, recently arrived Soviet immigrants live with their husbands and children on the East Side. Accomplished classical musicians, they are hoping to find work in their chosen field. Ludmilla is after a music teaching position on a university level, while Sophia seeks to join an orchestra. They will also continue to perform together everywhere that they can.

If musicians were hired on the basis of their musical education alone, Ludmilla and Sophia would be performing with the Boston Symphony tomorrow. Ludmilla, in a thick but pleasant sounding Russian accent, elaborated on their musical instruction.

"Here in the United States, you have all private schools for music. In Russia, we have the public schools for those children who are gifted musically."

"Sophia and I entered a special school when we were five years old. Our mother played the piano and very much wanted that we should become musicians. When we were tested and found to be musically gifted, it made her very happy."

The next step was high school, followed by studies at the Leningrad State Conservatory of Music. In 1967, the twins graduated with master's degrees in music.

After winning first prize in a national chamber music festival in Moscow, their professional lives began. Ludmilla worked as an accompanist and also was a teacher of piano in the chamber music department of the Conservatory. Sophia, at 21, joined the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra while also maintaining a position at the Conservatory.

All of this was fine for the sisters from a professional point of view. However, there was one problem that had to be reckoned with; Ludmilla, Sophia, and their families are Jewish, and, in the Soviet Union, being a Jew can turn one's life into an unpleasant collection of difficulties, fears, and antisemitic abuses.

Since moving to the United States in November 1978 (they went to Detroit for 3½ months before moving to Providence this past March), Sophia, Ludmilla, and their families have experienced new found freedoms that they missed in their homeland.

"We moved to the United States because (Continued on page 8)

Israeli Dances Performed at JCC

The Jerusalem Scouts Folk Dance Ensemble presented a program of dance, song and music at the Jewish Community Center on Tuesday evening. The event was part of the Camp program, and followed a "talent show" put on by the youngsters attending the JCC Summer Camp.

The Folk Dance Ensemble has been in existence for two years, and is one of dozens of folk dance troupes in Israel. Most of the eleven girls and eight boys who comprise the group are from Jerusalem. Ranging in age from sixteen to eighteen, they were selected from hundreds of Israeli Scout counselors who auditioned for the privilege of participating in this ensemble.

The program opened with the hora, a word from Rumanian which means "a mixed dance." The girls wore bright yellow and red dresses, while the boys were clad in black and red. It was followed by a dance that has Arabic roots, a dance in which only men participate. The choreography of this all-male dance evoked strong primitive feelings, as the boys slapped their bare feet on the stage rhythmically, keeping time with the beat.

The musical accompaniment for the numbers consisted of an accordian, a flute, a clarinet and a guitar. Ronit Sessler, the guitarist, also sang several particularly moving Israeli folk songs.

Dany Bazel, who is the group's choreographer, trained the youth, and during the course of hours of weekly rehearsals has brought them to a high professional level. The Jerusalem Scouts Folk Dance Ensemble won the 1st prize in the 1979 Jerusalem competition among folk dance groups in Jerusalem.

The dancers will be spending two more weeks in the U.S. and Canada, with stops planned in Washington, D.C. and New York. While they have toured extensively in Israel, this is their first trip abroad. This trip to the United States has meant a great deal to the scouts. They practised nearly every day for 3 or 4 hours at a stretch in preparation.

When asked about his impressions of the U.S., Roni Yanny, one of the dancers, noted that it is very interesting for him to see how Jews in this country form organizations, plan activities together and have structures like the JCC in which to gather. In Israel, of course, where nearly the entire culture is Jewish, one doesn't find groups whose focus is their mutual Jewish heritage.

The scouts also remarked that scouting is a much less popular phenomenon here than it is in Israel. There are over 40,000 Israeli scouts, which includes both girls and boys in the same organization.

Their performance in Rhode Island was made possible by the sponsorship of Noah Tempkin, president of the JCC. At the end of the program, following the singing of the Israeli National Anthem, Mr. Tempkin was presented with the Jerusalem Scouts' flag.

Leningrad Refusnik Dies

Leningrad refusnik Tamara Ioffe died recently, apparently the result of kidney failure, according to information received by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Ioffe, her husband Yakov, and their child first applied for an exit visa in May, 1976, and were refused the following January. Tamara had suffered from kidney failure and the most recent reports from Leningrad indicated she was about to start dialysis.

Western doctors, notably those at the Cleveland (Ohio) Clinic, felt she would have been a good candidate for a kidney transplant.

Israeli Economist Given State Funeral

JERUSALEM — A state funeral was conducted for David Horowitz, one of the early economic leaders of Israel and founder of the nation's central bank. The Russian-born economist died last Friday at age 80.

Horowitz founded the Bank of Israel in 1954 and fashioned it into a powerful and independent watchdog over the government's fiscal policies.

Before Israel won statehood, he was director of the economic department of the Jewish Agency, which controlled the Jewish community under the British mandate.

It was his department that financed the 1948 war of independence and prepared a smooth-running treasury ready to function when statehood came.

GOURMET'S GALLERY

An extra touch just before serving can give any beverage a festive look . . . To serve lemonade, fruit punch, or tropical drinks with all the flair of the islands, try this: choose a sturdy blossom and remove the stamen and pistil; then spear a pretty straw through the center of the flower . . . Sprinkle freshly grated nutmeg atop milk punches and eggnogs for flavor and aroma . . . Pick fresh mint to garnish juleps or collins drinks . . . Use fresh pineapple spears in lime and lemon flavored drinks . . .

RECENT BRIDES

WINOKER-RESNIK
Temple Emanuel was the setting for the wedding of Susan Lee Winoker to David Alan Resnik on August 12. Rabbi Joel Zaiman and Cantor Ivan Perlman officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the same location.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Winoker of 15 Morrison Street, Providence. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Sol Leon Resnik, of 41 Westford Road, Providence.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of alencon lace over English net, with a satin underskirt. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, and greens.

A friend, Debra Morgan, served as matron of honor.

Paul Marks, a friend of the bridegroom, was the best man; David M. Winoker and Steven E. Winoker, brothers of the bridegroom, served as ushers.

After a trip to Hawaii, the couple will make their home in Norwood, Massachusetts.

KREIGER-JACOBER
Beth Amy Kreiger became the bride of Steven Lee Jacober on August 12 in a ceremony at the Congregation Beth Jacob in Woodbridge, Connecticut. Rabbi Wayne Franklin and Cantor Sobel officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception there.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Kreiger of 16 Beechwood Road, Woodbridge. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Jacober of 785 Boston Neck Road, Narragansett.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory rosepoint lace and point d'esprit over a taffeta portrait neckline, a cape top and sleeves, empire waistline, and an A-line skirt extending to a chapel train. She wore her maternal grandparent's Brussels lace veil.

She carried a bouquet of creme colored cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. James Dobish, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor, while Mrs. Kevin Beasley, Mimi Lines, Elizabeth Giovine, and Susan Madwed were bridesmaids.

Peter Thomson was best man. He is a friend of the bridegroom.

Robert Perry, David Sondler, Scott Jacober, James Jacober, Steven Kreiger, Kenneth Kreiger, and Howard Kreiger all served as ushers.

The couple will reside in New York City after a wedding trip to Mexico.

The Outlook For Heating
Fuel this Winter

"Drive Now, Freeze Later," was one grim bumper sticker I saw when the gas station lines were at their longest recently.

To translate, if you want your supply of crude to go to gasoline, you can have it now. But don't also expect the crude to be available in the quantities you want for your furnace this winter.

Today, the gas lines have just about vanished in most regions and you can indeed "drive now," if you wish.

Q. Are you, then really going to "freeze later?"

A. Yes. No. Maybe.

On the "yes" side is Ms. Pat Domm, manager of Burnex Oil Co., a Chicago fuel distributor. "We have been advised there will be shortages," she says.

"Right now we are allocated to 60-65 percent, that is, instead of getting 100 percent of our needs, we're getting only a portion of it. When the time comes, we don't know how much we'll get."

On the "no" side is Robert Olson, vice president of Olson Fuel Co., Seattle. "I do not anticipate a heating oil shortage this winter," he replies.

"Even in the last crisis, not one of our customers ever ran out of oil. Presently we are on an allocation of 70 percent. When the time comes, we don't know how rationing much of the oil until the fall."

On the "maybe" side is John H. Robson, president of the Oil Heat Marketers Association and co-owner of Marquette Oil Co., Chicago. "I wouldn't say flatly that there won't be shortages of heating oil this winter, but the odds are getting better each day that we won't have such shortage."

"As for prices, I've had figures as high as $1 a gallon, but I personally don't think it will rise that far."

The forecasts of other authorities in the field also go yes-no-maybe on supplies — but no matter what the views on this point, all agree prices this winter will be much above last winter's.

Even back in May, fuel oil was reported on the Consumer Price Index at 65.6 cents, up from 54.5 cents in December 1978, an annual rise of 48 percent. "The price used to go up a quarter-cent or so," says Ms. Domm. "Now every time you get an increase, it's three cents, four cents, five cents, much higher than we used to get."

"Prices for home heating oil rise weekly," Olson concurs. "In the past four months alone, the price of oil here has risen 30 cents a gallon. Prices will more than likely jump another 20 to 30 cents by the end of 1979."

"Virtually all petroleum prices will rise — some spectacularly — due to the large increase in the price of crude mandated by OPEC," says a spokesman for Continental Oil Co. (Conoco), Stamford, Conn. "Since last December, that price has soared 60 percent."

"The price of fuel oil this winter depends on the price of gasoline this summer," declares Robert D. Lynch, of the Empire State Petroleum Association in New York. "If the price of gasoline settles down, there will be less tendency to panic. But if gasoline prices go through the roof, that means that the price of all petroleum products will jump — diesel oil, heating oil, etc."

What can you, the consumer, do to cope with possible shortages of energy and escalating prices of fuel? Plenty!

* Conserve intelligently. Drive less. Insulate your homes. Keep your thermostats lower in winter and higher in summer.

* But you are NOT insulating as you should be! "Only one in eight homeowners has insulated his house since the energy crisis began," reports Sheldon H. Cady, executive vice president of the Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association, a group of makers of mineral fiber insulation which includes rock wool and fiber glass.

* Insulate now, when material and contractors are both available. "You'll cut down on air conditioning costs too," Cady adds.

In a temperate Long Island, N.Y. climate, for instance, you can add six inches of mineral fiber insulation to your unfinished attic at a cost of about $250 if you do it yourself for an annual saving of $207 if you use heating oil and $130 if you use gas, according to the data from Long Island Lighting Co.

If all the attics in the 73-million houses in the U.S. were properly insulated, we'd save 350,000 barrels of oil. If the 32 million homes which fail to meet minimum federal property standards of insulation were given complete thermal treatment — wall and floor insulation, storm windows and doors, weatherstripping, caulking — we would save a million barrels of oil today.

Surely you have caught the message that the era of cheap energy is over; now we'll be paying dearly for power, heat and comfort.

Instead of a smart-alecky "Drive Now, Freeze Later," how about an old-fashioned "Waste not, want not?" And how about it NOW?

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

IGNORING INFLATION A MISTAKE

Q: We are retiring and selling our business of 25 years. Our Social Security will be very modest when we are eligible, both now 59. The $120,000 we clear on the sale will have to do us for the rest of our lives. We are considering placing $50,000 in an eight-year term account, $20,000 in checking and $10,000 each in one-to-five-year certificates. By being careful, we think we will be able to live on the interest and principal. We hate to gamble on stocks and bonds. R.H. Nebraska

A: You may be taking a bigger risk by doing as you propose. Your idea, which entails exhausting your capital at a fairly rapid pace, could leave you in a precarious position later on. At 59, you have an 18-year and your wife a 21-year life expectancy. In twenty years, given an 8% rate of inflation, you will need $46,600 to buy what $10,000 will buy today — a pretty scary picture. The interest on these various certificates will not be sufficient to keep you even with inflation. Each passing year you will fall further behind, a problem which will be compounded as your capital is reduced.

I would far prefer to see you invest $40,000, one-third of your capital, in stocks with a history of rising dividend payments. At least this segment of your principal will be generating more income each year. Furthermore, placing $20,000 in a non-earning checking account is a waste of those assets. I would put $2,000 in checking for current bills and $8,000 in a regular savings account. That $8,000 at the recently raised rate of 5½% will earn $440 a year, money you can use. This leaves you $70,000 to invest in a high-yield, fixed-income security. If you prefer safety, then you should look at U.S. Treasury Notes. A recently issued three-year note is yielding 9%, which would give you $6,300 a year in interest income.

Stocks which yield 7% to 9%, yet have increased dividends an average of 8% annually for the last decade, would be suitable for your purpose. In this category are Central Telephone & Utilities, Florida Power & Light, Household Finance and Public Service of New Mexico. A $10,000 investment in each will give you an additional $3,250 in dividend income. All told, the savings account, bonds and stocks will pay you $9,990 per year, without your having to dip into capital.

To J.M. Wisconsin: If your certificate is still among the missing, try writing the company transfer agent, Registrar & Transfer Co., 140 Cedar St., New York, NY 10006. Ohio Edison has little to recommend it. The return on equity is among the lowest in the industry, and earnings have made virtually no progress in the last decade.

peace talks between Egypt, Israel and the U.S.

On July 26, Mr. Bishara, the Kuwaiti delegate, invited both Young and Terzi to his Manhattan home to discuss the issue. As a result of the meeting and other negotiations, Andrew Young managed to obtain a postponement of the debate until August 23.

Last week, in response to an inquiry from Newsweek magazine, the State Department asked Young if there was any truth to the rumor that he had met with a P.L.O. representative. Young at that time stated that he had only a chance social encounter with Mr. Terzi.

Contradictions in Story

Early this week, Thomas Reston, spokesman for the State Department issued a press briefing in which he stated that Young had met P.L.O. representative Terzi in the course of an unexpected social gathering. In the meantime, however, Young had disclosed the full and accurate report of his meeting to Yehuda Blum, the Israeli delegate. Young spoke to Blum as friend, explaining that he had initiated the meeting on his own, that the State Department did not authorize the talks, and that he wanted to dispel any notion that his meeting involved a conspiracy, or change of U.S. policy.

When confronted with his inaccurate report of the incident to the State Department, Young said: "That was not a lie, it was just not the whole truth." He offered the further explanation that "I didn't tell State because the less they know, the less they would be responsible."

On Tuesday of this week, after the full details became known to the Department of State, Thomas Reston issued a new report, adding, "We regret that yesterday's report was incorrect."

Difficult Decision for Carter

A full day elapsed between the full report of Young's meeting and his offer of resignation. During that time, Vance expressed his "displeasure" to Young, and high officials described President Carter as "not angry, but heartsick" about the whole affair.

Although such a transgression from official U.S. policy could not be openly condemned, Andrew Young has been highly valued by the President, both because of his support among blacks here in the U.S. and his effectiveness with black delegates to the U.N. assembly. Carter was described by many as being in a "no win" dilemma, wherein he would suffer politically whether he dismissed Young or kept him on.

Jody Powell was on the verge of tears when he read Carter's letter accepting Young's resignation. Despite the frequent fauux pas for which Young was noted, Carter always considered him a valuable asset to his administration, and in his letter in response to Young's resignation said he has "truly exemplified the finest" qualities of an American citizen.

Since his service in the United Nations began on January 30, 1977, Carter has several times had to clarify various Young remarks. In April of 1977 Young stated that the British had "invented racism." During one conference in Geneva, Andrew Young had stated that "There are hundreds, perhaps thousands of political prisoners in the United States." Following the Iranian revolution, Young remarked that eventually Khomeini would be regarded as "somewhat of a saint."

Harsh Words For Israel

The Israelis, who never believed that the encounter between Young and the P.L.O. was unauthorized, have not changed their feelings following the Young resignation. Israeli officials have been suspicious of U.S. intentions ever since the Saudis increased their output of oil to the U.S.

Another event has strengthened Israeli fears that the U.S. is trying to draw the P.L.O. into the peace talks in exchange for continued oil from Saudi Arabia. It has recently come to light that Milton Wolf, the U.S. ambassador to Austria, has held three meetings with representatives of the P.L.O. Two of these incidents were reported to the State Department as accidental encounters, while the other was admittedly planned. Israel believes that all of these encounters could not have occurred in a vacuum, without some form of Administration authorization.

Meanwhile, one White House aide was quoted yesterday as saying that Israel "won't be satisfied until the President himself jumps off a cliff to prove his devotion to them."

INCOME FOR EARLY RETIREMENT YEARS

Q: I plan to retire the first of the year at 56. I will not get a pension until I am 62, so plan to live on my investments until then. I have $120,000 in term certificates earning 7½% and 8%, with the interest mailed quarterly. I have $20,000 in Treasury bonds and $29,000 in E bonds (bought in 1963). In December I will come into $50,000. How can these assets be arranged so my wife and I can live on the income for the next six years? P.W. New Jersey

A: Including your upcoming windfall, you have listed assets of $219,000 annually. However, because of interest penalties and income taxes, only a portion of your investments should be liquidated now for reinvestment at higher rates. Your six- and eight-year bank certificates could be shifted as they reach maturity into higher yielding stocks and bonds. For the time being, however, you should be content with the $9,000 or so you are earning on this principal.

To J.M. Wisconsin: If your certificate is still among the missing, try writing the company transfer agent, Registrar & Transfer Co., 140 Cedar St., New York, NY 10006. Ohio Edison has little to recommend it. The return on equity is among the lowest in the industry, and earnings have made virtually no progress in the last decade.

doubtful your Treasury bond is paying you at the same high rates that are available in other investments. If this is the case, then the bond should be sold, unless it is close to maturity.

Proceeds from the suggested sales should be invested in a portfolio of stocks and bonds for income and modest growth. I would like to see you in a managed bond fund, such as Northeast Investors (50 Congress Street, Boston, MA 02109), yielding 9.6%. An investment of at least $10,000 enables you to participate in their withdrawal plan to receive payments monthly. A $30,000 commitment in this fund, with monthly withdrawals of $250, would be only slightly more than the fund is returning.

Some high yield utilities with good possibilities for dividend growth are: Arizona Public Service, Southwestern Public Service and Utah Power & Light. In the last decade, dividends on these NYSE-listed issues have increased an average of 7% annually and each yields around 9½%, currently. In other industries, I like Northwest Industries and International Telephone & Telegraph, yielding 6% and 8% respectively. Dividend growth for these companies has outpaced inflation in recent years.

ISRAEL BONDS NEW LEADERSHIP: Darrell and Susan Ross of Providence, chairpersons of Rhode Island New Leadership Division for State of Israel Bonds, are shown making final plans for an evening of disco, sponsored by the New Leadership Division, to be held Saturday, August 25, at the Biltmore Plaza in Providence.

Induction of "Sabra Society"

"The right hand brings the melody, the left hand the harmony, together they create a symphony of peace," declared composer Marvin Hamlisch upon launching the "Sabra Society" of State of Israel Bonds.

Locally, Darrell and Susan Ross, Rhode Island New Leadership chairpeople indicated that presentations to newly inducted members of this chartered society will be held at the upcoming "Disco" slated for Saturday, August 25th at the Biltmore Plaza, Providence.

In kicking off the "Sabra Society" Marvin Hamlisch had Robert Klein and Lucie Arnaz sing "They're Singing Our Song" at the star-studded gala at New York, New York in Manhattan. The "Sabra Society" is comprised of young Jewish leaders who help advance Israel's internal development through the minimum purchase of $1,000 in bonds or notes.

Newly inducted "Sabras" include: Allan Carr, producer of Grease; Neil Bogart, president of Casablanca Records and Films; and of course Marvin Hamlisch, honored songwriter.

The members of the "Sabra Society" will receive a new and unique award in recognition of their commitment to Israel.

People interested in attending the "Disco for Bonds at the Biltmore Plaza" can contact Charlie and Pam Meyers through the Israeli Bond office at 751-6767. Attendance is based on the investment of a bond or note in Israel during 1979. Israeli Bonds start at $250 and repay the owner 180% at maturity. Details on other investment for Israel can also be obtained through the State of Israel Bond office.

UOJCA Condemns Suit

A lawsuit seeking to curtail New York State's released time program was denounced as "ill conceived" and a "dangerous threat to religious instruction for public school students" by Julius Berman, president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America (UOJCA).

The suit, prepared by Leo Pfeffer, special counsel of the American Jewish Congress, on behalf of the Committee for Public Education and Religious Liberty (PEARL), seeks to have the released time program declared unconstitutional. It claims the program, which allows public school students to leave school during class hours for religious instruction, is an establishment of religion by the state and granting of credit from such instruction is therefore unconstitutional.

Mr. Berman said that "aside from being an ill conceived attempt to place religion and the state at odds, the suit, if successful, could have unfortunate effects upon religious instruction."

"There are public school students who receive no religious instruction other than through the released time program. The thrust of this suit is to deny these students their only actual opportunity to study religion. We fear and deplore the possible effect the suit may have of denying students access to the study of their religions."

For American Mizrahi Women Every Year Is "The Year of The Child"

The American Mizrahi Women will be holding their annual National Convention in New York City this September, and several members of the Providence chapter will be in attendance. There are over 100 women in the local Providence chapter, which was founded 32 years ago. Rose A. Berlinski is the current president of the Providence chapter.

For the past 54 years, American Mizrahi Women have dedicated themselves to bettering the lot of disadvantaged children in Israel according to the principle of "helping where help is needed most." Founded in 1925, today, AMW is the major American traditional Zionist women's organization in the United States, with 50,000 members in over 350 chapters throughout the country. At AMW child care centers, vocational training schools and child development projects throughout Israel, Israeli children from disadvantaged backgrounds, find the love, understanding and direction they need to start them off in happy, full and productive lives. Graduates of AMW facilities include successful teachers, farmers, engineers, machinists, government officials, scientists and even a current Mayor, 31-year-old Meir Shitrit, recently elected Mayor of the growing Israeli development town Yavne.

AMW's latest project is the new Beth Hayeled Child Haven in new development

section of Jerusalem. Construction on the project, for which the organization is raising 3½ million dollars, will begin in the fall and when completed will provide a home and education for hundreds of Israeli youngsters aged 3-12. Israel Consul General, Paul Kedar, recently hosted a cocktail party in his Manhattan home for contributors to the project.

At this year's national convention, slated to be held at New York City's Sheraton Centre, September 9-11, President Carter will formally accept AMW's most prestigious award, the "American Israel Friendship Award," for his efforts in helping to forge the Israel-Egypt peace treaty. Past recipients of the award include such notables as former presidents Truman and Johnson, Senators Robert and Edward Kennedy, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and Under Secretary of State Joseph Sisco, but this is the first time it has ever been presented to an in-office American president. Famed opera singer Roberta Peters will also appear at the convention where she will formally accept the honorary chairmanship of AMW's "Mother In Israel" campaign. Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron and Yeshiva University President Norman Lamm, will also address the convention, where the national membership will gather to celebrate the 54 productive years of American Mizrahi Women.

An Open Letter To The Rhode Island Jewish Community

August 16, 1979

Dear Friend:

We have signed this letter because of our deep belief in the strength and vitality of the Jewish community in Rhode Island, in America and throughout the world.

Painful as it is to face, and you can see from the list on the opposite page, that the problems of anti-Semitism and bigotry continue to plague all of us. Our struggle must go on and you can trust the Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith to be our bulwark of defense.

The Anti-Defamation League has long been the champion in the fight to combat anti-Semitism and we would like to apprise you of some of the work done locally as well as Nationally and Internationally. We who are secure in our comfortable homes often do not realize what is happening in our own little sphere.

This year because of inflation and the need for us to put our money where it will do the most good, we have decided to forego our annual cocktail party and to take our fund raising appeal directly to you the concerned members of the Jewish Community.

We urge you to become involved. Your generous increased contribution is an important investment in our security and in your children's future. Since 1913 the ADL has always been on the scene when Jews have been in trouble. Now it is our turn to show our strong support and give what our heart tells us we should.

The ADL needs us — and we need the ADL.

Thank you.

WHY WE NEED THE ADL

Here in Providence

Holocaust Education — ADL in conjunction with R.I. Jewish Federation and N.C.C.J ran an educator's conference on the Holocaust at Providence College. Over 200 teachers and faculty members attended.

Providence Insurance Executive Tells Jewish employee, "You people can only go so far in this business" and denies him a transfer and raise.

(ADL intervention and legal counsel results in sizable raise and transfer.)

Banking — Business Leaders receive anti-Semitic mail.

(ADL exposed source as Liberty Bell publishers — a right wing anti-Semitic group — special release sent to press and both the Jewish and non-Jewish community.)

Aryan Knights of Klu Klux Klan move into Providence — distribute anti-Semitic hate propaganda.

(ADL identified people involved — alerted local police and Federal Law Enforcement Agencies.)

On New England Campuses

Hundreds of fans scream anti-Semitic epithets like "Dirty Kikes" to Brandeis soccer team at another game. Brandeis bus is surrounded by students and pelted with food and garbage.

College pep rally before soccer game with Brandeis includes, "Kill the Jews" banner and cheer of "Happy Holocaust."

College faculty member awakes to find door of home painted with words, "Kill the Jews" and his car smeared with swastikas.

Conference at major law school sees emergence of racial tensions between blacks and Jews. Arab speaker cries, "Just because Hitler didn't finish his job don't blame us" and is greeted with loud, enthusiastic applause.

(ADL forces schools to confront incidents, works with administration, faculty and students to make curriculum changes, supplies materials and expertise.)

Attempted Shabbos Arson of Synagogue

Christmas weekend vandals use two Christmas trees to set fire to old shul; thirty people inside praying unsuspectingly. Quick fire department response saves shul.

Vandals had harassed elderly worshippers riding bicycles to knock them down.

(ADL fought together rabbi, congregational leaders and police. Increased surveillance results in half of incidents.)

Cemetery Desecration — "The only good Jew is a dead Jew." Weeks of desecration halted with joint effort of ADL, B'nai B'rith and local police.

"Inflation is Jewish"; "Dump Israel, we need Arab oil — not more wars." Stickers of neo-Nazi group appear on Mass. transit in Jewish areas of greater Boston.

(ADL receives complaints and works with MBTA to remove and prevent recurrence.)

Anti-Zionist doctor refuses to sign exam form of student emigrating to Israel. The doctor stated that all Jews should be pushed into the sea.

(ADL files complaint with the Licensing Board.)

Nationally

ADL HAS TAKEN A LEADERSHIP ROLE IN THE FIGHT AGAINST ANTI-SEMITISM, REVERSE DISCRIMINATION, THE ARAB LOBBY'S PROPAGANDA, DEFENDING ISRAEL, HOLOCAUST EDUCATION, MONITORING EXTREMIST GROUPS, AND CIVIL RIGHTS IN GENERAL.

THEY ARE THERE WHENEVER THE JEWISH COMMUNITY NEEDS THEM. NOW THEY NEED YOU.

Local Jewish Temples and Jewish Public Buildings are under attack, being desecrated with swastikas.

Painted swastikas shock, anger . . .

Musicians Describe Life In USSR

"we simply did not have enough freedom in Russia," said Yakov Lifschitz, Ludmilla's husband. "You are not free to leave your job to find another one. You are not free to buy whatever you want whenever you want it."

The change has been an uplifting experience for Yakov.

"I really feel the freedom here," he exulted. "In Russia, you could not control your life; yes, that is what I think is the worst part, having no control over my own affairs. Here, there are many possibilities to control one's life, in your occupation, your choice of a house, everywhere."

"And then the anti-Semitism in Russia. They can make life tough for you if they know you are a Jew. People often change their names so you cannot tell they are Jewish."

"Here, we have a good relationship with our neighbors. They know we are Jewish and they like us. There is a Chinese family that lives below us, we are good friends. There also are other Russian families in the Providence area with whom we are friendly. People have been kind to me and my family."

Yakov does not take that help lightly, either. He has had plenty of it. After leaving Russia in August 1978, Yakov, Ludmilla, and their ten-year-old son Alex spent a month in Vienna and three months in Rome. While in Rome, their emigration visa was granted.

They immigrated to the United States in November, 1978 to a friend's house in Detroit. Their friend put them up, took care of them until the Lifschitz family could establish themselves.

"I am very thankful for what my friend in Detroit did for me," said Yakov, and I am thankful to the entire Detroit Jewish community. They were very kind to us."

"In Vienna and Rome, we also received a lot of help from HIAS (Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society). We could not have made it without all the assistance."

LUDMILLA LIFSCHEITZ

Price Controls Set Up

By Gil Sedan

JERUSALEM (JTA): The Likud government slapped price controls on a wide variety of consumer products after an inflationary spurt in August sent prices soaring by 10-20 percent. The move immediately drew fire from the Israel Manufacturers Association. Minister of Commerce and Industry Gideon Patt who ordered the price ceilings, admitted that the measure was distasteful to him as a member of the Liberal Party but said circumstances forced him to take it.

The price controls apply to only 170 of the 350 consumer items that rose in price yesterday, among them food products, cosmetics, soft drinks and household cleaners. The manufacturers of such items will need permission from the public committee on prices before they can introduce further hikes. Last month, Patt ordered price controls on 35 other items.

Avraham Shavit, president of the Manufacturers Association, warned Patt that he was "barking up the wrong tree." The Minister conceded that Shavit may be right but observed that the government had to start somewhere to control inflation.

Jewish Mayor Nominated For Transportation Secretary

NEW YORK (JTA): Mayor Neil E. Goldschmidt, of Portland, Oregon, who President Carter has nominated to be Secretary of Transportation, has always been active in the Portland Jewish community. Rabbi Emanuel Rose, of Temple Beth Israel, told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency the Mayor is a "caring Jew" who is a member of his congregation along with his wife, Margaret. His son, Joshua, and daughter, Rebecca, attend the Reform congregation's religious school.

The 39-year-old Goldschmidt, a fifth generation Oregonian, is a member of B'nai B'rith and a recipient of the annual award of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. He is also a member of many other Jewish organizations, according to Rose.

Shavit blamed the government and other public authorities for the price increases. "When the costs of production go up, so must the costs of manufactured goods," he said.

Shavit noted that the government has just raised the cost of fuel, electricity and municipal rates all of which contributed to the rise in production costs. In addition, he said, employee paychecks in July contained advances on their cost-of-living allowances due in October and banks are raising their interest rates.

Patt suggested that if the need arose, he would expose certain goods to foreign competition in order to reduce prices. Several manufacturers warned that if such a step was taken they would be forced to shut down and fire their workers. Patt retorted that if some companies close, others will stay open.

The Commerce Minister is to meet with Histadrut Secretary General Yeruham Meshel to discuss the latest price rises. Meshel welcomed the price controls as a timely decision to curb inflation. He is expected to demand that the manufacturers be compelled to stamp the retail price on their goods so that merchants cannot buy them at the old prices and sell them at the new ones.

Goldschmidt visited Israel last June as part of a Jewish National Fund mission, but according to the rabbi, he also spent some time on a kibbutz years ago.

Goldschmidt was first elected mayor in 1973 when at the age of 32 he was one of the nation's youngest mayors. He has been credited for vast improvements in Portland in revitalizing the city's neighborhoods, in the growth of the downtown and promotion of public transit. A graduate of the University of Oregon and the University of California at Berkeley Law School, he quit a Capitol Hill job in 1964 because of the Senate's slow pace on civil rights legislation to help Charles Evers register rural Blacks in the South to vote. The Senate is scheduled to act on his nomination in September.

The 42 year old Yakov found employment with the Rhode Island business firm of Brown and Sharpe as a research engineer, a position similar to the one he had in Russia, and subsequently moved into the East Side. Michael German, Sophia's husband, is looking for engineering work also. Michael, Sophia, and their son Dmitry came to Providence just last month and moved in with the Lifschitzes.

Of course, not every change can be absolutely trouble-free, and the Lifschitz family have experienced some difficulties, although they are not major ones.

"We have had some problems in understanding some of the expressions that the people use here," said Yakov. "I heard people say 'I'm gonna' rather than 'I am going to' and I could not figure out what they say. 'We are getting more familiar, though.'

Then there is the problem that everyone goes through for a time after making a major move in residence: homesickness.

"We very much miss Leningrad for all the beautiful things it had to offer. Sure, we are happier here in general, but there always are those few things you will miss."

"Leningrad is a beautiful city; I wish everyone can see it. It has beautiful museums, theatres, houses. You see, in Russia, the cities are much better taken care of than here. The Russians feel a beautiful, clean city is a symbol of Soviet power; the rest of the world sees their cities and realizes what a powerful and rich country it is.

"The Russians, they want to impress the rest of the world."

There is a double-edged sword at work here, though. "The cities, the Russians make sure that they are well-kept and in order. But when it comes to the basic necessities, those

Visas To Egypt Increase

TEL AVIV (JTA): There has been a sudden spurt in the number of Egyptian visas for Israelis who wish to visit that country, it was reported by the Israeli Foreign Ministry special office for visas to Egypt.

The office said it had received 59 visas in one batch. Until now, visas dribbled in ones or twos.

Israeli circles assume that the increase in the number of visas is the result of talks held earlier this week between Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs

Boutros Ghali. During a meeting between the two men at Dayan's home, the Israeli Foreign Minister expressed disappointment with the slow pace of visa approvals by Egypt. Hundreds of Israeli visa applications were being held up in Cairo, Dayan told Ghali. The Egyptian official, who was in Israel to participate in the autonomy talks, told Dayan that the delay was due to bureaucratic snafus.

Jewish, Arab-American Reactions

The chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations said that immediate action is warranted to see whether Mr. Young's "deplorable" meeting "fits into a larger State Department pattern." Theodore R. Mann also said "We know appeasement is not President Carter's policy; we are less confident that it is not the State Department's policy."

The president of the American-Arab Relations Committee, Dr. M. T. Medhi, called Andrew Young's meeting with Terzi "a moral act violating an immoral policy." He predicted that President Carter would hold a meeting with Yasir Arafat before the end of 1979. Dr. Medhi went on to say that Young's meeting with Terzi was "something the United States should have done years ago," and termed it a "courageous prelude" that would pave the way for a meeting between Carter and Arafat.

Mr. Terzi expressed disappointment that there has been no U.S. initiative for "direct contact with the P.L.O. about the problem of the Palestinian people, which constitutes the essence of the Middle East conflict." In Al Nahar, Terzi was also quoted as saying that reports about his meeting with Young were "founded on erroneous grounds" and that he could recall discussing no substantive issues with the Ambassador.

REGISTRATION OF PALESTINIAN PAPER REFUSED

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The official Corporations Register in Jerusalem has refused to register the "Palestinian News Service," operated by nationalist Raymonda Tawil, on the grounds Tawil, a well-known personality in the West Bank, who was under house arrest for an extended period of time for her anti-Israeli activities, heads the East Jerusalem office which supplies press services, especially for overseas consumption. Her organization is not recognized by the government as a legitimate foreign service, and the move to register the organization was probably meant to force the press office to give it such accreditation.

NEWPORT BALL COMMITTEE: Members of the American Cancer Society's Newport Ball Committee met on Wednesday evening at the Golden Lantern Restaurant in Warwick to discuss final plans for the gala evening at Marble House on Saturday, August 25.

By Robert E. Starr

Today's hand illustrates two situations, one in the bidding and one in the play. In this hand a Convention was used or misused, however you wish to describe what happened. The cards were such that in many cases it wouldn't have made a difference but it sure could have.

North was Dealer, no one vulnerable with this bidding:

Some players have the misconception that to open One No Trump every suit must have a stopper. Not so. Some fine players will even open with a worthless doubleton. I prefer either three small or at least a doubleton Queen to open One No Trump.

I watched South respond to that bid in two ways. First, I will tell you what the Texas or South African variation of the Texas Convention is. It is used only after a one or two No Trump opening bid by one's partner to get the opening lead coming into the hand better equipped to handle it, usually the opening bidder. The partner will have a six card major which will seldom find the opener with four so a Stayman bid seldom helps.

In Texas responder bids four Hearts to have partner bid Spades and four Diamonds for Hearts. South African is Diamonds for Spades and Clubs for Hearts. In this hand I watched so many Souths say to themselves, "Here is my chance to show how much I know, I'll use that Convention." Look at that South hand and you'll see that this is not the time to use it. South has two Kings of his own and should prefer the lead coming to him. He should simply bid four Spades. This misuse of the convention also goes against another thing in that most players will try to steal hands away from their partner rather than go out of their way not to play one.

With West on lead came the Club Queen which neither helped nor hurt but did provide time. Declarer can see three possible Diamond losers and a sure Heart loser. He might be able to discard one Diamond on a Heart if he plays the Hearts right and has time so he should start right on that by winning the first trick in his hand to lead a Heart. Here is a common card combination that so many play wrong. The proper card from Dummy is the nine not the Jack. The key card being the 10. The Jack will work only when West has both honors, unlikely. The idea is to expect each opponent to hold one honor and finesse for the 10, an even chance. When that 10 forces an honor do it again, and doom the hand but so many players tend to return the suit partner led. If this happens that second Heart play makes the hand. Meanwhile those who used the Convention had East on lead. Now a Diamond is very likely or if not he certainly would entertain the thought to switch to one when he won his Heart trick. True, nothing always works but the whole idea of the game is to always give oneself the best chance.

Moral: Conventions should be used only at the proper time not to flaunt the fact that you know them.

Temple Sinai To Welcome New Rabbi

A service of welcome to Rabbi George J. Astrachan and his family will be conducted at Temple Sinai on Friday, August 17 at 8:15 p.m.

Rabbi Astrachan, who succeeded Rabbi Jerome Gurland, will be welcomed to the pulpit by Norman Brill, president of the board of trustees. Rabbi Astrachan will conduct the service. The kiddush after the Sabbath service will be sponsored by the temple sisterhood.

Mrs. Astrachan will recite the blessing over the Sabbath candles.

Prior to the Saturday morning service, Rabbi Astrachan will be welcomed to the minyan breakfast and will discuss the Torah portion of the day.

Brill announced that other formal activities are planned in September and October to welcome Rabbi and Mrs. Astrachan and their family to the community, and a formal installation will be held.

"WOMANSONG"

Opportunities For Women is sponsoring a music festival on August 18 from 3 p.m. - 9 p.m. at Pembroke Field, corner of Hope and Meeting Streets on the East Side.

"WomanSong" is the first annual music festival in Rhode Island that celebrates the state's top women instrumentalists and vocalists.

Food, beer, and soda will be on sale. There is an admission fee.

Rain date is August 25.

New Settlement

Israel has begun to build another settlement on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan. Groundbreaking for the new settlement, located at Ma'ale Adumim near Jerusalem, began over the weekend with an unpublicized ceremony.

Israel Offers New 7½% Issue

The Industrial Development Bank of Israel has begun a new issue of shares in $1,000 units which pays $75 annually in United States dollars. As usual with shares and notes, unless a tax exempt entity as a pension plan or charity, the government of Israel retains a 25% tax which is often recoverable here when deductions are itemized.

Though the bank is closely associated with the state of Israel, it is a separate entity. The monies raised through this sale is used to encourage and assist in the establishment of industrial enterprises in Israel.

The bank is 22 years old and was started by the government, Histadruth, the Manufacturer's Association of Israel, and some leading financial institutions.

Sale of these shares of stock is being handled by the Israeli Bond Office. That office may be reached at 751-6767.

New Bombshell In Israel

Rabin Against Peres

By Gil Sedan and Yitzhak Shargil

JERUSALEM: Former Premier Yitzhak Rabin has launched an all out political war against his long-time rival, Labor Party chairman Shimon Peres. In a new book, whose first two chapters were to be published this week by Maariv, Rabin accuses Peres as "constantly undermining" his rule, at all costs. Details of the new book were publicized by Israeli Television.

Rabin wrote that Peres was determined to become Premier, and for that goal, everything was permissible, including leaking to the press of state secrets. According to Rabin, this reached a climax when the local press publicized the story of a secret visit by Soviet emissaries.

Rabin wrote that he regarded the leak with grave concern, and ordered an investigation among civil servants. When no one was found responsible for the publication, Rabin summoned both Peres and Deputy Premier Yigal Allon, who suggested that they all undergo a lie detector test to see if any of them was responsible for the leak.

"Peres became as white as the wall," wrote Rabin. "He said he did not find it suitable for a minister to undergo such a test, and said he would refuse to do so in principle. Allon and I exchanged glances, and I knew there was no need to have a test," Rabin wrote.

Rabin, in the book, entitled "Service Record," disqualified Peres from serving as Israel's Premier on the grounds that he was never a soldier. Rabin recalled that he did not consider Peres the suitable candidate for Defense Minister in his Cabinet, but was forced to appoint him by the implied threat of the ex-Rafi wing that it would not support the government unless Peres was appointed minister.

Peres Rebuts Rabin's Charge

In an interview with Israel TV, Peres said he had served in the Hagana, the Israel Defense Force and the defense establishment from his early youth. He said he had been one of the men inducted into the IDF, at its very inception, by the first Chief of Staff, Gen. Yaakov Dori. "My number was easy to remember," Peres said. "It was 54466." He said he had started out as a commander of a unit, and ended up 27 years later as Minister of Defense.

Peres noted that the element of revenge was sometimes much stronger in political autobiographies than the historical record, "but I am sure that the truth will come out one day . . ." He added: ". . . I am at peace with myself. My memory is intact."

Rabin alleged in the book that "53 hours after the Air France airliner was hijacked to Entebbe (Airport in Uganda in 76) Peres had not fulfilled the minimum requirement of a Defense Minister, to ascertain from the commanding officers the military options." But Peres had a totally different version: ". . . I am happy that on the eve of the operation, Rabin joined in the decision to carry out the raid, and the Cabinet approved it."

On the illicit Rabin Washington bank account, which finally brought him down, Rabin wrote that six months before the account was exposed, a "well-known" Israeli journalist had informed one of his aides that certain circles in the Labor Party knew of the account and planned to use it to discredit him. These circles even sent an investigator to Washington. Rabin ignored the warning, and this was, he wrote, his "tragic mistake."

Peres said he thought the book would do its author a great deal of harm, and indicated that Rabin must realize that if Peres ever became Premier, he would not make a place for Rabin in his government. Rabin, in his book, said that he would never want to serve under Peres as Premier.

Peres expanded the verbal battle this morning with a declaration in Yediot Achronot that it should be remembered Rabin was ousted as Premier not because of any action by Peres but because of the discovery of the Rabin bank account in Washington. The controversy revived the situation of 1976 when the issue of the Labor Party's leadership was also Peres versus Rabin.

Observers agreed that the Rabin charges had left Israelis bewildered and wondering who was running Israel and who could run Israel. Israelis were troubled by an ailing, though recovering Premier Menachem Begin, and an ailing Cabinet in which personal and ideological rifts repeatedly sparked fights between the ministers, a situation publicly criticized by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan earlier this week.

Even the Labor Alignment opposition, seeking to capitalize on the disarray in the ruling Likud and even maneuvering to move up the elections in that hope, was obviously split by internal disputes.

The Israeli public had scarcely absorbed Dayan's sweeping charges of incompetence in the Begin government, when the Rabin blasts were publicized by television. Asked by telephone about Peres' counterblast, Rabin refused to comment on any aspect of his charges against Peres.

The Labor Party leadership held a closed meeting on August 9, and the leaders decided to impose a total news blackout on their discussions. It was learned, however, that some of Peres' supporters wanted Rabin ousted from the party leadership, and ousted immediately. Their argument was that the situation was a tumor that must be cut out and the sooner the better. But other Labor leaders said the party should try to dampen down the dispute rather than let it grow in ferocity. Some of the leaders expressed deep regret that Rabin chose this time to cast aspersions at the party when it was making excellent progress in emerging from its crisis.

Timing Of The Rift

The newest rift came after months of efforts by Labor leaders to rehabilitate the party after it lost power in 1977 to Likud after uninterrupted control from the start of the State. The party appeared to have accepted Peres' leadership. Even Allon, who had been considered a candidate for the party's leadership, soon accepted Peres as leader. But Rabin remained silent until the television report made clear his total rejection of the Peres party leadership.

Rabin's supporters, coming to his defense, cited a statement in the memoirs of Moshe Sharett, who served as both Foreign Minister and Premier, that he lacked confidence in Peres. But the main criticism of Rabin involved not ideology but his personal attack on Peres.

Other speculation centered on Dayan, with some observers saying that his criticism of the present government suggested he was ready for another major move, including the possibility of his rejoining the Labor Party, or a bid to lead a new party which, given the rifts in the two major parties, might emerge as a strong political grouping.

Meanwhile, many Likud ministers said they felt that the Rabin-Peres squabble could not have come at a better time, in view of Dayan's stinging criticism of the government. Some felt that the Labor Party's preoccupation with its own Pandora's Box of troubles would prevent it from being a real threat to the Likud government.

REAPPOINTED: Stanley Blacher has been reappointed to the Providence Redevelopment Agency until July, 1984, Mayor Vincent A. Cianci, Jr. of Providence announced. A 1947 graduate of Brown University, he has been one of the chief executive officers of Blacher Brothers since his graduation. He has also been serving as vice-president and director of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island for many years, as well as being a member of the executive committee of Miriam Hospital and of the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center in Denver, Colorado. Along with his wife Marcia, and two sons, Richard and John, Blacher has been a lifelong resident of Providence.

CBS Attacked For Casting Of Redgrave

NEW YORK (JTA): CBS-TV has come under fresh attack from Jewish organizations for selecting Vanessa Redgrave, an out-spoken supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization, for the role of a Nazi concentration camp survivor in a TV film based on Fania Fenelon's book, "Playing for Time." The latest denunciations came from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the American Jewish Congress.

Dore Schary, honorary ADL chairman and a producer, playwright and author, said that casting Miss Redgrave for the film dealing with Miss Fenelon's memoirs about musicians who were forced to play for the Nazis in concentration camps indicated that CBS had a "profound lack of sensitivity and understanding."

A Misguided Judgement

He said that Miss Redgrave, "an actor of talent, has opportunities to play many other roles, but to cast her as one of the victims of the Holocaust is, we suggest, a trick, a stunt, a misguided judgement." Schary suggested that perhaps she chose to play this part "as a gesture of redemption because of her close alliance with the terrorists of the PLO — the film she made (The Palestinians) showed little children practicing the killing of Jews and aiding the obscene propaganda of the PLO."

However, Schary added, "If redemption is not the aim, perhaps CBS believes that her performance will make her aware of the necessity for the creation of Israel and make her realize how necessary it is for that small, beleaguered country to defend itself against 60 million adversaries who seek its obliteration." The casting of Miss Redgrave in the TV film, "degrades, offends, deprecates those who survived the death camps and defames the names of those who died in them."

Howard M. Squadron, AJCongress president, called the Redgrave casting "grotesque" and certain to be "offensive to the Jewish community." He expressed the hope that Miss Redgrave, in that performance, might learn something "about the Nazi slaughter of the Jews" and "recognize at last that the Jewish people have a right to a state of their own" that seeks only "to live in peace with its Arab neighbors."

Miller Defends Redgrave Casting

At the same time, Arthur Miller, who wrote the screenplay for the film, said in a statement issued yesterday that "Miss Redgrave was offered the role of Fania Fenelon as an actress suited to it. To fire her now for her political views would be blacklisting. Having been blacklisted myself in time past, I have fought against the practice abroad as well as here, and I cannot participate in it now."

Miller added, "No actress can possibly play Fania in this play without generating the profoundest sympathy for the Jewish people, as well as a deeper understanding of some of the experiences that cried out for the creation of the State of Israel."

Meanwhile, responding to casting Miss Redgrave in the film, David Wolper, producer of television documentaries and dramas, including "Roots," and Lionel Chetwynd, a writer with many screen and television credits, disclosed they have cancelled projects with CBS.

Bernie Sofronski, vice president of special programs for CBS Entertainment, said Miss Redgrave was chosen because "the feeling was" that she was "the best actress for the part, that we should never position ourselves where we penalize people for their personal or political views, that our business was show business and that it was our responsibility to come up with the best actress we could find." He said actresses Jane Fonda and Barbra Streisand were also considered for the part but both were not available.

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The Education Ministry has acknowledged that about 40 Jewish children from Iran are presently attending missionary schools in Israel. The Ministry said it is investigating the matter on the basis of a complaint by Likud MK Moshe Katzav. Twenty of the children are studying at a missionary institution in Jerusalem and the rest at an Anglican institution in Jaffa.

If the youngsters came to Israel on tourist visas, as many did during the Iranian revolution, the Education Ministry is powerless to dictate where they attend school. If they came as immigrants, however, the Israeli authorities could invoke the compulsory education law to force them to leave the missionary schools.

Rally At Ex-Nazi's New York Home

ALBANY, N.Y. (JTA): The home of accused Nazi war criminal Vilis Hazners in Dresden, N.Y. was the site of a Tisha B'Av demonstration led by Rabbi Paul Silton of Albany. Sitting on the road in front of Hazners' home, which is located in rural Washington County some 70 miles northeast of Albany, Silton led a group of 18 college and high school students in praying from the Book of Lamentations. Original prayers linking the destruction of European Jewry by the Nazis with the destruction of the Temple in ancient Jerusalem were also chanted.

"As long as Hazners is here, this will be an annual event on Tisha B'Av," Silton pledged. This was the second year that Silton, co-chairman of the Greater Albany Jewish Federation's Committee on Justice for Nazi War Criminals, led a peaceful protest at the Hazners residence.

Demonstrators used toothbrushes to scrub the pavement, re-enacting eyewitness accounts that Hazners forced Jews to do likewise in the courtyard of the Riga police station, where he was a Latvian police chief under the Nazis. They also carried placards with photos of concentration camp victims and Biblical quotations. Hazners, 74, was not at home during the protest. A neighbor said he had left for a doctor's appointment in nearby Rutland, Vt., but family members were in the house.

Brief Filed With Federal Judge

After more than two-and-a-half years of hearings, the U.S. government has filed a brief with federal Judge Anthony DeGaetano recommending that Hazners be deported. DeGaetano recently granted Hazners' attorney, Ivars Berzins of Babylon, N.Y., an extension in preparing his brief, which was due last month. The judge's opinion should come two to six months after both briefs are filed.

Hazners is accused of illegally entering the United States in 1956 by concealing his alleged collaboration with the Nazis during World War II. At his deportation hearings in Albany, witnesses from Israel, formerly from Riga, testified that Hazners had committed atrocities against the Jews of Riga in 1941 and 1942.

Silton's group was met by three of Hazners' neighbors who criticized the protest and called Hazners a good neighbor. They said that the Israeli witnesses had lied and that evidence against Hazners was propaganda.

Two of Hazners' closest neighbors, Edgar and Ralph Steele, described him as a personable gentleman. "My family has Jewish friends," Ralph Steele said to Silton. "We like the Jews, but you'll keep talking until we don't like the Jews."

The Steele brothers were present at last year's protest, when there was a group who

Moynihan Warns Against Selling Honor For Oil

RYE, N.Y. (JTA): Sen. Daniel Moynihan (D-N.Y.) warned the Carter Administration against any Middle East policy change which would sacrifice Israel's vital interests to Arab oil blackmail. "American foreign policy is not for sale — not one million barrels of oil a day, nor one hundred million barrels will buy the honor of this republic," he declared. He made his statement in address to 250 members of the American Friends of the Hebrew University at a meeting here and amplified his views at a press conference following his formal address.

Ephraim Evron, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, rejected Carter Administration warnings that Israel may have violated U.S. law by its use of American-made warplanes in raids against terrorist bases in Lebanon.

Moynihan said "the Camp David agreements are solemn and must be kept. You cannot simply change them because the Saudi king, prince or whatever, has said 'Well, we'll let you have another million barrels of oil a day as a Fourth of July present.' He declared that "we are not going to let this Administration buy oil at the expense of the freedom of Israel. The thing I am trying to make clear to the Administration is that the U.S. Congress, much less the American people, will not accept this."

"If we have come this far into the 20th Century that we have not understood the nature of a totalitarian society, then God have mercy on us all," Moynihan added. "To repeat, the American foreign policy is not for sale."

No Change, No Amendment Of 242

He said the Camp David agreements were based on Security Council Resolution 242 "that says if any so-called Palestine Liberation Organization wishes to be recognized in bargaining with and made part of any future agreement, it must first recognize the right of the State of Israel to exist as a free and independent democracy barring nothing else — no change to it, no amendment to it, no compromise."

The Senator's comments were in response to speculation that the Carter Administration position toward the PLO has softened because of a Saudi promise to provide more crude oil to the United States. He was thunderously applauded during his speech. At his press conference, Moynihan said he felt Americans would "walk to work before we sell out another democratic power for oil." He also told the reporters he thought Carter's Administration was "collapsing on him."

Written Commitments Cited

Evron told the dinner guests that Israel was taking "grave risks" in implementing the treaty with Egypt, adding that Israel had received "written commitments from Egypt and the United States." He did not specify what commitments he meant but apparently he was referring to Israel's insistence on a multi-national substitute for the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) which ended its peacekeeping in the buffer zone between Egyptian and Israeli positions in Sinai when the Security Council, under a Soviet threat of veto, failed to renew the UNEF mandate.

The Carter Administration has said that a beefed-up contingent of the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization (UNTSO)

APPOINTED CHAIRMAN: Edgar L. Cadden of Chicago, Illinois has been appointed national cash chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, Irwin S. Field, UJA National Chairman announced recently. Vice chairman of the board of the Jewish Fund of Metropolitan Chicago, Cadden is chairman of its Project Renewal Committee. He is a member of the Joint Distribution Committee's Board of Directors and is vice chairman of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Recently appointed a UJA National Vice Chairman, he has served as a member of the UJA Midwest Regional Cabinet and along with Victor Gelb of Cleveland, is co-chairman of the Automotive Division Mission to Israel on September 9-19.

ASSUMES NEW POST: Samuel Shievin, director of development at the Providence Hebrew Day School, has also assumed the position of executive director of administration at the school. Edward P. Aronson, president of the Providence Hebrew Day School, made the announcement.

identified themselves as members of the Christian Defense League which has been described as a right-wing anti-Semitic organization. Silton asked them why they were carrying signs last year that said, "All Jews are thieves." While admitting carrying a sign, Ralph Steele claimed he didn't know what it said. He told reporters later: "I didn't print those signs. But I'm glad somebody did."

Navon Against Israeli Defense Involvement

JERUSALEM (JTA): President Yitzhak Navon made a strong plea for the close involvement of Jewish diaspora communities in Israel's affairs but suggested that they stay out of the country's defense and foreign affairs. Addressing 100 American and Canadian Jewish leaders representing the State of Israel Bonds National Campaign Cabinet who arrived in Israel on August 6th for an intensive three-day round of conferences with Israeli government officials on urgent peace needs, Navon said: "It will be our children who might have to go to the battlefield, and not yours."

Navon told the meeting, presided over by New York Israel Bonds chairman Howard Samuels, that he rejected the idea that "Israel had no right or never had the right to settle here or there. This is rejected by everyone in the country." According to Navon, the problem was whether Israel should exercise this right.

He noted that on many vital issues, many friends of Israel will not always be convinced that the policy of the Jewish State is correct. However, he said, they nevertheless had an obligation to study and understand the policy of Israel. Navon expressed concern lest Jewish communities abroad separate themselves from Judaism and Jewish identity. He stressed the value of Jewish educa-could do the job and, in fact, UNTSO troops are now manning checkpoints in the buffer zone, though without Israeli cooperation.

Evron said the commitments "are not a one-way street but if the agreements are not adhered to by the other parties, Israel has the legal, moral and practical right to re-evaluate its own obligations." In rejecting Carter Administration complaints about the use of American warplanes, Evron said "as long as terrorists are based in and use Lebanon to launch murderous attacks on our women and children, Israel must and will use these arms in self-defense to destroy these bases and frustrate their efforts."
