

Regarded As 'Invincible Ignorance' Baptist Leader Criticized Over Anti-Jewish Remark

NEW YORK, (JTA) — A Baptist leader's claim that "God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew" has drawn sharp criticism from Jewish and some Baptist groups and a denial by Dr. Bailey Smith, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, who made the statement, that he is anti-Semitic.

Smith, however, would not disavow the remarks he made at the National Affairs Briefing, a gathering of fundamentalist Christians in Dallas last month. Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, director of the interreligious affairs department of the American Jewish Committee, described Smith's assertion as "invincible ignorance" of the Jewish faith and "almost totally at variance with the major pronouncements of the Southern Baptist convention." Smith is Pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla.

Smith's Dallas speech was recorded by Milton Tobian, executive director of the AJCommittee's North Texas region which mailed transcripts to Jewish leaders late last week. Smith was recorded as saying: "It is interesting, at great political rallies, how you have a Protestant to pray, a Catholic to pray, and then you have a Jew to pray. With all due respects to those dear people, my friends, God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

Responding to the angry reactions to his remarks, Smith declared "I am pro-Jew. I believe they are God's special people. I believe they are still loved in the heart of God and that the Jews are some of the greatest blessings humanity has ever had, but without Jesus Christ they are lost. No prayer gets through that is not prayed through Jesus." He claimed that "Jews have an argument with me because they have an argument with the New Testament."

Smith's remarks were condemned by a colleague, Dr. James Dunn, director of the Dallas-based Christian Life Commission of Texas Baptists. Dunn observed that "Baptists at their best have always believed in religious liberty" but "you can't really believe in religious liberty" without respecting the religious convictions of others.

He added, "If God Almighty cannot hear the prayers of Jews, you're putting pretty severe limits on your doctrine of God."

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, in response to the statement, made public letters from a number of Baptist ministers and agency heads of the church against the remark made by Rev. Smith, who was elected to the 15-member denomination's top post last spring.

Although criticizing the remark made at the Briefing, none explicitly asked Dr. Smith to step down. All letters did, however, suggest that the statement could damage interfaith relations.

Rev. Jack Altman, pastor of the Second Baptist Church in Cumberland, Md., wrote that "Such reckless, insensitive words, by the president of the Southern Baptist convention, would contribute nothing of a positive nature to the work of our interfaith witness dialogues with our Jewish friends."

In his remarks Rev. Altman referred to the formal talks which Southern Baptists have been conducting with Jews for the past several years. These exchanges included such topics as the sources of religious bigotry and the need to explore common sources in the Bible.

The Rev. Glenn Inglehart, head of the Dallas convention's interfaith relations department, referred to the statement as "Comments by Christian leaders which could be interpreted as anti-Jewish" and warned that "We must be wary of placing restrictions on who God will listen to."

Southern Baptists have also placed strong emphases on a fuller recognition of the Jewish heritage of Jesus during their dialogues. Prof. J. William Angell, a Baptist who is a member of the faculty of Wake Forest University, based his criticism on that heritage stating that "I do wish Mr. Smith would pause at least long enough to realize that Jesus was a Jew, a loyal and faithful Jew. Does that mean that God would not hear him?"

Jackson Angered Over Speculation Of Rift With Begin

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), whose support of Israel has been unquestioned in his long political career, has indicated annoyance with published speculation that he did not mention Israel in his address to the B'nai B'rith International convention because he is "angry" with Premier Menachem Begin.

Under headlines such as "Why Senator Jackson Was Mute on Israel" and "Some Hear Thunder in Jackson's Silence," sections of the American Jewish press carried the report from their own Washington correspondent that began "How angry is Jackson with Begin? The report noted he had spoken about U.S.-Soviet relations, Soviet Jewish emigration, Afghanistan, the strikes in Poland, and the energy crisis but "nothing about Israel."

Jackson's office dismissed the report as "an invention" and as "utterly ridiculous." Dorothy Fodick, a principal assistant to Jackson, said she told the report's author that "You're inventing the whole thing. You don't have a story there."

Jackson, Fodick said, "is very close and very loyal to Begin," and that "personally, Scoop (Jackson) is a good friend of Begin."

Asked for a comment on the allegation he is angry with Begin, Fodick replied "it's utterly ridiculous. He doesn't have to answer stuff like that."

Independent observers noted that while Jackson did not mention Israel in his address, neither did Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, whose credentials in support of Israel's government are similarly unquestioned. Fraser, whose address preceded Jackson's, also stressed the Soviet component in world affairs and human rights.

Jackson received standing ovations before and after his speech to the B'nai B'rith, Fodick noted. He discussed the elements about which he is the Senate's foremost expert, Soviet Jewish emigration and the problems stemming from U.S. dependence on Middle East oil.

In an interview with The Washington Star two months ago, Jackson criticized the "timing" of Israel's establishment of new settlements on the West Bank but in the same interview he said "the settlements are not illegal," which is contrary to the Carter Administration's position.

NCSJ Forms Crisis Committee

NEW YORK, (JTA) — Burton Levinson, chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, announced the creation of a special "Crisis Committee" to deal with a critical situation facing Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union. He also announced the appointment of Richard Maass, former NCSJ chairman, to chair the committee.

Levinson said the rate of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union has been slashed to about half of its 1979 level, and new restrictions have prevented thousands from applying. During August, 770 Soviet Jews arrived in Vienna. Compared with the same period last year, when 4,711 Jews arrived, this represents a monthly decrease of over 83 per cent. In the first eight months of this year 17,062 emigres arrived, compared to 33,573 in 1979.

Providence Men's Club Wins Top Honors

The Men's Club of Temple Emanu-El, Providence was the winner of two major awards at the Multi-Regional Conference of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs, held recently at the Stevensville Hotel, Swan Lake, N.Y. The conference was attended by more than 350 delegates from the New England, Connecticut, New York Metro, Northern New Jersey, and Northeast Regions of the 40,000 member Federation of Conservative Men's Clubs which has affiliates throughout the United States and Canada.

The Emanu-El Men's Club was first prize in the category of "Religious programming" with their "Minyanaires Program." This is a regular Sunday Minyan followed by breakfast and a speaker on Judaic subjects.

Because the continuous nature of the program, the quality of the speakers, and the service to the synagogue, the program topped all the entries submitted from the other regions.

In addition, the Emanu-El Men's Club also won second prize in the category of "Best Program of the Year" for their successful "Hebrew Reading Program". Based on a concept and model developed by the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs and which has to date taught more than 15,000 adults to read Hebrew, the Emanu-El program further distilled the model and applied it to the needs and circumstances of their Congregation: The slogan of their program was: "You can read Hebrew in 24 hours."

Ninety persons and 12 teachers, all laymen, participated in the program, which was completed in the Spring of 1980.

Assembly President Expresses Hope For Mid-East Peace

UNITED NATIONS, (JTA) — The newly elected President of the 35th session of the General Assembly, Ambassador Rudiger von Wechmar of West Germany, expressed the hope in his recent address that the Assembly will be able to contribute to "a just, secure and lasting peace between Israel and her Arab neighbors, including the Palestinians."

Von Wechmar, a 57-year-old former journalist, was elected by acclamation. His election marks the first time a German has been chosen for the prestigious post, and, in the view of diplomats and observers here, a further step in the acceptance of Germany to the international community after the atrocities of World War II. Von Wechmar succeeds Salim Ahmed Salim of Tanzania as

Jewish History Inadequate In Dallas Textbooks

DALLAS, Tex (JTA) — A new report on world history curriculum materials used in Dallas public schools indicated that the most notable shortcoming in textbook treatment of Jews and Jewish history was fragmentation and omissions in that area of study, according to the Dallas chapter of the American Jewish Committee.

The study was made by the Dallas chapter cooperatively with representatives of the Dallas Independent School District and North Texas State University.

Barbara Lee, chairman of the AJCommittee Dallas chapter's textbook commission and a teacher in the Dallas public school system, said "Jewish history is largely absent from the pages of textbooks" used in Dallas schools. She said "our purpose was to examine the treatment of Jews and Jewish history in the world history curriculum materials used in Dallas schools and to develop those materials which can help teachers fill in the gaps not covered by the textbooks."

She said the textbook committee found that the textbooks and other materials used to teach world civilization exhibited a lack of continuity when treating Jewish history. Though each book contained errors and some bias, she said, the Dallas chapter's greatest complaint was against findings of fragmentation and omission of Jewish history in the teaching materials.

Dr. Gladys Rosen, of the AJCommittee's Jewish communal affairs department, said local studies like the one done in Dallas were "an important tool for bringing about the balanced treatment of the various peoples who contributed to the growth of western civilization. We think this study will serve as an excellent model for other communities."

Begin Sticks To Settlement Figures

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The Premier's office announced it was sticking to the figure of 10 more settlements to be built on the West Bank. The office issued the statement in the name of Premier Menachem Begin following claims by the Gush Emunim that "senior government officials" had promised them the government would continue to establish new settlements on the West Bank, even after the 10 settlements are completed.

Of the 10 Begin referred to in various interviews, six have already been approved by the Cabinet and four more remain to be approved.

Middle East Arms Stockpile Growing As Western Weaponry Continues To Pour In

LONDON, (JTA) — Britain, France and the U.S. are stepping up their arms supplies to the Middle East and, in the past 12 months, secured at least 34 major arms contracts compared with only four by the Soviet Union. This is revealed by the International Institute for Strategic Studies in its annual "Military Balance" published last week.

Although the number of deals do not necessarily reflect the quantities of weapons delivered, they underline the continued demand of Middle East States, especially the oil producing countries, for sophisticated Western weaponry and the readiness of Western states to supply them in growing quantities.

The two superpowers are still supplying their principal clients. Thus the U.S. signed major deals with Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Morocco and Saudi Arabia, and the Soviet Union pledged new supplies to Algeria, Iraq, Syria and North Yemen.

plur to Iraq's navy, agreeing to sell her four frigates, six 650-ton Corvettes and a support vessel.

The Soviet Union agreed to supply the Iraqis with 40 trainer aircraft and unknown quantities of MIG 23s, MIG 25s and MIG 27 fighters.

Libya, whose armory already included 2400 Soviet tanks, also turned to the West in the past year: Spain agreed to sell her three submarines; Canada, light aircraft; France, anti-aircraft missiles; Italy, armored cars; and The Netherlands, one transport aircraft. Kuwait, traditionally supplied by the West, moved in the opposite direction and bought ground and air missiles from the Soviet Union. Britain is selling 287 Shirs tanks to Jordan, while Saudi Arabia has contracted to buy AMX infantry combat vehicles and anti-aircraft systems from France.

Among Middle East states, Syria is spending the highest proportion of its government's defense budget, a massive 55 percent. Syria is followed by Israel, with 32 percent, and Saudi Arabia with 28 percent. But in terms of actual defense spending, oil-rich Saudi Arabia is way out in front with a colossal $20 billion, compared with Israel's $5.2 billion and Syria's $4 billion.

But there were significant variations. Iraq, which previously drew many of its arms from the USSR, has now turned to France, which concluded no fewer than seven agreements with it, for Mirage fighters, helicopters, and anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles. Italy also emerged as a sup-

Carter Meets With Jewish Leaders Was 'Relatively Straightforward'

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — The heads of American Jewish national organizations, following an hour-long meeting with President Carter at the White House, took a carefully worded, non-committal position with respect to their views of his candidacy for reelection while crediting him with being "relatively straightforward" on issues of concern to them.

Howard Squadron, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, who served as its spokesman at a news conference after the White House meeting, was asked if Carter was "reassuring to the American Jewish community" and how Jews would vote. "I think to some extent they were on many issues," Squadron responded about reassurances. "I think that on some issues probably, people left the room still concerned."

As to how Jews would vote, Squadron said, "I have no idea how Jewish voters will vote. Jews never vote monolithically for one candidate or another."

Pointing out that "there are a lot of undecided" voters, he said, "I would expect that the campaign between now and election day will have a great deal to do with how Jewish voters and other voters vote. I would not at this point say to you that the Jewish community is voting either one way or another."

In that connection, Squadron also said, "I think the President's appeal to Jewish voters has been relatively straightforward," noting the President's remarks on U.S. aid to Israel and his reasons for the U.S. abstention in the crucial United Nations Security Council vote on Jerusalem last month.

Squadron said that the President vowed to veto any action at the UN that would seek to impose sanctions against Israel. The Security Council meets Nov. 15 to consider the results of its resolution condemning Israel's Jerusalem law on which the U.S. abstained.

"The President reiterated that the U.S. will veto such sanctions," Squadron said. "The President stated very clearly for the first time that in the event of an effort to challenge the credentials of Israel, the U.S. will absolutely resist it and prevent it," Squadron said.

Headed by Squadron and Conference executive director Yehuda Hellman, all 34 member agencies of the Presidents Conference and its six observer organizations were represented at the meeting with Carter. In addition, the World Jewish Congress was represented by Edgar Bronfman, its acting president. Philip Klutznick left that post temporarily when he became U.S. Secretary of Commerce. Also present was Edward Sanders, former head of the American-Israeli Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), who is a advisor to the President.

Heavy media coverage was given Squadron's news conference on the White House grounds. Among the reporters was the Washington bureau chief of Tass, the Soviet news agency. Squadron told the reporters that the issue of the West Bank was not discussed at the meeting with Carter.

Before that meeting, the Jewish leaders breakfasted with Vice President Walter Mondale at his official residence and after seeing the President they conferred with U.S. special ambassador Sol Linowitz. Squadron denied that the "breakthrough" for resumption of the Israeli-Egyptian-U.S. autonomy talks was created for election purposes. "I don't think so," he said in reply to a question.

He said Linowitz was "quite pessimistic" during the summer over the chances of resuming the talks. But on his recent visit to Egypt and Israel when he "discussed the substance 'tachlis' (which translated means brass tacks) he received cooperation" from Premier Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat, Squadron said.

He also reported that, with respect to the Security Council resolution, Carter "felt abstention was an absolutely necessary action by the U.S. in order to keep open prospects for further peace negotiations." He observed, however, "I think many people in the room feel that the U.S. should take a more vigorous stand with respect to politization and really what amounts to an attack on the peace process in the UN and that the proper muscular response would have been a veto."

Squadron emphasized that it was pointed out to the President that the American Jewish community is united on Jewish sovereignty over Jerusalem and that this sovereignty "should be recognized."

Squadron also said that Carter "has not used" U.S. aid to Israel to "twist Israel's arms toward concessions" and that the President declared he "kept the security and survival of Israel always in mind." In that connection, Squadron added, Carter said "if I had vetoed the resolution in the UN it would have gotten me more political mileage but I don't think that was the right thing to do from Israel's point of view."

War Option Closed According To Gemassy

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — Former Egyptian War Minister, Gen. Abdul Ghani al-Gamassy, who served as Egypt's chief of operations during the Yom Kippur War, said recently that there is no longer an option of war between Israel and Egypt.

Gamassy spoke in a telephone interview with the Israel Army Radio, commemorating the seventh anniversary of the war. It was the first time Gamassy gave an interview to an Israeli news source since President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem in November, 1977.

Gamassy said the Yom Kippur War was a turning point in the Arab-Israeli conflict, in that it eventually led to the peace agreement between Israel and Egypt. He refrained from making specific comments on the Yom Kippur War, merely saying that as far as he was concerned the war was con-

Women's Hadassah Honors Casgrain

MONTREAL, (JTA) — 300 members of the national Hadassah-WIZO and the Montreal Hadassah chapter honored Senator Therese Casgrain here for her services to humanity and for her staunch friendship for Israel and the Jewish people. Mrs. Casgrain, who is 82, has participated in various international congresses for the rights of women and has visited Jerusalem several times where she struck up a personal friendship with the late Golda Meir and other leading Israeli personalities.

Yeshayahu Anug, Israel's Ambassador to Canada, praised the Senator and stressed the importance for old friends of Israel to fight the onslaught launched against Israel which is also an onslaught against the West and its permanent values.

Miriam Small, president of Hadassah-WIZO, presented Mrs. Casgrain with a scroll mentioning that her name has been inscribed on the pillar of gifts at a Hadassah-WIZO vocational high school in Israel.

Thanking the Hadassah-WIZO membership for the honor, Mrs. Casgrain issued a strong appeal in favor of a united Canada. "I joined you and you join us," she said, to the applause of the audience.

Dulzin, Katzir To Head New WZO Group

TEL AVIA, (JTA) — Leon Dulzin, chairman of the World Zionist Organization and Jewish Agency Executives, and former Israel President Ephraim Katzir will head a new WZO group to promote Zionism throughout the diaspora.

Dulzin said that he believed an effort must be made to reach Jewish intellectuals abroad because of the attack on Zionism throughout the world. He said it is intended to get some of the best minds among Jews abroad to give attention to the problems facing Zionism and the Jewish people.

The project is modeled on the annual seminar held in the home of the President of Israel and the monthly study groups on diaspora Jewry which have evolved from this seminar. There are seminars now functioning in New York under Prof. Mervin Verbit, in Boston under Prof. David Landes, in Toronto under Prof. Emil Fackenheim, and in Britain under Prof. Martin Gilbert. Plans call for additional seminars in California, South Africa, France and Argentina.

Prof. Moshe Davis, of Hebrew University's Institute of Contemporary Jewry, will head the program's executive board and will be responsible for preparing the subjects for discussion. Plans call for a study circle set up in each city which will include 40 persons meeting monthly.

Israeli Commandos Engage In Confrontation

TEL AVIV, (JTA) — Israeli naval commandos carried out a surprise raid on terrorist targets in the south Lebanese port of Tyre and the nearby Rashidiyah refugee camp, a military spokesman has announced. The units carried out their mission and returned safely to their bases, the announcement said.

The raid was the first of its kind on Tyre, a stronghold of Palestinian terrorists. A similar raid was conducted against the port of Sidon some time ago. According to Lebanese sources, the Israeli force in the attack consisted of four naval craft and a helicopter and achieved surprise but later encountered heavy fire from terrorist shore batteries and anti-aircraft guns.

Israeli sources gave no estimate of the casualties inflicted on the terrorists. United Nations sources in Lebanon said one child was killed and 34 people were injured in the Israeli attack.

PCJ Reports Atrocities Against Women

TEL AVIV, (JTA) — The Public Committee for Jews in Arab Lands has said that it has received reports of atrocities against Jewish women in Syria. The reports stated that young Jewish women have been separated forcibly from their husbands by Syrian soldiers and then raped.

The Public Committee did not divulge where the reports came from nor where the incidents occurred. It did say that according to the reports Jews have become victims in the struggle between the Syrian army and the Moslem Brotherhood.

The Committee said it would launch a world-wide campaign immediately after the High Holy Days on behalf of Jews in Arab countries, especially on behalf of the 4500 Jews still in Syria.

The campaign is scheduled to reach its climax on International Human Rights Day at the beginning of December.

Israel-Latin American Ties Still Firm Following Withdrawal Of 11 Embassies From Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The withdrawal of 11 Latin American embassies from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv in recent weeks, in reaction to the Jerusalem law, has been a grievous blow to Israel. But, in the view of Avraham Argov, a leading expert on Israel-South American relations, it does not necessarily presage a general worsening or even weakening in the close ties that bind Israel with many of the Latin American countries.

Argov, who is director of the Latin American section in the World Zionist Organization, told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency in an interview that he hoped and expected that the damage would be restricted to the embassy moves and would not spread to other areas of the relationships.

Basically, he stressed, pro-Israel sentiments were still very strong in South and Central America, both among the governments of the continent and among the peoples. "The man in the street in most Latin American countries supports Israel," Argov said.

Himself an immigrant from Latin America, Argov has several times revisited the continent. His next trip will be this fall, to Sao Paulo, Brazil, where he is to help organize a conference of Jewish and Zionist leaders from all over the continent.

The conference, Nov. 9 to 13, will be a major watershed in Latin American Jewish affairs. Organized jointly by the WZO and the World Jewish Congress, it will be addressed by Leon Dulzin, chairman of the WZO and Jewish Agency Executives, and by Edgar Bronfman, acting president of the WJC.

Argov ascribes the embassy moves to political pressure, rather than merely direct oil threats. He points out that two of the countries involved, Venezuela and Ecuador, produce their own oil and are therefore not susceptible to oil blackmail. Rather, the Arabs successfully mounted a campaign of political pressure using the Jerusalem law as its pretext.

Citing the bases of traditionally good relations between Israel and Latin American states, Argov noted particularly the international cooperation programs with many of the smaller countries. Guatemala, Colombia and Costa Rica are among those that benefit the most from Israeli projects. The aid is conducted through three main channels inside Israel: the Mt. Carmel Institute, the Histadrut's Institute for Development Aid, and the Hebrew University's agriculture faculty at Rehovot which specializes in overseas aid courses.

In addition, there are Israeli experts in such fields as irrigation, cooperative economy, agriculture, youth movements and water planning serving in a number of Latin American countries.

Argov also underscores a common experience of, and reaction to, terrorism as a factor tending to strengthen political understanding between Israel and some of the Latin American governments. Some of the Latin American terrorist organizations actually have proven links with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

This factor is true mainly of the right wing military regimes in the southern part of the continent. It is a fact, perhaps sad but true, that in the more northerly states that have a more democratic political system, Israel finds itself sometimes under attack from left-wing parties that tend to sympathize more with PLO and general Palestinian aspirations.

PRaises Actions Of Jewish Communities

The actions of Jewish communities in several of the Latin American countries to the Jerusalem episode has been noteworthy, says Argov, especially in view of the difficult political situations and constraints in some of those countries.

In Uruguay, for instance, the community invited former Premier Yitzhak Rabin on a visit to Argentina, to address a public gathering, and 4000 persons (the community numbers 45,000) turned out to hear him. The gathering was an impressive public display of solidarity with Israel and with Israel's stand on Jerusalem.

In Chile, the presidents of the Jewish community and of the local Zionist Federation met with President Augusto Pinochet in an effort to dissuade him from moving the embassy, or at least to persuade him to minimize the damage to Israeli-Chile relations. (Chile's 28,000 Jews and the country's sizeable Arab community traditionally try to avoid the Israel-Arab conflict in the Middle East from marring inter-communal relations within the country.)

The Jewish Heritage A Story Of The Family Intertwined

(Ed. Note: the following excerpts are taken from correspondence between a father, who lives here in Rhode Island, and his son, who lives on the West Coast. Although the years and the miles separate them, they are both acutely aware of their heritage and the impact which it plays upon their lives; while at the same time they understand the complexities of a present and future which, although uncertain, will eventually yield to a peace, not only of state, but of soul.)

Dear Dad,

I wanted to write and tell you about the book on Israel that I've been reading, Battleground, by Samuel Katz. It was given to me by a friend whose brother lives in realizes that this is also true of the other major religions (though it manifests itself in different ways).

The history of Christianity and Islam has been one of empire-building and coercion. The Franks, Saxons, Goths, back to the Romans — all those who make up the ancestry of modern Europe, were barbarians who filled the pages of history with blood. The Arabs' accomplishments in the 7th and 8th centuries are equal to none except perhaps Attila the Hun. The chapter of the Crusades is filled with destruction and rape. Yet, it appears that even to these people, religion had a mediating influence bringing codification of behavior, and supplying the social reins to ensure survival.

All the while, the Jews were busy — dispersed, persecuted, subjugated, but always studying and reading the Book — and waiting. Is it any wonder that the first printing press in the East was made at Safed in 1577?

The will of God manifests itself in the passionate conviction of human beings. It is this conviction that postulates the double Helix Chromosome and the existence of a subatomic particle with no electrical charge (the neutrino), and then "discovers" it.

It is perhaps this kind of conviction that will be needed to bring peace to the Middle East, a recognition of the austere realities of peoples lives and their profound need for identification with their heritage in the midst of an ever-shrinking depersonalizing, technological world. It is history that has given the land that is Holy to three religions to the people whose beliefs spawned the other two — as conservators — as husbands.

Israel has just announced plans to build a canal from the Dead Sea to the Mediterranean to provide hydro-electric power in 10 years — Amazing? Let me know if you are able to get a copy of Battleground.

Paul

Dear Paul,

Many thanks for your splendid letter which I have read and re-read with great appreciation and awe. Appreciation, for its beautiful style and eloquence, and awe at its profundity and insightful grasp of the paradox of Jewish History — the struggle with the realities of persecution and suffering, while holding, at the same time to the concept of God as merciful Father and redeemer.

You have also understood the paradox of religious faith and expression as exemplified by Judaism, Islam and Christianity — on the one hand, a potent force for cohesiveness and humanity, and on the other, the cause of chauvinism, isolation, and when taken to extremes, the subjugation and destruction of others.

It is our pride that as Jews, though at times chauvinistic and isolated from the mainstream, we have rarely withdrawn voluntarily from society (our isolation being forced upon us by persecution and rejection), and have never engaged in Crusades or Holy Wars.

Some have expressed fears that the militaristic posture which has been forced upon Israel may become permanent and may herald a change in our fundamental peace-loving character. This notion is belied, however, by the concern of the Israeli government and people for the welfare of its Arab citizens, for its efforts at attaining peaceful relations with its neighbors, and by the Israeli soldier himself who, while accepting his martial role with pride, nevertheless looks forward to his eventual integration into society as a civilian.

I am convinced that peace will someday come not only as a result of the "inexorable conviction of passionate human beings", but also as a result of the inexorable love of God for His creatures and the very special role that He has assigned to the Jewish people.

I shall try to obtain a copy of Battleground so that I can share your satisfaction with the book.

I hope and pray that you will have an opportunity in the near future to visit Israel. I am sure that it will have a potent effect upon you, as it did upon me, and I trust that you will experience the same mystical feeling of return, as I did, especially when I stood atop of Massada.

Dad

Israel. It is not only an eloquent and passionate statement on the struggle of the Jewish people to create a nation out of a geographic and political wasteland, but a concise and well-documented history of the complex events that have served to blur the eye of moral rectitude when one seeks to compassionately consider "humanity" in this painful drama.

One is tempted to believe that, with respect to the contingencies of history, it's a miracle that Israel exists at all. Yet one can clearly see at work the inexorable conviction of passionate human beings of the meaning behind their history in spite of the overwhelming forces of chaos that could have many times brought them to believe only in their own abandonment.

While Israel is indeed a secular state, it serves as a testament in the 20th century to the power of Religion and a people's desire for a voice. It presents difficulties when one

New Galilee Settlement Inaugurated

TEL AVIV, (JTA) — Shechenya, a new settlement populated by immigrants from English-speaking countries, was formally inaugurated last week in the Segov region of western Galilee. It is one of six new settlements in the area that will be based on industry rather than agriculture. Each will have a manufacturing plant at its center.

The settlers include members of the Massada "garin" (settlement nucleus) from the U.S. who came to the Segov region three years ago and lived in temporary quarters.

Because of the long wait for permanent housing, many left and the group almost disintegrated. But a number of families stuck it out and were among the settlers who moved into their new homes yesterday.

Lord Carrington Seeks To Quell Disquiet Over British Mid-East Policy

LONDON (JTA) — Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington intervened personally in a bid to quell the Anglo-Jewish community's disquiet over Britain's and Western Europe's policy on the Middle East.

Addressing a crowded meeting of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, he sought to counter Jewish fears that Britain was undermining Israel's security by encouraging the Palestine Liberation Organization and that it was succumbing to Arab economic pressures.

The press was excluded from the meeting but a press conference immediately afterwards was held by Carrington who told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that Britain "fully understands Israel's anxiety over security."

He denied that the Venice declaration issued last June by the nine European Economic Community states, to which Britain subscribes, was a pro-Arab document. The declaration was "even-handed" and its basis was that the Palestinians must recognize Israel in secure borders and that "Israel must recognize the rights of the Palestinians," Carrington said. These two conditions were "basic to any possible solution," he noted.

Europe alone could not solve the problem and it was essential that the United States should also be involved, he added. Britain was also "utterly opposed" to suggestions that Israel should be expelled from the United Nations.

Commenting on his meeting with Jewish communal leaders, he admitted that he had failed to eliminate their suspicions of British policy, but added that "not everybody in the hall had disagreed." However, Greville Janner, the Board's President, said Carrington had failed to alter the Board's general feelings, even though this was the first time that a British Foreign Secretary had ever addressed the leadership of the Jewish community.

Asked about the progress of the EEC's intervention in the Middle East, Carrington said that European foreign ministers would meet again at the United Nations in New York.

Defending the EEC's call for the PLO to be included in negotiations, he said the PLO represented "a very large body of Palestinians" and attributed its extremism to the Palestinians' long frustration. Israel should look at the many examples of decolonization in the British Empire involving former terrorist bodies, he added.

Lansky To Visit Israel Following Court Appeal

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The Interior Ministry has lifted the ban on an entry permit for Meyer Lansky. The 79-year-old Lansky, allegedly connected with organized crime in the U.S., has not been allowed to visit Israel since the early 1970s. His repeated requests to come here as a tourist were turned down because he was considered "dangerous to the public welfare."

The Ministry changed its mind only after Lansky recently appealed to Israel's Supreme Court which handed down a show cause order compelling the Interior Ministry to explain why he should not be permitted to visit the country on a tourist visa. Eight years ago Lansky wanted to stay here on an immigrant visa but was turned down by the Interior Ministry. After he failed to obtain a court order against the Ministry he was expelled from the country.

Last June Interior Minister Yosef Burg granted Lansky a tourist visa, but later changed his mind. Lansky then appealed to the Supreme Court which gave Burg 30 days to respond. The 30 days expired just before Rosh Hashanah.

A senior official in the Ministry explained that the Ministry took into consideration Lansky's age and poor health. In a telephone interview with Israel TV from his Miami home, Lansky expressed gratitude at the decision and praised the courage of the Interior Ministry. He said he does not care if he is given an immigrant or a tourist visa, as long as he is granted permission to visit Israel.

Investigation Deepens In Abu Hatzeira Affair

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — Moshe Gabbai, a long-time close associate of Religious Affairs Minister Aharon Abu Hatzeira and a senior official of the ministry, has been remanded in custody for 15 days by a Tel Aviv district court. It was the first such court action since the investigation began several months ago of allegations that Abu Hatzeira and other ministry officials misappropriated funds.

Gabbai was jailed at the request of the police. The Tel Aviv magistrate who ordered him held after examining evidence in his chambers, said there was sufficient prima facie material to warrant the remand. He emphasized, however, that it should not be construed as an indication of guilt.

A police attorney told the court that Gabbai is suspected of taking kickbacks from several yeshivas which received unwarranted and disproportionate increases in their allocations from the Religious Affairs Ministry. The police said he is also suspected of bribery in a recent local election. Gabbai, who was held for questioning for 48 hours before his remand, reportedly has refused to cooperate with the police. Under Israeli law, a suspect may be held in custody for a maximum of 15 days. But the court can renew the remand at 15-day intervals as long as the investigation continues.

The case took an unexpected turn when Israel's two chief rabbis stated that on religious grounds one of the chief witnesses against Gabbai could not testify. He is Deputy Mayor Yisrael Gottlieb of Bnei Brak, an Orthodox township north of Tel Aviv, who is himself a suspect in the case and had offered to turn state's evidence.

Ashkenazic Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren and Sephardic Chief Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, whose opinions were solicited separately, both insisted that the institution of state's evidence was counter to Jewish religious law. According to the chief rabbis, by admitting his own guilt, the witness disqualified himself from giving acceptable evidence against anyone else. They cited Biblical and Talmudic texts to that effect.

National Religious Party circles observed that Gottlieb would not be able to transgress against the chief rabbis' injunction without losing all vestiges of his standing and his position in the party. The NRP and the entire Orthodox community in Israel has been shaken by the scandal involving the Religious Affairs Ministry.

Gottlieb himself has not commented on the chief rabbis' stricture. If he refuses to testify he faces criminal proceedings himself. It was not immediately clear to what extent the case against Gabbai hinged on Gottlieb's testimony nor was it known to what extent the entire fabric of the case against him and Abu Hatzeira rests on Gottlieb's evidence.

According to the police, Abu Hatzeira channeled ministry funds to his own faction of the NRP. The ministry channels funds to local religious councils, religious courts and religious schools. It has been accused of allocating funds to non-existent religious institutions.

Meanwhile, in a number of towns with many Oriental Jews, mass receptions were organized in honor of Abu Hatzeira. Several Sephardic leaders from Europe and the U.S. arrived in Israel to meet with Premier Menachem Begin to discuss the investigation and its impact on Israel's Sephardic population.

Nation Takes Steps To Curb Galloping Inflation

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — Finance Minister Yigal Hurwitz's economic cabinet has decided to stretch the national budget to bring it in line with galloping inflation and to take tough measures against employers who exceed the government's wage guidelines.

The move will add IL 900 billion to the budget. Original estimates had projected an IL 653 billion increase. The Treasury reportedly calculated the higher sum on the basis of a 120 per cent inflation rate. The adjusted budget will be 125-130 per cent higher than its nominal value in terms of average prices for fiscal 1979, compared to a 65 per cent increase originally calculated.

It does not take into account the proposed package deal now under discussion by the government, Histadrut and employers. It anticipates a 3 per cent drop in consumption and a gross national product increase of only 3 per cent, due mainly to greater exports. Hurwitz, meanwhile, continues to insist on further cuts in the various ministerial budgets.

One of the main problems in trying to balance the budget is an expected 5 per cent shortfall of tax revenues, amounting to an estimated IL 20 billion. This has been explained by the government's austerity program which has led to a considerable drop in imports. Imports of consumer and durable goods have declined by 25 per cent.

Hurwitz has ordered the internal revenue service to make good the tax shortfall by tougher collection measures. Employers and institutions which increase their power may be personalized by an employer's tax levy higher than the present 7 per cent. Similarly, employers who grant their workers more than the 15 per cent wage increase stipulated by the government will be penalized by not being allowed to make the additional expenditure tax deductible.

This measure would be directed against employers in the service sector, such as banks and other financial institutions which, reportedly, have already exceeded the 15 per cent wage ceiling. It is in line with the government's policy to shift service workers to industry and export-oriented jobs.

Lebanese Couple Elope, Seek Sanctuary In Israel

TEL AVIV, (JTA) — A suspicious looking small boat making its way to Israeli waters from the direction of Lebanon was found by the Israeli navy patrol boat that intercepted it to be carrying not terrorists but a young Lebanese couple seeking sanctuary in Israel in order to marry. The eloping couple was taken to Haifa port where they told their story to reporters.

The young man and woman said they met a year ago and fell in love. But her father, a fisherman, refused to sanction their marriage after months of pleading nor would her stepmother relent. The man who worked as a tourist guide in Beirut, decided that flight was the only solution. On Sunday morning he and his fiancée put to sea in his boat and were picked up 10 hours later by the Israeli sailors.

Their names were not published. They told reporters they decided to flee Lebanon because "it is not quiet there. We seek love, not war," they said.

Successful Investing

A Growth
Stock Portfolio

by David R. Sargent

Q: I am a grandparent interested in setting up an education fund for my grandchildren. Could you suggest a few stocks for above-average growth over the next 15 to 20 years?

A: To start with, I would recommend you invest in five quality stocks from a variety of industries with annual earnings and dividend growth rates of approximately 15 per cent. Choosing from the health care, energy, technology, consumer goods, and forest products groups, all of which are favorably positioned for good growth over the next decade and beyond, I would suggest the following stocks: American Hospital Supply, Conoco, Raytheon, PepsiCo, and Weyerhaeuser. All of these large capitalization, NYSE-listed stocks are currently attractive for purchase.

This will provide you with a minimum-risk, growth-oriented portfolio which will not require close supervision. You might also opt for dividend reinvestment until the income is needed to pay tuition. Dividend reinvestment plans are offered by each of the above companies except Conoco.

A separate account will have to be set up for each child, under the Uniform Gift to Minors Act. The children's mother or other relative should be named as custodian. It is important that you, the donor, name another person as custodian to avoid any tax complications.

Q: I noticed in the news recently that Diamond Shamrock, whose stock you recommended for purchase as a gasohol play, was rebuffed in its attempt to take over Tesoro Petroleum. Would you still buy the stock now? M.W. Mass.

A: Diamond Shamrock does own about 4.5 per cent of Tesoro's outstanding common stock, but there has as yet been no confirmation of DIA's intent to acquire the oil company. True, over 50 per cent of DIA 1980 earnings will come from its oil interests, but Tesoro is not vital to its future.

I still favor the purchase of Diamond Shamrock, an attractive cyclical growth stock. Both its natural resource and chemical operations hold excellent long term growth potential. Earnings growth over the past ten years has averaged 18 per cent annually, and management aims at 20 per cent for the future. Dividends should increase at a rate outpacing inflation.

Although Diamond Shamrock may continue to look for chances to expand its oil operations, I do not think this tidbit of news will have any effect on the stock's price appreciation prospects.

Religious Conditions Improve In N.Y. Prison

NEW YORK (JTA) — There is a regular minyan of Jewish prisoners at the Greenhaven prison in Stormville, the New York State maximum security facility, and an area has been set aside in the prison for inmates who want to don phylacteries and prayer-shawls, two Agudath Israel representatives said, reporting on a recent visit.

Chanoch Lubling and Michael Lamm visited the prison in their capacities as members of the Orthodox agency's commission on legislation and civic action. They met with prison officials, with the local chaplain and with several inmates.

They reported to a meeting of the commission that "religious conditions at the prison were greatly improved over the past year as a result of efforts by the organization and others to sensitize New York State officials" about the needs of Orthodox Jews.

Lubling also told the commission that the prison maintained special facilities for kosher foods and that those who want to keep kosher had been provided a room as a separate dining room.

A spokesman told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that there were always prisoners in transit but that the average number of Jewish inmates is around 25. At the time of the visit of the two Agudath Israel representatives, 10 prisoners joined regularly in the separate area for prayers and kept kosher. Phylacteries and prayer-shawls are given to the prisoners on request and retrieved by prison officials after use.

The observant Jewish prisoners have available canned kosher foods with acceptable rabbinic supervision. They can use a microwave oven in the prison kitchen to heat pre-packaged kosher food packages.

Emigrants Decline As Restrictions Tighten

NEW YORK (JTA) — In what the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry (SSSJ) and Union of Councils for Soviet Jews (UCSJ) called "an unprecedented move that may well seal the small crack in the iron door still open," emigration authorities in the Ukrainian city of Kharkov have reportedly notified Jewish exit applicants that if they are refused visas, they must sign a declaration that they have been warned that they cannot apply again, and that they will get a job within a month.

Normally, a refusnik can reapply every half year, but those who are left without jobs are often threatened with imprisonment for "parasitism." In the past few years, restrictive emigration policies have been in Ukrainian cities, then spread throughout the USSR, the SSSJ and the UCSJ reported.

Recent emigration has steadily dropped as restrictions grow ever higher, the SSSJ and UCSJ said. Tens of thousands of Jews have been refused even the opportunity to apply to leave because, they are told, they do not have an immediate family living in Israel. Other Jews who manage to apply may wait for months on end without receiving an answer.

Mr. Begin: No Change In Attitude Regarding Egyptian Autonomy Concessions

Maintaining his ever-present hard line attitude toward Israeli policy decisions, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, when asked recently if he planned any goodwill gestures toward Egypt to help President Anwar el-Sadat obtain a graceful way back into autonomy negotiations, stated emphatically that "Poly is not gesticulation" and thus not only circumvented the question but also reaffirmed what both his admirers and his detractors have long known; he does what he says and he says what he does.

There are those in both Washington and Cairo however, who would be eager to see even a slight trace of duplicity from Mr. Begin regarding the status of Jerusalem and of the occupied West Bank and Gaza, with their 1.2 million Palestinian Arab inhabitants.

With his gestures constantly coinciding with his policies, diplomats involved in the complex issues of Israeli-Egyptian relations are in a constant strain trying to create a positive atmosphere between the two countries.

A perfect case in point is when the Prime Minister states that the West Bank, captured from Jordan in the 1967 War, is an integral part of the biblical land of Israel and will never be a Palestinian state, he goes ahead and builds settlements there for Jews, and then deploys the army to protect them.

Though some of his actions are of a symbolic nature, they do serve as repeated reminders of the premise upon which the Begin Government is based.

In another instance it was he who stated that all of Jerusalem, including the mostly Arab sector in the east city which was annexed after the 1967 War, is to be Israel's eternal capital, and immediately went about laying plans to move his own office to the eastern side of the city; he also went along with the recent legislation which formalized the city's status.

Palestinians, who, in an odd way, are delighted with the workings of the Begin government argue that the only difference between Mr. Begin and the opposition Labor Party, which cultivates a more moderate image, is that the Prime Minister tells the truth. And the truth, they say, should be known.

It was in part to soften some of the edges of the truth that President Carter's special envoy to the Middle East, Sol Linowitz, had conferred with Mr. Begin two weeks ago. It was his intention to try and persuade the Prime Minister to relax his attitudes so that President Sadat would be provided with the opportunity to resume the stalled autonomy talks, which the Egyptian President had broken off following the passage of the Jerusalem bill in the Israeli Parliament. The talks, which stem from the Camp David accord, focus on Palestinian self-administration in the occupied territories. There has been little progress in these talks however.

During the meeting between the Special envoy and Mr. Begin, Linowitz had discussed a delay in the planned office move, a limit on new West Bank settlements, the release of some Palestinian prisoners, and a firm commitment to Israel's policy of leaving Moslem holy sites in Jerusalem under Moslem administration.

Following the meeting, however, in perhaps a perfect example of the effects of insincere gestures on the part of Mr. Begin, both he and his aides have consistently denied that any Egyptian concessions have been made.

David Kimche, Director General of the Foreign Ministry, stated that the release of a small number of prisoners is possible, but in an effort to deter any thoughts of government flexibility, added that this gesture was simply part of a program of periodic releases and was not linked with Egyptian sensibilities.

Mr. Begin has also made no move to postpone his office location, and when questioned both he and his aides merely grow vague about the timing.

The settlement issue however, remains uncertain. When the Prime Minister stated to Mr. Linowitz that there would be only four more settlements, he was not offering any concessions to either the United States or Egypt but was simply stating statistics from the original 1977 settlement plan which he had instigated soon after taking office.

According to Uri Bar-On, assistant to Ariel Sharon, chairman of the Ministerial Committee on Settlements who is also Minister of Agriculture, the 1977 plan included a general outline of 50 new settlements to be built on the West Bank and Gaza through April 1981. It was decided at that time that each individual settlement required Cabinet approval regarding the site selected, funding and settlers. All but four have obtained that approval, Mr. Bar-On explained.

Sharon Murder Attempt

TEL AVIV, (JTA) — A 25-year-old Gaza woman and two men she allegedly recruited to murder Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon have been formally charged before a military tribunal in Gaza. According to Israeli intelligence sources which uncovered the plot, the woman, Suad el-Bahissi, was the link between a terrorist organization and the hired assassins.

She is accused of employing Saleh Jamil el-Bahissi, 21, a relative, and Ottoman Ibrahim Mubarek, 23, to infiltrate Sharon's farm in the south of Israel and carry out the murder mission.

The two men, also residents of the Gaza Strip, allegedly joined the terrorist group and went to Amman, Jordan to train in handling explosives. They were ordered to shoot Sharon with a pistol purchased for 100 Jordanian Dinars.

Carter Optimistic Over Negotiations

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — President Carter has declared that he is "determined that progress for a summit meeting 'between himself, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and interfere with substantive negotiations' for West Bank-Gaza Strip autonomy."

Carter told a nationally-televised White House press conference that he was optimistic on the Middle East situation because "top level negotiations" were now going on in Washington between Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali and U.S. special envoy Sol Linowitz.

Alleged War Criminal Stands Denaturalization Trial In U.S.

PHILADELPHIA, (JTA) — Wolodymir Osidach took the witness stand in his denaturalization trial in Federal Court here trying to counter U.S. government charges that his wartime activities were responsible for the deaths of thousands of Jews in the Nazi-occupied Ukraine and that he falsified this information when he applied to enter the U.S. in 1949 and again when he became a naturalized citizen in 1963.

If U.S. Federal District Court Judge Louis Bechtel, who is hearing the case without a jury, finds Osidach, 76, of Philadelphia, guilty of misrepresenting his past, the defendant could be stripped of his citizenship and face deportation proceedings.

Osidach's defense attorney, Louis Konowal, argued in his opening statement before a courtroom filled to capacity, that his client was no more than a clerk in the Ukrainian police and that he had nothing to do with the rounding up, imprisonment or murder of Jews.

The trial opened with prosecutor Neal Sher, deputy director of the Office of Special Investigations in the U.S. Department of Justice, stating that, according to the law, a certificate of naturalization must be cancelled if it can be shown to have been illegally procured by wilful concealment or misrepresentation.

Osidach, he contended, had already admitted at pre-trial hearings that he concealed his pre-war arrest and prison record, as well as his wartime activities, to gain entry into the United States. When Osidach applied for entry under the Displaced Persons Act in 1949, Sher charged, he maintained he had been a dairy technician in Tomaszow, Poland from 1936 through 1944.

That, the government insists, was a lie. Osidach has since conceded that he was a dairy technician "for only a few weeks in 1941."

"He voluntarily left that job, the government charged, to enter the Ukrainian police in the small town of Rawa Ruska.

He later rose to the rank of police chief. "I couldn't say I was working as a policeman," Osidach testified through an interpreter. "I was taken to the police office because I considered myself a Ukrainian clerk."

Osidach, a staunch Ukrainian nationalist, has asserted that his pre-war arrest record stems from his anti-Communist activities with the outlawed Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists (OUN) and that the current denaturalization proceedings are a continuation of the harassment.

The prosecution will call witnesses from the United States, Canada and Israel to show that Osidach's wartime role was more than that of a clerk who had little or no contact with his German superiors. The prosecution also intends to utilize videotaped testimony from witnesses in the Soviet Union.

The first prosecution witness, Raul Hilberg, professor of political science at the University of Vermont and author of "The Destruction of the European Jews," testified on this point. "Would it be possible for anyone with that rank (police chief) ... and in that village (Rawa Ruska) ... could have avoided working with the Germans?" asked Rodney Smith, one of the Justice Department prosecutors.

"In my opinion," replied Hilberg, who was granted "expert witness status," "it would have been utterly impossible not to have become involved." Hilberg also identified documents listing Osidach as "Hauptwachmann" (police chief) in Ruska during 1942-43 and naming 10 officers in his command as well as other papers submitted as Osidach's medical benefits and employment insurance forms while on the Nazi payroll.

Tadeusz Sadowski, of Silver Spring, Md., a specialist on Polish and Russian law for the Library of Congress, also testified for the prosecution. He identified and validated documents attesting to Osidach's arrest and trial for OUN activities in pre-war Poland.

Embassies

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Jerusalem is now entirely without foreign embassies following the announcement that the last two remaining embassies in the city, those of Guatemala and the Dominican Republic, are to move to the Tel Aviv area. In all, following the Jerusalem law, 13 embassies have moved from the capital: 11 Latin Americans, Holland and Haiti.

The Foreign Ministry here said it could only restate its view that the moves represented a surrender to Arab oil pressure. Indeed, several of the Latin American countries involved, as well as Holland, have candidly admitted that this is the case.

Canadian PM To Visit Saudi Arabia, Jordan

MONTREAL, (JTA) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has accepted in principle an invitation to visit Saudi Arabia and is expected to go there later this fall or early in the winter.

The existence since 1975 of a bilateral commission for trade and technical cooperation between Canada and Saudi Arabia and the fact that eastern Canada imports 40 per cent of its oil from Saudi Arabia, makes this visit particularly important, Canadian officials said. The commercial exchange between the two countries has reached the $2 billion mark and is increasing. There are frequent exchanges of visits between Canadian and Saudi businessmen.

With Canada due to host the summit meeting of prime ministers and leaders of the industrial world in Ottawa in July, 1981, informed circles affirm that Trudeau will use the occasion to try to accommodate the views of the European Economic Community (EEC) leaders with those of Canada and the U.S. with respect to the Arab-Israeli conflict and Middle East problems in general.

After leaving Saudi Arabia, Trudeau will visit Amman, Jordan. The Jordanian government will be hosting an Arab summit meeting in mid-November and is keenly awaiting Trudeau's visit.

The Canadian leader is a personal friend of King Hussein and it is believed the Jordanians hope to steer him toward a more favorable attitude with respect to the role of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the "moderate" Arab states in resolving the Middle East conflict.

Syrian Jews Hold Massive Prayer Vigil Near Damascus

NEW YORK, (JTA) — A daylong prayer vigil last month by hundreds of Syrian Jews at the ancient synagogue of Jorbar near Damascus, caused the Syrian authorities to delay their planned take-over of the shrine which marks the site where Elijah anointed Elisha to succeed him as Prophet, it was reported by Abraham Dwek, president of the Committee for the Rescue of Syrian Jewry.

Dwek informed the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that the Syrian Ministry of Education, which plans to enlarge its compound in Jorbar, suddenly attempted to seize the synagogue, which probably would be leveled. The Ministry acted despite warnings by the attorney representing the Jewish community that such a move would have international repercussions.

Dwek said he has sent telegrams to President Carter and Secretary General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations urging them to send their personal appeals to President Hafez Assad of Syria in the most appropriate way, requesting his protection of the synagogue, known in Arabic as "Maqam Al Khudr."

Dwek pointed out that the Alawite Moslem sect of which Assad is a member, reveres Elijah as "Al Khudr" — The Prophet.

Samaritans Of Israel Visit U.S. In Search Of Support

NEW YORK, (JTA) — Two representatives of the ancient Samaritan community in Israel arrived here last week to begin a four-week tour of the United States to acquaint Americans, particularly Jews, with the customs and traditions of their community.

The two Samaritans, Menashe Marchiv, 41, the secretary general of the Samaritan community in Holon, and Meir Sasoni, 31, said in an interview with the Jewish Telegraphic Agency here, that they consider their mission to the United States to be of far-reaching importance to the future of their community.

"We are here to raise money to build a community center and a research institute of Samaritan history and life in Holon," Marchiv said. He claimed that the project will cost an estimated $350,000 and that the Israeli government has allocated about $50,000 for the project.

According to Marchiv and Sasoni, the lack of a community center might be a major contributing factor in the demise of the Samaritan community as a distinct group. "We are concerned about this possibility," Sasoni said, "and we believe that a community and cultural center will be a unifying force for the Samaritan community in general and for the young generation in particular."

The Samaritans reside in Holon, near Tel Aviv, and in Shechem (Nablus) on the West Bank. The two communities have about 600 members. Marchiv said that during their visit to the U.S., he and Sasoni are representing only the community in Holon.

The Samaritans claim to be descendants of the tribes of Ephraim and Menashe and part of the tribe of Levi. Their original capital was in Samaria and originally they called themselves "Bene Yisrael" or "Shomerim" (the "keepers" of the Law). The Samaritans did not participate in the Jewish revolt of 66-70, but rose independently from time to time against the Romans.

The Samaritans believe in Moses as the sole Prophet and the only part of the Bible they accept is the Pentateuch. They claim that the place chosen by God for His sanctuary is Mt. Gerizim, the holiest place in the history and tradition of the Samaritans and that Passover can only be celebrated on Mt. Gerizim where the lambs are sacrificed, roasted and eaten. On the seventh day they make a pilgrimage to the mountain, reciting sections of the Pentateuch.

With the establishment of the State of Israel the Samaritan community enjoyed the patronage of Yitzhak Ben-Zvi, the second President of Israel. As a sign of gratitude, the Samaritan community plans to name the new community center they hope to build as the Yitzhak Ben-Zvi Samaritan Community Center.

The tightly knit Samaritan community in Israel is represented by a High Priest (Kohen Gadol) and a committee of five. Their children receive their education in State schools, but their religious studies are conducted within the community "at the private home of the Kohen due to the lack of appropriate buildings," Marchiv said.

Both Marchiv and Sasoni emphasized that the Samaritans are equal citizens in Israel "who enjoy equality of rights and obligations," including the mandatory service in the Israeli army.

Due to the small number of Samaritans and their special customs, "it is imperative for us to live together in a closeknit community," Sasoni said. He explained that a Samaritan is required to live within his own community and use its synagogue.

There is only one Samaritan synagogue in the country, and that one is in Holon. This has caused a severe housing problem for about 50 Samaritan young couples who cannot reside elsewhere in Israel and cannot afford presently to build apartments in the vicinity of their community in Holon, Sasoni said.

The housing shortage and the lack of a community center are two acute problems facing the Samaritans, Marchiv and Sasoni observed. We hope, while we are in the United States, to meet with Jewish leaders and with American officials in Washington," they said, "and we hope to find someone who will listen to our cause."

Waldheim Critical

UNITED NATIONS, (JTA) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim criticized Israel directly and by implication in his annual report released last week but did not repeat his call for the creation of a Palestinian state which drew angry protests from Israelis and others when he made it in a speech to the Arab League last July.

Waldheim did renew his call for "self determination" for the Palestinian Arabs but stressed in his report that Middle East peace required that each state in the area recognize the right of all others to exist.

Key Influence

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, indicating that the West Bank-Gaza autonomy talks may be resumed as early as next week, has said that advances in the "normalization" of Egypt's relations with Israel would help "influence" the negotiations.

"If there would be real normalization," Shamir told a press conference, "it could create a better atmosphere and this could influence the negotiations." He noted that President Anwar Sadat of Egypt told him that he "sees no obstacles to full normalization in all fields: trade, joint ventures, agricultural cooperation, cultural cooperation, tourism."

Asked when normalization would happen, Shamir replied, "I'm not sure when it will take place but this is the first time we got such clear declarations."

Pointing out that Egypt, Israel and the U.S. would be resuming talks in "the next weeks," Shamir said "Then we can see the progress of normalization. Normalization is the real expression of peace between Egypt and Israel. Steps in the next few weeks can implement normalization."

Shamir, who had previously met with Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and Defense Secretary Harold Brown, returned to New York where he is expected to remain for the rest of the month to attend the UN General Assembly. Asked if he would meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the UN, as has been rumored, Shamir said, "If there will be that possibility, I will not exclude it."

Neither the site nor the date for the next autonomy meetings have been set, Shamir said. He said Israeli leaders preferred to meet in Israel or in Egypt while suggestions have been made that Washington be the site. "We won't discuss now the problem of Jerusalem," he said, responding to a question about a report in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram that Egypt has suggested its own plan for the security of Israel and the Jerusalem issue. "When Egypt proposes its agenda for the negotiations, we'll express our views," Shamir said.

Regarding the possibility of a separate arrangement for the Gaza Strip, he said "all possibilities" would be discussed when the negotiations resume. Asked if movement is "not happening in Gaza now," he replied, "not yet."

Shamir said U.S. proposals on the autonomy discussions are "under study." Asked if "anything objectionable" is contained in the proposals, he replied, "I would not say so."

The Israeli Foreign Minister was asked about President Carter's policy toward Israel. "I will not say anything in general but on specific questions we got positive answers," he said.

Pressed to elucidate on "positive answers," Shamir said: "It would be very difficult to specify. There are many problems and aspects between Israel and the U.S. I can only say that generally we got positive answers for aid and so on."

Asked about "coordination" between the U.S. and Israel, Shamir said the dialogue takes place "all the time" between the two governments. "Sometimes we agree, sometimes we disagree. It is quite normal."

Speaking of "too many enemies of the peace process in the Middle East" and "too many obstacles," Shamir said, "therefore, the help of the U.S. is necessary to overcome all those obstacles. The Egyptians need it as we need it."

After Shamir said that an agreement has been reached on 80 per cent of the powers to be vested in the autonomous authority, he was asked by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency about the State Department's view that the Arab inhabitants of East Jerusalem could vote in the West Bank elections but that would not determine the ultimate status of Jerusalem, although the Carter Administration says Jerusalem is undivided.

The reporter also asked how can Jerusalem be undivided and yet East Jerusalem be considered part of the West Bank?

"This is exactly our position," Shamir said, agreeing with the reporter. He observed that "the inhabitants of Jerusalem are part of the problem of Jerusalem" and "not part of the autonomy talks."

Small Fractions

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Few people realize the importance of petrochemicals and how little a fraction they represent in total costs of finished consumer goods, says a chemical company president.

"Forty-eight cents will buy the primary petrochemicals to make 24 ounces of nylon fiber in a square yard of household carpet that may cost $15 or more per square yard installed," said Leo H. Johnstone of Phillips Chemical.

The Year In Review

NEW YORK, (JTA) — During the year 5740 Israel found itself more isolated in the international community than ever before, deserted by almost all its allies, except the United States. Israel was under severe and unremitting fire in the United Nations by the Arab-Third World-Communist bloc for its West Bank settlement policies, the Jerusalem law, and the Palestinian question. Even the U.S. abstained on resolutions condemning Israel rather than casting a veto.

Adding to Israel's isolation was the recognition given to the Palestine Liberation Organization by many countries, including the nine-member European Economic Community, as "legitimate," "moderate" and "peace-seeking." The world conference of the UN Decade for Women in Copenhagen, originally conceived as an international forum to discuss the status of women, was politicized by pro-PLO, Arab and Third World factions and disintegrated into a barrage of anti-Israel rhetoric.

Throughout all this, however, Israel and Egypt continued to try to work out a plan for autonomy on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip within the framework of the Camp David agreements. Formal diplomatic ties were established and the two countries exchanged ambassadors. Nevertheless, Egypt suspended the autonomy talks, demanding "clarifications" from Israel regarding Jerusalem and the settlements.

By year's end, the autonomy talks were on the verge of resuming again and a tripartite summit meeting was on the agenda after the Presidential election in November.

THE MIDDLE EAST: SEPTEMBER 1979

The U.S., Egypt and Israel agree to a peacekeeping force in Sinai to monitor the withdrawal of Israeli military forces.

Israel lifts 12-year ban on purchases of land by Jews in the occupied territories, drawing criticism from the U.S.

OCTOBER

Israel charges that the United Nations has understated the number of Palestinian terrorists active in the UN-controlled area in south Lebanon.

NOVEMBER

The Alma oilfields on the Gulf of Suez, the last of the Sinai oilfields in Israeli hands, are formally returned to Egypt.

DECEMBER

The Carter Administration unveils massive arms sale proposals for Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Pope John Paul II and Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat are reported to "have exchanged several letters during the past year."

JANUARY 1980

Israel expresses disappointment with the $200 million in military sales credits that President Carter agrees to add to the $3 billion aid package for Israel over the next three years.

Three-day summit meeting in Aswan between Premier Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat ends on a note of personal friendship and Israeli-Egyptian unity, but no breakthroughs are made.

FEBRUARY

U.S. speeds up sale of 75 F-16 fighter planes to Israel, to be in Israel's possession by October 1981 instead of 1984.

Israel establishes its first diplomatic relations with an Arab neighbor, as Israel and Egypt exchange ambassadors.

MARCH

The U.S. supports a UN Security Council resolution which sharply condemns Israeli settlements. More than 48 hours later President Carter repudiates U.S. support, citing a communications foul-up. U.S. and Israel indicate their agreement that the self-imposed May 25 target date for conclusion of autonomy talks is a "goal," not a "deadline."

APRIL

Israel takes a serious view of an Egyptian resolution declaring East Jerusalem as part of the West Bank.

Iraqi-sponsored Arab Liberation Front terrorists invade Kibbutz Misgav Am in the upper Galilee, killing three and wounding 16 others in a nine-hour gun battle with Israeli soldiers. Terrorists shot to death in fight.

MAY

Maj. Saad Haddad, commander of the Christian militia in south Lebanon, accuses

UN peace-keeping forces there of aiding Palestinian terrorists.

PLO terrorist attack in Hebron kills six Israelis, all yeshiva students, and wounds 16 others. Tensions increase on West Bank as reinforced Israeli troops and police contend with increasingly hostile Arab population and Orthodox Jewish militants. Sadat suspends autonomy talks, citing "lack of progress."

JUNE

Unidentified terrorists plant bombs in four West Bank towns, maiming two Arab mayors, Bassam Shaka of Nablus, who lost both legs, and Karin Khallaf of Ramallah, who lost his left foot. A Druze police sapper, Suleiman Herbawi, is blinded when a bomb he was attempting to dismantle blew up in his face.

UN Security Council approves 14-0, with the U.S. abstaining, a resolution declaring illegal all actions taken by Israel to alter the "character and status" of Jerusalem.

Begin suffers a mild heart attack during a Knesset meeting. He is taken to Hadassah Hospital to recover for several weeks.

JULY

UN General Assembly, by a 112-7 vote, adopts a resolution demanding Israel withdraw from all occupied territories, including Jerusalem and that it begin to do so no later than Nov. 18, 1980.

AUGUST

Sadat postpones resuming autonomy talks in response to the Jerusalem law adopted by the Knesset in July which proclaimed united Jerusalem Israel's capital.

UN Security Council votes 14-0 with the U.S. abstaining to censure Israel for its Jerusalem law and urges all countries with embassies in Jerusalem to move them. U.S. under fire by Israel and U.S. Jewish leaders for abstaining and thus making possible the adoption of the resolution.

SEPTEMBER

President Carter announces that autonomy talks will resume in a few weeks and that there "will be a summit later this year."

AROUND THE WORLD

Anti-Semitic activity was widespread in many countries around the world. The most dangerous situation was in Iran where Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government imprisoned some 100 Jews, executed a number of Jewish communal leaders and businessmen and confiscated Jewish property worth millions of dollars.

There was also an upsurge of neo-Nazi activity in a host of countries, including France, West Germany, Switzerland, Brazil and the United States, and a number of terrorist atrocities against Jews in Europe and South America.

The nine member states of the European Economic Community meeting in Venice adopted a declaration acknowledging the right of Palestinian self-determination and calling for the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization in the Mideast peace talks.

Following the adoption of a resolution by the UN Security Council demanding that Israel withdraw from all the occupied territories, including Jerusalem, and calling on all countries that have embassies in Jerusalem to remove them, 11 Latin American countries, Holland and Haiti began moving their embassies to Tel Aviv.

The Soviet Union continued its harassment of Jewish activists and prospective Jewish emigrants. During the Olympic Games, Soviet authorities cleared the cities of Jewish dissidents. By year's end, Soviet authorities had reduced to a trickle the number of Jews allowed to emigrate. Prisoners of Conscience continued to languish in jails and labor camps.

THE AMERICAN SCENE:

The United States was in the throes of the Presidential election campaign during most of the Year. Democrats and Republicans sought to woo Jewish voters with pledges to continue support for Israel and not to recognize the Palestinian Liberation Organization until it renounces terrorism against Israel and accepts United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338. President Carter came under increasing fire from Jewish leaders for U.S. abstentions in the United Nations on anti-Israel resolutions.

The Jewish community and its leadership was preoccupied, in addition to its traditional concern for the security and well-being of Israel, with such issues as Soviet Jewry, Jews in Arab lands, aiding Soviet Jews who emigrated to this country, and

How to Advertise in a Recessionary Period.

In a recessionary period, advertising must pass the most critical test of all, the cash register. Here are some fine points to remember when planning your advertising.

1. Somebody is buying. If "Nobody's buying," is your battle cry, guess again. Somebody is buying. Even at 7% unemployment, 93% of the workable population is still employed. That 93% still must purchase goods and materials.
2. Know Your Customers. Not just by name and address, but by what they like to buy. Effective merchandising meets the needs and wants of your clientele.
3. Do know your customers name and address. It takes less than a minute to fill out a sales slip. That sales slip, plus the credit card slips are your tickets to activating your customer list throughout the year by using direct mail.

4. Track your sales by zip code. Tracking sales by zip shows you what areas prefer what merchandise, and it also provides you with a way of evaluating your newspaper purchases. Always seek to match circulation and sales.
5. Understand how consumers re-prioritize their needs. In a recessionary period, psychological necessities become luxuries. Evaluate your stock. How much of it is psychological necessities? And who's continuing to purchase those products as opposed to who isn't?
6. Give a reason to buy from you. This is more important than you can know. 15 stores may carry the same item. Why should someone buy it from you as opposed to Ann & Hope?
7. Don't stop advertising. This bit of advice comes from the research department of McGraw-Hill. Their findings: companies that continued advertising during the recession gained substantial business from competition who stopped advertising.

8. Advertise smarter. Make every dollar count. Throw out traditional media usage patterns and experiment. For example, one company cut down the size of their weekly ad. To get more for their money they had the reduced ad broken into 4 smaller versions run on 4 separate pages. Result: multiple exposure within one issue increased recognition and did not hurt cash register sales.

9. Buy media that reaches people who can afford to buy. Certain zone editions of the Journal have more purchasing power than others. Some weeklies have more buying power than others. The check: circulation analysis by 5 digit zip code.

10. Make the Herald part of your buy. The Jewish Herald circulation falls into top income zip code areas. Our readership can afford to buy what you have. For more information call the Jewish Herald at 724-0200.

pressuring the Justice Department to ferret out and prosecute former Nazis living in this country. The climax of this pressure was the revocation of U.S. citizenship of Rumanian Archbishop Valerian Trifa.

American Jewry was also concerned over the electoral victories in the primaries of Gerald Carlson of Dearborn, a former member of the local Nazi Party who won the Republican nomination in Michigan's 15th District; Ku Klux Klan leader Tom Metzger who won the Democratic nomination for Congress in California's 43rd District; and American Nazi leader Harold Covington who received 43 percent of the vote in North Carolina for Attorney General.

The Jewish community was also engaged in trying to heal the rift in Black-Jewish relations following the resignation of Andrew Young as U.S. Ambassador to the UN. Black leaders charged that Young had resigned as a result of Jewish pressure on the Administration following his unauthorized meeting with the PLO representatives at the UN. Both Young and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance denied that Jewish pressure forced the envoy to resign.

SEPTEMBER

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance absolves the American Jewish community of any connection with the resignation of Andrew Young as Ambassador to the United Nations.

As a symbol of this stand, the U.S. Embassy should be moved from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem."

INSIDE ISRAEL:

The Begin government was buffeted by severe internal conflicts over such issues as the West Bank settlement policies, the Jerusalem law, skyrocketing inflation, calls for early elections and the resignation of Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, both of whom accused the government of missing chances for peace. In addition, Israel was subjected to continuing terrorist atrocities.

Nevertheless, Israel's relations with Egypt, despite setbacks caused by President Anwar Sadat's suspension of the autonomy talks, continued to solidify. A 600-square-mile area of Sinai was returned to Egypt as the Camp David accords were implemented and the normalization process continued, albeit unevenly, with regular commercial and cargo service between Israel and Egypt.

Georgetown U. Accepts $1M Kuwait Endowment

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — Georgetown University has accepted an endowment of $1 million from the government of Kuwait for its Georgetown Center for Contemporary Arab Studies, which also is being financed this year by 24 American corporations.

Wesley Christenson, Georgetown's director of public relations, told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that the Kuwait endowment has raised the total contributed to the center by eight Arab governments to $3,305,000 since its founding in 1975.

"More than half the money" for the center this year comes from American corporations while the Arab governments contribute "less than half," faculty of 22 members and its student body consists of only 38 undergraduate students.

Kuwait's contribution is the largest yet given to the center. Libya and the United Arab Emirates each have given $750,000, the next highest gifts. Jordan, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and Oman are the other Arab states that have contributed. Christenson said that corporations that have contributed include Allis Chalmers, Texaco, Bechtel, Exxon, General Motors, Ford, Chase Manhattan Bank and Citibank.

At a ceremony last week at the Kuwait Embassy, Georgetown University President Timothy Healy said the new gift is "a generous act of philanthropy" and that it "will significantly strengthen our teaching in the field of Arab studies and contribute to the expansion of intercultural education at the university."

A university statement said that the Kuwait gift was to establish an endowed professorship at the Center for Contemporary Arab Affairs and Public Policy. University officials said Kuwait attached no conditions to the gift and would not participate in selection of the professor under the endowment. Christenson said "some American Jews and some Israelis" are among the center's students.

Besides the Arab center, the university conducts a Middle East studies program in which, Christenson said, a visiting Israeli professorship is a part. Regular conferences on Israeli economic and political affairs have been held since 1967 and more than 2,000 students have taken courses there, he said. It now has six undergraduate courses on Judaic studies, some of its students also go to Hebrew University in Jerusalem, he added.

Much of the support for the Israeli and Jewish studies, Christenson said, comes from the Herman Goldman Foundation in New York and the Hyman Goldman family and the Goldmans' son, Aaron Goldman, of Washington, D.C.

While Christenson said the Arab center is "very objective and as balanced as any studies program," Ira Silverman, director of special programs for the American Jewish Committee, said the center has "a clearly marked pro-Arab, anti-Israel bias in its selection of curriculum material, its faculty appointment, and speakers."

In accepting so much money from "political sponsors of one point of view," Silverman said, Georgetown "may be selling something very precious to Americans — the integrity of its universities." He said "I recognize efforts by Georgetown to enhance its Jewish studies programs and while I applaud these efforts they in no way mitigate the political bias of the Arab studies center."

The American Jewish Committee has previously criticized Georgetown for accepting Arab gifts. Eyebrows also were raised by friends of Israel in the spring of 1979 when the Arab center conducted a seminar on how to win favor from the American media for Arab perceptions. The center is directed by Michael Hudson, who frequently defends Arab contentions regarding Israel. He told JTA at the time of the seminar that he obtained the idea for it from a seminar in Libya he had attended.

American media representatives and others, mostly supporters of Arab perceptions in the Arab-Israeli situation, attended the Libyan program. Some who were in Libya participated in the Georgetown center's program which was attended by an audience that appeared predominantly sympathetic to the Palestine Liberation Organization and against Israel.

Georgetown is America's oldest Jesuit institution of higher learning. Christenson said that of its approximately 12,000 students about 15 per cent are Jewish.

Kuwait, with a large number of Palestinian Arabs in key positions in its government and oil industry, is among the most vociferous enemies of Israel and is fully supportive of the PLO. It is adamantly opposed to the Camp David accords. Libya is officially described by the State Department as a "terrorist" country.

London University Accused Of Conference Bias

LONDON (JTA)—Exeter University, which has received considerable support from Arab governments, has been accused of barring Israeli academics from a conference on Saudi Arabia last month. Two senior Israeli scholars and an Israeli postgraduate student at the London School of Economics had requested to attend the conference. They said they were told their presence would be embarrassing.

They are Prof. Haim Shaked, dean of the Faculty of Humanities at Tel Aviv University, professor of Middle East history and director of the Shiloah Center for Middle East and African studies; Dr. Joseph Nevo, a lecturer at Haifa University; and Joseph Kostnir, a graduate at the London School of Economics who is writing a thesis on Saudi Arabia.

The conference, which had been organized by Exeter University's Center for Arab Gulf Studies, had been attended by Prince Abdullah al-Saud, a prominent member of the Saudi royal family.

U.S. Approves Iraqi Engine Sale

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — Without giving explicit reasons, the State Department has confirmed that while it has allowed the sale of eight marine engines to outfit warships for Iraq, it has blocked the sale of five Boeing aircraft designed for civilian passenger use by the government of Baghdad.

Artwork Seized

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The Military Government prevented an exhibition of political paintings by Palestinian Artists which was to take place in Ramallah, some 10 miles north of Jerusalem. The army confiscated five drawings which were to be shown in the exhibition, charging that they constituted incitement against the State. The drawings were entitled, "A Wedding in Jail," "The Rejection," and "The Day of the Prisoner."

One of the artists said: "We are not inciting against Israel, nor the Israeli people. We are merely expressing our feelings as Palestinians in paint."

When State Department spokesman John Trattner was asked about this "terribly perplexing" situation, where the U.S. approves a military contract but suppresses a civilian sale, he replied that two matters were made "on the basis of determination" in the Department.

Congressional critics hailed the decision against the sale of the Boeings as a major victory. Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R.N.J.) and Sen. Richard Stone (D. Fla.) led the efforts to stop the sale.

These Boeings can be converted into military transports. The engines for the warships were sold to Italy which has the contract to build four freighters for Iraq. While the Carter Administration has softened its position against Iraq in recent months, Iraq is still identified as a "terrorist nation."

EEC President To Meet With Begin, Shamir

PARIS, (JTA) — Foreign Minister Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg, who is also the president of the European Economic Community's (EEC) Council of Ministers, will return to Israel later this month to meet with Premier Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Thorn, who is conducting a study on the Middle East conflict on behalf of the EEC's nine member states, also plans to meet with Palestinian leaders from the West Bank and the Gaza district.

Thorn's decision to return to Israel Sept. 29 for a two-day visit followed an open rift between himself and Israeli leaders. The EEC Council president, who conferred with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt in Cairo, had warned earlier that he would cancel altogether his return visit to Israel. Circles close to him said he was "exasperated" by what they termed Israeli-made difficulties. These, the sources said, hinged mainly on the people Thorn wanted to meet, including Palestinians under administrative detention, and the actual date for his arrival.

Israeli sources said, however, that Thorn wanted to arrive in Israel last week while Israel's leaders were busy with President Carter's special representative to the autonomy talks, Sol Linowitz. An Israeli official source told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that "both sides have to agree on a visit date."

The matter was straightened out last week when Israel's Ambassador to Belgium and Luxembourg, Yitzhak Minerbi, met Luxembourg. European sources in Brussels said that the rift between Israel and the EEC "was only papered over and continues to exist."

The EEC is due to meet Sept. 15 and 16 in Brussels when their foreign ministers will consider Thorn's report and decide whether to take immediate diplomatic action in the Middle East or wait for the American Presidential election. Several of the nine ministers reportedly want immediate initiatives as they fear that "Israel might well use the American pre-electoral period to carry out additional unilateral actions, such as transferring the Premier's office to East Jerusalem or annexing the Golan Heights."

Israel obviously resents any West European interference in the current tripartite peace process and says that Israel and Egypt should be allowed to work out matters between themselves with America's assistance, in line with the Camp David accords.

The nine, on the other hand, say their policy is based on their joint declaration issued last June in Venice which called for the recognition of Palestinian self-determination and the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization in the peace talks. The Europeans do not believe that the Camp David accords can succeed in achieving peace and are pressing for a West European initiative.

Are You Better Prepared To Die Than To Become Disabled?

by Sylvia Porter

If you're a typical American, you are far better prepared to die than to become disabled for a prolonged period.

Yet, particularly in your younger years, the odds that you will become disabled for a substantial span of time are much higher than the odds that you will die.

"At ages 20 to 30, for instance, the chances that you will suffer a prolonged disability (90 days or more) are almost three times the chances that you will die. Of 1,000 workers at ages 20 to 30, up to 789 will become disabled for at least 90 days before age 65, according to authoritative statistics in the most recently published Commissioners Disability Table.

"At ages 35 to 40, the odds are more than twice as high on a prolonged disability than on death before 65. Of 1,000 lives, the number disabled before age 65 runs up to 685.

"Even at ages 45 to 55, the much greater chances of disability continue and the pattern holds into the age decade of the 60s.

"What's more, after one or two years of disability, the chances are against recovery in the next few years. If disabled at age twenty-five, 64.7 per cent will still be disabled at the end of two more years, and 46.2 per cent will still be disabled at the end of five more years, the Society of Actuaries reports.

"Even more shocking, in a U.S. government agency study of "Mortgage Foreclosures in the U.S., the findings are death caused only 3 per cent of the foreclosures, disability 48 per cent.

"And in still another study of "Work Disability in the U.S.," the key finding is that more than 15 million Americans are limited in their ability to work, ranging from minor to severe disability.

What this all leads up to, emphasizes Jarrett L. Davis, president of the insurance industry's highly-respected professional association, the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters (CLU) is the crucial need of average American individuals and business firms to hold disability insurance, to provide the dollars to replace income lost because of illness, injury or other incapacity.

This need is still largely ignored, and precisely by those most in need of the protection. While roughly 144 million Americans hold life insurance policies from private U.S. insurance companies, just 50 to 55 million hold private disability policies. They are protecting their beneficiaries with "instant estates" in the event of their death, but have neglected to provide any protection against the agony (financial as well as emotional) that follows disability.

This deplorable situation may, however, be somewhat improved now through three newly-announced concepts for disability coverage available through many major companies.

(1) A direct attempt is being made to help you keep up with the pace of inflation via a cost-of-living disability rider that, after a prescribed period, will increase your benefits based upon the official Consumer Price Index.

(2) A special supplement rider has been developed that goes beyond the basic disability coverage of most policies. It pays an additional benefit when the insured is totally disabled but is not receiving any disability benefits under Social Security, workers' compensation or no-fault auto insurance for such disability.

(3) "Residual" coverage also has been developed which becomes effective when, after the individual returns to his or her occupation on a part-time basis, there is a loss of income and a need for long-term benefits.

Each of these three features can be obtained at modest cost, Davis says, but he also stresses that while the new measures may assist many consumers, the insurance companies themselves must clarify the imperative needs and policy provisions of disability insurance.

"There is widespread confusion about what disability insurance is and does," the CLU head emphasizes. "It is not the Blue Cross-Blue Shield type of hospital and surgical coverage. Nor is it 'major medical insurance' which picks up after hospital-surgical insurance.

"Disability insurance (more aptly disability income insurance) is coverage that replaces income lost because of disability."

With the above sentence as the key, it is obvious that smaller firms with two, three or more critically important employees should study this type of protection. For a business with two important employees, both age 30, the chances of at least one disability lasting 90 or more days are 92 out of 100. For a firm with three in this class, the odds are 98 out of 100. The message is unmistakable.

Alliance Initiates Drive Against Family Planning

NEW YORK (JTA) — The Rabbinical Alliance, an Orthodox group, has launched an ongoing campaign through its 500 member-rabbis to persuade Jewish couples to reject the concept and practice of family planning.

In a call to American Jews to repudiate that concept, Rabbi Abraham Hecht, Rabbinical Alliance president, said that any form of family planning is "a threat to the existence of the Jewish people." He said Jews in America should have large families, citing the Biblical admonition to "be fruitful and multiply."

Hecht acknowledged that one of the main "excuses" for not having large families was "financial stress." However, he added, "unlike even a half century ago, Jews in America now have ample means to support large families."

Hecht cited a recent statement by Rabbi Menachem Schneerson, the Lubavitcher rebbe, who also made a strong appeal against birth control. He said "the actual effects of family planning have been, and are, emotional upsets, frustrations, strained relationship between husband and wife, all of which is inevitably taking a toll in ill health." The Lubavitcher rebbe asserted that family planning "has caused such couples to seek psychoanalysis, psychotherapy, and marriage counseling in an effort, often futile, to straighten matters out."

Klein Works To Be Published

TORONTO (JTA) — A major publication program is in process designed to provide adequate recognition of the work of the late Abraham Klein, Canadian Jewry's poet laureate, according to Prof. M.W. Steinberg of the faculty of English Literature at British Columbia University. The plan involves publication of seven volumes of Klein's completed works of prose and poetry.

Volume I will consist of his journalistic and editorial writing presently scattered in a variety of periodicals. A second volume of 35 short stories may appear next December.

A third book will include his letters, notebooks, and diaries. A fourth will comprise his literary criticism and a fifth will be a definitive edition of his novel "Second Scroll."

A sixth volume will be a definitive edition of his poems and the seventh will be a previously unpublished novel based on the 1946 Canadian spy trials.

Hecht said he and fellow members of the Rabbinical Alliance would regularly deliver sermons against the concept of family planning and would distribute newsletters and bulletins against it. He said the organization members plan to call special meetings of sisterhoods of congregations served by Rabbinical Alliance members to alert women congregants to the dangers of family planning.

A key argument in Hecht's statement was that American Jews must have a sense of responsibility for self-preservation and that newly-married couples "should consider perpetuating the people of the nation of Abraham. The only way to do this is by having large families, especially in view of the Holocaust which destroyed more than one million children."

He stressed that Jews "must not succumb to the current mode expressed by many that the possession of material goods, such as cars and boats, or vacations, are more important than having children." He said deliberate action to avoid children left many childless couples feeling "a void in their lives."

Hecht also said that his organization was "determined to withstand the pressure of abnormal societies which have also produced lifestyles of pornography and homosexuality," speaking out "against these as aberrations."

Asked for specifics, a Rabbinical Alliance spokesman said that while member rabbis had always taught that family planning was wrong, the current campaign was a major and continuing project aimed at the 350,000 to 400,000 Jews served by Rabbinical Alliance rabbis and that the campaign would be targeted toward young married couples — "that's where the emphasis will be."

Pledges Needed

Cash payment for pledges made during the 1980 campaign are being called for at this time. The urgent demands of the State of Israel's economy require immediate bond purchases.

Israel today is faced with an energy bill which is literally beyond imagination. Couple this with high inflation and the many demands of the peace treaty yet to be fulfilled, we must all take our checkbooks in hand and pay for bonds at this time.

Persons who pledged, or would care to participate in Israel's future can do so at this time by sending their bond purchase to Israel Bond Committee, 6 Braman St., Providence, R.I. 02906, or Call 751-6767.

Sadat Opposes Jordanian Participation In Autonomy Talks

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — President Anwar Sadat is firmly opposed to Jordanian participation in the autonomy talks "at this stage" because it might jeopardize the entire peace process. He said that King Hussein had offered to join the Camp David meetings in September 1978 but that he, Sadat, had discouraged him because of the Jordanian ruler's low esteem in the Arab world.

Sadat expressed his views in the course of a two-hour conversation with former Premier Yitzhak Rabin, a leader of the opposition Labor Party, who was visiting Cairo. An account of their meeting was published in Yediot Achronot.

Sadat said he objected to a Jordanian role because Hussein would try to prove that he is a greater Arab patriot than the Egyptian leader in order to receive an additional $200-300 million subsidy from the oil producing states.

Rabin reportedly was surprised by Sadat's attitude since he and the Labor Party in general believe that Israel eventually must negotiate with Jordan on the Palestinian issue. Sadat described the last ten years as "years of success" and repeated his conviction that despite difficulties, the peace process with Israel has reached the point of no return.

He recalled that during the Camp David talks with President Carter and Premier Menachem Begin he received a telephone call from Hussein who was in London saying he was ready to join the talks. "It did not take me much time to realize that I should not let Hussein join the talks," Sadat told Rabin, according to Yediot Achronot. "If I had consented, we never would have reached the Camp David accords. The man (Hussein) is known throughout the Arab world as a black sheep. The man in the street does not respect him," Sadat said.

Begin To Address Detroit Assembly

Jagoliner Named Reagan/Bush R.I. Coordinator

Neil B. Jagoliner, 22, of Deerfield Rd., Cranston, has been named press/field coordinator for the Rhode Island Reagan/Bush Committee.

Jagoliner was a member of the traveling party and did advance work for Senator Howard Baker's Presidential Campaign in New Hampshire during the summer months of 1979. Jagoliner then joined the national staff of the Baker for President Committee 1979-80 in the Convention States and National Convention division.

He is a recent graduate of George Washington University where he majored in Political Science, and Speech Communication and Broadcasting.

Jagoliner looks forward to a challenging and competitive campaign. This campaign has all the appearances of a real donnybrook but I am quite optimistic about Republican chances nationally as well as here in Rhode Island.

2500 leaders of North American Jewish Federations on Thursday, Nov. 13, at the Council of Jewish Federations' General Assembly in Detroit, it was announced here. Speaking at a major plenary session, Begin will provide delegates with his views on "Israel-Diaspora Relations" — the bond between American Jewry, the State of Israel and its people.

The General Assembly, to be held Nov. 12 through 16, will bring together leadership from CJF's 200 constituent Federations in the United States and Canada. The Assembly is the largest single gathering held each year of North American Jewish leadership. Delegates will participate in sessions covering every major aspect of concern to the organized Jewish community.

Additional major sessions will be devoted to the implication of the results of the U.S. Presidential elections, strengthening the Jewish family through community support systems and programs, "The Struggle for Soviet Jewry," "Serving the Aging in the 1980s," and "The Quest for Peace in the Middle East."

University Scientist Seeks Society Recognition

WASHINGTON (JTA) — A Russian-born scientist with a medical degree from the University of Berlin which he received during the bitter years when Hitler's onslaught was mounting against Jews, has taken up the long struggle to have the International Red Cross (IRC) recognize Israel's Magen David Adom.

Dr. Arieh Harell, now 68 and a professor of endocrinology at Tel Aviv University, is president of Israel's counterpart of Red Cross and Red Crescent societies in other countries. In the United States for a series of seminars and conferences in his medical field, he seeks with indefatigable zeal, as did his predecessors, to win support for Israel's membership in the international body.

The IRC holds its quadrennial meeting in Manila in November 1981 when Israel's membership will be proposed. In 1949, when it made its first application, it lost by one vote. At that time, the East European bloc was split and some members abstained. Every four years since then Israel has unsuccessfully sought membership in the face of opposition from the Arabs and their allies.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of Magen David Adom, which was established during the British Mandate in Palestine. Harell noted in an interview here that in the past 50 years Israel's society has supplied aid to more than 30 countries, including Moslem and African countries which now shun Israel. Ironically, among them is Bangladesh which, in mid-August, introduced the resolution in the United Nations Security Council aimed at depriving Israel of Jerusalem as its capital.

Last month, Harell said, "Magen David Adom sent 200 pounds of medicines and first aid kits to the Red Cross in Nepal to help earthquake victims. Five medical teams, helped by the government of Israel and Israel's television network, went to aid refugees from Cambodia in Thailand. Israel's television raised 50 million Israeli Pounds for this purpose."

Harell noted that "most Red Cross societies recognize Israel's international cooperation. There are strong personal ties between our society and Red Cross societies abroad, the West Europeans, Rumania's and especially with the American Red Cross. "While in Washington, he was the guest of George Elsey, American Red Cross president.

Harell, who was in Washington with Rabbi Reuben Dobin of Miami Beach, a leader in the American effort in "Operation Recognition" for Magen David Adom, was Israel's minister to Rumania in 1957-58 and ambassador to the Soviet Union in 1958-62. Born in Kiev, he emigrated to Palestine in 1934, and then entered Berlin University where he received his medical degree in 1937.

While on his current U.S. visit, he is participating in conferences and seminars, including the Gordon Foundation Conference in Meriden, N.H., North Connecticut University, the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, George Washington University in St. Louis, and at Estes Park in Denver.

He will return to Israel in October.
