Orthodox Parties Hold Key

by David Landau
JERUSALEM (JTA) — Once again, and perhaps more starkly than ever before, Israel's political future — and the future of the peace process — are in the hands of the religious parties, which hold the balance of power between Likud and Labor.

Their spiritual leaders and their politicians will be deciding whether there is to be a narrow government led by Likud, a narrow government led by Labor or no government at all, meaning new elections.

They will reach their decision against the backdrop of what several observers have discerned as a trend away from political hawkishness in the ultra-Orthodox or "haredi" camp.

Ever since the 1977 political earthquake that swept Menachem Begin into power, the haredi parties have sided with the Likud-led "nationalist camp."

But more recently, the parties have been edging perceptibly toward their former centrist position in the Israeli political spectrum. And they have been doing so while dramatically increasing their strength at the ballot box and in the Knesset.

In the November 1988 election, Shas emerged as the third-largest party with six seats; Agudat Yisrael was just a whisker behind with five; and Degel HaTorah, the anti-Hasidic breakaway from Agudat, ended up with just enough votes for a respectable — and now pivotal — two seats in the 120-member Knesset.

The trend toward political centrism, or at least greater unpredictability, also has affected the National Religious Party, to an extent.

After Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir ousted Labor Party leader Shimon Peres from the national unity government, NRP's secretary-general, Rabbi Yitzhak Levy, quickly declared that his party would back the Likud-led rump government in the confidence vote schedule.

But another NRP Knesset member, Yigal Bibi, said he wanted the party to allow a freedom-of-conscience vote for all five of its members. "Shamir does not deserve our support," Bibi remarked.

Still, Labor's hopes at this time are pinned not on the modern-Orthodox NRP, but on the black-haired, long-coated rabbis of Agudat, Degel and Shas.

The strongest hopes rest with Agudat, which emerged from the November-December 1988 coalition negotiations bruised and bleeding — and bitterly resentful of Prime Minister Shamir.

Agudat maintains that the premier promised far-reaching changes in religious legislation and generous government funding that he had no intention of delivering.

Agudat, moreover, is a much more moderate and attractive coalition partner for Labor now than it was then — because the controversial "Who Is a Jew" issue that dogged the 1988 negotiations has since been quietly shelved by almost all circles in the haredi community, both here and in the Diaspora.

With Agudat's five votes, and with the blanket support of all the parties of the center and the left, Labor would reach 60 votes in the no-confidence debate. In order for the present "rump" government to survive, Likud (continued on page 15)

R.I.'s Own Home Sitting

by Kathy Cohen
Herald Assistant Editor

Jacqueline Horner, 49, has been working in the nursing field since 1962 and was considering becoming her own boss until last October when her dream came true. She bought Home Sitting Services, Inc. of Rhode Island from the previous owner of one year — Ingrid Anderson. When Anderson owned the business she served mostly Southern Massachusetts, but now Horner has seasonal second homes or unoccupied properties.

The basic duties of a sitter on assignment are: providing a presence around the clock, answering the phone per client's instructions, preparing and setting the garbage out at an instructed time and place, maintaining the home at the client's standards and caring for the pets. Child and elderly companionships may require more specific details. Horner says that business has doubled from October through brought the sitting service home to R.I. — specifically, Pawtucket. Her company still reaches into Southern Mass.

According to Horner, it costs approximately $7,000 to own a home sitting business and each company covers a county/territory, although since R.I. is so small she has the whole state, and then some, for her territory.

Since her inception into the home sitting business, she's hired six active sitters, all of whom have worked in Providence's East Side, Tiverton, Wakefield, Foster, Coventry, East Providence, etc. — wherever their services are requested. Horner says most of the jobs have been watching pets, although her services include: non-medical elderly companionship, in-home child care for travelers and home checking services for December and expects business to pick up slowly. She's giving herself four to five years to reach the average of 25 to 30 sitters — the normal amount for home sitting business.

The first Home Sitting Service Inc., located in Denver, Colorado, was founded by W. Alfred Sutherland (called the "Colonel Sanders of the home sitting business") in 1972 when he retired at 65 years of age. Today it has become a national association of independent owners, which has spread into 28 states, with a total of 85 home sitting service businesses.

All sitters are active senior citizens, averaging 74 years in age, who need a supplemental income — one that won't push them out of the income bracket for social security benefits. (continued on page 15)

Sephardic Festival at Touro

Herald Staff

A festival featuring Sephardic Jewish music, film and history will take place Sunday, April 1, at Touro Synagogue in Newport.

Sponsored by Yeshiva University, the festival is open to the public with the aim of furthering Sephardic heritage. Sephardim are descendants of Jews expelled from Spain in 1492 during the Inquisition.

Touro was founded by Sephardic Jews and was the first synagogue in the United States. The modern congregation in Newport is predominantly Ashkenazic.

"The program is a way to unite the Ladino (Judeo-Spanish) speaking community," says Rabbi Dr. M. Mitchell Serels, director of the University's Sephardic community program.

Serels numbers the United States Sephardic community at 200,000 and describes the population as a "growing amount," citing the large Syrian Jewish community in New York.

Sephardic Jews here are similar to the Orthodox in observance — many of them are observant of the full spectrum of Jewish Law — but with some technical differences in the legal tradition. For example, a boy of pre-Bar Mitzvah age can be called to the Torah in Sephardic services.

Also, many of the prayers are in the form of religious poems with melodies that are more eastern in content, he added. The service is participatory. "We don't just have a rabbi up there giving a sermon," Serels says.

He describes the Sephardic way of worship as "one of understanding." "We don't judge people; there are people with varying degrees of observance, but when we come into the synagogue we are all Jews."

The program will include an English language film about Jewish life in the Catalan towns of Barcelona and Gerona before the 1492 expulsion. Guest speakers will include Serels and Dr. David Altbe, president of the Sephardic Society in New York City. He will speak on "The Influence of Sephardim on American Jewry." Libi Ba Mizrah, a Sephardic musical group composed of Yeshiva University students will perform.

Noting the numbers of Soviet immigrants going to Israel and the United States, Serels says the future of Sephardic culture in Israel and America is strong. "Many of the Soviet Jews are not coming from the European part of Russia but from the Asiatic regions," he says.

Touro Synagogue is located at 85 Touro Street in Newport. The festival will begin at 2:00 p.m. and is free. Also sponsoring the festival are the National Tourist Office of Spain and Iberia Airlines.

VICE PRESIDENT ASSURES JEWISH LEADERS — Vice President Dan Quayle told members of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations last week that there has been no change in the U.S. policy that Jerusalem must remain a united city. He also affirmed that the Administration does not oppose the right of Soviet immigrants and other Jews to settle anywhere in Jerusalem and assured the Conference members that the Administration will accept Israeli assurances that U.S. housing investment guarantees will not be used for housing in the territories.

A West Bay Jewish Community Center Purim

A youngster lives it up at West Bay JCC's Purim fest.

by Lois Lury

Mordecai, Esther, Haman, or King, who could know what this Purim would bring? All of our favorite Purim characters arrived to enjoy West Bay JCC's Annual Purim Party.

On Monday, March 5, the social hall of the Westminster Unitarian was transformed into Purim delights of all varieties.

Upon entering the hall, the children could choose any of the 16 craft tables to work at. There were Purim projects for the very young children to the teenage group. This was their night, and it was up to them to decide.

Coffee can graggers, a Dancing Hamantaschen Man, a Royal Jeweled Crown or necklace, stick puppets, or a Hamantaschen basket delighted the younger children for the evening.

Older Esthers and Hamans hammered, glued, and nailed away at wooden graggers, that were guaranteed to be the loudest at any Megillah service. Sewing felt hand puppets or Hamantaschen bean bags was another project they could get involved in. If there was any time remaining, you could enjoy yourself making a clear or a cardboard mask for Purim, complete with markers, stickers, and sequins. Only the brave at heart attempted to make a Megillah, where the story of Esther was attached to a pencil and rolled up inside a cardboard tube. In order to read the Megillah, one only had to pull out the story, and then re-roll it back into the tube using the pencil.

After munching away on delicious Hamantaschen (even chocolate!), all the Esthers, Hamans, and Kings gathered up their Purim crafts along with their mom and/or dad. Time to enjoy these holiday projects was fleeting, and the evening drew to a close. As the noise of all the graggers faded away, West Bay JCC promised to come back next year, with more Purim crafts to make your holiday time extra special!

Pet-Therapy For Alzheimer's Disease Patients To Be Studied In Rhode Island Communities

EAST PROVIDENCE — Pet-facilitated therapy can be successful in improving the quality of life for Alzheimer's disease patients. The Alzheimer's disease crisis intervention center has completed a pioneer study exploring the effects of pet-facilitated therapy on Alzheimer's disease patients in a nursing home and is bringing their research to the community. If Alzheimer's disease patients and their families have pets in their homes and would like to be part of our research, contact the Alzheimer's Disease Crisis Intervention Center, 1 Catamore Boulevard, East Providence, R.I. 02914 or call (401) 431-1900.

The Alzheimer's Disease Crisis Intervention Center will be holding a workshop for caregivers and service providers at the Center. There will be four workshops, each lasting three hours. The first workshop was held on Monday, March 19, from 6:00-9:00 p.m. To register, contact the Alzheimer's Disease Crisis Intervention Center, 1 Catamore Boulevard, East Providence, R.I. 02914, or call (401) 431-1900.

The Alzheimer's Disease Crisis Intervention Center continues to provide care management services to families and caregivers of Alzheimer's disease patients. These services include:

1. Assessment of the need and extent of services
2. Consultation with families to help them understand the disease and its implications
3. 24-hour help line for caregivers
4. Regular follow up and response to any changes
5. Support to caregivers whenever needed and answer any questions.

Discovering The Soviet Union In 1990

by Leon Uris

The Soviet Union and mother Russia is a house about to collapse. It is a dreary and depressed land that cannot feed, house, or clothe its citizens, or give them the tiniest vestiges of pleasure. It is a Third World nation sprayed a mustard-colored tan 50 years ago and left to rot. Its currency is valueless, its ideals bankrupt. Prostitutes, the hard currency hookers, fill its foreign hotel lobbies. A black market is rampant. Food is rationed. Long lines of defeated people wait for everything, mostly vodka.

But the vaulted metro runs on time and every 40 seconds the doors open with precision and disgorge dull-eyed, silent people devoid of laughter; they are carried like robots up and down the escalators, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands of them, wearing their weariness as though it were the national emblem. These are citizens largely without a work ethic, artistic creativity, subservient to authority, fear-filled, who have sold themselves for the illusion of birth-to-death security.

Perestroika is a contradiction in terms. One cannot "restructure" a house whose foundation has rotted by using the same architects who built it in the first place.

In real terms, we have come to learn rapidly that free speech was not a gift from the Communist party to the people. Glasnost means that the people are open because the authorities have lost their control to govern. As I write this, the vile by-product of glasnost — anti-Semitism — is erupting.

Do not take the bait that four million or so KGB people have suddenly seen the light, disabused themselves and vanished into the night. They still lurk behind every hedge and play their diabolical games. They are particularly dangerous to Jewish life. The Jews have always been the traditional, handy scapegoats in Russia, in the Baltics, in the Ukraine. The Soviets grope blindly to assign blame for the horrendous condition of their nation. They will never look into themselves and take the responsibility for this system they have created.

Out on the streets, the Pamyat gangs shout of how the Jews had hoodwinked Lenin and brought Russia to ruin. Their black T-shirts and symbols smell of the Nazi thugs of Munich in 1922.

In the more delicate and cultured climates, American diplomats and foreign journalists have told me of their shock at the rank Jew-baiting by Russian intellectuals, scholars and writers.

With it all, neither the Pamyat, nor the condescending Communists, nor the intelligentsia want all the Jews to leave. Incredibly they say, "We need Jewish brains." This prints out to something like this: "If you Jews leave, you are traitors. If you stay, you will live in eternal tyranny. You have to stay to achieve for Russia what Russia cannot achieve for itself, and when you achieve it, we will hate you all over again for having achieved it."

If you can follow this warped and tortured logic, then you may be able to get an inkling of the philosophical chaos that now exists. Unlike Poland, which had Solidarity for the people to gravitate to, and unlike Hungary, which is filled with entrepreneurship, the Russians have no centrality to turn to, except the same one that got them into this mess in the first place. The odds are that some clever clique within the Communist Party structure will seize upon the nationalistic impulses of the moment, and some brand of fascism is bound to emerge.

I believe that there are two overriding issues on the world's agenda as we move toward the 21st century. They are rushing to resolution even as we are going into print. First, it would be total folly to think that the Russians can come through the imminent collapse of Communism without convulsions and bloodshed. Azerbaijan is only the first act in a gale force play of ethnic republics seeking independence.

And what of Russia itself? After the mob quits beating up on the Jews, what will their own fate be? For the Jews, I believe the message is clear. They do not need an emigration, but an evacuation.

Yes, we must support Jewish life wherever it exists, in Riga, in Budapest, in Leningrad, in Moscow. It is not for us to make decisions that are for our brothers and sisters to make. It is for us to see that every Jew is free to live wherever he chooses. My personal belief, however, is that there will be a decent existence for Jews in Russia, the Baltics and the Ukraine when you can grow onions in the palm of your hand.

The second major issue of the new decade will be the inevitable rush toward the reunification of Germany, making them the dominant power in Europe. The industrial establishment that spawned and armed Adolf Hitler and the perverse mentality that was capable of operating an Auschwitz is again doing business at the same old stand. The "new" Germans tell us not to fear. We, the world at large, must find a way to prevent them from even toying with the ideas of ALEPH, BET, GIMEL... AS EASY AS ONE, TWO, THREE—A new Russian immigrant to Israel goes "back to school" at an absorption center in Jerusalem. This ulpan class is just one of many necessary programs designed to help new immigrants adapt to their new surroundings. doing to mankind what they have done in this century.

I returned from my journey to Eastern Europe with three gifts. In Budapest I was presented with a piece of the Iron Curtain from the government of Hungary. The official who presented it to me thanked me for shooting a million words over the border.

Narragansett Bay Watch: March

Bay Dictionary

Estuary: An estuary is an area where fresh water from rivers and sea water from the oceans meet and mix. Estuaries are very productive biological systems. They provide a home and breeding habitat for most kinds of marine life, including shellfish, finfish and seabirds.

Research Highlight

Just how salty is the Bay? The open ocean normally has a salt concentration of 35 parts salt per thousand parts water (ppt). Estuarine salinity may vary from this relatively high concentration to the low concentrations found in the upper reaches of most rivers (zero ppt). Bay bottom and surface salinity may vary depending on freshwater inflow, tides and currents, and bottom topography.

The Taunton River, which empties into Mt. Hope Bay, is the largest source of fresh water to the Bay, while the Blackstone River is the second largest.

Narragansett Bay: Part of a National Plan

Albemarle - Pamlico Sound, Buzzards Bay, Long Island Sound, Puget Sound, San Francisco Bay, Narragansett Bay is in good company as a member of the National Estuary Program (NEP).

Created by Congress and the Environmental Protection Agency in 1984, the NEP focused attention on our nation's estuaries, and on the need to assess their pollution problems and the health of their marine life. Narragansett Bay was one of the six original estuaries selected for inclusion in the Program, and the Narragansett Bay Project was created in 1985 to administer a five-year study of Narragansett Bay.

The first job of the Narragansett Bay Project, and other NEP Projects, is to conduct research to identify the pollution problems that threaten each individual estuary. Building on this research, each Project will design a management plan for the estuary that outlines the various ways and means of improving its environmental quality.

The National Estuary Program was fueled by the pioneering research and management efforts, during the 1970s and early 1980s, in the country's largest estuary — Chesapeake Bay. Based on detailed scientific research conducted in the Chesapeake Bay region, recommendations were developed to stop the degradation of the Chesapeake. Many of these recommendations have been implemented. For example, the state of Maryland has passed a "Critical Area Law," which creates a 1,000 foot buffer zone around the Bay. And in 1987, the states of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland, along with the District of Columbia, made a commitment to decrease the amount of nutrients entering Chesapeake Bay 40% by the year 2000.

In Rhode Island, the scope of Narragansett Bay Project research has been extensive. Research has ranged from collecting vital basic information on the water quality of the Bay (including the presence of fecal contaminants and potentially toxic pollutants), to assessing the levels of pollutants contained in Bay quahogs and winter flounder, and the potential health risk associated with consuming Bay seafood. The concerns of the public and Bay user groups regarding Narragansett Bay have also been considered, and led to a survey of public perceptions of the Bay, as well as a series of workshops with Bay user groups designed to air their concerns.

Initial problems identified by the Bay Project include the routine violation of copper and nickel water quality toxicity standards in the Providence River region. Research also revealed another water quality issue — pollutant loadings from Massachusetts, carried down to the Bay from both the Blackstone and Taunton Rivers.

It seems clear that if we are to begin solving the problems that threaten Narragansett Bay, we must begin to understand that our individual lifestyles and actions can have regional effects. We must broaden our horizons to include a better future for Narragansett Bay.

Judith Korch, The Narragansett Bay Project

The Narragansett Bay Project is jointly sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management.

Is Ignorance Bliss?

Some people still say that ignorance is bliss. And in some ways, maybe it is. At times, it's the only way to the habit of thinking that someone who doesn't think or doesn't know is truly at an advantage.

Despite this mode of thought, many people make the time to study subjects that will put them in the class of "less ignorant" people — subjects which might never be used, but are studied "just for the sake of it."

It is actually a great mitzva to study Torah "just for the sake of it." We're talking "no ulterior motives" here. We're not talking about learning Hebrew, or studying to become enamored with one's heritage, or learn more about Judaism, or what to pass on to one's children.

It could be as simple as deciding to sit down every day and read 10 sentences from the Torah. Of course, this wouldn't be for the ultimate goal of actually reading through the entire Bible, but to study Torah just for the sake of it.

There isn't even a "cute" example that this mitzva can be compared to; because, when you come right down to it, normally everything we do has a reason, purpose or motive behind it. Think about it for a minute, honestly, before you deny the truth of this statement.

Minute's up! Bet you didn't think of anything, did you? Study a little Torah every day, just for the sake of it.

Building the Sanctuary

This week's Torah portion, P'kudei, contains within it the verses, "... and the children of Israel did according to everything that G-d had commanded Moses, so they did. And they brought the Sanctuary to Moses..." (Exodus 39:32-33)

The famous commentator, Rashi, notes that the Children of Israel brought the unconstructed Sanctuary to Moses because they were not able to set it up. The Sanctuary materials required superhuman strength for its construction. Moses, however, by merely placing his hand on the myriad collection of boards, pillars, etc., raised it.

The verses quoted above teach valuable lessons about how each person can build his own inner spiritual Sanctuary.

When the Children of Israel built the actual physical Sanctuary, they constructed it with all of the numerous details that G-d had commanded to Moses. Though they had not yet been commanded to erect the Sanctuary, and in the end, did not erect it themselves, they still made sure not to skip even one small item or part about which they were instructed.

This is similar to a Jew's relationship toward his Creator and mitzvat. From the start, it is incumbent upon each of us to be involved with Judaism in an all-encompassing capacity. This includes the many numerous details of the mitzvot that G-d has commanded us.

It is possible, even probable, that despite all of this work on our part, we will not reach a level whereby we can "erect" our own personal Sanctuary. For, in order for the Sanctuary to be established and endure, Moses must somehow play a part in it.

Therefore, once we have done all we can in the way of building our own Sanctuary, we must

by William Sullivan of Merrill Lynch

Most investors recognize the triple advantage mutual funds offer. Diversification is one: You don't put all your eggs in one basket. Liquidity is another. You can redeem your investment fairly simply and easily. Professional management is the third advantage: Informed experts look after your next egg, even if it's modest.

Granted that mutual funds may be a good investment choice for many people, how do you go about narrowing your choices from a field of over 2,800 or so funds?

Define Your Goals

As with any other investment, the first consideration must be to define your objectives. Are you seeking income and relative safety of your principal? Or are you willing to take some risk in anticipation of capital appreciation? Or perhaps you'd like a combination of income and capital growth. Remember that mutual funds should be viewed as a long-term investment.

No matter what your goal, it's imperative that you understand it and are committed to it before selecting a fund, since the investment philosophy of every fund is oriented towards a specific goal, too. The prospectus for a fund states its objective clearly.

There is an array of funds corresponding to various investment objectives. For example, there are growth funds that emphasize share price appreciation and play down current income. There are also growth and income funds that hold shares in companies with a history of paying stable or increasing dividends. If you're primarily interested in income, you should consider income funds that invest in either government or corporate bonds. For tax-free income, consider municipal bond funds. If you live in a state with substantial income taxes, it pays to search out double-tax-free funds, which concentrate on bonds issued by municipalities in your state. Some funds can even be triple-tax-free in certain municipalities.

If safety of principal is a paramount concern, money market funds consist of portfolios of short-term securities. For those who want to earn a higher level of income, there are funds that invest in securities issued or guaranteed by the U.S. Government or its agencies, such as "Ginnie Mae" (Government National Mortgage Association) funds. Although the net asset value of these longer-term funds will fluctuate, payment of principal and interest on the securities in which they invest is backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government or its agencies.

If you are looking for a more speculative investment, you might examine a gold or precious metals fund. Or you might be interested in international funds that hold stocks issued by companies outside of the U.S. You may also consider global funds whose portfolios contain both U.S. and international stocks.

Those are just some of the categories of mutual funds available to meet diverse investment objectives. Others include high-yield corporate and municipal bond funds, balanced funds, flexible portfolio funds and option/income funds.

As a prudent investor, consider another critical factor: What kind of performance can you expect from a particular fund? While the past record is no guarantee of future performance, it is a good idea to research a fund's performance history. Past performances are tracked by organizations such as Lipper Analytical Services, which publishes weekly, monthly and quarterly reports. The Wiesenberger Investment Companies Service publishes an annual compendium that analyzes the performance of practically every fund on the market. Leading financial publications, such as The Wall Street Journal, Barron's, Forbes and Money Magazine also rank funds periodically.

Evaluate The Charges

While sales charges should have some bearing on your selection of a fund, they should not be the overriding influence. Typical charges run from 4 percent to 8.5 percent of your initial investment. Usually, the charge is added to the net asset value per share or liquidation value when the offering price is set.

Rather than charging a "front-end" load, some funds charge declining liquidation charges, known as "contingent deferred sales charges" or "back-end" loads. These charges usually decline depending on how long the shares are held. "Back-end" load funds also charge an annual distribution fee, which can be as much as 1.25 percent. A distribution fee is also referred to as a 12b-1 fee, after the 1980 Securities and Exchange Commission rule that allows it.

Funds that have sales charges are sold through registered representatives or financial planners, and the charges are designed to compensate these professionals for services they provide in helping you make your fund selection. These fundholder services include research capabilities, exchange privileges, automatic dividend reinvestment, regular statements and, in some cases, dual-pricing options. Dual-pricing allows you to choose the appropriate type of load schedule — either a front-end or a back-end load — whichever you feel is more cost effective for you. For instance, smaller dollar amounts will generally be better off in back-end load shares, while larger investments are often better made in front-end shares.

There are also "no-load" and "low-load" funds sold directly to investors. These funds may be more appropriate for those investors who don't need guidance to find the funds that are best for their financial goals or help in exchanging them for other funds should investment objectives or market conditions warrant. Again, read the prospectus for details of any charges, fees, and services.

Remember, when it comes down to choosing a specific mutual fund, you must define your investment objectives and make sure that your selections complement your goals. It's advisable to check performance and other ratings, and to evaluate sales charges in relation to services received. If you need guidance, it probably makes sense to work with a professional financial consultant, who can help you evaluate your choices.

Managing Your Estate

Take The Time To Write A Letter Of Instructions

You have taken the time to create and implement sound financial and estate plans. You've taken the proper measures to ensure that the surviving members of your family will be able to carry on as you had intended in the event that you become ill or suddenly die. If disaster suddenly strikes, the plan you have created will be put into motion quickly, without interruption. Well, that's the way it's supposed to be, but if you have neglected to leave adequate information about locating the plan and planning tools, you may be setting your family up for chaos in the face of an emergency.

Your will is one of the most important documents in directing the orderly transfer of your assets. A key to ensuring that the transfer will take place as quickly and smoothly as possible is a letter of instructions containing all the information that your family, and others you have designated, will need to manage your affairs as you had intended. Your letter should contain the following:

- Location of all important documents: If you keep a copy of your will in your safe-deposit box make sure that another copy is available in the event that the box is sealed at your death. List, and give the location of, other important documents, such as birth and marriage certificates, Social Security card, stock certificates, tax returns, business agreements, and military discharge papers.

- Location of your safe-deposit box and key: It is also advisable to list the items that are stored in the box.

- List of all bank accounts: In addition to the location of the accounts, include information about the types of accounts and how they are held (in joint names or in your name alone).

- List of all assets: Include the location of proofs of ownership of various types of property, such as real estate deeds, car registration and the title transfer document, and the documents related to the various securities you own.

- List of all debts: Give details on how these should be handled in the event of your incapacitation or death.

- List of all credit cards: Include the location of the cards and monthly statements.

- Names, addresses, and phone numbers of professional advisors: Provide the information needed to contact your attorney, accountant, financial planner, and insurance agent. Also include the names of others you have designated to represent you in some way, such as your executor, trustee, and guardian for your children.

- Disability planning: Also, you may want to prepare a "living will," which indicates your desires concerning the extent of medical treatment that should be given to you following a sudden or serious illness or accident that leaves you permanently and totally incapacitated. A durable power of attorney also is important to enable someone else to attend to your financial affairs if you are disabled.

The more information you provide, the easier it will be for your family to carry out your plans. Your professional advisor may be able to provide checklists of other items you should include in your final instructions. Be sure that the information you provide is updated periodically and that key people are aware of both the existence and locations of your letter of instructions.

Five Dallas Skinheads Convicted For Violations

by Stewart Weiss
DALLAS (JTA) — Five members of a white supremacist group were convicted recently of firearms violations and conspiracy to violate the civil rights of blacks, Jews and Hispanics.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of 25 years in federal prison. Sentencing is scheduled for April 19.

The charges stem from anti-Semitic and anti-minority incidents committed in 1988, in which several religious institutions were vandalized and several people were beaten up by Skinheads.

Those found guilty of 12 of 13 charges in federal court were Daniel Wood, 19; Sean Tarrant, 20; Jon Jordan, 19; Christopher Greer, 25; and Michael Lawrence, who were convicted before U.S. District Court Judge Barefoot Sanders.

The five are members of the Confederate Hammerskins, a Dallas-based white supremacist organization, whose members sport shaved heads and espouse Nazi ideology.

The convictions are based on several incidents. In August 1988, anti-Semitic slogans were painted on Temple Shalom in Dallas, and several Skinheads attempted to disrupt Shabbat services.

Temple Shalom was vandalized eight to 10 times in less than two years.

In October, the Dallas Jewish Community Center had several windows shot out, and phrases like "6 million more," and "This time we'll do it right" were painted on its walls in red spray-paint. An Islamic mosque was also defaced.

As a result of those incidents, several suspects were apprehended, and Daniel Wood was convicted in a local court of vandalism. He received a sentence of 10 years and a $5,000 fine.

Upon his sentencing, Wood flashed the "Heil Hitler" sign to a packed courtroom.

Wood and several other Skinheads had been stopped by police while driving in a van, loaded with baseball bats, ball-bearings and cans of red spray paint.

In one of the most chilling pieces of testimony, Gordon Buchanan, 18, a former member of the Confederate Hammerskins, told the court that Wood said he wanted to run lethal gas through air conditioning ducts of a local synagogue.

Though no gas had been put in any of the air units, a spokesman at Temple Shalom of Dallas confirmed that the air conditioning had been tampered with on two separate occasions.

Rabbi Kenneth Roseman, senior rabbi at Temple Shalom, was gratified at the verdict handed down recently.

"For a long time in our history," he said, "governments used their power against the right of Jews and others. It is gratifying to know that in America, the forces of law do their utmost to protect and defend the rights of all people, including minorities.

"This verdict should send a message to all hate groups that such behavior will not be tolerated. This is a victory for all Americans," he said.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in New York welcomed the news of the conviction, calling it "a major victory in the continuing battle against hate-inspired violence by Skinheads around the country."

It sends "an emphatic message that bias-related crimes of violence will not be tolerated in our society," Justin Finger, associate national director of ADL, said in a statement, noting that 17 members of the Confederate Hammerskins have now been convicted on a variety of civil rights charges.

UJA Campaign Starts With 'Millionaires Meeting'

by Howard Rosenberg
WASHINGTON (JTA) — The United Jewish Appeals' Operation Exodus campaign has gotten off to a running start among the ultra-wealthy. But its chairman, Marvin Lender, vowed recently that the effort will not be for millionaires only.

In a speech to the group's seventh National Young Leadership Conference, Lender promised that the $420 million effort to resettle Soviet Jews in Israel would be UJA's most "broad-based campaign ever."

"We cannot not allow every American Jew to participate in this event," he said.

Lender predicted that 26 UJA contributors of a million dollars or more will have given the campaign $85 million to $100 million by the end of the year.

The campaign was kicked off by a "millionaires meeting" on Feb. 28, hosted by clothing retailer Leslie Wexner. The meeting, which raised $58 million, took in contributions from 16 of the 26 million-dollar donors.

A successful campaign "will send the message to Soviet Jews, to the Soviet government and to our own group, that Jews stand up for Jews, that we rely on one another," Lender said.

The campaign is designed to raise the money in one year to be paid out over three years. But Lender said recently that if the influx of Soviet Jews increases above initial expectations, the campaign could be extended to four years.

Lender expressed some concern about general awareness of the issue of Soviet emigration in the Jewish community.

"There are more Jews in the United States that know nothing about what we are talking about than those who do," he said.

To help raise national awareness of Operation Exodus, the UJA and the National Conference on Soviet Jewry are planning a Congressional Freedom Seder on April 3.

Another speaker at the Young Leadership Conference, Arnon Mantvur, who is director general of absorption at the Jewish Agency, agreed with Lender that U.S. Jews must "feel that they are involved" in the resettlement.

He said Jewish Agency officials are ironing out new programs for U.S. Jewish communities to "twin" with Israeli municipalities, that are absorbing new Soviet emigres.

The twinned American community will be able to have "hands-on involvement and impact on what's happening," but it "will be a different type of a model" than Project Renewal, Mantvur said.

Project Renewal matches American Jewish communities with Israeli development towns, which received varying amounts of support from their U.S. counterparts.

Mantvur said the difference in an effort involving Soviet Jews would stem from the need for "universal criteria" to prevent discrepancies in funding between Soviet Jews who settle in different places.

He said there needed to be standard rates established for the monthly allowances given to the new immigrants as well as the amount of rent they are being charged during their period of "direct absorption" in their Israeli community.

"How we are going to do that requires some thinking even though we have some model programs," he said.

Lender said that Operation Exodus "should not be perceived as a campaign to just raise $420 million."

Rather, he said, it is "part of an international campaign to raise $600 million," a reference to a parallel $180 million campaign being waged by Keren Hayesod, UJA's affiliate outside the United States.

That $600 million "is part of a resettlement program in Israel of $3.6 billion," Lender added, which will "resettle, at a minimum, over 200,000 Jews over the next couple of years."

But the expectation that just 200,000 of the estimated 2.5 million Soviet Jews will move to Israel is "bare bones minimum," he said; hence the possibility of extending or expanding Operation Exodus.

The 2,500 delegates were urged by UJA leaders to ask their congressmen not to link a proposed $400 million in U.S.-backed housing loan guarantees to assurances on continued Jewish settlement on the West Bank.

Lender told the Young Leadership delegates that in the past year, 170 Soviet Jews have settled in the West Bank, representing one-half of 1 percent of Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel.

Those 170 "have chosen to go" to the West Bank "on their own," he said.

"Stand firm on that because we get pushed around on these issues," Lender added.

Court to Consider New Evidence Supporting Demjanjuk's Alibi

by Cathrine Gerson
JERUSALEM (JTA) — Israel's High Court of Justice has agreed to consider new evidence that might support the alibi of convicted war criminal John Demjanjuk, who was sentenced to death two years ago.

It is scheduled to hear his appeal May 14.

Demjanjuk's Israeli defense lawyer, Yoram Shefiel, will interview a witness in West Germany before trying to corroborate the claim that Demjanjuk is a victim of mistaken identity.

The Ukrainian-born former automobile worker from Cleveland was found guilty by a Jerusalem district court in 1988 of responsibility for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Jews between 1942 and 1943, when he was a guard at the Treblinka death camp. His brutality earned him the moniker "Ivan the Terrible." Demjanjuk, 69, claims he was a German prisoner of war at the time and was not in Treblinka.

Shefiel said he learned only in December of a West German woman, Josefine Dolle, whose testimony might give credence to that claim. Dolle, 70, was a clerk at the German military camp in Heuberg where, according to Demjanjuk, he was part of Vlasov's Army, a group of captured Red Army soldiers who defected to the Germans.

Dolle's evidence does not include photographs of Demjanjuk, nor does she claim to have known him. But she can testify that there were Red Army defectors at the camp at the time Demjanjuk says he was there, Shefiel explained.

No date has been set to take the testimony. Shefiel is expected to go to West Germany within a month, accompanied by a prosecution lawyer, to interview Dolle, who lives in the town of Stetten, near where the Heuberg camp was.

Demjanjuk was deported to Israel for trial in 1985, after being stripped of his American citizenship for lying about his wartime activities.

His conviction was based on the eyewitness testimony of Treblinka survivors and an identity card issued by the SS to Ukrainians and other defectors who served as concentration camp guards.

Around Town

by Dorothea Snyder

T. K. Kellman cancelled his 4:30 p.m. Japanese lesson last Thursday when a bumper-to-bumper parking lot on the Southeast Expressway delayed my 4 p.m. interview with him.

T. K. is the musical director and guitarist for Legends In Concert, a musical extravaganza which pays tribute to the superstars of yesterday, "Elvis Presley," "Marilyn Monroe," "Buddy Holly," "Roy Orbison," etc.

Greeting me with a broad Have-a-Nice-Day smile at the Legends reception desks in the World Trade Center, I babbled a brook of apologies, targeting the Southeast Expressway's bumper-to-bumper traffic as the culprit.

As we escalated down the metal mobile steps to the Theatre where Legends is staged, T. K.'s wit came to play after I found out he was born in Chicago, moved to Miami at 2 and started playing guitar at 14.

"I did weddings, Bar Mitzvahs," he said in a Yiddish dialect. "I told my Jewish parents I wanted to be a musician. They said you're kidding. You're only talking. What do you do? What will you do?"

"I'm us-sish. That's what musicians do, I told them.

"I'll tell ya'. It was not a popular choice among the Jewish family. My mother still says, 'But, what do you do?' I turned 42 the other day and I got this phone message from my mom. 'Terry, Happy Birthday to you. I'm not going to sing. How did you get so old? How did I stay so young is what I want to know?'"

"I told my mom when I was five years old, I wanted to be a guitar player and she said, 'When your grades are better, we'll get you a guitar. What if we get it for you and you don't follow through?'"

"I was born to be a guitar player. I knew I always wanted to play. Always. At 14, I took lessons from a teacher who came to the house with a huge, monstrous, dusty old guitar. When he opened the case, it creaked.

"He pointed out a fret. You got big fat fingers. I don't think you'll ever play that well. I took 10 or 11 lessons and then went on my own. He wanted to teach me all this basic stuff and I wanted to learn all the hootenanny stuff that was big at the time.

"After that, I got work. I actually had my first job at a New York's Eve party for $10.00 and I was scared to death.

"I was great. I was ignored the whole night. I brought my big book of "Easy To Read" music. (T. K. strum sings Beyond The Blue Horizon). I forgot to bring Auld Lang Syne for midnight so everybody sang it a cappella.

"It was the year after my Bar Mitzvah. I was supposed to be able to handle these things. I was fine. I thought I had turned professional."

"What did he do with his financial windfall? 'I think I bought Alka Seltzer because the chicken was bad!'"

He teamed up with a friend to play at high schools in Miami. "He had an old Craftsman guitar ordered from a Spiegel catalogue. The strings were fraying, fringing and fraying. We just tuned up to whatever we felt at the time. Tuning forks? Unheard-of concept at that time."

Business brought T. K.'s dad to California so the sixteen-year-old went too, playing with various rock and roll bands in high schools and missing a lot of school. He doesn't know if he ever received a diploma.

At 18, he auditioned for Glen Yarbrough, who had been with the Limelighters and was about to go on tour solo. "This would be my first real road gig with somebody of any stature. I had ulcers waiting for that phone call.

"I had ulcers for nothing. I should have had the ulcers after he called me because we went together on a tour three months at a time all over the country. It was tough for me, but I was so happy anyway.

"We went on the Ed Sullivan Show. My grandmother was alive then. Most Jewish people will know that when Ed Sullivan had people come on, they were the sons and daughters of the circus acts they saw in the old country. Those were the big stars... 'The Flying...'" and the famous guy with the plates... someone would fall once in a while.

"Ed Sullivan was an incredibly popular show. My grandmother refused to call him Ed Sullivan. She said anybody who brought those acts over had to be Jewish. She called him Ed Solomon.

"'You're going to be on the Ed Solomon Show,' she told me. 'I'll get Joe Greenberg over here. I'll have the schnapps. We'll sit around. We'll watch. We'll talk. We'll schmooze.'

"And they did. I'm supposed to be on the Ed Solomon Show. This is a big deal. They're all waiting for me to come on. I had been on tour for a year and had grown a beard. We did the show. I was on for about 2½ seconds and I knew my grandmother had planned to call me after the show.

"The phone call comes. I pick up the phone. She doesn't say, 'We saw you. Great job. We're thrilled.' She said, 'So what's with the beard? You have such a pretty face. Why are you covering up?'"

"Now, I want you to know without this beard, I look like those stickers, 'Have a nice day.' So I grew the beard. I've never shaved it off. Until the day she died, my grandmother didn't like the beard. And my mother, of course, still wants me to get a real job anyway.

"But when I was on the Ed Sullivan Show, it sort of gave a legitimacy to the fact that I was a musician. 'He's a professional. He was on Ed Solomon.'"

"I was making $150 a week, paid all my own expenses and I was in New York. I was left with nothing, except for $10 bucks a week and of course, I spent that on silly things... like food. Real frivolous kind of stuff.

"I did that for a couple of years and ended up with Dr. John, who played keyboard for all Sonny and Cher stuff. I had signed as a writer and artist with Charlie Greene productions.

"It was the time of Woodstock and I had played at a big festival in Europe with Dr. John. We went again, played with The Birds and a lot of the Sixties icons at the time. It was the last hurrah of the Sixties. The Vietnam War was intensifying. Naivete was coming to an end.

"I got a call from the same band who worked with Dr. John. They were working at the Hilton in Las Vegas and asked me to join them, which I did.

"One day this real tall, lanky guy walked in and heard me play. 'Can I talk to you about a job?' he asked. I told him we had all the musicians we needed.

"He said, 'I'm meaning to hire you. I'm Bobby Darin's conductor and I'd like you to come in and work for us.'"

T. K.'s response: "Sure I did! When I was a kid, Bobby Darin was an incredible superstar. It was as if Michael Jackson came in and said, 'Hey, come on the tour.'"

"The first thing he said to me was 'Welcome to the family.' I was so nervous I didn't hear him. He was kind of intimidating at first because he was such a huge name. Somehow, I never dreamed I'd meet Bobby Darin, let alone work with him.

"He was an incredible and amazing entertainer, the most talented I ever worked with. There was nobody who could compare to him on stage... even today in terms of personal magnetism.

"As soon as he walked out, he owned the stage. He'd do impressions, was a great actor and singer, a tremendous comedian with impeccable timing. He played great keyboard, drums, good vibes, blues harp, and guitar.

"He was a very intense individual because he knew he was living on

Born To Be A Guitar Player

T. K. Kellman, the musical director and guitarist for Legends In Concert, on stage at the World Trade Center Theatre in Boston through April 14.

borrowed time with his heart condition. He had been expected only to live until 11 years old. If he could have held on a couple of years until the bypass operation was perfected, he'd be alive today.

"He was protective of me and the band and became a real friend to my own family. When my dad had his heart attack, Bobby took my mom under his wing and counseled her, tried to make her see what it felt like from my dad's side, and tried to make her understand the healing powers. Psychologically, he was terrific. He was just a great guy and a great guy to work with. He died in 1973."

In talking about T. K.'s association with Tony Orlando, he said, "We shared a mutual love for Bobby. Whenever we see each other, we immediately go into Groucho Marx impressions the way Bobby Darin used to do it.

"I taught Tony. Bobby was the first person to show me how to do impressions. Since then, I've done a lot of voice overs and acting. I've used his approach to it."

T. K. Kellman has written theme music for TV stations, business advertising, and many Las Vegas hotels. "If you ever call the Imperial Palace Hotel and they put you on hold, you'll hear all my music and me doing W. C. Fields."

T. K.'s skill in commercial recording and production has won him the BPME International Gold Medallion for best TV Campaign two years in a row. "BPME competes worldwide. We were finalists against New Zealand, Canada, and a couple of other countries. I won for the whole world so it was nice."

The Legends musical director has also won 17 BPME Silver Medallion Award and 17 APDE awards for jingle productions in the Las Vegas market.

Kenny Rogers knew T. K. from his reputation in the music industry and his association with Bobby Darin. He asked T. K. to put together a band for him. "At that time, Kenny wanted to get back into country music and wanted to move back to Nashville. He offered me a job to go with him.

"For some reason, my gut feeling told me not to. I had a recording studio. I was planning to build, plenty of work in Vegas, was well known and making some in-roads there.

"So, I turned him down, thanked him, and we've been friends ever since, though I kind of have lost touch with him now."

T. K.'s involvement with Legends started six years ago strictly as a gig, he said. He was called to replace a guitar player leaving the show. When Legends was in its infancy, he worked with them nine months, but he tired of playing guitar, chose to quit and devote time to his advertising agency, Jingle Factory productions, recording studio and writing music for several local movie productions.

"When it was time for Legends to branch out, Chris Caswell, who conducts for Paul Williams, recommended me to take over his spot. I stepped in five years ago and didn't mind returning as musical director.

"At that time, I was going through a divorce, selling out the business, sort of getting burned out and thought it would be a nice challenge."

Relationships are tough, he said. "I do a lot of travelling. Four days before I got here, I was in Tokyo, Hong Kong and Las Vegas. I was touring with Legends in Japan."

Besides his role as Legends music director, the versatile performer worked to put together the show's multimedia presentation that highlights images, people, places, music and events from the Fifties to the present.

"We put together a video that is very emotional, funny and poignant at the same time. We've had a tremendous response. The video introduces the acts that appear on stage.

"It does agree with me, but I do a lot of other stuff too," he laughed. "In Nightmare on Elm Street III, I play a doctor. I'm on for three seconds and you can see me flying past a nun. In Invasion Earth I played a great alien marching down the street with a wierd looking gun. I do bit parts like that. Those are fun.

"I have my own production company, T. K. Music, which goes with me wherever I go. I've done a lot of voice-over work in Las Vegas and Los Angeles, where I have an agent."

T. K.'s mother lives with his sister, her husband and children in Las Vegas. His father passed on a few years ago. "Herman Louis Kellman was his name. When he was young and anti-Semitism was prevalent, he couldn't get work so he changed his name to Kelly Kellman."

"Kelly Kellmann," he repeated, getting a kick out of the sound, and related that his father later became public relations director of Tropical Park Race Track in Miami, hired by a Saul Silverman.

Breaking into a Rodney Dangerfield impression and a wind down to T. K. himself, he spoke of how much fun Legends is.

"The cast is like a family. We have our squabbles. It's like a family in the fact that everyone feels they can trust each other enough to get mad at each other, too."

2nd Story Theatre Launches "Stage II"

2nd Story Theatre is fulfilling a long-held dream and adding a second stage to its theatre at School One at the corner of John and Hope Streets, that they're calling Stage II. Stage I will premiere March 28 with a production of John M. Synge's The Tinker's Wedding directed by Trinity Rep actor Peter Gerety. Stage II performances will run Wednesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. through May 3. The already established space, Stage I, will present Jon Klein's comedy, T Bone N Weasel, directed by Artistic Director, Patricia Hegnauer, beginning March 23 with performances running Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through April 28.

2nd Story Theatre Artistic Director Patricia Hegnauer and Producer Ed Shea are very excited about this new expansion of their theatre. "We are pleased and proud to announce the realization of a longtime dream — the creation of a second performance space here at 2nd Story Theatre. Stage II is an intimate 70-seat theatre that will house productions to perform concurrently with those produced for our already established performance space, Stage I, which seats 120. Our goal is to fulfill the needs of our fast-growing audience without forsaking the intimate theatrical experience our audiences have come to expect from us at 2nd Story. To inaugurate Stage I and Stage II, we've chosen two plays, written ninety years apart, that coincidentally share a common theme and the common thread of laughter, John M. Synge's The Tinker's Wedding and Jon Klein's T Bone N Weasel." Ed Shea and Pat Hegnauer say that they are "working toward Equity status, hoping to begin the 1990-91 season on a Small Professional Theatre contract. We could offer more to our acting ensemble and expand our talent pool to include Equity artists as well."

T Bone N Weasel and The Tinker's Wedding could be billed as "Two for the Road," as they both take place somewhere on the road to nowhere with the characters "outsiders" on the fringe of society trying to maneuver a way in, although they decide the "trade-off" is not worth it in the end. Says producer Ed

Shea, "If Klein's T Bone N Weasel met up with Synge's Mary, Michael and Sarah, they'd have a helluva good time!"

Stage I

T Bone N Weasel by Jon Klein was first produced by the Actors Theatre of Louisville in their festival of New American Plays, where it was lauded as one of the most original comedies of that season. Patricia Hegnauer directs this off-the-wall comedy with Ed Shea as Weasel, Rochel Coleman as T Bone, and Damon Hartley as the host of other characters that they meet on their unusual, high-spirited adventure. Hoping to bring themselves up to at least poverty level, two ex-conicts, T Bone N Weasel, have "permanently borrowed" a Buick and have set off across South Carolina in search of a hot meal or an easy mark. Their antic misadventures chronicle a couple of life's lovable losers on the road to self-respect. Performances begin March 23 and run through April 28 on Stage I, Fridays and Saturdays at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $10. There will be one half-price ($5) performance on Thursday, April 5.

Stage II

The Tinker's Wedding is a wonderful warm comedy by Irish playwright John M. Synge, most famous for his plays Playboy of the Western World and Riders to the Sea. Directed by Trinity Rep veteran Peter Gerety, The Tinker's Wedding is a simple, lyrical Irish drama about simple country people, rich and gentle and humorous. John Synge wrote about his countrymen: "We have a popular imagination that is fiery, magnificent and tender." In his play The Tinker's Wedding, Irish tinkers Sarah Casey and Michael Byrne have been traveling and working together for years. But as it is not customary for the like of tinkers to be married, she doesn't share his name.

Weapons of the Spirit

by Michael Fink

Special to the Herald

Michael Janusonis of the Journal gave it two stars, and the public stayed away. What a shame. Weapons of the Spirit was the most elegant film I have seen in years. I'm proud that it was made by an American, and by a Jew, Pierre Sauvage, a very ordinary looking young man, was born in the Huguenot village that extraordinarily protected and saved its Jews, the Jews who came for refuge. The beauty of the film is manifold. The editing shows careful and graceful craftsmanship. The writing is rich, tough, precise. But what makes the movie outstanding is the camera's attention to the nobility of the people now elderly — some since passed away — who were there, and then young. The filming reveals the eternal beauty of the human face. We live in a culture that worships youth, and on the screen we seek out artificial youthful images that never reach genuine beauty but only surface prettiness. Our melodrama is formulaic, leaving us nothing to think or wonder about, but only easy answers and cheap thrills that satisfy the demands of the entertainment business.

Anyone with an eye, heart and mind for beauty would have gained from seeing and considering Weapons of the Spirit. In complexity, forthrightness, and intimacy, it stands out.

Vichy, France was a bad place, a place of moral cowardice and betrayal. But in one Huguenot Protestant village a group of people defied Nazi Europe and its collaborators and left us with a question — why? The answer is not sentimental. Instead, the question gives the filmmaker a chance to reach into the visual files of France, and the personal files of his own life. Most Hollywood films are in a sense impersonal. They are made by so many people that there is no point of view. Weapons bears the specific stamp of one child born in the midst of this ultimate danger and heroism, and raised later in comfortable postwar America. I much regret that his fine accomplishment, filled with pathos, sadness, and a sense too of multifaceted victory, and put together with irony and honesty — should have passed by unacknowledged.

A Thought

Page after page of the calendar slips away, revealing the joys and the sorrows, the traditions and the ceremonies of the custom of the Jewish people. Before we know it, the festivals and holidays are gone and only memories remain. But we are not saddened, because we know that with the call of the shofar on Rosh Hashanah, we will begin again the endless, brilliant pageant of the Jewish Year.

Would you like to know more about the Jewish holidays? And about many other interesting facts of Jewish life? For the past two years the synagogue has had weekly commentaries. Our purpose is to make available points in history which some may have forgotten, and, to encourage community participation with our Shul. Be part of our wonderful tradition. We are close to 100 years old.

We have programs ongoing that are filled with the drama and excitement of Bar/Bat Mitzvah, of offering Great Jewish Books, of customs and ceremonies in far away lands, and the romance of Judaism in our own homes. For those among us who want to have the understanding and meaning of Judaism, we can be your guides as you go about the earnest but very rewarding task of learning our Jewish heritage.

Soon the festival of Passover will be here. During the eight days of Passover, we relive the Exodus from Egypt. At the Seder meals on the first two nights of Passover, we read the Haggadah, a book which tells us the story and meaning of Passover, and we eat Matzoh and other foods which remind us of the days of slavery and the golden freedom which we all enjoy today. Passover also was one of the three Festivals (Sukkot and Shavuot are the other two) on which our ancestors made a Pilgrimage to Jerusalem to bring an offering at the Temple. Today, Passover has lost none of its ancient meaning as a timeless story of liberation from slavery.

Morning services for Mondays and Thursdays are at 6:30 a.m., and for Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Friday at 6:45 a.m. Saturdays services begin at 8:30 a.m. and on Sunday at 7:45 a.m.

There are thirteen holidays and festivals in the Jewish calendar. Morning services for these days begin at 8:30 a.m. Please join the congregation. No introductions are needed! You have everything to gain and absolutely nothing to lose.

Majestic Senior Guild

The first regular meeting of the Majestic Senior Guild will be held on Tuesday, March 27, 1990 at 12:30 p.m. at Temple Torat Yisrael, 330 Park Ave., Cranston. Try to attend. Refreshments will be served and there will be old friends to greet after your winter vacations.

The second regular meeting will be on April 24, 1990 at 12:30 p.m. at Temple Torat Yisrael, 330 Park Ave., Cranston. There will be an interesting program, refreshments and more old friends with whom you can socialize.

The following trips will be scheduled for this spring, summer and fall.

May 6, 1990 — Sunday Matinee. Jewish musical in Newton, Mass. Seating is limited. Reserve early. Rates will be announced at the next meeting.

May 31, 1990 — Baltimore Night Life Tour. Three nights and four days. Sightseeing, shows each evening, three breakfasts and three dinners. Plan early for an interesting and fun trip. Details and brochures at the next meeting.

June 22, 1990 — Bucks County. An Old World night life tour. Home of the Nobel Prize winner, author Pearl Buck. Two nights and three days. Sightseeing, dinner shows nightly. This will be a most enjoyable trip.

June 26, 1990 — Annual luncheon and installation of officers at 12 noon at the Providence Marriott Hotel. There will be dancing, gifts, door prizes and special entertainment.

August 5, 1990 — Our annual summer vacation at The Pines in the Catskills. Eight days and seven nights, Sunday to Sunday at the height of the summer season. This is not to be missed.

September 5, 1990 — Two nights and three days in Atlantic City at the new Taj Mahal. Includes two shows. Plan early.

October 1990 — The exact date will be announced later. 16-day deluxe trip. Includes Hawaii (three islands), Hula shows, night life, sunset dinner cruise, etc. Also includes San Francisco and Las Vegas.

It is not too early to start planning for any of these trips. For further information call Dorothy Barfield 823-7687, Pearl Stayman 738-0225, Harold Gordon 738-3905, or Bertha Gershman 944-8209.

We hope to see you all at the first meeting of the season and wish you all a Happy and Healthy Passover with your family and friends.

Actress' Appearance Cancelled

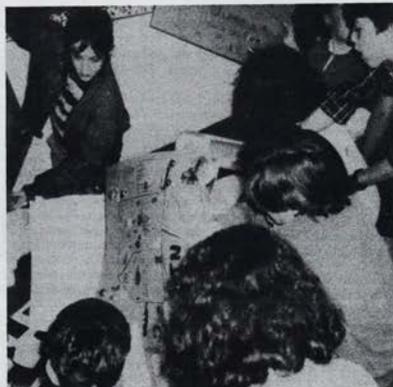

The performance of Israeli Award winning actress Leora Rivlin scheduled for March 26 in the Jewish Federation Board Room has been cancelled. The decision to cancel was made by the Jewish Federation in consideration of programs scheduled by other organizations, according to May-Ronny Sock, JFRI Women's Division Director.

Because Rivlin's 1990 tour in the United States is tightly managed, it will not be possible to reschedule her appearance, according to Sock.

PHDS Academic Fair

Students in Pre K-8 at the Providence Hebrew Day School have been "madly busy" preparing for the 1990 Academic Fair. Some of the projects include a Medieval Village constructed by the seventh grade (Thanks to Star Appliance and Furniture in Providence for the empty refrigerator and stove boxes), thirteen types of poetry by the sixth grade, a quilt made by the kindergarten, "a butterfly revolution" by the first grade, and Foods in the Torah by the seventh grade.

Goldsmith-Taub

The wedding of Barbara J. Goldsmith and Peter Taub took place February 25 at Temple Beth-El, Providence. A reception was held at the Omni Biltmore Hotel following the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Goldsmith of Seekonk and the granddaughter of Dr. Carl Jagolinzer, Providence. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Taub of Montreal, Canada.

Dr. Dorothy Goldsmith Jansma, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Bruce Taub, brother of the groom, was the best man. Ushers were David P. Goldsmith of Harmony, R.I., and Dr. Paul Jansma of Columbus, Ohio. Beanna Goldsmith, niece of the bride, and Lindsay and Jillian Taub, nieces of the groom, were flower girls. The bride, who will continue to use her own name professionally, heads Barbara J. Goldsmith & Company, an environmental management consulting firm based in Cambridge, Mass. She is a graduate of George Washington University and Harvard University.

Mr. Taub is U.S./Canada manager for a manufacturing concern. He is a graduate of Concordia University and McGill University, Montreal.

A trip to Hawaii and Hong Kong is planned for later in the year. They will reside in Watertown, Mass.

Choose A Caterer, Enlist An Entertainer Pick A Photographer At The Party Expo

Where can you plan an entire Bar Mitzvah or wedding in a single afternoon? Where can you discuss menus with six kosher caterers, see photo albums of four photographers, select or design your invitations, audition entertainers, select your table linens and decorations, and make arrangements for your out-of-town guests? Where can you get information on a Bar Mitzvah trip to Israel or a honeymoon to the Caribbean? And where can you hire a party planner to do all of the above for you, while you check out the party clothing that is being modeled?

At the Party Expo — the first (but probably not the last) event of its kind in Rhode Island — thirty suppliers of party goods and services will be "strutting their stuff" from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday, March 25, at the Jewish Community Center. There will be no admission charge. Food and beverages will be available for purchase.

This event, which is sponsored by the Parents' Association of the Alperin Schechter Day School, is modeled after a similar event held annually in New Jersey. However, this Party Expo has gone one step beyond by also producing a Party Services Directory, which will be distributed free of charge to those who attend. Besides the exhibitors' ads, the directory will contain ads from additional calligraphers, party accommodators, liquor supplies, gift shops (with bridal registries), caterers, hotels, beauty salons, entertainers, travel agencies, bakeries, rental services, and clothing stores specializing in pre-fabricated dresses and boys' suits.

This Party Expo is being offered as a public service to the entire community. According to Karen Weintraub and Cindy Kaplan, co-chairmen, the exhibitors and advertisers represent a wide range of services and prices — literally something for everyone. And, in case one gets too carried away with his or her plans, there is an ad in the directory for Mazon, the charitable organization that feeds the poor from contributions donated by party-throwers, who agree to send Mazon a certain percentage of what they spend on their event.

Temple Sinai Sisterhood Meeting

Temple Sinai will hold its next sisterhood meeting on Monday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the Temple Social Hall. Speaker for the evening will be Dermatologist Dr. Maria Angermeyer, who will discuss such topics as skin care, cancer, leg vein treatments, Retin-A and moles. A coffee hour will follow the discussion.

Spicuzza's MARKET Inc.

"Exclusively the Best"

HI, my name is Richard Spicuzza, and I'd like to introduce you to Spicuzza's Market. Do you remember the neighborhood market you used to visit with your mother and grandmother? The aroma of fresh food and exotic spices, everything fresh and clean, and the people really friendly and eager to help you, never too busy to fix that special cut of meat for you.

That's the way I run Spicuzza's Market.

Be drawn to our meat counter where we feature prime and choice beef, provolone (milk fed), fresh pork, American spring lamb and fresh grade A poultry. Experience our specialty items — we offer a large variety: homemade Italian sausage, veal sausage (cholesterol free), stuffed pork chops, chicken cordon bleu, and much more — all prepared on the premises daily.

The deli counter carries a full line of Boar's Head low-salt deli products. Di Parma Italian ham, and our own roast beef and turkey with no salt or preservatives added. Enjoy our delicious prepared foods made fresh daily. And while you're shopping, stop by the produce counter for the freshest fruits and vegetables purchased daily.

Come to Spicuzza's Market and experience the quality and service you remember and deserve. Bring in this ad and we will give you a free jar of our own all-natural spaghetti sauce as a get-acquainted gift. I think you'll like it — the sauce and Spicuzza's Market.

Among the many interesting and thought-provoking projects on display were: "The effect of Nintendo on the pulse rate"

(Rachel Isenberg), "Pinhole Camera" (Jonah Israeli), "Acidity in Narragansett Bay" (Jeremy Isenberg), "How caffeine affects the heart rate" (Matthew Peiser), "Acid Rain: Death from Above" (Ron Klein), "Which is the best feast for the yeast?!" (David Mangiantino)

Winners of the 1990 Schechter Science Fair are:

6th GRADE
 • First Place: Jeremy Sadler, "Which Battery is Best?"; Melissa

Mann; "Do Plants Generate Heat?"

• Third Place: Gordon Liss: "Acids, Bases & Neutral Substances"

• Honorable Mention: Joshua Ellison: "How the eye aids in the perception of animation"; Nadav Mer: "Paper airplanes — Which flies best?"; Matthew Bromberg: "Extraordinary Elastic Sounds"

• First Place: Jessica Schiffman: "Photo-Dormancy"

• Second Place: Jeremy Stein: "Heat Transference"

• Third Place: Mimi Ruyvicker: "Conductors & Insulators in Electricity"

• Honorable Mention: Liat Savin: "Learning Foreign Languages"; Deborah Bojar: "Landfills and Wastepaper"

8th GRADE

• First Place: Rachel Roseman: "Peer Pressure"

• Second Place: Michael Gerberoff: "Electrolytic Solutions"

• Third Place: Gayle Bornstein: "Is this for real? Optical illusions"

• Honorable Mention: Oren Kaufner: "Memory"

The winners of the Schechter Science Fair advance to the State Science Fair held at Community College of Rhode Island in Warwick.

Temple Beth-El Sisterhood

On April 2, 1990, the Temple's Sisterhood will have an Open Board Meeting. The meeting will kick off at 6 p.m. with a deli-dinner followed by an Open Board Meeting at 6:45 p.m. The evening's program will begin at 7:30 p.m. with guest speaker Marc Hochler, M.D. His topic will feature "What every woman should know about health care." Dessert and coffee will follow the evening's program.

If transportation is needed, please call the Temple office at 331-6070. We look forward to seeing you there at Temple Beth-El, 70 Orchard Avenue, Providence.

George Goldman

Memorial Scholarship

The George Goldman Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established by his son, John Goldman, at the Providence Hebrew Day School, the New England Academy of Torah's High School Division, also the New England Rabbinical College, its post-high school division, with the building located at 450 Elm Grove Ave. and 262 Blackstone Blvd., Providence.

John Goldman, prominent young business executive, a graduate of Wharton Business School, with a Master's in Accounting, was the third generation connected with the Providence Window Cleaning and Richmond Sales business before it was sold. An initial gift of $50,000 was made to the Scholarship Endowment Fund of the above institutions, Thomas W. Pearlman, President of New England Academy of Torah stated. Over the years the Goldman family and friends are expected to add additional funds to this to make it one of the most important endowment funds at the school. The lower school now has an endowment fund recently started and is growing rapidly.

Most experts and Jewish educators agree that the only effective way to transmit Jewish values is through intensive, quality, Jewish education in Day School and Yeshivas. This helps the youth develop a love of man and God and understanding, commitment to their great heritage and ethical ideals. No other system has passed the test of time. As the only way to make sure that Hitler and Stalin's attempt to eliminate not only the Jewish people but their great and beautiful heritage will not succeed by force or assimilation, John Goldman and his wife, Rhonda, are at the forefront as they are currently raising a family in Jerusalem and taking advanced Judaic studies in order to practice and teach.

Boy Scout Camp Enlists Jewish Chaplain

For the first time in 75 years, there will be a full-time Jewish Chaplain at the Boy Scout Camp Yawgoog. The Chaplain will conduct the Sabbath services and fill the needs of the ever-increasing number of Jewish boys attending Camp Yawgoog. Anyone interested in this position should write to Jerry Aron, Jewish Committee on Scouting, Narragansett Council BSA, 175 Broad St., Providence 02903.

The Jewish Committee on Scouting is supported by the Jewish Federation.

NCJW Spring Workshop Location Change

The National Council of Jewish Women R.I. Section has changed the location of its second spring workshop on Wednesday, March 28 at 10 a.m. to 10 Cushing St., Providence.

Kay Kaplan, V.P. of Public Affairs, said, "This is a change from the Scott St. address as listed in the 'Tapping Your Inner Resources' flyer which was sent to all members. The program remains the same, but will begin at 10 a.m. instead of 9:30 a.m. as printed.

Francine Fink will conduct a workshop on "Intuition & Creativity." She will address such areas as: What is intuition? Who has it? Is there a connection between intuition and creativity? How can we all benefit from this connection?

Mrs. Fink is President of Trainers Unlimited which provides custom designed training programs for the business community.

The first workshop of this spring series, "Be the Best You Can Be," was led by Seena Cittleman, a speech consultant with the Speech Improvement Company of Cranston. She concentrated on improving your self-image by improving your oral image. She demonstrated how correct breathing can reduce stress in our lives, as well as improve our health and appearance and increase our self-confidence.

All members of NCJW and friends are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served. For additional information call Kay Kaplan at 942-5807.

Moes Chitim: Money For Wheat

One of the first things said at the Passover seder is "Let all who are hungry come and eat: all who are needy come and celebrate the Passover with us."

The United Moes Chitim Fund, administered by Jewish Family Service, helps the old, the infirm, the lonely and the poor enjoy matzohs and other special foods at Passover time; sponsors seders for the residents of the Institute of Mental Health and the Ladd Center; and helps to fund the Community Seder held at the Jewish Community Center of Rhode Island on the second evening of Passover each year.

According to Jewish tradition, Moes Chitim is an obligation. To fulfill the obligation, please send a donation to the United Moes Chitim Fund, c/o Jewish Family Service, 229 Waterman Street, Providence, RI 02906.

Talent Show at Alperin Schechter

There was certainly an abundance of talent on stage at the Annual Talent Show at the Alperin Schechter Day School! Music and dance, singing, magic and comedy routines showcased talented students from Kindergarten through Eighth Grade.

At the piano were Katya Berezin, Michael Furman, Ilana Licht, Judd Schiffman, Jacob Schiffman, Ben Rotenberg, Noah Robins-Liben, Adam Wallick, and Michael Radparvar.

Other musical performers included: David Dudek on the electric keyboard, Ramesh Radparvar and Roman Tseytin on the violin, and Jeremy Stein on the flute.

Comedy routines were provided by Oren Kaufner and Joshua Schiffman, while Ami Hersh and Joshua Beraha performed in a magic show.

Pawtucket-Central Falls Hadassah
There will be a doctored tour of the current exhibit in the Holocaust Museum and a speaker. This is a most important meeting. We hope that you will participate in this special evening. Ruth Fixler is the Program Chairperson.

Buchenwald Liberators Congregation To Speak Of Experiences Ohave Sholam March 26

Dr. Leon Bass, who as a member of the United States Armed Forces participated in freeing prisoners at Buchenwald, will describe his eyewitness account of the camp on Monday, March 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center of Rhode Island, 401 Elm Grove Avenue, Providence. The program, sponsored by the Rhode Island Holocaust Memorial Museum, is free and open to the community.

Dr. Bass, now a retired high school principal, offers his unique perspective on the liberation of Buchenwald as a Black southerner. His presentation is part of a two-day workshop, "Facing History and Ourselves," which is being offered to local school-teachers.

For further information on the programs of the Rhode Island Holocaust Memorial Museum, call Beth Cohen at 861-8800.

NCJW Scholarships

National Council of Jewish Women, Rhode Island Section, will be awarding scholarships to Rhode Island area students attending college in the fall of 1990. Priority will be given to applicants who have been involved in service to others, are highly motivated and are in need of financial help. Students desiring applications should write to Marion Goldsmith, 58 Jacob Hill, Seekonk, Mass. 02771 or telephone 336-5556. The deadline for applications is May 20, 1990.

Mother Earth To Appear In Providence

Mother Earth's Medicine Show, and ecology fair for everyone to enjoy, will be held Sunday, April 1 (no foolin') at the Jewish Community Center of R.I., 401 Elm Grove Ave., across from the Brown football stadium, from 1-5 p.m. Admission is free.

Exhibits by Save the Bay, Audubon Society, Narragansett Electric, U.S. EPA, R.I. DEM, just to name a few, will provide information about ways to protect and preserve the environment in our daily lives. There will be displays on energy and water conservation devices for the home. There will be opportunities to plant trees and reduce garbage. There will also be children's entertainment provided throughout the afternoon from such local artists as Laura Berkson, Lon Cerel, Sparky Davis, and John Tierney. Mother Earth herself will be there to oversee it all. The fair is sponsored by the Earth Fair Committee which is under the auspices of the R.I. Earth Day Committee, and represents a coalition of volunteers from synagogues and churches in the Greater Providence area. For information call (401) 861-8800.

Tikkun Editor Michael Lerner To Speak At Brandeis University

DAVID COOPERBERG
 PROVIDENCE — David Cooperberg, 90, a resident of the Jewish Home for the Aged, 99 Hillside Ave., founder of the former Cooper Motor Sales Co. in Providence and its proprietor for 50 years before retiring in 1974, died Monday, March 12, 1990, at the home.

Born in Austria, he was a son of the late Samuel and Bella Cooperberg. He had lived in Providence for a number of years, and had lived in Westerly for 45 years.

Mr. Cooperberg was a member of the Elks Lodge of Westerly. He leaves a daughter, Sandra E. Surdutt of Providence, and a granddaughter.

 A graveside service was held Wednesday, March 14, at Lincoln Park Cemetery, Post Road, Warwick. Services were coordinated by Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St., Providence.

UNVEILING

The family of the late Bessie Frank announces an unveiling for Sunday, March 25, 1990, at 3:30 p.m. at the Lincoln Park Cemetery in Warwick.

May all your loved ones live to a hundred and twenty years.

Would that this could be.

Would that we never had to face the sad prospect of arranging for the funeral of a Loved One.

Because we can never truly be prepared for this.

It is a time of overwhelming grief...when we are most vulnerable...when thoughts of "arrangements" and "costs" seem almost demeaning to the memory of the Loved One.

It is a time when the strongest of us needs a haven of trust.

Where can we find this haven?

First, in the counsel and guidance of a Rabbi. Then, in the integrity of your Funeral Director.

HELEN FESSEL

PROVIDENCE — Helen Fessel, 83, formerly of Hope Street, died Wednesday, March 14, 1990, at the Hattie Ide Chaffee Home, East Providence. She was the widow of Max Fessel.

Born in Austria, a daughter of the late Israel and Gittel (Weinreich) Oelbaum, she lived in Providence for 50 years.

Mrs. Fessel was a member of Temple Emanu-El and Congregation Shaare Zedek.

She leaves two sons, Norbert Fessel of Barrington and Dr. Rafael Fessel of Cambridge, Mass.; a daughter, Evelyn Brier of Providence; a brother, Maurice Oelbaum of Cumberland, and six grandchildren.

The funeral service was held Thursday, March 15, at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel, 458 Hope St. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

DANIEL M. SHUSTER

PROVIDENCE — Daniel M. Shuster, 21, a student at Brown University who resided at 94 Angell St., died at his residence, Thursday, March 8, 1990.

He was born in Silver Spring, Md., a son of Susan (Klein) Shuster Agranoff and Arnold Shuster, both of Bloomington, Ind.

He is also survived by two brothers, Jonathan Shuster, Cambridge, Mass., and David Shuster, Washington, D.C.; his stepfather, Robert Agranoff, Bloomington; a stepbrother, David Agranoff, Bloomington; and a stepsister, Karen Agranoff of Muncie, Ind. He is also survived by his maternal grandmother, Dora Klein, Delray Beach, Fla., and his paternal grandmother, Pauline Shuster, Montreal, Quebec.

Funeral services were held Sunday at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope Street, Providence, and also in Bloomington, Ind., where burial took place. Students at Brown University had a memorial service March 19.

JOSEPH WAKSLER

PROVIDENCE — Joseph Waksler, 90, of the Summit Medical Center, 1085 N. Main St., formerly of Lorimer Avenue, an industrial supplies salesman for the Simon Supply Co., Fall River, for 40 years before retiring 15 years ago, died Sunday, March 11, 1990, at the center. He was the husband of the late Rachel (Simon) Waksler.

Born in Kiev, Russia, a son of the late Jacob and Fanny Waksler, he lived in Providence for more than 85 years.

Mr. Waksler was a member of Temple Emanu-El.

He leaves a son, Norman Waksler of Cambridge, Mass., and a sister, Esther Rosenfield of Providence.

The funeral service was held Tuesday, March 13, at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

As far as Enemies goes, I had a few problems with Paul Mazursky's treatment of the tale. Isaac Singer to be sure likes to add a little sex and a little understate-ment to draw its audience by seeking an "adult" rating. And while comedy is high Jewish art, it can also serve as an evasion — in Hollywood — of dealing with tragedy. I'm not talking of weepy soap opera, but the reality of pain and loss. Enemies is better written and read than filmed and seen.

National Council Of Jewish Women Offering Trip To Monet Exhibit

Experience the exhibition of famous paintings by Claude Monet coming to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Listen to a recorded tour of the approximately 90 series paintings represented by such works as Grainstacks, Poplars, and Rouen Cathedral, as well as lesser-known views such as the Cliffs at Varengeville and Dieppe, and Mount Kolsaas in Norway.

The group will travel by luxury motor coach from Providence on Wednesday, April 18, 1990 at 9:15 a.m. from the JCC, returning at approximately 2:30 p.m.

The cost, $38, includes round trip transportation, reserved time of entry, a recorded tour of the exhibition, and a box lunch. Reservations are limited to the first 90 requests and must be accompanied by a check. Everyone is welcome. Payment is nonrefundable. Please make your reservations by sending a check made payable to NCJW to:

Orthodox Parties

would have to ensure the favorable vote of every single remaining Kneset member.

Agudah's faction chairman, Rabbi Moshe Feldman, said that his party "has no confidence in the prime minister" — seeming to imply that it would join Labor and the left in a no-confidence vote.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, Labor's No. 2 leader, also reportedly picked up warm words of encouragement from Rabbi Yohanan Soffer, head of the Etlau Yeshiva and a member of the presidium of Agudah's Council of Torah Sages.

Rumors abounded in the Kneset that at least one member of Shas would conveniently take sick at the operative moment, again giving Labor an advantage.

Degel HaTorah was considered unlikely to allow its rivals in Agudah to "steal a march" on them by being the only haredi party "in on the ground floor" of an evolving Labor-led narrow coalition.

Degel's two Kneset members, Avraham Ravitz and Moshe Gafni, met with their ailing mentor, Rabbi Eliezer Schach of Bnei Brak, to receive his blessing and his orders.

He reportedly instructed them to inform Shamir that they would support him only if he reinstated Peres and announced his acceptance of the U.S. peace proposals. It was Shamir's reluctance to call a vote on those proposals that precipitated the government crisis.

Pundits therefore speculated that Degel would either absent itself or vote with Labor, thereby spoiling Shamir's hope of surviving the vote.

Similarly, the Shas Kneset members were expected to con-vene with their party's Council of Torah Sages under Rabbi Ovadia Yosef before the deadline.

The various sages themselves have been the targets of intensive lobbying by the leading politicians of Likud and Labor. Shamir and Peres have either sought audiences with each of them or tried to arrange lengthy telephone conversations to explain their respective positions.

If enough Orthodox swing away from the Likud and the government falls, the political community will be cast into a lengthy period of uncertainty while President Chaim Herzog goes through his statutory duty of consulting with all the parties in the Kneset to decide which leader is best placed to form a new government.

Horner says she checks with their doctors to insure that her employees are healthy and fit for the job. Senior citizens, she says, are good prospects for house sitting because of their maturity, responsibility and availability.

Each potential sitter is carefully screened at their own home by Horner and they receive a manual, "Dos and Don'ts of a Sitter." She checks for personal character, neatness, ability to handle a crisis, interest in people and pets, degree of independence and reliability. She doesn't hire anyone she wouldn't feel comfortable with in her own home.

In case of dishonesty or negligence, the sitters are bonded and insured. And, says Horner, the homeowner will get 24-hour backup service with a guarantee that any emergency will be handled on the spot.

Before each new assignment, the service associate will meet the client so they are both familiar with each other.

"I don't see any problem with special requests," said Horner when asked about keeping a house Kosher.

Horner will work part-time as a regular nursing staff member at Northwest Community Nursing and Health Service in Harmony and with the R.I. Blood Center until her new company kicks in fully. Prior to Northwest and the R.I. Blood Center in Providence (she also worked at Northwest for seven years as an Assistant Director), she was director of nursing at Hospice Care of R.I. in Providence for 5 years, Assistant Chief Nurse at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Newport for one and a half years and a Director of Hospice in Maine for 7 years.

For more information, contact Horner at 129 Liberty Street, Pawtucket, or call (401) 751-3121 or (508) 336-4429.

father to son to mother to daughter throughout a night, in dim light with curtains drawn. I told my audience I would rather have this than a Nobel Prize, and I meant it.

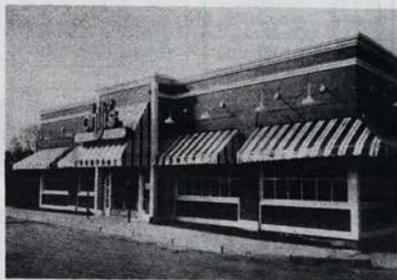

There was a final memento. I was to deliver a presentation before the monument to the Warsaw ghetto uprising a few blocks from Mila 18. By the time it was my turn to speak, it had become dark. A number of people lit torches and formed a semicircle around me so I could see my notes. The monument wavered behind me in an eerie flaming light. I read a particular passage from my book, Mila 18, where a young boy had been taken out of the ghetto to a safe house in the country. He was chosen because of his strength and deemed to have the best chance of survival. His uncle, a commander of the Jewish forces gave him his orders: to survive for a hundred thousand children who would be murdered in Treblinka.

At that instant I felt something hot on my hand. It continued to drop onto the page of notes that I had written on Warsaw Holiday Inn stationery. At first I thought it was blood, but then it hardened like a seal, and I realized it was wax dripping from someone's torch. I looked up for an instant and saw my friend Eric Michel, a longtime Jewish leader and Holocaust survivor, holding that torch over me. The boy I was reading about could have been Eric. He embodies the miraculous passage of Jewish life.

And so it will always be. Every generation of Jews since the fall of the Second Temple has been both blessed and cursed with the commission of doing what is necessary in its lifetime for the survival of our people. The last great Jewish community under tyranny is in imminent peril. We have endured one Holocaust in our lives. We must never again bear witness to our women and children being paraded naked before the enemy. We must give our treasure, our voice, everything and anything to bring our people from slavery to freedom.

Philippe Entremont To Appear With Rhode Island Philharmonic

Philippe Entremont whose style and talent at the piano and on the podium have won him critical acclaim on five continents, will appear with the Rhode Island Philharmonic on March 31 at the Providence Performing Arts Center, 220 Weybosset St., at 8:30 p.m.

The performance will include Weber's Overture to "Oberon," Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin and Stravinsky's Le Baiser de la fe (The fairy's kiss.) Entremont will conduct the Orchestra and appear as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 21 in C Major.

During the 1988-89 season, Philippe Entremont began his tenure as Music Director of L'Orchestre Colonne de Paris, and continued as Lifetime Conductor of the Vienna Chamber Orchestra.

Last summer he appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the opening of the Saratoga Festival, the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra at the Dallas Symphony Summerfest, and at the Caramoor Festival with the Orchestra of St. Luke's.

Born in Rheims, France, on June 6, 1934, Entremont entered the Paris Conservatoire at the age of 12 and studied under the guidance of Jean Doyen. That year he won the Harriet Cohen Piano Medal. At 16, he made his professional debut in Barcelona, Spain. In 1953, at 19, he became the first Laureate/Grand Prize winner of the Marguerite Long/Jacques Thibaud Competition.

Tickets are now on sale at the Rhode Island Philharmonic, 222 Richmond St., (401) 831-3123, the Providence Performing Arts Center, 220 Weybosset St., (401) 421-ARTS, and all Ticketron outlets. Tickets range from $35-$15; student/seniors $11.

The Broadway Marionettes Present "Pinocchio" at PPAC

The Family Theater Series at the Providence Performing Arts Center continues with the Broadway Marionettes' presentation of Pinocchio on Saturday, March 31. There will be two performances only, 10:30 a.m. and 1 p.m.

More than 50 life-size Marionettes will leap to life in this sparkling musical production. Pinocchio's adventures have fascinated children around the world since Carol Collodi introduced him to young Italian readers in 1881. This mischievous marionette who longs to be a real boy teaches children the importance of honesty, responsibility and loyalty while showing them a good time.

Collodi's characters are re-incarnated with an eye for detail in this deft blend of fantasy and reality. The puppets are all hand-made originals from two to six feet tall. The puppeteers, wielding more than 10,000 feet of string, control all the show's action from a scaffold approximately 15

Notice of Names of Persons Appearing to be Owners of Abandoned Property

THE GENERAL TREASURER'S UNCLAIMED MONEY LIST

MARCH 1990 EDITION

State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations
OFFICE OF THE GENERAL TREASURER

Anthony J. Solomon
General Treasurer

A MESSAGE FROM ANTHONY J. SOLOMON
GENERAL TREASURER OF RHODE ISLAND

The state of Rhode Island is attempting to locate thousands of current and former Rhode Island residents in order to allow them to claim money and other assets held in custody for them by the state.

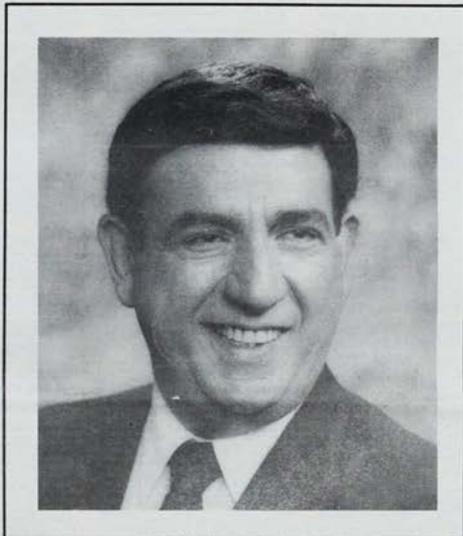

The money comes from unclaimed property—abandoned bank accounts, safe deposit boxes, stocks, utility refunds, and more. This property is turned over to the state because the rightful owners or heirs are lost.

Check the list inside. You could be one whose name has been added to the unclaimed property list. If you'd like to find out if your name is on the recent or a prior unclaimed property list, just call my office at 277-6505.

My goal is to see that Rhode Island returns as much unclaimed property as possible in 1990. Last year more than $850,000 was returned to lost owners. With your help, we can do better.

With best regards,

General Treasurer

What Is The Unclaimed Property Act?

The Unclaimed Property Act is designed to collect, safeguard and return lost or forgotten property to its rightful owners.

What Is Unclaimed Property?

Unclaimed Property consists of money and other assets that are considered lost or abandoned after an owner cannot be located for a specified period of time. It includes bank accounts, stocks and dividends, wages, safe deposit boxes, refunds and insurance company payments.

How Does Property Become Unclaimed?

Most property is listed as unclaimed if it has been inactive for five years. However, savings accounts are unclaimed after seven years of inactivity and wages and utility deposits become unclaimed after one year.

What Do I Do If My Name Is Listed Here?

Call the Unclaimed Property Division at (401)-277-6505. Your claim will be processed as fast as the volume of inquiries will allow. You can speed up the process when you call or write, by having the name listed in this section along with your current name and address.

Please Call: Monday thru Friday from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

(401) 277-6505
(401) 277-6506
(401) 277-3399

Write: Office of the General Treasurer
Unclaimed Property Division
P.O. Box 1435
Providence, RI 02901

Is There A Deadline On Making A Claim?

No. Most accounts listed in this publication are still in the custody of the original account holder. If your property is listed here, and you do not file a claim with the holder by April 20 the assets will be turned over to the custody of the State. You can make a claim to the Unclaimed Property Division anytime after that, since the State never takes ownership of the property. It is simply in a custodial account until the rightful owner or heir can be found.

Is This The Complete List Of Unclaimed Property?

The names in this insert are only the most recent listing of unclaimed accounts that have been reported to the State. All accounts previously advertised are kept on file.

Why Are There Two Lists Of Property In This Publication?

The first list consists of Unclaimed Property owners as described above. The second list is provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). It consists of Rhode Island residents who financed real property under federal programs, and have refunds due them from the insurance portion of their payments. If your name is listed, please call or write that agency. Unclaimed (HUD) funds will not be turned over to Rhode Island. The listing was provided by HUD so citizens of Rhode Island may claim their refunds.

VICE PRESIDENT ASSURES JEWISH LEADERS — Vice President Dan Quayle told members of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations last week that there has been no change in the U.S. policy that Jerusalem must remain a united city. He also affirmed that the Administration does not oppose the right of Soviet immigrants and other Jews to settle anywhere in Jerusalem and assured the Conference members that the Administration will accept Israeli assurances that U.S. housing investment guarantees will not be used for housing in the territories.

"Many of the Soviet Jews are not coming from the European part of Russia but from the Asiatic regions," he says. Touro Synagogue is located at 85 Touro Street in Newport. The festival will begin at 2:00 p.m. and is free. Also sponsoring the festival are the National Tourist Office of Spain and Iberia Airlines.
