JEWISH UNIT INVOLVED IN PROPOSED SALE OF LAND IN TRANSJORDAN

21 Arab Chiefs Forward Plea to Palestine Government

Lease Upset Recalled

Jerusalem, Feb. 10—(JTA)—The option for the lease of land in Transjordan, granted by Emir Abdullah to a Jewish company and cancelled by him on Jan. 25th, may again become actual, the Arab press forecasts today.

The Arab papers report that Transjordan leaders are preparing impressive demonstrations to protest against action to prevent the Jews from leasing Transjordan territory.

Permission to sell Transjordan land to foreigners is requested in a petition signed by twenty-one of the most influential Transjordan tribal leaders and members of the Legislative Assembly, which has been submitted to the Palestine Government and Emir Abdullah.

The petition emphasizes that the precarious condition of the country calls for such action.

The petition, which was drawn up following a meeting of Arab chieftains, in Amman, adds a new chapter to the Transjordan matter which was apparently closed on Jan. 25th when Emir Abdullah announced the cancellation of an option he had granted to a Jewish company for the lease of 70,000 dunams of his personal domain in Transjordan.

The Arab chieftains at their meeting in Amman discussed Emir Abdullah's communique announcing the cancellation of the lease to Jews. The majority of those present, however, found that the sale of land to Jews is the only solution for the present acute situation.

Seventy per cent. of the cattle owned by the Arabs in Transjordan have perished from starvation, it was stated.

Nahum Sokolov, President of the Jewish Agency Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff and Emanuel Neumann, members of the Jewish Agency Executive in Jerusalem, have held an important conference with the High Commissioner, Sir Arthur Grenfell Wauchope, and with the Chief Secretary of the Palestine Government, it is learned.

The prevailing opinion now is that Arab-Jewish co-operation in Transjordan is imminent, if there is no political interference from the outside.

LOUIS MARSHALL MEMORIAL WILL BE OPENED SOON

Syracuse to Dedicate Science Building Feb. 23

Educators to Attend

Syracuse, Feb. 10—(JTA)—The trustees of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University, announced that the new Louis Marshall Memorial, science building of the college, is completed, and that leading foresters and distinguished figures of the country have been invited to participate with them in its dedication on Thursday, Feb. 23.

This will mark the addition to the college of a modern and completely equipped building which commemorates the service to forestry of the late Louis Marshall, the American Jewish leader, who, as its first president, presided over the deliberation of the board of trustees for eighteen years.

Four-Story Structure

An all-day program has been planned for the dedication of the new four-story building and will be conducted in the edifice itself. The ceremony will open at 10 o'clock with addresses by leaders in forestry education and in the field of forestry.

Dr. Henry Schmitz of the College of Forestry and Agriculture at the University of Minnesota will talk on "The Relationship of Fundamental Sciences to Forestry." Earl Clapp of the United States Forest Service at Washington, D. C., will speak on "Aspects of Basic Research," and Dr. E. A. Merrill of the New York Botanical Garden will discuss "Systematic Botany and Forestry." Following the luncheon, which will be served then to the guests at the new structure, the visitors will be conducted on an inspection tour through the new building.

Al Smith to Attend

The formal dedication exercises will start in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which Dr. Harlan H. Horner, assistant commissioner of the New York State Board of Education and Director of Professional Education, will deliver an address of presentation, and former Governor Alfred E. Smith, present chairman of the board of trustees, taking the position in 1923 at the death of Louis Marshall, will express the acceptance for the college. Chancellor Charles Wesley Flint of Syracuse University will deliver a speech of acceptance for the university. Then the dedication address will follow. The name of the speaker, however, has not as yet been announced.

Mrs. Felix M. Warburg Honored by Hadassah at Reception and Tea

New York, Feb. 10—(JTA)—A reception and tea in honor of Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, who returned to New York last week from abroad which included a visit to Palestine, was given on Tuesday afternoon by the executive committee of the New York Chapter of Hadassah.

Mrs. Warburg, in her address, lauded the work of Hadassah in Palestine which has been able, she said, to accomplish much of constructive value, despite great obstacles.

"I was very much impressed with Hadassah work in Palestine, in the face of such adverse physical conditions," Mrs. Warburg stated.

"I was also delighted with the school luncheon system, which shows a decided improvement in the quality of the food, the quantity and the manner in which it is served.

"I must deplore, however, the state of the Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem, which is housed in an old dilapidated building. We must urge the building of a new hospital on Mount Scopus in conjunction with the Hebrew University. I must stress, however, that even in the old hospital, medical and surgical work is being carried out along the most modern and perfected ways," Mrs. Warburg stated.

Nazi Heads School System In Prussia

"House Cleaning" Feared by Jews In Educational, Theatre Fields

Berlin, Feb. 10—(JTA)—Bernhard Rust a Nazi professor, has been appointed Minister of Education of Prussia, replacing Minister Kaehler.

A Nazi playwright, Hans Johst, has been named Superintendent of State Theatres.

Mr. Johst was named to a position pledged to Leopold Jessner, a Jew, at present regisseur of the state theatres, who first discovered and produced the plays of Johst.

Jessner is bringing action against the Prussian State for breach of agreement.

The appointment of the two Nazis places them in a strategic position to carry out the Nazi program of "purging" the universities and the theatres of Jewish artists.

This "house cleaning campaign" has been in progress for an extended period. Since the Nazis succeeded in carrying out their boycott against the Jews to a considerable extent, without being in positions of direct power, the present appointments are interpreted as presaging a sweeping purging process.

A reception was held last evening, attended by representatives of the government. Lord Melchett, honorary president of the World Maccabean Union, sent a bas-relief, symbolizing the renaissance of the Jewish athlete.

Alexander Rosenfeld, vice president of the World Maccabean Union, thanked the government authorities for its favorable attitude toward the Maccabean Union.

Addresses were also delivered by foreign representatives.

Jewish Center Groups to Hold Purim Festival Mach 9 at Arcadia

A community-wide celebration of the Purim Festival has been undertaken by four adult groups of the Jewish Community Center including the Y. W. H. A., J. Y. M. C. A., J. C. M. A. and the Jewish Center Parents' Association, and will take place Thursday evening, March 9th, in the Arcadia Ballroom. Two features will make the event an interesting one; the Queen Esther contest at which a young woman will be chosen as Queen Esther by popular vote of those attending the affair and ten young ladies receiving the next largest votes to be elected as court attendants. The other feature is the masquerade, at which prizes will be offered for the most original, most beautiful and funniest costumes. Worthwhile prizes are being offered to the Queen, the attendants and best costumes.

A joint committee representing the adult groups has been working out plans for the event with the hope that they meet the approval of everybody in the community. Any Jewish young woman 18 or over from Providence, Pawtucket, Woonsocket and Fall River is eligible to enter the contest. All registrations should be in the hands of Dr. Myron Keller, chairman, or Isador Korn, associate chairman, and should be mailed not later than Saturday, March 4th, care of the Jewish Community Center, 65 Benefit street Providence. There is no cost for registration.

Although it is not necessary to attend masked, the committee feels that as many as possible should make an effort to come in costume in order to make the event a real Purim celebration. Suggestions for costumes may be obtained from the Jewish Community Center.

Pinkerson, co-chairmen; Mrs. Ira Robinson treasurer; Nathan Temkin, secretary; Louis Davis chairman of tickets; Freda Simon, co-chairman; Dr. Harry I. Goldman, pageant chairman; Albert S. Madame Renzetti, it is stated, hails from upper Silesia and is the daughter of the President of the Jewish Community of Gleiwitz, Kochman, and a granddaughter of Rabbi Kohn of Katowitz.

The Berlin press reported Hitler's visit to the home of the Renzetti, but did not mention the details which the press here discloses.

POSITION OF JEWS IN 1932

There was an increase in the distress and privation suffered by Jews throughout the world during 1932, asserts the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, according to the report presented to the annual meeting of the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden by the General Dr. Wischnitzer.

In the Soviet Union, where there are two and three-quarter million Jews, he said, they are not exposed to political or economic discriminations as Jews, but they are hard hit as a result of the economic situation like the rest of the population.

In Poland tendencies which were previously in evidence have now become more marked, he continued. State monopoly, trustification, the withdrawal of tobacco licenses, the unequal distribution of taxation between the town and the country, the systematic refusal to admit Jews to state service, in spite of the paper rights enjoyed by the Jews, and the Sunday closing law, have plunged large sections of the Jewish population into utter misery.

The Polish Government insists that the Jewish communities must be exclusively religious, and grants for cultural and social activities are being struck out of the community budgets.

The anti-Semitic excesses at the beginning of the university year were followed in November by anti-Jewish outbreaks on a large scale. In Lemberg, Jews were subjected to attack for five successive days, shops and workshops were looted, and Jewish possessions were destroyed. Clashes occurred also in other university towns between anti-Semitic and Jewish students.

The picture presented in Roumania is no more assuring than in the past, Dr. Wischnitzer said.

The Jews, being overwhelmingly an urban element, engaged in industry, artisanship and the liberal professions are particularly hard hit by the economic depression. The situation is worst of all in the new provinces, in the Marmorosh district, Bukovina and Bessarabia.

Thousands of Jews in Roumania are still denied citizenship, left without rights, without protection.

In 1932 there were student disturbances and acts of anti-Semitic terrorism in Roumania, which could not have been possible if the authorities and the police had not been passive. In parliament itself Jewish deputies were insulted and beaten.

In Carpatho-Russia, Czecho-Slovakia, the distress grew in 1932 to such an extent that permanent relief activity had to be carried on to save the population from starvation, especially the younger people and the children. An English journalist has said, Dr. Wischnitzer recalled, that he was in the famine areas of China and India, and that he was in Germany at the end of 1918 and the beginning of 1919, during the hunger blockade, but that he had never seen famine and privation as bad as in Carpatho-Russia.

In the United States of America, he proceeded, the economic depression has caused a great deal of impoverishment among the Jewish population, with dire consequences to their relatives in Eastern Europe, for there has been a fall in the financial assistance given by American Jews to their relatives in Eastern Europe, and the flow of funds from America for constructive work in the East European countries has also diminished. But it must be said that in spite of the difficulties of American Jewry, the Joint Distribution Committee continues to do everything possible to alleviate the distress in Eastern Europe, especially in the field of child welfare.

In Palestine, Dr. Wischnitzer said, the economic crisis was felt only slightly. In comparison to other countries there is little unemployment in Palestine and in many branches there is even at times a lack of labor. Forty-five hundred immigration certificates were placed at the disposal of the Jewish Agency for the current half-year—October, 1932—March, 1933.

Dr. Wischnitzer emphasized that the bars against immigration both in the continental and overseas countries had been made more rigorous and emigrant aid and advice, he said, is now more urgently necessary than ever before.

TIDBITS AND NEWS OF JEWISH PERSONALITIES

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Dear Ed:

Harry Hershfield was speaking the other night at the Ort dinner. The dinner was in honor of Lord Marley who has associated himself, as you know, with the Ort project. And Hershfield, commenting on the war medals that beglittered his Lordship's coat, remarked that he, too, was a veteran—of three exemptions.

And then Hershfield went on to survey the condition of the country and, addressing his Lordship, remarked jocularly, that if our forefathers in 1776 could have foreseen present-day conditions, they might not have given his Lordship's people, such a good fight.

Well, that's the way Ed, I feel just now—or rather until just now—for a hot bath and a cold plunge which I have just taken has improved my attitude somewhat. I read somewhere that the Bessmer process of steel making was founded on the principle of alternately heating and freezing the raw metal. So I thought, maybe the same process would affect me in the same way. So I went from a hot bath to a cold pool and then reversed the process. It didn't make me into steel, Ed, but it helped to keep me from joining the Communist party.

We humans are funny beings, Ed. I sometimes think we are the most illogical of all the animal kingdom. For instance, I met an artist last night—a Jewish artist—an he was raving against the Jews—as so many Jews frequently do. But the funny part is that he has only recently returned from Palestine and likes it there.

There is a saying in the Talmud, I believe, that the very air of Palestine makes one smart. It missed out, Ed, on him, I think, but one thing that he told me about the Palestine atmosphere interested me. He said that the atmosphere of Palestine is so clear that one can see there with the naked eye over much greater distances than here. The artist in doing work there must adjust himself to the changed perspective that results.

Palestine it seems, is as full of artists as New York is of policemen, according to him. In an exhibition held in the comparatively small city of Tel Aviv, he told me, there were exhibitions by over one hundred artists. In New York, I understand, there are 57,000 policemen, or one for about every hundred of the population. In Palestine, there is about the same ratio of artists.

Donald Friede—of Covici Friede, the well-known publishing firm, has just returned from Majorca, the Spanish possession which of late has become a rendezvous for artists, and he declares that these expatriated American intelligentsia spend their time in drinking parties where the main objective besides drinking is trying to imitate the peacock screech. The difference between that and Palestine I account for by the fact that in Palestine they are welded by a purpose—by a mission, if you please. And cynical as one may be about missions, there is something to be said for anything that integrated life with a purpose.

But what I would like you to tell me, Ed, thinking as I still am, of this artist just returned from Palestine, why are painters so self-conscious about their art. Why do they want you to stand in wrapt admiration at their works? Writers are not like that. Why should painters be so?

When you visit the home of a writer, he doesn't unless he's a completely lost darn fool, ask you to read the clippings of his writings. Why does a painter feel chagrined, if you fail to note any of the masterpieces be-decking his walls? Why does a painter make such a distinction between commercial work and pure art and resent the thought that he should paint anything but the dictates of his soul? Most writers, on the contrary even if perchance they do a piece of work from higher motives, are a little embarrassed by the admission—and ask writers and almost universally they will tell you that they did it because they needed the money.

Well, that's enough about artists.

There was an interesting article Ed, the other day in the Saturday Evening Post by Carolyn Wells, the humorist. She tells of the doctors having given her two years to live. What should she do with the two years?

The question was also raised as you remember in Vicki Baum's "Grand Hotel." Miss Brody at the N. Y. Public Library, Jewish division, put a similar question the other day to a very scholarly Jewish young man—a Ph. D., and an able young fellow all around, but one who has somehow had a very difficult time adjusting himself to economic conditions.

"What would you do, Doctor," she asked him, "if you knew you only had a half an hour to live?"

He replied that he would summon together all those who had refused him jobs and tell them to go, you know where.

I suggested, Ed, that he would have to hire Madison Square Garden for the occasion.

That reminds me that the late Joseph Pulitzer of the World is said to have built the Pulitzer building on the site of a torn down building, from which he was once ejected.

That idea of revenge always appealed to me, and I used sometimes to indulge in the thought that I would like to do as Pulitzer, but after a longer stay, I decided that I would have to erect too many buildings.

I see Ed that Gustav Lilienthal of Germany has passed away. Is he or isn't he a Jew? Dr. Bloch of the library once told me that he wasn't. Morris Goldberg an authority on the Jew in science insists that he is—or was, and the Jewish Encyclopedia lists him as a Jew. Whether he was or wasn't a Jew—he together with his brother, Otto, were the real pioneers of aviation.

Frisch of Minneapolis was here the other day, Ed and he was saying a lunch to a neighbor, that the real America was in the Middle West—or Northwest.

That's right, Ed, but it is also right that the real Middle West is in New York. Just consider some of the fol-

Going Somewhere?

Any Engineer Will Tell
You That A Train Runs
Largely On Momentum

For speed . . . for efficiency . . . for economy of fuel . . . take the "through train" with no stops, less jerks and fewer puffs wasted in repeatedly getting up speed.

Of course, if you insist, you can change your mind every few minutes, get off at way stations, wait for an express that doesn't stop, get back on another local, and generally waste time and effort. But you won't make much progress.

In a savings program it's much the same. If you skip your regular deposit dates, put in a bit one pay day and nothing the next, then forget your good resolution and withdraw your balance—why, that's just a happy-go-lucky plan that isn't a plan at all. Of course, it's your privilege . . . and your responsibility.

But if you want to get somewhere . . . then the thing to do is to adopt a program of systematic saving . . . make your payments regularly . . . and keep at it. Take a through train, pay your fare, ride smoothly . . . and you'll be sure to arrive!

The Old Colony way of systematic saving is a good train to take. It'll take you a surprising distance toward financial independence in a reasonable length of time.

COMIC MARXISM

By HILDA KASSELL

Harpo Marx. He is the little fellow with the red wig you see on the screen chasing all the beautiful girls. In real life the beautiful girls chase him. And when he catches them! . . . His name, of course, is derived from his ability to wheedle tantalizing tunes from the regal instrument—the harp—which even until this day he cannot dignify with appropriate musical terms. For years it stood in the front room of the Marx domicile—a silent relic of the maternal parents' barnstorming days in Germany—before (the impish) Adolph, as he was then called, teased the strings into rendering "Mighty Lak a Rose" as though they really meant it.

Those were the days when the Marx menage was quartered in a tenement house on Third avenue near Seventeenth street, and where, with the same exasperating regularity that the milkman delivered the daily milk, the lady in the down-stairs apartment would shout through the alley-window:

"Quiet, pu-lease! Ach such mischeygoyem."

The Marx boys (there are five of them), tumbled into this world at appropriate intervals in rapid succession, Harpo making his wide-eyed debut second to Chico, the eldest. Contrary to general belief, Groucho is not the eldest. He was only a babe in arms when Zeppo, the youngest was born. Actually, Groucho is son No. 4, and was initiated to the name of Julius.

There is still much rivalry and discussion among the brothers as to who had acquitted himself most honorably on his Bar-Mitzvah. No decision can be reached because all five of them spoke the same piece, composed by the same rabbi, whose imagination and literary ability reached such ethereal heights as:

"Dear Parents, Relatives and Honored Assembly.—Today I robe myself in the garment of Judaism. At last I am a Bar-Mitzvah. For long days and nights I labored for appropriate words to express the tender devotion, the loving kindness, the heroic sacrifices that you, my dear parents have bestowed upon me."

Nevertheless, it is Harpo who enjoys a slight advantage over his other brothers. It is not so much the fact that on the memorable occasion of his Bar-Mitzvah his mother removed the Pessachidge dishes from the wash-tub and gave her son a thorough and much-needed scrubbing, but it is the testimony of a surviving photograph that puts Harpo indisputably in first place. Taken on the stoop of the Third avenue apartment house, one can readily see that the thirteen years he spoke of so eloquently in his speech had indeed "taken their fanciful flight" in such sartorial details as a derby (borrowed) and a fashionable top-coat with a velvet collar made over from papa Marx's discarded one by Uncle Al, who was the best pants-presser on Rivington street before he became the famous Mr. Shean in partnership with Mr. Gallagher.

To tell once again the circumstances of Harpo's first public appearance on the stage, is to sap a good joke of all its flavor by constant repetition. But no chronicle of the gentleman's life and work can be complete without at least a passing reference to that bright June day. Harpo, looking very fetching in a bell-hop's uniform was employed at that time by the Hotel Seville, much to mother Marx' chagrin. After all, a hotel was no place for an impressionable and susceptible young man. Three of his brothers were already cavorting on Henderson's stage in Coney Island under the beguiling name of "The Three Nightingales." Harpo was just returning Cissie Loftus' spaniel from his daily constitutional in Gramercy Park for which services he, (Harpo), received the munificent sum of a quarter a week, when his mother, in a grande dame manner drove up in a dilapidated-looking cab and retrieved her precious son. She had a white-duck suit and a paper boutonniere in readiness for him and with the same grande dame manner that she ordered the cab to take them to Coney Island, she clothed her son in raiment befitting a Marx. They reached Henderson's just in time for the bewildered Harpo to be pushed on the stage, where he was so embarrassed that throughout the act he kept his eyes glued on the back-drop. In fact, his embarrassment took such definite form that it was a happy coincidence that a Mr. Harry Finkelstein believed in advertising on theatrical back-drops that he dry-cleaned and pressed men's suits for 50 cents.

Since then Harpo has never spoken a word on stage or screen. Rumor, ungarmented with any Soviet propaganda, had somehow filtered through to Moscow of the pantomimic genius of this tusole-haired clown. The Moscow Art Theatre invited him to reveal his talent before the Moscovites, if only as a happy interlude from their preoccupation with the Five-Year Plan. The name of Marx alone, Harpo thought, should have given him entree into the country, but through some queer process of Marxian reasoning, he was refused admission into Mr Stalin's domain.

We wonder with what cryptic comment Harpo's friend George Bernard Shaw, Esq., received this information. Surely he must have laughed as heartily as he did that day in Antibes, when he first met Mrs. Marx' pride and joy, and immediately began expounding his theories on Socialism, economics and politics, because he mistook Harpo for a descendant of Karl Marx. Shaw, who can recognize a good clown when he sees one, was so delighted with Harpo, who at the same time proved a good listener, that he presented him with a complete set of his books, duly autographed. Now Harpo's boast that he has read all three books in his library no longer holds good.

Harpo's disappointment at not appearing with the Moscow Art Players is hardly less great than the loss of a chance to take a trip to Europe. Upon a mere suggestion he will travel three thousand miles across the continent just for the ride, and looks upon himself as the Wandering Jew who has no time to wait for any second coming. His personal belongings are no more than that which can be thrown into a single suitcase, and he has never remained long enough in any one place to call it home. On his way to Hollywood he may stop off in Germany just to order Wiewerschnitzel in Yiddish, to see whether the waiter can understand his Deutsch. His mimical sense of pantomime can convince even a French inn keeper that what he wants is a room with hot and cold running maid-service.

London is a town all the Marx brothers still look upon with suspicion. Their first appearance there on a vaudeville tour was not what one would call an overwhelming success. To show their disapproval, the gallery and pit threw pennies on the stage (it is an old English custom) and though Groucho stepped to the footlights and dared the pikers to throw shillings, the memory still rankles. Since then the English have evidently acquired a sense of humor. Now they queue up for blocks on end waiting to see a Marx picture. When "Monkey Business" opened at the Carlton Theatre, Harpo happened to be in London. He was determined to find out for himself whether the English laughed at the right places or not. So he disguised himself in a double-breasted blue suit, sans wig and honk-horn, and looked more like a nice Jewish boy from Whitechapel than Harpo Marx in person. He waited in line like any of the rest of us would, paid his 7/6d. for a seat, and then wondered what his mother would have said about that! Everybody in the theatre laughed uproariously and obviously enjoyed the show.

Except the people sitting in his vicinity who wondered who that rummy chap was who kept laughing at all the wrong places.

All the brothers are married, except Harpo. To date, he has been on the verge of marriage ten times—to ten different girls. And at the age of 42 he is still going strong.

His favorite nephew is Groucho's six-year-old son, who attended bible classes in Hollywood because he liked the candy they gave him. His father however, has fond hopes that his son and heir will follow in his footsteps, for in his youth Groucho showed promise of a sweet tough unreliable soprano. His services as boy-cantor were nevertheless enlisted by a local synagogue, when to the surprised indignation of the rabbi, the sweet soprano changed to a distressing bass before the services were half over.

At present, two of the Marx brothers (Groucho and Chico), are recouping the family fortunes by enlightening radio audiences ever Monday night. Harpo and Zeppo are still incarcerated in Hollywood, supposedly engaged in what is laughingly referred to as their work. Gummo, who has deserted his brothers professionally is at present incorporated in the Gummo Marx Dress Corporation where he "aims to make the best dresses retailing at nine-fifty on the market." If this is somewhat of a departure from his mother's fond hopes to make him the wonder-boy tenor of the world, this Marx brother, No. 3, has no regrets. "Why I attribute the success of the Four Marx Bros. entirely to me because right after the war I quit the act cold."

Out Hollywood way, Harpo took time off to express in his own inimical manner what he thought of his brother's desertion by giving him a true Harpo-istic raspberry—a wide-eyed, silent chuckle of contempt. Probably because the star-model of Gummo Marx Dress Corporation, refused to be chased. Now Harpo is playing ball with Ernest Lubitsch who has been applying his directorial genius to the next Marx Brothers' vehicle, for Lubitsch can always be depended upon to supply Harpo with arms-full of gorgeous girls to chase and plenty of lavish decorations to destroy.

SPORTING WORLD

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

IN PRAISE OF SOMETHING OR OTHER

A fellow who writes a column would be in a pretty tight spot if it weren't for the bile that runs through people's systems. Well wishers are much more hesitant about expressing their pleasure than the fellow who thinks he has a kick coming. It is the latter class that makes copy. The chronic complainers are not at all reticent about getting their peevish down on paper. I have been abused by correspondents from the very first column I wrote, and that was some six or seven years ago. I remember the complaint vividly. It came from a rival columnist, who, writing under a pseudonym, claimed that my column was stale, uninteresting, and added that I was a very presumptuous young man to attempt a sport column, but, alas, a tolerant editor, refused to fire me (what a chance he missed), and I have learned this week that my anonymous bad wisher has given up his career as sports writer. It ought to prove something or other.

While I am on the subject of letters I must set down two I received during the past month. I don't use the writers' names as they probably have cooled off by now and might feel a trifle embarrassed. The first came from New York City, it said: "In tough times like these aren't you ashamed to accept money for the tripe you write?" (Answer—No, a thousand times, No). "You know as well as I do that Jewish athletes are not at all proud to be known as 'Jewish athletes' and would prefer to perform without benefit of religious sanction. You're worse than Walter Winchell, snooping around, saying this or that fellow is a Jew."

I can't subscribe whole-heartedly to such a theory. If there were no feeling against Jews and they were accepted, my correspondent might have a case, but I have found that if you don't toot your own horn nobody else will blow it for you. The only complaints from athletes I have received were from non-Jewish athletes who had been accused of being members of our race and even at that they were written in a friendly spirit of correction. I once did get into a controversy with the aunt of Helen Jacobs, the California tennis star. I know as a fact that the male side of Miss Jacobs' family is Jewish and said so at the time. The only other fuss I had was when I said that a certain Princeton athlete was Jewish and did not parade under the banner of Zion. In that case I was called to account and informed that said athlete was very much a Jew and was proud of his Jewishness and wanted the world to know that he was one of us.

The other letter I referred to in the foregoing paragraph was of the carping variety—it came from Chicago and accused me of playing favorites and not giving certain Jewish fighters the proper amount of publicity. The fighter in question is a third-rater who has never won an important fight and I remarked that he probably never would. I still think so.

CHATTERINGS

Kid Levinsky, managed by his aunt, is still collecting purses. The Jewish heavyweight won a bout in Philadelphia the other night and knocked his opponent out. He is being groomed for a Madison Square Garden appearance.

No word from Benny Leonard all winter. His retirement is pretty definite and all his friends are glad that he has seen the light although it had to be knocked into him with a pair of boxing gloves.

The curtailment of the minor sports schedule of many colleges is going to bring many Jewish athletes to the front. In many colleges, where prejudice exists and the Jewish boys realize that they have little chance to make a team, they go in for inter-class athletics. With the teams disbanded and inter-class athletics gaining in importance, these Jewish boys will have a chance to shine.

Jay Cohen, the young Jewish tennis player, is on the circuit. Word from Florida informs me that he is taking part in the various pre-season tourneys and getting the experience necessary for big time competition.

Howard Schanzler, star of New York and has taken up squash tennis. I have been told that Harry Wolf, the champion, was unduly moved by the news. You will be glad to know that your very own columnist has taken up the game and was struck square in the middle of the court at the last session. The striker was a young man named Harold Strauss, one of the brighter of our literary critics.

Bill Soskin, literary editor of the New York Evening Post and one-time handball star, is back in bed with a balky kidney.

Samuel Ornitz, who wrote "Haunch Paunch and Jowl," has taken up tennis.

Jonah Goldman, who has been playing ball in the American Association, is getting in shape for the forthcoming season—I understand that there will be three or four new Jewish players coming up for major league tryouts this season, but Andy Cohen is said to be about ready to give up the game.

I mentioned Harry Wolf, the squash champion above but I must tell you that he is putting in a very active year on the courts and has yet to come out on the low end of the score.

Ben Jeby, our new middleweight champion, is cashing in on his newly won laurels. He has gone on a tour and is meeting all comers. To date it has been easy going for the East Side boy. He hasn't come up against

Dr. Samuel I. Kennison Addresses Chiropodists at Regular Meeting

Dr. Samuel I. Kennison was the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Chiropodists-Podiatrists Society, Tuesday evening, at the Narragansett Hotel.

His subject, "Diseases and Their Relation to the Feet" was both interesting and inspiring. Dr. Kennison pointed out that many cases of diabetic gangrene, was prevented by the timely observance on the part of the podiatrist, who when noticing the suspicious looking condition, immediately referred them to their physician for further diagnosis and treatment.

Prior to the lecture, lunch was served in the main dining hall. The attendance prize was won by H. E. Blaisdell.

MINISTRY PROMISES PROBE INTO BOYCOTT INCITEMENT

Warsaw, Feb. 10—(JTA)—A delegation of small traders recently visited the Ministry of Interior and demanded protection against anti-Jewish boycott inciters in the Posen and Pomerania districts.

The delegation declared that after a brief period of respite, incitement against the Jews has been renewed. Anti-Semitic boycott leaflets are widely distributed wherein the Jews are branded as swindlers and the enemies of Poland. The leaflets carry pictures of pigs with inscription, "Only Swine Buy From Jews."

The agitation has added to an already aggravated situation so that the Jewish traders are on the verge of complete ruin, the delegation asserted. They demanded government action against the authors of the anti-Semitic leaflets and those responsible for their publication.

The Ministry of Interior assured the delegation that an investigation would be undertaken.

JEWISH BLIND SOCIETY HAS A DEFICIT OF $40,000

Yonkers, Feb. 10—(JTA)—The New York Guild for the Jewish Blind has a deficit of $40,000, it was revealed by I. Montifore Levy, President, at the annual meeting held here recently.

JEW TO BE REGENT OF WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Seattle, Feb. 10—(JTA)—Alfred Shemanski, civic and communal leader, and prominent in philanthropic work, is the first Jew ever to become a regent of the University of Washington.

The Seattle Jewish leader was named to his new post by Governor Clarence D. Martin. Mr. Shemanski's term expires March 4, 1933.

Mr. Shemanski is a president of the Seattle Community Fund, of which he was a director for six years. He is also a member of Temple de Hirsch and the B'nai B'rith.

LORD MARLEY BELIEVES HITLER "GAS BAG" WILL SOON EXPLODE

Montreal, Feb. 10—(JTA)—Lord Dudley Marley, deputy speaker of the House of Lords and chairman of the British parliamentary committee of Ort, was the guest of honor here recently at a dinner arranged by the Ort Federation and Labor Groups.

Discussing the present situation in Germany, Lord Marley expressed the view that the "Hitler gas bag will soon explode."

Jewish life among the unorganized or badly organized communities. Through the regional branches and through its workers and speakers, the United Synagogue has been able to organize hundreds of communities, establish schools and congregations in practically every part of the United States and Canada.

Certain sections of the country have already been well organized, such as Connecticut State, Eastern New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, Long Island, New Jersey, New York Capital Region, Pacific Coast, Philadelphia, Seaboard Region, Southern New Jersey and Brooklyn. The work in organizing the rest of the Metropolitan area and other parts of the country is proceeding.

Episcopal and Roman Catholic Churches. Directly under Bishop Bennett's jurisdiction are 18 mission stations, five priests, four deacons and eight lay workers who labor exclusively among these Indian wards. It is the second largest Indian work in the United States under the care of the Episcopal Church, the largest being that of Bishop Roberts in the Missionary District of South Dakota.

Thirty-eight years ago the Federal Government made a fifty year treaty with these Indians. In twelve years with the expiration of the treaty, all money held in trust by the government will be turned back to the Ojibways, who will then be free to look after their own affairs. The task which Bishop Bennett has in hand is to educate the Ojibways in the intervening years in order that they may be able to take their place in American civilization and keep in step with its advance.

In the discharge of this obligation Bishop Bennett has plans which provide for a thorough education of the Indians along Christian lines and economic education which will fit them to look after themselves when they are finally released from the fostering care of the government.

Bishop Bennett is a native of South Dakota. He was educated at St. Austin's School, New York, and in Kearney Military Academy, Nebraska; was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1908 and from Seabury Divinity School in 1907. The same year he was ordained priest. He was consecrated Bishop of Duluth, Nov. 17, 1920.

Chicago, Feb. 10—(JTA)—Philip E. Ringer was elected President of the Young Men's Jewish Charities at the annual meeting. He succeeds Philip Lieber.

N.Y. and Canton Chapters of Hadassah Win Membership Prizes

New York, Feb. 10—The New York Chapter of Hadassah was declared the prize winner in the first group, which consists of chapters having a membership of 300 and over, honorary mention being given to the Chicago Chapter. Canton, O., is the prize winner in the second group, consisting of chapters having a membership between 50 and 300, with honorable mention for Oakland, Cal., Memphis, Tenn., and Jamaica, N. Y. Fayetteville, N. C., is the prize winner in the third group of chapters with a membership up to 50, with honorable mention going to Everett, Mass., and Utica, N. Y.

These awards were announced today by Mrs. Samuel J. Rosensohn, national membership chairman of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, as a result of the recently concluded membership campaign conducted by Hadassah chapters throughout the country. The women, stirred by the necessity of feeling themselves an integral part of the forces working for the upbuilding of the Jewish National Home in Palestine, did unusually inspiring work in bringing the message of Hadassah to women who had never been part of this movement, which is playing such a vital role in Jewish life today. As a result of their efforts 2036 new members were enrolled in Hadassah. This increased membership is tangible evidence of the support given by American Jewish women to this constructive effort for Jewish life today. It is giving renewed courage to the officers of Hadassah to carry on the work of maintaining a complete preventive and curative health system in Palestine, which has already succeeded in raising the health standards of the whole country.
