HUNDREDS HERE FEAR FOR KIN IN WAR-TORN AUSTRIA

Zionists Reject Plan for Spring World Congress

Heated Debate Attends
Verdict of Executive Committee

Lipsky Opposes Rabbi Wise

NEW YORK, (JTA) — Following four hours of heated debate, the national executive committee of the Zionist Organization of America voted at a meeting to shelve the proposal to convene a World Jewish Congress in the spring of this year. The matter was placed in the hands of a committee to be named.

By a vote of 25 to 17, the executive committee voted in favor of postponement of the Congress until a more appropriate time.

Urges Defense Body
The meeting was treated to verbal argument which centered about a resolution made the outset by Dr. S. Margoshes, editor of The Day, that the Zionist Organization of America put its support behind a movement on foot for some time to convene a world convocation of Jews. The objective of the convocation would be the organization of a permanent body for Jewish self-defense and for the settlement of Palestine.

Louis Lipsky and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, representing respectively the negative and positive views on the resolution, took up the cudgels and supported each by respective speakers discussed the issue which almost ended in a snarl and which resulted in a forensic battle of the most engaging sort.

Says Time Not Ripe
With the backing of most of the members present before the debate started, Mr. Lipsky delivered an impassioned address scoring the proponents of the world Jewish Congress on the ground that the time is not ripe and that differences among the Jewish people would throw the congress into a deadlock which would accomplish nothing. He did not, however, disclaim his favor for a world Jewish congress some time in the future on an unstated date.

Rabbi Wise, preceded by adherents of the Margoshes resolution who described the present situation confronting Jews everywhere as "one demanding the convening of a world Jewish congress," spoke for an hour pleading for support, "in this hour of need" for the world meeting.

Senate Committee Studying Protest

Rejects Act Asking Roosevelt to Censure
Nazi Policy

WASHINGTON, (JTA) — The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations meeting in executive session to consider the two resolutions introduced by Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland calling for protest to Germany on Nazi treatment of the Jews, voted to give further study to the second of the two resolutions which calls for a protest in the name of the United States Senate.

The committee voted down the first resolution which would require President Roosevelt to make the protest. This action was in line with the decision of Senator Tydings as expressed in the second resolution, to have the protest made in the name of the legislative body.

Senator Tydings appeared before the committee this afternoon and stated his views on the two resolutions. It is understood that he graphically described for the committee the conditions prevailing in Germany (Continued on Page Six)

Labor Indorses Protest

NEW YORK, (JTA) — In the name of organized labor, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced his organization's co-sponsorship of "The Case of Civilization Against Hitlerism" to be presented March 7 in Madison Square Garden. Samuel Seabury, political reformer and jurist, will declare the collective indictment of civilization against Nazism.

"Free people who love liberty and who believe in democracy and democratic principles cannot remain silent, refusing to protest when injustice and persecution are being inflicted upon free, liberty-loving people in other lands," asserted Mr. Green.

Backs Protest Meeting

"I am in hearty accord with the aims and purposes of this meeting. The laboring people who place a very high value upon the enjoyment of freedom and who cherish the principles of democracy as a priceless heritage are amazed at the reports which reach them showing the assault which is being made upon the exercise of ordinary elemental human rights of those in charge of government in Germany. The persecution of Jewish people who resided in Germany was followed by an atrocious attack upon the German trade unions and their officers and members. Those responsible for these atrocities stand condemned before the world."

The A. F. of L.'s joint review in association with the American Jewish Congress, of the acts and policies of the Third Reich marks the anniversary of Hitler's election to power on March 5 of last year.

A testimonial dinner will be tendered to William Green, by a non-sectarian committee of 1,000 men and women prominent in social, political and professional work, in appreciation of the labor leader's services in marshalling the forces of organized labor in support of the anti-Nazi boycott. It will be held by the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights.

Rabbi Isaac L. Levine Dies in 86th Year

Several hundred persons attended the funeral services for Rabbi Isaac L. Levine held Sunday from his late home at 207 Orms street.

Rabbi Levine, who was eighty-five years old, died suddenly at his home, Saturday evening. It was about 8 o'clock when he was sitting in his study reading and talking with his son-in-law, Charles Holland, that he appeared to go into a faint. Mr. Holland picked him up and sent for a physician, but before medical aid could arrive, he died in Mr. Holland's arms.

Rabbi Levine was born in Minsk, Russia, where he was educated and prepared for the Rabbinate. He came to this country, settling immediately in Providence. He was Rabbi of the Beth David Synagogue on Chalkstone avenue, for thirty-three years up to the time of his death.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bessie (Brodsky) Levine; three sons, Samuel, Paul and Solomon Levine of Providence and four daughters, Mrs. Henry Marmonstein of Jersey City, Mrs. Charles Holland, Mrs. Myer Rich and Mrs. E. Borod, all of this city.

Burial was in the Lincoln Park Cemetery.

All Communication Lines Disrupted In General Confusion

Herald Facilities Seeking Details of Austrian Situation

The Jewish Herald through the facilities of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, is bending every effort to obtain accurate complete news of the civil war raging in Austria particularly as it affects the Jewish population there.

The J. T. A. is working direct through regular correspondents in Vienna, in other large cities and in the provinces of Austria and through other correspondents in neighboring countries, including Germany. These writers are remaining in the war zone, braving death or injury or imprisonment in order to transmit news under almost impossible conditions.

The scores of inquiries from anxious Rhode Island residents directed to The Herald are being forwarded to J. T. A. headquarters in New York for transmission abroad to be checked by correspondents in the danger zones.

Palestine Faces Tax on Incomes

Blow to Attracting
New Capital

JERUSALEM, (JTA) — The Palestine government confirmed the Jewish Telegraphic Agency forecast on the formation of a commission on the question of introducing an income tax in Palestine. The entire population of the country is strongly opposed to the measure because it is bound to hinder Palestine industry and abolish the attraction of the country capitalists anxious to come to Palestine or make investments.

Coming as it does when industry is of the greatest importance in the rebuilding of the country, an income (Continued on Page Six)

Jews in Desperate Circumstances Buffeted by Civil Strife

Disaster Seen Inevitable

Another major calamity—the second in less than a year—confronted world Judaism today as 225,000 Austrian Jews became helpless victims of bloody civil war, facing disaster regardless of which side triumphs.

With communications almost completely disrupted and a strict censorship making government reports unreliable, it was practically impossible, in the chaos of rebellion and general street fighting, to arrive at an accurate survey of the Jewish situation.

Jews Outraged

However, definite accounts of outrages against Jews, especially by the Nazis, were received through the Jewish Telegraphic Agency not only from the provinces but also in Vienna and other large cities. The Jewish population has heretofore given sturdy support to the government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfus but it has become known that a series of anti-Semitic measures was being prepared to limit civil and political rights of the Jews, thereby actually depriving them of any official protection.

Meanwhile, hundreds of Rhode Island Jewish residents, with strong family ties in Austria, were fearful for the safety of their relatives. Great anxiety prevailed generally here and desperate attempts were being made to obtain news from that war-torn country. A large percentage of the Jewish population of Rhode Island is of Austrian descent and have kin or friends in the danger zone.

Plight Is Critical

VIENNA, (JTA) — Two hundred and twenty-five thousand Jews in Austria are confronted today with a crisis which may cost them not only their civil and political rights but, in many parts of this now turbulent (Continued on Page Six)

NEW RABBI TAKES OVER PULPIT IN SYNAGOGUE AT PAWTUCKET

Pawtucket and Central Falls Jewry tomorrow night will formally welcome a new spiritual leader to Ahavath Shalom synagogue in the former city when Rabbi Isiah Rachovsky takes the pulpit there.

One of the younger members of the rabbinate, Rabbi Rachovsky came to Pawtucket last week-end to take the place of Dr. Israel M. Gold, head of Congregation Ahavath Shalom for the past year.

Palestine Native
Rabbi Rachovsky was born in Jerusalem, Palestine. He studied in the Palestinian schools for elementary grades, in the Yeshiva school and seminary in New York, in the College of the City of New York and in New York University.

Before coming to Pawtucket, he served a congregation in Dayton, O., for three years. He is single and resides at 16 Clay street, Central Falls. He has been addressing Jewish organizations in this city since Sunday.

Rabbi Rachovsky today announced the following program for the coming months: Reorganization of the religious Sunday school; registration, Sunday, of all members; taking over the Hebrew school for reading and writing the native language, and organization for adults.

Plans Adult Course

The adult classes will be organized for the following purposes: Deal with an intensive course in Hebrew as a language; establish a course in Jewish history from the beginnings to the destruction of the Temple; from the destruction of the Temple to the French Revolution, touching (other than Palestine) on the various regions and countries of the world where Jewish people reside, and from the French Revolution to the present day. This program will also embrace the Zionist movement.

Rabbi Rachovsky has also planned to lead a course in Jewish jurisprudence.

Last night at 8 o'clock he addressed the young women. He spoke on the foregoing topics and opened registration for the courses.

MOSLEM BARES BRIBE OFFER TO ADMIT ARLOSOROFF MURDER

JAFFA, (JTA) — Facing a tense crowd in a dingy courtroom, Abdul Mejid, a seventeen-year-old Moslem clad after the European fashion but wearing a fez, calmly responded to the intense grilling by both the prosecution and the defense in the trial of the three young Revisionists held for the murder of Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff, Zionist labor leader.

Abdul Mejid told that he met Abraham Stavsky and Zvi Rosenblatt, two of the detained Revisionists, in prison. Some time after he heard the reason for their being in custody, Abdul Mejid said, he was approached by Stavsky, who offered him a bribe if he would confess to the murder of Dr. Arlosoroff. Stavsky pointed out, Abdul Mejid said, that since the young Arab had already confessed to the murder of an Arab, he could not be punished more than once, even for two crimes.

Stavsky then spent an hour telling him the details of the murder of Dr. Arlosoroff and reminded him that since he was under age he would not be hanged but merely imprisoned, Abdul Mejid testified.

Rosenblatt, he said, promised him a thousand pounds if he would confess to the murder and assured him that he would have the services of eminent lawyers. A sketch of the seashore of Tel Aviv, indicating the spot, where the murder was committed, was given him by Rosenblatt, the Arab boy disclosed.

A bulletin issued by Haaretz, Tel Aviv Hebrew newspaper, quotes Abdul Mejid as saying that when he inquired of Stavsky and Rosenblatt about the details of the murder both admitted that Rosenblatt fired a shot from an automatic pistol and that both bolted towards the cemetery when Dr. Arlosoroff, struck by the bullet, fell to the ground.

In the course of the probe which he began this afternoon, Horace Samuel, attorney for the defense, elicited bit by bit the testimony that Abdul Mejid had been friendly with Issad Arvish the second Arab who was brought into the case about ten days ago. Abdul Mejid denied, however, that he had been at the seashore on the evening of the murder, declaring that he had not visited Tel Aviv for years.

Thinking to One's Self

Spiegelman asked me to write a paragraph or two about the Jewish National Fund dinner—that is, the dinner to Dr. Goldstein. "A few paragraphs," I said, "I'll write a whole column about it, if there is material."

"Oh there'll be material," said Spiegelman. "Oh yeah! What can one write about a testimonial dinner. Compliments never yet made a good column. Brickbats—and the brickier they are—the more home runs they bat for the column."

And a testimonial dinner necessarily is a day for the delivery of bouquets instead.

At that, it would be easy to make a column even about a testimonial dinner, if one were a Gertrude Stein, or rather, if one were permitted the privileges that Gertrude is allowed to take. It seems to me Gertie goes in a great deal of repetition. Amid all the chaos of her writings—this is the only sane note that I can understand. For repetition may exert a remarkable effect. It has something of the effect of the tom toms that one hears in these jungle movie pictures.

Louis Lipsky was right at the dinner in saying that the Jewish National Fund is the one Zionist activity that is boosted by Zionists of all shades and colors, and yet supported least of all. And the dinner to Dr. Goldstein exemplified this. There was opposite Lipsky for instance, Rabbi Wolf Gold, the Mizrahi leader with whom Lipsky is always fencing on Keren Hayesod matters.

And by the side of Rabbi Gold was sitting Wertheim—the Socialist Zionist leader—and Glanz—another Poale Zion. And as Lipsky remarked, despite all this, there was no breaking of windows—but all were joined in a symphonic Te Deum to the Jewish National Fund.

All were praising the Jewish National Fund—the Zionist Fund that never goes around to get the rich millionaire Jews to give it $5,000, but goes around among the common folk with flowers and buttons and asks for your pennies, your nickels and your dimes.

Just now—maybe I'd like to expand the idea. I'd like to organize a phase of the Jewish National Fund maybe on the style of the Salvation Army, and gather at the street corners with big drums and ask for those pennies and nickels just like the Salvation Army does. Just in my mind's eye, I picture Dr. Goldstein in a uniform just as General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, who by the way was half Jewish, might appear. I see Dr. Goldstein, I say in a uniform with some J.N.F. associates, standing not on the pulpit of his magnificent temple, but on the street corner asking for pennies and nickels for the Jewish National Fund.

Am I being disrespectful? Perhaps, but I think we Jews have become too respectable.

Our Bible Jewry wasn't like that. "Proclaim it from the house tops" they said. But whenever we Jews today proclaim a thing, we know no other place except the Astor Hotel, or the Commodore Hotel. We seem to have lost the faculty of making a thing throb with the tang of the living heart. The heart pumps for the whole body, not for a select group.

And certainly for such a cause as the National Fund, we have a right to get away from the straight and narrow road of deadening respectability.

Did you ever realize that the whole philosophy and plan of the Jewish National Fund is identical with that inscribed on our American Liberty Bell?

The inscription on the Liberty Bell at Philadelphia is what? It is this: "Proclaim liberty to all the land and to all the inhabitants thereof."

What did they mean—that what did the Bible mean when it said "Proclaim liberty to the land?"

Was it being oratorical—coining nice phrases for publication in the Palestine Herald Tribune? Perish the thought. They were uttering what was to them the most important social truth—that the land belonged to the people as a whole.

And what happens if the land belongs to the people as a whole? We

THE ARLOSOROFF MEMORIAL PROJECT

It would be hard to find a more eloquent testimonial to the admirable discipline of Palestinian Jewish labor, even under the greatest provocation, than its reaction to the assassination eight months ago of its ablest leader and spokesman, Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff. Although the murder of this great labor statesman, on whom Zionists of all shades pinned so much hope, was particularly heinous, the organized Jewish workers of Palestine repressed their natural indignation and exerted themselves to the utmost in order that Arlosoroff's memory might not be desecrated by some impulsive act of reprisal. "No revenge, and no thoughts of revenge!" was their watchword, and this exemplary self-restraint they have preserved to this day.

But our comrades in Palestine did better than that. Being constructive as well as self-disciplined — Rabbi Silver rightly calls them the most constructive element in Eretz Israel — they immediately set to work to honor and perpetuate the memory of their murdered leader in a way that must have been particularly pleasing to the spirit of Arlosoroff hovering among them. For, what finer monument could be conceived for a man who consecrated himself, and ultimately gave his life, to the regeneration of the Jewish people and homeland, than to build new Jewish settlements in his memory on hitherto uncultivated land in Palestine? What nobler tribute could be paid to one who made a life study of colonization solely with a view to furthering Jewish settlement in Palestine, than to establish fresh colonization points in his name in the land of his and our hope?

Nor were the Palestinian Jewish workers content with merely resolving on an Arlosoroff Memorial Project. They ACTED. Although their numbers are small and their earnings meager by American standards, they have contributed, by donating two days' wages each, nearly a hundred thousand dollars toward the realization of the project.

Here is a fine example for the Jews of all lands, and particularly of this country, to emulate. If the millions of Jews in America were to be as responsive in the matter as their brothers in Palestine, the $500,000 needed to carry through the Arlosoroff Memorial Project would be oversubscribed many times.

By the decision of the executive board of the Histadruth, as well as the Ninth Annual Convention of the National Labor Committee for Palestine, a large part of the proceeds from this year's Gewerkschaften Campaign will be applied to the Arlosoroff Memorial Project. It is now up to us American Jews to show that we can be as public-spirited, as generous, as ready for sacrifice as the Jewish workers of Palestine; that we, too, are of the breed of chalutzim.

DR. SACHAR LECTURES

Dr. Abram Leon Sachar, speaker last Sunday evening at the seventh in a series of nine Sunday evening programs at the Jewish Community Center, attacked Premier Mussolini of Italy and Chancellor Hitler of Germany for their dictatorial methods and declared they have emphasized material values over those of a spiritual nature.

Hitler's regime will continue for a long time unless there is an upheaval as the result of a war, Dr. Sachar prophesied. He expressed the opinion that Austria will pass under Nazi domination and declared the League of Nations is impotent.

He classified Prof. Albert Einstein, the Mahatma Gandhi and Jane Adams as a "trinity of light," praising them respectively for their "great mind, great soul and great heart."

The women's committee of the Center, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Milton C. Sapinsky, was in charge of a reception for Dr. Sachar. Mrs. Harold Cohen, Mrs. J. George Nathanson and Mrs. Henry Hassenfeld poured. They were assisted by Mrs. Saul Abrams, Mrs. Abraham Blackman, Mrs. William Cohen, Mrs. Arthur Galkin, Mrs. Eli Adelman, Mrs. Mathew Curran, Mrs. Abe V. Flink, Mrs. M. L. Grant and Mrs. Alfred L. Morse, Mrs. Isaac Woolf, Mrs. Harry Katz, Mrs. Benjamin Rouslin and Mrs. Charles Brier.

Before the lecture, the Jewish Community Center Choral Society directed by Arthur Einstein, presented a musical program. Those who took part in the presentation are as follows: Sopranos: Evelyn Siegal, Sara Pressman, Sylvia Ackerman, Ruth Shnoper, Sadie Primack, Rebecca B. Goldstein, Josephine Horowitz, Frances Greenfield, Mary Cherlin, Rosalind Gordon, Edith Krutichick; altos: Eva Cohen, Helen Perlow, Mary Sholowitz, Lillian Cherlin; tenors: Leo Cohen, Samuel Berditch, Harry Schlessinger; baritone: Jack Gordon, Leo Katz, Al Friedmann, Samuel Fink, Samuel Snoparsky, and Louis Bettman.

ARMY ORGANIZES AT TEMPLE EMANU-EL

A meeting of the Carnival Committee was held in Temple Emanu-El, Sunday. Without any advance notice, the committee was converted into a regular army. Rabbi Israel M. Goldman was appointed Chaplain. Mrs. Casper became Quartermaster-General. The General of the Temple forces was announced from high authority to be Sam Rosen who will be assisted by Major Nat C. Cohen and Major Michael Tieman.

No objections are allowed. The constant reply to all protests is "You're in the army now." Senator Paul Robin seemed to enjoy his appointment as Captain. Captains and lieutenants were so numerous that a person was outstanding if he had no official appointment. Notice was given that failure to answer at two consecutive roll-calls would mean demotion into the ranks of privates.

What a campaign this is going to be and it is reported already that a Propaganda committee is beginning to function! Watch the Herald for latest News Flashes from the Front!

Even the children from the Religious Schools have volunteered to join the Army. No draft was needed here. They are going to paint posters and announcements about the Carnival which is to be held at the Temple, April 10, 11 and 12.

Jewish Home for Aged of Rhode Island Notes

By M. P. OSTROW

RESIDENT 100 YEARS OLD

One of the most venerable aged men residing at the Home on Hillside avenue is Reb Moshe Pearl, who with his flowing white beard, presents a truly patriarchal appearance. On February 11, he celebrated his 100th birthday. He is in full possession of his faculties, reads without glasses, and occasionally acts as cantor during the religious services at the Home. His voice is strong and he carries a tune perfectly, reminiscent of his old days as a chazan. The observance took place at the Sons of Jacob synagogue, at which he served as a cantor, in his younger days, and of which he is one of the founders.

DONATIONS

Mrs. J. Jerome Hahn, clothes, shoes; Sisterhood Temple Emanu-El, cookies and cakes; Mrs. Yetta Silverman, wine, cake, and cash; A. Goldberg, cash; Workmen's Circle Ladies Branch, No. 812, bread; Charles J. Ehrlich, chole; James Goldman, furniture polish.

THE WEEK IN JEWISH NEWS

Austrian Situation Certain to Result in More Intensive Anti-Semitism — Polish Agitators Punished by Government — Greek Anti-Semites Demonstrate

GERMANY

The outstanding event of the week as far as Germany is concerned was the order issued by Minister of the Interior Dr. Wilhelm Frick notifying officials throughout Germany that the so-called Aryan clause under which Jewish officials were dismissed from government was not intended to be applied to the field of commerce. The receipt made government officials in every part of Germany responsible for the carrying out of the order not to apply the Aryan clause to Jews in commerce.

The decree is regarded as a victory for the section of the cabinet headed by Minister of Economics Kurt Schmitt, which has insisted on more liberal treatment for the Jews declaring that the expulsion of the Jews from trade would disrupt the economic system.

However a day or two after the order not to molest the Jews was issued the Nazi party organs which have in the past nullified every effort of Minister of Economics Schmitt by instructing Nazi party officials to ignore the orders issued by the Ministry of Economics took the same stand toward the order issued by the influential Nazi chief, Dr. Frick.

The effect of the Frick order was also blunted by outspoken anti-Jewish speech made by Adolf Hitler and Dr. Goebbels immediately afterward and by new discriminations against the Jews.

Nazi papers announced that a Brown Fair would be held in the important commercial center Bremen and all Jews prohibited from selling goods there. . . . The Free City of Danzig came under complete Nazi control when the Nazi dominated Senate appointed a commissioner to take over the functions of the city council which was anti-Nazi. . . . All children in the Thuringian primary schools must produce certificates proving that they are Aryans. Failure to produce such certificates means that the children will not be permitted to enter higher schools.

Von Stephani, leader of the Stahlhelm, war veterans organizations, was ousted by the Nazis for having opposed the admission of distinguished Jewish war veterans in the organization. . . . The Nazi foreign propaganda group issued a proclamation to Americans urging them to put the Jews lower than the Negroes. . . . German Jewish banks will no longer be allowed to call themselves Volksbanks under a new ruling. . . . A list of 206 distinguished German Gentiles formerly of the German Pro-Palestine Committee was issued as a "black list" by the propaganda Verlag for the avowed purpose of stimulating anti-Semitism in Germany. . . . After a raid on the Stettin lodge of the B'nai B'rith, the property was confiscated and turned over to the local Nazi party organization despite the fact that nothing incriminating was found.

Berlin courts held that a Jew was unfit to be the guardian of a Christian child. . . . Goebbels, Reich propaganda Minister, declared in a speech before the Reichskulturtag that there was a possibility of excluding Jews from various phases of German life under a ruling prohibiting the unfit even if the Aryan clause could not be invoked. He stated that he considered Jews unfit to administer German Kultur.

AUSTRIA

The 225,000 Jews in Austria stand by and watch with increasing anxiety the struggle between the Dollfuss regime supported by the Heimwehr under Prince von Starhemberg and the Austrian Nazis.

No matter which side wins the Jews will lose. If as is most likely the Nazis win, the Jews will suffer for having stubbornly supported Dollfuss. If the Heimwehr-Dollfuss crowd wins, discriminatory legislation will be introduced which will ruin the Austrian Jews quietly without the barbarism of the German Nazis. It is no secret that the Heimwehr is anti-Semitic. Measures will be introduced by the Dollfuss regime in the event of victory which will sharply limit the legal and political rights of the Jews, eliminate them from many of the free professions and limit them in commerce.

The week was marked by an intensification of the Nazi bombing campaign in Austria, this time directed mostly against the Jews. . . . In Salzburg stores of Jewish merchants were bombed. . . . In Vienna the headquarters of the Jewish community, the Shiff school and the Jewish stores all through the city were bombed by Nazi terrorists. However, the damage was small.

In the smaller Austrian towns, bands of Nazi hoodlums in the streets assaulted Jews and broke the windows in Jewish shops. . . . In many cases the special police assigned to guard Jewish districts joined with the Nazi in attacking Jews. . . . The Austrian cabinet empowered Chancellor Dollfuss to appeal to the League of Nations for aid against German Nazi aggression.

PALESTINE

The interest of the Jewish community in Palestine is still centered on the long drawn out hearing of the case of the three Revisionists accused of the murder of Dr. Chaim Arlosoroff. Abdul Mejid, Arab convict, who first confessed that he had committed the murder, later recanted and when placed on the witness stand related how two of the defendants, Abraham Stavsky and Zvi Rosenblatt approached him in the Jaffa jail and offered him £1,000 if he would say that he killed Dr. Arlosoroff.

He also said that they offered a fellow Arab convict £500 to substantiate the story. Abdul declared that he had not been in Jaffa in years. . . . The Palestine government has appointed a commission of three men to consider the feasibility of introducing an income tax in Palestine. . . . Reports from Tel Aviv indicate that 1933 was a boom year for Jewish industry in that town.

A labor dispute in Petach Tikvah between the Revisionists and the Laborites was settled through arbitration after clashes had occurred between the two groups and a number of arrests made by the police.

POLAND

Eight Endek students who participated in a demonstration against the Pilsudski government which wound up by attacking Jews on the Warsaw streets were sentenced to serve one month each in jail. . . . Endeks and Socialists in opposition to the Pilsudski regime attacked the Jewish Deputies in the Polish Parliament for not joining them in voting non-confidence in the Speaker who is alleged to have jammed through the new constitution without giving the deputies a chance to debate the measure.

A proposal by a Polish deputy to impose educational tests upon all merchants was seized upon by the Endeks as occasion to demand that traders be classified according to schooling. Since Jewish schools are not recognized, this would give the Endeks an opportunity to demand the ousting of Jews from business.

THE REST OF EUROPE

TEMPLE BETH-EL

One of the great tragedies of history has been the Christian hatred of the Jew and the Jew's fear of the Christian. Whence did it rise? What is the outlook for tomorrow? These questions will be dealt with in the sermon, "A Christian-Jewish Tragedy," to be delivered at the service tonight at 8 o'clock by Rabbi William G. Braude.

Tenor solo, George Tinker, "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," by Buck. Contral-ridiculed the appeal of the Polish Agudath Israel against alleged religious persecution in the Soviet Union. . . . The Soviet Union mourned the death of the three airmen who were killed after a record breaking stratosphere flight. One of them was a Jew.

The Amsterdam newspaper, Het Volk, declared that General Sherrill and the American Olympic Committee had been deliberately misled by the Nazis and that German Jewish athletes haven't even the ghost of a chance of participating in the 1936 Olympics. . . . After an election meeting called by the EEE, Greek Nazi group, anti-Semites demonstrated in the streets of Salonica against the Jews. The demonstrators were charged by the police and dispersed.

THE UNITED STATES

Over 300 pounds of anti-Jewish, anti-Catholic Nazi literature was seized on the North German Lloyd freighter Este in New York harbor. Customs officials who made the search held the chief cook on charges. Congressman Dickstein announced that he is seeking grand jury indictments against a number of leading propagandists in the United States. He also announced that he has evidence in his possession on the activities of the Silver Shirts in connection with the Nazis.

In a vigorous speech denouncing anti-Semitism and racial bigotry, Senator William H. King of Utah, speaking before the twenty-fifth annual convention of Hias, declared that he favors action by the United States in behalf of the persecuted Jews of Germany. . . . 1,500 delegates at a conference in the Hotel Pennsylvania pledged support for the $2,000,000 campaign for the settlement of German Jewish refugees in Palestine.

RABBI GOLDBERG ADDRESSES SISTERHOOD

Rabbi Morton Goldberg of Fall River addressed a meeting of the Sisterhood Wednesday evening on the subject, "Where Do You Live?" The Rabbi pointed out that the mere physical address is not sufficient to give proper designation of one's home. A person is placed more readily by a knowledge of his spiritual and mental life which are his true home. He therefore urged all present to develop the higher spheres of life as a means of raising the level of human existence.

The following new members were presented by the membership chairman, Mrs. Samuel N. Deutch, Mrs. Meier Levitt, Mrs. Jack Rosenblatt, Mrs. E. Zuckerberg, Mrs. J. Real Man's Bar to be Opened at Hotel Times Square, N.Y.

A real man's bar, patterned after the popular New York hotel bars of the pre-prohibition era, will open February 22 in Hotel Times Square, 43rd Street west of Broadway, New York. William S. Brown, managing director of the hotel believes one of the pleasant customs which repeal has not restored is "single standard" drinking.

"Before prohibition," Mr. Brown said, "there were any number of places in the Times Square district where a man could drop in and have a comfortable, quiet drink on his way home from work without being surrounded by debutantes and dance orchestras. The American Bar at the Hotel Times Square will be that kind of a place. I do not intend, of course, to exclude women, but there will be none of the frills and feminine atmosphere that is noticeable in so many hotel bars and grill rooms today."

The American Bar will be in the sub-lobby of the Hotel Times Square with a separate entrance on 43rd St. The decorations will strike a subdued note of comfort and congeniality. Mr. Brown has engaged three bartenders whose Broadway experience goes back to pre-war days. They are Harry McCormick, Pat Devine and Richard Moore. McCormick formerly tended bar at the Artists and Writers Club. Devine and Moore were at Churchill's and the old Knickerbocker Club in the antebellum days.

LECTURE ON NACHAMINIDES
The fourth of the series of lectures on great Jewish personalities will be held tonight at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue, promptly at 8.15 o'clock. Dr. Schechter's topic will be "Moses Nachaminides, His Life and Work." The public is cordially requested to come on time.

PURIM PLAY AND ENTERTAINMENT

WOMEN'S STUDY CIRCLE

Last Monday night the book review which is held every second Monday at the Jewish Institute under the leadership of Rabbi Schechter took place at the Institute. Mrs. Benjamin M. Poulton reviewed the book "Kiddush Hashem," by Sholom Asch. In a most interesting manner, enjoyed by the entire group, Mrs. Poulton pictured the life of a small Jewish community during the Chmelnitzky period. An interesting discussion followed. The following two books will be reviewed at subsequent meetings: Irving Fineman's "Dear Ye Sons," by Mrs. Samuel Narva, and Sholom Asch's "Three Cities," by Mrs. Abraham I. Schechter.

and told of the persecutions of Jews and Christians alike.

The committee will study further data in connection with the charges made by Senator Tydings against the Hitler regime and on the basis of this data will make a final decision on reporting the resolution out favorably to the Senate. A favorable report is expected within the next two weeks.

Hundreds of letters and telegrams have been received by Senators from all over the country requesting passage of a resolution protesting the program of the Hitler regime.

Representative Herman P. A. Kopleman, of Connecticut, today urged Jews throughout the country to arouse the interest of their non-Jewish neighbors in the Tydings resolution now pending consideration in the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The Connecticut representative suggested that letters and telegrams be sent to all Senators, especially members of the Committee on Foreign Relations, urging support and adoption of the resolution.

The House Committee on Rules did not have time today to consider the Dickstein resolution calling for an investigation of Nazi activities in the United States. Early consideration of the bill, which has already received the approval of the House Immigration Committee, is expected.

THE JEWISH DIETARY LAWS Questions and Answers (From My Question Box) By RABBI ABRAHAM I. SCHECHTER, Ph. D.

Question: It is difficult to understand how holiness can have anything to do with eating or drinking. Why, then, does the Bible apply the term "holiness" in connection with the Dietary Laws?

Answer: The Hebrew term "Kedushah," "holiness," primarily suggested another idea than purity and saintliness. The term primarily meant consecration. The Jew should consecrate his life to noble feeling and action by the observance of outward rites and symbols. In other words, the Jewish people was meant to be a consecrated people, a people distinguished from the rest of the world through certain ideals, ethics and regulations; among these regulations the Dietary Laws are outstanding. The observance of these outward laws and regulations leads to an inner sanctity, and also, above all, to the preservation of unity and loyalty in Israel, and will serve as a safeguard against assimilation.

Question: Granting that the Dietary Laws consecrate the Jewish people, how can the Dietary Laws prevent assimilation?

Answer: Of all things that foster friendship among people, a common table is one that cannot be surpassed. When we break bread with acquaintances or strangers, and drink with them, we find that a closer intimacy is established, conventional restrictions vanish, and closer relationships result. In the words of the Rabbis, eating and drinking with other peoples at a common table, may result in intermarriage, and intermarriage often leads to the severing of one's connection with the Jewish religion and the Jewish people.

Question: Do you, then, consider the Jewish Dietary Laws as a sort of a badge distinguishing the Jew from the rest of the world?

Answer: This outward distinction from other peoples is not a goal in itself; the Dietary Laws are not merely a badge to proclaim that the Jew is externally different; it has a deeper significance. The Jew is trained by these laws and is educated to a holy obedience and service to God. In this manner the daily and outward life of the Jew is spiritualized; as it is said in proverbs: "In all thy ways acknowledge Him." A Jewish mother preparing the meals for her family in the special Jewish manner, is daily reminded of the consecration of her home to a higher spiritual life. Thus, the observing Jew refines his home, endeavors to keep personal holiness, and, at the same time, also nurtures by it the Jew's racial character as a holy and consecrated nation.

bulent country, their lives as well. Their fate hangs on the outcome of the struggle being bitterly waged between the Dollfuss regime and its shifting allies on the one side, and the Austrian Nazis with the backing of Germany, on the other.

Jewish circles are watching with gravest anxiety and alarm the developments in the fight which Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss is tenaciously waging against the Nazis, fearing that if the Nazis obtain power through revolution, Jewish heads will roll in revenge for the stubborn support Austrian Jewry has given to Dollfuss.

Leading political and diplomatic circles, this correspondent ascertained in a series of interviews, are doubtful that the Dollfuss regime can survive the continual battering to which it is subjected and the defections of large groups of its supporters.

Government Doomed
Internal intrigues have reached the point where even the most confirmed optimists cannot see how the present government can survive.

The fight for power is now concentrated between the Heimwehr the Fascist home guard which has the support of Italy, and the Nazis, who enjoy the support and active backing of Germany. One of the two parties must win and even in the event of victory perching on the Heimwehr banner, Austrian Jews stand to lose because the Heimwehr is strongly infected with anti-Semitic elements.

Austrian Nazis continued their assaults on the Jews by perpetrating a series of bomb outrages, not only in the provinces where, in scores of communities, the Jews have been living in a virtual state of siege, but in the capital as well.

At the same time, it was learned that the Austrian government has in preparation a series of measures restricting Jewish rights.

The headquarters of the Vienna Jewish community and the buildings of the famed Schiff school were bombed by Nazis in Vienna today but the attacks caused little damage although occupants of both institutions were badly shaken and badly frightened.

Jewish stores throughout the city are being subjected to a continual barrage of small bombs, and teargas and ammonia missiles. Disorders were reported in all parts of the city today as the emboldened Austrian Hitlerites went after the Jews without restraint.

Cases were reported today where the auxiliary police commissioned to prevent disorders by the Nazis, joined hands with the anti-government forces in attacks on the helpless Jews. As a result, the authorities today assigned special details of trusted guards to watch the auxiliaries.

Anti-Semitism Certain Even if, by unexpected develop-who is able to become a member will be given the opportunity to do so.

"The ladies, God bless them," says Mr. Goldowsky, "are the originators of the Home for the Aged, and are the backbone of every charitable endeavor in the community. I am delighted to work with them in this most important campaign. The Home for the Aged is the only institution in the state supported by membership. It completes the round of duty for a Jew to his synagogue, his other charities, and the duty to the helpless aged. No one can afford to withhold his name from the list of supporters of this worthy institution."

Hadassah University Hospital Aided by Contribution of $5000

NEW YORK—A gift of $5,000 to the building fund of the proposed Hadassah University Hospital in Jerusalem, Palestine, was announced last night by Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, and the American Jewish Physicians' Committee, joint sponsors of the hospital building program. The contribution was made by the Buffalo chapter of Hadassah for the operating room of the hospital.

The total amount in contributions to date is $5,884, it was stated. Among the donors are the American Jewish Physicians' Committee, $550; Miss Loula D. Lasker, $100; Kew-Forest, L. I. chapter of Hadassah, $50; Judge and Mrs. Julian W. Mack, $50 in honor of Miss Henrietta Szold, founder of Hadassah, on her seventy-third birthday, and the Wharton, Texas chapter of Hadassah, $50. Included in the total are a number of smaller contributions from individuals and Hadassah chapters.

The committee is seeking to raise $200,000 for the building fund. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Edward Jacobs, of this city, Hadassah chapters in 255 cities are organizing committees of clubwomen, physicians, scientists and educators to conduct local campaigns. As soon as a substantial amount of the fund is raised building operations will begin. Mrs. Jacobs said, "The site for the building will be decided upon within the next few weeks and the land will be purchased with the first $20,000 that the Hadassah chapters raise this year for the Jewish National Fund."

The new institution, which its sponsors say will be the first of its kind in Palestine, will house a model hospital, a school for graduate medical instruction and a medical research institute. Hadassah, which maintains a complete medical system in Palestine, will direct the hospital, while the Hebrew University will supervise the academic aspects of the institution.

tax is regarded as superfluous, since the Palestine government still has a surplus of income over expenditures.

The measure has been referred to a commission consisting of William Joseph Johnson, O. B. E., treasurer of Palestine; Kingsley Wilham Stend, C. B. E., director of customs, excise and trade; and James E. E. Campbell, O. B. E., district commissioner of the Jerusalem district. A British Treasury official has arrived in Jerusalem to act as adviser to the commission.

ments, the Heimwehr should succeed in seizing control of the Austrian State and establish a Fascist dictatorship, the Jews must expect to be eliminated from the free professions and made the subject of discriminating laws. Definite anti-Jewish laws must be expected in the event of a Heimwehr victory affecting also the Jews in commerce although the degradation of the Jews would probably be accomplished in a quieter manner than in Germany.

The present government, headed by a "cabinet of personalities" and deriving its chief support from groups hostile to each other—between which it is torn and racked—legally draws no distinction between Jews and non-Jews. But seventy percent of the population, however, sympathizes with the Austrian Nazis who openly practice discriminations against Austrian Jews.

The Days Pass

By JACK SILVERMAN

THE ROVING REPORTER

Friday, Feb. 9 — Brrr! This is like the winters I used to know in Russia . . . 17 below zero . . . Who ever heard of it in this part of the world? The softies here can't take it! . . . Temple Beth-Israel, in the evening; only a handful of people present to participate in the very fine services conducted by Rabbi Schussheim and Cantor Schlossberg. I am not the only late comer, here are the Jacob Lichts . . . Jake wants to know if I'm going to deliver the sermon. Is he by any chance trying to kid me? The Morris Rothmans and the Harry Siegels are here. They are always together, and can be classed as nice "heimishe menchen" . . . Jimmie Goldman, (my pal!) didn't let the cold keep him away, and neither did Joe (Radio) Cohen.

The Rakusin family was represented . . . The Sentlers — Charlie and Mildred — two friends of long standing . . . Before leaving, I had to promise the Rabbi that I'd come up more often, which I really should do, and so should YOU and you and you, who live in the vicinity.

Saturday, Feb. 10 — Not so cold today, and so I won't have to send to Russia for my "bashlik," bear skin coat, and felt boots . . . At the Naragansett Hotel — Max Zinn, the genial Maitre d'Hotel, busier than the proverbial one arm paper hanger . . . There is a candy jobbers' convention here tonight. Hy and Sam Rosen, those swellegant boys who give free sweets to poor kiddies, are present. So are Max Cohen and Jake Horowitz. Mike Morgan came in disguised as a lolly pop . . . and Leon Berman arrived after supper was all over . . . The Seefers, manager par excellence, and nice people . . . Over for my evening tea with lemon in a glass.

Sunday, Feb. 11 — At the testimonial dinner in honor of Mrs. Marion L. Misch . . . Louis Chorney of East Greenwich treats his favorite columnist! (I say there, clerk — my hat size is much larger!) . . . Ex-Senator Isaac Moses, the organization's president, is official greeter and introducer . . . Jake Weiss is the "Weiss" president . . . each man had a piece of land, no one could exploit him and all were free men. And that is the purpose of the Jewish National Fund, to see that each may have access to the land — that speculators and monopolists shall not get it.

We have been doing a good deal of worrying about whether or not the present boom in Palestine will be followed by a depression. There is one certain way to prevent it — and that is to put more land in the hands of the Jewish National Fund.

Of one thing we may be sure, that if Britain allows a very liberal Jewish immigration into Palestine and the Palestine land is all in the hands of speculators — that a crisis is as certain to ensue as that matches will start a fire. For with speculative land prices, rent must go up and with rent and land prices up, settlers coming in unable to go to the land are thrown on the labor market and depression wages, and so we have the joint development of high rent and low wages — and that means depression crisis.

Behind much of the present unrest that prevails in the world is the land problem. A writer in the New York Times the other day said that the reason that Hindenburg sent for Hitler was not that he loved Hitler but that Von Scheicher, Hitler's predecessor, proposed to solve the economic problem in Germany, by breaking up the great landed estates — in other words breaking the power of the Junkers — and Hindenburg, a Junker would not stand for this. While Germany is crying for more colonies within Prussia itself forty percent of the land is owned by Junkers, as great landed estates.

In Spain similarly the problem of land is the center about which the whole economic revolution pivots. In our own American Cuba, we may understand why such poverty prevails when we read in Carleton Beals' book on Cuba that nine-tenths of the Cuban land is owned by outsiders.

Palestine, it seems to me, is taking the most radical step in the direction of removing nine-tenths of the economic problem by making the land "the inalienable possession of people."

And I don't believe that it is necessary to buy up all the land. If the Jewish National Fund can succeed in buying up a great portion of it — we may say "Dayenu." A reserve will be sufficient at least so it seems to me serving to keep land prices within bounds. In Haifa, the Jewish National Fund has succeeded in doing that

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

Few Punches Used by Fighters
While the large King Levinsky was rehearsing or training for his bout with Charlie Massera in New York, a rumor reached Broadway that some one had actually seen the King poke a sparring partner at the Pioneer Gymnasium with what was said to be a straight left. This news was received with much lifting of eyebrows and with the same surprise that would have greeted the statement that Maxie Rosenbloom had knocked out an opponent with one punch.

Strange as the Levinsky rumor sounded, it needed a thorough investigation and so by common consent Benny Leonard, who has become official investigator and appraiser of all Jewish fighters, went over to the gym to see if Levinsky had really given the punch in question.

When Leonard arrived at the training quarters Levinsky had taken the day off so Benny did not get a chance to look him over. However, the ex-champ did see the boxers in action and the talk turned naturally enough to the question of how many punches are used in the ring?

The first answer, coming from Sammy Golden a well-known manager, was that there were only five punches, strictly speaking. He listed the left jab, left hook, left uppercut.

Leonard then was asked for his count. He listed the five mentioned by Golden and added a right hook and left and right swings, bringing the total number of punches in his book up to eight. Benny, of course, has no high opinion of swings, be they with the left or the right. Still, if it were not for Levinsky's right hand swings, which is almost like the motion of a man putting the sixteen-pound shot, the Kingfish never would have risen from the preliminary ranks.

Getting back to the question of how many punches may be listed as available for a boxer's use, Dumb Dan Morgan topped Leonard's list of eight by three. Morgan mentioned all of Leonard's and added a right jab and right and left chop. Dumb Dan's inclusion of a right jab met right hook for the body and how he then could straighten up and deliver a hasty right jab before unscrambling himself. Morgan did not deign to reply to a query as to what the other fellow would be doing in the meantime.

After Morgan named eleven punches the rest of the gang gave up and drifted away in search of a new topic. However, a few more punches which have been used all too frequently can be named.

Chief among these should be listed the invisible punch, which was used by Harry Wills, Primo Carnera and numerous others to bring about knockouts. The invisible punch is so termed because it escapes the eye of all but the gladiator who goes to the canvas for a ten-second nap.

Carnera also has had amazing results with what may be termed the push punch. Sharkey and others have featured what may be dubbed the canvas scraper or subterranean punch. Maxie Rosenbloom has received material assistance from his open glove wallop and also from the backhand punch.

Not would any attempt to list punches be complete without mention of the radio announcer's "over hand uppercut" that broadcast the news to millions of listeners-in. However, Sharkey was never able to demonstrate this punch again, although both he and other boxers worked on it for hours. The secret of the "over-hand uppercut" seems to have been lost forever.

Holman Strategy
It was City college's variation of the man to man and zone defense in its game with Temple a few weeks ago that gave the Jewish boys the award over the Philadelphia team. Coach Holman, remembering the slippery Mitten Hall floor two years ago when Temple beat C.C.N.Y. with much opposition from the gathering on the ground that it was available only for southpaws.

Dumb Dan silenced the objectors by a nifty bit of shadow boxing in which he demonstrated how it was possible for an orthodox boxer to get into the position of having his right foot advanced after missing a

Figures Prove Boycott of Nazi Goods a Failure

Business Transactions Between Germany and United States Increased Greatly During 1933

Boycotted by virtually the entire world, suffering from a lapse of her 1933 trade surplus 37 percent below that of 1932, and embarrassed by a 18 percent decrease of her exports during 1933 while world exports increased about one percent, Germany finds in the United States a true friend insofar as commercial relations are concerned.

From trade figures it is glaringly apparent that the American boycott of German goods has failed dismally thus far. Together with Italy, and a few South American states, the United States stands as one of the few countries of the world whose imports of German merchandise increased during Hitler's term in office.

In October, 1933, Germany exported to the United States $7,666,577 worth of merchandise, an increase of more than a half-million dollars over the figure for October, 1932. During the ten months of 1933 ending in October, the United States imported goods from Germany aggregating $64,685,094 as compared with the lesser figure of $62,439,351 during the first ten months of 1932.

Imports of 2 Novembers

In November, 1933, the United States continued to heighten this year's imports from Germany over those of 1932 by importing $6,603,884 of German merchandise. In November, 1932, the United States imported only $6,376,537 worth of German goods.

The figures fail to show any discrimination whatsoever against German merchandise. The fact that American imports from Germany gained during October can not be explained by a reciprocal rise in German purchases from this country during that month. On the contrary, American exports to Germany during October declined below those in 1932. They declined from $110,545,952 in October 1932, to $109,787,627 in October, 1933. Exports to Germany, however, rose during the first ten months of 1933 to $17,821,296, as compared with $15,754,264 during the first ten months of the previous year.

The fact remains that the United States continues to patronize Hitlerized Germany without either favorable or unfavorable distinction. The rise in America's trade with the Third Reich is in almost exact proportion to the rise in this country's trade with the world in general. During the ten months ending October 1933, the United States imported from all the world $1,187,495,593 and exported to all the world $1,298,967,475 in merchandise. These figures denote an increase in imports and exports decrease from those of the first ten months of 1932 which were, respectively, $1,121,218,744 and $1,340,568,617.

German Imports Rise

Of particular interest is the fact that the American boycott of German goods has been ineffective only since August of 1933. Prior to that month, American imports of German goods had fallen below those for 1932. On all sides trade returns for the next few months were eagerly anticipated as irrefutable evidence of the tightening of the boycott. Trade returns for September, October and November have been issued, and they reveal that the boycott of the early part of the year has been more than compensated for in a gradual rise of American imports from Germany.

By August, 1933, the United States had imported from Germany merchandise totaling $48,512,752 which was approximately $21,000 more than was imported during the same period in 1932. In the month of August, however, the United States imported $8,702,276 in merchandise as compared with $5,697,854 during August, 1932.

From that time on American imports mounted until in October they had exceeded substantially the imports for the first ten months in 1932. In November they rose to $71,290,496 or almost three million dollars over the figure for the first 11 months of 1932.

U. S. Stands Out

Together with Italy as almost the only European country failing to cut exports from Germany drastically during the last year, the United States stands out as one of the few countries that has not responded commercially to Hitler's internal and foreign policies.

Second Largest Customer

With the sole exception of the United Kingdom, which imported more than twice as much American merchandise as Germany did during 1933, Germany is by far the most important European consumer of American goods. France is America's third best European customer with purchases of $95,387,904 worth of merchandise during the first ten months of 1933 and Italy is third with $48,578,170. Japan in the East purchased $108,119,414 and Canada $169,947,334 during this period.

Germany bought during the first ten months of 1933 almost twice as much as she sold to the United States. Her imports from this country aggregated $64,685,094 while the United Kingdom purchased $93,707,978. The United States entertains a more favorable trade balance with Germany than with any other great trading nation.

While the maintenance of normal trade relations with Germany despite the energetic action of boycott committees and faithful compliance with the boycott by millions of Americans, may be explained in part by recent abnormalities in the monetary conditions of both countries, this explanation can by no means indicate that the boycott of German goods in the United States is appreciably successful. America's continued purchase of German goods is remarkably large, not only when contrasted with the decided decline of German imports to European and Asiatic countries, but also when compared to the decline of German imports into Canada, a neighboring country.

Imported More in Dollars

During the entire year of 1933, Canada imported from Germany approximately 25,000,000 reichsmarks in German goods as contrasted with 33,300,000 in 1932. The United States imported approximately 247,000,000 reichsmarks in German goods during 1933 and 281,000,000 in 1932. In terms of dollars the United States imported more last year than in 1932.

While Germany's imports of goods from the world market declined nine percent during 1933, she continues to buy as usual from the United States. This may be explained by the fact that the American dollar abroad now is worth only 60 cents. It is true that the dollar was not so cheap during the entire 12 months of 1933, but its depreciation during the latter half of the year was sufficient to attract the custom of many countries, Germany included.

"Blocked Marks" Aid

A somewhat similar condition exists regarding the German reichsmark. It can now be purchased abroad at a fraction of its nominal value through the medium of "blocked marks." The German Government at present has at least six different kinds of blocked marks in circulation. In Germany they are exchanged for the ordinary mark but abroad they may be bought at as low as 55 percent of their nominal value.

Hence, the blocked marks have to some extent paralleled the depreciation of the American dollar. Despite the decline of the value of their dollars, American traders in some instances now find they can purchase more in Germany with their depreciated American dollars than they could have done with the gold dollar of one year ago.

That American dealers are taking advantage of blocked marks to purchase heavily from Germany, despite their public assertions of adhering to the anti-German boycott, is well known to a few in the confidence of those traders. Among them are included a number of Jewish executives of large American concerns. At least one, who now asserts his purchases from Germany are negligible, continues to maintain a purchasing office in Berlin.

It is likewise reported, although no definite information has been given the writer, that many importers have their goods from Germany transhipped from other countries to evade being classed as opponents of the boycott.

Of this the writer is certain: that a number of retail dealers in the United States have ordered tremendous quantities of German wares well in advance; that before they announced their intention of boycotting German goods they stocked their warehouses with merchandise from Germany; that they placed orders for future import, for enough merchandise to keep their shelves well-stocked throughout the duration of an ordinary boycott; and that many dealers have no intention of boycotting Germany in securing their most essential wares, in most cases because to purchase from other countries would entail higher costs; and that large quantities of German

Siegel's Meat Market Ends Third Year of Satisfactory Service

This month marks the third anniversary of Siegel's Meat Market on Hope Street.

Irving Siegel, proprietor, is one of the leading Jewish merchants. His modern methods of both purchasing and selling meats have won for him many satisfied customers, who appreciate his progressive spirit. The daily and weekly specials offered at the market have become very popular and attract women from all parts of the city to shop there.

Mr. Siegel came to this city three years ago from Brookline, where he was engaged in the retail meat market business.

His wife is the former Ella Cohen of this city, and his family is comprised of three children, Douglas, Joseph and Elaine.

Mr. Siegel is a member of Temple Emanu-El, Rhode Island Post No. 23, Jewish War Veterans, Providence Kosher Butchers Association and Boston Kosher Butchers Association.

goods are purchased here through the medium of German importers.

One can not point an accusing finger at any one merchant in New York for the above infractions without first examining the positions of others. In fact, it may be said, there is not a large retail house in the city that does not have large quantities of German merchandise on display. Some are more flagrant violators of the boycott pledge than others, but the impression prevails among offenders that so long as violation is general they are all in the same boat and by virtue of this generality of sin against their asserted attitude toward Germany none is to blame more than the other. "If Jones buys cheap goods from Germany, and I pay more for the same goods from Japan, I am a sap and I deserve the ruin that my folly brings," says Smith. And Jones says the same of Smith, and so on down the line.

An investigation, undertaken by the writer, of a score of leading department stores in New York revealed that nowhere is the boycott being rigidly enforced. All handle German merchandise. All of them presented German goods to the writer, who posed as a customer, but unless the salesclerks were asked the country of origin, the identity of the material was not divulged.

When salespeople were drawn into conversation regarding the boycott they indicated that buyers were becoming less interested in it and that there is less discrimination against German goods now than there was three months ago. They also indicated that the stores had shown no intention of closing out certain German lines, particularly in chinaware, women's gloves, cameras, full-fashioned hosiery, and a few other items. These articles they described as being superior to any other lines of domestic make or from other countries.

Conversations with and communications from department store executives indicate that they have no intention of closing out "essential" German lines, from which they have always derived the major part of their profit in foreign manufacturers. They assert that their orders for German goods have dwindled to small amounts, but a cursory survey of their shelves reveals the existence of great supplies of German goods.

The retailers of New York have refused to countermand orders for the delivery of goods from Germany in the future. They give as their reason for this failure, upon which the success of the boycott apparently depends, the honor of their establishments. "Our word is our bond. We do not make a practice of withdrawing orders after they have been given," they say. And yet, it is well known that when, in the normal course of events, a buyer is threatened with a loss of profit on the delivery of certain orders of merchandise, he wastes little time in countermanding them. If any conclusion is to be drawn from this paragraph, it is this: That the "honorable" department stores are more influenced by profit than they are by their moral convictions.

POLISH GOVERNMENT KEEPS UP PERSECUTION OF ITS JEWS

The economic war waged by the Polish government against the Jews has been taken one step further by the establishment of a road transport monopoly. This seemingly harmless action in effect means the elimination of Jews from this particular industry. The establishment of monopolies has long been the method adopted by the Polish Government to drive the Jews from various spheres of economic enterprise.

First a monopoly is established, and then licenses are issued by the Government to individuals granting them the exclusive rights to sell or manufacture a certain category of goods or to undertake some particular economic activity, as the case may be. So far the process is not in itself anti-Semitic. It is in the distribution of licenses that the discrimination sets in. And past experience has shown that whoever may be recipient of licenses, they are not Jews. In this way the Jews have gradually been eliminated from a large number of trades and industries, among them tobacco, alcohol, etc. For those trades in which a monopoly could not well be established the Government adopts another method slower but as certain in its action — prohibitive taxation which sooner or later forces Jewish owners of such firms to go out of business.

The present case is a particularly flagrant one, for the Jews were the pioneers in this field. Poland has in the last few years been covered with a net of passenger bus lines, due almost entirely to Jewish enterprise. This net of passenger buses is of enormous significance in a country as poor in railways as Poland, and the Jews, by establishing it, rendered their country a great service. Not that they were allowed to reap the benefit of their enterprise till now. The companies and individuals operating these routes were compelled to pay extremely heavy taxes, and at the same time to keep the roads in order — and only one with personal knowledge of the state of Polish roads can realize what this involved.

Yet, by extremely hard work they managed to make ends meet and to scrape a meagre livelihood for themselves. Altogether well over 10,000 families, or about 50,000 individuals, are entirely dependent on this industry, and of these some 75% are Jews.

With the establishment of the monopoly no individual or company will any longer have the right to run passenger buses anywhere in Poland, without a special licence from the Government — and there is little doubt that the Jews will to all intents and purposes be excluded from the granting of licences. The livelihood of over 35,000 Jews is being taken away from them. An industry which they themselves created, in which they worked not only as owners, but also as drivers, conductors, mechanics and officials, is being closed to them. And the licences to exploit these routes will be granted to people with no knowledge and less experience of the work who had no share in the creation of the industry and did none of the hard pioneering work.

One example of the way in which the licenses will be distributed is already on hand. Immediately the monopoly was established a group of three non-Jews, applied for the exclusive rights to run buses on the Lodz-Tomaszow route. The group consists of the late director of the Harriman concern, Martini, the director of the Lodz Electrical Works and the Polish Senator Iwanowski. This group at the same time applied for a government subsidy of 2,000,000 zloty (about $40,000) for the purpose of building new roads.

The line in question was until now in Jewish hands, and provided work for no less than 700 persons. The people now applying for the license demand in addition a very large subsidy for work which the previous Jewish owners had to undertake at their own expense. The work the Jews have done up till now, the large capital they have invested in the industry, count for nothing. Their capital is lost for since the buses may no longer be used, they are entirely valueless.

Not only did he score frequently but after being knocked out returned to the game to put it on ice for his team. For three months before the game he didn't touch a basketball. He was working in the downtown branch of the college from nine until six each day and after supper returned for an evening session.
