FEAR REVOLUTION IN REICH

STORMS OVER HOLLYWOOD

EDITORIAL

Civilization is sick. Whether we admit it or not, we are standing at the deathbed of the existing order of things. Millions are starving, more millions unemployed, and still more millions without either faith or hope. A virulent nationalism infects mankind like a plague, and the whole world, black with hatreds (race against race and country against country), rushes towards the brink of war.

The liberties of each of us are imperiled by the Fascist terror, which is the death-violence of capitalism. As we enter the most crucial epoch of human history, when every man must ask his neighbor, "On which side are you?" there is a great commotion in the temples of God. Look! The ministers and priests and rabbis are rushing out of their churches. They have banded together; they will excoriate, will take up arms against our common enemies — the enemies of the people! No! Do not be deceived. They are only marching against Hollywood. They have examined the face of the earth and their own hearts and they have found nothing more serious to anathematize than the curves of Mae West, the legs of Dietrich, and the flip tongue of Ginger Rogers. This crusade of the Legion of Decency is their answer to the cries of the sick, the bewildered, the oppressed, the exploited.

As Richard Watts has pointed out in the Herald-Tribune, "it is in great part the fault of movements very similar to the present crusade that the motion picture is pushed into its general preoccupation with sex and crime. Every time the screen has attempted to deal seriously with important controversial problems, to assume any sort of intellectual seriousness, zealous objectors have arisen to insist that Hollywood should keep away from 'propaganda' — which is the name for any picture from 'Greed' to 'Potemkin' which contains the germ of a social idea. In pathetic fear of hurting some one's feelings, the cinema magnates, in their slightly simple-minded fashion, decided that sex and crime were just about the only marketable subjects left, since politics, economics, and social ideas were bound to raise antagonism. I know that they have often handled both sex and crime pretty crudely on occasion, but it is still to be doubted gravely that the sight of Miss West on the screen has caused any one to rush from the theater, filled with the grim determination to lead the life of viciousness."

Only a fanatic could believe that public morals will be improved by grading down all motion pictures to suit ten-year-olds. If "Pollyanna" and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" are to be steady fare at the picture theaters, the average adult will keep away from them in droves and look for his pleasures elsewhere. It is doubtful, however, that the pious sermons of the reformers will become so popular that people will stand in lines outside the meeting-halls, waiting for seats.

If the reformers were actually interested in reform and not in the pathological hunt of a scapegoat they might be able to accomplish some good by advocating selected low-priced children's matinees twice a week at neighborhood theaters (full price to be charged at all other program showings) and by educating parents to exercise a judicial authority over the cinematic excursions of their dear wandering infants. They might encourage film producers to cultivate the graces of sincerity, intelligence, and social realism, instead of compelling them, by their campaign of terrorism, to wear the false smirk of professional dealers in sweetness and

Establish "Ghetto" in Technical Institute of City of Danzig

DANZIG (JTA) — The Technical High School here has introduced what amounts to a Jewish Ghetto, segregating Jewish from non-Jewish students for separate training for the Chemical Institute. At the same time the Jewish students' corporation, Unia, has been dissolved.

Zionist Groups Honor Memory of Late Chaim Bialik

Chaim Nachman Bialik, greatest Jewish poet of modern times, was eulogized Monday evening at a meeting held at the Jewish Community Center, 65 Benefit Street, under the combined auspices of the Zionist Organizations of this city, namely, the Zionist District, Senior Hadassah and the Poale Zion.

The guest speaker was Hon. Elihu David Stone of Boston, vice president of the Zionist Organization of America and president of the New England Zionist Region. Mr. Stone gave a sketch of the life of the poet, putting in personal reminiscences and presenting a wonderful appreciation of the influence of the poet on the modern Zionism.

Very charmingly was an appreciation of the man's poetry given by Rabbi Morris Schussheim. The chairman of the evening was Alter Boyman, president of the Poale Zion, who told of the poet's influence on the Jewish youth of the early part of the present century in Russia. Joseph Smith, president of the Zionist District, spoke of the loss of the Jewish people at his untimely death.

Mrs. Isadore Singer represented Senior Hadassah by giving a reading about Bialik. A Hebrew reading of one of the last poems of Bialik, in which he describes his death, was given by Morris W. Shoham, and the poem "El Ha-Zipor" in English, was given by Mrs. Shoham. The meeting was closed with the chanting of "El Mole Rachamim" by Cantor Joseph Schlossberg.

Announce Use of New Surgical Treatment at Ohio Jewish Hospital

CINCINNATI (JTA) — Experiments conducted at the Jewish and General Hospitals in Cincinnati have resulted in the creation of a new machine for improving circulation in the arms and legs where thickening of the blood and obstruction of the blood vessels has set in, it was announced here. The machine is now in active operation in the Jewish Hospital, Dr. Walter E. List, superintendent, declared.

The machine eliminates in many instances the necessity for amputation of limbs, being especially valuable in cases in which diabetic patients develop gangrene. The major feature, Dr. List says, is a transparent glass boot, encasing the limb to be treated, and sealed at the top by a rubber cuff. Alternative positive and negative pressures are produced rhythmically to stimulate and restore circulation of the blood.

Praise Jews for Aiding International Goodwill

WARSAW (JTA) — The Polish press highly praised the Jews of Poland for aiding in the difficult task of establishing friendly relations between the Polish and Lithuanian governments, which have been at odds since the Polish occupation of Wilno by the bands of General Zaruski.

Over 5000 Jewish Families Suffer in Flood, Survey Shows

WARSAW (JTA) — The tragic situation of the Jewish victims of the disastrous flood which recently inundated Poland was particularly emphasized by a survey conducted by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Provisional figures show that as a result of the flood over 2000 Jewish families are utterly without any means of support and more than 3000 Jewish families are without shelter or adequate clothing.

The majority of those who lost their homes and all their possessions are living in synagogues, huddled together under dreadfully unsanitary conditions, while many are still camping out under the open sky.

Especially tragic is the position of the flood victims in the region around Jaslo and also at Nowysancz, Mielec and Limanow.

In many places the water is poisoned and victims find it impossible to secure water for drinking purposes.

The Jewish communities at Sandomierz and Stuczyn asked the Jewish Telegraphic Agency to broadcast the news that hundreds of Jewish families are without bread at Sandomierz, while 80 Jewish families are in similar straits at Stuczyn.

At Gryzbow a Gentile woman named Paszkowa, owner of a local brewery, adopted 52 Jewish children from Nowysancz and is feeding them.

In many villages the poor peasants are showing the greatest kindness to the thousands of Jewish victims, housing them and sharing their meager rations with them.

An appeal to its affiliated societies to take immediate steps to aid Jews in Poland made destitute by the recent flood disasters was issued by the Federation of Polish Jews.

Restraining Force Removed by Death of von Hindenburg

Concentration of Power in Hitler May Lead to Further Tyranny

LONDON (JTA) — With the death of the aged German Reichspresident, Paul von Hindenburg, and with the return to uniform of the storm troops from their month of enforced vacation after the "blood purge" of June 30, a situation which, it is feared, may bring disorders and even a possible revolution in Germany, uneasiness is growing today as to the fate of the German Jews.

The aged President died yesterday at his home at Neudeck, East Prussia. Professor Kaufman, noted German Jewish medical authority, was one of three famous German physicians who were hurriedly summoned from Berlin to attend President von Hindenburg.

The death of President von Hindenburg may be the turning point, for the worse, in the position of the German Jews who have been persecuted ever since the Hitler regime came into power.

President von Hindenburg, it is known, always disapproved of the Nazi policy of racial persecution and even went as far as to issue a personal statement guaranteeing the safety of the Jews in Germany. He maintained the same attitude when recently he ordered that war service medals be issued to all men who served in the army, despite Chancellor Hitler's demand that Jewish soldiers be excluded.

Varied Program of Recreation Offered Jewish Children at Center

More than 325 Jewish children are having a grand time in the summer play school operated by the Jewish Community Center in the rear of its main building at 65 Benefit Street.

The grounds have been open daily except Saturday and Sunday since July 9 and will continue to operate until Thursday, August 16. The program for the youngsters is a rather busy one beginning at 9:30 in the morning and continuing till 5 o'clock with a one hour interruption for lunch.

A varied program includes basketball, volleyball, indoor baseball, ping pong, chess, checkers and other games. There is a large variety of apparatus which includes swings, seesaws, slides, merry-go-round and sand box. Every afternoon the milk station is open where children can obtain a half pint bottle for two cents. Every Thursday afternoon ice cream is sold for two cents. Every Monday morning and Friday afternoon free lolly-pops are distributed. Free showers are available every afternoon.

The summer program will close Thursday, August 16 with a gala picnic at Lincoln Woods.

A novel feature of this year's work are the excursions to Newport to see the fleet. More than 200 children are being taken on the steamer "Calvert" through a special arrangement with the Sound Steamship Line.

A trip through Roger Williams Park was arranged with Mr. Isador Korn volunteering the use of his automobile.

The following children took part in the two shows that were presented Friday afternoons: Minnie Corich, Beatrice Corich, Max J. Rose, Morris Cofman, Robert Crovits, Harold Gordon, Elaine Morrison, Delores Koret, Esther Simkofsky, Evelyn Cofman, Francis Cohen, Leona Zwatsky, Lillian Zuckerberg, Margaret Keane, Victor Cleimann, Maurice Greenstein, Barbara R. Adelman, Pauline Zuckerberg, Marion Doyle, Celia Zuckerberg, Bonnie Barles, Marion Goldstein, Ida Diamond, Bessie Berko, Grace Cronan, Barbara Sylvia, and Mildred Bromberg.

First prizes were won by Bonnie Barles and Maurice Greenstein.

We wish to take this opportunity to thank the following for contributions: Samuel Rosen, 2500 lolly-pops; George Friedman, 100 quarts of milk; Abe V. Flink, ice cream; milk, and cake for the picnic; Mrs. Henry P. Hirschberg, in memory of Samuel Priest, 30 dresses for girls.

Executive Director Jacob I. Cohen is assisted in the carrying out of the program by William Matzner, Miss Muriel Austin and Miss Gertrude B. Tarnapol. The following have acted as volunteers: Miss Evelyn Rich, Miss Ethel Goldman, Miss Bessie Plotkin, Mrs. Eli Adelman and Miss Ann Goldman.

Preparations are now being made to present an ambitious program for the coming season. There is a special significance attached to the next few months because it will be ten years since the Center program has been carried on and more than 20 years since the present building was purchased. It will be a double anniversary to be celebrated by special features, lectures, concerts and events.

Next Tuesday evening the adult members of the Center will meet on the steamer Calvert which sails from Dyer Street at the foot of Orange, which will leave for a four hour sail on the Narragansett Bay. Dancing will continue from 8:30 to 12:30.

THE WEEK IN JEWISH NEWS

PALESTINE

To the joy of his numerous supporters and the satisfaction of unprejudiced observers of Palestinian justice, Abraham Stavsky was acquitted, on appeal, of the murder of Dr. Arlosoroff. The aftermath of the trial, however, disappointed many who had expected that the various Jewish factions of Palestine might have learned cooperation from their joint effort to free Stavsky. Immediately after his acquittal Revisionists and the Histadruth were at daggers' points again.

Nineteen Jewish evaders of the immigration laws were apprehended in various attempts to enter the Holy Land in spite of British opposition. Some of them were found in mail-bags consigned to Jerusalem from Bagdad. Others were disguised as Arab Bedouins.

Syrians and Arabs, however, appeared to find no difficulty about entering. In addition to 20 Syrian merchants, who transferred their businesses to Palestine in order to take advantage of Jewish progress there, Bedouins are continually wandering in from surrounding territory seemingly at will.

A 100 page "Guide to Palestine" has been issued, which gives a comprehensive account of Zionist institutions and works.

GERMANY

The ancient synagogue of Sulzberg in Bavaria has been confiscated by the Nazis on the ground that the Jewish community of Sulzberg can no longer support it. The same report brings the information that the community of Sulzberg, which formerly consisted of 170 families has been reduced to eight persons.

Narrowly averting a world war more terrible than that of 1914 the Nazis in Germany took thought and abandoned Austrian Nazis who had thrown Vienna into turmoil by the murder of Premier Engelbert Dollfuss.

Von Starhemberg, Vice Chancellor of Austria, declared that the government will not pursue an aggressive policy against the Jews but will content itself with "Defensive" measure. "Austrian Jews," he said, "occupy positions in the professions out of all proportion to their percentage of the population."

POLAND

Fifty Jews are reported dead in the floods that inundated a large area around Warsaw. A total of 300 died in the rising of the Vistula and San Rivers. 11,000 people were forced to evacuate the territory. The havoc was most serious in Western Galicia but affected parts of Eastern Galicia and Congress Poland as well. 1000 Jewish families are homeless.

Strife between Revisionists and left-wing Zionists was intensified, rather than lessened by the freeing of Stavsky. Revisionists are reported to have hindered in several cases collections for the Jewish National Fund in Warsaw.

United States

American Jews mourned the death of Max J. Kohler, lawyer, editor and communal worker, who died of angina pectoris at the age of 63 at his summer home in the mountains of New York. Kohler was an authority on immigration in the United States, particularly the Jewish interest in immigration.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise exhorted the Histadruth to "maintain order among Jewry" as the majority party in Palestine.

A public meeting to protest at the projected public loan to Germany by American bankers was held in New York, called for this purpose by the American Jewish Congress.

American Catholics were advised to act promptly against the possibility of Fascism in America by John LaFarge, S. J., in an article in the Catholic Journal of America.

Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympics committee, sailed for Germany to investigate charges that Nazi policies have debarred Jewish athletes from participation in training for the next Olympic Games in 1936.

LIMIT JEWISH MEETINGS

BERLIN (JTA) — Reduce Jewish meetings and Jewish activities to a minimum and arrange gatherings only when absolutely necessary and then only after securing permission from the police, German Jews were warned in an official communication issued by Berlin Jewish community officials.

The warning was issued, it was stated, after the secret German police had informed the Jewish community that of late Jews were no longer announcing their meetings, but meeting in private homes and picnic places.

CAPITOL COMMENT

By NATHAN KOENIG

Uncertainty hounds Eastern Europe. A growing fear of insecurity is spreading from Germany and contaminating nearby nations.

The slaying of Chancellor Dollfuss in Austria, which has resulted in a muddled political situation there, coupled with recent events in Germany which have left the Hitler power tottering, have cast a black shadow over that portion of the eastern hemisphere.

Official Washington views the current situation in Eastern Europe with considerable speculation and with the full knowledge of its seriousness. How seriously conditions abroad are regarded may be gleaned from the fact that while other high government officials are taking vacations and making trips to various parts of the country, Secretary of State Hull is sticking to his post in Washington. His eyes are trained on conditions across the Atlantic. The focal points are Germany and Austria.

With the slaying of Dollfuss new problems are expected to come up. As long as he was in control, the Nazi forces were resisted. What part the Nazis will play from now on is not certain. Indications are, however, that they will be an important factor to reckon with. Now that Dollfuss is out of the picture, German Nazis may be expected to do much more to aid their Austrian cohorts.

At this particular time the future of Jews in both Austria and Germany is more uncertain than it has been in the last year. Hitler has not shown any indication of a change in attitude. In Austria the future is still more uncertain. The forces that will control the Austrian government are not clearly defined. The stage is well set for a fresh outbreak of anti-Semitism in that country, particularly if the Nazis gain any sort of political recognition.

The United States and other leading nations of the world have scorned the persecution of Jews in Germany. Austria may have learned a lesson from this. In the event she has not, she will, in case a policy of racial and religious persecution is adopted. It has been made quite plain in recent months that a strong weapon — the boycott — will swing into play against any nation fostering inhuman practices on a minority group because of racial or religious differences.

The boycott has forced the Hitler government into a corner and is crowding it there. Statistics made available by the United States Department of Commerce in Washington prove this.

During the first half of this year Germany developed an unfavorable balance of trade, while during the same period a year ago, the trade balance was in her favor. Imports in Germany for the first six months of 1934 amounted to 2,362,500 marks and exports amounted to 2,086,000 marks. This represents an adverse trade balance of 215,900,000 marks, against a favorable balance of 290,900,000 marks for the same period last year.

It is significant to note that imports in Germany for the first half of 1934 increased 10 percent, while exports from that country decreased as much as 12 percent.

The unfavorable trade balance in Germany is continuing as a result of the boycott. Preliminary figures for June show that Germany's imports were valued at 377,100,000 marks and exports at 339,100,000 marks, leaving an unfavorable trade balance of 38,000,000 marks. Another significant sidelight is that despite the present policy of restricted imports and compulsory exports, the trade for June showed very little improvement compared with previous months.

The United States has made a sharp cut in the amount of goods bought from Germany. This has resulted in a reduction in the quantity of goods Germany buys from the United States. Germany has also reduced imports from Australia and British India. During the month of June imports by Germany from Italy, Hungary, Switzerland and the Netherlands advanced over imports a month ago.

German exports to France and Soviet Russia declined during June, but those to the Netherlands, Denmark, Switzerland, and British India increased.

While political and financial pots are boiling in Germany, the drought continues to work its ruin. An acute food famine such as threatens Germany now may mean the end of high-handed rule.

That the Hitler government is well aware of the critical food situation is seen from official reports coming to Washington. These show that virtually all food trades in Germany have been placed under government control. Control of agricultural production and trade is now in the hands of the Reichsnährstand, an organization created last December to take over on behalf of the state all existing agricultural organizations.

One of the most recent orders issued because of the drought is to regulate the marketing of fruits and vegetables, to prohibit all transactions in fruits and vegetables except such as are approved by the organization through the issuance of certificates, to fix prices and price spreads, to issue regulations regarding shipping and marketing, and to prescribe punishment and fines for violations.

The objective of the Hitler government is to obtain a complete government monopoly over all food sources and food supplies. Present plans, it is indicated, are for an extension of these monopolistic tendencies in Germany. These will be developed largely along lines designed to strengthen Hitler's control on the people. Government control of food is a strong power with which to keep a people in line. This is true even though a tottering power wield this control.

A New Deal in VACATIONS

Returns from Palestine in Search of Missing Son, Herman Meyers, One-Time N. Y. Playwright

NEW YORK (JTA) — A haggard woman back from Palestine in a search for her only son, missing for five years, had almost given up hope. "God must know where he is. God must know," she sobbed.

The woman is Mrs. Dora Meyers, who sailed for Palestine in 1926 with her daughter. Her son, Herman J. Meyers, a young playwright, promised to follow if she decided to live in Palestine.

A Jewish Telegraphic Agency reporter met her in the office of Harry Zellman, a lawyer and life-long friend of the family, who is supervising the search.

Herman J. Meyers is 27 years old. He is short, heavy set and wears eye glasses with thick lenses.

He was last seen in New York in 1929 by Attorney Zellman, whom he had been accustomed to visit about once a month at the lawyer's east side home.

Zellman said Meyers was unusually quiet, spending most of his time writing. His leisure time, Zellman said, he spent either on the east side or in the vicinity of Times Square, particularly near the Earl Carroll Theater. He was well known in theatrical organizations.

In 1929 a skit he wrote, "The Mormon's Prayer," was included in the Earl Carroll Vanities, and received favorable mention in dramatic columns. He disappeared soon after the show closed, apparently unable to repeat his success.

Zellman exhibited letters from government agencies, organizations, individuals and the missing persons bureau, none of whom could furnish a clue to Meyers' whereabouts.

Large New York Department Store Denies Shipment of Merchandise was German-Made

NEW YORK (JTA) — Replying to allegations that R. H. Macy & Co. received last week a shipment of German-made products, Edwin I. Marks, vice-president of the department store, has released a copy of the letter of denial addressed to the anti-Nazi Minute Men of the United States.

Last Friday a contingent of Minute Men, headed by Joseph Rosen, stood at strategic points nearby Macy's store, and distributed circulars containing the charges. The circular also appealed to readers to boycott Nazi goods.

In the letter to the Minute Men organization the allegations are denied entirely by Mr. Marks. He asked for an immediate reply as to the Minute Men's intentions in the matter, in which he says the organization was probably "irresponsible" inasmuch as it permitted itself to be "misrepresented."

Mr. Marks' letter, dated July 23, follows:

"You today distributed a paper on 44th Street, bearing a heading 'Buy American, Boycott Nazi Goods.'

"On this list you listed R. H. Macy

FRIENDSHIP

By NINA KAYE

Belle Schiff tried to be happy about her friend Frieda's marriage. After all, who, more than she, should be happy for Frieda? Hadn't they been friends since grammar school days? Hadn't they been inseparable for years? Why, Belle recalled with a smile, in their school days they hadn't been able to be parted long enough to shampoo their hair alone.

And when they went to work, neither had accepted a job until she was sure there was a place in the same office for the other!

Even when Frieda began to go around with Jack Feldman, they hadn't, at first, been separated. Jack used to take the two of them out.

There never was any question but that he was with them because of Frieda. Belle never for an instant thought otherwise. She had grown used to Frieda being the one who attracted masculine attention, with her bright black eyes and the soft glow under the surface of her ivory cheeks.

Every year, when they went away on their vacation, it had been Frieda who had the admiring males at her feet. No one ever noticed Belle beside her, her soft brown hair and slight figure just so much background for Frieda's vividness. Belle's gentle smile a foil for Frieda's confident laugh.

Not once had the faintest feeling of jealousy entered Belle Schiff's brain. She had been as proud of Frieda's attractiveness as if it had been her own, had accepted as the common order of things that Frieda should have all the masculine attention; that it should be Frieda who was marrying.

Belle tried desperately to think only of Frieda's happiness, tried not to think what her own life would be now without Frieda! For when she did, something very like panic entered her soul. She had never done anything without Frieda before, never bought a coat, never gone to a concert, never before, gone away on a vacation without her.

And now, while Frieda and Jack were off on their honeymoon, Belle was going on her vacation — alone, to the camp where she and Frieda had had such glorious times together for four successive summers.

Of course, Belle told herself as she climbed into the station bus and looked around at the strange city faces which in two days' time would be bronzed familiar faces, but still strangers to her, of course she could have arranged to come with one of the other girls in the office. But she hadn't been able to think of anyone as Frieda's successor! She had preferred to come by herself, although she knew she was letting herself in for a lonely two weeks.

There wouldn't be any of those admiring groups clustered about her on the pavilion steps, as they used to gather to listen to Frieda's infectious laughter, to feast their eyes on her radiant loveliness. "I don't care," Belle told herself wretchedly. "I've brought enough books along and I'll swim and walk with the other girls. I don't mind being just another of those unattached girls at camp. I never was anything else, really. The men were just near me because I was near Frieda."

"Belle Schiff without Frieda Miller! Impossible!" the camp staff exclaimed when she went into the office to register. "Don't tell us you didn't make the train turn around and go back when you found out she wasn't along!"

Belle had grown used to this sort of banter. But now that it was no longer true, it stung. She shook her head. "Frieda's married!"

"Married! Don't tell us she married someone who didn't have an identical twin for you!"

When she came into the dining room she tried not to look toward the table where she and Frieda had sat, the only two girls at a table full of men, the envy of every other girl in camp. This year she would be relegated, she knew, to an overflow table of girls, with a musician or two thrown in, forced to sit where the management told them, although their eyes and their attention centered at the tables where the lucky guests sat with the prettiest girls, where, last year, Frieda and she sat.

Old how important it is what table you sit at when you are at camp. A girl's whole summer can be spoiled if she's put at the wrong table and a girl's whole life can be changed if she's put at the right table!

MR. LOUIS DUBINSKY, Director

Everybody who had been there the year before came up to greet Belle, to ask about Frieda, of course.

There were men at the table to which she was assigned and Belle wondered if she actually had heard a sigh of disappointment from one of them as she slid meekly into her chair. How different it would have been if Frieda had been there with her!

After the evening meal, Belle went quickly to her bunk. She didn't want anyone, especially the men at her table, to think she was hanging around, waiting for a crumb of attention. She wouldn't, she decided, go to the casino for the dancing. There would be no overflow of the men who hovered around Frieda to dance with her while they tried to get a dance from Frieda.

But Dave Marks, one of the camp owners, came by her bunk and whistled for her and asked her why she wasn't up at the casino. Belle closed her book and went out. She preferred to go, rather than explain to him why she hadn't.

Going up the path beside him in the falling darkness, Belle remembered that Dave had been one of the crowd who was often around Frieda, although he had had to make way for more insistent guests.

"Frieda doesn't realize the trail of broken hearts she left here, does she?" Belle teased lightly.

"Mmm," he answered absently and went with her to the casino, violated all camp rules by dancing two dances with her in succession, although the walls were lined with girls longing for a dance and it was his duty to dance with them.

After that night, Belle didn't see much of Dave. Nor did she again open any of her books. There must, she thought, have been a dearth of girls at the camp that year. Because she hadn't a moment for herself. Riding before breakfast, swimming, tennis, canoeing. The two weeks sped by so quickly Belle felt a twinge of guilt. She hadn't even had time to think of Frieda as much as she ought to, hadn't had time to miss her as she had expected to. She found herself thinking more of Dave Marks than of Frieda.

The night before her vacation was up, Dave wove his way through the crowd about her, asked her for a dance. Belle had an idea she had promised that dance to someone else, but she went with him because she wanted to, followed him when he led her outside, to the dark verandah which hung over the still, black water.

"I wanted to talk to you, Belle. I haven't had a chance since the night you came."

"I've been around all the time," she answered lightly.

She could see his profile, stern against the dark sky. "Yes, I know you have! And because I own this place I haven't been able to be around you, couldn't cut out guests with the prettiest girl in camp."

"A little laugh exploded from her. 'Prettiest! Well, it's lucky Frieda isn't here!'"

"Belle," he shrugged away her flippancy. "I've a confession to make. Yes, it is lucky Frieda isn't here. Lucky for me, I hope. Because, when she was, I didn't really notice you, Belle. Oh, it is a terrible thing to say, but it's the truth. You were hiding your light under a bushel, I guess."

Belle felt her cheeks grow hot. "Like everybody else," he went on, "I was blinded by Frieda's brightness, so that I couldn't really see you!"

Her breath escaped in a quick gasp.

"Belle, do you think — Have you thought — Well, will you marry me, Belle? I love you."

She was laughing, although her eyes were shining. "And I've been thinking ever since I came that it was a mistake for Frieda to have married Jack. I decided you were the only person good enough for her!"

"But will you marry me?" he insisted.

"Of course, of course, I will," she whispered. "Can't you see that was my way of falling in love with you?"

As he took her in his arms, Belle was tempted to say, "Won't Frieda be surprised?" But, wisely, she said nothing. Frieda must not intrude between them now!

FASCISTS OR NAZIS, JEWS SUFFER

Reading between the lines of daily news despatches coming out of stricken Austria one can now reconstruct the whole program of diplomatic intrigue that obviously was outlined shortly after the World War when boundaries were fixed and treaties made.

If Herr Hitler had the slightest acumen in the unceasing game of chess among European powers he would have realized his chances to annex Austria are hopeless, at least by force. And it is this blunder on his part that is responsible for the latest bloody chaos in mid-Europe.

Austria appears destined to remain forever the "buffer" nation—the shock absorber to take the bumps on both sides. Stripped in area and population to only a shadow of her once proud empire—it is as though all southwestern United States were taken by Mexico and Northwest by Canada, leaving United States only that area east of the Appalachians—Austria has been, in the past 20 years, the scene of intensive colonization between Germany and Italy.

If these efforts had remained peaceful, the Reich would have had a distinct advantage, because the ties of language and custom and even blood relationships are almost insurmountable. But blunderer as he has shown himself to be in everything he has undertaken, Hitler elected to use force—just as he tried to wipe out his internal enemies.

It appears now that the world was extremely fortunate that the German "revolt" came when it did. For it compelled Hitler to disband his Nazi Storm Troops—2,000,000 armed men who otherwise might have been thrown into Austria with another European war as a consequence.

As it is, the Austrian Nazis received no help from their German counterparts and were unable to carry out the coup of themselves. Mussolini's prompt action, the warnings of France and England made even Hitler realize that he was skating on thin ice, and the Austrian Nazi defeat is bound to react against him. Resentful of the massacre of their leader in the recent "purging," the German Storm Troopers are even more rebellious now over what happened across the border. It's a trite expression but in this case an extremely apt one to say every time Hitler opens his mouth he puts his foot into it. Every day come stronger indications that the Black Chancellor will be a miracle man if he lasts until winter—and thus far, in spite of all his promises, he hasn't been able to pull a rabbit out of his hat.

Meanwhile, whether Austria becomes Nazi or Fascist, Jewry's plight remains desperate. Neither Mussolini nor Hitler is a respecter of minority rights; neither has shown any sympathy for the downtrodden. Both, on the contrary, have stifled even majority groups, although the cleverer Il Duce has managed to win over a good part of his people. Jews in Italy are now somewhat better off than they are in Germany or in Austria but God help them under any tyrannical dictator anywhere.

light. They might let the movies grow up instead of condemning them to a perpetual adolescence.

The danger is that censorship begets censorship. If the Legion of Decency captures Hollywood, we may next expect to find ourselves restrained from reading anything but supervised newspapers and children's books. Let us beware of "purges!"

We shall not improve the state of our health on a diet of sentimental treacle. Nor shall we be performing any service to our children by stuffing their minds with glib, dishonest fictions that will incapacitate them for the normal rigors and conflicts of life in contemporary society.

Midsummer Miscellany

The economic situation in Germany growing steadily worse and facing a shortage of many of the necessities of life, Herr Hitler calls upon the German people to resort to "ersatz" or substitute commodities. Will it be long before they find a substitute for Hitler himself?

Haman, according to Scripture, first became provoked, by Mordecai because the latter refused to do obeisance to him. He just wouldn't say "Heil Haman."

It ended up with Haman having to lead Mordecai on a horse, while everybody shouted PFUI HAMAN! And before next Purim, it will be PFUI HITLER! or maybe Hiss Hitler!

Already according to the foreign correspondents, many people in Germany are carrying parcels under their arms to avoid doing the "Heiling" to Mr. Hitler.

Lacking coal, it is expected that soon the Nazis will be forced to resort to Hitler's speeches for the hot air for their house heating and instead of meat, they will substitute Alfred Rosenberg's bologny about Aryanism.

Hitler shot the President of the Catholic Action Society, cremated the body and sent an urn with his ashes to the widow. In fact, according to the papers, some 200 German families have received an urn apiece. How long before Hitler "earns" one for himself?

It is gotten so, that it is said, the favorite word of the Nazis will be changed from Aryanism to Urn-yanism.

According to Hitler a veritable epidemic of homo-sexuality raged among the Storm Troops. And now it is admitted that Goering and Erick are those kind of boys, too. But it is denied that it is absolutely required to be that way in order to be a Nazi.

Hitler says frankly he knows nothing about diplomacy or economics but he knows the German people. And the German people, it would seem, are beginning to know him.

Well, anyway, it must be admitted that Hitler has a chance at winning the Bullet-sir prize.

Palestine now has a tabloid daily paper. Name—Ha-Itan Ham-yuchad.

Cyrus Adler is in Europe on what is rumored to be a very important mission.

Irving Berlin, song writer, it is said, will take an active part in Zionist campaigning next fall.

Charles Angoff, whom H. L. Menckens some years ago got out of prison has now been promoted to editor in chief of the American Mercury. Angoff was put in jail because of some ultra-free utterances which displeased a Boston judge.

The son-in-law of Shalom Aleichem is now continuing a series of articles by his famous father-in-law. They are appearing in Haaretz of Tel Aviv.

Sam Rappaport, youngster of seven, is editor of a humorous sheet called the Weekly Scoop, which is attracting a good deal of attention. The lad has an original vein of humor. A sample of one of his stories.

Papa and Mama were on the train bound for the Chicago Exposition. Mama said "O, everything will burn up. I forgot before leaving to take the pressing iron out of the socket. Papa said, "It's all right—nothing will burn. I forgot to turn off the bath tub."

Arthur Sheekman, movie scenarist who is marrying the screen actress, Gloria Steward was at one time dramatic editor of the St. Paul Daily News. His chief, too, Howard Kahn, editor of the St. Paul Daily News, is of the Mosaic persuasion.

That is a good story that is being told by Judge Bernard A. Rosenblatt, apropos of the protest by Jews against immigration restrictions to Palestine.

Judge Rosenblatt is very strongly against these restrictions, but he makes it plain that this does not mean he wants a break with the Mandatory government.

"It reminds me," said Judge Rosenblatt, "of the colored lady who came to her lawyer complaining of the infidelities of her husband."

"All right," said her lawyer, after listening to the story of her marital derelictions on the part of her husband, "I'll get a divorce for you."

"But Counsellor," said the ebony wench, "I don't want a divorce, I want an injunction."

And speaking of injunctions, did you know that Morris Rothenberg, just re-elected president of the Zionist Organization is regarded as one of the greatest legal authorities in the country on injunctions. A recent text book on this subject, authored by Prof. Brissenden of Columbus, in a review of injunction cases, devotes more than 80 percent of the work to cases handled by Rothenberg.

It is said that the late Morris Hilquit and Morris Rothenberg have handled more important injunction cases than any two lawyers in the country.

Those who know say that Rothenberg gave up a practice that easily had a prospect of more than $100,000 a year when he went in heavy for Zionism work.

But Zionism was in the blood of M. R., as Mr. Rothenberg is generally referred to in circles close to him. One of his great ancestors is reputed to have been Rabbi Meier of Rothenberg, a famous scholarly rabbi of the 13th century who led an expedition to Palestine and suffered the

But Rabbi Meier of Rothenberg, fearful that he was ransomed out, the government would use the case as a precedent for extorting money from other Jews, preferred to languish in his cell.

A scholarly dissertation on this famous rabbi was once written for the Jewish Quarterly Review by the late Louis Marshall.

Jewish Engineer's Discovery Adds to Wealth of Palestine

LONDON (JTA).—Enough potash, which is widely used as a fertilizer and in many industrial processes, can be taken out of the Dead Sea in Palestine to supply the world with this product for the next 2000 years, Major T. G. Tulloch, British engineer, declared here in his lecture on the Dead Sea concession before the dominions and colonies section of the Royal Society of Arts. The Earl of Lytton, who is chairman of Palestine Potash Ltd., to whom the Dead Sea concession has been granted, presided at the meeting.

Termining the discovery of the Dead Sea possibilities by Moshe Novomeysky, Jewish engineer who worked there for many years, the "most interesting and most useful made in Palestine," Major Tulloch described to the audience the changes brought about in the Dead Sea region by the discovery and the effects on the future of Palestine.

False Tales About Area

"From time immemorial the Dead Sea has been a synonym for all that is useless and unprofitable," Major Tulloch said, "and the expression 'Dead Sea fruit' denotes bitter disappointment. Travelers' tales made it out to be a spot where the climate was unbearable and deadly, and where it was impossible for human beings to live.

"Many interesting discoveries have been made from time to time in Palestine, but perhaps the most useful, in that it concerns the living and not the dead, is that all these tales have been proved to be entirely false. The Dead Sea today is a thing of life, pulsating with health and conferring benefits on thousands of human beings.

"I have been asked by the Royal Society of Arts to give you some up-to-date information upon the scientific and commercial sides of the subject, and if time permits, to add something about the hygiene, health of the workers, scenery and amenities for visitors.

"The principal use of potash (in which the Dead Sea is especially rich) is in connection with so called fertilizers, for no vegetation and consequently no animal, including human, life can exist without it. It has, of course, many other uses, as for example in explosive matches, soap and glass-making. In normal times it was found that the world demands for potash increased by ten percent every year, and it may be of interest here to remark that if no other potash from any other sources were used the quantity existing in the Dead Sea would last the world for over 2000 years.

"Though bromine has only a comparatively small number of uses at present, such as in medicine, photography and dyeing, a new use has been found for it of late years in connection with anti-knock additions to gasoline motor cars.

"From the above sketch it is apparent that the mineral resources of the Dead Sea are destined to play an ever more important role in the world's economies, not only by reason of the simplicity of their production, but also on account of their vast quantities, which are easily ascertainable, as they are all in solution, and the volume of the contents of the Dead Sea can be computed with its analysis to very close limits.

"These quantities are 22,000,000 tons of magnesium chloride, 11,000,000 tons of sodium chloride (common salt), 5,000,000 tons of calcium chloride, 2,000,000 tons of potassium chloride, and 1,000,000 tons of magnesium bromide.

"HOT WEATHER BAKING is a comfort, now!"

"I Have an ELECTRIC

Electric Cookery Costs No More

The electric rate itself is in effect a sliding scale. The more electricity you use the less each unit costs. The cost of cooking electrically is so low it will surprise you.

IT'S a comfort for three reasons: 1 — You are certain of results. 2 — You are free to do other things while your baking is going on. 3 — Your kitchen stays as cool as any other room.

Today's electric range is a wonder for speed. The electric oven — insulated on all six sides — seals the heat inside for speed in reaching baking temperatures . . . for conserving cooking cost . . . and for cool operation.

During the past few weeks, hundreds of our customers have changed to electric cookery. You, too, could be enjoying its superior advantages at no extra cooking cost. Investigate electric cookery — now!

HORSE RACING

The advent of legalized horse racing and betting in Rhode Island gives me the opportunity of writing an expert column on this sport of kings, and others not so kingly. Here's a subject that some of my readers know very little about. . . . SO . . . I can speak freely and without fear of contradiction!

Did I ever see a horse race? . . . That's my business! . . . I can prove to you, however, that the horse instinct was present in me way, way back in good old Perm. Russia, when I was only knee high to a Siberian grasshopper. . . . Yes, sir! . . . I can remember my "rebbeh" saying to me . . . "Zei nisht kin ferdi!" . . . and if THE "REBBEH" says something . . . who are you and I to doubt it?

Now, then, to start from the beginning . . . the idea is to see which horse comes in first. . . . (That, I think you knew). . . . Secondly, to enjoy a horse race, you've got to place a bet on one or more of the horses that run. Personally, I'd suggest that if you want to make sure you win every time you bet, place $2 on every nag in the contest. . . . As a general rule, ONE of them will win, so . . . no matter how much you lose — you can come home and truthfully say that you picked the winner!

When you go to the races, the matter of proper attire plays a great

Borod to Head Committee in Charge of Vets' Carnival

ESMOND S. BOROD

At a regular meeting held recently by the Rhode Island Post, No. 23, Jewish War Veterans of the United States it was voted that the post hold a carnival to raise funds for its relief work, also to carry on the work of the organization.

Jr. Vice Commander Esmond S. Borod was appointed chairman of the carnival committee and the following members were appointed as members of the executive board to formulate plans:

Commander Max A. Cohen, Adjutant Dr. Arthur L. Stone, Quartermaster Aaron Cohen, Sr. Vice Commander Barney Taber, Past Commander Harry A. Hoffman, Judge Advocate Samuel Mistowsky, Past Commander Paul J. Robin, Comrades Max Blumenthal, Jos. W. Strauss and Irving D. Paster.

The executive board decided to run the carnival during the week of August 11 to 18, (except Sunday) on the grounds at post headquarters, 100 Niagara Street, corner of Congress Avenue.

A special meeting was held Thursday, at the post headquarters and every member was drafted to do service for at least one evening during the carnival week.

The committee decided to give away free attendance prize tickets which entitles the holder of the lucky number drawn each evening to a valuable prize. The winner must be present in person on the grounds in order to claim the prize, otherwise a new drawing will take place. These tickets will be passed out at our neighborhood stores and at the carnival grounds.

I told them all to stop worrying . . . knowing you as I do, and knowing the chairman, Frank Brady, who's been a pal of mine for about 20 years, I am confident that your capable committee will adjust matters to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. It isn't fair of us Jews to ask you to change your scheduled opening, nor will you of the school committee ask us to change the date of our New Year . . . But you ARE going to do something, of that I am sure. How about dropping a line to be printed in this column, and oblige Your Most Sincere Admirer,

Behavior of Aged Studied at the Home

The staff of the Home are now compiling data on the behavior of the aged residents. Studies are being made of the peculiarities of aged with the object of determining the best procedure to overcome their difficulties. Charts are being prepared listing the behavior of the individuals in connection with food habits, hygiene, personal needs and attitudes toward life and their neighbors, etc.

It is a known fact that aged have a great many peculiarities, in many instances become mentally demented. The forms of dementia vary in kind and degree. The staff of the Home will attempt to make a serious study of these mental disabilities of the aged at the home and particularly will attempt to work out the procedure of how to deal with these people. Many of the mental habits and imaginings of the aged are hopeless and cannot be corrected. It is the object of the staff study, however, to relieve the aged from these sufferings of such habits and attitudes which can be changed. With this thought in mind the staff is enlisting the services of the Home Psychiatric, Dr. Kennison and other local psychiatrists to assist him in his work.

The medical staff of the Home are greatly gratified with the health aspects of the aged residents who have been doing remarkably well and have preserved life under the vigilant and tireless work of the staff.

Nazis Open New Drive Against Jewish Stores

BERLIN (JTA) — Nazi Germany is in the throes of a new and virulent anti-Jewish campaign, events in various sections of the country indicate.

The mayor of Erfurt publicly supported the anti-Jewish boycott saying that “while we tolerate the Jew in commerce, I expect all Germans to buy only from ‘Aryans.’” The mayor's declaration was delivered when he granted an Erfurt Jew permission to open a new clothing store.

Enoch Frankfurter, Jewish business man of Darmstadt-Hesse, was sentenced to serve seven months in jail for having declared that the anti-Jewish boycott of the Nazi government had ruined his business.

“The Jews must be thankful to the government for still tolerating them,” the verdict of the court read. Julius Streicher, arch anti-Semite and Nazi commissioner for Franconia, today delivered a four-hour speech on “Jewish Politics Against Germany,” at a Nazi party conference in Forster near Danzig, the Voelkischer Beobachter, leading Nazi paper, reported. However, the Beobachter was careful not to quote any part of the presumably violent anti-Jewish speech made by Streicher.

Following the lead of Der Angriff, mouthpiece of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, which recently demanded a new bonfire of all books written by Jews and exiles, the Berliner Wahrheit, Nazi paper, demanded a new cleansing to be directed against all Jewish lawyers and notaries.

DR. SARA SEAL NAMED

The foundation was established to encourage research in ocular science and all sciences fundamental thereto in the United States and the provinces of Canada. For a number of years after graduating from the English High School she was in business as a bookkeeper. Then she studied and took her degree in optometry in Philadelphia and New York.

NAMED AFTER BIALIK

JERUSALEM (JTA) — The first Jewish boy to be born in Palestine since the death of the Hebrew poet-laureate Chaim Nachman Bialik in Vienna on July 4, was named Chaim Nachman after the dead poet.

The Hebrew Jewish community, where the child was born, arranged a special ceremony and celebration. Hope was expressed that the reborn Chaim Nachman would prove to be endowed with the same gifts as those possessed by the poet.
