Bataan Aftermath:

Surgeon Saved Non-Jew's Life UJA Gets $5,000 'Gratitude'

ATLANTIC (AJP)—A 72-year-old Manila resident's high regard for a local Jewish surgeon who saved his life amid the raging battle of Bataan nine years ago resulted in a $5,000 gift to the United Jewish Appeal here this week.

The gift from Max Blouse, a non-Jew, added another chapter to a real-life melodrama which had its birth in 1942 in the fight for the Philippines.

Blouse came to the Philippines from America to fight during the Spanish-American War and remained in service during the Philippines Insurrection of 1902. Discharged, he remained in Manila to launch his career as a transportation expert.

When the Japs invaded the Philippines late in 1941, the ex-Army man chose to join MacArthur's forces at Bataan rather than surrender for internment at St. Thomas, near Manila. He was then 62 years old.

Blouse, reports Adolph Rosenberg, editor and publisher of the Southern Israelite, who unfolded the story, was a beat-up, unrecognizable bundle of flesh when Dr. Alfred A. Weinstein, then chief surgeon at a General Field Hospital on Bataan first laid eyes on him. Blouse had received the full force of a Jap high-explosive bomb filled with picric acid.

Weinstein, a prominent surgeon, author and communal leader, went to work on Blouse, one of hundreds of wounded Americans in the little overcrowded emergency hospital hurriedly established by the Army.

"Max," recalled Dr. Weinstein, "had a driving determination to live."

Dr. Weinstein reconstructed Blouse's shattered face, amputated one arm, and delicately joined shattered bones and nerves in the left arm, which was paralyzed.

Picking up the story, Dr. Weinstein recalled that he later saw Blouse "when we were both prisoners of the Japs. His courage and will were indomitable."

Blouse's amazing recovery were later described by Dr. Weinstein in his popular volume on prison war days, "Barbed Wire Surgeon."

When the war ended, Dr. Weinstein liberated from Jap imprisonment returned home to resume his private practise. Last week the mailman delivered Blouse's check drawn on a New York bank house.

Studying the check before turning it over to Meyer Balsler, co-chairman of the 1951 Welfare Fund Drive here, Dr. Weinstein noted the signature.

"You see," he commented, "the check is somewhat laboriously signed. Max had to learn how to write with his left hand when he had conquered his wounds."

To Mediate Waad Hacashruth Dispute

Following a meeting of the executive board of the Waad Hacashruth, a number of Rabbis in the community and representatives of the Herald last Monday night at the Hebrew Sheltering Society, it was decided that publication of certain documents or letters to the editor be withheld until representatives of all factions met to mediate the dispute. Among conditions acceptable to all was that of a neutral meeting place and presiding officer. Further details will be published in subsequent issues of the Herald.

Flays Kashruth Laxities:

'Kosher' Style Dupe Laid To Storekeepers Byirate Housewife

PHILADELPH (AJP)—Recurrent complaints against alleged laxity by Jewish delicatessens selling kosher meat products developed here again with a second letter in as many weeks to a local English-Jewish weekly charging storekeepers with duping housewives.

The latest initialed complaint appearing in the Jewish Exponent charged storekeepers used "kosher neon signs on the outside and yet sell non-kosher delicatessen meat on the inside." In many instances, the complainant charged, Jewish style meat, not kosher products, were being passed off on unwitting housewives.

Another complaint was that kosher products were being placed on the same counter with non-kosher meats and that the same slicer was used by delicatessen proprietors to slice orders.

The complainant, a resident of the Oak Lane section here, said she had written complaints to the Rabbi, Head of Beth Din, but had not yet received a reply.

"Why" asked the writer, "do rabbis of Philadelphia shield their eyes upon what is going on in the Jewish delicatessens in the city?"

Another contributor previously reported similar conditions in the Oxford Circle area here.

Germans Still In Dark On Democracy

NEW YORK (AJP)—The first of eleven Jewish women returned to the United States from a State Department tour of Germany this week convinced that the German people know little more now about the meaning of freedom and democracy than they did when World War II ended more than six years ago.

Mrs. Joseph Wilen, chairman of the committee on education and social action of the National Council of Jewish Women, said that each German "thinks the other fellow ought to take the initiative" in paving the return of democracy in the country.

"When the war ended in defeat for Germany," she said, "Germans individually denied their responsibility for aggression, each shifting the onus to the other fellow."

"Today faced with the job of bringing about a moral regeneration and education for democracy, each thinks the other fellow ought to take the initiative."

JOHANNESBURG — Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, American Zionist leader now on a mission for the Jewish National Fund here, this week took exception to Prime Minister David Ben Gurion's statement about American Zionists, expressed by the Premier while visiting the United States in connection with the launching of the Israel Bond Drive.

Dr. Silver emphasized that the Israel General Zionists and Miz-rachi must be represented at the forthcoming World Zionist Congress. Moreover, he said, all sections of American Zionism feel "a sense of outrage" at Mr. Ben Gurion's treatment of the Zionist movement asking that they "should confine themselves to educational work and to the sending of Chalutzim."

In an earlier speech, delivered here at a dinner marking the 50th anniversary of the Jewish National Fund, Dr. Silver stressed that Israel fears most the danger of an economic breakdown which might encourage the enemy rather than danger on the political front. "In the struggle against economic defeat we alone, the Jews outside of Israel, can supply economic weapons," he said.

2 Teachers Face Inquiry For Speeches

NEW YORK (AJP)—Two Jewish school teachers faced disciplinary action by the Board of Education this week because of their conduct in the slaying of a 27-year-old Negro by a Brooklyn patrolman three weeks ago.

The teachers, Max Gilgoff and Terry Rosenbaum, were summoned for questioning by deputy associate superintendent of schools Frederic Ernst after they spoke at protest rallies sponsored by two left-wing organizations.

Ernst contended that their activities and particularly their talks, were harmful to good race relations.

Four Brooklyn clergymen expressed "shock and surprise" at the move by the Board of Education against the two teachers. They charged the action "revealed pre-judgment of the facts."

The slain Negro, Henry Fields, Jr., was shot by a Jewish police officer, Patrolman Samuel Applebaum after leaving the scene of a hit-and-run accident. Applebaum, now facing a second grand jury hearing after an original jury refused to indict him, claimed he fired the fatal shot as a warning after Fields allegedly made a move towards his pocket.

DAILY REDUCES SIZE

NEW YORK—The Communist Yiddish daily, Freiheit, this week adopted a reduced size and tabloid format and an increase of prices.

JEWISH GI KILLED PHILADELPHIA (AJP) — A young Jewish marine who faked his age to join the service some years ago at 15 was killed in action this week, several days shy of his 23rd birthday.

The serviceman, one of the two Jewish casualties reported in the latest War Department lists, was Cpl. Irving Rippen, 22, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Rippen. Rippen would have been 23 on June 28.

Ross Launches Anti-Dope Crusade

NEW YORK CITY (AJP)—A Jewish ring champ credited with KOing the best of them in his day, ex-marine and Irgun fund-raiser Barney Ross, stepped into the underground ring of narcotics this week to lead a one-man personal crusade against dope peddlers.

Ross, who overcame addiction to dope, plans to speak at neighborhood rallies throughout Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn and appeal to addicts to seek treatment and expose peddlers. His sidewalk meetings are especially aimed at assisting teen-agers who have fallen victim to narcotics.

Tel Aviv City "Boss" To Speak Here

Milton C. Sapinsley, Chairman of the Providence Committee of the Israel Bond Drive, will entertain Yehuda Nedivi, the Director General of the City of Tel Aviv, at his home next Tuesday. Mr. Nedivi will be in Providence in behalf of the Israel Bond Drive.

Mr. Nedivi is a well-known personality to many Americans. Among his many duties as Director General of the Tel Aviv municipality are included the role of host to visiting dignitaries from the United States. On the Town Hall of the Air World Seminar, the voice from Israel is the voice of Mr. Nedivi who represents his government on these international radio broadcasts.

Mr. Sapinsley has extended an invitation to a number of friends to listen to Mr. Nedivi that evening. "I feel certain that all those who have been invited will be anxious to listen to the Bond Story as told by so outstanding a person as Mr. Nedivi. I am sure that the effort to further the economic development of Israel through the Bond Drive will be greatly enhanced by Mr. Nedivi's visit," said Mr. Sapinsley.

Ross said he intended to "find out who and where these racketeers are. The rest is up to the police."

Honors 23rd GI With Blood Gift

PHILADELPHIA (AJP) — A Jewish dad who makes it a habit to make blood donations honoring the kids of all faiths fighting the wars for Uncle Sam chalked up his 23rd pint of blood to the Red Cross since 1944 last week.

The unusual donor, Paul Gold, a member of the YMHA, first gave blood in 1944 when his brother, Morris, then serving with the US Army was wounded in Italy. Since then, Gold has been making steady trips to the blood station.

During the height of World War II, while working in Ocean City, Gold donated a pint of blood in honor of the mayor's son who was wounded in the tropical New Guinea fighting. That was pint number 7.

Later the Jewish father received a letter from the boy, thanking him for pitching in. Gold's deed received wide coverage in the newspapers.

His latest donation honored a young Jewish GI, Pfc Marvin Waldman, assigned overseas as an airman.

Between earning a living for his wife and two sons, Gold also lent a hand as a Salvation Army Worker in a mobile canteen during a portion of World War II.

Hank's Most Ardent Fan Passes Away

NEW YORK (AJP)—The little woman whose heart pounded a bit faster each time her "Hammering Hank" went to bat was quietly laid to rest here this week.

Mrs. Sarah Greenberg, 72, mother of baseball's famed Hank Greenberg, died at New York Hospital following a two-day illness. She is survived by her husband, David; a daughter, Mrs. Lilian Goldstein; and three sons, Hank, Benjamin, and Joe.

Always proud of her children and grandchildren, Mrs. Greenberg found a special "nachas" in the American League pre-war home run king.

ANNOUNCES ITS

ISRAEL BOND PLAN

IN CONNECTION WITH PURCHASES

MEMORIAL ESTATES

To give tangible evidence of unshakeable faith in the future of the state of Israel, Sharon Memorial Park will invest 10% of all gross sales during the months of July and August in Israel Bonds. In this way, each person who purchases a burial estate in Sharon during the summer months will not only provide essential protection for himself and his family, but—at no extra cost—will become a benefactor of the State of Israel. A Certificate will be issued to each new lot owner stating that through his purchase he contributed to the support of the new Jewish State.

'Gonna See the President?'

Pals Josh 2 Jewish Youths; They Do! Get Handshake, Too!

WASHINGTON (AJP) — When two freckled-faced Jewish youngsters, Harvey and Melvin Silverman, 8 and 10½ years old, respectively, left Beverly Hills, Calif., with their parents for a visit to the nation's capital last week, classmates joshed "so going to see the President, Eh?"

Last Saturday the alert brothers did their joshers one better: they got to shake "Mr. Big's" hand and were wished "good luck" by President Truman.

Here's how it happened:
Unknown to anyone but the White House Staff, President Truman unexpectedly arrived at a reunion of members of the 25th Infantry Division Association holding sessions at the Statler Hotel here. The President appeared at the convention room at 11:27 A. M. and was on his way out of the hotel at 11:30.

President Truman's speed, however, was insufficient to cope with Harvey and Martin. Spotting the Chief Executive in the hotel lobby, the Jewish boys weaved through the crowd to Mr. Truman's side and stretched out their hands hopefully.

The President smiled broadly, shook their hands heartily, and wished each in turn "good luck." Then he dashed back to the White House leaving the boys awfully examining their handshaking arms.

Midwest Warned of Phony Racket

NEW YORK (AJP)—Units of Better Business Bureaus throughout the nation were alerted this week to be on the lookout for a new racket operated in the Midwest and soliciting funds through the mails for a "defense fund" to aid a Jewish father allegedly unjustly convicted in Federal Court.

According to the Detroit Better Business Bureau, the racket is being conducted by a Leon Friedman, operating as Detroit Silver-smith Co.

BY LEON GUTTERMAN

HOLLYWOOD—In the space of a relatively few crowded, spectacular years Leonard Bernstein won international fame as conductor, composer and pianist. As music director of the New York Symphony for three years, as guest conductor of America's major orchestras and as podium-propagandist for American music in Great Britain and on the continent, he has established himself in his own country as well as Europe with the maturity of his talent, the brilliance of his temperament and with provocative program-making.

As composer his symphonies "Jeremiah" and "The Age of Anxiety"; his ballets "Fancy Free" and "Facsimile"; and his musical "On the Town" (later produced as a successful motion picture by MGM) have each been triumphs in their respective and dissimilar fields. And included in his all-around and astounding musicianship is his real gift for the piano which has been publicly acclaimed in such test masterworks as the Beethoven First Piano Concerto and the Ravel Concerto, in both of which he has acted in the dual capacity of conductor-soloist.

In Hollywood, Leonard Bernstein scored an unequivocal success as conductor of the Israel Symphony Orchestra. Conducting brilliant and truly revealing performances of great music as played by a group of Israel musicians of tremendous talent, Bernstein directed the orchestra with a poignancy, a dramatic strength, an emotional force which conquered an audience comprised of the most famous names in the world of screen, radio and stage.

I do not know whether the Israel Philharmonic affair will ever be surpassed as an event of pure inspiration from the Hollywood viewpoint, but seeing such world famous faces as Jack Benny, Danny Kaye, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Harpo Marx, Paul Muni, Edward G. Robinson, Paulette Goddard, Hedy Lamarr, George Burns, Louis B. Mayer, Jack Warner, Joseph Szigotti, Ira Gershwin, Samuel Goldwyn and

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Reitman and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Logowitz were hosts at the party, which included among its guests Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kelman and the six grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Logowitz.

Home Lawn Party

Mrs. Manuel Hyman of 42 Mountain Avenue, East Providence, held a party on the lawn of her home this week for the Jewish Home for the Aged. Hostesses were Mesdames Morris Ratush, chairman of the motor corps, George Ludman, Jack Cerel, Abraham Singer and Ralph Rakusin.

many, many others rarely seen in public, turning out for the symphonic concert . . . made me feel that the warm, friendly triumph of Leonard Bernstein was something all Hollywood would remember for a long time to come.

Wined and dined, partied and entertained by Filmland's rich and successful lovers of the fine arts, every minute of Leonard's stay in California had been tied up weeks prior to his coming here. I had to interview him on the run. While driving him to the airport, where he was to catch a plane for Phoenix, I fired questions at him.

Lenny, American by birth and training, was born in Lawrence, Massachusetts, on August 25, 1918. An old upright piano, which was stored in the Bernstein home when he was a child, attracted him first. Lenny took to the old piano like a duck to a puddle.

After attending Harvard, where he majored in music, studying composition and piano with famed teachers, he was graduated in 1939. The next two years were spent at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia where he worked under Fritz Reiner in conducting and Randall Thompson in orchestration. He continued his piano studies under Isabella Vengerova.

Accepted as a student in conducting by Serge Koussevitzky, he spent the summer of 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood, the seat of the Berkshire Festival. He returned in 1942 as Koussevitzky's assistant, after a winter in Boston, teaching, composing, arranging and producing chamber music programs and Aaron Coplands' children's opera "Second Hurricane" for the Institute of Modern Art. During that winter his Clarinet Sonata had its premier. It was to be his first published score.

At Tanglewood he caught the eye of Arthur Rodzinski, then musical director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. Rodzinski engaged the young man as his assistant conductor for the 1943-44 season.

It was hardly a month after the season had begun when his great chance came. The date was Sunday afternoon, November 14, 1943. It was the date the 25-year-old

ZOA Group to Fight General Zionist Tie

LOS ANGELES (AJP)—Continued internal strife within the ranks of the 200,000-member Zionist Organization of America over the issue of an alliance with Israel's General Zionist Party loomed this week with an announcement by a leading anti-Administration spokesman that he planned a national conference of ZOA members in the fall to fight the tie voted at the recent 54th annual national Zionist convention in Atlantic City.

The disclosure that such a conference was in the offing was made by Jacob M. Alkow, president of the Southern Pacific Zionist Region and a leading opponent to an alliance between the General Zionist Party and the ZOA, said the conference would be convened in Chicago or Cleveland.

Alkow also revealed that a campaign of "enlightenment" would be carried on within the ranks of the ZOA against approved alliance with the GZ Party. The "enlightenment" drive is scheduled to begin after the World Zionist Congress in Jerusalem, according to Alkow.

The regional chairman, whose alternate resolution opposing a link with the General Zionist Party of Israel was defeated by delegates, 329-127, said he was greatly "encouraged" by the "remarkable vote" in which the Progressives and other opponents of a GZ-ZOA tie mustered more than one-third of the ballots cast on the issue of affiliation. Alkow termed the strong opposition showing "a revolt" against "a conception of Zionism which they (the delegates) considered dangerous."

Alkow told the B'nai B'rith Messenger, local English-Jewish weekly, that "we are more confi-

FITCHBURG, Mass. (AJP) — Unanimous support for the proposed $150,000,000 U. S. grant in aid to Israel was voted here this week by delegates to the annual convention of the Massachusetts Department of AMVETS (American Veterans of World War II).

The pro-Israel edict was endorsed by State Commander Norman Russell, who suspended rules and permitted the resolution's introduction at a special session.

Sharon to Dedicate Orthodox Section

Dedication of the newly-created Shomrei Shabbath section of Sharon Memorial Park in Sharon, Mass., will take place Sunday afternoon, July 22, at 3 P.M., Eric S. Marmorek, executive vice-president, announced yesterday. In case of rain, services will be held the following Sunday, July 29. The public is cordially invited.

The dedication will be under the auspices of the Beth Din (Rabbinical Court) of the Associated Synagogues of Greater Boston.

Participating in the Consecration service will be the following members of the Court. Rabbis: Mordecai Savitsky, president; Benjamin Mostofsky, secretary; Isaac Levin. Cantor Irving Kischel will chant prayers.

Sharon Memorial Park has opened an Orthodox section and within that section there will be a Shomrei Shabbath division reserved only for those who have always observed the Sabbath according to Jewish law. Eligibility to purchase burial lots in this section will be under the direct jurisdiction of the Beth Din, and no purchase agreement can be dent than ever that the masses of Zionists do not want to interfere in the internal political affairs of Israel."

He expressed belief that "when fully informed they will repudiate any hasty alliances with the so-called General Zionist Party in Israel in its fight against the government of Israel for economic or political reasons that they do not understand."

completed before approval has been obtained from this authority.

The Rabbinical Court, after thorough investigation and stipulation of certain conditions and requirements, has officially endorsed and approved this section and recommended it as a suitable burial ground for Orthodox Jewry.

Individual spaces will be marked with bronze plaques, emphasizing equality in death, which is one of the cardinal principles of Jewish law and tradition. Such markers are much less expensive than tomb stones. They are indestructible and eliminate distinction between rich and poor.

To insure the continued upkeep of the Park, perpetual maintenance of each resting place is guaranteed by an irrevocable trust administered by the Old Colony Trust Company, which is affiliated with the First National Bank of Boston. This "perpetual care fund" increases with the sale of each space; its principal can never be touched, but its earnings are used exclusively for the maintenance and constant beautification of every lot in Sharon Memorial Park.

A New Approach

There are so many Jews in positions of importance in the United States that the elevation of Milton Katz to the directorship of the Ford Foundation has hardly caused a ripple of comment. However, this is one case where comment is begging.

The appointment of a Jew to the Ford Foundation recalls an era when one of the richest men in America freely used his wealth to disseminate the very cause which the Ford Foundation now seeks to combat. It is true that, as time passed, the elder Ford publicly apologized for his anti-Jewish activities, declaring that he had been duped into becoming an instrument of the Jew haters. But the damage and hurt and indignity he inflicted on the Jews of America and of the world were not vitiated by the apology. Even after the retraction and after his death the anti-Semites of America seized upon the fraudulent "Protocols of the Elders of Zion, to spread hate and venom against Jews.

Much time has passed since those days and the evil of racial and religious hate is still upon us and the world. Little progress, it seems, has been made in the effort to reform mankind. To the extent that the Ford Foundation is a step in that direction, it merits the praise of all decent men. Particularly is the Ford Foundation to be lauded for selecting a Jew to its directorship. This was in all probability a measured appointment, and we are willing to accept it as such.

Our Film Folks

conductor made his debut. Bruno Walter, the scheduled guest conductor, became ill suddenly. Rodzinski was in the country. Leonard Bernstein was called to substitute.

The New York Daily News said later: "Bernstein had one of those opportunities like a shoestringer catch in center field. Make it and you're a hero. Muff it and you're a dope . . . He made it."

Olin Downes covered the debut on the front page of the New York Times and said that he "showed that he is one of the very few conductors of the rising generation who are indubitably to be reckoned with."

The Bruno-Walter-made program, which was destined to test young Bernstein's powers and to catapult him to fame, was not an easy or familiar one. Rodzinski drove down from his country home that day to hear Bernstein's debut, declared that he revealed "prodigious talent." Koussevitzky, listening to the concert on the country-wide broadcast over the CBS network, wired Leonard: "Listening now. Wonderful." The audience cheered its head off. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bernstein, of Sharon, Mass., and Lenny's little brother Burton, had dropped into New York for a visit at just the right moment. It was a good American success story. Backstage, reporters crowded around the young genius for the story of the year!

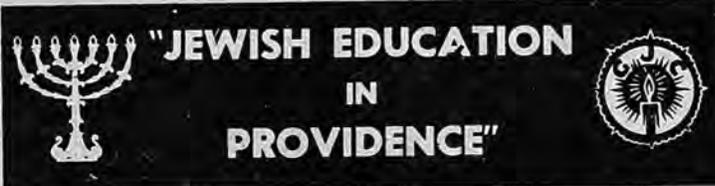

Bernstein's second opportunity to conduct the Philharmonic Symphony came on December 2, 1943, when he was given Bloch's "Jewish Poems" to direct. Then, a fortnight later, guest conductor Howard Barlow was ill and Lenny stepped in once more.

No sooner had the furor over Bernstein's conducting debut died down than the young man's first symphony, "Jeremiah," aroused new interest and acclaim. The work, whose third movement—"Lamentation"—is a setting of the Hebrew Biblical text, Jeremiah's lament for his beloved Jerusalem, had its world premiere, under the baton of the composer, with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra on January 28, 1944. On February 19, 1944, Leonard conducted "Jeremiah" with the Boston Symphony and in March with the New York Philharmonic. On May 16, 1944, "Jeremiah" won the award of the Music Critics Circle of New York as "the most outstanding orchestral work by an American composer." Later Lenny recorded it with the St. Louis Symphony for RCA Victor.

Then came Bernstein's essay in another new field, his ballet "Fancy Free," commissioned by the Ballet Theatre and done in collaboration with choreographer Jerome Robbins. "A ballet in one act concerning three sailors on shore leave," its premiere took place at the Metropolitan Opera House. Leonard Bernstein conducted. It was so big a hit that the young participants all looked a little dazed as they took their bows. In the summer of 1946 London hailed it.

Out of the ballet and his association with Robbins came the musical "On the Town." The show was another smash hit, turned out to be the freshest musical to come to New York in a long time. Leonard Bernstein earned vast new acclaim. From then on, the pattern of Leonard's life was pretty well established. Trains, planes and ships became part of his routine. Guest engagements from coast to coast and world tours turned him into a world-famous conductor, pianist and composer . . . fated for success.

(This is the second in a series of articles specially prepared for the Herald by the General Jewish Committee of Providence, Inc. They are founded upon a recently compiled report which, in turn, is based upon the findings and recommendations of a committee appointed in November, 1949, to conduct a thorough survey of Jewish education facilities in Providence. The survey was directed by, and the report prepared with the assistance of Dr. Uriah Z. Engelman of the American Association of Jewish Education).

"Education is a treasure and culture never dies."

The committee on School-Population and School Facts—one of the three major sub-committees that recently completed an intensive survey of Jewish education facilities in Providence—recognizes this fact without hesitation.

In fact, in its report it flatly stated that "Jewish education must transmit the ethnic and religious culture of the Jewish people to the younger generation."

When the General Jewish Committee of Providence, Inc.—a year and a half ago—launched its study of Jewish education facilities in Rhode Island's capital city, it realized that accurate data concerning the number, age and sex of students must be obtained—if any practical recommendations were to be made.

Accordingly, one of the first committees named was that on School Population and School Facts—a rather lengthy title but, nevertheless, descriptive of the group's scope of activity.

The committee, a broadly representative one, revealed some startling findings as a result of its several months' work.

For example:

The proportion enrolled in the weekday afternoon schools in Providence is considerably smaller than that for the nation as a whole.

Based on the enrollment for Spring of last year, the American Association of Jewish Education reports that the proportion of weekday school enrollment for the entire country was slightly in excess of 49%.

Yet, in Providence in 1950 it was only 17.2%!

This is one of the lowest percentages to be found in any American community with a Jewish population of 10,000 to 25,000.

The report came up with many other interesting observations.

"Only one child out of every seven who attends a Jewish school receives a Jewish education slightly more intensive than that given in the Sunday School. Only one out of every 19 receives an intensive Hebrew education—and that is in the Hebrew Day School."

The committee rightfully recognizes that Judaism is not a fixed creed which can be conveniently stated in a few well-defined rules.

As it points out: "Judaism is the complete story of Israel's groping with the cosmos and this story—which includes adventures in idealism, metaphysics, practical religion, history, the Bible, post-Bible Literature—cannot be adequately taught, even on an elementary level, by means of an educational system based mainly on the one-day-a-week school."

Thus it was that, early in its own report, the committee made the following recommendations:

1) The community should undertake a promotion campaign to interpret to the parents of the community the aims of Jewish education.

2) This campaign should be directed toward informing the community of the difficulty of achieving the objectives of Jewish education through the one-day-a-week school.

3) Measures should be taken for strengthening the weekday schools in every possible way and for increasing their enrollment.

Emphasizing that the afternoon Hebrew schools are valued by most parents mainly for the ritualism and synagogue tradition the schools teach, the committee's report shows a disproportionate relationship between the attendance of the two sexes.

Boys, for example, outnumber girls almost five to one. The breakdown brings this fact out in striking fashion.

Of the enrollment in the Orthodox weekdays schools, 72.3% were boys, 27.7% girls; in the Conservative schools, the proportion of boys was even larger, 77.8% as compared to 22.2%; and in weekday classes conducted under Reform auspices, 96.8% of those attending were boys—and only 3.2% were girls!

In its comment, the committee observed that "there is almost a total lack of children of high school age in any of the weekday schools. And the very small (3.1%) number of pupils in the high school classes of the Sunday School is deplorable."

The massing of the children in the lower grades of the weekday school and the failure to carry them onto the higher grades "is a fundamental weakness of the Jewish School," adds the report.

In listing the curriculum of the Jewish school, the committee notes that "the ability to understand some of these subjects requires a degree of intellectual maturity and background which children in the elementary school do not yet possess."

Yet the committee's statistics revealed that there is only one child of 14 years of age attending a Jewish weekday school—and very few of high school age in the Sunday School!

Thus the study group pointed up its remarks with this trenchant observation:

"It is precisely at the age when the child has become the adolescent and is capable of intellectually appreciating the uniqueness and the worthwhileness of the Jewish relation—and the sweep, splendor and tragedy of Jewish History—that he severs his relationship with the Jewish school and formal Jewish learning."

Accordingly, in its recommendations, the report proposes a consolidated Hebrew High School for the elementary school graduates be established in Providence; furthermore, it suggests the possibility of a consolidated high school for Sunday School graduates; and it recommends that a "Central Agency for Jewish Education" work out a uniform code of school standards which would, among other assignments, deal with a standard graded curricula, a uniform school calendar and annual promotions based on achievement.

Some pungent observations are made by the committee in relation to the six Providence weekday schools. Pointing out that at least four of these are small, one-room, one-teacher schools, it arrives at the following conclusions:

1) Schools with small registrations can ill afford to employ competent teachers.

2) Competent teachers are reluctant to take positions in small schools, since they offer neither tenure security nor opportunity for professional growth.

3) In small schools, it is difficult to grade the children properly, inasmuch as there are not enough children in each age group to form separate classes.

4) In a small school, all beginners are usually placed in one class, regardless of age, grade or ability. "The very bad grading in the first year is later carried over into the subsequent grades and affects adversely the scholastic program of the children."

5) A small school does not allow for engaging special teachers for special subjects—such as singing, arts and crafts, dramatics, etc.

6) In the small school, there is little opportunity for the busy teacher to give special attention to the retarded student who, therefore, must be kept in the same class with more advanced children. "This in turn results in depressing the level of the rest of the class."

In its final summary, the GJC's committee on School Population and School Facts makes another salient recommendation. With the formation of the previously mentioned "Central Agency for Jewish Education," it proposes that a committee be appointed shortly thereafter to look into the matter of consolidation of the smaller schools.

And in this respect it notes: "The (committee) met with no serious theoretical or practical objections from the representatives of the congregations sponsoring the small school . . . no objections which could not be resolved by negotiation and reasonable compromise."

LOS ANGELES (AJP)—A local 20-year-old Jewish ambulance driver with the 1st Cavalry Division was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in the Korean War. The soldier, Pfc. His father, Louis Hammer, was cited earlier by the government for his outstanding work in aiding in repatriating World War II war dead.

The latest winner became the second Jewish girl to win the title of "Miss Atlantic City." Some years ago Ruth Goldberg Kostner was chosen as beauty queen in the annual contest.

According to the "Miss America" contest rules the girl chosen as "Miss Atlantic City" is not eligible to compete in the actual contest for the selection of the nation's number one beauty.

Health Center Named For Prof. Einstein

PHILADELPH (AJP) — The first institution bearing the name of Dr. Albert Einstein, renowned physicist, is scheduled to be dedicated here shortly.

The institution, a consolidated health center, was created by the Jewish, Mount Sinai, and Northern Liberties Hospitals.

Dr. Einstein, in accepting the honor wrote Joseph First, president of the Center that he was "very touched indeed" by the gesture.

Although there is an Einstein Institute of Physics at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and in the pre-Nazi era there was Einstein tower for astronomical study in Berlin, the health center here will be the first American institution bearing the Jewish genius's name.

Too Shy to Enter Beauty Contest-- But Wins Anyway

ATLANTIC CITY (AJP) — A prominent young Jewish girl, who believed her chances of winning a beauty crown were so slight that she balked at entering a contest, this week became the second of her faith to be chosen from a field of 50 beauties, for the title of "Miss Atlantic City," official hostess to contestants from all parts of the nation scheduled to converge on this resort haven in early September for the "Miss America Pageant."

The new resort queen is 19-year-old Janet Esther Barab, a sophomore at Endicott Junior College, Beverly, Mass. She won the title over 11 other finalists last week.

Dark-haired and strikingly attractive, Janet copped a select place on the Dean's list at school last semester and ranks as one of the top members of her class. She's majoring in medical secretarial work.

Janet enjoys music. One of her favorite college pastimes is appearing as soloist with the school's glee club. The choral group performed before a number of civic groups throughout Massachusetts last season.

The attractive Jewish beauty queen nearly missed winning the "Miss Atlantic City" Crown. Mrs. Sarah W. Singer, editor, of the Jewish Record, local English-Jewish weekly, disclosed that because "she thought her chances were so slight."

Janet wasn't the least bit interested in entering the contest. Her sister, presently on her honeymoon, took time out from

SYD COHEN:

Planning the 1951 Golf Tournament

The weather has been hot and humid—except, of course, for the weekends, when we somehow manage to come up with enough foul weather to remind us of that perpetual cloud that follows poor Joe Btfsplk around the Dogpatch area.

It's that time of the year when our local softball players quit the diamond for the beach...but it is also the time when the sturdy golfer packs his heavy bag and heads for the links. Hot weather or cold, the various courses are busy all the time.

So we come to the preliminary plans for the first in what is hoped will be a long series of local golf tournaments. Harry Platt, who planned and conducted the last tourney in conjunction with this column, is all set to carry on again. Several fellows have been inquiring about it, and indications are that we should have an impressive turnout for the 1951 affair.

Printed on this page is a coupon that may be filled out and mailed to Harry Platt. Accompanied by the entrance fee of one dollar, this application will serve as the official registration for every golfer inclined to participate. You don't have to use that coupon. A call to Platt will do the trick, with arrangements for the fee to follow; or, you may contact this column, which will relay the information to Harry.

However you decide to do it, please don't delay if you would like to take part in the golf tournament. The date of the affair will be set as soon as it can reasonably be estimated how many men will compete.

A warning and encouraging word to those who may be sensitive about their relatively high scores and therefore a bit bashful about signing up. Please remember that this tourney is played on a handicap basis. The tourney will start with a qualifying round, and handicaps will be awarded before the start of the match play. In other words, you still have a chance to win or place high in the ranks even if your normal score is around the 100 mark.

The point is, don't stay out of the tournament just because you may not consider yourself good enough. It won't work out that way, for one thing, and besides, all the boys will have a lot of fun, and be in on the ground floor of the organization of a permanent golfing association which will benefit every one in the long run.

We won't go into the rules or various plans that have been developed for the tournament. These can wait until the entries have been made. Actually, there have been many suggestions, but no actual plans, until a permanent committee and officers have been set up.

One of the men who is highly interested in the golf tournament is Murray Trinkle. Murray is a bowler in the winter season (he won the Trinkle Trophy for high three this year) and a golfer in the summer. We discussed golf at length a few weeks ago, and some of his ideas on the subject were very interesting. The combination of ideas and efforts of men like Trinkle and Platt and Lou Chase, to name but a few, should give Rhode Island an outstanding golfing association.

So how about doing your part, fellows? Fill out the coupon now and slip it in an envelope. I believe we can promise you a fine and interesting tournament.

An Annual Outing

Among the things that Murray Trinkle and I talked about in our recent confab was an idea of mine for a Herald promotion that has been mentioned only briefly in this column. Murray thinks so well of it that he urged me to get it into print, and already has raised some funds and edible material, as well as personal support.

That idea is an annual outing, or, as I prefer, a track and field day, for all the Jewish youngsters in the area. This would be a gigantic affair, with advance registration and all sorts of athletic contests for the kids, who would be divided into classifications according to age.

For instance, boys in their middle teens might have a 100 yard dash and a quarter mile run. Younger boys might settle for a 60 yard dash. Smaller kids could sprint for 40 yards, with such novelties as wheel barrow races, etc., for all groups. There might be boxing competition, fungo hitting, and throwing—and well, all sorts of events to make a really complete day. These are only ideas. The committee in charge would set it up, of course.

All of this, as we vision it, would be free. Transportation would be provided for those who would not have private rides; a huge recreational area would be reserved months in advance with the state; refreshments would be donated by leading citizens and firms; and incidental financial expenses would be borne by contributions.

To show how easily it can be done, Trinkle obtained promises

Jewish Owned Movie Showing "Twist" Hit

CHICAGO (AJP)—A Jewish-owned theatre here drew fire this week from a local English-Jewish weekly for showing the controversial allegedly anti-Semitic film "Oliver Twist." The film's nationwide tour thus far has proven a flop with the J. Arthur Rank version of Dickens' novel playing to meagre audiences.

Under the title "A Picture NOT to See," the Sentinel, local English-Jewish weekly, also asked "why haven't the Jewish 'defense agencies' taken steps to halt the showings in Chicago?"

of $125 in cash that I know of within a week of the time I first mentioned it to him. Trucks and ice cream, to mention only two items, are also available at no charge.

The whole program would be supervised and arranged by adults, who would make careful advance plans to provide for the boys' safety; and we think the outing could develop into one of the truly outstanding events on the calendar. If you think enough of it to offer your assistance or encouragement, Murray Trinkle and I will be happy to hear from you.

All copy submitted to the Herald should be written (typed, if possible, and double spaced) on a full size sheet of paper.
