Arabs End Boycott Against U. S. Jews

WASHINGTON — Discrimination by the Saudi Arabian Government against American firms owned by Jews has been ended as the result of negotiations by U. S. diplomats here and in Saudi Arabia.

In a letter to Sen. Herbert H. Lehman, who had protested the policy, Assistant Secretary of State Jack McFall revealed that a Saudi Arabian decree barring importers from dealing with Jewish firms was modified as of April 4 to exempt American concerns. He said that the change followed talks with the Moslem nation's embassy here and by the U. S. Ambassador with high officials in Saudi Arabia.

Reds Would Cancel Israel's Gains

TEL AVIV — Shmuel Mikunis, who was re-elected general secretary of Israel's Communist Party, told the party convention here that an Israeli "popular democracy" would "cancel all territorial acquisitions Israel has made outside the borders decided by the United Nations."

He added that a communist regime in Israel would "support establishment of a democratic Arab state in Palestine and will recognize the right of Arab refugees to their homeland and to the restoration of property and land which has been taken from them."

Meeting Chairman

DANIEL JACOBS

Emanuel To Hold 27th Annual Meeting

Daniel Jacobs, Chairman of the Annual Meeting of Temple Emanuel has announced that the 27th annual convocation of the Congregation will take place in the Temple vestry on Wednesday, June 18, at 8 P. M.

The program will include the annual report by Samuel Rosen, president, the Rabbi's report, and reports by chairmen of standing committees. Jacob S. Temkin, chairman of the nominating committee, will present the slate of officers and members of the Board to be voted on by the membership. A Reception will be held following the meeting.

Abba Eban, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, this week notified Saul Abrams and Dr. Ilie Berger, co-chairmen of the Providence Committee for Israel Bonds, that he will appear in Providence on Monday, June 30 to address the people of this city.

Ambassador Eban will discuss conditions in Israel at a public rally to be held at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel that evening at 8:30 P. M.

The event will be open to the public with no admission charge.

Originally scheduled to speak here on May 19, Eban was unable to appear because of circumstances that developed immediately prior to that date, and he is now fulfilling that engagement.

Ambassador Eban's visit here will mark the first time the youthful statesman has been a guest of the Rhode Island Jewish community. A world-famous orator, he is Israel's permanent representative to the United Nations. He pleaded the Jewish case before the General Assembly and the Security Council with such force that he is credited, in a large measure, with influencing these bodies decisively in the critical days which gave birth to the State of Israel.

Mr. Eban speaks Hebrew, Arabic and a number of European languages, and is the author of a book entitled "The Middle East and World Politics."

A nationally known artist, whose name will be announced in next week's Herald, will also be on the program.

Kane's Committee Sparks Center's Membership Drive

A group of 45 men became $100 members of the Jewish Community Center at a meeting held Monday evening at the home of Sydney Kane, 35 Balton Road.

Comprising the new Charter Business and Professional membership category of the Center, which is now engaged in its 1952 Membership Enrollment campaign, the group also distributed more than 100 cards containing names of other men listed in this limited category.

With the action of the men present in signing $100 membership cards providing the spark, Kane, chairman of the committee, asserted that he is confident

Urge Protests of McCarran Bill

The board of directors of the Rhode Island Refugee Service this week issued a statement urging all citizens to write to President Truman requesting that he veto the McCarran-Walter Immigration Bill which recently passed the Senate and the House.

It is hoped that pressure of cards, letters and telegrams from individuals and organizations will cause the President to veto this restrictive and discriminatory legislation, the Board said.

Obituary

DR. HERMAN P. GROSSMAN

Funeral services for Dr. Herman P. Grossman, chief surgeon of the department of ophthalmology at Charles V. Chapin and Miriam Hospitals and staff member of many other hospitals in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, who died Thursday at his home, 81 Hazard Avenue, after a short illness, were held Sunday at Temple Emanuel. He was 52. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Rabbi William G. Braude and Rabbi Morris Schussheim officiated. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Bearers were Dr. Nathan A. Bolotow, Dr. Myer Saklad, Dr. Nathan Chaset, Dr. William Fain, Dr. Emanuel Benjamin, Dr. Linus A. Sheehan, Dr. Banice Feinberg, Judah Semonoff, Dr. Milton Ross and Dr. Lloyd Bazelon.

Representatives of the following organizations attended the funeral: Rhode Island Medical Society, Providence Medical Association, Rhode Island Hospital, Miriam Hospital and the Narragansett Associates.

Dr. Grossman was a visiting surgeon at Rhode Island Hospital, a consultant at Butler Hospital and an assistant surgeon at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and at Massachusetts General Hospital. He was an associate examiner of the National Board of Ophthalmology and a member of the board of directors of the General Jewish Committee.

Born in Russia, Jan. 6, 1900, he came to Providence in 1908 and was graduated from Point Street grammar school and Classical High School.

He received his A.B. degree from Harvard University in 1922 and his M. D. from Boston University four years later. His graduate studies included two years at the University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine and two years at the Harvard University Graduate School of Medicine.

Dr. Grossman engaged in the general practice of medicine in Providence from 1929 to 1931 and became a specialist in the field of eye diseases in 1934. He served his internship at Massachusetts Memorial Hospital in Boston and was a resident ophthalmic surgeon at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary from 1932 to 1934.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Edna (Rosen) Grossman; two daughters, Miss Edith and Miss Edith and Miss Betty Grossman, both of Providence; a brother, Samuel G. Grossman of Boston, and two sisters, Mrs. Gertrude Shulman of Brooklyn and Mrs. Sarah Goldman of Great Neck, N. Y.

ISAAC RUBINOVITZ

Funeral services for Isaac Rubinovitz, 69, who died Sunday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Cohen, 60 Carr Street, were held the next day at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery. Memorial services were held at the home of Mrs. Cohen.

Mr. Rubinovitz had been retired for 20 years.

He is survived by two sons, Benjamin of Quincy, Mass., and Samuel of Providence; three daughters, Mrs. Irving Broman, Mrs. James Smith and Mrs. Cohen; two sisters, Mrs. Mollie Cohen and Mrs. Fannie Weinstein, and eight grandchildren. All are of Providence.

Pardon My Glove

By CHARLES W. PINE

WITH ONLY A FEW EXCEPTIONS, comment on the recent Walcott-Charles fight ran about as expected. The fans and scribes who had picked Charles were rightfully perturbed about both the decision and the refereeing. The Walcott adherents blandly pointed to the unanimous verdict for ancient Arnold Cream to justify their pre-fight predictions.

Here in Providence, however, there were surprising exceptions to the rule. Earl Lofquist, the smooth-writing sports columnist of the Journal, had selected Walcott. He watched the bout on television and later acknowledged: "The best you could do for Walcott was to give him seven rounds against Charles."

Lofquist's counterpart on the New York Times, the respected Arthur Daley, expressed it this way: "This reporter thought Charles had won and so did everyone near him. That's why it was such a shock when Jersey Joe gained a unanimous decision."

With Mike Thomas, the local Bulletin's boxing scribe, it was another story, however. Thomas had gone way out on the limb with a flat prediction that Walcott would win handily by a knockout. So last Sunday he wrote: "Walcott won the fight and there was no stew over the decision in Philadelphia except in the press row." Let's examine this rather curious statement.

So far as the audience was concerned, Jersey Joe was their choice—not merely on sentiment but mostly because Joe is a resident of nearby Camden, N. J., which often has been described as a "suburb of Philadelphia." Thus, Walcott was a strong "home town" favorite, backed by a provincial bob or two riding on the short end.

Now let's check the officiating. One judge, who scored it 7-6-2 in Walcott's favor, was rather apologetic in his explanation to the press of his reasoning. The fight was close, he intimated, and therefore Jersey Joe should retain his title. Debatable logic, but let's bypass it for the moment.

The other judge managed to come up with eight rounds in favor of Walcott—and Zack Clayton, the referee, surprised no one when he turned in a 9-6 card in favor of the champion. Mike Thomas, last Sunday, made an eloquent defense of Clayton's abilities as a referee but most boxing writers present at the ringside that night were in agreement that it was a sorry performance, indeed.

We watched the bout on television and we don't contend that we could score every blow as accurately as if we were at ringside. But we didn't need to strain our 20/20 eyesight to detect that Walcott backhanded Charles on at least four occasions, hit him on the break on as many more, and wasn't adverse to a little strategic butting and numerous nonchalant rabbit punches. YET, NEVER ONCE DID CLAYTON REPRIS-

New President

HYMAN COKIN
The Blackstone Valley Jewish Community Council elected Cokin president at the organization's annual meeting Wednesday evening in Pawtucket.

MAND WALCOTT!

On the other hand, Charles was warned on several occasions for alleged "low blows" that landed no lower than Walcott's fourth rib—and we're counting from the top. And Thomas contends that Clayton "did a competent job."

So much for the quality of the officiating. Like some of the manifestoes of the Pennsylvania boxing commission headed by "Ox" DaGrosa, it is of strong scent.

What about the scribes who covered the fight? Among them were the nation's sharpest observers of fistiana. Well, immediately following the decision, the United Press polled 59 recognized boxing writers and editors seated at ringside. The vote? Thirty-eight firmly 'bought Charles had won; only 21 gave the nod to Walcott—or a virtual 2-1 consensus in favor of Charles. We'll rest our case on that note and vote!

DESPITE Arthur King's surprising upset of Paddy DeMarco a few weeks ago, Providence's Georgie Araujo should enter the ring at Madison Square Garden tonight a solid favorite over the Toronto better. At this writing, no odds have been quoted but an 8-5 wager would seem to be in order. We predict that King will win no more than three or four rounds.

JWVets Present Bowling Awards

The men's bowling league of Fineman-Trinkel Post, Jewish War Veterans, held its annual dinner-dance Tuesday evening in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel. Music was by Tommy Masso and his orchestra.

Lester Friedman, league president, acted as master of ceremonies and presented the awards. He was assisted by the gifts committee, which included Gene Silverman, Sam Price and Phil Shaulson.

Award winners were: Mort Kilbanoff, high average, 112, and high three total, 403; Dave Allen and Murray Gordon, runners-up in individual averages; Morris Factor, high three total, 380. High singles went to Gene Silverman, 168, and Al Resnick, 160. Donald Cohen walked away with second high average, 107, second three string total, 402, and third high single, 159.

Team awards went to the following: Morris Satioff, Capt., Murray Gordon, Donald Cohen, Norman Gordon and Norman Goldberg, whose Tigers won the American division championship and were the "World Series" winners; Lou Millen, captain, Dave Allen, Harry Shore, Marty Zawatsky and Nat Agid of the Phillies, who won the National division championship and posted the high team three total of 1632; Sam Tapper, captain, Abe Lobel, Jack Jacobson, Sam Shaver and Billy Edelman of the Cubs, and Sam Feldman, captain, Nate Gordon, Ed Lief, Max Runstein and Irv Kaplan of the Pirates, whose teams were tied with 583 for team high single honors.

Special presentations were made to outgoing officers Harold Levin, vice-president; Arthur Pivnick, secretary; Max Cohen, treasurer, and Jack Jacobson, publicity.

Ferdman Family Elects Abowitz

Munroe Abowitz was elected president of the Ferdman Family Circle at a recent meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Pickar of Pawtucket. Others elected were Mrs. Irvina Pickar, vice-president; Mrs. Milton Walba, secretary, and Benjamin Ferdman, treasurer.

Plans were discussed for the annual picnic, to take place at Slater Park on July 4.

A moment of silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Anna Dimberg. It was decided to plant trees in Israel in her name.

Mrs. Joseph Fox, social chairman, and Mrs. Munroe Abowitz, sunshine chairman, read reports. Benjamin Ferdman won the white elephant raffle. A social hour followed the meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Max as guests.

Conduct Services for War Dead

The Jewish War Veterans, Department of Rhode Island, held memorial services Sunday at Lincoln Park Cemetery. The annual services had been postponed from May 30 because of Shevuoth. Commander Elliot F. Slack presided.

Rabbi George Bernard Schwartz conducted the service and delivered the address.

Color bearers were Arthur Balkan of the U.S. Navy, Philip Simon, Jacob Jenkin, Joslyn Presser, Meyer Grossman and Irving Grossman. Philip Rosenfield was in charge of the firing squad which included Carl Zimmerman, Harold Jacober, Irvine Ross and Philip Wold. Ralph Buckler and Edmund Bored sounded taps.

The Herald's deadline for news items is Tuesday noon. We cannot guarantee to insert stories received after that time.

Goldman-Labush

In a pink and white floral setting, Miss Selma Labush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Labush of 41 Eaton Street, became the bride of Arnold S. Goldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goldman of Lowell, Mass., Sunday evening in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel. The candlelight ceremony was performed by Rabbi Morton Berkowitz, and a reception and dinner followed.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a white gown of nylon tulle styled with an overskirt of chantilly lace cascading in a double tier in the back.

A fingertip veil of French illusion fell from a satin and seed pearl crown. She held a prayer book marked with a white orchid and stephanotis.

Mrs. Martin Tolchinsky, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Dressed in starlight blue nylon tulle, she carried pink and white gardenias. Miss Madalyn Goldman, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of Nile green net and carried a fan of pink rosebuds.

Maxwell Burstein of Brookline, Mass., was best man. Ushers included Martin Tolchinsky, Harold Bloom, Bernard Labush, Frank Goldman, David Barson and Harry Barson.

The bride's mother chose a rose chantilly lace gown decorated with beads and seed pearls. The groom's mother was attired in aqua lace. Both wore orchids.

"Kiss Me Kate" At Newport Casino

Sara Stamm, owner and general manager of the Newport Casino Theatre, has announced the program for the 26th annual season at Rhode Island's oldest and best known summer theatre. Miss Stamm's season opens on Monday night, June 23, with the Cole Porter musical comedy "Kiss Me Kate," featuring Dennis Harrison and Ruth Webb.

Each play will be presented every night except Sundays at 8:30, with matinees, on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2:30. Tickets may be obtained direct from the Box Office, Newport 400, or from the Roth, Smith, and Axelrod Ticket Agencies in Providence.

Hot Dog Roast Tomorrow at JCC

A hot dog roast at which the women will be guests and the men will do all the work is on tap tomorrow evening on the grounds of the Jewish Community Center. The roast will start at 8 P. M.

One of the two final social events of the season, the roast will be limited to the adult membership of the Center and their friends.

The "menu," according to David Meyers, chairman of the Center's Membership Enrollment Committee, which is sponsoring the party, will include the hot dogs and "fixings," and cold drinks. Square dancing will feature the musical portion of the program. Dress will be informal.

All preparations including the roasting will be made by the men. The women's turn will come next Saturday, when they will be hostesses at a similar event, which will formally wind up the social season on the adult calendar.

Samdperil-Matzner
Miss Ruth Lois Matzner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Matzner of Pembroke Avenue, became the bride of Charles Samdperil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Samdperil of Savoy Street, Sunday afternoon at Beth David Synagogue. Rabbis Eli A. Bohnen and George B. Schwartz officiated at the double-ring ceremony. A reception followed in the vestry. The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a ballerina gown of blush pink nylon tulle and chantilly lace, fashioned with a fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. A fingertip veil of French illusion fell from her lace bonnet. She carried a prayer book decorated with orchids and stephanotis streamers.

Miss Beverly Rotmer and Miss Barbara Wyzansky were bridesmaids. Miss Patricia Ruth White of Springfield, Mass., niece of the bridegroom, and Miss Barbara Lee Dunn of Woonsocket, cousin of the bride, were junior bridesmaids. Albert Samdperil of Cranston was his brother's best man. Richard Todd White of Springfield, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring-bearer. Ushers included

Training Course For Camp Counsellors

A special leadership training program for Camp Centerland counsellors was begun Tuesday and will be conducted in a series of eight sessions concluding on June 27.

The leadership training program, as outlined this week at the Jewish Community Center, is designed to insure that children who attend Camp Centerland, the Center's summer day camp, will have competent and highly trained leaders who can provide the best leadership possible.

The program will be under the jurisdiction of Ralph Kolodny, director of children's program at the Center, and Matthew Millman, who will serve as director of Camp Centerland.

Tuesday's first session was featured by introduction of camp and Center officials and the counsellors, and a discussion on the general objectives of the camp. A social hour followed.

Next Wednesday the group will meet again at the Center from 7:30 to 9 P. M., with the agenda including a discussion on health at camp, led by Mary Hicks, camp nurse; a workshop on music and games, conducted by Bernard Berstein, Beverly Rotmer and Selma Schmuger, and a sociodrama on problem children, followed by a discussion. William Schwartz will introduce this portion of the program, and Joan Temkin, Noah Saxe, Richard Abedon and Deborah Temkin will participate. Schwartz and Kolodny will act as moderators.

Remaining sessions of the leadership training program will be reported in future issues.

Day School Ladies To Elect June 18

The final meeting of the season of the Ladies Association of the Providence Hebrew Day School will be held on Wednesday evening, June 18 at the school auditorium.

Nomination and election of officers will take place and annual reports of the officers will be read. Drawing for the raffle will be held, the prize being a four day vacation for two at Grossingers. A social hour will follow the business meeting.

The women of the community are invited to attend.

"One Man's Opinion"

BY BERYL SEGAL

The Doctor

A faint memory of days lost in the mist of the past... A story told in awe on winter evenings, of long lost years... An image etched on a child's mind and carried through the years to this day. And this is how the story goes.

The old Rabbi woke up one morning before dawn, as was his rule every day, to begin the waking hours in prayers and in study. He looked up to the skies, as was his habit on arising, and he saw that the skies were clear, and the moon was full, and the morning star shone brightly.

But something was wrong. These four walls of his room, where he spends all his waking hours, why are they so dull this morning? This Mizrach tablet, the sign of the Eastern Wall, why is it surrounded by a mist? And this portrait of the Wilner Gaon, a face so luminous, why is it blurred today?

The old Rabbi was disturbed. But he chanted the Psalms with greater zeal, and he wrapped his Talls closer around his body when he prayed, and he dwelled on the meaning of every phrase uttered by his lips, so as to banish disturbing thoughts and to free his soul and his mind from worries while he stood before his Creator.

But as the dawn gave way to daylight, and the morning passed into high noon and the mist that hung before his eyes still did not lift, the Rabbi grew fearful, and he sought the advice of the local healers.

Salves were applied to the eyes. Unctions and drops were tried. People offered old and tried recipes. No help came from all these. The Rabbi dwelled in twilight while the sun shone brightly, and familiar faces looked shadowy to his eyes.

The Rabbi was then taken to see a famous doctor in the big city nearby, and that doctor in turn advised a greater and more famous doctor in famed Vienna. He, and he alone, has the skill to perform the operation that will remove the veil that beclouds the Rabbi's vision. This veil, the doctor warned, if neglected, will get heavier and thicker, and may soon obscure the Rabbi's sight altogether.

The doctor sighed and shook his head in great concern. Vienna is far away. The famous eye specialist is making his appointments months in advance. Besides, his fees are fabulous. How can a poor Rabbi from a small village ever hope to go to Vienna and sit around for a chance to see the busy man who is sought out by royalty and the rich of a continent?

The Rabbi had neither the necessary money nor the time for the Vienna trip. But he had faith. And on this faith and the help of friends the Rabbi reached Vienna.

In the hostelry where the Rabbi and his wife put up on their arrival to the famous city people shook their heads upon hearing their story. They were told of people who are kept waiting their turn months on end before they can get into the office of the famous doctor. In the Shul where the Rabbi went for the evening prayer they pointed out to him a rich merchant from Russia who has been kept waiting for an appointment these past three months, all his offers of thousands of rubles unavailing.

But the Rabbi's faith was not shaken. Early next morning he dressed in his Sabbath clothes, and stood in front of the house of the great doctor.

The doorman asked questions, protested, but the Rabbi passed by him and entered the reception room.

Nurses and attendants surrounded him, barring his way, but the venerable Rabbi just pressed forward toward the inner room, and he stood before the door of the doctor unmoved.

At hearing the commotion the doctor opened the door and took in the scene before him; the despairing gestures of the nurse, the puzzled staring of his assistant, and the silent determination on the face of the Rabbi. To the astonishment of all, the doctor—he to whom counts and dukes come in humility—held out his hands to the bearded man in his satin kapote, in a warm welcome.

"Sholom Aleichem"—the doctor greeted him humbly—"Come right in, Rabbi!"

In due time the Rabbi returned to his village with his vision restored to him as before, and to the end of his days he tired not to tell of this wonderful man who keeps princes and rich merchants waiting for their turn, but opens the door for a poor Rabbi to heal him without a thought of reward other than a blessing.

This, the old Rabbi would tell, was a promise the famous doctor made to his parents who were themselves poor humble people.

"Promise us, son, that you will never refuse healing to a poor man, and never fail to show reverence to a man of God".

Thus runs the story told on a winter evening, in the little town of my childhood, in voices full of awe. Thus did a child who never saw a doctor in his life create the image of a Doctor in his mind, to carry it with him through the years.

The story and the image came to live again as the eulogies were spoken, and the Kaddish was chanted over the grave of Dr. Herman Grossman.

Of his skill as a healer of diseases of the eye, let the specialist discourse. Of his methods in surgery, let those who know hold forth. These will be found in the annals of medicine in academic phrases. If I want to speak of Dr. Grossman I must speak in the words and in the moods of the story told to me in the dim days of my childhood in a voice filled with awe and wonder.

Did Dr. Grossman make a similar promise to his parents? Did he make this promise to himself? I do not know. But I do know how severely he held to this creed of the legendary doctor of Vienna. Never did he delay the healing of a poor man. Never did he fail to show reverence in his dealings with men of God.

Only a few short months ago I watched him emerge from the operating room where he worked from 8 in the morning until late in the afternoon. Two of the operations, he confided to me, were on two elderly people who have all but exhausted their entire life savings. No fees from them.

I recall the day when I spoke to Dr. Grossman about a person in need of his skill, but who was told that the appointments were filled for months in advance. After a few brief questions, Dr. Grossman picked up the telephone and spoke to the secretary, making room for this case within a few days. How did he do it? By taking time needed for his rest and giving it to a man he does not know, except that he is new in this country, having arrived here a short while ago penniless, friendless, and his spirit at a low ebb. No fees from this case, either.

How much like the legend of the Rabbi and the Vienna doctor these stories sound!

How much happier I would have been to write of this for Dr. Grossman to read!

The irony of it is that I intended to write it all for him, and on this week, too. Strange are the ways of our lives, and unpredictable are the fates that await us at the next turn of the road.

Last year I devoted my column to Mother's Day. The story pleased Dr. Grossman and his two daughters, and they included the clipping of my story with the gift for their mother. Dr. Grossman told me about this in a letter which I shall treasure to the end of my days.

In reply I promised to write a Fathers Day story in the hope that it, too, may please his two daughters, so that they may put a clipping of it in the gift package to their great father.

Well, this is the story. Dr. Grossman's story. I keep my promise, painful as it is. I dedicate it to the memory of a great doctor, a warm friend, and a wonderful man. In the years to come his daughters will find comfort in the honest tribute paid to their father, and in the sincere sorrow of a community for his passing.

With this story, Mr. Segal concludes his writing of "One Man's Opinion" for this season. His column will be resumed in September.

SUNDAY'S SCHEDULE
 Waldorf Tuxedo vs M & F Insurance at Richardson Park; Technoprint vs Broadway Auto at Roger Williams Park; Cranston vs Natcor at Hopkins Park.

Jumping off to a 4-run lead in the first two innings without the benefit of a hit, Waldorf made their lead hold up despite a Technoprint threat in every inning. Outstanding fielding by Rodman and Aiello was the big factor in the win. Phil Levine's double to left swinging one-handed was the feature of the day. Dostoglos and Greg Karembeles hit well for the losers.

Behind by two runs going into the last of the seventh of the nightcap, Waldorf tied the game on hits by Billy DelVecchio and Joyce, plus a perfect squeeze by Aiello. Dave Leven pitched steady ball for the printers, but tired in the tenth, giving hits to Jerry Lobel and Joyce for the winning run. Greg Karembeles' leaping one-hand catch going away was the game's fielding feature. Abe Lobel, after winning the first game, came on to relieve and got credit for the second game as well. Howie Cohen slapped three hits for the losers.

Broadway Auto and Natcor shared a couple of one-sided wins, 12-4 and 17-4. Buzzy Labush's steadiness outlasted a pair of the Auto-men's pitchers, as he hung up his first win of the year in the opener. Home runs by Gene Silverman and Roltman were the big blows for Broadway in the second game. Jack Steiner had a wrap-up after a big third inning and he coasted to the win. Silverman was the big hitter and Goldis the outstanding fielder in both games.

Complete reports were not submitted on the Cranston-M & F doubleheader.

SYD COHEN:

Big League
Small Talk

The gag of the week, in the opinion of this corner, came via telephone during a conversation with a woman baseball fan. We were discussing the now-famous trade between the Boston Tigers and the Detroit Red Sox—oh, well, you know what I mean—and the talk finally got around to Mickey McDermott, who had just followed up a one-hit masterpiece with a performance that was just plain lousy.

What, friend woman wanted to know, was the matter with McDermott? I explained that Mickey was what you might call a .500 pitcher, who seems to alternate good games with bad as if he hasn't the strength on his skinny frame to put together two good games in a row. The conclusion drawn at the other end of the wire was most natural and elementary. In that case, Fem Fan deduced, why doesn't Manager Lou Boudreau skip McDermott's every other turn and pitch him only often enough to take advantage of his good games?

Will somebody volunteer to relay the opinion to Boudreau?

Why is it that so many big league players can't lay down a bunt? That's a question you hear quite a bit throughout the summer, especially when a big rally goes glimmering for want of the sacrifice.

Why is it that so many high-priced and highly regarded rookies will swing for the fences every time up, instead of just trying to meet the ball? That's another unanswerable that torments the fans whose favorite club has just left men on base because a youngster whiffed in the clutch.

How come so many pitchers come up to the majors without learning how to hide the ball before delivering it, without learning how to field their position properly?

There has been a lot of criticism this spring from writers and broadcasters and fans as to why this and why that. Depending on where you sit, the fault lies with (1) the farm system, (2) the minor league manager who brought the kid along, (3) the major league manager who didn't coach the kid properly in spring, (4) the rookie himself for not trying to learn and improve himself.

All four criticisms don't mean a thing. The fault does not lie with somebody; it does belong to something—inexperience.

Baseball is a big enterprise. Clubs spend fortunes buying and developing players. They maintain costly farm systems, many of which lose money, just to protect their major league investments. They hire the best managers and coaches they can get, and the finest scouts. In view of all this, does it seem reasonable that they would, after all this effort, neglect teaching their rookies fundamental baseball? Of course not.

The fact is that the youngsters do get expert instruction. But then you run into the human angle. Learning something, and doing it, are two entirely different colors on a couple of totally unrelated horses.

In the minors a rookie learns most of the basics. But with night ball and Sunday double headers, long bus rides and all the related miseries of minor league ball, the instruction cannot be comprehensive; and since in the minors the player is learning to develop his strong points, his potentialities, he doesn't often get the chance to practice on the finer points that he is trying to learn.

Every big league manager spends long hours in the spring-time teaching his charges how to lay down a bunt. Yet, when the season starts, some of them still can't bunt. Why? Simple. Lack of actual experience. After all, how many times does a guy actually get to bunt? Not many. The majority of the good bunters are fellows who have been around a long time, who learned through experience, not just practice.

A player can practice bunting until he's blue in the face but it means nothing when he comes up in the clutch against a smart pitcher who makes the ball spin so that most bunts will go foul. And even a good bunt may result in a force play at third or second. Circumstances—such as the number of men on base, the form of the pitcher, where the ball is pitched, and where it must be dropped—plus the natural strain on the hitter, all affect the bunt.

Phil Rizzuto and Dom DiMaggio are expert bunters, but even most of their efforts go foul.

About five years ago Milton Gross of the New York Post wrote a book entitled "Yankee Doodles", containing personality sketches of the Yankees. One chapter in that book was devoted to Phil Rizzuto, who explained how he was taught how to play big league ball AFTER HE HAD COME UP TO THE YANKEES!

Here was a guy who was rated the prize shortstop of the minors in 1940, who came up through the best chain in the business, making all the stops from Class A to Triple A—and he says he learned how to play his position and how to hit AFTER he came up.

Sound silly? Not at all. All Rizzuto had learned up to his advent to the big time was the basic facts. Actually, the polish, the know-how, the experience of applying what he was taught, all came later.

Phil tells, in a very interesting manner, how Manager Joe McCarthy changed his impressions, coached him on inside strategy, showed him the niceties of hitting—how second baseman Joe Gordon took him in hand and showed him how things are done in the majors.

It is by far the finest enunciation of how a big league ball player gets that way that I have ever read. Get the book from the library and read that chapter—and see if I'm not right.
