AJC Leader Attacks NCRAC Plan For "Redivision of Responsibility"

In the wake of the recent stormy session of the National Community Relations Advisory Council at Atlantic City, following which the leaders of two major national organizations recommended a bolt of the NCRAC by their groups, the American Jewish Committee this week released a series of excerpts from a speech made at the session by Jacob Blaustein, AJC president.

Blaustein made his remarks during the debate which resulted in the adoption by the NCRAC of the plan for a redivision of responsibilities among Jewish groups and their community relations activities.

It is this plan which resulted in the strong protest by the AJC and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Following are the excerpts:

From the beginning there have been gross exaggerations about the shortcomings in the community relations work of the Jewish agencies . . . For the record, I just want to mention the charge of "duplication" which on the surface, at least, and in the popular view, is supposed to be one of the primary reasons why the MacIver study was made and why this meeting is taking place.

Could anything be less responsible and less candid than the continued agitation over this "duplication" issue, when no one —not even Dr. MacIver—has furnished any real facts about it?

And "confusion" in the operations of the Jewish agencies, which still remains a popular allegation, though very few facts have been forthcoming about this, either.

All this agitation about our shortcomings, so much of it without any real foundation or irresponsibly exaggerated, has obscured the very real accomplishments of the community relations agencies in reaching agreements on policy and common action—to a steadily increasing degree. When some of these accomplishments have been mentioned, they have been more or less brushed aside as of minor importance.

Nor do we have the right as responsible people to ignore another important fact—that the individual agencies themselves have also been finding it possible to agree on policy and common action outside the NCRAC.

We have also facilitated the prominent participation of Jewish religious bodies in community relations problems when this was desirable from a public relations viewpoint. For example: in combatting with us the dangers inherent in the Communist-inspired "Stockholm Peace Petition;" and more recently in the issuing of the "Three Faith Statement" which

UJA to Seek Cash In 100-Day Drive

JERUSALEM—The United Jewish Appeal in the next 100 days will seek to raise a minimum of $35,000,000 in cash—$25,000,000 of this amount by Oct. 15—to help counteract Israel's acute economic and financial plight, it was announced this week by Jack D. Weiler of New York following discussions with Prime Minister David Ben Gurion.

Weiler reported that his talks with Ben Gurion and with other leading officials of both the Israel Government and the Jewish Agency had led him to accept an invitation from UJA general chairman Edward M. M. Warburg to serve as chairman of the UJA's 1952 national cash campaign, and that he would return immediately to the United States to launch the 100-day drive.

He announced that the UJA will seek to raise the crucial $35,000,000 cash fund without delay and that the UJA will hold a national conference in Washington, D. C., on Oct. 18 and 19 to assess Israel's critical needs and map plans to meet them through the UJA.

He emphasized that both he and all other officers of the UJA would channel all their energies into the effort to marshall $25,000,000 in checks for presentation to the UJA at the conference.

Max Alperin to Direct BV UJA Drive

Max Alperin, United Jewish Appeal treasurer for a number of years, was elected chairman of the Blackstone Valley United Jewish Appeal for 1952 at a recent meeting of the Blackstone Valley Jewish Council. Alperin succeeds Harry Schwartz.

In accepting the chairmanship, Alperin stated his aims and purposes for the 1952 campaign. He stressed the necessity for "a successful campaign in order to carry on the work in Israel and overseas and to meet the needs of our national and local causes. In 1952, Israel is fighting its war of independence which is as important as the war of liberation in 1948. The resettlement, rehabilitation and reconstruction program must continue with even greater effort on our part. We saved their lives, we must help them build their future. Through our concentrated efforts in the past, we have saved many, let us expend every effort to save them all."

Mr. Alperin continued "I am appealing to everyone to help in the great task that still lies ahead of us. We may look back with pride on our accomplishments of the past, but with renewed effort, we will show even greater gains in 1952. We must complete the liquidation of the remaining DP problem in Europe and the Moslem countries. We have to bring these remaining DPs to Israel, where they can live in dignity and decency. This program will need the support of all Jews of the Blackstone Valley. There is still a great deal to be done in transporting these unfortunates, bring them to Israel and find homes and jobs for them. It is a major responsibility of the American Jew to assure the success of this rescue work."

Auerbach Witness Jailed for Perjury

BONN—Karl Diekow, a Munich architect, whose testimony was instrumental in the conviction and sentencing of the late Philip Auerbach for embezzling funds of the Bavarian State Restitutions Office, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment for perjury in another case.

The sentence imposed upon Auerbach, who committed suicide after being convicted, was partly due to a charge made by Diekow that Auerbach had attempted to extort money from him. To this Auerbach had replied with a counter-charge of perjury against Diekow.

Dr. J. Klibansky, Auerbach's lawyer, had drawn the attention of the prosecutors in the Auerbach trial that a perjury case was pending against one of the principal prosecution witnesses. However, the prosecutors preferred not to advise the judges about it.

Arabs Foment Chile Anti-Semitism

LONDON—I. Arensburg, Chilean Jewish leader now visiting England, said here he had grave fears about the "vicious Arab population." He said the Arabs had been using time allotted to them on the Chilean radio to foment anti-Jewish feeling and had also disseminated anti-Semitic leaflets.

New Synagogue Member Plan for Young People

HARTFORD—A plan for associate membership in the synagogue for young adults was announced by Rabbi Morris Silverman of Emanuel Synagogue here. Under the plan, single men aged 18-35, may become associate members for $18 a year and couples in the same age group, for $30.

Associate membership includes High Holiday seats, participation in all services and membership in one of the young people's societies.

Rabbi Silverman said the new plan was designed for those not yet financially able to become members.

Israel Protests Syrian Threat of "Second Round"

UNITED NATIONS—Israel protested this week to the United Nations Security Council against threats by Syria to open a second round of war against Israel. A letter from Abba Eban, head of the Israeli delegation at the UN, to the president of the Security Council, which was made public here, contained a sharp protest on two threats against Israel by Colonel Shishakley, military dictator of Syria.

Ambassador Eban's letter drew attention to a speech by Colonel Shishakley on August 15 to a graduating class of Syrian Army officers named after Suleiman el Kurdi, who was killed in the Palestine fighting. Shishakley declared: "We are swearing, and we will not break this oath, that our swords will not be sheathed until our slain comrades will be pacified by the liberation and the cleansing of the land which they loved and which they sanctified and drenched with their blood."

Mr. Eban also asked the Council president to take note of Shishakley's interview with the Cairo daily, El Ehram, of August 16, in which was said "there is no room in the Middle East for two peoples —the Arab people and the Jewish people. Either the Arab people will be thrown into the Arabian Desert or into the sea," the Syrian leader asserted, "or the foreign Jews must return to their countries of origin all over the world. There is no other solution to the problem."

The Israeli diplomat reported that Israel had made a strong protest against these statements to the chief of staff of the UN truce organization in Palestine, General William E. Riley. He asked that the text of the protest be circulated to all members of the Security Council.

Report Missing Jews In Russia

LONDON—Of the 3,000,000 Jews who resided in the Soviet Union at the beginning of 1939, there are now only 1,500,000 left, according to the Yugoslav Review of International Affairs. The Belgrade publication said this week that of 100 Soviet Generals who have recently retired, or "died suddenly," 63 were Jews. It asserted that 30 per cent of the Jews in the Soviet Union are in concentration camps.

Pointing out that during the Nazi invasion of Poland many Jews fled to Russia and that there were an additional 2,000,000 Jews in Soviet-annexed Polish territory in the early stages of the war, the Yugoslav organ says that even if the Nazis killed about 1,000,000 Jews during their occupation of Soviet territory, Moscow does not account for about 2,500,000 Jews.

The Yugoslav publication stresses that "not one of these missing Jews has moved to Israel because it was the USSR that raised the greatest difficulties for Jews who wanted to emigrate."

Temples and Synagogues List Holiday Services

Seek To Eliminate Racial Bias

WASHINGTON — Senator Guy M. Gillette, chairman of a Senate Elections Subcommittee, said this week that legislation is being prepared which would help to eliminate from election campaigns material defaming racial and religious minorities. The Senator explained that, while the Subcommittee would not recommend any measure curbing free speech, it hoped to fix the responsibility for anti-Semitic and other biased propaganda sent out on behalf of various candidates without their consent. The Senator said he knew of a number of instances in which candidates claimed they knew nothing of scurrilous matter circulated in their behalf by professional hatemongers.

Urge Action To Exempt Women

LONDON—Inclusion of a provision in the International Covenant on Human Rights, currently being drafted by UN experts, exempting women from "any service of a military character on grounds of conscience" is to be recommended by the European executive of Agudas Israel, it was reported this week. The matter, according to Agudah leaders, has been discussed with Israeli Rabbis. Agudah representatives are said to have discussed the proposal with representatives of the Human Rights Division of the United Nations.

Australian Jews Protest Migration

SYDNEY, Australia — Alarmed at the increased immigration of Germans to this country which brings many Nazis into Australia despite the official screening, the Executive Council of Australian Jewry this week sent a protest to the Australian Government and requested an audience for Jewish leaders with members of the Cabinet on this subject. The Council also advised its affiliated bodies to organize protest meetings against the immigration agreement between Australia and Germany. The Jewish community is deeply shocked by the agreement signed recently in Bonn by Australian Immigration Minister Harold Holt which provides for the admission of 10,000 German families next year and an even larger number for each of the following four years, beside the 12,000 who arrived here recently.

Trade Deficit Mounts In Israel

TEL AVIV—A report by the Government Statistics Office this week disclosed that the first months of 1952 showed a trade deficit of thirty-four per cent as compared with the parallel period of 1951. Imports for the first five months in 1952 totalled 52,600,000 pounds, an increase of some 10,000,000 pounds over the corresponding period of 1951, while exports declined from 10,300,000 pounds to 9,500,000.

UN Acts On Plea Of Nazi Victims

TEL AVIV—UN Secretary General Trygve Lie has officially informed the Israel Government of all cases of victims of Nazi "scientific" experiments who have requested compensation from the German Government for their sufferings, it was announced here. The list has been turned over to the West German Government by the UN.

Soviet Pays In Foreign Currency

TEL AVIV—The Soviet Government has agreed to pay in foreign currency for citrus fruits imported from Israel, it was reported here this week by the Israeli delegation which went to Moscow to negotiate an agreement for the sale of citrus fruits. Previously, Soviet authorities had suggested an exchange of wheat for citrus fruits. Israel, however, rejected such an arrangement because the prices quoted by Moscow for wheat were higher than world market prices. The Soviet authorities agreed to buy 400,000 cases of Israeli oranges.

Mrs. Abedon Has Guest

Mrs. Samuel Abedon of 27 Top Street has as her guest her brother, Julius Brenner of Detroit, Mich.

Dworman-Gilden

Miss Beatrice Gilden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Gilden of Ruggles Street, became the bride of Irving Dworman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dworman of Tyndall Avenue, on Aug. 24 in the ballroom of the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Rabbi George B. Schwartz officiated at the candlelight ceremony, which was followed by a reception and dinner.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a gown of imported Swiss organdie. Her fingertip veil of French illusion fell from a matching half-hat embroidered with pearls. She carried a prayer book marked with a white orchid and stephanotis streamers.

The maid of honor, Miss Annette Robinson, cousin of the bride, wore a yellow nylon net ballerina gown and carried a matching colonial bouquet. Bridesmaids were Miss Adele Gilden, Mrs. Morton Israel and Miss Miriam Kaze, both of Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. Leo Orleck. Junior bridesmaids were Miss Arlene Pierce and Miss Barbara Wolowitz of Brooklyn, N. Y. The attendants' ballerina gowns were pink, yellow and blue. They carried matching colonial bouquets.

Flower girl was Beverly Parness of Brooklyn. She wore a pink organdie dress with matching hair garland and miniature colonial bouquet.

Archie Dworman was his brother's best man. Ushers were Alvin Gilden, brother of the bride, Irving Kaze of Jersey City, N. J., Norman Gilden and Bernard Pierce.

The mother of the bride was gowned in blue crepe and lace. The groom's mother wore a dusty rose taffeta gown. Both wore orchids.

After a wedding trip to Lake George, the couple will reside at 370 Thayer Street.

Levin-Krieger

In a double-ring candlelight ceremony, Miss Shirley Krieger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Krieger of 151 Camp Street, became the bride of Irwin Sheldon Levin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Levin of 221 Orms Street, on Sept. 7 in the Crystal Ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel.

Guests were present from Florida, New York, Springfield, Mass., New Hampshire and Providence.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a white satin gown trimmed with lace. Her fingertip veil fell from a cap of seed pearls and she carried a prayer book marked with a white orchid and stephanotis streamers.

Mrs. Barbara Kortick, sister of the groom, was matron of honor. She wore a blue gown with matching crown. Miss Doris Krieger, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. Her gown was shrimp-colored with a crown to match.

Flower girls, in matching gowns and hats of blue, were Donna Gittleman and Cynthia Freedman.

Best man was Douglas Kortick, brother-in-law of the groom. Six ushers and two junior ushers were in attendance.

The bride's mother was attired in a grape-colored gown, and the mother of the groom was in navy blue. Both wore orchids.

After a wedding trip to New York, Niagara Falls and the Adirondacks, the couple will reside on Nancy Street, Pawtucket.

Weinbergs' Second Son

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weinberg of Byfield Street announce the birth of a second son, Marc S., on Sept. 1. Mrs. Weinberg is the former Lillian Shechtman.

Gratt-Rifkin

Miss Sylvia Rifkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Rifkin of Freeman Parkway, became the bride of Herbert Edward Gratt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Gratt of Lorimer Avenue, Sunday evening at the Churchill House. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white chantilly lace styled with an off-the-shoulder neckline, a fitted bodice and long sleeves. Her finger-tip veil fell from a juliet cap of lace and seed pearls. She carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. William W. Bander, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Miss Rosilyn Schwartz was maid of honor. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Sandra Gratt, another sister of the bridegroom, and Priscilla E. Bander was flower girl.

Hilton J. Rifkin, a brother of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Simon Rifkin, another brother of the bride; Morton Paige, Julius Leven, David Ladd, Allan Blackman, Bertram Forman, Arnold Schaffer and Bernard Wasserman.

After a motor trip through the Adirondack Mountains and Canada, the couple will reside at 242 Freeman Parkway.

Feted at Tea, Shower

Miss Sylvia Rifkin was feted at a tea given Sept. 6 at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Gratt, 167 Lorimer Avenue, and at a shower given Aug. 27 by Miss Rosilyn Schwartz at her home, 8 Forest Street.

Miss Rifkin was married to Herbert E. Gratt Sunday at Churchill House.

Norman-Weinbaum

In a double-ring ceremony at the Churchill House Monday evening, Sept. 1, Miss Edith Weinbaum, daughter of Mrs. Anna Weinbaum of Duncan Avenue, became the bride of Seymour Norman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norman of Chalkstone Avenue. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen performed the candlelight ceremony. A reception and dinner followed.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and grandfather, wore a gown of ivory satin embroidered with seed pearl clusters. Her fingertip veil fell from a lace cap; and she carried a white prayer book topped with a white orchid and stephanotis streamers.

Miss Shirley Norman, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Sheldon Weinbaum, brother of the bride, was best man.

After a wedding trip to Canada, the couple will reside in Providence.

Pressers' Second Child

Mr. and Mrs. J. Joslyn Presser of Mayfair Road, Gaspee Plateau, announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Anne Susan, on Sept. 10. Mrs. Presser is the former Miss Betty Goldin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldin of New York Avenue.

Halpern Bar Mitzvah

Robert Joseph Halpern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Halpern of 82 Gaskill Street, Woonsocket, became Bar Mitzvah September 6 in a candlelight ceremony at B'nai Israel Synagogue, Woonsocket. A reception followed in the vestry for 300 guests.

Beverly Halpern wheeled in her brother's cake. Another sister, Marjorie, was candle-bearer. Robert Earl Miller, a cousin, was talis bearer. Mr. Harris Bergel, the boy's grandfather, adorned him with the talis.

Also participating in the ceremony were Mrs. Ethel Halpern, grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. S. Riddell, Mr. and Mrs. Israel Goldstein of Franklin, Mass., Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller of East Greenwich, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Steiner, Miss Gertrude Halpern, Larry Goldstein, Mrs. Anna Bergel, Mrs. Arthur Bergel, Mr. and Mrs. Barnett Salmonson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Halpern of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Max Barum, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Mattlin and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Shoham.

Mr. and Mrs. Halpern gave a dinner-dance for their son in the evening. Two hundred fifty guests were present from Boston, Fall River, Hartford and Providence.

Franks Have Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Frank of Cleveland, Ohio, formerly of Providence, announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Nancy Lynn, on Sept. 8. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Frank and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Kramer. Maternal great-grandmother is Mrs. Jennie Snell.

Rosh Hashanah--New Year

With the notes of a musical instrument out of the dim past echoing through the synagogues, and with the traditional greeting on their lips "May you be inscribed for a good year," the Jewish people will welcome New Year's Day of the year 5713.

It is observed not with merrymaking but with solemn religious services. Jews crowd into the synagogues and, in the time-honored Rosh Hashanah prayers, acknowledge that their lives are lived in the sight of God and plead for the courage to overcome selfishness and let Him rule their hearts. Beseeching Him to enter as well into the hearts of all men and to teach His truth to the nations, they pray for an end to fear and hatred and for the speedy birth of a world of brotherliness under God.

The ram's horn or "shofar," a wind instrument of ancient times, is sounded from the pulpit during the Rosh Hashanah services. Its shrill and pulsing note deepens the solemnity of the occasion and recalls the shofar's use in early Bible days.

According to tradition, the year that is beginning will be the 5713th anniversary of the world. The Jewish calendar counts time from what was in olden times thought to be the date of the world's creation.

Rosh Hashanah does not stand alone but is the beginning of a period of soul-searching and prayer known as the Ten Days of Penitence. These ten days will come to a close with the fast of Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement.

Broadway Tales

By BEN FEINGOLD

GOERING TOLD SPERBER Isn't it the truth? A good lawyer knows the law—but a better lawyer knows the judge! . . . His many friends shocked at the sudden passing of Dave Danziger, "The-Poultry King of Brooklyn," who succumbed to a heart attack at 70. Dave, a kind-hearted man who was active in Jewish affairs, will be sorely missed by his legion of friends . . . Gregory Ratoff, directing the movie "Taxi," being filmed in New York, is constantly doubled up with laughter listening to the jokes of three Jewish comedians of "Guys and Dolls," Jack Diamond, Stubby Kaye and B. S. Pulley, who have joined the film cast . . . Willie Jackson, the old-time Jewish mittster, who kayoed Johnny Dundee in one heat, currently having a tough bout with arthritis . . . Captain Harry Sperber, the Nuremberg interpreter, is such a talented and interesting talker that Milton Berle has dubbed him "The Babe Ruth of the Speakers." Harry, incidentally, was the last person to see "Fatso" Goering alive before the bemedalled louse committed suicide. Sperber asked him why he took such an active part following Hitler in his killing of 6,000,000 innocent Jews and 2,000,000 innocent Christians. The puffed-up punk replied—"Life is like a horse race. I picked the wrong horse—and now I've got to pay for it."

Sam Himmell, in his scintillating "Broadway Brevities" column: "Television helps sell a lot of stuff, but 'long commercials' bore listeners" . . . In Brooklyn, a schoolboy explained to his mother that he can study and watch TV at the same time. "I study during the commercials" said the boy . . . Milton Levin, the well-known Newark barrister, who has put in so much time for the JCRS, is proud of a new song written by his wife, Ethel, which promises to be a huge success. It's called—"You're My Destiny" . . . Movie star Burgess Meredith a recent visitor to the Israel Exposition in New York.

"One Man's Opinion"

BY BERYL SEGAL

Poetry At Midnight

"What is Selichos?", asks the youngster in front of me in the class room, and I hesitate for a while to give him the ready answer, as the teacher is expected to do.

Oh, I could easily explain to him that Selich in Hebrew means forgiveness. I could go on and add that seven nights before Rosh Hashanah, Jews gather in the synagogues to pray and to prepare their hearts for the holy days of the New Year. Oh, I could stand there in front of my pupils and speak wisely and scholarly. I have a ready answer, all right, to the query "What is Selichos?"

But is that enough? Is that all the Selichos nights were to me when I was a lad the same age as my pupils are now, walking by my father's side in the chill autumn night to say the Selichos in Shul?

Better, perhaps, that I bring up from the wells of memory one such night, when I was a youngster in the little town on the Ukraine, where I was born and brought up. Better, perhaps, that I tell my class of such a Selichos night, than to give them the wise, the scholarly, the ready answer.

Was I six years old, or was it seven, on the year when for the first time I woke up to the call of the Shamos, knocking at our door in the stillness of the night, chanting:

"Wake up, wake up, to Selichos!"

On that night, before going to bed, I vowed that I will banish all sleep from my eyes, and stay awake, until the Shamos calls. But no sooner did my head touch the pillow, than I was enveloped in a deep, sound slumber that comes only to the young and the innocent. But so determined was I to go to Selichos, that I woke up at the first knock on the door, and after the third knock I was out of bed, wide awake, dressing hurriedly by the bluish light coming in through the window.

Oh, I wanted to dress ahead of my older brother, who has been going to Selichos these past two years. How he laughed at me, saying that I will surely oversleep, and be left behind. So sure was he that he was willing to wager on it. Now we are both dressing feverishly, racing each other in silence, dashing for the door, where we find father already waiting for us.

We tip-toe out of the house, closing the door softly, so as not to awake the little ones and the sisters who remain in their beds. Briskly we pace the cobble stone pavements, with the starry skies above us, and the dark silent houses around us. In the distance the Shamos is still ticking with his staff on the doors of houses, and his chant rings out in the chill night.

"Wake up, wake up, to Selichos!"

Doors open and out of their darkness emerge fathers and sons, all hurrying in the direction of the Avenue of the Shul. Dark, silent figures, shuffling across cobblestone pavements, in the middle of a chill autumn night, going to Selichos.

My eyes were blinded by a sudden dazzle of light, as we turned out of a narrow alley into the little square where four houses of worship and study stood in a row, their many windows ablaze with the light of lamp and candle. Patterns of light and shadow fell on the grassy square, on the trees, and on the river flowing nearby, its rippling waves washing the foundations of the Big Shul.

The old Big Shul, with the long multi-colored windows, with the tall slanting roof, standing hard by the banks of the river, is now brilliant with light, like a castle in a fairy tale.

The Old Big Shul, so drab and grey in daylight, so fearful and lonesome in darkness, was now alive and warm and comforting when we entered the vestibule from the chill outside. The candelabra of shining brass, hanging from the broad beams way up at the roof, are all lit, every one of them.

And candles are lit in every wall, and all around the reader's desk in the center of the Shul, and in front of the Holy Ark. Thick, tall wax candles stand seven in a row on the Cantor's lectern. The Holy Ark in the East Wall, and the reader's desk in the center, and the cantor's lectern in between, are bedecked in white, silk garments, shimmering in the flaming candle light.

The old Big Shul, fragrant with the odor of burning wax candles, is now humming with chanting and supplication. No time is wasted. As soon as a worshipper enters, he opens the Book of Psalms and chants to himself, before the Selichos begin.

And a mournful chanting floats down from the women's gallery above. The women's reader recites the tearful Techinos before Selichos, in Yiddish, and those who listen huddled around the reader sigh and cry out loud. The women's sighs and plaintive outcries rise up to the heavy beams under the roof, now deep in shadows, and then fall down upon the heads of the men seated below.

The Shamos returns from his night walk, after the last knock on the last door, calling the least as well as the mighty to the Service of the Creator. He steps up to the desk in the center of the Shul, and taps three times with the large wooden "hand," a call to silence.

The chanting of the Psalms ceases. The plaintive murmur in the women's gallery is silenced, and the Selichos begin. My father, the Chazan, gives out the first verse, and the entire Shul, men, women, and children, fall into the rhythm and the mood of the Selichos chant.

What do they want, these people standing with bowed heads in the Big Shul? What words, what lamentations are they chanting out of the thin, worn, paper covered little book of Selichos, held in their trembling hands?

In humility they stand before their Maker on the nights before the approach of a New Year, and they say:

"You, our Lord, are just, and we, we come shame-faced before Thee . . . Not with great merits do we come before You. Our deeds are small and we are worthless . . . Poor and humble we knock on your doors, begging mercy . . . Do not turn us away empty handed from before You . . . Listen, Oh Lord, to our supplications . . ."

And in another Selicho, they raise their voices hopefully, and they chant:

"As a father is merciful to his children, so will You have mercy on us, Your children . . ."

"If our sins are scarlet, do cleanse them as white as snow . . . If our transgressions are red, will You not make them as pure as linen . . ."

"Do it for the sake of our Fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob . . . Do it for the sake of our martyrs . . . if not for our own sake . . ."

The flames of the wax candles sway lightly, and some of the candles bend their heads forward in the heat, and the chants grow more plaintive as my father raises his voice to lead the Shul, crying:

"Hear our voice, God our God, have mercy upon us, and accept our prayers . . .

"Return us, oh God, bring us back unto You, and renew our days as of old . . .

"Do not forsake us when we grow old; when our strength fails us, do not abandon us . . ."

Day breaks over the little town. Daylight comes in ever so pale through the long windows of the Big Shul. Voices are weaker now, and the cries of the women up in the gallery are now subdued, as they complain:

"Behold, all the peoples of the earth live in peace and security, but we are oppressed, and driven, and humiliated . . .

"We turn to the right and there is no help. To the left—and there is no succor . . . We have no one but You to turn to for help, our God in heaven . . ."

Thus we said Selichos in our little town on the Ukraine. Men, women, and children, rising to the call of the Shamos in the middle of the night, going to Shul to read verses written by unknown poets, set to music transcribed in tears.

In the middle of the night we gathered to pray, to lament, to pour out our hearts, and to be comforted. With the break of day we returned home unburdened, purified, feeling so tired, but, oh, so good and light of heart.

This, my pupils, was the Selichos of the nights when I was your age, and even younger.

Broadway Wins 2 As Playoffs Start

PLAYOFF RESULTS

Broadway Auto 15, Waldorf Tuxedo 2
Technoprint 13, M & F Insurance 8
Broadway Auto 12, Technoprint 9
Waldorf Tuxedo 9, M & F 4

The Cinderella team of the playoffs, Broadway Auto, fought its way into the finals by taking both its games in this double loss elimination series.

Broadway drubbed the heavily favored Waldorf club 15-2 in the first game of the day. Home runs by Irv Kaplan, Bobby Goldis and Jack Steiner paced the attack on Billy DelVecchio and Abe Lobel. Every man on the Automen's club slugged a merry tune. Steiner threw up his usual "sponge cake" and had Waldorf's hitters talking to themselves. Joyce, with a home run, was the losers' only man to hit the ball well.

Technoprint staged the most stupendous comeback the league has ever seen in its game with M & F Insurance. Trailing 8-0 and having touched Nate Ludman for only one hit in five innings, the printers rallied in the sixth for 13 runs and the ball game. Ludman suddenly lost control, walking eight men and yielding three hits before going out in favor of Levin. Another walk kept the rally going and then Greg Karembelas hit a grand slam homer. Karembelas and Ralph Winn both stole home during the hectic frame.

Broadway won its second game of the day as Jack Steiner continued his iron man stunt of pitching complete double headers. The Automen licked Technoprint 12-9 as Steiner got his team off to a good start with a 3-run homer in the first inning. Greg Karembelas put Technoprint temporarily in the lead by hammering a tremendous homer with the bases loaded—his second of the day—but Stan Weintraub belted a 3-run homer for Broadway.

Bunts and errors lengthened Broadway's lead to 12-6, and a seventh inning rally of three runs by Technoprint fell far short. Ed Weintraub, Paul Paris and Ross helped pace the victors, while Karembelas was the whole show for the losers.

Waldorf eliminated M & F Insurance from the playoffs by taking a 9-4 win. Rodman with 3-for-4, including a homer, paced the winners. Lieberman, Herb Weintraub and Stan Lobel also hit well. Spungin with 3 hits was the only loser to reach Abe Lobel, who pitched a steady game.

The playoffs will be continued on Sunday, Sept. 28 with Waldorf meeting Technoprint and the winner tackling Cranston Jewish Center. The games will be played at Hopkins Park, starting at 9:30 A. M.

JWV Auxiliary Makes Fall Plans

The first fall meeting of the Fineman-Trinkle Auxiliary 439, Jewish War Veterans, was held Monday evening at Temple Emanuel. Irma Silverman, president, presided.

Plans for a Cabaret Night, to be held in the near future, were presented by Irene Price, senior vice-president. Irvina Ross, chairman of the annual rummage sale, reported that the sale will be held the week of Oct. 6.

Auxiliaries Plan Joint Affair

A special meeting of presidents and past presidents of the five Jewish War Veterans auxiliaries of Providence was held Sept. 9 at the home of Shirley Resnick, 31 Radcliffe Avenue. Among those present were Barsye Nelson, president, Auxiliary 23; Shirley Resnick, president, and Edith Kilberg, past president, Sackin - Shocket Auxiliary 533; Barbara Lappin, president, and Emma Simon, past president, Gerald Clamon Auxiliary; Dorothy Massover, president, and Dorothy Forman, Lt. Leonard Bloom Auxiliary, and Irma Silverman, president, Fineman-Trinkel Auxiliary 439.

The group made plans to hold a joint bingo party at the Bristol Soldiers Home in November with all auxiliaries participating.

Pardon My Glove

By CHARLES W. PINE

ACCORDING to many of the boxing scribes covering the champion's training camp, neither Jersey Joe Walcott nor his manager, Felix Bocchicchio, seems to be overly concerned about the possibility of Rocky Marciano winning the world's heavyweight title next Tuesday evening.

"I regard it as an easy fight," Bocchicchio is quoted as saying. There's some merit in his view—when you consider that the closest Felix will come to Rocky's fists will be when he inspects their taping before the fight.

Walcott, who will find himself alone in the ring with Marciano for whole three-minute stretches and only the referee for company, doesn't dismiss the Brockton blockbuster quite as lightly.

"Marciano's got an odd style," admits ancient Jersey Joe. "He throws punches from every angle. But he definitely isn't a second Dempsey."

Inasmuch as Walcott is suspected of being old enough to have known the "original" Jack (The Nonpareil) Dempsey—whose last fight was only as recently as 1895—mere striplings like us can't debate editions of Dempsey—except to point out that even a "third or fourth" version would be sufficient to dethrone Walcott.

There are, of course, two major reasons why Messers Walcott and Bocchicchio act so casual these days when the menacing Marciano is mentioned.

The first is that Rocky has been a strong favorite (9-5, or better) in the betting ever since the match was made. Since it usually follows that the more even the odds are, the larger the attendance is, Walcott and Company have seized upon the nonchalant approach in the hope of bringing the odds down by causing some doubt in the minds of the worthy Broadway gentlemen who specialize in setting same.

The second reason is that, by acting almost cocky about the outcome, Walcott and staff hope to lessen Marciano's confidence in himself. Here, I'm convinced, they will never succeed.

Without being the least bit arrogant, Rocky is firmly confident. He has every right to be. He knows he KO-ed Rex Layne—who whipped Walcott. He knows he KO-ed Joe Louis—who KO-ed Walcott. He knows he can hit harder than Jersey Joe can—and with either hand. He knows that Walcott barely lasted the last time out against the faltering Ezzard Charles.

And finally, Rocky knows that, once they're in the ring together, Walcott may be able to run for several rounds—but he won't be able to hide!

That's why the pride of New England knows that, sometime around 10:30 P. M. next Tuesday, he'll be trying on the world's heavyweight crown for size. We predict that, on Rocky, it'll look good!

IT MAY BE that Marciano's knockout victory over Walcott next Tuesday will cause Ralph Zannelli, the Rhode Island version of "Ol' Man River," to give some serious thought to retiring himself.

Up to now, the "Z" undoubtedly has used people like Walcott to justify his own continuance as an active (?) performer. "After all," he probably muses, "I'm still a few years under the 40 mark; a callow youth compared to the venerable Walcott. And he's a champion still fighting for pots of gold. Why, in comparison, the best years of my life are before me. Besides, in another decade or two, I'll be eligible for an old-age pension."

That Zannelli can continue participating in "turkies" for another decade or two, we don't question. But we do question if boxing can live so long.

A couple more fights like last week's Bratton-Zannelli waltz—and boxing will be attending its own wake. Rhode Island fight fans have groaned through a number of similar Zannelli "stinkers" in recent years. But every time they say "Never again!" the Ripper somehow comes up with an impressive performance. The trouble is, of course, that the partisan Zannelli supporters—and they are still legion—refuse to admit that such performances are dismally few and far between.

SYD COHEN:

The Big Show

Next Tuesday evening will occur the event that is always the greatest, most glamorous show that the sport of Boxing can offer—a match for the heavyweight championship of the world.

To a public that eagerly follows the preparations and buildup of the Big Fight—regardless of geographical section, regardless of the fistic appeal of the battlers—the game of Boxing affords little chance to hear or see what goes on in the squared ring. If you are persistent, and happen to have your radio on next Tuesday from 10 P. M. until the fight runs its course, then in due time you undoubtedly will hear some announcer break in with a report of who won and in what round. If not that lucky, you will certainly get the result by listening to the 11 P. M. news reports.

That is your only recourse and mine, save for an expensive trip to Philadelphia to see the fight in person, or to visit a "closed-circuit" theater to watch it on TV.

The sports public is disappointed, of course, that it cannot see and hear the fight on radio or TV; yet the restriction was accepted without much show of indignation or temper. We are accustomed, so it seems, to the shenanigans of the game of Boxing.

Meanwhile, Baseball's two pennant races near their conclusion, and the date and details for the playing of the 1952 World Series—biggest show of the national pastime—have been arranged. The baseball public is not yet sure which teams will compete in the World Series. But we do know that, regardless of opponents, cities and states involved, and seating capacity and anticipated "take," the World Series will be broadcast and televised to all parts of the nation.

Baseball has been called many things—not all of them good—but it never has even considered a blackout of its Big Show. Whatever your opinion of baseball and its operators, you must admit that profit and loss, in terms of dollars and cents, never are, never have been considered when the World Series comes along. The public gets it free.

Boxing deliberately withholds its main event from about 100 million radio and/or TV listeners for the dubious possibility of enticing a few thousand more cash fans through the turnstiles. Baseball looks annually at the World Series that conceivably can, and frequently does, result in not a cent of profit to its owners—and still offers it free to the sports world.

After expenses, the take of next Tuesday's fight can be split up at once between fighters and promoters. Maybe baseball's owners wish they could do it that way, but the simple truth is that they cannot. The owners get NOT A CENT from the proceeds of any of the FIRST FOUR GAMES!

These cash receipts are split two major ways—so much for the players' pool, and so much for the Commissioner's office, to help finance its many, year-round activities.

And don't forget, the receipts of the first four games do not go to the two league champions alone. The second, third and fourth place teams in each league share in the proceeds, even though they did not get into the classic.

And the owners? The greedy, heartless, money-grabbing and penny-pinching owners about whose nefarious activities you hear so much? They collect only on the games that follow the fourth. There can only be three of these games; most frequently there are less. Sometimes, as in 1914, 1927, 1928, 1932, 1938, 1939, 1950—there isn't even one profit game.

It is an historic fact that the largest World Series crowds are seen at the opening games, not the last ones. Yet, baseball owners, whose expenses are fantastically high compared to those of the boxing promoters, and who actually may depend on World Series receipts to spell the difference between profit and loss for the long season—yet, these baseball owners permit the Series to be broadcast and telecast FREE!

No, we won't hear or see the heavyweight championship fight next Tuesday, and nothing will be done about it; although the more vindictive of us will be grimly delighted if the crowd at Philadelphia next week is small and the promoters lose money, because of the loss of TV and radio revenue.

Let baseball threaten to blackout the World Series, however, and what a roar would be heard around the nation! Forget the fans' squawking, if you will, and that would be considerable. Just think of the official protests, the Congressional investigations, the charges of violation of the public's Constitutional rights, etc. Why, the anguished voices would rise with a roar like the mushrooming of an atomic cloud!

"We" wouldn't let Baseball get away with it, that's what we wouldn't, if it didn't permit the World Series to be aired!

What's that? A voice from the rear defending Boxing on the grounds that it has a right to try to make as much profit as it can on a fight? Sure! No argument there. In fact, the Constitution permits it, and that is why it is being done next Tuesday.

Furthermore, the same privilege is given to all sports—yet Baseball turns down that privilege. The ball fans have at least that assurance that they are not being played for "suckers".

Baseball goes a step further—in the matter of prices. What did you pay for a grandstand seat in Fenway Park before the war? $1.25, right? And a reserved seat? $1.80. And what do you pay for those same seats now, more than ten years later—during the regular season, of course—when prices everywhere have skyrocketed in every field? It's still $1.25 and $1.80, isn't it? Despite rising costs for maintenance of ball fields, higher prices of baseball equipment, higher salaries, higher everything.

Now check your sports pages for the price range of next week's fight, and compare that with next month's World Series. There's something like a $40 top for the fight, isn't there? And Baseball? Nearer to ten bucks for the best seat in the park. Reserved seats—the same seats as sold during the season—are marked up only to six dollars. And thousands of bleacher seats are sold for a buck, with standing room at $1.25, regardless of what ball park the Series is played in—regardless, let it be understood, of its seating capacity.

Can Boxing match those figures?

Whether you may be inclined to defend Boxing for its policy in restricting next week's fight, you will admit one thing. It is a stupid public relations job. You don't build up interest and fans—future cash customers—by hiding the Big Show from them. Whatever reasons the fight financiers can offer, the fans are still getting the dirty end of the deal.

And that radio and TV money would come in mighty handy in the event of a disappointing crowd.

Engaged

MISS TOBA ULIAN

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Ulian of Malden, Mass. announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Toba Ulian, to Marvin David Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Feldman of Somerset Street.

The wedding is planned for March 8, 1953.

Center Men Hear Cote at Supper

The Men's Association of the Jewish Community Center opened its season last Wednesday with a supper-meeting at the Center. More than 60 members attended. Julius C. Michaelson, president, presided, and Armand H. Cote, Secretary of State of Rhode Island, was guest speaker. Cote explained the setup and operation of the Department of State.

The Association discussed the plans for the health club which it is hoped will be constructed soon as an addition to present Center facilities.

The supper was arranged and prepared by Leo Borenstein and Stanley Myerson.

JWV to Undertake VA Blood Drive

The State Department of R. I., Jewish War Veterans, has undertaken a drive to secure blood vitally needed for patients at the Davis Park Veterans Hospital, according to Irving Ross, JWV hospital co-ordinator. The drive will start on Sunday, Oct. 26 at 11:30 A. M.

Urging the public to offer blood "in this all-important campaign on behalf of our hospitalized veterans," Ross said the blood program will continue on a monthly basis. Persons interested may call Ross at JA 1-8908 or his assistant, Philip Simon, DE 1-9667, weekday evenings after 7 o'clock.

Mass Arrests Of Jews Reported

LONDON—A large number of Jews have been arrested in several Rumanian cities, including Bucharest, Brasov, Sluj and Galatz in renewed mass arrests, according to unconfirmed reports reaching here. They were removed from their homes to unknown destinations, the reports stated. The same reports said that Jews were also seized this week in Czechoslovakia and Hungary. The majority of them were employed in government offices, the information received here indicated.

Holiday Services At the Home

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

As 5713 approaches, we extend to our many friends the traditional greeting of the season:

"May you be inscribed for a good year!"

Ready to Usher In High Holy Days

Happy New Year

The residents of the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Board of Trustees, and the staff are sending greetings and good wishes to its membership, its friends, and the Jewry of Rhode Island. The Home on Hillside Avenue is observing its 21st Rosh Hashanah and at the start of each year we pause briefly to express our gratitude and to dedicate ourselves anew to the task of caring for the physical and spiritual needs of the aged of our state.

In the year ahead the demand for our services will increase. Already we have twenty-six applicants on our waiting list whose admission ws must regretfully defer because of lack of space. I am glad to say, however, that we are not standing idly by but that we have taken steps to relieve the situation by a Building Program which should provide fifty to sixty additional beds. While we are still in the planning stage, we hope that at the beginning of next year the plans shall be completed and the work on the new wing be started.

The Home appreciates the support and loyalty of its membership and friends and next year we shall count on your interest and support to an even greater measure. We, the officers of the Home, the Board of Directors, and the staff pledge ourselves to the task of providing the best high-standard type of care to make the future of our aged friends and parents a secure and happy one.

With a sincere L'shanah Tovah Tikasevu,

JACOB I. FELDER
President

Perpetual Memorial Tablets

At this time of the year our thoughts turn to our departed dear ones, and to give deeper meaning to precious remembrance, we perform deeds of kindness and help. The Jewish Home for the Aged of Rhode Island offers through its Memorial Fund opportunity to perpetuate the memory of loved ones through the purchase of a bronze memorial tablet in our Synagogue.

On Yahrzeit dates the Home, through the lips of the aged residents, renders homage to the memory of your loved ones by saying Kaddish and Special Prayers. Also, an individual lamp, attached directly to the tablet, is kept burning from sunset to sunset. Four times a year, during Yiskor Services, the lamps are lighted in commemoration of their death, in accordance with Jewish traditions.

By inscribing the name of loved ones on our Memorial Tablets, you not only perpetuate their memory in a lasting way, but you help to sustain and bring comfort to the aged in our midst. Thus, the memory of your dear ones continues to be a blessing as their life was a benediction.

In Memoriam

The Officers, Trustees, and the residents of the Jewish Home for the Aged of Rhode Island, with a deep sense of personal loss, mourn the death of LEO LOGAN.

During his long years of service as Trustee and member of important committees, and currently Co-Chairman of the Building Planning Committee, he gave the Home his wise counsel and loyal support. Through his genial disposition, his generosity, and willingness to serve, he earned the respect and admiration of his fellow-members of the Board, and the residents, and endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact.

We, the Officers, Trustees, and residents extend to the bereaved family of Leo Logan our heartfelt sympathy. We shall always cherish his memory.

Hadassah Has Fashion Show

A fashion show was the feature of the first meeting of the Providence Chapter of Hadassah Monday afternoon at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel ballroom. Models included Mesdames Robert Rothman, Philip Shore, Edward Bosler, Jacob Temkin, Frank Darman, Robert Klein, Max Bender, Samuel Winslow and Elynore Senercchia, and the Misses Diana Kane and Marcia Samdperil.

Mrs. Samuel Starr was narrator. Fashions were by Betty of Providence. Mrs. Archie Fain, chairman of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee, reported on her recent trip to Israel.

JCC Parents Ass'n Family Day Picnic

The Parents' Association of the Jewish Community Center held a Family Day Picnic Sunday at Camp Centerland. In charge were Mesdames George Katz, Stephen Siner, Harold Braunstein and Leo Glecklen. Matthew Millman, camp director, was in charge of games. The grand prize was won by Mrs. Dora Borenstein.

The group will hold a paid-up membership coffee hour and fashion show Tuesday evening, Oct. 7 at the Center. Mrs. Harold Chase, chairman of the evening, is assisted by Mesdames Harold Braunstein, Leo Glecklen, Elwin Rosenbaum, Hyman Goldstein, Bernard Podrat, Fred Tenenbaum, Hayim Mushnick, Irving Brodsky, Saul Elkins, Isadore Wolf, Nathan Shwartz, Morris Kritzman and Benjamin Lewis, ex-officio. Officers and board members will act as hostesses.

Auxiliary Plans Fall Affairs

The Ladies Auxiliary of Sackin-Shocket Post, JWV, held their first meeting of the season at Beth David Synagogue Sept. 10. Plans were announced for a joint weinie roast with the Post on Sunday evening, Oct. 5 at the George Washington Reservation, with members bringing their own food. Other plans call for blood donor volunteers to meet at the Veterans Hospital, Davis Park, on Oct. 26; and for a visit, together with other state auxiliaries, to the Bristol Soldiers Home, on Nov. 5.

Refreshments were served by the social committee, Shirley Resnick and Rose Chernov.

Blaustein Attacks NCRAC Action

calls on political parties to keep bigotry out of their campaigns, which both the Democratic and Republican parties have endorsed.

Experiences like these are the foundation of the proposals which the AJC and the ADL have jointly presented to this body.

Yes, we believe in joint action, but we know from experience that the only kind of joint action that can be genuine and effective is where it is applied within areas of common agreement, within the spirit of voluntarism.

Two concrete instances of such voluntary cooperation between Jewish organizations are the manner in which by joint action, they have rendered invaluable aid to Israel and have successfully negotiated the Jewish Material claims against Germany.

On the other hand, we know that attempts at compulsory joint action got nowhere.

We claim that it (the Jewish Community relations picture) can be improved, that it is improving, and that we will continue our efforts to improve it—consistent with the principles embodied in the statement we have issued with the ADL.

What we will not do is to accept any remedy worse than the so-called disease.

We regard the majority proposals of the Evaluative Studies Committee as that kind of remedy —worse than the alleged disease— and we find them unacceptable on both conceptual and practical grounds.

In concept they are designed to convert the NCRAC from an advisory body into a centralized authoritative overall agency, to determine policies and control programs, while assuming the role of spokesman for all Jewish people in this country in the community relations field.

But these proposals don't in plain language go all the way in the direction of centralized authority, some people may be inclined to doubt that they are going in that direction at all, and they may insist that the AJ Committee and the ADL, in fact, are objecting to a danger that simply doesn't exist . . . Well, are we seeing ghosts?

Dr. MacIver stated in his Report that for NCRAC to fulfill its mission, it must be less dependent on the will of the national agencies and that it should be made impossible for the national agencies to vote down any decisions affecting them.

It should never be made possible, by the operation of some majority rule procedure, for one set of beliefs to establish itself as the official beliefs of organized American Jewry.

Majority rule, we are being told by proponents of this procedure, is traditionally democratic. It is within the framework of a parliamentary body which makes decisions, backed by authority, to express the will of a people constituting a political unit.

But the NCRAC is not a parliamentary body any more than the Jews of this country are a political entity. The NCRAC is an advisory body. The advisory process works by agreement, voluntary agreement, or it doesn't work at all.

This very meeting today serves as an illustration. If the majority should decide on measures which are basically unacceptable to the minority, will it follow that the results desired by the majority will be achieved? Since NCRAC is not a parliamentary body possessing enforcement powers, but a voluntary assembly of autonomous agencies, the result of such an action could only be to destroy the structure that we have so laboriously built up over the years. Majority rule in an advisory framework can only destroy—it cannot build.

The provision in the Evaluative Studies Committee proposal giving the agencies the so-called "right of dissent" in no way guarantees the autonomy of the agencies. What is of particular importance here is not the right of dissent, but the effectiveness of dissent.

More and more people are beginning to see that what is now being proposed—the reduction of the national agencies into mere service arms of the NCRAC—is incompatible with the rights of Jews to form, support and control organizations that stand for the things they believe in.

What is any Jew, for instance, with common sense and an independent mind likely to think of the following provisions in the Proposals: "Wherever negotiations or representations of a major character are involved, it shall be the responsibility of the NCRAC Executive Committee or an appropriate standing committee to determine, on an ad hoc basis, the individual or individuals who shall conduct such negotiations or representations. This applies to representations before government agencies, officials, or courts, testimony before public bodies and conferences or religious, civic or educational leaders."

That of course is highly impractical and indeed sheer nonsense.

In essence, our joint AJC-ADL proposals aim at facilitating the coordinating purpose of the NCRAC by resolving through voluntary agreement the problems and conflicts that arise in the course of daily operations.

To help translate properly the joint program planning resolution adopted at the NCRAC Plenum last year into practice, the AJ Committee and the ADL now propose that in each of the six major areas cited by Prof. MacIver there be established joint operating committees composed of representatives of those agencies conducting programs in each area . . . The AJC pledges to exert itself to the utmost in order to make these joint operating committees effective instrumentalities of coordination.

This is one of the most decisive meetings for the Jewish community in many a year. We stand here literally at the cross roads. One of these roads would lead us out of the NCRAC. We don't want to leave the NCRAC, and in our opinion it is a tragedy, a totally avoidable tragedy, that there should be even the possibility of our having to do so. We prefer to go on meeting and working with the other agencies, national and local; to continue to make our contribution to the deliberations of the NCRAC.

The proposals we are now submitting are the result of the deepest study on our part . . . They represent the farthest we can go without violating the principles which we consider basic—which, indeed, justify our very existence as an agency. And they are the farthest we can go without betraying an outlook on American Jewish life, and on American life, which has always been of cardinal importance to us, to our members, and to Jews over the country who share that outlook.

By BORIS SMOLAR

DOMESTIC DISCUSSIONS: Now that the Conference of Jewish Material Claims Against Germany is to receive $107,000,000 from the West German Government, a very important problem is developing . . . The problem is: Should a permanent Conference office be established to deal with the affairs connected with the receipt and distribution of this huge sum? . . . Such an office, if established, would have to remain in existence for at least 12 years in view of the fact that the payments of reparations by Germany will probably be extended over that many years . . . A suggestion has been made that instead of establishing a new office, the Conference should turn over whatever business results from the reparations agreement to the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization . . . This organization has been functioning for some time, with offices in Germany, negotiating and collecting compensation for heirless Jewish property . . . The funds collected by this body are divided between the Jewish Agency and the Joint Distribution Committee . . . There is no doubt that the idea of turning over the functions of the Conference to the Jewish Restitution Successor Organization will be warmly welcomed by Dr. Nahum Goldmann and Moses A. Leavitt, two of the most active members of the Conference praesidium . . . However, opposition to this idea is already being voiced by other members of the Conference praesidium . . . They argue that the JRSO is a partnership between two organizations only—the Agency and the JDC—while the Conference is composed of representatives of more than 20 leading Jewish organizations . . . The issue may soon become one of the major issues in American Jewish communal life.

THE UJA-BOND FRONT: The conflict between the United Jewish Appeal and the Israel bond drive is approaching a climax . . . It is now obvious to the Israel Government that Edward M. M. Warburg and Dr. Joseph Schwartz will not agree to remain the driving forces of the UJA for 1953 if the conflict is not settled . . . And 1953 is not far off . . . This is being realized by the Israel Government which now more than ever before is becoming very concerned over the UJA-bond drive rift . . . There is good reason for this increased worry . . . Whether for lack of coordination between the two drives, or for other reasons, the Jewish State will this year receive much less from American Jewry than a year ago . . . The income of the UJA this year will probably be between 10 and 15 per cent less than last year . . . And the sale of Israel bonds this year is thus far very far behind the amount sold last year.

Of course, the Bond leaders still have their Fall campaign ahead, but all indications point to the fact that the sale of bonds will not average the $8,000,000 a month which was averaged last year . . . All this presents a serious problem for the Israel Government . . . And the possibility exists that since this problem cannot be solved in the United States, the Israel Government may invite leaders of the UJA, the bond drive and the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds to come to a conference in Jerusalem.

Originally, the Israel Cabinet hoped that Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett would succeed in solving the problem during his stay in the United States . . . However, it can now be disclosed that Mr. Sharett's efforts to bring together the leaders of the above three groups at a round-table discussion did not materialize . . . Mr. Sharett met with the UJA leaders and also with the leaders of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, and they were agreeable to sit down with the Bond drive

Stamps Honor Israel Heroes

It was in 1776 that the embattled farmers stood their ground at Concord and Lexington, and fired the shots heard round the world.

Echoes of those few volleys have been heard through the years as peoples everywhere fought for the right to govern themselves under national independence, for the right to govern themselves under a government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

In recent years, a new type of minute-man has emerged. It is the Chalutzim (pioneers) of Israel fighting for the independence and sovereignty of the young Jewish state.

And finally, like the colonists of the American Revolution, the Israelis won their battles, and today the Star of David flies over Judea.

Both the United States and Israel have honored their heroes. Their deeds are celebrated in books, songs and legend.

But the most unique way that these heroes have been honored is by stamp issues in their memory.

Lexington Minute-Men on five-cent American stamps had their counterpart in the citizen-soldiers of Haganah who guarded Jewish settlements from marauding Arabs.

And American stamps commemorating Lexington, Valley Forge and Brooklyn are similar to Israel stamps showing scenes of the battles of Degania, Safad, and Yad Mordecai—three settlements which fought dramatically and heroically in Israel's War of Independence.

The Yad Mordecai stamp shows the settlement's destroyed watchtower, the Degania stamp a tank that was stopped there, and the Safad stamp a gravestone with the inscription, "Fell in battle. . . ."

Of special interest is the Yad Mordecai stamp. Yad Mordecai, a kibbutz in the Negev, was named for Mordecai Anilewitz, the hero of the battle of the Warsaw Ghetto. On the seventh day of Passover (April 19, 1943) he led the Jews of the Warsaw Ghetto in their uprising against the Nazis.

In the spirit of Mordecai Anilewitz, the defenders of Yad Mordecai, surrounded and shelled by the Egyptians, held out to the end, when the Israel Army ordered the settlement evacuated.

These are the modern Minute-Men whose deeds are commemorated on the stamps of the nation that they fought so hard to create.

leaders and thrash matters out in his presence . . . However, no round-table talks took place . . . In the meantime, Israel's foreign currency crisis, as well as the debt of the Jewish state, is mounting.

An emergency situation is anticipated in the Fall, when new loan payments fall due . . . The new grant-in-aid of $73,000,000 from the United States is, of course ,a tremendous help, but it will not even go so far as to allow Israel to import raw materials for production . . . Israel's debt at present is 115,000,000 Israel pounds, payable in local currency, and $285,000,000 payable in dollars and other currency . . . The difficulty is that a large part of the $285,000,000 is in short-term loans and credits, some of which fall due soon.

Community People You Wouldn't Miss

by RABBI MORRIS ADLER

Reprinted from Shaarey Zedek (Detroit) Recorder

I am opposed to further fragmentization of Jewish life, through the continued multiplication of small, self - sufficient, sovereign units. Yet I would like to assemble the gentlemen enumerated below, into a single and separate "minyan" and send them off to one of the more remcte places of the earth.

1. The Rusher-into-Print. There is one (and not infrequently more) in every community. He may be layman or a rabbi. He lives under the great compulsion of being among the first to give his view, via the newspaper, on every new question that arises. He issued a statement or preached a sermon on the MacIver Report before he finished reading it. He was the first to express his opinion on the relations between Israel and American Jewry. He trumpeted his feeling about reparations to Jews by Germany before he could possibly have examined the problem. He is in a constant state of fear lest someone else publicly express a point-of-view before he does.

2. The Perennial Office-holder. He is not satisfied unless he is in office. As a matter of fact he serves on a number of boards. It has been years since he has engaged in any real activity in behalf of the organizations with which he is identified, but by the exercise of ingenuity he manages to remain in office.

3. The Vocalist. He carries on a touching love affair with his voice. He considers that meeting a failure which has not had the benefit of his remarks. It is not too often that he has something significant, relevant or original to say, but such a lack has thus far never prevented him from speaking. He is the perennial seconder of nominations, mover of substitute motions, amendment maker, point-of-order caller, point-of-information raiser, zu men darf, zu men darf nit.

4. The Scoffer. He has made a career of ridiculing every new proposal and plan. A congenital "nay-sayer" he still has to approve any suggestion or policy ever presented. He has never taken the time to think through a question and evolve a suggestion of his own. His mission is to throw cold water on the proposals of others, a task he has performed through the years with undiminishing relish and unfailing consistency.

5. The Organization Man. His ultimate loyalty is to the party, institution or movement with which he is affiliated. He banishes from consideration that which does not pertain to his organization. Klal Yisroel, the community, does not exist for him.

6. The Monopolist. Israel is his. Torah is his. Even God belongs exclusively to him. No one else has a share in these . His interpretation is the only authentic one.

Community People You Wouldn't Miss

Everyone who does not agree with him is stigmatized a rebel, a heretic, a usurper and is definitely insincere. He seems to carry a writ of excommunication in his pocket and is ready to serve it at a moment's notice.

7. The Man-Who-Prides-Himself-on-his-Frankness. He begins almost every sentence with the introductory phrase, "I am frank to say . . ." But his frankness seems to dictate only unpleasant reactions, criticism and negations. His frankness somehow never leads him to favor anything, or to express sympathy or approval.

8. The Absentee—Landlord. He likes to rule by remote control. One never sees him at services, in adult classes or at any of the lectures and other cultural events that take place within the community. Nor does he attend the meetings of lesser import. He is however always present at the crucial, policy-making sessions and with Olympian detachment from the daily life of the community, helps shape the decisions which affect the life in which he does not share.

9. The Peace-at-Any-Price Jew. There are significant tensions and legitimate differences of opinion and policy within our community. It is essential that from time to time these be discussed, debated and fought out. Always there is one who pleads for unity, however fragile and synthetic such unity inevitably must be.

10. The Perpetual Amen-Sayer. He has no opinion of his own. It is too much trouble to arrive at one. He consequently says "Amen" to any view till he hears another. His opinion, at any given moment, is that of the last person who spoke to him.

Broadway Tales

SO TRUE: Some of the Broadway crowd were talking the other night about the many famous guests who had appeared at the annual $100-a-plate benefit dinners of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver, Colorado, and the humor generated.

One chap recalled the time a few years ago when Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., spoke a few words in Jewish.

Toastmaster Harry Hershfield elicited guffaws when he quipped —"Y'know, Franklin—just now, you almost bought a kosher delicatessen!"

"SLAPSIE MAXIE" TURNS DEBATER: Right per advice: To stretch your lifeline—reduce your waistline . . . Jackie Kannon, the Detroit comedian, who was such a sensational click at the Latin Quarter, several years ago was a cantor, as is his father . . . General Mohammed Naguib, present strong man at the Egyptian helm, was severely wounded three times in the war against Israel . . . Smart-alecky columnists have dubbed the Billy Ross-Eleanor Holm mess—"The War of the Roses" . . . Sunday night "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom, arguing with a slick atheist at a street corner meeting at Broadway and 47th, was completely taken aback when the disbeliever in God said—"You can lick me physically—but I can pin your ears back theologically." Rosenbloom looked at him for a split second and blankly added—"What's 'theologically?'" . . . Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Abrams (he's the president of the Emerson Radio and Phonograph Corporation and chairman of the Greater New York Committee for the Israel Bond Drive) have sailed for Israel, where Mr. Abrams will spend two weeks lining up plans for the drive . . . Punster Paul Gray, on the American-Jewish Caravan Radio Show, niftied—"And now I'm going to sing. You may not like my voice—but you have to respect my nerve!"

"Worst Barrage" Of Anti-Semitism

DENVER—The U. S. mail is being flooded with the worst barrage of anti-semitism in the history of American political campaigns, declared Louis Levand, publisher of the Wichita Beacon.

In an interview with the Jewish News, the publisher of Kansas' largest daily newspaper warned that the federal government must stop the use of the mails by anti-semitic poison-mongers just as the post office forbids sending obscene or fraudulent material.

"The anti-semitic propagandists are perpetrating a huge fraud on the American people," said the former Wichita UJA chairman. "There are enough laws now on the books to stop it, if the administration will enforce the laws."

Levand said the false anti-semitic propaganda smearing Gen. Eisenhower as a "Swedish Jew" and "tool of the Zionists," has flooded every part of the country, and aroused many people against Jews.

The Wichita publisher urged that hate-mongers masquerading as ministers be exposed, and their tax exemptions eliminated.

Levand blasted those Jewish organizational leaders who "misuse their titles and positions by endorsing a political candidate or party."

"There is no such thing as a Jewish vote," asserted the veteran newspaperman. "Nobody can deliver the votes of any Jewish group. Jews vote as individuals, not as a bloc. Jews are Americans who differ in politics as in everything else. A Jewish leader who publicly endorses any candidate or party does a disservice to the Jewish people. In this campaign, the Jewish people can rightly feel that both Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson are friendly."

Levand said that the State of Israel, after more than four years of existence, has "given the Jewish people more standing than anything that happened in their long history. Whatever Jews give to Israel through the UJA isn't half enough."

The Wichita Jewish leader said the Jewish press "is the only medium that is definite in its news columns in informing our people about the extent of anti-semitism. If the Jewish community doesn't support its Jewish press, it isn't doing anything to destroy anti-semitism. They should make their Jewish newspapers strong so that their press can publish the truth and keep them free."

Tradition and Meaning of 'Tashlich'

There is an old custom in many Jewish communities for Jews to walk to a river on the afternoon of the First Day of Rosh Hashanah—or on the Second Day if the First occurs on the Sabbath—and to participate in a Tashlich ceremony by reciting these verses (7.18-20) from Micah:

"Who is a God like unto Thee, that pardoneth iniquity and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of His heritage? He retaineth not His anger forever, because He delighteth in loving kindness. He will again have mercy upon us; He will subdue our iniquities. And Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea. O mayest Thou cast all the sins of Thy people, the house of Israel, into a place where they shall be no more remembered or ever again come to mind. Thou will show faithfulness to Jacob, and loving kindness to Abraham, as Thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old."

The Tashlich tradition is to remind us that as the body is purified by water, so should our souls be purified by repentance and God's mercy.

The Tashlich tradition, taken from the second verse in Micah, above, meaning "Thou shalt cast into the sea," is traced back to the 13th century. First published mention of the custom appears in the writings of the Maharil (Jacob ben Moses Moelln—1355-1427).

"He who maketh peace in his high places, may he make peace for us and for all Israel." . . . so reads the most fervent prayer of the Jewish New Year.

If the prayer is not to be an empty one . . . if it is to come true for all Jews who live in fear and want . . . we must help to give it meaning. We can . . . by a fresh resolve and a renewed determination to give, and to get others to give, to our community campaign on behalf of the United Jewish Appeal.

In the Year 5713 we can help bring peace to tens of thousands of Jews who must still be saved from lands of darkness . . . who still must be brought to Israel from Eastern Europe and Moslem lands . . . who still must be brought to the United States from overseas.

We can help make peace, also, for hundreds of thousands of recent newcomers to Israel . . . for more than 250,000 men, women and children who face the New Year in squalid tents and rundown shacks, whose homecoming has been miraculous, but whose greatest need now is the simple marvel of everyday home making.

And we can help bring a new kind of peace to Israel . . . a peace that signifies victory for the new State in its battle for economic independence. Yes, our aid can make possible more agricultural settlements, homes, irrigation projects and welfare institutions to bring an end to the shortages that have meant struggle, hardship and heartbreak.

To help those who pray for peace . . . and to aid Israel . . . give generously to our community campaign on behalf of the UJA.

If you have made your pledge—please pay it now—in cash.

Between You and Me

By BORIS SMOLAR

JUDAISM AT HARVARD: Harvard University is among the best, if not the best, institutions of higher learning in this country . . . It is also among the most liberal institutions . . . Among its 11,000 students there are about 2,000 Jews . . . I was, therefore, very much interested in the results of a study made among Jewish freshmen there, with a view to determine their attitude towards themselves as Jews . . . It is worthwhile emphasizing that data relating to the religious affiliation of Harvard students is not being kept by the University . . . But Jewish students there are not ashamed to state that they are Jews.

Thus, it was easy to interview about 180 of over 250 freshmen in their dormitories . . . The interviews, conducted by Robert S. Hirshfield of the Harvard Law School, lasted from 15 minutes to almost two hours, depending upon how responsive the student was . . . And what did they establish? . . . The picture that emerged is very interesting for those who are interested in the question of whether Jews will remain unassimilated in this country . . . It showed that one out of eight Jewish students reject Judaism and all religion completely . . . They call themselves "agnostics," or "free thinkers," or "scientists," or "intellectuals," or "atheists."

At the same time it established that most Jewish students, because most of American society looks upon the Jew as being the member of a particular religious group, tend also to regard themselves as such . . . The attitude of most Harvard Jewish students toward Judaism is one of superficial acceptance . . . When asked "are you Jewish?" the reply was usually "yes," but underlying this acceptance was almost invariably an intellectually negativistic attitude toward religion in general . . . Even among the Orthodox students who devote some time to the practice of Judaism there was not always a positive approach to their faith.

They had received a normal Jewish education but felt it was completely worthless . . . Not to speak of students coming from Reform families . . . The widespread attitude among the majority of the students was: "I really don't care about Judaism" . . . Despite the fact that most of the students had had early Jewish education, usually Hebrew School and Sunday School, and a home life which could be termed Jewish . . . Those who had attended Hebrew School were almost unanimous in condemning what they considered to be the unintelligent and unprogressive system of education therein . . . The feeling among many students was that Judaism in America is becoming sterile.

There seemed to be an attitude of acceptance regarding the disintegration of American Judaism . . . Also a feeling that the death of "Jewishness" in any traditional sense is inevitable, and possibly for the good . . . Many students said "I have a personal religion," meaning a set of values similar to those having a religious basis but devoid of their formalistic connotations . . . Others simply stated that they cannot reconcile the idea of everyone having a separate church and creed with the ideals of liberalism . . . The largest group among the interviewed students displayed assimilationist tendencies . . . However, among the 2,000 Jewish students at Harvard there are also many who are genuinely interested in all aspects of Judaism and are very active in the Hillel House there.

'History of An Idea'

Buber's 'Israel And Palestine'

Zion's lofty ideals, the development of the Jewish national thoughts which have led to statehood, the yearning for the Holy Land and the rise of Israel are presented on a high spiritual plane by Prof. Martin Buber, in his new book, "Israel and Palestine: The History of An Idea," published in London by the East and West Library and released in this country by Farrar, Strauss and Young (101 5th Ave., NY3).

The literature of the Zionist movement is enriched by this splendid book, the four sub-titles of which reveal at once the loftiness of the testimony offered by the eminent scholar. The four parts of his book deal with the Testimony of the Bible, Interpretation and Transfiguration, The Voice of the Exile and The Zionist Idea.

Viewing the Promise and Redemption, in the first portion, Dr. Buber describes the validity of redemption for the whole world, "and it is precisely this world-redemption that is centered in Zion." He looks upon the people of Israel as "called upon to be the herald and pioneer of the redeemed world, the land of Israel to be its center and the throne of its King."

The Holy Land's need for water is reflected in his explanation of "The Gift of Rain," his analysis of "God's association with the unity of Israel and Canaan" as being "represented, in natural terms, by the gift of rain."

The third section of his scholarly work is a resume of the Kuzari and the yearnings and poetic dreams of Jehuda Halevi: "The speaker, the Rabbi—the speaker, the poet, is seized by an extreme desire . . . to fulfill his longing and already senses in his own footsteps the footsteps of Israel." Also interpreted in this section is The Book of Sohar, the High Rabbi Liva's contributions to the beginning of the National Idea, the faith of Rabbi Nahman Braziav, the Zaddik who came to the Land.

In "The Voice of the Exile" we hear anew Dr. Buber's admonition: "The world can be redeemed only by the redemption of Israel and Israel can be redeemed only by reunion with its land."

In "The Zionist Idea" section, which brings Prof. Buber's analyses up to date, we are treated to remarkable evaluations of the works and aspirations of Moses Hess, Theodor Herzl, Leon Pinsker, Ahad Ha'am, Ray Kook and A. D. Gordon. There is no partisanship here, the Labor Zionist Gordon's return as a worker on the soil being delineated as 'better able than anyone else in the modern Jewish national movement to renew the insight into the unique relationship between the people and the land of Israel.'

Ahron David Gordon is, to Prof. Buber, of all those who came to the land in the period of new settlement . . . the most remarkable."

The other great creators emerge in interesting light. The approach is that of a great philosopher, of the spiritual leader who views Zion from a high plane. In its entirety, "Israel and Palestine" is a remarkable book, about a remarkable idea, viewing the works of remarkable men.

There's a big question mark hovering over the Brandeis University football team this season: Can Brandeis make up for the outstanding lettermen it has lost since last season? A look at the team's roster indicates that the answer may be a hopeful one.

With the grid season just around the corner, Coach Benny Friedman's Brandeis squad went into training at Waltham right after Labor Day. Since there was no spring training, the current drill sessions are affording the first opportunity for Benny to look over the team and see what can be made of it.

Last season, when Brandeis did very well for its first crack at varsity football, the judges had 33 lettermen. This year the figure is down to 20. The draft played havoc with the team, as did some of the rigors of scholastic studies. But on the credit side of the ledger, there are a number of top performers who'll be back in action.

One of them is Sid Goldfader, fullback, who was one of the standouts on last year's team. Another is Eddie Manganiello, Brandeis captain, who was named all-New England guard last season. Then there are: Tom Eagan, noted for his ability to knock down opposition passes; Bobby Griffin and Bill McKenna, ends; Phil Goldstein, tackle; and Bobby Pierce, guard. All are expected to play a vital part in determining the outcome of the campaign.

Brandeis is slated to be stronger than last year as far as the quarterback slot is concerned. That position was an outstanding weakpoint. Jim Stehlin of Allentown, Pa., who has throwing know-how and can fool the other team by handling the ball like a magician, will fill this post. Brandeis' opponents are also likely to have trouble getting their hands on halfback Gerry Callagy of Lawrence, who is reputed to be a hard runner to tackle.

The training schedule is rigorous. Drills in the morning. Drills in the afternoon. And that's the way it'll continue right up until classes start on September 24. Then three days later—September 27—the first test will come. The opener of the eight-game schedule will be against the University of Bridgeport at Bridgeport, Conn.

Although Brandeis has avoided a few Saturday games, there are enough others on tap to show that the innovations in schedule do not represent any complete backtracking from the policy of playing on the Sabbath. The first contest, the one against Bridgeport, will be on Saturday night. There'll be one other Saturday night game, and one on Sunday, October 12, which is Simchas Torah. However, one would suspect that the University is making some attempts to meet the hail of criticism it ran into as a result of its policy.

Dr. Abram L. Sachar, president of Brandeis, was quoted recently as defending Saturday games. His point was that the sports activities are voluntary and those who wish can attend or take part. Required physical education activity is not scheduled on the Sabbath. Neither are basketball games played on Friday night. But the situation in basketball is somewhat different. Basketball contests can be played any night in the week. It is tough to arrange a good football schedule without playing on Saturday.

Brandeis' schedule stands as follows: away games—Bridgeport, Sept. 27; Northeastern University, Oct. 4; American International College, Nov. 8; New Haven State Teachers' College, Nov. 15 and the University of Miami "B" team, Dec. 6. Home games—Arnold College, Oct. 12; Wayne University, Oct. 25, and the University of Mass., Nov. 1.

SPORTS BRIEFS: Dick Savitt hit a winning stride with some outstanding tennis playing to take the Canadian lawn tennis championships at Toronto. He beat Denmark's champ Kurt Neilsen in only one hour. Then Savitt and Neilsen teamed up to take the Canadian doubles crown.

Australian Mervyn Rose was on the victorious doubles team that won the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's national doubles crown. Rose and Vic Seixas defeated Australians Frank Sedgman and Len McGregor.

Israel athletes who took part in the Olympics at Helsinki are believed to have learned a lot that will prove valuable in improving sports in Israel. The large showing of Jewish athletes from throughout the world also held out promise for an exciting Macabbiad in Israel next year.

Jews, Communism Are Seen Opposed

"While communism, having its roots in economic forces, no doubt influences some Jews as well as some non-Jews, a study of German conditions indicates that the majority of the Jews who were permitted to vote in Germany during the Republic were affiliated with the liberal democratic parties. In the presidential elections in which Hindenburg, Hitler, and Thaelmann were candidates, Jewish leaders appealed to German Jews to vote for Hindenburg and against the Communist and National Socialist candidates. German Jews were chiefly engaged in occupations and in callings from which Communists are not recruited; indeed, their own economic interests made them diametrically opposed to communism. The most influential German dailies in the pre-Hitler period, such as the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Berliner Tageblatt, which were owned by Jews, were bitterly opposed to communism. Not one prominent or even well-known German-Jewish leader was ever identified with the Communist Party in Germany. According to authentic figures given under the auspices of the present government, there was only 1 Jew among the 70 Communist deputies in the Reichstag of 1930, and not a single Jew among the 81 Communist deputies of the Reichstag of 1933. Finally, not even the most brazen official mendacity can obscure the fact that while there were less than 300,000 German Jews who were enabled to vote, there were fully 6,000,000 Communist votes cast during the republic.

"The facts about Soviet Russia and the Jews are equally illuminating. Among the 36 commissars who constitute the Soviet Government, only two are Jews. Neither the president of the Council of Commissars, Ryckoff; the president of the U.S.S.R., Kalinin; the general secretary of the Communist Party, Stalin; the president of the Third International, Dimitroff; nor the founder of the Communist Party, Lenin, are Jews. A large percentage of the millions of Jews in Russia before the Revolution were trades people, members of the class whom the Bolsheviks attacked most violently, and who had most to lose by the victory of communism. Indeed, after the Revolution the Soviet Government declared fully half of the total Jewish population in Russia as declassed, as hindrances to the development of the Revolution. Jewish workers in Russia were organized in an association called the Bund, which opposed the Bolsheviks until the very last. Orthodox Jews and Zionists, whose numbers were preponderant in Russia, are regarded as counter-revolutionaries by the Soviet Government.

"An examination of the lists deliberately circulated by anti-Semitic agents in attempts to establish their thesis that nearly all of the Bolshevik leaders are Jews reveals that a large number of those classified are not Jews at all, and that a number of others, far from being Bolsheviks, were leaders of the anti-Bolshevik movement. While Trotzky was a Jew, many of the leaders of the Mensheviki, the sworn foes of Bolshevism, were Jews. The official statistics of the Petrograd Communist Party in 1918, shortly after the revolution, showed that there were 124,021 members, of whom 74.3 per cent were Russians, 10.5 per cent Latvians, 6.3 per cent Poles, 3.7 per cent Esthonians, 2.6 per cent Jews.

"It is plain from the above how little evidence there is for the malicious charge of a so-called Jewish Communist link. If the Jews are to be condemned because there are some Communists among them—men who have never in the slightest degree concerned themselves with Judaism—then there is not a people on earth that might not with equal right be condemned.

"Those who have even an elementary acquaintance with the traditions cherished by our people during the 2,000 years since the destruction of the Jewish state know that complete and unequivocal loyalty to the country of one's citizenship is a basic principle of Jewish life. Ever since the Babylonian exile, spiritual leaders from Jeremiah down have adjured the Jewish people to seek the peace and prosperity of the land in which they live, to pray unto the Lord for it; for in the peace thereof they would enjoy peace.

"Students of the origin of the American form of government have pointed to the debt which the Colonial fathers owned to the inspiration of the Hebrew Bible. Lecky, the distinguished historian, expressed this debt in the famous dictum: 'Hebraic mortar cemented the foundation of American democracy.' To millions of American Jews as well as to millions of Jews in other lands, therefore, the tenets of liberalism and democracy are the most dearly prized ideals: Jewish emancipation has always gone hand in hand with the progress of democracy. Any form of government or economic system which is based on, or maintains itself by, the suppression of the elemental bases of human liberty —freedom of speech, of the press, of association, of religious worship—is, therefore, abhorrent to them.

"The real reason for the propagation of this falsehood becomes apparent in Chancellor Hitler's words when he refers to 'Marxism and its related parliamentary democracy.' Under the pretext of an attack on bolshevism, many of whose tyrannical features have been adopted by the National Socialists, the Nazi government has in practice robbed the German people of their civil rights, suppressed freedom of speech, of the press, and assembly, has destroyed the free labor unions and confiscated their funds; and it is now engaged in a pagan assault upon the religious conscience of the Protestant, Catholic, and Jew alike. Is is not plain that his thunderbolts against Marxism are only a smoke screen for his sinister designs upon the liberties of the German people and the peace of the world?

"Because we have an abiding faith in the spirit that animates the true American, we call upon him not to permit this campaign of slander and libel to go unreproved. We are confident that our fellow Americans of all faiths, familiar with the lesson of history that oppression sets no limit to its victims, will add their voices in protest against the destruction of the innocents in Germany.

"We are firm in our belief that the American sense of justice and fair play will influence our fellow citizens to express themselves unmistakably against the ruthless suppression of liberty of conscience, against the destruction of human lives and human ideals, and against the revival of pagan barbarism in the heart of the civilized world.

Munich Jews To Erect Memorial

MUNICH—A memorial for Philip Auerbach, former head of the Bavarian State Restitution Office who committed suicide after being convicted of embezzling restitution funds, will be erected by the Jewish community of Munich as an expression of gratitude for Auerbach's efforts for Jewish victims of Nazism. A movement to clear Auerbach's name and have his conviction removed from the record has already been started in Germany.

Jews, Communism Are Seen Opposed

By JUDAH GILEADI

Much has been said—and much more has been misunderstood—about the Jewish attitude to Communism. Even more widespread is the misunderstanding about the place of Jews in the Communist ranks in Russia.

Yet, the facts are on record. They were placed in the limelight many times, but more especially 17 years ago, by three of the leading Jewish personalities in America, all of them now deceased.

On Oct. 21, 1935, the late Cyrus Adler, Alfred M. Cohen and B. C. Vladeck, acting in behalf of the American Jewish Committee, Bnai Brith and the Jewish Labor Committee, issued "A Public Statement on Communism and Jews." It is an historic document which has as much significance today as it did 17 years ago. Here it is in full:

"To Our Fellow Citizens:

On Sunday, September 15, the present National Socialist Government of Germany, at the behest of its Chancellor, Adolf Hitler, dictator of the German people, decreed a series of laws that put Jews beyond the legal and social pale of the German people, and deprived them of claims to German citizenship. This debasement of the Jews in Germany was not the result of a sudden decision. Long prepared for and premeditated, pledged by the National Socialist Party at its foundation, these laws were only the official culmination of a series of measures degrading and oppressing German Jews.

"This official denial of civil rights is directed against men and women whose ancestors have lived in Germany for over a thousand years; who have made signal contributions to German economic, political, and cultural life; who have shed their blood in defense of their fatherland; and who have contributed their best talents to the peaceful development of the German state. This injustice was perpetrated under the cloak of a so-called link between Jews and communism, which has no existence in fact, but which is being used to confuse the minds not only of Germans, but of people all over the world.

"When the Jews of the United States first learned of these pretexts for persecution, they deemed it beneath their dignity to take notice of them. However, because of the censorship of free expression in Germany and the enormous propaganda carried on by Nazi Germany outside its borders, the time has come for us to make answer to the libels and unjust insinuations, and to make clear that these falsehoods have the same motive that has always inspired tyrants and despots—that of seeking a scapegoat for their own sins and, under cover of a false issue, of deceiving their people by fomenting suspicion, discord, and hatred.

"It is high time that these facts

By LEON GUTTERMAN

HOLLYWOOD — Cecil B. DeMille, whose current production "The Greatest Show on Earth" is setting theatre attendance records in the United States and throughout the world, tells me that he has definitely scheduled as his next producer-director effort the motion picture version of the life of Moses, titled "The Ten Commandments."

The picture will relate the authentic early life of Moses as a handsome and fiery warrior prince. "The romance of this magnificent physical specimen who conquered the lands and armies to the south of Egypt, and who attracted the love of the most exciting women of the day, is a powerful drama of one of the world's great spiritual leaders," DeMille says.

The picture will be produced in Technicolor on the same lavish scale as "Samson and Delilah," with a cast of outstanding stars, and will be budgeted to possess the quality and spectacular values that have earned for Mr. DeMille the title of "Hollywood's Master Showman."

DeMille's famous film classic, "The Ten Commandments," produced in 1923, the first feature picture to be filmed in Technicolor and the first of the Biblical spectacles, was an outstanding popular success.

The screen story of the new picture will be based not only upon the account of the life of Moses as contained in the Bible, but also upon the accounts in the Torah, Koran, the Books of Josephus and other ancient writings as well as the modern best-seller, "Prince of Egypt," by Dorothy Wilson and authentic research, much of which has been unearthed since World War I.

"I feel that the subject of Moses and the Ten Commandments is particularly timely today," DeMille explains. "Not only does it provide all the ingredients for exciting and spectacular motion picture entertainment for mass audiences of all ages throughout the world, but it is in line with the spiritual reawakening of all nations of the free world in these troubled times.

"A constant stream of letters to me from all parts of America and from foreign countries for the past few years, and particularly of late, has proved this and has largely influenced me to make a motion picture of the life of Moses, the heroic figure revered by Jews and Christians alike."

DeMille is already deep in preparation on "The Ten Commandments." Pre-production work will require at least a year, he estimated, with actual camera work scheduled to start in late 1953. The picture will be released by Paramount.

Back home in Hollywood after a six-week performance and vacation tour of England, Scotland and Wales, Jack Benny says that his success with British audiences is due to the fact that his radio broadcasts are so well remembered there from the war years.

"In the '40's my broadcasts were heard there regularly, and people still remember the characters and the happenings of our radio show," he says. "In Manchester, when a baby cried in the audience I commented that Fred Allen must have planted the kid. It got a laugh because they remembered the feud so clearly."

Explaining why he has made the British tour annually for the past four summers, Benny says: "Nobody hates a full, uninterrupted vacation more than I do. To sit and do nothing for three months . . . that would drive me nuts. This way I was able to work in leisurely fashion and to make my leisure more interesting."

Among other things, Jack finds that British audiences respond enthusiastically to the most sophisticated material he can offer; that they're much more interested in comic character portrayals than in jokes; that they love pantomime, and that the expressive shrug means more to them than the irrepressible wisecrack; that nevertheless they'll laugh at "corn" without self-consciousness.

Jack also found out that in Scotland the word "mean" is used exactly the way "stingy" is used in the U. S. He was considerably startled the first time when he heard himself introduced as "the meanest man in America."

Many American entertainers are popular in England because of the recording industry. Everyone has a "gramaphone," of course.

Cautious about the tastes and feelings of his Scottish, intensely nationalistic fans, Jack discovered that Glasgow theatre audiences are fond of "Scotch jokes."

On the subject of the entertainer's job as a whole, Jack has this to say: "Everybody wants to be really good, top notch. But most of us can't be really at our best most of the time. If we keep from being outright bad, manage to be entertaining, and hit the peaks once in a while, that's an achievement."

After his tour of England and Scotland, Benny spent three days in Holland as the house guest of Queen Julianna and Prince Bernhard, living at the Palace during his stay there. "My trip to Holland was wonderful," he enthuses, "and I didn't even get a bill at the end of my stay."

After spending a week in Paris, Jack planed back to the United States, where he picked up a new Cadillac in Detroit and then drove out to Los Angeles. "Europe is wonderful," Jack says, "but it's nothing compared to this wonderful country of ours."

Historiettes

The importance of the Sabbath is emphasized by the established principle, in Samuel M. Segal's "The Sabbath Book," that "He who keeps the Sabbath is looked upon as though he originally introduced the Sabbath . . . He who observes even one Sabbath, in keeping with the prescribed laws, is considered as though he has kept and observed all the Sabbaths, from the day the Holy One, blessed be He, created the world down to the end of the days."

"The Sabbath is the only Jewish institution which is applied as a test for proselytes in their conversion to Judaism, as indicated in the verse: 'Also the aliens, who join themselves to the Lord, to minister unto Him, and to love the name of the Lord, to be His servants, every one that keepeth the Sabbath from profaning it.' (Is. 56:5.) This test is applicable to Jewry as well. A Jew, who is known to violate all the laws of Judaism, is considered a Jew in all respects as long as he observes the Sabbath publicly. Violation of the Sabbath is one of three cardinal transgressions in the Jewish system of theology; and the subsequent punishment therefore is equivalent to that imposed for all other sins that may have been committed."

Jewish Leaders In the Confederacy

Judah Philip Benjamin's Role During Civil War

By PHILIP SLOMOVITZ

(An American Jewish Press Feature)

Exactly 100 years ago, the state of Louisiana sent to the United States Senate, as its spokesman, a man who became one of the outstanding leaders of the Confederacy. Judah Philip Benjamin was, in fact, considered by some as the "brains" of the rebellious Southern states. Thus, in "A Pictorial History of the Confederacy" (Crown Publishers) Lamont Buchanan wrote about him:

"First, Attorney General, then Secretary of War, finally as Secretary of State on to the end of the war, Judah Philip Benjamin of Louisiana was sometimes referred to even by those who were not overly fond of him as the 'brains' of the government. His talents lay largely unused in the Attorney General's office, but Benjamin was content to bide his time while other more impatient men were scrambling for political power and thus, figuratively, losing their heads in the scuffle with those as ambitious. Both an immensely able lawyer and an adroit politician, Benjamin was wealthy and had made his wealth by virtue of the system the South represented. He had no reason to question slavery or the right of the Southern states to secede, though he considered that a last resort. It has been suspected that Benjamin always realized the limitations beyond which fervor and devotion could carry a cause so handicapped in material resources. Regardless of his private thoughts, Judah Benjamin served well and loyally in all his posts. Between Davis and him there was a bond of affection stemming from the time when, as members of the U. S. Senate, an unimportant argument between them almost led to a duel."

Many legends developed around the name of Judah Benjamin, who held the post of U. S. Senator from 1853 to 1861—until the outbreak of the Civil War. There have been many conflicting interpretations of his Jewish attitudes, some having considered him an observant Jew and others having claimed that he, his wife and daughter had embraced Catholicism.

Dr. Bertram W. Korn, history professor at Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, recently wrote a mono-

Benjamin's Role In Civil War

graph on Benjamin and reached the conclusion that while the Louisiana Senator and Confederate leader "had no positive or active interest in Jews or Judaism, he never denied being Jewish or sought to escape his background through conversion."

Judah Benjamin has been compared to Benjamin Disraeli by biographers who have referred to these two illustrious men as the outstanding Jewish statesmen in world history. Biographers also have linked Benjamin with Louis Dembitz Brandeis when discussing outstanding Jewish personalities.

Robert Douthat Meade, who has been professor of history at the University of Illinois, Vanderbilt University and the University of North Carolina, unearthed many interesting facts about the noted statesman in his "Judah P. Benjamin: Confederate Statesman" (Oxford Press). Prof. Meade's historical record woven around the life of Benjamin reconstructs one of the most interesting periods in American history. He acquired his background on the subject from three experts on Southern history—William E. Dodd, Dumas Malone and Avery Craven. But he did not limit himself to these. He went to Jewish sources, interviewed descendants of the Benjamin family, and his study is one of the most all-embracing ever undertaken on the subject.

At the outset, the author of the Benjamin biography makes much of the fact that the Confederate statesman was like Ibn Ezra, Baruch Spinoza and Disraeli, of Spanish Jewish stock. "The aristocrats of Jewry" he calls them.

The elder Benjamin was an affiliated Jew. In Charleston, the family worshipped in Beth Elohim Synagogue. But Philip Benjamin, the father of Judah, rebelled against orthodoxy and joined in forming the Reformed Society which lasted but a few years and was dissolved in 1833. It is believed to have been the first Reform Jewish movement in this country, antedating the Reform movement started by Dr. Isaac M. Wise.

It is evident that the Jewish influences on the life of Judah P. Benjamin were weak and that his loyalties to Jewry were limited, and on this score this writer differs with Mr. Meade in his comparisons of Benjamin with Disraeli. The parallel is rather remote. True, they were both born Jews; both had intermarried; both rose to great political heights.

But Benjamin Disraeli, in spite of his conversion, had to his credit such great books as "David Alroy," "Tancred" and Coningsby," each representing a great tribute to the spirit of the people Israel. The only parallel to this in the life of Judah P. Benjamin is to be found in two references to his Jewishness in Prof. Meade's biography:

1—"With the future so critical for (Jefferson) Davis and his chief ministers, did Benjamin turn more to religion? Did he now find in Judaism the faith that sustained so many of his forefathers in their hours of trial? The undeniable fact is that he was seldom among the crowds who flocked to the churches during the war. A Richmond Jew remembered his being 'called up' to the reading of the law at Beth Ahaba synagogue, but he never attended there more than a few times. Yet Benjamin did not foreswear Judaism and he 'remained always a firm believer in immortality and in personal divinity.' It appears to have been a genuine, if not too active faith.

"Incidentally, he was friendly but not partial to the Jewish soldiers, of whom more than 10,000 served the Confederacy, some with conspicuous bravery."

In one of the hundreds of notes appearing at the end of the volume, the author gives as authorities for these statements: "Herbert T. Ezekiel and Gaston Lichtenstein, 'The Jews of Richmond,' and conversation with the authors. They wrote that it was a Richmond Jew, Ellis Bottingheimer, who remembered seeing Benjamin being 'called up' at the synagogue."

2—The strongest claim to Jewishness made for Benjamin is contained in the following statement in Meade's biography: "Like so many of Jewish blood today, Benjamin tended to become cosmopolitan. But although he gradually separated himself from Jewish affairs, he never renounced his ancestral faith."

But—read the explanatory note on this statement:

"Mrs. Myrover . . . quoted her mother-in-law as saying that Benjamin inquired complainingly of his own mother why she named him Judah.

"William Cabell Bruce (letter to author, 8 April 1931) gave the following story which was repeated to him by John K. Cowan, for many years General Counsel for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad: 'On one occasion, Benjamin, when in Baltimore, went before a Justice of the Peace to make affidavit to a paper. A blank had been left in the certificate of affidavit for the insertion of the name of the affiant, and, when Benjamin handed the paper to the Justice, he asked him to fill in the blank.

"'Instead of inserting the name Judah, the Justice inadvertently inserted the name Judas; whereupon, Benjamin reclaimed possession of the paper and dashed it down with great force on the desk of the Justice, exclaiming, as he did so: 'My God, man, is not Judah Jew enough?'"

This appears illustration enough of an attitude that seemed to mark the character of a man who was a great lawyer, a brilliant statesman, one of our country's outstanding orators of all time.

There are numerous references to Jews in this fascinating biography by Prof. Meade. It is evident throughout the book that the author is anxious to indicate that anti-Jewish prejudices were nonexistent. But there is occasional evidence to the contrary. For instance, while he was Secretary of War of the Confederacy:

"Many of the suspicions against him arose from the fact that he was in a public position that made him susceptible to criticism, and from his manner of living. Thus to attempt to bring the cask of sherry into lean, suffering Richmond of 1864 was to invite suspicion of corruption even more than gambling.

"There was an exaggerated story in the army about that damned Jew," living on 'fine wines, fruits —the fat of the land,' and keeping open house in Richmond. But doubtless Benjamin felt that he was making tremendous sacrifices for the Confederacy and fully earned his little pleasures. At times he seemed so indifferent to criticism that some of his associates many have been inclined to suspect the worst."

In reality, he was not indifferent to attack, and was hurt by some references to him, including the charges of thievery while a student at Yale.

Benjamin's Role In Civil War

There is another interesting reference in this biography to Benjamin's Jewishness. Mr. Meade states:

"There appears to have been little or no opposition to him because of his Jewish blood . . . The Wilmington Journal had quoted an article from the Mercury written before his appointment, praising the Jews as 'amongst the most faithful and patriotic of the people of South Carolina. It adds: 'In the Senate of the United States they furnished two Senators, and both of these Senators were from the South, and both of them have been foremost in vindicating the rights and liberties of the South. Mr. Benjamin and Mr. Yulee are worthy to sit in any assembly of statesmen in the world'."

This story will be incomplete without recapitulation of the story of Senator Yulee who shared Benjamin's sentiments on the question of the South's secession from the Union. Yulee was the first Jewish Congressman, serving in the House of Representatives before being elected to the Senate.

Florida seceded from the Union, Jan. 10, 1861, and the formal announcement was made 11 days later in the Senate by Yulee. After Lee's surrender, Yulee was named a member of the committee from Florida to go to Washington and confer with Lincoln concerning Florida's return to the Union.

He was arrested on his way to Washington, and was the last of the Confederate leaders to be released in 1870, through the efforts of the former Confederate General Johnson, whose plea was made to President Grant.

In this connection, it will be of interest to take a census of the Jews who served in the United States Senate, and the states they came from. Towards the end of Meade's biography, in the chapter which describes Benjamin's great success as a lawyer in England, after his flight from this country upon the defeat of the Confederacy, we are told:

"The last American known to have called upon him was a Cincinnati Jew, Gustavus Wald. Arriving with a letter of introduction from Senator Jonas of Louisiana, he was cordially received by Benjamin. He took Wald to hear him argue a case before the Privy Council. 'The court above all others in Christendom in which one can practice law like a Gentleman'."

Thus—two of the Jews who had served in the U. S. Senate, Judah P. Benjamin and Benjamin Franklin Jonas who served from 1879 to 1885, came from Louisiana. A third Senator has already been referred to—David Levy Yulee, of Florida, who served from 1845 to 1851 and 1855 to 1861.

Other Jews who had served in the U. S. Senate were: Simon Guggenheim, Colorado, 1907 to 1913; Isador Rainer, Maryland, 1905 to 1912; Joseph Simon, Oregon, 1897 to 1903. Senator Herbert H. Lehman of New York is the only Jew now serving in the U. S. Senate.

Unique Personality

Judah Philip Benjamin was a unique personality in many respects. Despite his unhappy marriage, he made the best of the bargain, rejoined his wife in Paris, saw his daughter well married (Mr. Meade tells us about Benjamin's Creole wife: "Although Judah idolized her and gave her everything she wanted, she left the impression that she resented being married to a Jew").

As Senator, Benjamin tried to re-establish his marital life, secured a home for his family and brought his wife and daughter from Paris to live in Washington. But it ended in infidelity. Yet, Benjamin went on with his work, and reached the height of success, first in the Union, then in the Confederacy, and finally in England where his earnings were $75,000 a year.

He was the first Jew to be offered a Judgeship in the United States Supreme Court, but he turned it down. He was offered the post of Minister to Spain and declined that, too.

He was one of the most brilliant men in American history, and it is a pity that he chose to defend a cause which is contrary to the teachings of his people—the aspiration for liberty for all men.

But in whatever he would have undertaken, Benjamin would have succeeded. Contrary to the defense offered in his behalf by Prof. Meade, he was not a great Jew; but he was a brilliant lawyer and statesman.

Is College Needed To Prosper?

By HAROLD LIST
Guidance Consultant, B'nai B'rith —Jewish Vocational Service

Dear Mr. List:

At one of our recent AZA meetings the boys got on the topic of college education. There were a good number of different opinions. Some thought that it is necessary to go to college to get ahead in the world today, while others took just the opposite side. In all this discussion one major point was always raised and that was the problem of how to decide whether or not college is the right step for us. Can you shed some light on this subject?

B. S. K.
Mattapan

Answer by Mr. List:

The answer to your question cannot be a simple one. There are many important factors which have to be considered before answering the query, "Should I go to college when I finish high school?" Whether you realize it or not, the pattern of your life for the next fifty years may be determined by your answer to this question.

Let's consider, first of all, some of the common mistakes which you should avoid in trying to decide on whether or not to attend college. Don't plan your future education without consulting all available sources of information. Don't decide hurriedly. Don't be swayed by such unimportant factors as whether your best friend Jack is going. Don't delay making a decision. Don't allow the decision to be made for you because you didn't take the trouble to make it yourself.

Although we've simplified the problem, basically, students who should seriously consider pursuing a college education are those described below:

High school students who plan or hope to enter a profession. In general, high school boys and girls in the upper third of their class in all-around scholastic standing are usually eligible for college.

High school students whose intelligence and personality indicate that they may become a success in executive and administrative positions in business and industry.

High school students who have shown special talents or skills or who have a special interest and achievement in any field of art, science or social science.

Valuable as college may be for many students, it isn't necessarily the right prescription for everyone. It's true that a college education is now considered as important as a high school education fifty years ago. However, many of the best thinkers on the subject today believe that while it is essential for nearly everyone to complete high school, it is not essential for most young people to complete college. Perhaps a two-year of junior college plan will prove desirable for many high school graduates. But four or more years of college is a specialized experience which is not suited to everyone.

It is quite possible that college training may not further your vocational aims. For instance, if you would like to become a carpenter and are good at working with your hands, and while in high school you found little interest in academic work, you would in all probability not wish to go on to college. Instead you'd rather continue your education in the field in which you are interested. College would only delay getting started at what you really want to do.

To still further complicate the problem consider the following facts: With something like two and a half million students enrolled in the colleges of our nation today competition at the top will probably be tougher than ever before. However, it has been shown through numerous studies, that of

Emma Lazarus' 'New Colossus'

"The New Colossus," which appears at the base of the Statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island, New York, remains the guiding spiritual idea in Americanism. It was quoted in Congressional debates on the immigration bill and in President Truman's measure vetoing the McCarran bill. It was written by Emma Lazarus, 1849-1887, great American poet. The text of "The New Colossus" follows:

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame,
With conquering limbs astride from land to land,
Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-hand
Glows world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin-cities frame.

"Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!" Cries she,
With silent lips. "Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me.
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

Is College Needed To Prosper?

all the boys and girls who start college training—sixty per cent never graduate. This is a staggering figure and it appears that the main reason for it is that most of these students selected the wrong kind of post-high school training.

I would like to emphasize the point that in the end you are the one who should make the final decision as to your next course of action. The wisest thing to do is to evaluate carefully your interests, abilities, personality and intelligence before making educational and vocational plans. This will help to eliminate later disappointments and dissatisfactions. Get all the help you can from your parents, school counselor and agencies such as the Jewish Vocational Service of Greater Boston—before deciding—"Shall I go on to college?"

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

We, the Jewish Bakers Union, Local 122, take this opportunity to thank the Jews of Providence for the patronage that they have given us in previous years, by buying bread only in those bakeries where Union workers are employed and use the Union Label.

At the beginning of the New Jewish Year we again request you—the Jewish housewives—that whenever you buy bread or chalah, to remember us, the Jewish Union Bakery workers, and demand that the Union Label be applied to each loaf of bread that you buy.

By demanding the Union Label you are assured that the bread is baked in sanitary bakery shops and that workers are treated humanely.

WISHING YOU A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

ROSH HASHANAH RECIPES
By Leah W. Leonard

Thoughts of Rosh Hashanah bring forth hopes and prayers—peace for all the world, first and foremost; health, happiness and purposeful living for all in this land and every other on the face of the earth. Nostalgic memories of family gatherings around the festive table rise up through burdened consciousness. We remember the special preparations in every realm of the house, especially the kitchen. The mixings and stirrings, the baking and decorating of cakes, the "Lekach" (honey cake) that Granny made with such painstaking devotion, the "Tzimmes of Carrots," the bowl of honey "symbolic of sweetness and tenderness, golden plenty in the coming year" that graced the holiday table and was shared by family and friends. All these customs have been made the sum total of Jewish continuity via the kitchen all the more dear to us. And this year, as in other years, we must remember to serve one or all the traditional "dishes" associated with High Holidays.

Let's bake some "Lekach" as follows:

LEKACH (Honey Cake)

- 4 eggs plus ½ cup strong coffee
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup clover blossom honey
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 3½ cups sifted flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup finely chopped seeded raisins
- ¼ cup ground almonds
- 2 tablespoons brandy

Beat eggs with a rotary beater in a large mixing bowl, adding sugar gradually till the mixture is light and creamy. Dilute the honey in hot coffee and let cool before stirring into the mixture. Stir in the salad oil. Stir together the dry ingredients and add the raisins and nuts before stirring till smooth. Add the brandy last and fold in lightly. Turn the mixture into a well-greased and wax paper-lined rectangular cake pan and bake 1 hour in a pre-heated oven at 310 degrees F. Invert the cake in the pan over a cake rack until cool. Remove the paper before cutting the cake into diamond shapes or squares. May be left uncut till ready to serve, but must be kept in a covered container—the cake compartment of the bread box is fine.

TZIMMES OF CARROTS

- ¼ cup ground almonds
- 1 large bunch carrots (5 large ones)
- 5 medium size potatoes
- 3 medium size sweet potatoes
- ¾ pounds brisket of beef
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup dark brown sugar or honey.
- Cold water to cover
- 1 small onion
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons chicken fat (schmaltz)

Scrape the carrots and run the serated edge of the potato peeler down the sides to make the slices more attractive. Slice carrots into thin rounds or coins. Pare the potatoes and sweet potatoes and cut into inch thick rounds. Heat the pot, preferably a Dutch Oven, and sear the brisket on all sides, turning till nicely browned. Add the carrots, potatoes and sweet potatoes alternately to distribute well around the meat. Sprinkle with salt and add the sugar. And cold water enough to cover about an inch over all. Peel the onion and make two cuts in it to permit juices to flow freely but do not cut apart. Bring to boil quickly, skim slightly, reduce heat and let simmer gently for 2½ to 3 hours. Shake the pot gently from time to time, but DO NOT STIR CONTENTS. Water may be added to prevent sticking. Remove the onion as soon as meat is tender enough to pierce easily with a fork. Make an "einbren" or thickening by browning the flour in the melted fat in a small pan, adding about ¼ cup of liquid in the meat and vegetable combination, and stirring till smooth and free of lumps. Cooking over moderate heat for 5 minutes helps. Turn the thickening into the Tzimmes, shake the pot gently to distribute evenly, then turn the whole contents of pot into a casserole or baking pan and bake 30 minutes 350 degrees F. or until lightly browned on top. The meat may be turned once or twice to give it additional crispy brown coating on several sides. But do not mash the vegetables in the handling. Nothing is less attractive than a "mushy" Tzimmes.

Variation: Add a "Knaidle" made as follows

- 1 cup all purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ cup finely chopped beef suet
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley (optional)
- 3 tablespoons cold water

Sift together dry ingredients. Add the chopped suet and combine by stirring in the cold water a little at a time to form a ball of dough or dumpling. Divide the dumpling into two or more parts and tuck them into the Tzimmes before turning into the casserole for baking. Or, add the dumplings as soon as the meat is tender, cover and continue cooking on top of stove at reduced heat.

- 2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup vegetable shortening
- 1¼ cups tightly packed dark brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ teaspoon almond extract
- 1½ cups finely cut or chopped pitted dates
- ¼ cup finely chopped walnuts or pecans
- 2 tablespoons wheat germ
- 2 tablespoons flour

Sift together the flour, baking soda and salt into a large mixing bowl. Cream the shortening with brown sugar 'til well blended and add the eggs and flavorings, stirring well. Blend this mixture into the dry ingredients by stirring with a large spoon. Combine the chopped dates, nuts, wheat germ and flour and stir into the batter. Let stand five minutes while greasing a large cookie sheet. Drop the cookie mixture from the tip of a teaspoon a half inch apart each way and bake 12 minutes at 375 degrees F or 'til nicely browned. Yields 60 nougets.

MOHN KICHELS
(Excellent with green salads)

- 1 cup all purpose flour
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 4 tablespoons vegetable shortening or salad oil
- Ice water—approximately 5 tablespoons
- 3 tablespoons fine poppy seeds

Sift the flour into a mixing bowl and stir in the whole wheat flour, salt and sugar. Cut in the shortening with a pastry blender or fork 'til it forms particles the size of small peas. Sprinkle ice water on slowly while stirring a tablespoonful at a time, to form a ball of dough similar to pie crust pastry. Roll out dough on a lightly floured board or pastry cloth and sprinkle generously with the poppy seeds.

Roll 'till ¼ inch thick to press in the seeds.

Cut into 1½ inch square with a fluted cutter or use a sharp knife. Place the squares on a greased cookie sheet and bake 4 to 5 minutes at 425 degrees F. or 'till nicely browned. Let cool before storing in a covered container. These are a fine accompaniment for cocktails, salads or afternoon tea.

Yield 60 Kichels.

The Listening Post

LETTER FROM A READER: I would like to share with the readers of this column an interesting letter I recently received from a former college classmate of mine. The writer, an educated and seemingly highly sensible man, raises a number of questions which have been troubling many Jewish intellectuals of his generation. Because the letter arrived at a time when I am taking a brief vacation from columnizing, my reply, whatever it may be worth, must necessarily be delayed.

The letter reads: "Your penchant for writing, so evident when we were classmates at City College more than thirty-odd years ago, has seemingly brought you to the anchor you most wanted to conquer. When I first saw your column, I had a premonition that its author was the thin, almost emaciated looking, bespectacled youth whose preoccupation with the finer arts made him an outstanding favorite with Professor Klein, the bearded teacher of English, who, if you remember, once invited the entire class to a Chanuka latke party at his home. Careful examination of the photo accompanying the column convinced me that the years, long and difficult as they have been, have not warped my memory. You seem to have taken on considerable weight in the course of the years though there appear no other signs of the tribute you must have paid to time—and this, of course, gladdened my heart.

"However, the dominating mood at the moment of renewing the old friendship was one of sadness. It brought back the days when we were young and hopeful, days permeated by idealism, days strengthened by faith that the world ahead of us would be one of peace, of security, of understanding among men and of intellectual and scientific creativity that would congeal the wounds of war and usher in a century of goodwill.

"And then the depression came, and despondency and fear. Most of us lived on dole, and dole was also our intellectual lot. Human dignity gave way to humiliation. The horizon seemed black and foreboding. Then the clouds began clearing. The iciness which formerly prevailed in government began giving way to human warmth and compassion. And hope again began sprouting in human hearts.

"But even as these clouds were dissipating, others and of a more ominous nature appeared on the horizon. Europe was rotting. And a soul-less world gave birth to Hitler and pain and agony and despair and death.

"I was a universalist, a cosmopolitan, in those days. Religion had no meaning to me, though my Jewish education had been above the average. Jewish problems did not exist for me, and if they did, I framed them within the category of the wider world problem. My thesis was one of assimilation. I was an enemy of separateness and cultural divisiveness. If world oneness was to be attained, I believed, men would first have to abandon differences and barriers. As often as I asked myself the question why I was demanding of the Jew to make the first sacrifice on behalf of attaining universality, I invariably arrived at the conclusion that it has been always the historic fortune and destiny of the Jew to blaze new trails and that if we showed the way to the world in that respect the price of vanishing would be insignificant alongside the long-range accomplishment.

"In the end I was jolted out of this faith. Hitler came and when I witnessed the indifference of the world to the fate of my people, I realized that I had all the years been a victim of deception and perhaps, of self-deception as well. Now I was a wanderer in a void.

"Then the answer came. I returned to my fold and my faith as of old. I made my father's path my path. Slowly I returned to worship and synagogue and congregation and tradition. This was a most difficult step to take. I feared its shattering effect upon my children whom I raised as agnostics, atheists and universalists.

"But here again disappointment dogged my footsteps. Where I hoped to find solace and spirit and faith I found crass materialism and indifference to the ideals of our prophets and to our heritage. The synagogue seems no longer to be the sanctuary it was in my boyhood days. Instead it has been transformed into a soul-less mechanism whose honor-loving and honor-pursuing masters are eternally competing for recognition and publicity. The synagogue of my young days was a house of worship and learning and warmth. My new synagogue is a modern structure devoid of soul and content. It houses parties, card games and politics and emptiness. I did not expect the loftiness of the old rabbi who nourished his congregation with depth and piety and faith and folk-humaneness. But I did expect my new synagogue to be at least a reasonable facsimile of the old one. In this, too, it has failed. The congregants, it is true, are devoting themselves wholeheartedly to the cause of Israel. But the giving seems to derive from external rather than from internal devotion. The philanthropist takes precedence over the scholar.

"If I have troubled you with this letter, it is only because I am myself deeply troubled. I realize you are too busy a man to reply fully, but I do hope to hear from you. It is symbolic that our paths have converged."

Liberty Bell: 200 Years Old

It is not generally known, but the Liberty Bell, the Symbol of American freedom, the inspiring instrument which bears the Biblical inscription "Proclaim liberty . . .", is older than our independence. In fact, it has just celebrated its 200th birthday.

In August of 1752, dockmen in Philadelphia unloaded a crate that arrived from England. In it was a bell, cast by the Londoner Thomas Lister, 12 feet in circumference at the widest point, and on it was the inscription:

"By order of the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania, for the State House in the City of Philadelphia, 1752."

The colony for whom this bell was cast still was under the English rule, but the bell itself was to become known as the Liberty Bell, and was to serve as a challenge to oppressors, for, under the above explanation appeared this quotation:

"Proclaim Liberty through all the land to all the inhabitants thereof—Levitt. XXV 10."

Isaac Norris, a Quaker, was the man chosen to select the quotation for the inscription on the Bell. He picked the twenty fifth chapter of Leviticus which contains the famous Jubilee proclamation: "And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout the land . . .

The Bell was not hung in the Pennsylvania State House because, upon unpacking, it cracked after a single stroke of the clapper due to the brittleness of the metal. A little copper was added to the metal in recasting by Pass and Stow, the two workingmen to whom was assigned the task of placing the Bell in order. The two craftsmen reversed the two original lines and the inscription on the Bell that was hung in 1853 read:

"Proclaim LIBERTY throughout all the Land unto all the Inhabitants thereof. Lev. XXV 10.

"By order of the ASSEMBLY of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, for the State House in Philada.
"Pass and Stow, Philada MDCCLIII"

The triumphant announcement of the Declaration of Independence was accompanied by sounds that were pealed from the Liberty Bell in the Pennsylvania State House, on July 8, 1776.

But with the threats of war, it became necessary to protect the Bell, and it was taken for safekeeping, in 1777, to Allentown, Pa., and was returned to Philadelphia after the ousting of the British from the newly proclaimed American republic.

After Pass and Stow had recast the original Bell, a second one was sent to Philadelphia from London by Thomas Lister. That copy was given to St. Augustine's Church, which was burned in 1844 during rioting by a mob which was incited to violence by bigotry and anti-Catholicism by the hate group of that day—the "Native Americans." The Bell was crashed, but its remains were recast into a symbolic relic to be seen today at Villanova (Pa.) College.

The original Liberty Bell cracked on July 8, 1835, exactly 59 years after it had pealed the triumphant announcement of the Declaration of Independence, when it was rung for the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall. But the Bell retains its power as a symbol of Liberty under the banner that carries the translation of the five Hebrew Biblical words:

"Ukrosem dror ba-aretz lekhol yoshveho" — "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Jewish Explorer Led Expedition To Greenland

Fifty years ago, a young Michigander, Edward Israel, provided valuable assistance in determining an overland route to Hazen Land in Greenland by way of "The Bellows" Valley. He died during the expedition, a martyr to his calling. Had he lived, it was predicted that he would have become one of the world's outstanding explorers.

This young Arctic explorer was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., in 1859. He died in Greenland at the age of 25, in 1884.

Upon his graduation from the University of Michigan, where he specialized in mathematics, he enlisted in the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army. He volunteered as an astronomer in the Lady Franklin Bay Expedition, under command of General A. W. Greely, in 1881, and was credited with recording important scientific observations. In spite of poor health, he undertook to lead special sleigh investigating parties.

He was the youngest member of the expedition that determined the overland Greenland's Hazen Land route, 50 years ago, in 1882, and was admired for his courage and enthusiasm. He became gravely ill, but he would not accept more than the regularly apportioned rations. He died before the expedition returned to the United States.

Story of Benedetto Musolino, Italian Parliamentarian

A century ago, there lived in Italy a parliamentarian who believed in the redemption of Jewish nationhood in the ancient homeland of Israel and staunchly propagated the ideal. Interestingly enough, his name was Benedetto Musolino.

Hamazkir, writing in his column "Random Jottings" in the Jewish Observer and Middle East Review of London, England, tells the following story about this interesting personality:

Students of the history of Zionism will be interested and surprised to learn that eleven years before Moses Hess published his Rome and Jerusalem; and thirty-one years before Leon Pinsker published his Auto-Emancipation, an Italian politician wrote a book containing a detailed project for the restoration of the Jewish people to Palestine. His name was—curiously enough—Benedetto Musolino. He was born in Pizza di Calabria, a region in Italy where there have been no Jews for centuries, which makes both his interest and his competence in Jewish affairs all the more remarkable. The title of his book, a bulky volume published by Rassegna Mensila d'Israel in Rome, under the auspices of the Union of Jewish Communities in Italy, is "Jerusalem and the Jewish people, otherwise Palestine in its trade with political relations with Asia and Europe and above all with Great Britain. Project to be submitted to Her Britannic Majesty's Government by Benedetto Musolino, former Member of the Neopolitan Parliament, Genos, the 10th May, 1851." Musolino was an Italian patriot, who took part in Garibaldi's expedition in 1860, was a member of the Italian Parliament from 1861 to 1880.

Besides writing his book, Musolino's work in the cause of Jewish national restoration included three visits to Palestine and correspondence with Lord Palmerston, who referred him to Baron Lionel de Rothschild, then the head of the Rothschild family in London.

Musolino proposed the constitution of a Jewish principality in Palestine within the framework of the Ottoman Empire. The principality was to be established with the support of Great Britain and to be placed under its protection, serving as an economic and military base for this country, for which he felt great admiration. According to an interesting account given by Dr. S. U. Nachon in the Zionist Newsletter, Musolino prefaces his project with a survey of the conditions of the Jewish people from the beginning of the dispersion until his own day, discusses the difficulties to be overcome, describes the advantages that would result both for the Sublime Porte and Great Britain, and deals with the cost that would be involved. He proposes the founding of a Jewish Colonization Company to carry out the scheme and suggests the transfer of the Arab population, which should be indemnified for the loss of their land by the price since "as a result of Jewish enterprise the land would be worth ten times as much as at present."

Hearty Laughs

"ALL-INCLUSIVE"

This story is credited to David Dainow, South African writer, who related it in the South African Zionist Record:

High rents exist throughout Israel these days. Even some of the olim who bring money to Israel find it difficult to acquire rooms in central Tel-Aviv.

Recently, one of these new arrivals inquired of a German-speaking owner the monthly cost of a single room in her four-roomed flat. She replied: "Twenty-five pounds."

The inquirer was shocked at the high price, demanded and exclaimed, "Efo Hazedek und efo Hayosher?" (Where is the justice and where is the fairness?)

To which the lady replied: "Alles Inclusiv."

Rothschild's View On Zion Economy

Baron Edmond de Rothschild, the famous philanthropist who helped establish several colonies in Palestine and who became popular under the title "Nadiv Hayeduah," the noted benefactor, had deep convictions on the economic problems involving the Holy Land.

In his biography of Rothschild, Isaac Naiditch related:

In one of his conversations with the late M. M. Ussishkin, famous Zionist leader and president of the Jewish National Fund, the latter stressed the primary importance of land purchases. The Baron said:

"'Vous cherchez l'Eretz, moi je cherche Israel" (your concern is with the Land, mine is with Israel).

"On relating that conversation to me, the Baron added:

"In our work we all have the same objective, although I don't talk about it as much as you do. We all aim at establishing a large Jewish community in Palestine. That requires first of all people, many people. And the people must have firm economic and social foundation under their feet. That is what makes a country independent. The Jews who managed to create a great industry in Lodz after being driven out of Moscow, the Polish Jews who so energetically and successfully developed such an intricate industry— why shouldn't they be able to do likewise in Palestine? But Palestine will have to produce other articles than those produced in London and other European cities. Goods manufactured in Palestine must be suitable for the Eastern markets, and must be cheaper. That ought not to be too difficult, if cheap credit is obtained for buying raw materials and if the terms of payment are made easy.'"

This, spoken more than 20 years ago, has special significance as a guide for present-day planners of Israel's economy.

Hearty Laughs

The joke to end all jokes on the subject of Jews who change their names is undoubtedly Israel Zangwill's poem:

I am rich, and for honour I cherish a flame;
Yet my fellows don't give me the homage I claim;
It must certainly be on account of my name—
MOSES MOSES

No longer I'll suffer this terrific shame;
But of brand-new cognomens they always make game.
So I'll fain be content with a change very tame—
MOSES MENZIES

But still the first Moses his feeling did maim,
So he ventured a slight improvement to frame,
And on neat slips of pasteboard emblazoned the same—
MONTY MENZIES

Another ambition now over him came;
An extra initial he quickly did aim,
And one day in rapture was heard to exclaim—
MONT I. MENZIES
But he knocked out his "I" in a fit of self blame,
For the "I" stood for Isaac and Grundy's good dame,
And with "or" in the Middle sought fashion's acclaim—
MONT MORENZIES

But the "es" at the end sounded dreadfully lame;
The original ending it seemed to proclaim;
He determined henceforward to be known unto fame—
MONT MORENCY

One day a great thought set his spirit aflame,
He joined them together, and thus he became,
A drop of skimmed milk in the creme de la creme—
MONTMORENCY

Knesset, Congress Democracy's Forces

By FRANK SIMONS

(An American Jewish Press Feature)

In this political year, the American people will go to the polls to select a President who will guide the destiny of our country during a period which well may prove to be one of the most crucial in the country's history. The election will be pointed out as an example of democracy in action—the people electing their choice of leaders.

Yet, there are other democratic elections and various election procedures. And one of the most interesting is that which is practiced in the state of Israel. In an address before the House of Representatives in Washington recently, Rep. Emanuel Celler, Congressman from New York, made this statement:

"We have taken pride and talked a lot about Israel's army, her cultural advances, her achievements in agriculture, her industrial potential and so forth. We are so busy asserting Israel's democracy that we have forgotten to mark for identification and place into evidence its proudest exhibit of democracy at work. How many know that prior to the establishment of the state of Israel, one of the most passionate centers of interest among its leaders was the form its parliament would take when the free and independent republic of Israel would come to be? Would Israel's parliament be modeled after the American Congress, the British or continental systems? . . . What finally evolved was a synthesis of the systems of the Belgian, French and British House of Commons."

The system of election which has developed to elect this parliament—called the Knesset—is as democratic an institution as one could hope to find anywhere, although it differs vastly from the American system.

In Israel, the citizenry votes for parties rather than individuals. As Rep. Celler explains, "It is the majority party in the Knesset which chooses its ministers, or shall I say, heads of the executive department, which we in the U. S. call the Cabinet. The responsibility ultimately focuses in the Knesset. The people elect the Knesset; the Knesset forms the government."

Mr. Celler goes on to explain the difference by stating that in this country, the President is elected by the people and chooses his Cabinet independently, needing only the advice and consent of the Senate.

The difference between the Congress here and Israel's Knesset would make a fruitful study for students of government, Mr. Celler believes. Some of the basic differences he explains in the following paragraphs.

The main departure is the unicameral system adopted by Israel, which means that there is only one law making body whereas here we have the House and the Senate. There is also a change in the makeup of the parties which comprise the government. Fundamentally, in the United States, there is a two-party system, while in Israel a multi-party system holds sway.

The three principal groupings are the workers, middle class and religious, with various parties formed within these categories. This fact, in part, explains the necessity of forming coalition governments in the new state.

Committee referment also differs between the two governments. Here, a bill can be referred by any member of Congress to a committee. It is then acted upon or discarded as the committee decides. In Israel, a bill is first read before the Knesset as a body, then, if necessary, referred to committee. A bill must have three readings before it is passed.

Celler touches on the human aspects of the Knesset members. He states that during the first Knesset, antagonism between members was so great that some

HAPPY NEW YEAR From WHITING MILK SALESMEN

For more than a century Whiting's has had the privilege of serving thousands of Jewish customers in New England. During those years, the use of Whiting products has become practically a tradition with Jewish families who appreciate the purity and fine quality of the many dairy items delivered by Whiting salesmen.

Again this year, as in the past, the entire Whiting organization wishes to thank you for your patronage and to extend to you the sincerest wishes for a truly Happy New Year!

Knesset, Congress Democracy's Forces

members, representing opposing parties, would not speak to each other either on or off the Knesset floor. Much of this personal animosity is now disappearing, he adds.

Disagreement, however, is a natural course of events in the formation of a new government. In the early U. S. Congress, Celler states, "debate was rough and burly and anything but polite, with members hurling insults at each other about personal habits and ancestry."

Even today, in some of the larger government bodies, such as the 625 member French National Assembly, there is much disorder. Celler tells the following system used by the French presiding officer:

"(He) does not use a gavel with which to call the assembly to order. When it becomes unruly, he rings a bell (situated over his head) once. If nothing happens, he rings twice and, if not successful, rings a third time. If disorder still continues, he puts on his hat as a symbol that he is about to leave and terminate the proceedings. And if the disorder continues, he walks out."

In the matter of decorum, Israel has done better than older and more famous parliaments. In France, fistfights are common, and, even in the staid British House of Commons, a member once slapped the face of a political opponent. This was before World War II when Jewish Labor member Emanuel Shinwell slapped the face of a Conservative member, "afflicted with a 'small' dose of anti-Semitism, who had told him to go back to Poland whence his parents came."

Unlike members of Congress here, who are predominantly lawyers, Knesset members represent a greater variety of professions. In the words of Mr. Celler, "There are men and women who were political prisoners in at least three continents, people who could not walk the streets when the Union Jack flew over Government House in Jerusalem, leaders of the Jewish resistance and underground immigration movements, Zionist contemporaries of Dr. Theodor Hertzl and old farmers who pioneered in the collective and cooperative farm movements. There are economists and writers and, understandably, religious representatives."

Very impressive in the statistics of the present Knesset is the fact that there are 13 women in the 120 total membership. In Congress, there is one woman senator, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, of Maine, and only 10 representatives out of a total of 531.

The distaff side of the Knesset has representatives from most of the major parties. They include Golda Myerson, Ada Maimon, Beba Idelson, Sarah Kafrit, Genia Twersky, Devorah Netzer and Rahel Zabari, all of Mapai; Esther Rahiel-Naor, Herut; Hannah Lamdan, L'Achduth Haavodah; Shoshanna Persitz, Simha Beba and Bath-Sheva Katznelson, General Zionist; and Esther Vilenska, a Communist member.

This, says Mr. Celler, provides evidence that Israeli women have taken a rightful place in government, not as women, but as individuals. At the same time it shows that Israel is making forward strides in erasing the status of women as second rate citizens.

Mr. Celler concludes, "It is men, however, like Joseph Sprinzak, chairman of the Knesset, and Benjamin Mintz, Zeev Sheffer and Yosef Serlin, who are vice-chairmen, who are showing by their statesmanship and their devotion to duty that they are providing Israel with very fortunate leadership —a leadership that has translated the blueprint of government on paper into a sturdy system of institutions dedicated to the welfare and the freedom of its citizenry. They have done themselves—and us—proud."

Arab Population Studied In Book

Joseph B. Schechtman, an authority on population transfers, in his new book, "The Arab Refugee Problem," (Philosophical Library, 15 E. 40th, NY16), warns the Western powers against pouring vast sums into Arab lands without securing Arab cooperation in the implementation of a program of reintegration of refugees and their resettlement in Arab lands.

"The Western powers," he asserts, "cannot avoid bearing responsibility for the painful and growingly expensive stalemate which has been reached with respect to the Arab refugee problem." He advocates adoption of the plan presented by John B. Blandford, Jr., former head of the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, who proposed wholesale redistribution of refugees in Syria, Iraq and Egypt. This plan, however, has failed to receive Arab support.

Mr. Schechtman reviews the entire refugee situation and analyzes the position of the state of Israel, of the Arabs, the U. S. and the UN. He offers proof to show that the number of Arab refugees has been exaggerated and that the entire political approach of the Arabs is aimed not at aiding the sufferers but at destroying Israel.

Even anti-Zionist, pro-Arab Dorothy Thompson is quoted, in a statement culled from an Arab newspaper, as having said that "the return of the refugees to their original homeland would not benefit them, or be in their best interest, since in Israel they would be a minority among the Jews." There is general agreement—except among Arab politicians—that it is folly to speak of returning the Arabs to Israel, unless propagators of such thoughts mean to create a fifth column for the destruction of the Jewish state.

Mr. Schechtman has written a most illuminating book in which he exposes all the false arguments against Israel, all the padded figures about refugees, all the attempts at destroying Israel.

He presents facts to show that the Arab states, with vast territories, are underpopulated and can well afford to take in the refugees for their own.

His new book should go a long way to set people's minds straight on this important issue.
