Study Shipping Through Red Sea

JERUSALEM—Israel's Minister of Communications, Moshe Carmel, flew to Eilat to study arrangements for the transshipment of goods from Europe to Africa, via the Israeli outlet on the Red Sea. The proposed arrangement which envisages transshipment of freight by rail and road from Haifa to Elath, and reloading on ocean freighters bound for African ports, offers substantial savings for a limited number of European shippers.

At present the Israelis use the route in reverse: African goods are brought to Elath via the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba and are either used in Israel, or transhipped to Europe after the overland journey to Haifa. The savings over the Cape of Good Hope route around Africa is estimated at one month of what is now a two-month journey and at least 25 percent in cost. When the railroad is extended past Beersheba to Elath the cost will decrease still further.

Israel Holds Four For Questioning

TEL AVIV — Four persons were being held today for questioning about the shooting of Dr. Rudolf Kastner, editor of a Hungarian-language newspaper and Jewish leader in Hungary during the Nazi occupation.

Kastner was gravely wounded in the attack, but the hospital indicated that he is now out of danger. The attack occurred yesterday outside Kastner's home.

The victim is a controversial figure, with some Hungarian Jews looking on him as a hero and others viewing him as a collaborator. In 1954, one of the latter called Kastner a collaborator. Kastner's accuser was tried and acquitted on a charge of criminal libel. The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Israel Bond Group Lists Providence Chairmen

Several prominent civic leaders have accepted appointments to the Providence Committee, State of Israel Bonds, it was announced last evening by Judge Frank Licht, general chairman of the 1957 campaign.

The new appointees are Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, honorary chairman; Dr. Ilie Berger, chairman Trustees and Guardians committee; Alter Boyman, chairman, committee for organizations, and Julius C. Michaelson, chairman, BIG Day committee.

Serving on the Women's Division of which Mrs. Edmond W. Goldstein is chairman, will be Mesdames Howard Schneider, chairman, Chen Committee; Beryl Segal, chairman, BIG Day committee; Perry Bernstein, speakers committee, and Abraham Percelay. Women's Division coordinator.

In greeting the 20 top community leaders at the organizational meeting at the Sheraton-Biltmore last evening Judge Licht said:

"We have a duty to educate our fellows in Providence to the importance of the Israel Bond effort.

"I look forward to a successful drive because whereas prior to recent developments many may not have had a sense of urgency towards Israel, I feel this is no longer true. They are no longer taking the news in their stride. Shown the way by those valiant people, the spark and the willingness is now here to assist Israel in the re-building of her capital funds. This is a community responsibility and I know we will get the people to go along with us."

Judge Licht then presented Leo Lania, prominent foreign correspondent who is assigned to the United Nations by six of Europe's leading newspapers.

Mr. Lania stressed the fact that while "Israel is now in a better position than she has been at any time during the nine years of her existence as a sovereign state, she is also at the most critical and decisive period of her life."

With the right of passage through the Gulf of Aqaba, Israel will for the first time be enabled to integrate her economy into a broader realm. The Gulf is an "open door" to the countries of SW Asia and Africa which have been marked for future markets for these industrial materials.

"If this vast industrial program can be stepped up with the help of Bond dollars, Israel will no longer be a small agricultural country in that area, but the only industrial country. The impact of this on other countries would be tremendous," he said.

Pupils Present Piano Recital

Pupils of Arthur Einstein presented a program of piano music Sunday afternoon at the Music Mansion.

Participating were Sandra Meyer, Joanne Gerstenblatt, Joyce Sydney, Harriet Salk, Tena Marks, Deborah Smira, Judith Press, June Silver, Phyllis Cohen, Judith Tanenbaum, Deborah Potter, Carol Feinberg, Joan Russian and Martin Nass.

The highlight of the program was a composition by Schubert for two pianos played by Asya Ellash and Shella Hollander.

Misses Silver, Cohen, Tanenbaum and Potter will play in the next recital which will be held at the Music Mansion on Sunday, April 7, at 3:15 P.M.

The following recital will be on April 28, featuring Miss Russian, Asya Ellash and Martin Nass.

Council To Meet Israeli Student

Members of the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, have been invited by the Boston Section to be their guests at a meeting on Monday at 1:30 P.M. in Boston. Nessim Hazoreg, NCJW's scholarship student from Israel, who is doing graduate work at Boston University School of Social Work, will be introduced to the guests.

Upon completion of his studies, Mr. Hazoreg will return to Israel to implement the American methods of social service he has learned in this country. He is one of 15 students from Israel, France and North Africa currently in the United States on a scholarship provided by the National Council.

Members may obtain transportation to Boston by calling Mrs. Perry Bernstein, UN 1-0773.

Calendar to Clear Teen Functions

The Jewish Youth Council of the Jewish Community Center will sponsor a "Teen Calendar" in Providence, it was announced by Edward Rotmer, JYC president.

The group will have on file at the main Center building a listing of all major events scheduled by the city's teen organizations. Groups planning to schedule a major event may then call the JCC office or the chairman of the calendar committee to clear that date, thus eliminating the possibility of conflict or interference with plans.

Organizations which wish to file dates for their events with the JYC calendar are requested to furnish information on the event to Miss Brenda Kritzman, DE 1-2690, or the JCC office, UN 1-2674.

In the event of a conflict in dates, the JYC will make the information known to groups involved so that new arrangements can be made. Other members of the calendar committee include Miss Rona Snyder and Stephen Riter.

New Cub Pack At Main Center

Gas Co. Seeks 'Mrs. Rhode Island'

Cooking a nutritious meal or sewing a fine seam will have precedence over how one looks in a bathing suit in the judging for the title "Mrs. Rhode Island", in a contest to be conducted by the Providence Gas Company.

Entry blanks are available from "The Girl in White" at the Providence Gas Company, and must be obtained and filled out in time to be received by the American Gas Association in New York on March 15.

Open to any married woman, 21 or over, who is a citizen and has been a Rhode Island resident for at least three months, the contest will be conducted in four preliminary stages with four participants in each. One winner in each preliminary will compete in the final local contest, when one will be selected "Mrs. Rhode Island" and another will be named runner-up.

The winner of the local contest will then compete in the national contest for "Mrs. America" to be conducted during the week of May 5 at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The preliminary contests will be held on April 2, 5, 9 and 11, with the final competition set for April 16. All the contests will be held in the Home Service Department of the Providence Gas Company.

Lesson of the Mid-East Crisis

The great Mideast crisis is not yet wholly over, even after the speeches by Golda Meir and Henry Cabot Lodge which announced somewhat austere a meeting of minds between Israel and America. The Moscow-Cairo axis countries remain sullen, and Krishna Menon uttered Cassandra warnings against "secret diplomacy" as he left for home. The real test of the end of the crisis will come only when Col. Nasser shows his hand about the clearing of the Suez Canal and about Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Yet the first phase of the crisis has now been rounded out, the diplomatic tangle has been unraveled, and a formula has been found which gives Israel at least a minimal security on Aqaba, which rescues Secretary Dulles again from the diplomatic swamp that he had himself made and plunged into, and which gives Nasser a chance to save face.

A great politician is one who doesn't make the same mistake twice, but most politicians rarely draw any lessons from their blunders. Yet it would be tragic if this particular crisis, which turned on the question of Israeli withdrawal, did not teach the world some bitterly learned truths.

What are they? The first is that while Israel has had to withdraw from the territory it had occupied by arms, its basic position shows a net gain. For the first time in its history, it will be able to assert its right to free shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba. For the first time also Israel has met and weathered a diplomatic cold war right after winning a brilliant military victory.

This could not have happened if Israel had not made something of a nuisance of itself, both in military and diplomatic terms. It is a harsh and sad truth to learn, yet nevertheless a truth: if Israel had sat and waited for Nasser to relent and for the U. S. or the UN to summon up some courage to confront him, it would have waited forever. The Israeli invasion dramatized the fact that Israel meant business about surviving, and the stubbornness of Ben-Gurion and Golda Meir in the face of the threats of President Eisenhower, Dulles and Dag Hammarskjöld dramatized the fact that David could stand up against the Goliaths of the West as he had stood up against the Goliath of the desert.

These facts were not lost on world opinion. The amazing change in American and UN opinion toward Israel in the past few weeks has expressed a mixture of sympathy for an underdog, admiration for a tenacious fighter against odds, and moral revulsion against the double-standard hypocrisy of a few men in high places. For a time Israel made itself unpopular as a seeming "aggressor," but in the process it has forced both the U. S. and the UN to take positions from which both would have shrunk earlier.

Editor's Mailbox

While I am still under the spell of the most outstanding event in behalf of our people, which took place on Feb. 16 at the opening campaign for Israel Bonds at the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., I want to send you this message and the highlights of the affair.

In all my 45 years of activity in Jewish causes, that night proved that finally Jewry has made up its mind that it will not allow itself to be pushed around any more. The Jews of America matched the untold heroism of the Israelis by an overwhelming outpouring of close to $20 million.

The Bond Organization, with Dr. Joseph Schwartz, executive vice-president, Larry Laskey, national conference chairman, a large group of Bond staff members and many volunteers, worked from early morning until late at night with meetings, visits at the hotels, thousands of telephone calls, and what not, and managed to fill the ballroom to capacity, the adjoining ballrooms, the foyer, even the large cabanas, with everyone paying cash of $1,000 or over; some as high as a quarter of a million dollars.

Over 2500 people listened and were thrilled when Mr. Laskey opened the function. Then we listened to former President Harry S. Truman. His speech was a statesman's masterful oration about his defense of Israel's position.

Then we heard from a large group of entertainers including actress Shelley Winters, who told the story of her first visit to Israel. She described how the Fedayeen attacked a farm which she had visited the day before. The husband was killed and the wife and child barely escaped.

The highlight of the dinner came when Ira Gilden, a New York banker, read a letter from Israel Rogosin of New York, buying $1 million worth of Israel Bonds, becoming the largest single purchaser of Bonds since the beginning of the campaign in 1951.

When Dr. Schwartz, after making presentations of two gifts to Eddie Cantor, announced that over $15 million in Bonds was purchased so far, hundreds of people from the floor, without any urging, announced hundreds of thousands in additional Bond purchases.

I am ashamed and sick at heart to think of what we could do in Providence and do not do.

Israel Resnick has been a great help to me here. He got

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Let's Talk About the Home

By BERYL SEGAL

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Home for the Aged we listened to a report of a case that sent shivers down our spines and brought tears to many eyes. An ailing son applied for admission of his father. For many years the father stayed at the home of the son where he was treated with the utmost respect and tenderness.

But things have changed. The son is sick and cannot attend to his business as usual. His wife spends most of the time at the shop to give him a hand. The aged father is therefore left alone all day long. His food is not prepared for him properly. He is alone in the house without companionship and without proper care.

The son reluctantly decided to bring his father to the Home for the Aged where his food will be given him in time and his needs will be attended to, and he will not sit for hours on end in loneliness and in brooding.

All the financial arrangements and formal preparations having been completed, the father and son went home to spend one more week-end together and to prepare for the moving on Monday.

During that week-end the son passed away.

Providing a home for his father was the last act of the son.

Needless to say, the father is now at the Home. The last wishes of the son are honored, although there can be no expectation of the fulfillment of the financial arrangement made by the son during his last visit to the Home.

Unusual as this case is, it is by no means alone in the annals of the Home for the Aged. Every resident of the home brings along a deeply moving human story.

And it is for this reason that I like to visit the Home now and then and to talk to people about the Home on Hillside Avenue in this column at least once a year.

Here is a place where elderly people live at their own pace, unhurried and unharried by a world driven by speed and tension.

On an evening, summer or winter, come in and walk unobtrusively through the halls and corridors of the Home. Take an unguided tour around the house which 123 men and women call home. Feel the warmth, see the cleanliness, sense the mood of the house. You will always find a few residents in the very comfortable lounge in front the Pawtucket crowd and drove me around to see our Providence people.

I am very happy that Frank Licht has accepted the chairmanship. I promise to devote as much time as my strength allows to help him achieve the most successful Bond year.

DR. ILIE BERGER

of a television set, watching their favorite programs and relaxing.

You may come at the time of a movie or a program of music, and find a goodly audience in the dim hall. In a room here and there a small group is gathered over a game or conversation. Or you may be rewarded, as I was one evening, by sitting at the long table in the rear of the Bes Midrash, the Home Shul, and listening to Cantor David Einstein teach the weekly portion of the Torah with commentaries to his study group.

The Business of the Board

It is for this reason also that I attend the meetings of the board of directors as regularly as possible. Here are people who have serious business to expedite. It is not a debating club, where you enjoy listening to yourself talk. As a matter of fact, there is seldom long talk at these meetings, and certainly no bickering or political string pulling.

The administration of a Home for the Aged is a serious responsibility, and the men and women on the board know this better than anyone else in the community. Negligence on their part means neglect of human beings not always able to help themselves or to go elsewhere. This sense of responsibility pervades every meeting of the board.

There is a household to manage, bills to meet, problems to solve, decisions to make. And the problems are not to be taken lightly, nor the decisions to be made snappily. Human lives and human sensitivities are in the balance.

Consider your own daily problems in managing the affairs of your household and multiply them a hundredfold, and you have an idea of the work allotted by the community to the board of directors and the officers of the Home for the Aged.

Rising costs of labor, and equipment, and food, and medicine, and maintenance. Ever increasing demands on the services of the Home by an ever increasing aged population. Newer and more scientific methods in care of the aged. All these mean higher budgets, greater expenses. The Home cannot stand still.

But the sources of income do not keep up with the greater demands. The budget of ten years ago looks like child's play when compared with the budget of this year. And yet, ask yourself how much did your contributions to the Home increase during these ten years?

Look at a few figures. Of the 123 residents at the Home today almost a half are infirm. This means that besides the usual care they also need constant help from a nursing staff. This constitutes a very heavy increase in the Home budget.

Only 20 residents are able to pay full maintenance, and 30 pay only part of their upkeep. All the others give to the Home their Old Age Assistance and other relief or insurance funds due to them. These funds cover only a half of the cost of living at the Home. When the resident is sick and infirm this sum represents even less of the actual cost of upkeep and care.

Always Get Care

The resident gets the care he needs regardless of ability to pay. This is the accepted policy of the Home, from which it will not depart under any circumstance.

How does the Home manage?

This is where you and I come in. Our membership dues and our contributions make up part of the needed costs.

The Ladies Association is a strong arm of the Home. By dues from members, by the annual Linen Shower, by the income from the Donors Dinner, coming this year on March 12, the Ladies Association is able to contribute to the upkeep of the Home. Last year the Ladies' share amounted to $24,000.

Special gifts help meet the expenses. Many people are in the habit of remembering the Home on happy occasions. Many donate articles of clothing and food. Many contribute towards special funds and favorite projects. Many put up memorials.

With all this the Home does not escape the burden of a deficit. Last year the difference between the income from all sources and the expenses was some $25,000. A small deficit to be sure, but an unnecessary one. The budget can easily be met with a little effort on the part of the community.

Think this over when you are asked for your dues, your donation, or gift to the Home.

SYD COHEN
Softball a la JCC

Elsewhere in this issue should appear the complete schedule for the spring and summer baseball and softball program to be conducted under the aegis of the Jewish Community Center. It's an ambitious program, with plans already formulated for seven leagues — Pee-wees, Midgets, Tween, Teen, Girls' Tween and Girls' Teen leagues, and the R. I. Jewish Softball League.

Because of the changeover of the Softball League from an independent circuit to a Center-sponsored League, and because this changeover has not yet been fully explained, let's get at it now.

As a separate and independent league, the Softball operation, despite its rather long life, was handicapped in several respects. First, it could not adequately recruit players to fill the ranks left by retiring players. Its appeal to the youth of the community could not be effective in the way that the JCC can make it effective.

Second, with all the good intentions in the world, the small group of men who annually operated the softball league in its former status could not as an independent group bring the needed solidarity to their beloved league. They were still individuals, with no community-wide status to back them up, resolve their difficulties, solve their disagreements.

These two factors are both rectified when the league operates as a function of the Jewish Community Center.

And there is another reason—one that at least a few members of the Softball League's organization have been aware of for some years. That is, that a league of this sort, by right, and by its nature, belongs in the Center family.

So now this "transfer" has been effected, and a much better league should result.

Art Eisenstein, program director of the JCC, represented the Center during the early winter negotiations with the Softball League directors. He helped make the transition a smooth and painless affair, along with Abe Lobel, JCC athletic director and former softball league pitcher. Now the League, which still is open to adult and young adult men, will be operated under the Center's Health and Physical Education Committee, which has been strengthened by the addition of several members of the old Softball League officers and board of directors.

There is one age limitation in the new league that will function this year. Players must be 19 years old and up. Among the reasons for that is the existence of the Center's Teen League, which itself is limited to boys from 16 to 18. Nobody has told me so, but obviously the Teen League can be stronger and more effective if the boys of its age range stay there, where they belong, and cannot be lured away to the older league.

At the same time, the strong Teen League guarantees a steady stream of talent to keep the Softball League going when a boy grows out of the 18-year-old limit; and he will be a better ball player, too, for having served in the Teen League, just as a major league ball player profits from having played every day in the minors rather than gathering splinters and rust on a big league bench.

Those who played in the Softball League last year are assured that there are no restrictions imposed on them for 1957 that did not exist last year. For instance, for their protection there is the same five dollar insurance fee which has proved to be valuable protection in the event of injury on the ball field. There are no extra charges. And the Center very generously has not insisted on its normal requirement of Center membership for all who intend to play.

Application to play in the new league are now being accepted by the Center. Plans are pretty much complete, rules have been established for all the league, and an early successful start thus seems to be assured.

The Center also has plans for year-round athletic activity, so that the end of the softball season will not signal the start of a long hibernating period between seasons. More of that at an appropriate time. Right now the smell of baseball and softball is in the air.

This column, which started plugging for the formation of an organized softball league in its first article that appeared in this newspaper, back in December of 1947, and which actually called the first meeting of what became the R. I. Jewish Softball League, now extends its sincere best wishes to the Center, its Physical Ed committee, the various leagues, and all those who are connected with it. I hope to be of service myself.

Sportsmanship

Although several weeks have slid by since the annual Sportsmanship event of Plantations Lodge of B'nai B'rith, I have not forgotten my strong impressions of that very successful evening—successful in purpose and in execution and achievement, if not in attendance. Here is an affair that should, and must, grow through the years.

The word sportsmanship is largely ignored in this day and age, and when it is brought into play is usually given little but lip service, and is twisted out of its original meaning. This represents a great loss to all of us.

But Plantations Lodge has brought the term back into the consciousness of the community, and by the very nature of the awards it makes for achievement in this field should stimulate others along the same path. All the high schools did not take advantage of the opportunity to participate in the program this year. Since this is only the second time the program was held, it can be held an excusable lapse.

But as the event grows in years and in stature, it should be expected that every high school principal and every coach of every sport will go all-out to make sure that no evidences of sportsmanship in their schools and among their teams go unnoticed.

Further, the principals and coaches should make doggone sure that their pupils know what it is all about — the significance of sportsmanship, as well as the contest conducted by the Lodge. If they don't, they will be derelict in their responsibilities as educators.

It was a pleasure in the recent B'nai B'rith program to note that the attractive Miss Martha Ann Pliner was one of the award winners for her essay on sportsmanship. Here is evidence of an appreciation of the true sense of the word. The column's congratulations go to Martha and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Pliner.

New Commissioner Accepts Challenge

Closeup

By FERN MARJA

Prison guards almost ended the career of Dr. Morris A. Jacobs before it began.

At least that's the way New York City's new Hospital Commissioner remembers it. In 1927, when Jacobs was an interne at City Hospital on Welfare Island, he and a confrere decided to swim the tide-swept West Channel.

Halfway over, they saw bullets dent the water around them and suddenly realized they had been mistaken by tower men at the nearby penitentiary for fleeing inmates.

"We were scared to death," says Jacobs with gusto. And, in this sensible state, they reversed their route, returned to their starting point with an awesome display of speed and identified themselves to the reluctant satisfaction of the guards.

Since then Jacobs has contented himself with breasting the currents of civil service.

HIS SUCCESS IS ATTESTED BY HIS APPOINTMENT, just 20 years later, to the top post in his department, the third elevation of its kind in the bureau's history.

A big, friendly man with something of the look of a St. Bernard, bluff-featured and sturdy, Jacobs has attained his present status without sacrificing personal popularity. Congratulatory messages from some 600 of his former colleagues have flooded his offices at 125 Worth St.

At 58, Jacobs is an urbane, persuasive citizen, fond of relaxing with photography and TV, devoted to his home near Staten Island's Todt Hill, a sometime fisherman and golfer, conscientious, easy-going, dedicated to the improvement of the 29 institutions under his supervision.

"City service presents a challenge," he says. "Is that a corny term? You're confronted with many problems. In many instances, you're successful. In others you're not—because of budgetary restrictions and other factors.

"I'm going to try to establish a closer liaison between me and the superintendent of each city hospital. Periodically, each superintendent will come down to see me and tell me about his difficulties.

"I have a definite advantage. I came up through the ranks. I know these men intimately. I can say, 'Joe, Jim or Jack, what's your problem?'"

"On the top level we think in terms of budget. 'How much will it cost?' We completely forget what we're here for—the care of the patient. I'm going to try to keep that in the forefront. My greatest asset here is that I have so many thousands of friends who will work with me and open up and tell me the story."

Morris Abraham Jacobs brings to his job a many-faceted background that is in the American tradition—a tradition that today is more honored in the breach than the observance.

BORN IN BROOKLYN, RAISED IN NEW JERSEY, he learned early to share family responsibility. His parents, Louis and Sarah Weisinger Jacobs, operated a 25-acre dairy farm in Irvington. They were hard-pressed financially.

Dr. Morris A. Jacobs

"I came up through the ranks"

"We just made ends meet," the Commissioner recalls. "Everyone had to pitch in and help."

Young Morris pitched in by getting up shortly after sunrise to milk the cows and do the chores in winter, by ploughing in summer. "It was a happy childhood because I like the country life—the swimming, the ice-skating, the football," he explains.

His mother determined his choice of profession when he was no more than eight.

"She had a very great influence on me," he says. "She was—and is—a very strong individual and she wanted her son to be a doctor. Every time she got a chicken she would call me in and show me its various organs. She'd say, 'Now look, this is the liver and this is the heart.'"

The boy had ample opportunity to extend his anatomical studies on Saturdays:

"I worked from 7 a.m. to midnight cleaning fish. I hate fish today. I used to do the scaling, chop off the heads, remove the entrails. I got $4 for the 17 hours. I saved up that money until I had about $35, with which I purchased a bicycle.

"The public school was two and a half miles away and I had to walk from Irvington to South Orange every day. The morning after I got the bicycle, I rode to school and put the brand-new bicycle in the basement. When I came back, someone had swiped it. I was heart-broken."

He was never to get another bike. After he had graduated from Short Hills High School, the family moved to Manhattan. There the future Commissioner worked his way through pre-med school at NYU by putting in vacation stints as a trolley car conductor and a welder.

"During my medical school career," he says, "I was also a taxi driver. I would get home at 4 or 5 p.m., grab a bite to eat, then drive a cab owned by a friend of mine. He drove it during the day and I would take over at night, until 3 a.m. It was rough, but it didn't do me any harm at all.

"Occasionally I'd pick up classmates as fares. I wore dark glasses and they usually didn't recognize me. But the next day I'd say 'Who's the blond you were with last night?' or 'You're a cheapskate—tipping the taxi driver only a dime.'"

In 1924 his sister introduced him to Anne Platt. She has been Mrs. Jacobs for almost 20 years. "The first time I saw her," says her husband, "I thought she was quite pretty and had a very good sense of humor. She was excellent company.

"I was a shy kid. So much so I went to very few dances because I was shy of the opposite sex. My wife deserves all the credit for bringing me out. She wasn't the shy type—definitely not."

Jacobs' advances in the Hospitals Dept. were steady but leisurely. After nailing down his M. D. in 1925, he interned at New Jersey's North Hudson Hospital and at City, then served his residency at the New York City Cancer Institute. He went back to City in 1928 as Deputy Medical Superintendent, in 1935 crossed the bay to assume the post of Medical Superintendent of Sea View Hospital, the tuberculosis center.

* * *

THE FAMILY STILL OCCUPIES THE 14-ROOM

frame house on Sea View's grounds, almost the highest point on the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Florida. It is a picturesque spot, but not prescribed for sinus sufferers. In foggy weather Jacobs regularly climbs out of bed at 3 or 4 in the morning to spray his nose.

He remains loyal to Staten Island, however, contending that the long ferry ride after a night meeting gives him a chance to catch up on his paper work. Mrs. Jacobs teaches at P.S. 40 in New Brighton.

The Jacobs offspring are deeply involved in island activities: Ruth, 20, is associated with the Jewish Community Center; Richard, 17, who wants to be a physician, is a senior at Curtis High School in St. George.

"One thing that's very dramatic is the change in hospitals since I was an interne," says Jacobs, who was promoted to General Medical Superintendent of the department in 1949 and Deputy Commissioner in 1955. "The wards then were filled with mastoids, pneumonias, middle ear infections, VD.

"What happened? Along came sulfa drugs, then antibiotics, then early ambulation. I'll cite a for instance of the last. A maternity case would stay in the hospital two weeks in those days. Now she is usually out in four or five days. The hospitals now are filled with the diseases of old age. That is one of our major problems."

Sparked by this aspect of his work, Jacobs is increasingly interested in geriatrics, a field that is concerned with the health of the old. His reading is generally confined to medical magazines. He manages to find time to romp on the lawn with his boxer and to watch cowboy films on TV on Sundays, a pursuit he enjoys because "they put me to sleep."

* * *

HE IS INCLINED TO BE A TRIFLE SMUG ABOUT

his culinary prowess. He specializes in preparing meat, "indoors or out." With the diplomacy that is his trademark, he concedes that his wife has a broader range. "She's an excellent cook of Jewish dishes—blintzes, everything," he says. "She learned the art from her mother."

A passion for good food has added 22 pounds to the Jacobs frame since his salad days. He relishes linguini with clam sauce, pirogen and sour cream, mushroom-barley soup. "I love to eat," he confesses. "I have to watch my diet. I could eat seven or eight rolls with my meals, if I let myself go."

The Commissioner is a one-drink man. "I'm very sensitive to liquor," he says. "One drink and I'm finished. My upper lip gets paralyzed. Really."

In 1950 he quit smoking for three years, now limits himself to a pack a day. After thinking a moment, he downgrades this estimate. "About 12 cigarettes a day, I'd say," he says thoughtfully. This is obviously the rashest kind of optimism, since he has already cadged four during the course of the interview.

What would he ask for if he were granted three wishes? The Commissioner reflects a moment, then clicks them off:

"First, good health for the family. Second, happy marriages for my two children. Third, that I be successful in providing the proper care for the patients under my jurisdiction." His blue eyes snap to attention and he adds with a booming laugh: "Maybe the last should be first."

Know Thyself How Secure Are You? — By Wells Carr —

No one feels secure all of the time, but if you feel apprehensive most of the time, some of your psychological attitudes need to be changed.

This may be easier said than done, but, with intelligence and determination, you can rid yourself of your fears and worries. Go back to your childhood and adolescence to find the causes for your lack of self-confidence or for your anxiety. Try also to develop a more mature outlook and philosophy which will enable you to face with greater courage and realism the problems which may arise.

(Score each question answered Yes according to directions.)

1. Are you very ill at ease in new surroundings, new situations, meeting strangers? (Add 3) ( )
2. Do you quickly modify a statement if it looks as though your listeners object to it? (Add 2) ( )
3. Are you distrustful of strangers, "foreigners," newcomers to your locality or to the groups in which you participate? (Add 4) ( )
4. Are you always testing the one you love to be sure that he or she is true to you, that you are still cherished and esteemed? (Add 4) ( )

5. Are you inclined to disparage persons who outshine you? (Add 3) ( )
6. Are you quick to defend yourself if you feel someone is criticizing or accusing you? (Add 2) ( )
7. Do you rely upon alcohol or drugs to keep you going? (Add 5) ( )
8. Are you always dissecting what others say to or about you? (Add 4) ( )
9. Are you very appearance-conscious? (Add 1) ( )
10. Are you an alarmist—often foolishly and needlessly upset? (Add 4) ( )

From 21 to 32 exposes a very high degree of insecurity—you must fight to conquer your fears and inferiorities and try to develop a more mature and objective outlook. Between 7 and 20 informs you that you have a few serious psychological weaknesses which need to be studied and overcome if you are to become a truly effective and well-adjusted individual. Less than 7 assures you that you have a good amount of assurance and feel secure most of the time.
