GJC Women's Division Plans To Hold Initial Gifts Affairs

Moved by the critical situation in the Middle East, the Initial Gifts phase of the Women's Division of the 1958 campaign of the General Jewish Committee will get underway with two receptions and luncheons on Oct. 28 and 29.

A highlight of the affairs will be the welcome home for Mrs. Bertram L. Both Mrs. Bernhardt and Mrs. Irving will give first hand reports on their impressions of Israel and present conditions in that country as they saw them.

Friedel Stern, Israeli writer and cartoonist who is considered an authority on Israel's immigrant absorption problems, will be the guest speaker at both luncheons, it was announced today by Mrs. Sidney A. Kane, Initial Gifts chairman.

Mrs. Kane is being assisted by co-chairmen Mesdames Sol Koffler, Albert Shore, Archie Fain, Joseph K. Levy and Leonard I. Salmonson.

Princeton University To Open Fall 'Bicker' To 14 Juniors

PRINCETON, N. J. — In order to prevent a recurrence of last year's charges of discrimination against Jewish students, the Princeton University upper class eating clubs, through David J. Callard, chairman of the Inter-club Committee, has announced that he is sending letters to 14 Princeton juniors. These students have neither affiliated with one of the clubs nor taken advantage of the university's dining facilities.

"We do not want to add to any unhappy experiences of last year but we do feel you need formal arrangements," the letters say. "As it is, inertia alone would inhibit a club's acceptance of a member at this unusual time."

Callard said the committee ruled that the fall "bicker"—the system by which the Princeton clubs choose their members—would be open to the 14 in an unprecedented move. He said the 14 should approach the clubs on their own or wait until they are approached by the clubs.

Even though the opportunity to "bicker" might be no more than a new opportunity to be rejected by the clubs, most of the 14 welcomed Callard's announcement.

"I've been eating on Nassau St. and it's very lonely," said Glenn Meyer, one of the group. "I miss very much the social life that a club could offer and the chance to do something with my classmates. I stayed out of the alternate (university) facility because I hoped for another opportunity to get into a club. I don't regret having to go through the same thing again."

Another of the 14, Paul Rochmis, said:

"I didn't get into a club last year through a bad break. I don't miss having to eat alone because I enjoy the independence."

"I feel there are many faults with bicker, for example, religious discrimination and anti-intellectualism. But I still want the social life of the clubs and that's why I'm willing to bicker again."

Another student was Tom Trumpy, who said:

"Bicker is a perfectly acceptable system. But there is a certain margin of error in it."

"I've been eating wherever I can catch a meal and I would also like to get into an eating club and I look forward to going through the same grind all over again."

Probe School Incident In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES — Dr. Louis Mackay, the Argentine Minister of Education, told newspapermen recently that his ministry was launching an immediate investigation into the action of the principal of a public school for girls in segregating Jewish pupils from Catholics in the classrooms of the school which is in a predominantly Jewish district. A Jewish deputy, member of the Government party, announced that he would raise the case in Parliament.

The incident, revealed earlier by a news broadcaster, has created strong feelings not only in the Jewish community but among the Catholic majority as well. The DAIA, the Jewish representative organization, has not yet intervened in the case, having been asked by the parents of pupils at the school to let them fight out the issue.

The chairman of the parents' committee said that he had documentary proof that the principal, Mrs. Maraia Teresa Quiroga de Nocetti, had ordered the segregation. He expressed belief that she would be removed from her position as principal of Public Commercial High School No. 16. He said she was well known for her anti-Semitic antecedents. Both Catholic and Jewish parents have advised their children to remain away from the school until the principal resigns.

GJC CAMPAIGN LAGS

General Jewish Committee leaders today reported that the 1958 campaign is lagging.

With the campaign underway for almost a month, they expressed concern because of the slow card coverage. The present total contributions or pledges stand at $341,245 which shows an increase for the cards covered. Joseph K. Levy, general campaign chairman, said the cards are in the hands of good workers but they are not being turned in to GJC headquarters or at report meetings as quickly as in previous years.

Henry J. Hassenfeld, GJC president, issued an appeal to all workers to contact prospects immediately and report the results. Mr. Hassenfeld added that because of the loss of some prospects through death or removal from Rhode Island it was imperative that the maximum results be obtained on each card now outstanding.

The next report luncheon will be held at GJC headquarters, 203 Strand Building on Wednesday at 12 noon. Reports will be made promptly to enable workers to return to their offices without unnecessary delay. All workers are asked to attend.

RECEIVE APPLICATIONS

JERUSALEM—The Israeli Navy command is being flooded with applications from eager would-be submariners. The announcement that Israel would acquire two undersea craft from Britain brought applications from every quarter. It was learned that physical and mental requirements for the new submarine service will be quite stiff.

JWV Asks For Investigation Of Hate Publications

WASHINGTON — The Jewish War Veterans called upon the chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee to launch an immediate investigation into the sudden upsurge of financial backing for hate publications and hate mongers.

In a letter to Representative Francis E. Walter, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, Sam Shalkewitz, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans, indicated that "during the past six months, hate sheets and hate-oriented publications being circulated through the mails and by other means have increased fantastically.

"The rate of growth of these scurrilous publications, and the use of first class mail as a form of distribution, seems to indicate that these hate mongers have found a new and hitherto untapped source of revenue.

"Taking advantage of every issue that presents itself as a possible vehicle for hate mongering," he pointed out, "the professional 'hatist' is reaping a harvest at the bitter expense of innocent Americans who are selected as victims of despicable propaganda."

Commander Shalkewitz indicated that the bombings of schools and synagogues are "in large measure attributable to the inflammatory publications which are devoted to fanning racial and religious differences to white heat, and by threats as well as by direct action amounting to mob violence, and are generating hate toward one particular group and then another.

"Integration," he wrote, "is only one of the many issues used by the hate-monger in attempts to cite people to violence."

He urged Rep. Walter to take "appropriate investigatory action."

Israel Police Jailed For Killing Arabs

JERUSALEM — A military tribunal last week sentenced eight Israel border policemen to prison terms ranging from 7 to 17 years in the killing of 43 Arab villagers two years ago. The residents of Kafr Kassem were killed on the eve of Israel's Sinai campaign. The sentencing wound up the trial which lasted almost the entire two years.

The court, which also stripped all officers among the defendants of their rank, demoting them to privates, sentenced Major Shmuel Malinki to 17 years. Lt. Gabriel Dehan and Lance Corp. Shalom Offer received 15 year terms. Gavriel Ulliel and Edmond Nachmani, both corporals, and Makhiluf Karoush, Eliyahu Avraham and Albert Pahims, all privates, were sentenced to 7 year terms.

Major Malinki, who was blamed for the tragedy by Army Col. Issachar Shadmi, is 44. He has been in uniform for 22 years. Lt. Dehan, originally from Morocco, had a brilliant record in the war of liberation and in anti-Fedayeen action.

Corp. Offer, 27, was born in Tel Aviv. Corp. Ulliel, 27, was born in Algiers. Private Karoush, 24, is from Morocco. Private Avraham, 23, is from Rumania. Private Pahims, 22, and Corp. Hachmani, 25, are both from Morocco.

Before stating the sentence, prosecutor Colin Gillon cited the unblemished service records of the defendants in explaining why he had not asked the maximum sentence of life imprisonment. He noted also that the defendants had been in custody for almost two years.

The tribunal previously had sharply criticized Col. Shadmi who had been prosecution witness, calling his order "manifestly illegal." Col. Shadmi, now in the United States, is expected to return to Israel soon.

A refugee from Hitlerism, Miss Stern came to Palestine in 1936.

Purchase Land For New Country Club

With the purchase of 180 acres of choice farm land in Rehoboth, the first important step has been taken toward the creation of a new private country club for the Providence area, to be known as Crestwood Country Club.

The land, formerly known as Lush Acres, is located 8 miles from downtown Providence and 11 miles from the center of Fall River. Six substantial buildings easily convertible to country club use are situated on the land and there is an ample supply of water from three lakes and a wide stream.

Present plans call for transfer of the deed on Jan. 15, 1959 with remodeling work to begin on Feb. 1. According to the schedule, many facilities will be ready for use by June 15, 1959. These include the swimming pool, club house and locker rooms, dining room and cocktail lounge, tennis courts and driving range. It is expected that the 18 hole golf course will be ready for play in the spring of 1960.

The entire project was conceived and carried forward through the efforts of six men—Joseph Ackerman, Irving A. Ackerman, Nathan Lipson, Charles Salmanson, Hyman Fishbein, and Milton Dubinsky. These men set a goal of 300 families to complete the membership roster and this number is quickly being reached.

With all of the ambitious plans afoot, a great amount of work is necessary and several important committees are already in operation. Among them are the land committee, with Irving Chase and G. Sidney Granoff as co-chairmen; building committee, headed by Alfred Abrams and David Friedman; membership committee, with Barney Cramer and Dr. Joseph G. Fishbein, co-chairmen. As work progresses, other committees will be activated.

Morrison & Schiff Awards

THIS WEEK WE ARE HAPPY TO PRESENT

An Orchid To... A Carnation To...

Mrs. Leo Rappaport

Jack Mossberg

Not only is Mrs. Rappaport a devoted worker for many charitable causes, but she constantly encourages others to take a greater part in communal affairs. As president of the South Providence Ladies Aid, she visits the sick and needy and works hard at all charitable functions.

Mrs. Rappaport is active in many organizations, too many for all to be listed. She has given much of her time through the years to the Pioneer Women. She is also a hard worker for the GJC, and an ardent member of the Festival Committee, which plans and arranges programs for the Jewish residents of the State institutions.

Nominations for awards may be made to Morrison & Schiff Editor, Jewish Herald, 1117 Douglas Avenue, Providence

Mr. Mossberg has been in the forefront of the movement to establish a united Jewish congregation in Warwick since its inception several years ago. For two years he was vice-president of the newly formed Temple Beth Am. Now he is starting his second term as president, and it is under his administration that the building plans for the new temple have been drawn up and preparations for construction completed.

Despite his intensive efforts on behalf of his own growing community, Mr. Mossberg still has found time to lead the way in other endeavors. For three years he has headed Warwick's GJC Drive.

If It's the BEST,

It HAS To Be

Formula For Survival

All thinking members of the Jewish community have become alarmed in recent years by what Dr. Joachim Prinz, of Newark, president of the American Jewish Congress, has termed "the creeping process of assimilation and disintegration."

That there is growing indifference toward Jewish identification not only in the United States but in other free countries around the globe was confirmed at the recent meeting of the World Jewish Congress in Geneva. There, representatives from countries as far apart as India and Argentina reported that they too are concerned by a growing indifference toward Jewish identification and an increasing ignorance of Jewish values. Wherever Jews are free to integrate themselves into the cultural, social and economic life of their countries of residence, it would appear, Jewish survival is threatened "from within."

The destiny of the Jewish people thus depends on how well it can meet what Dr. Prinz has called "the challenge of freedom." But it is equally obvious that this challenge will not be met successfully unless we begin the most painstaking investigation of what causes the problem and what we can do about it. In brief, we need a good deal more knowledge than we have now of all the forces at play, and we need a real exploration of all the measures that will be required to cope with this, the most urgent task confronting Jewry.

It is heartening that the American Jewish Congress has become so sensitive and alert to this problem and has taken the lead in calling for a "national conference on Jewish survival" where Jewish leaders in every field would be able to contribute their thinking on the subject. It would be too much to expect that such a conference could supply all the answers to a problem that is of such formidable dimensions. But it would provide a start, and it would launch the community on an exploration of incalculable significance for the future of Jewry.

Israel Regarded as 'Pilot Area'

NEW YORK — Dr. Walter C. Lowdermilk, internationally-recognized soil conservation authority, told a two-day conference of scientists and engineers here that "Israel has become a pilot area for the entire Middle East, and for much of the less developed areas of the world."

Addressing the session of the Conference on Science and Technology for the Peaceful Development of Israel and the Middle East, which was held at the Hotel Statler here, Dr. Lowdermilk pointed out that Israel was compelled in the past decade "to create a new and modern agriculture in a picturesque land, much of which was little more than a made-made desert."

Dr. Lowdermilk enumerated the large-scale reclamation and conservation programs that have been undertaken in Israel. "These," he said, "include the drainage on marshes in lowlands, drainage of water-logged soil, irrigation of dry lands, design and application of contour farming, clearing deep soils encumbered by stones, control and storage of flood waters, and improvement and production of crops and livestock."

Reports on Atom

Dr. Philip Sporn, president of the American Electric Power Company, and one of the foremost experts on the peaceful uses of atomic energy, presented a paper entitled "Israel and the Atom." In his report, Dr. Sporn reviewed the economic and technical problems involved in providing Israel with nuclear power, pointing out that this source of energy could be a major determinant in fructifying the arid desert in the southern half of Israel.

A paper devoted to "The Influence of Atomic Energy on the Technical Development of Israel and the Middle East" was presented by Dr. Henry J. Gomberg, of the Michigan Memorial Phoenix Project, attached to the University of Michigan.

In addition to Dr. Lowdermilk, speakers in the soil conservation and water session included Jacob R. Sensibar, president of Construction Aggregates Corporation, Chicago, and Prof. Shraga Irmay, of the Division of Hydraulic Engineering of the Technion, who is now visiting in the United States on a research grant.

Sensibar, recognized as one of the world's outstanding earth engineers, said that the planners of Israel are incorrect in believing that "substantial agricultural production in the Negev desert" can be achieved. He stressed, however, that "several varieties of cellulose plants have been found growing native in soils with large contents of salt."

See Textile Industry

"If a substantial cellulose plant production can be established in the Negev," he asserted, "it would form the basis for a paper and synthetic textile industry. This could be a large and important industry for Israel and an important source of foreign currency."

Sensibar, whose company recently completed the restoration to productivity of 15,000 acres of Israel swampland, stressed the urgent need to conserve water both in Israel proper and in all countries of the Middle East. Prof. Irmay summarized the past 10 years of hydraulic engineering research conducted in Israel, under the sponsorship of Technion.

MORE IMMIGRANTS ARRIVE

JERUSALEM — Immigration is now increasing and is well beyond the low point reached during the recent lull. The number of newcomers who have arrived is 3,533. During August, there were 1,900 and in July 1,500.

Nearly 5,000 newcomers are expected in October, S. Z. Shragal, head of the Jewish Agency's Immigration Department, said.

The reason for the upswing in immigration is an increase in the number of newcomers from Eastern Europe, Shragal told the Jerusalem Post.

SUMMER HOLIDAY IN ISRAEL

The Rich and The Poor

By BERYL SEGAL

In the little town of my childhood on the Ukraine we had rich Jews and poor Jews. The rich Jew would be a merchant in furs, an owner of a flour mill, a dealer in cattle, or a transporter of grain. He would buy the standing timber of a section in the forest and cut it up for lumber and fuel. He would risk a price on the wheat and corn crops even before they were harvested. And he would ship carloads of grain and beans and sunflowers to the markets of Europe.

The rich Jew would wear the greatcoat made of bear skin and silver fox when he travelled to the great fairs of Russia, and he would come back smoking sweet smelling cigars made in foreign lands.

The poor Jew was the artisan, the one-man shop owner, the trader in dry goods and ribbons, the teacher, the shamos, and the man engaged in the service of the community. Their earnings were meager, their garb threadbare, and their pleasures few. With the sweat of their brow they provided for their houses.

It was clear to everyone who was rich and who were the poor.

Then came the Sabbaths and the Festivals, and the words rich and poor lost their usual meaning.

On days of Sabbath and Festivals the poor man would put on his black satin Kapote, neat and lustrous in the sunlight, and he would walk to Shul leading his youngest son by the hand and the older ones following close in the footsteps of their father, and he would be surrounded by his sons on coming in and going forth from the Shul, and there was Yom-tov in their steps. His house was filled with songs of the holiday and the chants of learning.

The world-weary merchant had no pleasure in all this. Here was something on which he could place no pricetag and could neither sell nor buy in the markets of the world.

In Israel we met such poor rich Jews—men and women who possessed great riches in poverty.

We came to the land with the American Express checks in our pockets, with heavy loads of unnecessary necessities in our luggage, and with bagfuls of things we thought in our vanity that we could not live without. Then we came face to face with the Israeli, and we saw his poverty, and we looked at our possessions, and we knew then how rich he is and how poor we are in his presence.

On the road between Tel Aviv and Haifa the guide pointed to some bushes growing on the sand banks of the highway and explained:

"We had a problem of keeping the roads clear and free for traffic. The winds would blow waves of sand and dump them on the road. Traffic would slow down, become dangerous, or stop altogether. Then an Israeli scientist found a shrub in South Africa that can take root in sand. He transplanted the bush to Israel, watched over it, failed and started all over again. Now these bushes are planted everywhere on the highways. They stand guard on the banks to hold back the sand drifts and to keep the highways clear at all times."

That same weekend we sat on the grass in front of my younger brother's house in the Kibbutz named Givath Hayim. A neighbor came to visit, he and his wife, close friends of my brother's family. Two very modest, very pleasant young people. My brother who is not given to flattery, introduced the visitors in glowing terms. There was love and admiration in his voice. He, Otto Gil, is the head of the Soil Preservation Department in the Ministry of Agriculture. She, a teacher who chose to work in the vegetable garden of the Kibbutz and is in charge of the multi-acre gardens.

Mr. Gil is the author of many works in the field of Horticulture and his advice is sought by specialists in this subject from many lands. It was he who found and introduced the dwarf pine tree from South Africa that holds back the sand drifts, and adorns the banks of the highways in Israel. Mr. Gil blushed modestly and changed the subject. He spoke English meticulously, as well as several other languages, and, of course, Hebrew.

This scientist, I later learned, lives in a two room apartment allotted to him by the Kibbutz just as is allotted to the dish washer of the communal dining room and to the driver of the garbage truck. In their attire and in their manner of living, the two of them cannot be distinguished from the other members of the Kibbutz. Slacks and short-sleeve shirts for him, white blouse and skirt for her, issued by the communal store. No more and no less than the others.

His wages? A tree surgeon in our city parks gets more. Mr. Otto Gil neither receives his wages nor does he save it or spend it. The check is received by the Kibbutz in which he lives. He is merely "loaned" to the Ministry of Agriculture because he can be more useful there than in the Kibbutz. When his usefulness is over or his services no longer required, he will return to the village and do work assigned

Save Israeli Boat From Egyptians

JERUSALEM — An Israel Air Force plane recently prevented the Egyptian Coast Guard from capturing an Israeli fishing boat which had already been manned by the Egyptians and was in tow toward Egypt.

Just before the Nitzan had been towed into Egyptian territorial waters, however, an Israel Air Force plane appeared overhead, and started to circle the Egyptian cutter. The crew of the latter immediately cut the line to the Nitzan, and headed back toward its own territory. The Nitzan then sailed for home, unmolested.

to him in the fields, in the orange grove, or in the barn.

A great scientist, a dedicated man, a poor Kibbutznik, but what a rich meaningful life is his.

My younger brother, neighbor of Otto Gil, also lives in the standard two room apartment, wears the clothes of the men of the Kibbutz and he too is a "loan" out of the Kibbutz to the cause of education. He is the head of a teachers' training college for the Kibbutzim, with two divisions, in Tel Aviv and in Haifa, in which a thousand students are preparing for the teaching profession. He is the author of many books on psychology and methods of education.

What does he get for his services?

He neither knows nor cares. The Kibbutz provides his needs and it is the home of his family. There his wife teaches in the Kindergarten. There his children are brought up and are made secure in health and in sickness. There he finds an outlet for his hopes and dreams. It is his workshop. Wages are the least of his concern.

Otto Gil drives a station wagon given to him by the Department of Agriculture for his travels in the land. My brother, the "President" of a college, has no vehicle. In the morning he walks the mile or two from Givath Hayim to the main highway, and there he is a familiar figure to the bus drivers and commuters between Tel Aviv and Haifa. He has been at this routine these many many years now.

My poorer brother. My rich brother.

And now as I remember these men and women we came to know well during our brief stay in Israel, and of the many whom we did not have the good fortune to meet, the words rich and poor sound empty and meaningless, just as they did on a Sabbath day and on the Festivals in the little town of my birth on the Ukraine. There are times and places when words have different meanings than those given to them in the dictionaries.

The Israeli lives in poverty when compared to the tourists who come to visit him, but he also basks in riches of which his tourist guests have no inkling.

Bouncers Among The 60

There is nothing an old-timer hates more than to have one of his cherished beliefs turn out to be false. It's a terrible letdown to see the reputation of some hero of the past crumbled, and the image tarnished.

The revelation about a year ago that the legendary Babe Ruth had "bounced" several of his 60 home runs into the stands during his record-breaking year of 1927 came as a cruel blow to the many thousands of fans who remembered and revered the Babe.

If the Babe got credit for home runs on bouncers that now are considered ground rule doubles, said some of the moderns, then he wasn't as good as the story tellers make him out to be. In that case, Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg, who hit 58 in one season, and Hack Wilson, who hit 56, were actually superior to Ruth. Maybe several others as well.

Well, kiddies and old-timers, it is a pleasure to be able to report that the reputation of Babe Ruth has now been polished clean, that it shines more brightly than ever, and that there now is no doubt about the Babe's prowess, if indeed, there ever could be.

The facts that follow came out in August of this year, on the tenth anniversary of the slugger's death.

It is true, all right, that Babe Ruth did bounce several of his 60 homers of 1927 into the seats. The best estimate is that eight or nine of the 60 were of this variety. And it is likewise true that the rule permitting this was changed before Wilson, Foxx and the hitters who followed achieved 50 or better.

BUT—and this is a mighty big BUT—there was another rule in the books as late as 1927 that took a great number of legitimate home runs away from the Babe. And this rule did not exist as a barrier to the pretenders to the throne in their big production years.

That rule—attested to by George Hildebrand, an umpire in the American League from 1912 through 1934—is best explained in Hildebrand's own words:

"When the Babe made his record, the ball was judged where it was LAST SEEN. Many a ball was hit out of the playing field fair, but when last seen it was in foul territory, and we had to call those shots foul. Now (today) the rule is judgment where the ball leaves the playing field. So, many balls Ruth hit, which left the playing field fair but curved foul high up in the seats when last seen, would be home runs today.

"I really think Ruth would have hit twice as many home runs—more than 100 anyway—if he'd had the benefit of this rule the hitters have on their side today."

So says George Hildebrand, adding that the rule was changed in 1931.

Well, that certainly makes a Babe Ruth fan feel better. Dog-gone, the record would be at least 70 or 80 if the Bambino had had the advantage of modern playing rules, even without his eight or nine bouncers!

But wait! Another expert on conditions then and now has another word in favor of the old Sultan of Swat (one of the many endearments by which George Herman Ruth was known during his long career). Ted Lyons, the old White Sox pitcher, who hung up a remarkable record with a perennial second division club, notes that Ruth's favorite home run territory was in center and right center fields. This was due in large part to the fact that he was pitched outside much of the time and often had to go fishing after bad pitches in order to get a chance to hit the ball.

And, says Lyons, considering this sector alone, the distance from the plate to the fences has been reduced, since Ruth's day, about 25 feet in Griffith Stadium, 45 feet in Fenway Park, 25 feet in Comiskey Park, 35 feet in Briggs Stadium. In Cleveland, the distance in the Municipal Stadium is less (with the inside fence) than in old League Park, while in Kansas City the fence is 45 feet shorter (and considerably lower) than it was in Philadelphia, and in Baltimore it is 25 feet shorter than it was in St. Louis.

Ted is of the opinion that Ruth today could hit 68 to 70 homers a season—regularly!

Ruth was a better showman in his field than P. T. Barnum. He had an amazing capacity for hitting homers in the clutch or at a dramatic time. Provide Babe with the proper setting, a special reason for hitting a homer, or a special request for one, and the poor pitcher was doomed.

So it was that he slugged 15 circuit clouts in World Series play, twice getting three in one game; so it was that he inaugurated the opening of Yankee Stadium with its first homer; and hit the first homer in the first All-Star game in 1933; opened the Boston Braves' season in 1935 with a homer off Carl Hubbell; smashed the "called shot" homer in Chicago during the 1932 World Series.

In keeping with this recital is the story of a less celebrated home run that the Babe hit in St. Louis way back in the early 1920s. The Yankees and Browns were involved in an extra inning battle. The score, 1 to 1—the hour getting late. Traveling secretary Mark Roth nervously paced the dugout mulling under his breath, until Babe Ruth called out and asked him what was wrong. Roth replied that the way this game was going the Yankees would miss their train out of St. Louis. They now had less than an hour to make it.

"Well, why didn't you tell me that before?" boomed the Babe in all sincerity. "Wait till I come up again next inning."

Believe it or not, in the very next inning — the 14th — Babe Ruth hit the homer that produced a tie game.

Once again D-Day headquarters will be set up in the Narragansett Hotel. Breakfast will be served to the D-Day captains and their cards for solicitation will be distributed to the workers.

Following breakfast, a final briefing will be given to the workers by GJC campaign leaders. The workers will then fan out to the various areas in Greater Providence and cover the cards assigned to them. Upon completion of the solicitation of the cards, the workers will report the results to D-Day headquarters. A tentative tally of D-Day contributions and pledges will be made at the headquarters.

vided the Yanks with a 2-1 win. And they caught the train!

So, you see, there is no need to worry about or scoff at the reputation of Babe Ruth. It was deserved, all right.

Postscript

During the anniversary of the Babe's death more than two months ago, an inquiring reporter from the New York Mirror questioned four persons — three men and a woman — on "What Record Would You Like to See Broken?" In their answers the four injected these observations about the Babe:

"Babe Ruth's? I hope nobody ever breaks that..."

"I never want to see Ruth's record broken..."

"I don't know if I want to see Babe Ruth's record broken... When they start to get near it I start rooting for them. Then I'm glad when they can't make it."

"I don't want to see Ruth's record broken."

Ballplayers of yesterday and today, along with millions of fans, say the same thing. That's why it's a good thing to clear away the doubts about the validity of this great mark.

Voices Alarm On Portrayal Of Nazi

NEW YORK — Dore Schary, a native of Newark and Academy Award winner and producer of some of Hollywood's pioneer films dealing with racial and religious prejudice, expressed alarm at the new portrait of the nazi currently emerging in American and foreign films. He spoke at an American Jewish Committee dinner.

The World War II stereotype of the brutal nazi is being re-examined, he said. However, this re-evaluation is "a little too superficial, a little too glib." What appears to be evolving is the "new concept that all Germans really hated Hitler and wanted nothing to do with the horrors that accompanied his years of power."

Ladies Association Plans Installation

Mrs. Samuel Bresnick will be installed as president of the Ladies Association of the Providence Hebrew Day School on Tuesday at 8 P.M. in the new auditorium. Rabbi Nathan Rosen will act as installing officer.

Other officers to be installed are Mesdames Earl Novich, first vice-president; Samuel Plescher, second vice-president; Maurice Gereboff, treasurer; William Newman, financial secretary; Seymour Krieger, recording secretary; and Rudy Freudenberger and Jerome Diwinsky, corresponding secretaries.

Rabbi Rosen will show his color slides taken during his recent trip to Israel. Hostesses for the evening will be Mesdames Alton Molasky, Samuel Rotkopf and Lewis Korn.

American Council For Judaism Split On Desegregation Stand

WASHINGTON — Elements within the American Council for Judaism are taking divergent views on whether their anti-Zionist organization should devote itself more to basic American issues by taking a stand along with other organized religious groups on the desegregation crisis.

National president Clarence L. Coleman, Jr., here for the dedication of the organization's new regional office, recently expressed a personal view, questioning whether Jewish groups should speak out on the issue of Negro rights. Coleman said he did not wish his own opinion to be construed as reflecting official ACJ policy which apparently continues under discussion within the organization.

Anti-Zionist

ACJ members in the South have urged that the group confine its activities to "combatting Zionism." But outside the South, others hold that as both Jews and Americans, they want their national organization to take a pro-integration stand conforming with that taken by the Reform rabbinate.

This was described as part of a new tendency seeking the broadening of the "American base" of the council's operations in order to strengthen its position that Zionism is not a legitimate part of the American scene, and that Jews may legitimately act as co-religionists but not as co-nationalists.

Leading Issue

Many of the ACJ leadership acknowledged that the desegregation question is the leading domestic human rights problem involving Americans of all faiths. However, they feel the ACJ budget is too limited to enter this area of activity, that it might split the organization along sectional lines and detract from the major goal of fighting Zionism.

Coleman stressed that the Israel Government should promote peace during the present lull in the Middle East by abandoning "expansionist Zionism" and restricting immigration. He said the new Washington office would engage in no lobbying activities but would serve the membership of this region of the country including members in Richmond and elsewhere in the South.

Ben Gurion Ends 3-Week Holiday

TEL AVIV — Prime Minister David Ben Gurion, refreshed and fit for a return to political action after the holidays, last week completed a three-week vacation in his hideaway at Sde Boker.

Ben Gurion celebrated his 72nd birthday during his vacation with 10-mile walks and the addition of a half-hour of extra calisthenics to his physical fitness routine. Other leisure hours were spent in reading, mainly Spinoza, the Greek classics and the Bible.

The absence of Mrs. Golda Meir Israel's Foreign Minister, now in New York for the General Assembly of the United Nations, forced Ben Gurion to break up his vacation for two days of attention to urgent security and foreign policy matters.

Nazi Congress To Be Held In Austria

VIENNA — A wave of protests from Jewish and non-Jewish sources has descended upon the Austrian Government for permitting the holding of an international Nazi Congress in Salzburg.

The Social European Order Movement, under whose aegis the conclave is to be conducted, has drawn delegates from such fascist-minded organizations as the Hitler Elite Guard, the Spanish Blue Legion, the French Tri-Color and the Dutch, Flemish and Ukrainian SS organizations. The Austrian Resistance Movement has asked the government to revoke the meeting permit.

Middle East: Its Nature and Destiny

In the shelter of security under the rule of law the Middle East will find an enhanced prospect of economic, social and cultural advance. Nationalism does not exhaust its responsibility by political liberation alone. The new flags, coins, stamps, constitutions, and all the other emblems of institutional liberty are a just cause for exhilaration and pride. But they are not meant to be a facade behind which squalor, illiteracy and disease shall continue to fester. Throughout the newly liberated continents nations are awakening to the truth that man can win all the trappings of liberty and yet lose the essence of his freedom in the throes of hunger and want. The quest for political freedom must be accompanied, and not merely succeeded, by a vision of society looking to expanding horizons of economic and social advance.

The new age in natural power offers Middle Eastern nations a greater prospect of plenty than their own resources once seemed able to promise. Any people which develops a sound scientific tradition can now become heir to the abundance which science has bequeathed to our universal potentiality. While Israel understands and shares the special zest of newly won political independence, it is firmly convinced that a sound national movement will give a great part of its preoccupation to social, economic, cultural and scientific progress. We shall continue to seek advancement in these fields in cooperation with friends in all five continents with whom we are associated in the development of commerce and communications and in programs of economic development and mutual technical assistance. If other countries in our region, linked by historic and cultural bonds, desire to establish cooperative agencies for economic development we shall follow their efforts with sympathy and goodwill. Despite the disharmony in our relations, we have always looked with positive interest on economic development in neighboring lands.

The question whether development in the Middle East will be pursued on a collective or on a national basis is far less important than the question whether it will be pursued at all. If water resources can be used and developed in direct cooperation we are ready now, as before, to work within such a framework. If others are not psychologically ready for this, then each state should be helped to carry out its national programs in such manner as will not encroach on the rights of others. The only unforgivable thing would be a kind of sterile, negative reciprocity; a paralysis of development, whether national or regional, while waiting for the remote goal of political harmony to be achieved.

While there can be no objection to economic development within selective or limited frameworks, the greater vision is surely one which sees the states of the Middle East — Arab and non-Arab alike — uniting their efforts for regional welfare and universal peace. It is the vision of a commerce in commodities and ideas passing freely across the frontiers of states, through the ports into the hinterlands, and across the expanses of the air — with full respect for the sovereignty and integrity of each state in the region. While this vision now seems far from view, we continue to hold it. We have faith that the compulsions of our common humanity will one day bring it to radiant fulfillment.

Tribute has been paid to the historic achievements of the peoples whose national birth took place in the Middle East. One of these achievements was the insight of Israel, in the previous era of her independence, into the unity of the national and human worlds. It was in this region that men first taught that history itself has meaning and that progress, not endless repetition, is the law of human life.

In our own age the scientific revolution has vindicated this concept of unity in the life of nature and of man. It has taught us that the source of natural power lies in the indivisible unity of the microcosm. It has warned us that in the new age of power mankind like nature is united in destiny for ill or for good. It is tragic that the region which gave the world its first understanding of unity in nature and unity in man should itself be the most ravaged and disunited of regions, and should sometimes be envisaged as the arena from which man's final tragedy of error may explode. The Middle East has a better destiny than this. Its mission is peace not war. Its vocation is progress not conflict. There is not a single state in its midst which cannot well afford to live in peace with every other state in the region. The world community of nations has summoned the peoples of the Middle East to the realization of their underlying kinship.

Radio Says Nasser Praises 'Protocols'

LONDON — "I do not know whether or not you have seen a book called 'The Protocols of the Elders of Zion.'" President Nasser asked the editor of an Indian magazine in the course of an interview recently.

"I consider it to be an important book. I will give you a copy of it in English. What is published in it will show clearly to you that the fate of the European continent is in the hands of 300 Zionists, each of whom knows all the others, and that they choose their allies from their followers."

President Nasser, according to the World Jewish Congress Information Department, made this statement in the course of an interview with Mr. Karanja, editor of the English-language Bombay weekly 'Blitz'.

The full text of the interview was broadcast twice in the Cairo home service and in a transmission of the 'Voice of the Arabs'.

Says Jordan Would Lose Land In War

WASHINGTON — The outlook for Jordan is discussed by Brig. Gen. S. L. A. Marshall in the current issue of Register, U. S. military review, while a United States military team is enroute to Jordan to study possible reorganization and re-equipment of the army to prevent Jordan's falling under the control of Col. Nasser, Egypt's dictator.

Marshall describes Jordan's military situation as precarious. He envisages developments that might occur in event of an Israel-Arab war. He stresses that if the Jordanian oasis outpost of Safi is wiped out, possibly by an air drop any threat to Israel from the south of Jerusalem would die, provided Jericho could be handled in much the same way.

"For the Jezreel Valley south of Galilee, Israel's armored forces striking south along River Jordan and reaching Jericho would seal off all Jordanian forces west of Trans-Jordan," he writes. Despite terrain features, he sees it as a "feasible and not too complex operation."

According to Marshall's analysis, West Jordan cannot be used by the Jordan Army as a spring-board against Israel because it is "a powder keg of treason and malice which may explode against itself." He said the Arab refugees and other civilians "hate King Hussein more than they hate Israel but they could not unite to strike against either."

The two Jordanian brigades deployed west of the river between Nabulus and Hebron are barely sufficient to exercise police control over "this mob-like population," Marshall believes. If encircled, he says, this civilian element would attempt to sift across the river rather than unite to resist. He described Jericho as a weak link between the western bulge of Jordan which "could hardly be held if Israel moved against it."

Israeli Minister Golda Meir Replies To Gromyko Attack

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Israel's Foreign Minister Golda Meir, in a sharp retort to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who recently denounced Israel as a tool of the western powers, told the United Nations General Assembly that the Soviet diplomat was resurrecting mere "lobby gossip" when he asserted that Israel was readying to invade Jordan after the British evacuation.

Referring to the innuendos and the "unwarranted" accusation leveled by the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mrs. Meir said that Israel's policy, for all to behold, was outlined in full clarity some weeks ago by Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban when he told the Assembly the Israel's "policy has been and is based on mutual respect of all Middle East states for the integrity and independence of each other; on the need, in our view, to defend and guarantee the territorial integrity and political independence of states; and, on the strict observance and integral implementation of existing agreements on the basis of reciprocity."

She said it was "regrettable" that "the distinguished Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Soviet Union should again have given currency to baseless rumors and indulge in unwarranted accusations against my country," adding that she "can assure the distinguished Foreign Minister that despite his innuendos, Israel's policy is neither a dictated nor a subservient one" and that the "policy of Israel, small state though it be, will continue as in the past to be determined by the Government of Israel and that Government alone."

At the same time the Israeli Foreign Minister charged that the continued tension in the Middle East was due to Arab hostility toward Israel, declaring that if the Arab countries complied with the resolution under which UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld was authorized to proceed with his Middle East mission there would have been no "incitement" against Israel by Arab spokesmen from the same rostrum from which, only six weeks ago, they exhorted all members to full Charter observance.

She said the upsurge of Arab nationalism would be welcomed by the UN in so far as it was a manifestation of a legitimate desire for progress and national well-being, but not when it has been transformed into an instrument of "unbridled imperialism" and belligerence.

Physician Invents Heart 'Booster'

NEW YORK — The chief surgeon of Maimonides Hospital of Brooklyn, largest kosher hospital in the world outside Israel, was revealed last week as the inventor of a "booster heart system" — a device being hailed by scientists as the "completion of a century-old surgical dream."

The inventor is Dr. Adrian Kantrowitz. He showed movies, of the manner in which his new electronic instrument has been tested on 10 dogs, before the American College of Surgeons, where colleagues hailed his invention as an "ingenious achievement."

The new heart booster is considered by scientists as a potential boon to hundreds of thousands of persons whose hearts had been weakened by old age or disease. Only a few electronic and biological problems remain to be solved, scientists declared, before the instruments devised by Dr. Kantrowitz may be applied to human patients.

The exhibition was sponsored by the Government of Israel, the Israel Ministry of Posts, Telephone and Telegraph, with the cooperation of the Israel Philatelic Agency.

The display seeks to provide panoramic view of life in Israel, including such phases as Israel's biblical roots, everyday life, personalities and landscapes.
