Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin N. Kane

To Commemorate Anniversary Of Mr. Mrs. Benjamin N. Kane

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin N. Kane will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Feb. 12 in Miami Beach, Fla.

Since Mr. and Mrs. Kane will not be in Providence for their golden wedding anniversary, their friends in the Greater Providence area are joining together to pay tribute to this fine couple whose good deeds and philanthropies over the years have done much to enrich the community.

A committee, formed under the chairmanship of Arthur Kaplan, felt that since there is very little of a material nature that could be offered to commemorate this occasion, it was decided that a fund to aid the Jewish Home for the Aged in Providence would be the best way of marking the observance. It also felt that this would bring great happiness to Mr. and Mrs. Kane who always have evidenced a deep interest in the work of the Home.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Kane are urged to make individual contributions to the Home — the Kane's favorite charity. This will come as a total surprise to the Kanes who have not been informed of the formation of the committee or the proposed plans.

Funds will be used to purchase additional equipment for bedridden inmates at the Jewish Home for the Aged. Max Winograd, president of the Home, said the fund will be known as the Ben and Esther Kane Infirmary Equipment Fund.

Contributions of all sizes for this worthwhile fund in commemoration of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kane's 50 years of marriage will be accepted by the committee. The names of all contributors will be inscribed on a list to be mailed to Mr. and Mrs. Kane on Feb. 12.

Anyone desiring to make contributions to this fund may do so by making checks payable to the Jewish Home for the Aged and sending them to the chairman, Mr. Kaplan, 498 Cole Avenue.

Order Investigation Of Teacher

STUTTGART, Germany — Ten months have passed since Kurt Lieser, a Jewish textile wholesaler, reported the violently anti-Semitic remarks of a high school teacher. An investigation has finally been ordered by state authorities.

Among the remarks which Lieser informed the high school principal Ludwig Zind had made to him was "Hitler gassed too few Jews." This occurred on April 24. Only now has the case reached the Baden-Wuerttemberg Parliament.

Zind, 36, is still teaching mathematics and biology at an Offenbunrg high school and his presence there has stirred a parliamentary uproar centered on charges that the State Cultural Minister and State President Mueller, a Christian Democrat, conspired with Offenbunrg officials to suppress the case.

The parliamentary debate was set off by the disclosure that the State Ministry of Culture, as well as the school board, had refused to suspend Zind pending the outcome of the stalled inquiry on the grounds that he is not "a permanent danger" to his students.

The complaining wholesaler, an Offenbunrg resident named Kurt Lieser, who spent the war in a German concentration camp, said Zind told him:

"Israel should and will be wiped out. I'm proud that I and my men during the war killed hundreds of Jews with shovel blows on the skull."

Lieser says he heard Zind's views at first hand during a chance meeting in a local tavern last April. The talk over their steins of beer turned from current politics to the Third Reich and finally to

The Providence Israel Bond Committee promotes the sale of Israel Development Issue Bonds, which is expected to provide a total of $75,000,000 in 1958 to accelerate the development and expansion of Israel's economy and to provide homes and employment for 85,000 immigrants who arrived in Israel last year and some 50,000 new immigrants who are expected in 1958.

Stanley Grossman

the General Jewish Committee of Providence and was Chairman of the Textile Trade Division in its 1957 Campaign, and a member of the Israel Bond Campaign Committee and "Big Day" Major in the 1957 Campaign.

Laying stress on the success of the Israel Bond Drive evidenced by the purchase of $320,501,150 in Bonds since 1951 when the Bond Drive was first launched, Judge Frank Licht, who headed the Providence 1957 Israel Bond Campaign, stated that under the "competent and devoted leadership of Dr. Ilie Berger and Stanley Grossman, we can look forward to a most successful Israel Bond Drive in 1958, the year in which Israel celebrates its 10th year of Statehood, and embarks on its second decade of economic progress and development."

U.N. Told Jewish War Orphans Brought Up As Christians

UNITED NATIONS—Some 20,000 Jewish children whose parents were killed by the Nazis are being brought up as Christians in homes where they were to find shelter, it was disclosed here at hearings currently being held by a subcommittee of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Disclosure of this astounding fact was made by Dr. Isaac Lewin representative of the Agudath Israel World Organization. Dr. Lewin demanded that the U.N. look into the situation and the "freedom of children to maintain the religion of their deceased parents." At the same time the Agudath leader charged the systematic desecration in Jordan of the grave of Rachel of Biblical fame. He said: "the entrance to the shrine has been destroyed" and that blasphemies have been inscribed on the walls on which, he said, "signs of the Nazi swastika are engraved." Such discrimination and profanities, he said, "call to heaven for an immediate remedy."

Appearing on behalf of the Consultative Council of Jewish Organizations, a group composed of the American Jewish Committee, the Alliance Israelite Univer-selle and the Anglo-Jewish Association, Moses Moscovitz urged U.N. condemnation not alone of direct, but also indirect religious discrimination. Without mentioning the Soviet Union, he attacked "certain states" whose "antagonism to religion," he said, "stems not only from the occasional identification of religion with former rules but from the desire of the state to subordinate all spheres of human activity to central control and eliminate all free expressions of the human spirit, of which religion is one of the most important."

Censure Club In N. Y. For Barring Jews

OTTAWA—The Canadian Club in New York came under heavy criticism in the Canadian press last week-end for its barrings of Jews from membership. Testimony revealing the anti-Jewish discrimination policy practiced by the Canadian Club in New York was given before the Parliamentary Committee on External Affairs here last week-end by Ray Lawson, former Canadian Consul General in New York. He added, however, that "the Canadian Club of New York is not a Canadian Club."

(In New York, John H. Clough, president of the club, refused to say whether the club had Jewish members, or to name any that it had. He said the club was a "pure membership club" which has about 1,600 members who were Canadians by birth, sons and daughters of Canadians, or persons with "clearly identified Canadian association." The club's headquarters are at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.)

Mr. Lawson was asked at the meeting of the parliamentary committee by Allister Stewart, Socialist member of the Canadian Parliament, whether the Canadian Club barred Jews as members. The former Consul General replied: "Yes, absolutely." Whereupon Leon Crestohl, Jewish member of the Parliament, asked: "Would I as a Jewish member of Parliament be barred?" Mr. Lawson replied that he thought so. His reply provoked cries of "shame" from the committee members, one of whom commented that "no truly Canadian club would have the racial discrimination this club has."

Harding, General Manager of the American Automobile Association of R. I.; Mrs. Rozella Switzer, member of the National Conference of Christians and Jews; Allen Hawkes, State Bureau of Motor Vehicles, and Lt. James Iacola, Department of Highway Safety, R. I. State Police.

Moderator for the program will be George Katz, executive secretary of Big Brothers of R. I. and chairman of the Center's Youth Activities Committee.

Pistons Hold Lead In Teen Basketball

After three weeks of play, the Pistons continue to lead the Jewish Community Center's East Side Teen Basketball League with a 35-34 victory over the Celtics as their latest triumph. Hadley Flint and David Katz were outstanding players in this game for the Pistons with Irving Feit and Richard Hochman outstanding for the losers.

In last Sunday's second game, the Hawks beat the Warriors, 45-28, paced by the high scoring of Eddie Brookner. Marty Gold was leading scorer for the Warriors.

This Sunday, February 9, the Pistons meet the Hawks and the Celtics play the Warriors at the Nathan Bishop Gym at 1 P. M.

KAPLAN FAMILY CIRCLE

The Kaplan Family Circle met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Sher on Feb. 2. Mrs. Barney Kaplan reported that plans had been completed for the annual Dinner Dance which will be held at the El Morocco on March 30.

Publish Statement Of Position

Compulsory Sunday observance laws violate the principle of religious liberty, declares a statement of position joined in by all the constituent organizations of the Synagogue Council of America and the National Community Relations Advisory Council.

The erection of religious statues or the placing of religious symbols on publicly owned property, likewise represent serious impairments of the principle of separation of church and state, the same organizations declared.

They also affirmed their opposition to the asking of questions about religious affiliation or belief in the course of federal population censuses.

These three statements of position are included in a pamphlet, titled "Safeguarding Religious Liberty" and released this week by the Joint Advisory Committee of the Synagogue Council of America and the NCRAC. The pamphlet is a revision of an earlier compilation of policies and positions on religion and public education and other aspects of church-state relationships jointly adopted by the Synagogue Council and the NCRAC.

Foods to Remember

With winter time entertaining on the agenda, it's wise to be prepared. When you have to be in the kitchen for meal-preparation anyway, mix up the following cake or Torte and bake as per direction. It's the kind that can be wrapped up in aluminum foil and refrigerated for 2 or 3 days.

CRANBERRY CAKE (also called Torte)

- 2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon each baking powder and baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup diced pitted dates
- 1/2 cup diced pitted prunes
- 1 cup fresh cranberries, pierced with knitting needle
- 3 tablespoons grated orange rind
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 3/4 cup salad oil
- 1 cup orange juice
- 1 cup granulated sugar

Sift together into a mixing bowl the flour, sugar, baking powder and baking soda. Stir in salt, chopped nuts and diced dates and prunes, and cranberries mixed with grated orange rind. Beat eggs and combine with buttermilk and salad oil. Stir together both mixtures til well blended and turn into a well greased and flour-dusted 10-inch tube cake pan, preferably one with removable bottom or rim. Bake at 350°F for 1 hour and let cool in the oven till lukewarm. Unmold on a wire cake rack placed over a large bowl or other container. Make a syrup of the orange juice and sugar by cooking 2 minutes over moderate heat and pour over cake, spooning drippings from bowl over cake till well saturated. Let stand 2 hours before wrapping in foil for storing in refrigerator for 2 or 3 days or till time for serving. Keeps for 2 weeks.

We want to thank Mrs. Samuel Bober of Newell, South Dakota, for the recipe for Kichel that really are as light as the proverbial feather. She bakes them this way—and you'll agree they are super!

FEATHERLIGHT KICHEL

- 6 eggs
 - 8 teaspoons sugar
 - 1 cup salad oil
 - 2 cups sifted flour
- Beat eggs and sugar with an electric mixer till smooth and cream colored. Add the salad oil and continue beating at low speed for 1 minute before adding the sifted flour gradually while continuing beating at low speed till well blended. The batter should be thick enough to drop from the tip of a teaspoon without spreading too fast. If too soft, add one or two tablespoons flour, stirring in slowly but thoroughly. Line the cookie sheet with aluminum foil and sprinkle lightly with sugar before dropping the bits of batter for a nice variation. Bake 40 minutes at 325°F or till the puffs are lightly browned. Yields approximately 72, depending on size of drops.

Here are a couple of suggestions for wintertime Compotes to have on hand for serving with left-over chicken, roast beef or veal.

APRICOT-RAISIN COMPOTE

- 1/2 cup dried apricots, diced or cut into strips
- 1 1/2 cups dark seeded raisins
- 2 cups water

- 1 cup dark brown sugar, tightly packed

A pinch of salt
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup light wine or your choice
Rinse cut up apricots and raisins under running hot water and let drain. Cover with cold water and bring to a quick boil. Turn down heat and let simmer 18 to 20 minutes. Add brown sugar, salt and lemon juice, stir lightly and continue cooking about 10 minutes or till thick. Cool to lukewarm and stir in the wine, Muscatel or Sherry is our choice, but use your own favorite kind. Turn into jelly glasses that have been sterilized and seal. Can be used immediately. Yields 5 to 6 glasses.

ORANGE-CRANBERRY CONSERVE

- 2 cups cranberries, pierced with toothpick
 - 2 seedless oranges, washed and diced
 - 2 1/2 cup dark brown sugar
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - A pinch of salt
 - Cold water to cover
- Combine prepared berries, cut up unpeeled orange, sugar, lemon juice, salt and add cold water to cover amply. Bring to a boil uncovered. Cover saucepan, reduce heat to a simmer and let cook 10 to 12 minutes. Turn off heat and let stand covered till cold. Yields 1 pint.

Order Investigation
the recent desecration of Jewish graves in North Germany.
When Zind began defending the cemetery vandals, Lieser protested: "The Nazis put me into a concentration camp. An SS guard broke my jaw."
Lieser said Zind's response was: "Hitler gassed too few Jews. I'm sorry you didn't also go up in smoke."
According to the wholesaler, Zind's observations continued in the same vein for some time and were overheard by the two teenage sons of his school's principal, in addition to other witnesses who unsuccessfully tried to silence the teacher.

The following day, when he visited Principal Fritz Welzer, Lieser said the school official tried to treat the matter as a trivial misunderstanding.
As Lieser persisted in his protests, the principal set up a meeting a few days later between Lieser, Zind and an official of the board of education.
At the conference, Zind refused to retract his statements, except to say he was misquoted on the subject of the shovel blow deaths. He claimed he had said "Russians," not Jews.

Nor would he apologize, according to Lieser, who quoted the teacher as saying, "I'd rather walk the streets than change my opinion."
When it became obvious that the school would not act, Lieser reported the incident to the Senior Council of Israelites in Baden.
The council sent Lieser's complaint to the State Culture Ministry last May 10. Nothing was done until September, when the Offenburger School Board was prodded into filing a disciplinary proceeding against Zind.

The matter remained dormant until repeated protests by the council resulted in parliamentary pressure, which, in turn, forced the Offenburger prosecutor to order hearings.
But the teacher won a delay on the basis of a doctor's certificate that he was too ill to stand trial. Subsequent investigation disclosed that the doctor, a woman, is the mother of Zind's son's girl friend.
Since the issue has flamed into state debate, Zind has claimed that Lieser's reports of his statements were "gross exaggeration."
"Everything will turn out well for me," Zind predicts.
Meanwhile, still delaying, the Culture Ministry claims the case is now "complicated" by the fact that Principal Walzer's sons—chief witnesses to the tavern tirade—no longer remember Zind's precise remarks.

Head Campaign
Before leaving for Miami Beach, Florida to attend the International Conference for Israel Bonds on Feb. 6 to 8, Dr. Berger said that he felt "singularly honored" to be invited to head the local Israel Bond Committee with Stanley Grossman as his co-chairman.
In accepting the co-chairmanship Stanley Grossman said that it was a privilege to head the current Israel Bond Drive with Dr. Berger and to be able to work for a program which provides the economic backbone for Israel's security and growth.

Farband To Hold Tu B'Shevat Party
Farband Labor Zionist Order will hold their Tu B'Shevat celebration (Jewish Arbor Day) on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the vestry of the Congregation Sons of Abraham.
Samuel Bonchek, vice president of the Farband National office of the United States and Canada, president of the City Committee of New York and leader of Paole Zion, will be guest speaker.
The guest artist will be Rina Bazine, soprano, of Tel Aviv, who will sing English, Jewish and Israeli folk songs. Members and friends are invited.

BETH EL SCOUT SABBATH
Scout Sabbath for Temple Beth El will be observed this evening at 8:15 o'clock. The Ner Tamid Award, scouting's highest recognition for work and study of the Jewish religion, will be given to Harold Horwitz, son of Dr. and Mrs. Manuel Horwitz, and Lewis Goldenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Goldenberg. The award signifies that the scout has devoted at least 150 hours of work and study for the synagogue, troop and community. All scouts and visitors are invited to the service.

TREASURE CHEST
Many people will remember a little red treasure chest, that used to occupy the center of the table when tea-time rolled around. This was the little red tin treasure chest of Sweet-touch-nee tea. That same rich, full-bodied tea — that same fine, fragrant, hearty-flavored Sweet-touch-nee blend, now available in the modern tea bag is still a family favorite with people who appreciate a real good cup of tea. The exclusive Sweet-touch-nee blend has not changed since the good old days.

Jewish Music Festival

The coming of the 14th annual Jewish Music Festival, to be marked from February 1st to March 1st, will be hailed by all who are earnestly seeking to foster a Jewish Cultural life on American soil. The month dramatically highlights the Jewish cultural, year-round aims of the National Jewish Welfare Board and its National Jewish Music Council—sponsors of the observance. Beyond its normal musical impact, the celebration has special interest this year for it is saluting the 10th anniversary of the State of Israel.

The nationwide celebration will this year, as in 1957, sound the call to Jewish organizations to "commission a Jewish musical work." Already, thanks to the efforts of the JWB and the Council, 32 commissions have been set in motion. Some of these had their premiere performances in the 1957 Festival, others will bow this year. The Israel salute will doubtless enrich the observance by calling forth a wealth of musical events in the form of chamber and symphony concerts all featuring Israeli music. Added to these are exhibits, children's programs, forums and radio and TV programs sponsored by Jewish Community Centers, Jewish music councils, synagogues, schools and community councils.

The JWB deserves our thanks for in its efforts over the past 14 years it has focussed on the wealth of Jewish music available and has aided in raising musical standards. Above all, it has done a yeoman job in carrying out the avowed aim of its Council "to accord Jewish music dignity and status in the Jewish and general community." Its latest effort has brought us to a new stage musically—from performance to musical creativity. There is rich promise in such an effort.

The Modern Jewish Community Center

by DR. BERNARD CARP
Executive Director

Providence Jewish Community Center

My wife asks the silliest questions. After struggling for hours on this week's article, I proudly showed it to her. It began: "The modern Jewish Community Center is a dynamic, indigenous outgrowth of our American-Jewish culture, stemming from American democratic traditions as well as our Jewish heritage."

"Who do you think is going to read this?" she asked. So-o-o, who argues with a wife? We will, therefore, discuss a few of the unique functions of the Center in a less professional manner this week.

Dave, an enlightened Board member from almost any well-run Jewish Community Center, meets Ben, an old friend. Let's eavesdrop a little.

Q. Tell me, Dave, what's so different about a Jewish Community Center?

A. Well, like a good Jew, Ben, let me answer your question with another question. Where else but in the Center can you meet all the Jews of the community, regardless of what synagogue or what organizations they belong to? Where else do you find such a variety of programs to choose from? Where else can rich and poor, male and female, little children and their grandparents and the whole family in between, find some activity for themselves? Where else does this go on day after day through the year?

Q. True, but what happens when they do come together?

A. Even if they only find some interesting activity for their leisure time—Dayenu! Even if their activity is with other Jews—Dayenu! Even if this activity is under good professional and volunteer leaders—Dayenu! But in addition to all this, the Center is always thinking up ways to unite the community around its common interests, like Jewish Music Festival, Jewish Book Week, Jewish History, Jewish Youth Councils and other projects like that.

Q. Yes, but all this emphasis on Jewish activities — doesn't that "ghettoize" us and make us less American?

A. What is "American"? The only true Americans are the Indians and some scholars think they descended from the Lost Tribe. America is made up of all kinds of nationalities and cultures. That's the wonderful thing about this country. The real American knows that a person must first be true to himself, proud of his heritage and not afraid to admit that he is different. Then, he is respected by other Americans and able to do his share in community-wide affairs, without apology. The Center works on that principle.

Q. Good, but how does the Center tie in its members to the over-all community?

A. This is where the Center is particularly strong. Not only do Jews come together at special times like Brotherhood Week when they can talk things over, but there is "brother-in-action" going on all the time. For instance, the Center, through J.W.B., its national organization, is part of the U.S.O. It works with the United Fund, the Council of Community Services, with Citizens' Councils for Neighborhood Betterment, etc. Then there are its youth, as well as adults, not only joining in athletics with the YMCA, the CYO, but also working on common community projects.

Q. Does it do the same with the Jewish community?

A. What else? The Center is a wonderful place for the Jewish Welfare Fund to find workers and leaders. What's more, the Center

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Why So Late, Howard Fast?

By BERYL SEGAL

Howard Fast is an American novelist who has attained greater fame in Soviet Russia than in his native land. Thirteen years ago Howard Fast joined the Communist Party and was the fair-haired boy of the party. His novels were translated into Russian, and he was hailed as America's greatest intellectual who saw the light. His books were widely read and his utterances were highly regarded. He was awarded the Stalin Peace Prize, a distinction few American writers and men of letters have received.

About a year ago, during the Suez campaign, Howard Fast resigned from the Communist Party. The God has fallen. Now he is a renegade, a militant Zionist, a traitor, a coward, a swindler, a deserter, ill mannered, cheap, indecent, dishonest, and arrogant.

All these names are taken from an article in the Literary Gazette of Moscow. And the lexicon is not exhausted as yet.

Now Howard Fast will be held up as a symbol of shame, his name will be erased from every book and record, and his books removed from library shelves. His Stalin Peace Prize will, presumably, be revoked, or declared null and void.

Nothing unusual in this in the Soviet Union. It has been done before. It began with the de-throning, and erasing, and removing the traces of Trotsky, and continues to this day. Men of greater stature than Fast have met the same fate.

Mr. Howard Fast on his side does not sit by idly, either. He has now published a book, "The Naked God," in which he tells his story of disillusionment with the Soviet regime. Howard Fast has a nimble pen and his story is, I am sure, moving and convincing. The samples and quotations from the book promise an exciting strip tease act of the Soviet god, and he is not so attractive in his nakedness.

But before going to the trouble of reading the book one asks this question of the author:

"Why did you wait so long, Mr. Howard Fast? Thirteen years is a long time for a writer to discover what was known to everyone who reads the daily newspapers and hears reports from reliable sources."

There are some men and women here in Providence who have known thirty and twenty-five years ago the things that Howard Fast discovered only last year. And these men and women are not writers, not intellectuals. They are simple people, faithful believers in Socialism, who still bear the scars of battle for the Russian revolution. They turned away from the Soviet regime as soon as it was clear that it is a dictatorial form of government.

To them Socialism was first and foremost freedom of speech and conscience. To them Socialism meant an even greater democracy than ever existed. And Socialism also held out the promise of a sincere quest for world peace.

These three things, freedom of expression, democratic form of government, and the pursuit of peace, Socialists could not find in the Soviet paradise. One voice—the voice of the Communist Party had to be echoed by the entire press and radio and every one who valued his position and his very life. One candidate—the candidate of the official party was offered to the electorate, and no other choice was left but to vote unanimously. One aim—an arms race for greater power regardless of consequences to the world. That was and is the essence of the Soviet regime. That is not Socialism.

So these simple people turned away from the Soviet orbit as soon as its ways became clear. And they did not write books about it. The experience was too painful. You do not write books when your ideal is trampled in the dust.

Some left after the very first purges of veteran revolutionaries, the contemporaries and co-workers of Lenin. Some left after the hands of Stalin embraced the bloody hands of Hitler in a pact.

Some left when their sense of decency was offended at the sight of mature men standing in front of court rooms confessing to sins and acts of treachery which they never committed, but which the secret police wanted them to confess. Some left when the revolt in Hungary was crushed with a cruelty even this cruel world of ours has never seen.

During all these years Howard Fast did not waver in his perfect faith. On the other hand, Howard Fast joined his comrades in heaping insults and hurling poisoned arrows at those who cried out their disillusionment. Howard Fast was very good at that.

The awakening of Howard Fast came only a year ago.

Isn't it a little too late?

The irony of it is that in his book, "The Naked God", Howard Fast enumerates all these acts of infamy on the part of the Stalin-Khrushchev group, all the cynicism of their dealings with opponents and all the sinister diplomatic policies the Soviets are employing in the Middle East to win the Arab World, dictators and kings and sheiks and all. Oh, yes, Fast was well aware of all this while he was feted in Moscow, and hailed as a hero, and decorated with the Stalin Peace Award.

But Howard Fast chose to keep his peace about them. Only now, in 1958, he tells the world what the world knew all along.

And another ironic angle to this farce is that Howard Fast found a publisher, and will no doubt find readers, and might even become a martyr. With a good public relations man Mr. Fast might make good use of the name calling of the Communist press addressed at him. A rise in sales of the book after every volley of insults.

As for me, I am afraid I will neither buy "The Naked God," nor read it. The confessions of Saint Howard came a little too late.

SYD COHEN

Call Him Magnificent

They say that the life span of the average big league ball player is becoming shorter all the time. It's now something under seven years. The 20-year man is almost as extinct as the famed Dodo bird.

All of which is a reminder that despite the cumulative effect of two wars, a fractured elbow and a fractured shoulder, Ted Williams this year begins his 20th year in the big leagues. Those war years count in the total.

It would have been 21 years if Joe Cronin had not decided to discipline the brash young outfielder who came up in 1938 bragging about what he was going to do in this league. The discipline took the form of a year's exile to Minneapolis, where the young Mr. Williams tore the league apart.

In those days the Red Sox were blessed with hitting power to spare—they could afford to farm out a promising kid. Besides, Williams in his two previous years in organized ball at San Diego had batted a puny .271 and .291.

At Minneapolis in 1938 Ted played in 148 games, hit safely 193 times, including 30 doubles and 9 triples, and led the league in the following departments: runs scored, 130; home runs, 43; runs batted in, 142; batting average, .366.

With almost any other club that year, except for the Sox and the Yankees (the Yanks won the pennant over Boston by 9½ games), Williams certainly would have been called up early in the season to begin his big league run.

All in all, adding this lost year to all the other obstacles in his way, Ted Williams' achievement in coming to his 20th big league season is incredible.

Any way you want to figure it, had there been no loss of a promising first year, no loss of five seasons because of wars, Ted now would have well over 600 home runs for his big league career. The Thumper is now around the 470 mark, and if you concede him an average of only 30 per season for those six seasons, the figures total some 650. Had Ted played those years he undoubtedly would be closer to 700, a mark reached only by Babe Ruth (.714). Even the 650 would have been more than 125 better than the next man in line, Jimmy Foxx.

Conceivably, this campaign now coming up might have been historic for Williams' assault on the Babe's all-time record. We'll never know.

His twentieth year coming up, and the end not yet in sight! What a fabulous performer!

How To Be A Champ

A year ago—just at about this time, too—this column ran a series of five articles entitled: "How to Be A Champ", in which it dared to suggest a complete change in attitude, atmosphere and operations on the part of the Red Sox. This change in philosophy and action was needed, the series said, if the Red Sox intended to make a sincere, concerted effort to win the American League pennant. Several suggestions were made—four major ones, as I recall.

The series appeared in January and February of last year. Less than two months later, the Sox took my advice on one point. They stuck the word pennant in the minds of every employee, front office and ball field; they talked themselves into a pennant frame of mind, and kept it up all season. They lived pennant, breathed pennant, dreamed pennant, worked pennant, and played pennant. Every front office move was made with the winning of the pennant uppermost in mind.

And in the end these Sox almost did win the pennant. Contenders all the way, they fell before the superior Yankees a scant few weeks before the end of the season.

The trouble is that the Sox who drove for the championship were not the Sox at whom my series was aimed. It was Chicago, not Boston, that lent credence to my words and showed what could be done with deliberate intent, with all-out determination. It was in Comiskey Park, no Fenway Park, that the warning went out from the front office that the pennant must be won, or else!

The tragedy of all this, from a New England point of view, was that the White Sox did not really have an outstanding club. On paper, and man to man, they were little, if at all, superior to Boston. As a fact—as proof, if you will—with all their championship attitude, it was not until very late in the season—the last four or five weeks—that the White Sox began definitely to pull away from the third place Red Sox.

To hammer at the point more bluntly, the lackadaisical Red Sox, going no place and making no claim to fame, exerting no extra effort and no particular drive (except for Ted Williams), actually came close to finishing in second place. Had the Boston organization come close to matching the spirit and will-to-win of the Chicagoans, second place would have been a cinch and the Yankees might have been more closely challenged.

The White Sox had more or less a patched up appearance. Their infield was no better than the Red Sox, the outfield not nearly as good. Chicago's catching was maybe a shade better than Boston's, with Lollar out half the season with injuries, and its reserves were not as good. In hitting, the Red Sox were vastly superior. And in pitching, the Pale Hose had the edge only with Pierce and Donovan. The Bosox actually had more pitching depth, and better relief pitching.

Yet, Chicago made the big noise and almost won the pennant, while Boston quietly and modestly quailed.

has a real training ground for leaders in its clubs and committees that it sets up. Many of these leaders go on to synagogue boards, Jewish Family Bureaus and Boards of Jewish Education and other agencies from this experience.

Q. What makes the Center such a good training ground?

A. That's another one of its special strengths. It has trained professionals whose business it is to know how people work together and they get this over in a way so that you don't even know it. There's no lecturing—no homework—you don't have to study something you're not interested in. You're just having fun in a small group and, suddenly, you're learning how to get your ideas across without anybody getting mad at you. Believe me, these are lessons that Dale Carnegie used to charge good money for!

Q. How can the Center afford to pay professionals to spend time in such small groups?

A. It can't afford not to! That's another difference in the Center. It tries to limit its group because the trained worker knows that otherwise people get lost in a crowd. They know that individuals need special attention to bring out the best in them. You can't do a quality job unless you do it in small groups. But there are lots of small groups, committees, classes, clubs going all the time, adding up to some pretty big numbers. Even when there is a mass activity (and there are plenty of those, too) there are small committees to prepare it.

Q. Does it need such expensive professionals?

A. Where can you get good cheap workers of any kind today? The professional Center worker has to go to special graduate training schools in social work. On top of this, he needs a fine Jewish education. He has a very involved job of working with people of all kinds and has to use a special combination of education, psychology and social group work, sprinkled with Judaism, which is quite an order. Believe me, he doesn't make a fortune from all of the crazy hours he puts in. This group worker is the real difference in the Center program. Without him, you haven't got a Center, no matter what you call it.

Q. But why does the Center also need such an expensive building?

A. Facilities that meet the standards that we and our children want today, cost money. If the Center is to succeed, it must have a building that is especially designed for its kind of programs. That includes a lot of pretty expensive rooms and equipment and a lot of outdoor space. When we have a community home that we are proud of, we can also invite guests in without apology. I visited Milwaukee and Buffalo recently. You should hear the Jews—and non-Jews too—boast about their wonderful Jewish Community Centers.

Q. I've heard that the Center program does not have enough "Jewish content." What's your story?

A. "Jewish content" is almost a fighting word with some people. They are not satisfied until every basketball is labeled with a Mogen David. The Center, of course, is Jewish. It wouldn't say so in its title if it weren't. It deals with Jewish problems and Jewish affairs, but it does so in a way that it not artificial and forced. You'd be surprised how much "Jewish content" can take place in the Youth Canteen or on a ball field. Sometimes this would have more meaning to a teen-ager than a dozen lectures on the Talmud. We even think it's good "Jewish content" when a Jewish boy meets a fine Jewish girl at the Center. Even so, the Center runs an amazing number of activities with Jewish labels. For instance, the many holiday celebrations, discussions in clubs and classes on Jewish subjects, Jewish cultural events, and soon—and so on.

Q. Aren't the Centers and the Synagogues competing with each other?

A. Of course not! Think of a few of the things I just mentioned and ask yourself if the synagogue is set up to do them. The Rabbi and teacher in a synagogue are specially prepared for religious leadership and Jewish education. The Center spends most of its money for trained group workers who concentrate on recreation, cultural and social programs. All of us need a balance of both and we should get them with the best professional service available from each field. At a conference some time ago, I heard the late Rabbi Joshua Leibman say, "Synagogues are here to stay—Centers are here to stay. There must be a division of labor and real coordination between them." This I believe in. This the Center believes in. So I'm a good member of both the Synagogue and the Center.

Q. Thanks, Dave, you've been very helpful. You know, you surprise me. You know so much about the Center business.

A. Don't be surprised. The Center is a wonderful education for all of us. It's worth a year in college. We're always learning by doing some job, on committees, leading clubs, attending J.W.B. conferences and institutes and other things. I've belonged to lots of boards, but the Center really specializes in the way it educates and uses its volunteers.

Well, I have to rush now, Ben. There's lots more that's different about the Center, especially the big bargain you get for your money. I wish I had the time to tell you. Why not come down some time and see for yourself?

And so we hope we've succeeded in presenting just a few of the unique characteristics of the Center. Perhaps not one of these is unusual in and of itself, but it is the combination of them, plus certain special emphases, that permits the Center to render services which are not duplicated by any other single agency. This will be particularly apparent in Center financing and planning when, next week, we discuss: How does the Center finance itself? What does it cost to run a Center?

In the meantime, we would welcome your questions, comments and suggestions for our future articles. Please call or write us at the Center or at the Jewish Herald.

Israeli, British Trade Increases

LONDON — Trade between Britain and Israel continued to rise in 1957, as it had done in the past few years, and reached a new high, it was reported here last week. British exports to Israel last year amounted to nearly 13,000,000 pounds sterling ($36,400,000) while imports from Israel approached 11,000,000 pounds.

Barclay's Bank Overseas Review reported that Israel has become the third largest exporter of cut diamonds, with diamond exports for the first nine months of 1957 amounting to $24,000,000. This, the report stressed, was an increase of more than a third over the previous year. While the United States remains Israel's best customer, buying more than half the total exports, Israel has diversified its market and sales to Asian nations account for 10% of the total.

Barclay's report also forecast that $50,000,000 in personal restitution funds would be transferred from Germany to Israel during the current fiscal year, as against $27,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

Disclaims Desire To Push Revision

LONDON — British policy regarding the Israel-Arab conflict remains based on the principles of the Tripartite Declaration of 1950 and the government supports the territorial integrity of the Middle East States and their existing frontiers "where these may be considered as final and internationally accepted," Allan Noble, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, told Parliament last week.

Replying to Laborite questions in Commons, Noble said there had been no change in the government's policy and protested what he called attempts to "twist" Sir Anthony Eden's Guildhall statement which called on Israel to surrender part of its territory in "border adjustments" as the price of a peace settlement. He also expressed the opinion that UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld's recent visit to the Middle East had reduced tension "noticeably" in the region.

When, in reply to a query, Noble said that the British Government would welcome disarmament in the Middle East, he was attacked by Aneurin Bevan who found this statement "astonishing" in view of Britain's refusal to accept Russian offers to end the arms supply to the region. Noble suggested that Bevan wait for Prime Minister Macmillan's reply to Premier Bulganin's latest letter and subsequent discussions. He denied a charge by Bevan that Britain opposed disarmament.

Tells Of Medical Progress In Israel At Conference

NEW YORK — Hadassah received research grants in 1957 totalling $250,000, it was reported here last week at the annual mid-winter conference of the organization. Mrs. Abraham Tulin, national chairman of the Hadassah Medical Organization Committee in the United States, said that of this sum $110,000 was awarded to the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School and to the Hadassah Medical Organization in Israel for clinical and pre-clinical research by the Ford Foundation through the Israel Government.

Mrs. Tulin said that $50,000 was received from the Florina Lasker Research Fund for "The Study of Man in Israel." The grants from the Florina Lasker Research Fund are earmarked for definite projects which include: 1. Determination of the incidence of diabetes in various groups, old-time residents of Israel and new immigrants, urban dwellers and farmers, according to their countries of origin; 2. A study of nutrition and health among Cochin Jews; 3. Smoking in pulmonary cancer among Yemenite and Bulgarian Jews in Israel.

Israeli Speaks

Dr. Kalman J. Mann, director-general of the Hadassah Medical Organization in Israel, who arrived from Israel last week to participate in the Hadassah conference, disclosed that "a new and successful technique has been developed by Hadassah surgeons for replacement of the esophagus with an artificial one, thus giving new hope to victims of cancer of the upper esophagus, which is fairly common in the United States and Israel.

He said the new technique was developed and used successfully by Dr. Zvi Neuman, acting head of the Department of Plastic Surgery, and Dr. Hanoch Milwidsky, head of the Department of Thoracic Surgery, both of Hadassah's Ziv Hospital in Jerusalem.

Problems dealing with the activities of Hadassah, on which it spends $9,000,000 a year, were reviewed at the conference.

U. S. Aid Needed

Speaking at the opening session Sunday, Dr. Miriam K. Freund, national president of Hadassah, stressed that the Middle East region may suffer from any cut in President Eisenhower's $3,900,000,000 request for foreign aid. Such a cut, she said, would also be "detrimental" to the United States position in the world today.

Mrs. Rose Halprin, Hadassah leader and acting chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency, told the opening session that "since its creation 10 years ago, Israel has established a true democracy. It has brought in hundreds of thousands of destitute people, many of them from Arab lands and has by example, shown the world how rehabilitation and absorption of masses of human beings can be achieved if a people is ready to make the effort and sacrifice."

ROME — A six-point statement assailing the Soviet Government for suppressing Jewish culture in the Soviet Union, expressing hope that the Moroccan Government will permit free emigration of Jews and pledging continued aid to Israel was issued jointly here by leaders of major Jewish organizations from various countries following a two-day conference last week at which general Jewish problems were reviewed.

The parley, held under the chairmanship of Dr. Nahum Goldmann, was called to constitute an international Jewish body to be known as the Conference of Jewish Organizations. This body is to hold regular meetings to exchange information and discuss problems of common interest, as well as to endeavor to coordinate their policies on such matters.

The meeting adopted the following statement:

"1. The defeat of Nazism 13 years ago brought to close the most tragic period in Jewish history. Since this catastrophe the world has witnessed an inspiring demonstration of the Jewish capacity for self-renewal of which Israel has been the most outstanding expression.

2. Jews everywhere cherish the State of Israel in whose creation and development they have shared. They pledge their continued aid to Israel in its task of absorption and settlement of Jewish immigrants from many lands and to the advancement of its spiritual culture and scientific institutions.

"In the light of the immense burden which Israel is called upon to sustain, it is our confident hope that Jews everywhere will fulfill their solemn obligation to assist Israel in its economic growth and consolidation.

"3. The situation of the Jews of the Soviet Union constitutes one of the central problems of our generation. It is our duty to draw the attention of world public opinion to their plight and to seek to secure the redress of the wrongs they suffer. They are denied the facilities essential to the effective exercise of the right of cultural and communal expression, or perpetuating of their faith and developing their culture by the education of their children and youth.

"They are not permitted the right of countrywide organizations for cultural or religious purposes which other communities enjoy in the Soviet Union. They are prevented from establishing organized associations with Jewish communities in other countries on matters of common Jewish interest. They are the object of discrimination by comparison with the status and rights of other peoples and religious groups in the Soviet Union.

"4. No less grave is the denial to the Jews of the Soviet Union of the right of free migration, particularly in order to settle in Israel. A similar situation exists in certain other Eastern European countries which likewise deny the right of emigration embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. In some of these countries, notably Rumania, this has resulted in the human tragedy of thousands of broken homes.

"5. We express the confident hope that the Moroccan Government will now fulfill their assurances regarding the democratic right of freedom of emigration and will thus complete the liberties and equality of citizenship granted by the Moroccan Government to their Jewish citizens.

"6. Meeting at a period of grave anxiety, we join in the prayer and hope that the world will seek a solution to its complex problems by peaceful means in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations. In all our actions and strivings we are guided by the vision of peace of the Hebrew prophets. We are convinced that it is within the capacity of mankind to realize this vision. It is in this spirit that we dedicate ourselves to the task of doing all that lies within our power to shape the Jewish future in peace and dignity."

fied for raises for all hands with a routine third place showing.

Here we hit upon a prime reason for the failure of the Red Sox during the countless opportunities of the past ten years. As a club, they are too much self-satisfied. Tom Yawkey permits his reputation as a great sportsman to overshadow whatever burning desires he may have to win. He refuses, apparently, to put the pressure on his general manager, as do other club owners; and the general manager goes his comfortable way, knowing he has life tenure at his job, and thus being under no strain to knock himself out to produce.

Cronin, a popular figure in baseball—and deservedly so, I am first to admit—is mentioned often as the logical successor to Ford Frick as Commissioner of Baseball. Since Frick has no intention of resigning, however, and since the 16 owners up to now have no fault to find with him, it becomes painfully obvious that the Red Sox will not change their GM, or their attitude, in the near future.

Critical writers, such as this column, too often ignore the troubles that the Red Sox have had. The death of Harry Agganis a few years ago, for example, robbed the Sox of a player who probably would now be the best first baseman in the big leagues, and very likely a leading candidate for most valuable player honors. Agganis was an inspired, inspiring player who had a wholesome effect on the rest of the team.

The damage to Frank Baumann's left arm robbed Boston of a pitcher who was better than Herb Score when both were in the minor leagues. By now, Baumann should have ranked with Pierce, Ford and Score among the top left handers in the league.

These are but two of the many Red Sox hard luck incidents that have hurt the club tremendously, and they must be taken into account whenever the Sox are being criticized. The front office could get by on its laurels nicely without changing its methods of operation if Agganis and Baumann, among others, could be today the ball players they once seemed destined to be. The 1957 World Series under those conditions might have been a Boston-Milwaukee affair.

Yet, the sad fact is that other clubs have suffered the loss of key players through sickness and injury. Life and hope do not end under these conditions. A club rich in resources like the Red Sox needs to be more resourceful. A live-wire front office should be able to offset some of its difficulties and tragedies. This the Cronin staff is unable to do.

As a fan who sees most of his baseball at Fenway Park, I wish sincerely that the Red Sox played it differently. Right now it seems a vain wish.

The point is that Boston lacks the fire and the determination—mostly the will to win—that motivated Chicago last year and has the White Sox partisans whooping it up now in anticipation of a 1958 victory.

This is the pity — the real tragedy — of the Red Sox. They could do so much better!

AIMS AT COMEBACK

TEL AVIV — Moshe Sharett, former foreign minister of Israel, is setting the stage for his comeback, reports Haboker. A coalition of dissatisfied Mapai "activists" is being formed to fight the leading pro-Ben Gurion group.

Dulles, Said Clash At Conference

ANKARA — A rift between the U. S. and the Moslem Middle East powers in the Baghdad Pact emerged last week over the pact's relation to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Secretary of State Dulles held a private conference last week with the delegates of Iraq and Turkey in a bid to patch up the differences, which broke out in a heated exchange.

Conference sources said that at a private meeting attended by Turkish Premier Menderes, Dulles clashed with Gen. Nuri Al Said, head of the Iraqi delegation.

Nuri reportedly pressed his case for forcing Israel back into the frontiers laid down by the 1947 UN resolution on Palestine.

But he was understood to have received a sharp rebuff from Dulles, who held that the Palestine problem should be settled not in the framework of the Baghdad Pact but under the auspices of the UN.

Nuri had said that the Palestine problem was the core of instability in the Middle East.

Arabs maintain that the U. S. is the only power which could influence Israel to give up territory and take back, or pay compensation to, the Palestine refugees living in Arab countries.

Proposes Stamp Honoring Israel

WASHINGTON — Representative Alfred E. Santangelo (D. N. Y.) has introduced a bill providing for issuance of a special commemorative U. S. postage stamp honoring Israel's 10th anniversary. But State Department sources quickly pointed out the department would advise postal authorities against such a stamp because the Arabs might take offense.

According to the reported State Department view, a U. S. stamp honoring Israel would facilitate communist propaganda which seeks to equate the United States with Israel in Arab eyes. There is also said to be a "practical question" of whether the Arab states would allow U. S. mail bearing such stamps to be delivered through their postal systems. However, the State Department has not spoken officially.

The idea of U. S. stamps honoring foreign nations is not new. Many commemoratives of this sort have been issued. Santangelo termed Israel's 10th anniversary an "excellent occasion" to "salute Israel as a symbol of democracy in that strife-torn area of the world."
