Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Barrymore and the Wilna Gaon

There was a certain indescribable feeling that once came to this writer some years ago, while working on a Washington daily, when he was introduced to a great-great-great-grandson of George Washington, who was then employed at the Library of Congress in some subordinate capacity as doorkeeper or something of that sort.

This man, of course, was not really an offspring of Washington, for he, Father of Our Country, had no offspring of his own, but of Martha Washington. To be more correct, he was but an adopted descendant, but still, there was this feeling.

I had a somewhat similar feeling when I ran into first a descendant of Elijah Wilna, the Wilna Gaon, who, as you know, is one of the principals of the publicity department of RKO pictures.

The idea of there being a modern descendant of so sainted and scholarly a figure almost takes away one's breath, but to meet one in the flesh doing publicity for the puerile slobber of moving pictures is far more breathtaking than most of the screen reelers, which Warshawsky helps exploit.

A New Plot

Warshawsky has just written a play. To be more accurate, he wrote it, some time ago, but has just sold it, to Ethel Barrymore, who will star in it.

And I understand, Warshawsky has several other plays up his sleeve, which he is priming, for some mysterious reason, for the other Barrymores, John and Lionel.

I have no objections to Warshawsky selling any plays to the Barrymores. In fact, I am rather entranced at the vista that the very thought opens.

Imagine the Barrymore reaction, when the play was bought from Warshawsky.. Proud Ethel, if she is anything like John, must have thought to herself—"a break this Hebrew lad just out of the ghetto is getting for me to star in one of his plays."

For the chances are, you know, that Ethel has never heard of the Wilna Gaon—does not know that the old-time Jew would swap a couple of tons of relatives to claim descent to Elijah Wilna.

And yet, on the other hand, fancy telling one of these old-time Jews, that a descendant of the Wilna Gaon had sold a play to Ethel Barrymore.

And there, Playwright Sam Warshawsky, is a good theme for a play in itself.

When It Rains

And talking about plays, and since four out of five of the readers of this department, at one time or another, according to the statements of actuaries, contemplate the writing of plays, let me give you some advice on how to keep from starving while doing it.

Really, it's not advice of my own—it's the actual experience of one, Elmer Rice, the Hebraic lad, who of late, as you know, has been scoring hits. His latest is Counsellor-at-Law.

When Rice started on his playwrighting career, he was confronted by the problem of earning his livelihood until he scored. So what did he do?

Here is what he did. He took two civil service examinations, one of which was to teach English to foreigners and the other to read proof. After taking the exams, he retired to work on his first play, "On Trial." Selling it after he had completed it, was a difficult job. He became very anxious about those jobs for which he had taken the tests, hoping for a call, but no call came.

Instead, after a while, Arthur Hopkins bought the play. Gosh, what a relief.

And as you might expect, after this

Miss Minnie Brown is ticket chairman, Miss Ann Fishman, treasurer; Miss Rose Brown, publicity, and Miss Beatrice Goldowsky, ex-officio. The committee assisting, comprises the following:

PAUL M. WARBURG, NOTED FINANCIER, BURIED MONDAY

Quiet Funeral Services Attended Only by Family; Death Mourned on Both Sides of Atlantic

New York, Jan. 29—(JTA)—Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Monday morning for Paul M. Warburg, internationally reputed Jewish banker and initiator of the Federal Reserve system, who succumbed Sunday night to pneumonia, at the age of 63. Cremation followed. The ashes were buried in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Tarrytown.

The services were strictly private, from his residence where he passed away, and were attended by members of the family only. Mr. Warburg was a member of Temple Emanu-El.

Mr. Warburg's passing is mourned on both sides of the Atlantic, where he was widely known and highly esteemed. Tributes to his leadership in the fields of banking, philanthropy and citizenship came from far and wide.

Although he had been ill since last December, when he suffered a stroke, brought on by overwork, resulting from a strenuous summer spent in following up the European crisis, his death came as a shock. His condition was not considered grave, and confidence was entertained that he would recover. Ten days ago, however, he developed pneumonia, which, in his weakened condition, he was unable to fight off.

Felix M. Warburg, his brother, was at his bedside when he passed away, as were his wife and two children, James M. Warburg and Miss Bettina Warburg.

One of the outstanding banking authorities in the United States, Mr. Warburg, whose middle name like that of his brother, was Moritz, was a member of a distinguished German banking family, whose family seat was in Hamburg. Two brothers, Max and Fritz, in Germany, are considered among the leading bankers of Europe.

JEWISH FOOD SHOW ATTRACTING GREAT INTEREST

Local and National Companies Greatly Interested in Jewish Food Show and Home Exhibit

The first ever held in Rhode Island and one that is attracting the attention of the Jewish people of Rhode Island is the Providence Jewish Food Show and Household Exhibit which will be held at Infantry Hall on March 1, 2, and 3, under the joint auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Emanu-El and The Jewish Herald. A most complete exhibit of food products and household appliances will be one of the many features of the three-day exposition which will also feature cooking classes and demonstrations by Heins Wingenfeld, internationally known chef, of dishes conforming with the Jewish dietary laws.

Nationally known food products will be demonstrated and the latest type of home appliances will be shown. Educational talking pictures will be a feature of each evening and there will be something doing every day from 12 to 12.

This exposition is attracting the attention of the Jewish women in the state and the Sisterhood of Temple Emanu-El is directing the sale of tickets throughout Rhode Island through a committee of over one hundred women.

One of the largest food exhibits in the show has been arranged by the M. Winer Company, operators of food stores throughout New England, who are co-operating to make the show a success.

OPPOSES BILL TO ADMIT HUSBANDS OF CITIZENS

Washington, Jan. 29—(JTA) — The American Federation of Labor, represented by V. C. Hashing, vigorously expressed its opposition to the bill calling for the admission of husbands of United States citizens on a non-quota basis, and to all other measures seeking to liberalize the immigration laws, at a hearing of the House Immigration Committee.

Mr. Hodgson, Chief of the Visa Department, again appeared before the committee and repeated his charges that many of the marriages between American women and foreigners, are fraudulent.

A Pioneer In Goodwill

By EVERETT R. CLINCHY

The subject of this article, Dr. Alfred Williams Anthony, who celebrated his 72nd birthday this month, is generally accredited with being the author of the Goodwill Movement in the United States. An interesting exchange of correspondence between the late Louis Marshall and Dr. Anthony took place in 1929 on the value of the Goodwill movement. The author of the article is the director of the Goodwill Movement—Editor's Note.

Dr. Alfred William Anthony, whose birthday is celebrated this month, is an intelligent and loyal friend of Jewry. Intelligent, because appreciatively critical; loyal, because courageously true to the ethic he deems that justice and parity demands. It may not be unfitting that the Jews who know so well how to cherish a friend should salute this man on the 72nd anniversary of his birth.

Dr. Anthony has been called "the father of the Goodwill Movement," but let us come to that later.

First about the man himself: Alfred Williams Anthony is a highly cultivated gentleman. He lives forthrightly, gracefully and buoyantly. His mental habits are those of a well-seasoned philosopher. I remember that at lunch one day he told me, as he finished smoking a cigarette, why he thought an educated person is like a fine copper kettle. "It stands the test of fire. It does not leak." His eyes twinkled at that! "It directs its energies through its spout in such directions as its energies are needed. It takes on a beautiful polish. It is serviceable, and it shines with the lustre of practical use and value."

Then,too, Dr. Anthony is a man of generous sympathies. The Bates College magazine of Lewiston, Me., recently acclaimed his inclusive, democratic interests in "all people of all ages, sexes, religious views, political affiliations and social and moral attainments." His earliest intergroup activities had to do with understanding and co-operation among the divisions of Protestant Christianity.

Dr. Anthony has long walked in the vanguard ahead of ninety-five per cent. of the Gentile world, with regard to the relationships of Christians and Jews. For ten or fifteen centuries, Christians, like most potently organized religions at one stage or another in their development, assumed that the annihilation of all other religions would be the highest good that could come to their own religion. It is only in very recent years that there has developed in some Christian minds the idea that non-Christian cultures not only have the right but also the duty to live. Dr. Anthony has been a pioneer in that development, insisting upon recognition of the rights and dignities of the Jews, a minority religious group.

"No page in history bears more blots and stains than that which records the relations of Jews and Christians," he told the Federal Council of Churches in 1924. "Some countries in Europe have suffered even more than has America with passions, strifes, persecutions and pogroms, and yet America has not been wholly free from prejudice and injustice, and recent tendencies have seemed to bring the peril nearer." Dr. Anthony then asserted that it is the duty of Christian denominations to oppose the waves of passion which threaten the peace and security of American people and institutions. He denounced the anti-Semitic movements.

As a result of his efforts the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America originated and has continued ever since, a committee on goodwill between Jews and Christians. The five original objects were:

(1) To ascertain the causes of racial ill-will and to discover how these causes may be removed or modified;

(2) To establish contacts between Jews and Christians in cities where conditions make it advisable, so as to have several centers of people throughout the country seeking to promote understanding and co-operation;

(3) To discover the things within a community, social and political, which both Jews and Christians may do in co-operation, and so aid each other in human welfare and community benefits;

(4) To watch the press and other public utterances and endeavor to correct false and irritating statements and promote the spread of sound and proper information;

(5) To create a literature which will help shape a better public opinion.

In regard to the program, he commented: "The committee . . . . does not expect men to be alike; it does not ask them to conform to dogmas and standards save of the most comprehensive and inclusive kind. It does not disguise its own Christianity; it does not blink at the differences between Christians and Jews; it does not seek to make either over into the other. It desires fair play on both sides, mutual consideration, common courtesies, tolerant and co-operative fellowship, and a realization of a common brotherhood in one country, in one human family, in the common bonds of religious earnestness and striving."

My first acquaintance with Alfred Williams Anthony came while I was college minister at Wesleyan in Middletown, Conn. I had discovered that Protestant college students became more sensible Protestants as well as better citizens through learning about Roman Catholics from men like Father J. Elliot Ross, Father Lawrason Riggs and Father John Cooper; that Christians were stimulated and enriched by opportunities to exchange ideas with Jews. (Behavior patterns toward Jews changed, as a by-product!) Rabbi Sydney Tedesche, then of New Haven, and Rabbi Abraham Feldman of Hartford led discussions. I well remember, also, Stephen Wise's visit.

Dr. and Mrs. Wise dined with a group of faculty and students at the President's house. That night the gymnasium was more jammed to hear and question Rabbi Wise than the

TEMPLE BETH-EL

SERVICES

One of the largest congregations of the season attended the services on Friday night, when Dr. David Lefkowith of Dallas, Texas, occupied the pulpit as the guest speaker. His message on the subject, "American Judaism" proved to be most stimulating and inspiring. The presence of this large assembly was not alone a tribute to the man himself, who is one of the outstanding Rabbis in the American pulpit, but was also an indication of the lively interest in the Jewish faith and in all matters that appertain to the place and function of the Synagogue.

MEN'S CLUB WEEK-DAY LUNCHEON

The week-day luncheon of the Men's Club, held at the Narragansett Hotel on Wednesday noon, more than ever manifested the desire of the members to attend and to participate in the discussion of the subjects presented.

The speaker, Rev. E M. Baker, addressed the group on his observances and experiences in Russia during the past summer. Particularly interesting were his references to the conditions of the Jew and the effect of the policy of the Soviet Government in banning religion upon the Jewish people who live there.

Silverman and Rabbi Samuel M. Gup.

Following the Board meeting, the group adjourned to the Temple, where the annual meeting of the Men's Club took place. All the officers were re-elected with the exception of Gustave E. Koppe, in whose place Milton Pliner was installed as Financial Secretary. Reports were read by the President and the various chairmen of committees. The President pointed out that the Men's Club has experienced one of the most flourishing years in its history.

Among the speakers was Samuel H. Workman, who set forth the relation between the Men's Club and the National Brotherhood and the possibilities for further co-operation. Rabbi Gup praised the officers and members of the club for their fine performance and urged strongly the development of the program of a more intimate correlation between its activities and the well-being of the Temple.

Entertainment was provided by the boys of the Sockanosset School.

CHAMISHA OSER BESHVAT CELEBRATED

Children of the Jewish Center Religious School celebrated the Jewish Arbor Day last Sunday with an appropriate program. Grade 4, taught by Miss Ruby Winnerman, won the attendance banner for two successive weeks. By general vote of the assembly, the children decided to contribute $25 towards the Joint Distribution Committee.

A motion picture, "Jacob and Esau," makes the fourth Biblical episode that the children have seen. The guests at the assembly were Mr. Henry Hassenfeld and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Markensohn.

DANCING CLASSES POPULAR

Four dancing classes are now being conducted at the Jewish Community Center. On Thursday afternoon, the children from 7 to 12 receive instruction from Miss Jean Schwartz. Monday evenings, two classes are held; one for Intermediate Girls, conducted by Miss Frances Williams, and the other by Monsieur and Madame Russakof. In the Senior Girls' class, 45 attend regularly every Monday evening. Instruction includes ballet, aesthetic, interpretive and tap dancing.

MEN'S GYM CLASS GROWS

Gymnasium work was never as popular among men as it is today in the Center. Because of the overcrowded condition on the Center gym floor, plans are being made to offer gym periods on other days of the week. The showers at the Center are in the finest condition due to the recent installation of thermostatic valve controls.

GYM FOR MARRIED WOMEN

Every Tuesday afternoon a gymnasium class for married women is being conducted. This is a course in form and reducing exercises. Judging by the steady attendance, the class will surely grow as more women learn the advantages of health and recreation in the Center gym.

X-Ray Department to be Established at North End Dispensary

The North End Dispensary at 49 Orm street will have in operation within the next few weeks an X-Ray Department of which they have been in need for a long time.

Lack of the department has especially hampered the treatment of asthma patients, for whom a separate clinic was established a year ago. Previously, asthma sufferers were treated at the general medical clinic.

The results of the asthma clinic, which is conducted on Saturdays, so that undivided time and attention may be given sufferers have been so notable that patients have been attracted to it from other sections of the city, although the clinic was established primarily for North End residents.

The dispensary has done everything possible to relieve patients of the burdens even of incidental expense, and keeps on hand most of the medicines required in treatment of cases that come to it, in many cases dispensing medicine without charge.

CHAMISHA OSER BESHVAT CELEBRATED

Children of the Jewish Center Religious School celebrated the Jewish Arbor Day last Sunday with an appropriate program. Grade 4, taught by Miss Ruby Winnerman, won the attendance banner for two successive weeks. By general vote of the assembly, the children decided to contribute $25 towards the Joint Distribution Committee.

A motion picture, "Jacob and Esau," makes the fourth Biblical episode that the children have seen. The guests at the assembly were Mr. Henry Hassenfeld and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Markensohn.

DANCING CLASSES POPULAR

Four dancing classes are now being conducted at the Jewish Community Center. On Thursday afternoon, the children from 7 to 12 receive instruction from Miss Jean Schwartz. In the Senior Girls' class, 45 attend regularly every Monday evening. Instruction includes ballet, aesthetic, interpretive and tap dancing.

MEN'S GYM CLASS GROWS

Gymnasium work was never as popular among men as it is today in the Center. Because of the overcrowded condition on the Center gym floor, plans are being made to offer gym periods on other days of the week. The showers at the Center are in the finest condition due to the recent installation of thermostatic valve controls.

MISCHIEF AFOOT

It was not long ago that Adolph Hitler and his cohorts were loud in their denunciation of the Jews. Now, without apparent reason, the talk against Jews has been modified greatly. The National-Socialist Party has increased in strength and influence, and Chancellor Bruening frankly stated to Premier Laval that Hitler would be a certain power in the Reich before the coming Spring. Why, then, this scrupulous restraint in mentioning the Jews.

Pierre Van Paassen makes a record of a plan, which, if true, is indicative both of the smallness and the preposterous stupidity of Adolph Hitler; but a plan no less dangerous for the childish cunning behind it. He tells us that Hitler does not wish to expel the Jews nor does he wish to organize a pogrom against them. He wishes, ostensibly, to grant them all the privileges of full-fledged German citizens, but to strike at them through a decade by a ruthless system of taxation, and so, by economic pressure to force the mass of German Jewry into the ranks of the poorest strata of the population.

Having reduced them to the level of proletarians, Hitler would expect the Jews to seek salvation and support in revolutionary and subversive movements. Then, when he had identified the Jews with revolutionaries, he would make the most of the false situation he had created by fighting against them as Bolshevists rather than as Jews, and so escape the censure of the world. American Jews, he feels, could not in all conscience oppose his war against Bolshevism.

Conditions in Germany, however, do not warrant too fearsome a scrutiny of Hitler's plan. In a month, the new elections will have taken place, and it is quite possible that the Bruening-Hindenburg regime will not be upset by the Nazis. Should Hitler carry the discontented masses to the polls to elect his party into power, however, the situation might assume important features.

One thing is certain, in all the complexity of German affairs: there are German Jews, clever and intelligent enough in this modern age to combat a politician like Hitler. In the first place, a party so dependent on prejudices and merely temporal maladjustments could not hope to remain in power long enough to undermine the solidity and stability of the Jews. Secondly, no matter how cleverly Hitler attempts to manoeuver his attacks against them, he is none the less obvious. Finally, it is to be hoped that the rest of the Jews throughout the civilized world would not stand by helplessly and see so vile an outrage committed against so large and so integral a part of the Jewish race as is made up by the Germans among them.

relief came, there came further news. Two calls from the Civil Service—one for teaching English to foreigners, and then a call to read proof at one of the state institutions.

Of course, Rice never took any of the Civil Service jobs. He stuck to writing plays, and he is living happy ever after.

Mrs. Ehrlich Celebrates Xmas

I have heard it said that there are some Jews who have Christmas celebrations.

But I think you will have to admit that it is a rare thing for Jews to carry the celebration to the point that Mrs. Jacob Ehrlich recently did, if my information is accurate.

Mrs. Ehrlich, it seems, is President of the Horse Aid Society. She is very much interested in the welfare of animals. And I like her for that.

Well, when Christmas came around, Mrs. Ehrlich saw everybody getting visits from Santa Claus, but the animals. That wasn't right. The poor beasts have also a right to a little relief from the tedium of ordinary life. As a poet might put it:

The horse, the cat and the mule
They, too, must have their Yule.

Horses and Purim

And so, Mrs. Ehrlich arranged a Christmas celebration for the animals. Gifts were distributed all around. It was very pleasant all around. Nobody got anybody's goat. Everybody was pleasant. Even the mules didn't kick.

Now, as I say, I have no objections to that. It had, in fact, a lot of horse sense to it. But it seems to me that it is only fair that the idea should be extended, or the first thing we know, all the mules will be singing Christmas carols, and there won't be a Jewish mule left.

In other words, I say, Mrs. Ehrlich, if she is a good American, who believes in the Jeffersonian doctrine of equal rights to all and special privleges to none—if she subscribes to the Roosevelt doctrine of a square deal, she will at once arrange that the next animal celebration shall be a Purim festival. Just imagine the mule braying and the horse neighing when Haman is hanged. It would have all these little noise-makers off the map.

A Little Story

And that reminds us of a little story, that is said to have had its setting in a little Southern town.

It seems that Mr. Cohen had been a merchant in this little town which we shall call Asthonia, for many years. And the people of Asthonia liked Mr. Cohen very much. And they bought of him shoes and socks and many other things. For many years, did they patronize Mr. Cohen, and he sought to give them good service, for he was a member of the Rotary Club and, besides, he was naturally broad-minded and munificent.

But the citizens of Asthonia had one complaint against Mr. Cohen, and one day, a committee of its citizens, headed by the superintendent of the water works, came to see him. Really, the superintendent of the water works has no connection with this story. I am putting him in to make the story longer. Well, anyway, the committee came to Mr. Cohen and spoke to him, as follows:

"Mr. Cohen, you have lived in our midst for many years. You have prospered among us, and we have sent our husbands and our wives, our children and our grandchildren to trade with you. Always it is true you have given us the best of service, and have treated us as no merchant hitherto has ever treated us. You have become one of us. You have given generously to our institutions—you have extended credit to our people in times of unemployment—you have helped every civic cause. You have even given to the building of our Baptist church, our Methodist church, our Y. M. C. A., and you gave the big picture that hangs in the Baptist Young People's Union. But, Mr. Cohen, one thing have we against you. You do not keep our holidays."

After they had spoken so, they were silent, and Mr. Cohen, after a pause, thought it seemly that he should make some reply, which he did, according to these words:

"Friends," said Mr. Cohen, "I am deeply moved by what you have said. As you have spoken, I have tried to be not only a storekeeper, but a friend. And I am deeply touched, that you regard me as one of you. What you say about my failure to keep your holidays is true. And my only excuse is, that I never thought of it in that light. But hereafter, Cohen and Son shall keep all of your holidays." After which Mr. Cohen retired to his shoe counter, for there was a great sale going on at the time in damaged and mismated shoes which were being sold, as Mr. Cohen framed it, "billig as borsht," or to use the vernacular, "cheap as beet soup."

But let not the thought occur to you that Mr. Cohen forgot his promise about keeping the holidays. For he did not. Christmas had gone. It was too late for his store to celebrate that. But Easter was near.

Easter came nearer and nearer. Finally, it was Easter. And there was no store in Asthonia so decorated as that of Mr. Cohen. The whole front of the store was a veritable mass of Easter lilies. Everywhere, too, there were the little Easter eggs.

The citizens of Asthonia were delighted as they stood in front of the store. Mr. Cohen went out to greet them, "See," he said, with obvious jubilation.

"But wait a minute—you haven't seen all," he said. "Come in with me." The crowd followed him into the store. There was a big, beautiful sign. Mr. Cohen pointed to it, with a chest expansion that surpassed Jack Dempsey's.

The people read the sign. In big words there was: CHRIST HAS RISEN. In smaller letters, underneath there was: But my prices have not.

In accepting the office, the President-elect, Mrs. Kane, urged the members to maintain their interest in the Orphanage at this time, above all, as there is much work to be done to maintain the high standard so far set, and to continue the atmosphere of a boarding school and home, which the Home has succeeded in establishing, under the leadership of the present Executive Director, Dr. L. Time Fails to Dim Rosenblatt's Voice as the Noted Cantor Reaches Half-Century Mark

There are notables of the concert and operatic stage, who have attained to a venerable age without a too-obvious impairment of their talent. Mme. Schumann-Heink, of course, is the hardy perennial who still evokes the praise of multitudes, who fail to see her silver hair or the remorseless hand of time.

Fifty is hardly a venerable age, and few in any field would be ready to take to the sidelines at that age. But when you have sung for forty-six years of that time, beginning, as arithmetic makes obvious, at the tender age of four, then one can hardly be put down as a mere stripling. That is exactly the case with Cantor Josef Rosenblatt who, this year, celebrates his fiftieth year, but who has nevertheless encompassed in that span the work and activity of at least two artists.

In any event, time has not dimmed, nor have the years tampered with, that magnificent voice which has entranced audiences, both here and abroad, for more than two-score years. Residents of Providence, who will have an opportunity to hear Rosenblatt at Infantry Hall on Wednesday evening, February 10th will verify for themselves the verdict of the critics who have sung the praises of this consummate artist.

"You cannot talk about Cantor Rosenblatt's wonderful voice," comments a leading English critic. "That would be misleading. He has a series of voices. The lowest sounds like the bass tones of the 'cello, the middle one is a clear oboe-like tenor, and cut of that he breaks straight into a sweet, thin falsetto—a couple of octaves of it—for all the world likes the voice of a woman soprano.

"Each is as distinct in character as if it came out of a separate larynx—though the Cantor can shade articulately from one to another when he likes. His methods are as many as his voices. He has a beautifully easy, smooth legato, but often he attacks with a sort of sob in the throat.

"His agility—he has a perfect trill—might make the most accomplished soprano leggioro jealous. Some times he begins a series of florid passages in his bass 'cello voice, continues in his tenor, and finishes away up among his octaves of hea- tones. Or he echoes a phrase in pianissimo falsetto that he has just sung in tenor. And it is all wonderfully done; so wonderfully, and he is so different to look at from all concert tenors ever known, that you find it difficult to believe in him as a flesh and blood singer."

The above is a recent criticsm by the music editor of the London Era. The power, the magnificence and the beauty of Rosenblatt's voice, which has enthralled thousands in the synagogue and on the concert stage remain in his fiftieth year, fresh and unimpaired.

Of course, apartment houses are community assets and are ideal solutions of the housing problem for certain individuals. Their rules and regulations are necessary for control. But perhaps the sign gives us a hint of one reason for the reported nation-wide swing of popular preference back toward single-unit, one family dwellings.

Who wants to bring up children under a rented roof . . surrounded by "don'ts" . . cramped and hushed in play . . missing the real meaning of the greatest four-letter word in the English language—HOME?

On Saturday, Jan. 23, Dr. Louis B. Wolfenson, Executive Director of the Orphanage, gave an interesting address on the greatest Jewish poet-philosopher of the Middle Ages,—Jehudah Halevi, and the Talmudist-philosopher, Moses Maimonides, at the Institute of Religion of Temple Emanu-El. Dr. Wolfenson sketched the life of these two great Rabbis and read illustrative poems of Jehudah Halevi in English translation. The significance of the 13 articles of faith formulated by Moses Maimonides was discussed by Dr. Wolfenson.

TREATS GIVEN

Within the past week there was presented to the Orphanage for the children, two birthday cakes,—one from the Louis Feiner Benevolent Association, on the occasion of its 10th anniversary, by a committee composed of the President, Mrs. H. Koret and Mrs. J. Weiss, Mrs. Abner Rosenberg, Mrs. Harvey Zuckerman and Miss Bernice Koret, who presented the gift; the second birthday cake came from the Roumanian Ahavas Sholom Congregation, from Mrs. Hyman Barasch, of 33 Temple street, brought to the Home by Mrs. Rosenberg and her committee.

Gifts for the purchase of books are mostly highly appreciated, as they are of great assistance to the children in their school work, and for the finest form of recreation.

Passover Parcels to Russia May be Sent Through the Hias

New York, Jan. 29—(JTA)—Matzoth and Passover food packages may be sent to Soviet Russia by American relatives through the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, in accordance with an arrangement concluded with the Soviet Government, it was made known recently.

The Passover food packages will be sent into Soviet Russia from Riga, under arrangements similar to those regarding the transmission of ordinary food packages.

The duty upon Matzoth is high, the Hias office points out, but Passover flour for the baking of Matzoth may be sent at the same cost and under the same conditions as ordinary flour.

Eleven pound packages of Matzoth may be sent at a cost of $10. The high price, the Hias explains, is due to the high duty, insurance, postage to the destination and return postage. Eleven pounds of flour for baking the Matzoth may be purchased for $3.32.

DEICHES NAMED TO STROOCK'S PLACE ON EDUCATION BOARD

New York, Jan. 29—(JTA)—Maurice Deiches was recently appointed by Mayor Walker to membership on the Board of Higher Education.

Mr. Deiches fills the vacancy left by the death of Moses J. Stroock.

CAR OWNERS DEMAND VALUES— not Claims!

MOTORISTS are finding the Greatest Values in Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Ever since Firestone and Firestone Dealers began advertising the true facts about tire quality and construction and actually demonstrating the Extra Values in Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires, distributors of special-brand mail-order tires have grown bolder and bolder with misleading claims and comparisons in the desperate effort to interest car-owners.

Car owners bought more Firestone Tires in May, June and July, than in any like period in history. This clearly shows that car owners are interested in Firestone Extra Values and are not interested in comparisons based on an almost obsolete tire size—confusing laboratory analyses—meaningless definitions—impractical challenges with unfair claims of twenty-five per-cent savings—and deceiving price comparisons.

Why risk a tire of unknown manufacture when you can get the Extra Quality, Extra Strength, and Extra Safety of the special patented construction features of Firestone Tires—Gum-Dipping, and Two Extra Cord Plies under the Tread?

You get these Extra Values—plus our Service and the DOUBLE GUARANTEE of Firestone and ourselves—at no more cost!

Drive in today.—We have sections cut from Firestone Tires, special-brand mail-order tires and others.—See the evidence.—Take nothing for granted.—Judge for Yourself.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

What Some College Needs—Benny Friedman

What some college needs, and I can name a few, is to get Benny Friedman and make him coach of the football team. Here is one of the best coaches in the game allowed to waste his talents with a professional team. Last fall, Yale called Benny to the rescue and that young man worked wonders. You didn't hear about it—but that is to be expected from Yale. The high hatted Elis couldn't stand the spectacle of a Jewish boy showing them how to run the team, and they left him out, but the boys in the press box realized what he accomplished with the usual sluggish Yale team.

When Yale broke out with a new kick-off formation, so reminiscent of the old flying wedge days, it was Friedman who introduced that stunt. In 1930, Crowley was known as the best tackle playing a fullback. Last season, after Benny had shown him how to be a "mop-up man," he was a star. If Princeton would like to win some football games, I suggest that they see if they can persuade Benny to come out to New Jersey. N. Y. U., C. C. N. Y. and Chicago are a few other institutions that could make good use of Benny's services.

Advocating Benny as a coach is not an idea all of my own. George Trevor of the New York Sun, one of the very few newspapermen writing about football, who really knows what it is all about, has the following to say about Benny Friedman:

"Friedman's football creed is, nevertheless, grounded on those solid basic principles which have stood the test of time. Schooled in the somewhat conservative methods of the Yost creed, Benny teaches the eternal verities of the game—bread and butter football—and then elaborates and embellishes that secure foundation with a superstructure of his own. His selective mind retains certain cardinal elements of the Yost doctrine and rejects the non-essentials. He is no blind worshiper at the shrine of his old tutor.

There is nothing "stunty" or exotic about the football which Friedman teaches. He is not one of those visionaries who go in for circus plays depending on novelty alone for their short-lived effectiveness, yet he is original enough to devise formations that can disrupt a carefully planned defense.

Even as a school boy quarterback in Cleveland it was evident that Friedman carried a marshal's baton in his knapsack. His every move revealed football intuition—the priceless asset which no coach can cultivate in a candidate.

"I am sending you a second Boss Weeks." Friedman's high school coach wrote to Fielding Yost. The "old man of Ann Arbor" rather resented that phrase. Weeks, you see, has always been his idol—a paragon among quarterbacks. In his heart Yost felt there would never be another pilot to match the chess-brained, thin-lipped little driver who ran the point-a-minute teams of 1901 and 1902.

Yost was wrong. He later admitted this by implication when he said: "I can't choose between Weeks and Friedman as field generals, but Benny is a far greater individual player." It was almost sacrilege for Yost to speak like that, so great was his reverence for the 1901 pilot.

Things were not made too easy for Friedman at Michigan. Religious prejudice reared its head. The quiet, soft-spoken Hebrew boy had to combat bigotry as well as a slew of ambitious claimants to the pilot berth. Benny overcame all obstacles. His magnetic personality, his unobtrusive, yet highly competitive temperament, gradually conquered intolerance. He won the respect and affection of his fellow players and his coaches. In the Senior year his fame as a quarterback, passer, kicker and runner had spread from coast to coast.

Friedman's high school reputation counted for nothing when he reported to Coach George Little at Michigan. Benny was just one in a hundred, but destiny had marked him and he would not be lost in the shuffle. His row was a hard one to hoe. "Send me over a couple of dummies for bullpen work," said Line Coach Wieman to the backfield tutor. Benny, rated a super-numerary, was picked as a "dummy."

For a solid week Friedman had to run interference against such strapping 'Varsity linemen as Hawkins, Edwards, Baer and Hall. Those giants gave him an unmerciful beating. Covered with bruises, he had a hard time getting out of bed each morning. Many boys would have quit under such a battering. Not Friedman. There was nothing of the "prima donna" about Benny.

"In self-defense I learned to block," says Friedman. "I mastered position, that subtle art of placing one's feet so as to utilize one's body most efficiently in blocking. A small man blessed with muscular co-ordination, nerve and a rugged constitution can smear giant adversaries if he knows the secret of 'getting position' on them."

Soon Friedman was handing out more punishment than he took. One by one his hulking 'Varsity opponents went limping to the sideline, hamstrung by his lethal shoulder blocking.

Friedman is that rare combination—a great mechanical player plus a chess-brained thinker. Hailed as the most accurate forward passer of all time he is almost equally adept at blocking, punting, drop-kicking, broken-field running and defensive work. Many college stars flunk out when they enter the more exacting professional field. Grange flopped as a "pro" player. Friedman, on the contrary, added luster to his football reputation in the professional game.

He is still active as quarterback of the Giants. Many critics rate him the greatest football player of all time, not excepting Thorpe, Mahan or Nevers. Certainly he is the most versatile."

All of which you must admit is rather laudatory. Yet personal skill alone does not make a coach. Few pigskin chasers can impart the knowledge they possess to others. Great teachers in all professions are rare birds, but Friedman is a born instructor. He has the knack of being able to teach others what he himself knows. What is more he is able to recognize talent when he sees it. Show Benny 100 candidates and he will unerringly, after seeing them perform a few times, pick the right man for the right job.

Friedman is a walk encylopedia of quarterback strategy. He is blessed with an analytical mind and is particularly adept in diagnosing plays. As a matter of fact Friedman's worth as a coach has already been proven. Men who are willing to invest money in football showed the good sense of procuring his services as coach for a professional team. If these hard-boiled boys see Benny's worth you would imagine that a college looking around for a man to bolster up a faltering bunch of alumni would grab our Benny. Q. E. D.

The Book Case

Comments on Jewish Authors and Their Books
By FREIDA R. BIENSTOCK

"Against the Sky"

"Against the Sky" by Konrad Bercovici (Covici, Friede, $2.50), is a grand gypsy story,—the kind one always hopes to come across and almost never does. Mr. Bercovici has written on a subject with which he is admittedly familiar and has done so in his own inimitable and fascinating manner. Gypsies become more than mortal and the open road takes on a fascination hardly justified by the city mortal's genuine experiences with that wandering people. And though we know that, like the gypsies, Mr. Bercovici has indulged in some pardonable romanticism we more than forgive him for the results he has achieved.

The love current runs strongly through the novel. It is the main stream of the book,—the love of the beautiful gypsy girl for a Nordic, and, on the other hand the love of a man of another gypsy tribe for the girl, Loli, with innumerable other minor love episodes as background and thrilling adventures as a counter-interest. Mr. Bercovici, as one would expect by his earlier works, need bow to no one in his ability to relate a story with the proper amount of atmosphere and feeling so that before one has read the last page one feels strongly for his alluring and entrancing gypsies and has merely a certain lack of sympathy for the cold and unfeeling "Georgios."

I intended to read a few pages of Mr. Bercovici's book and then put it down for a more propitious moment. But, lost in the enjoyment of a really fascinating story I read and read far, far into the night so that this early morning review may smack somewhat of intoxication. It should reek of the intoxication of a reviewer whose excursions into the field of the novel of romance and adventure have been all too far in the recent past!

huge barn drew for any intercollegiate athletic event! Representatives of twenty colleges were present. Boys overflowed the chairs, sat in the aisles, stood around the wall, and hung legs over the balcony rails. Dr. Wise talk about Christianity: its strength and its weaknesses. A prophetic address! Rabbi Wise gave more vitality to the religious life of the campus than any other minister the College Church and Christian Association brought to the campus that year. While this inter-faith educational work was progressing in New England, Dr. Anthony was Chairman of the Committee on Goodwill Between Jews and Christians in the Federal Council of Churches. In 1928 Dr. Anthony nominated me to execute the work of this committee, knowing full well that I hoped not only for the continuation of Judaism as one of the significant living cultures, but also that I wanted a process of communication between Christians and Jews whereby mutual stimulation and enrichment would take place through contagious association. I record this not to air my own views but simply to give personal testimony to Dr. Anthony's genuine "goodwill" toward Jews as Jews.

Let us list a few of the positions emancipated thinkers have taken on inter-cultural relations and see where Dr. Anthony stands.

1. Reverence for the reverences of others. Every religion in times past has sought proselytes: both Judaism and Christianity are examples. In our generation, however, a new respect is dawning for the cultural "personality" of a group. All of the psychological, sociological and anthropological factors we know anything about tend to make us slower than heretofore to violate cultural loyalties. Rabbi Harry Levi of Boston and Rabbi David de Sola Pool of New York jointly stated:

"We Jews agree that the right and the duty to preach what is held to be religious truth is not to be denied to any religion, and is indeed an essential of any vital religion. But if this is done to adherents of other faiths, it must be done only to adults and without bribes or pressure, economic or social."

And that is precisely the stand Dr. Anthony has taken publicly for ten years. He has always held that those people who feel that they are the only ones who have "the truth" (and there are some "fundamentalist" Jews who feel that way, as there are "fundamentalist" Christians) have a perfect right to preach their gospel. But he personally has wanted Jews to continue loyalty to the Synagogue. Long ago he disavowed the thought of purpose of conversionism of the Jew.

"Two religions," he wrote in 1924, "can find the way of understanding each other and of walking together and working together as two individuals may, without either being absorbed by the other, but each being made stronger and better because of the help of the other."

2. The hope that both Judaism and Christianity will strengthen in the devotion of their numbers, and grow in the vision of their people.

Canon Herford, noted as a Christian authority on Judaism, and on Pharisaism in particular, expressed his opinion (a) that it was a fortunate turn in civilization when the Christian movement broke away from Judaism, because thereby Jewish teachings were adjusted to European folkways and thought to a degree that Judaism could not have proved useful to non-Jews; (b) that it has been fortunate that Judaism continued to flourish both for the Jews and also as a constant check on Christianity, restraining Christianity from losing its original spirit as it took on European accretions.

With this Dr. Anthony is in full agreement. He wrote to the late Mr. Louis Marshall in July, 1929, "What we need, both Jew and Christian, is a revival of religion, a revival each of his own true religion." So far as I have any knowledge, Dr. Anthony throughout his life never wanted to see Jews become Baptists or Episcopalians, or to transfer to any other religious affiliations. He has gloried in every effort that such fine friends of his as the late Rabbi Joel Blau of England, Rabbi Abram Simon of Washington, Rabbi David Philipson of Cincinnati and others, exerted as leaders in Jewish life. Here Canon Herford and Dr. Anthony see eye to eye.

3. The hope that "understanding" and "goodwill" shall actually achieve results.

If the good will movement is to effect changes its program must reach Sunday schools and adult religious organizations. It must bare economic and social discriminations. It must establish channels of communication between Jews and Christians so that through appreciative understanding social distance between Jews and Christians will be reduced. It must encourage the people of these groups to work together on common tasks. For these things Alfred Williams Anthony stands. And greater still, he has lived a life that incarnates the fine spirit that is back of these principles. Baptist minister, college professor, theological school teacher, Christian statesman, editor, author, traveler and beyond all these achievements, Dr. Anthony will be remembered as one of the honest seers and courageous doers in the field of just human relationships between Jews and Christians.
