Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

A Story of Nippon

I don't know whether I have ever told it—I mean that story about the Russian polkovnik during the Russo-Japanese war. Anyway, during these days when Japan is again on the front page, it bears retelling.

The polkovnik was sitting in a cafe during the Russo-Japanese war, drinking his corn liquor, or whatever it is that polkovniks were wont to drink.

Amid the sips, he was boasting to his fellows at the table of Russian victories.

"We have taken Tsitsihar and Yokomo and Yakula and so on and so on," went on the polkovnik.

A Jew sat at the table, listening in. "Tell me, polkovnik, have the Russians taken Misen-meshuneh?"

"No," but we'll take it yet, we'll take it yet," grimly returned the polkovnik.

Saved by No Birth Control

Today, the pinching shoe is on the other foot. I have an idea that the Japs will take the "Mishen-meshuneh."

Of course, Japan is making a great big flourish, but in the end what can its rattling of the sword mean against the immense sea of five hundred million Chinese?

China's lack of birth control means her ultimate victory.

Dr. Dublin Worried

I see, by the way, that Dr. Louis I. Dublin, the Jewish Vice President of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has become greatly exercised over birth control. He fears that the inroads of birth control will produce a civilization in which there will be little of youth. A bunch of old bewhiskered men and wrinkled women.

And what, intimates Dr. Dublin, can you expect of such a world? It must become a second rate affair.

Not a Panacea

Though I do not share Dr. Dublin's fears, neither do I share all the hyperbole of praise of birth control that one hears all about. Talk to some and you will be led to believe that the whole salvation of the world rests in forwarding birth control.

We had occasion only the other day, to talk to a Jewish woman hailing from the West, who came to New York to attend some birth control conclave. She was a well-to-do woman, and not having enough children needed something to occupy her mind, so the birth control movement at least served some purpose with her. But we could not share her ecstasy about the fruits of birth control.

Population Has Advantages

This good lady informed us that if we had had birth control, we would not have the suffering that we witness in the present depression.

As though there were not depressions, ten and twenty and forty and one hundred years back when the population of the country was but a tithe of the present numbers.

Not being married, perhaps we should not speak, but it seems to us, that the only sensible thing to be said in favor of birth control is that the bearing and rearing of children is arduous—too arduous for some women. But all other advantages, it seems to me, are on the side of the larger family. Each new child is in the nature of a new adventure, in which the parents participate. From the fundamental standpoint of society, too, each new addition means an increase to the social wealth. Every person, with modern machinery, can

RABBI HARRY LEVI OF BOSTON TO LECTURE AT CENTER, SUNDAY

Nationally Known Rabbi of Temple Israel to Give Discourse on "Intermarriage"

Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel, Boston, will be the fourth speaker in the Jewish Center Lecture Course, Sunday evening, Feb. 14th, at 8:30 o'clock. His subject will be "Intermarriage—Why? Why Not?"

Through radio and other public addresses, Rabbi Levi created for himself a reputation of being the foremost pulpit orator in the country. Temple Israel, which is the largest and most influential congregation in New England, with a membership of over 3000, has been occupied by Rabbi Levi since 1911.

Rabbi Levi is recognized by Jew and non-Jew to be one of the outstanding preachers in America. He has been heard by thousands in various Synagogues and Jewish Centers and by hundreds of thousands through Station WNAC, over which he broadcasts Sunday mornings. He has contributed a number of articles to various periodicals and is the author of several books.

Rabbi Levi's coming to Providence has aroused a tremendous amount of interest and one of the largest audiences that ever attended an event at the Center, is expected.

PAUL M. WARBURG LEAVES ESTATE OF $50,000,000

Is Bequeathed in Its Entirety to Widow During Her Lifetime; Servants Remembered

New York, Feb. 12—(JTA)—An estate, believed to amount to $50,000,000 or more, was left by the late Paul M. Warburg, internationally known Jewish financier and principal initiator of the Federal Reserve System.

No direct charitable bequests are his widow, the former Nina Loeb, during her lifetime, and thereafter it is to be divided equally between his two children, Dr. Bettina Warburg and James Paul Warburg.

No direct charitable bequests are made for the reason, as the will explains, the wife and children are aware of his views and will make such gifts as they consider proper and in accordance with his wishes.

Provision, however, is made that tokens of appreciation be given to employees, to be calculated at the rate of $250 for each year of completed service plus a bonus of $2500 for each completed period of ten years.

Under this provision, 19 servants and employees receive in all bequests totaled at $40,500.

The executors of the estate, who are not required to give bonds, are the widow and the two children and Felix M. Warburg, the only brother residing in the United States.

The will further leaves a set of rules for safe investment of the estate.

GOV. CASE TO SPEAK AT TEMPLE EMANU-EL SERVICES ON FRIDAY

Jewish Community Service to be Held in Observance of Washington's 200th Birthday

Gov. Norman S. Case will be the main speaker at the Jewish Community services in honor of the George Washington Bi-Centennial, to be held at Temple Emanu-El on next Friday evening, Feb. 19, at 8:15 o'clock. Rabbi Israel M. Goldman will also speak.

It has been noted that George Washington spoke in only one Synagogue in the entire United States and that was what is now known as the Judah Touro Synagogue of Newport. This service in honor of George Washington's 200th birthday is part of the local and national celebrations being held to commemorate the event.

The Jewish War Veterans of Rhode Island will attend in uniform and an invitation has been extended to the Touro Fraternal Association, Boy and Girl Scout Troops, 5, 10, 14, 15, 18, 20, 27, 30 and 47, will also attend in uniform.

Cantor Bettman and the full Temple Emanu-El Choir, under the direction of Prof. Arthur Einstein, will assist in the services. The arrangements committee for the Temple consists of Philip C. Joslin, Hon. Charles Brown, Samuel Rosen, Joseph L. Coplan and Benjamin D. Basok.

CONFERENCE WITH JEWS FOR DIVISION PROPOSED BY ARABS

Would Divide Palestine Into Administrative Units—One to be Jewish National Home

London, Feb. 12—(JTA)—A project for a Jewish-Arab round table conference to settle the terms upon which Jews and Arabs can co-operate, proposed by the former Khedive Abashlimi, and approved by the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, was received here last Thursday by the members of the British Pro-Arab Committee for their consideration and recommendation, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learns.

The project, consisting of twenty paragraphs, recommends that the Jewish-Arab round table conference should be called in Jerusalem or elsewhere under the chairmanship of a neutral person acceptable to both parties and also to the British Government.

The project provides that Palestine should be divided into administrative areas with a view to concentrating Jewish interests in one administrative unit to be called "The National Home of the Jews." This district should be subject to the jurisdiction of the Palestine constitution. The constitution, however, is to secure full autonomy for the Jewish community as far as Jewish internal affairs are concerned, and is also to guarantee the Jews a proper share in the governing of the country as a whole.

The boundaries of the Jewish district should be settled by a special sub-committee, the project recommends. The provincial administration of the Jewish district should be formed along lines similar to those of the British proposal with regard to the provincial constitution for India. The inhabitants of the Jewish district will have the option of moving into another district within a limited period after which they will be automatically considered as having accepted the terms of the constitution which will guarantee rights for other national minorities in that part of Palestine outside of Jewish territory.

The Palestine constitution, the project suggests, should be framed on self-governing lines. The constitution of the Jewish district should have the same binding force as the constitution of Palestine itself.

Palestine should become a member of the League of Nations on conditions similar to Iraq. A Judicial Tribunal should be established in Palestine by the local government in order to settle conflicts which may arise between Jews and Arabs. Each side, however, should have the right to appeal to the League of Nations against the decisions of this tribunal.

The Jews In Mexico

By J. L. WEINBERGER

Until within recent years, Mexico held but little attraction for the European immigrant and remained comparatively unaffected by the great streams of immigration which swept towards other countries of the western hemisphere. A country with a large native population living in very primitive fashion; modern industry in its infancy; agriculture and mining the principal occupations; an abundance of unskilled labor and a limited demand for skilled labor; wages much lower than in the United States and in many European countries.

These were the conditions at the beginning of the present century naturally more inviting to capital interested in developing the great natural resources of the country, than to the European immigrant of little means seeking a new home, with opportunities for bettering his condition. The commerce and industry of the country were controlled by foreigners, the majority being Spaniards; those from other European countries hardly exceeded 6000 in number.

In 1912, when Jews from the Orient and the Occident joined in building the first synagogue and in dedicating their first cemetery in Mexico City, there were not over 100 Jewish families in the entire country, mostly of European origin. But the World War, and the economical and political upheavals which followed in its wake, turned a stream of immigrants barred from entering the United States towards other countries. Jewish immigrants from Turkey and Syria, began coming to Mexico in 1915. By 1921, they were well established and numbered approximately 6000 persons. It is estimated there are now 12,000 residing in the country. They have a cemetery and a synagogue; at least, a dozen other places of worship; two aid societies—the "Brotherhood" and the "Good Will," and a Talmud Torah. They are engaged principally in the dry goods business, and were the first merchants to actively commence the sale of dry goods on the installation plan by house-to-house soliciting.

It was not until 1921, that Jewish immigrants from Eastern Europe began to arrive in comparatively large numbers. They were mainly young men who came to Mexico, merely with the intention of making it a stopping place on their way to the United States. Many had been deceived into believing that to smuggle across the border was an easy matter; others came with the intention of residing two years, so that they might enter the States, as non-quota immigrants. The newcomers gave much trouble to Jews residing in Mexico, as well as to Jewish communities on the American side of the border.

Many became stranded and penniless, and a serious relief problem resulted with which local Jews were unable to cope. This brought the B'nai B'rith to the rescue. Committees were organized in various cities and a monthly subvention was given by the B'nai B'rith for relief work. Although several thousand immigrants entered the country during the next three years, there were only about 1000 remaining in the spring of 1924.

By this time, it had become clear to B'nai B'rith leaders, that if a foundation was to be laid for future Jewish settlement in Mexico a larger sum of money would have to be spent in organized work. A plan was submitted to the Executive Committee by Rabbi Martin Zielonka and Archibald A. Marx and as a result, the B'nai B'rith Mexican Bureau was opened in Mexico City, in the fall of 1924, with a definite program for establishing Jewish immigrants in Mexico. The program covered the entire range of social service; from receiving the immigrants on their arrival at Vera Cruz; furnishing them with lodging and meals in Mexico City; seeking employment for them; acting as interpreters in government departments and consulates; providing Spanish classes; giving business advice and legal aid; furnishing medical aid, including hospital care for serious cases; giving loans for business and industry as well as emergency relief.

The bureau opened barely in time to receive the big wave of immigration which started towards Mexico as a consequence of the American immigration law that went into effect in July, 1924. Thousands of immigrants had been left stranded in European ports; not one but had relatives in the United States, and it was natural that they should look to adjacent countries for a haven of refuge. In less than a year's time, the number of immigrants from Europe had quadrupled, and at the close of 1925, their number was estimated to be nearly 5000. It was a critical period in the history of Jewish immigration into Mexico. To establish all these immigrants in a country, where there was practically no work awaiting them, and with economical conditions none too good, was a most difficult undertaking, and it has often been said that the opening of the B'nai B'rith Mexican Bureau, averted a catastrophe. Fortunately, immigration slowed down after 1925, to an average of 100 persons monthly. Not all the immigrants remained in Mexico; some drifted to other Latin-American countries; a few returned to Europe; wives and children of American declarants finally entered the States; but by far the greater part have become definitely rooted in Mexico and it is estimated that, including children born in the country, they number approximately 900 persons.

The immigrants came from all walks of life; every trade and profession was represented; there were tailors and shoemakers; engineers and doctors; country merchants and manufacturers, all anxious to start life over again in the new world. The people of Mexico have always been friendly to foreigners, and she opened wide her doors to them; but there were no positions awaiting in shop or factory; soon the streets and market places were crowded with peddlers. From the city, they began to reach out into the country districts. They carried merchandise into the farthest corners of the republic and they are now established in every

"Is a Universal Religion Desirable?" The recent encyclical of the Pope, inviting the Protestant world to join hands with the Catholic faith suggests the consideration of this subject. Shall the various religions drop their differences? Shall they attempt to find a common religious denominator? Is it desirable to merge Judaism, Protestantism and Catholicism into one religion? Are religious distinctions a handicap to the moral and spiritual progress of mankind? These are the considerations which prompt the subject of the sermon on Friday, Feb. 19, at 8 p. m.

A NEEDED GIFT

After three years of work, the Hymnal Committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis has published a new hymnal. This volume contains many more singable hymns, a larger number and variety of children's services for all occasions and is also a much more truly Jewish work than its predecessor. The ablest Jewish talent available, organists and composers, was employed in its creation.

As the first step toward replacing the old hymnals, which after five years of service are shoddy, torn and almost beyond use, fifty copies of the new hymnal have been ordered in memory of Samuel Priest, a name linked with the Temple as a former trustee and enthusiastic proponent of its cause. This gift, amounting to $50, has been made by Mrs. Samuel Priest and her daughters, Mrs. Archie O. Joslin, Mrs. Henry P. Hirschberg, Mrs. Ira Marcus and Miss Hazel M. Priest.

Should any one care to memorialize their dear departed by making a gift to this Hymnal Fund, the name memorialized will be engraved on the cover of each book donated.

Says Harmony Between Arabs and Jews Possible

Cleveland, Feb. 12—(JTA) — Jews and Arabs would find a means of cooperating if left free of British influence, according to Pierre van Paassen, newspaper correspondent and lecturer, who has just returned from a seven-year stay abroad.

Addressing an audience at the Euclid Avenue Temple, Mr. van Paassen stated that England's efforts at the enforcement of the Balfour Declaration are "lax and insincere." He contrasted the insecurity of the Jews in Palestine with the autonomic rights which Jews receive in Soviet Russia. "In Russia today," he said, "the Jew enjoys a status which at least guarantees him security from pogroms."

Discussing the situation in Germany, Mr. van Paassen stated: "If he wishes, Hitler can seize power tomorrow. The Communists are waiting for just this opportunity so that they may oppose him and set up a Bolshevik State in Germany. In that event, the Jews in Germany will side with the Communists against Hitler."

Says French Jews Must Welcome German Migrants

Paris, Feb. 12—(JTA) — The Jews of France must be prepared to receive the German Jews who will most certainly leave Germany, once Hitler comes into power, Henri Torres leader of the League of Human Rights, urged in an address delivered at a meeting for the Fund for Jewish Immigrants.

Jewish solidarity is today necessary more than ever, with Hitler on the verge of taking over the reigns of office, he asserted. Unemployment in France must not be permitted to stand in the way of extending a friendly hand to the German Jews, who may seek refuge in France, Mr. Torres said.

RELIGION ON THE RADIO

The radio has become the most potent force in public thought, more insistent than the newspapers, more clamorous than the occasional pulpit or platform orators, and more appealing to the vast majority of the common people than either. For that reason the supervision of radio programs has become to each chain an unavoidable responsibility. There are those, however, who have recently found their ideas expressed editorially in The Christian Century, which objects to the censorship of the Federal Radio Commission, on the grounds that such supervision makes the radio an agency without real freedom.

Last year the Columbia Broadcasting System discontinued its policy of selling time to preachers, only to replace it with its own "Church of the Air." In its way, this was also a kind of censorship, since certain objectionable sects were not permitted to make themselves heard on the air.

The present issue, however, has many points of attack. Since the radio is a public organ of opinion, this opinion should be regulated. Others insist that every man with a message should have an opportunity to express himself. Unfortunately, some men without anything to say, always want to say it; some of them, in our experience, have built themselves stations only to broadcast libel and much false philosophy. Since we must guard against such misuse of the radio, it is wise and important to have an authoritative body like the Federal Commission. As is undoubtedly the case with all censorship groups, there are apt to be faults of administration. In spite of this, any regulated system is preferable to an unlicensed orgy of wild and tactless preaching.

At the same time, there should be a more definite attempt to allow the different religious sects of America to procure radio time for such preaching as they believe to be suitable and worthwhile. At present, practically all the radio chains are rigidly observing a sort of commercial schedule which makes many purely ideal programs impossible. To buy time from such chains is also increasingly difficult, because of the large demands made upon them by important advertising companies.

The solution to the problem would seem to be neither the loosening of the power of the Federal Commission but rather an extension of its duties: namely, to create a radio outlet for such religious groups as wish one. This outlet might well pay for itself, even though devoted to the commercial objective of disseminating thought for its own sake. In the present dilemma the idea could bear some serious thought, even if, in the end, it should be modified considerably.

produce today, far more than he can consume. Of course, I know as well as the birth control advocate, that many of us do not, but that is merely the result of a bad economic system.

"Geh't Von Halz"

In other words, all of this hymning of birth control recalls to me a good Jewish story. A Rabbi of great renown paid a visit to a small Russian town, and the people of the town were very much excited and very eager to pay him every honor and please his every whim.

The first day of his stay he was to stop at the home of A and Mrs. A very naturally inquired what was the Rabbi's favorite dish.

"Bebloch" (beans to you), replied the great Rabbi.

And so the Rabbi had a great meal, and believe me, there were plenty of beans. On the next day, the Rabbi stopped at the home of B, and Mrs. B inquired of Mrs. A, as to the Rabbi's favorite dish.

And as you might expect, Mrs. B also prepared a great meal, in which there were baked beans, cooked beans, broiled beans and beans a la nature.

The third day, the Rabbi stopped at the home of Mr. C and Mrs. C, of course, inquired of Mrs. A, and, of course, the same thing happened—beans to the right of him, beans to the left of him, as poets might say.

But the Rabbi didn't eat.

Mrs. C looked on anxiously. "Why, Rabbi, why don't you eat?"

"But why don't you eat?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Mrs. C. I really would eat, but I don't know what Blessing to make."

"What do you mean—you don't know what boracha to make?"

"Well," said the Rabbi in Yiddish, "Ob es geht von der erd, macht man boray pri odama, und ob es geht von baum, macht man boray pri hat-atz, ober es es geht von halz, vas macht man?"

His Only Pleasure

Have you heard the one, writes Editor Slomovitz of Detroit, "of the Jew who was always krechting and complaining?"

A friend inquired about his business, and was informed that in spite of the depression, he was doing better than ever.

"Then why do you complain?" asked the friend.

"Oh, I wear a size 7 shoe and have a size 11 foot," the krechtinger replied.

"Well, why don't you buy yourself larger shoes?"

"I'll tell you," came the explanation. "My wife is a spendthrift. My son is a good for nothing who runs after all the girls in town. My daughter is falling in love with a gangster. The only pleasure I get out of life is when I get home and take my shoes off."

He Was Mostly English

"But my real purpose in writing you," continues the Detroit newspaperman, "is to tell you a peach of a story about a Detroit who went to Palestine, and brought back a charming little maiden as his spouse. His wife brought with her a pair of glasses. The glasses needed some repairing, and the little Palestinian went to a jeweler on Dexter boulevard. The jeweler took one glance at the glasses, and then turned his gaze upon the Palestinian.

"These are not American glasses," said he.

"No," said she.

"Where do they come from?"

"From Palestine."

"You come from Palestine?"

"Yes, I come from Palestine."

"Tell me the truth, where do you like it better, here or in Palestine?"

"Well," said the charming lady from Zion, who originally hailed from Wales, "if you are a verbranter Americaner, I'll say that I like America better, but if you want the truth, I like it better in Palestine."

"You like it better in Palestine!" the jeweler resumed, getting hot, "How can you? What do you have in Palestine? A mixture, that's all. Rumanian Jews, Hungarian Jews, Russian Jews, Turkish Jews. Just a mixture."

"Tell me, mister," inquired the lady, "what do you have here?"

"Here," the jeweler snapped back.

"Why, here, we're mostly English."

Through Gentile Eyes

"As a Gentile I would free the Jew of all oppression for his own sake—that he might be forever delivered from the pains and penalties, the sufferings and subjections, which have been for centuries his awful fate. As a Gentile I would free the Jew for my sake—that my people might be delivered from the shame and hate of their misdeeds against their brethren. Horrible beyond words have been the physical agonies of the Jew; horrible beyond words have been the spiritual atrocities of the Gentiles. In God's good grace, is not the choice certain between these two unhappy lots? From every higher and therefore truer point of view the Jews have final advantage over the Gentiles. If, therefore, I were a Jew, I would seek as little to escape my destiny as to hide my race. I would strive to look not down with shame but up with pride upon my fate and by my mastery of my own spirit thus proving my primacy over all who would degrade or drag me down."—John Hayes Holmes, "Opinion," Dec. 7, 1931.

town of importance. Today, there are very few Jewish peddlers on the streets of Mexico City.

Immigrants in possession of technical training and business experience acquired in the midst of keen competition in the industrial centers of Europe, were not slow in seeing opportunities for the establishment of small industries. Goods were being imported which could be advantageously manufactured in the country, and their use popularized by reducing prices and greater activity in distribution. Although the economical situation was not good there were factors which favored the newcomers: Business methods were antiquated; import duties were high, and the successive revolutions had ruined the interior commerce of the country and had made the old firms extremely conservative. Their progress has been especially noticeable in the manufacture of clothing; knitted goods, such as hosiery, underwear, sweaters, etc.; shoes, caps and neckwear. The greater part of the workers employed in these industries are Mexicans.

Whereas, their entrance into the commercial and industrial life of the country, has benefited the general public, it has unfortunately brought upon them, the hostility of old, conservative business houses, who are wroth at the keen competition and aggressive methods of the newcomers, and they have tried to kindle the fires of hatred against them. Only recently a fever of propaganda was started which lasted about a month. They were attacked by Chambers of Commerce of several cities; anonymous handbills were frequently distributed, vilifying them, and almost every day, newspapers carried articles, attacking foreigners, often using fallacious arguments, intended to prejudice the Mexican people against them. But it appears that the general public took little notice of the propaganda.

We can truly say, that Jewish immigrants have settled down in Mexico. Those who left wives and children behind, have since brought them. Living conditions are not ideal, but there has been a marked improvement during the past three years. Marriages among the young people are in vogue; eighteen took place in one record-breaking week. All this speaks well for the general moral tone of the community.

But business throughout the country, is now at a standstill; earnings are wretchedly small; there is an overproduction in every kind of manufactured goods. There have been many failures and many more are on the verge of bankruptcy. A few of the immigrants have become well to do, but the great majority are seriously affected by the economical crisis and there are no prospects of immediate improvement in the situation. The Loan Society recently established by the B'nai B'rith has done much to help out business people through the hard times.

The younger element predominates among the immigrants; although the struggle for material things absorbs their time and energies, they have not lost their interest in social and cultural problems. They learn Spanish quickly and are rapidly becoming Mexicanized. They are not religious, if one may judge by the small daily and Sabbath attendance at the three places of worship, but they do not hesitate to announce their racial origin in the names of their social organizations. There are seven representative Jewish Societies in Mexico City as follows: "Asociacion Israelita de Jovenes" (Y. M. H. A.), the oldest and most prominent social organization. It has a library of 2500 volumes. "Asociacion de Damas Israelitas," a woman's society which interests itself in relief work. "Centro Cultural Israelita," the second oldest Jewish society; its activities, social and cultural. "Centro de Beneficencia Israelita," a new organization recently founded with the help of the B'nai B'rith for taking over the work formerly done by the bureau. "Colegio Israelita," the Jewish school which

Jewish Families Homeless When Fire Sweeps Town

Bucharest, Feb. 12 — (JTA)—Hundreds of Jewish families are homeless today as a result of a fire which swept the village of Monesti, near Bakau.

Forty Jewish houses were destroyed by the blaze, which broke out in the Jewish Hotel Aronson.

PROTEST WITH AUTHORITIES AS JEWISH APPLICANTS REJECTED

Vienna, Feb. 12—(JTA)—Only two Jews have been employed by the newly created Exchange Department of the Austrian National Bank, where several hundred persons form the staff, it was learned here recently.

Charges of anti-Semitism are preferred against the bank by leading Jewish circles. Competent Jewish organizations have made formal charges with the authorities and demand an investigation of the reported discrimination, by the government.

merits more than passing mention. Like all private schools it is under government supervision and must teach the prescribed courses, but is allowed to teach Hebrew and Yiddish. Three years ago, only 60 children attended and the quarters were small and unfit; today the school is housed in an appropriate building with beautiful grounds and 134 children are attending. A large auto bus carries the children to school and home again. The school has been on the verge of closing many times, but enthusiastic men and women of the community have, month after month, raised the money for its maintenance. Only the primary grades are taught. "The Loan Society of the B'nai B'rith Mexican Bureau and Israelites of Mexico," established over a year ago, with a capital of $75,000. It has become the leading factor in the business life of the Jewish community. "Sociedad Zionista Kadima" a social and cultural society with Zionist ideas and aspirations.

With the founding of the Loan Society and the "Centro de Beneficencia" (Aid Society), the work which the B'nai B'rith commenced six years ago is coming to a close. Local community leaders agree that Mexican Jewry should begin taking over the work, but claim that outside help is yet required.

The economical situation has recently brought on a change of policy, on the part of the government, in regard to immigration, in general. The new immigration law is a very restrictive measure, but it must not be taken as a sign of anti-foreign or anti-Semitic feeling. Mexico knows that the newcomers are helping to revolutionize the commerce and industry of the country. It is appreciated that these immigrants are coming to make Mexico their home, and that they are becoming citizens of the country. But Mexico has been seriously affected by the world crisis, which has come on top of years of revolution. Many mines have been closed down; there have been a succession of crop failures; people throughout the country are poverty-stricken, and to make matters worse thousands of Mexicans are being deported from the States, and must be taken care of. There is no doubt that the bars will be lifted when conditions improve, for Mexico needs new blood.

The greater part of our immigrants have been in the country less than five years, and they have been years of hard times, during which civil strife and economical crisis joined to make conditions always worse. There was no work awaiting them and they created new business and industry; therefore their progress should be considered remarkable. It is unfortunate that they are yet foreigners and that the economical situation places them in the limelight as competitors. When conditions improve, their work will be better appreciated and they will be counted amongst the country's most progressive citizens.

Many hundreds of immigrant children are attending the public schools; already there are 25 young men and women who landed in the country within the past six years, attending the University of Mexico. Today the immigrants are battling for economical independence. Tomorrow, they will be Mexican citizens taking their places in the ranks of those who are struggling for the social and cultural progress of the nation. For is not this record and their history, throughout the ages?

Success

By NINA KAYE

"And so, ladies and gentlemen, after giving you an imitation of Eddie Cantor, Ben Bernie and Georgie Jessel, all in one, I'm going to show you how much better Milton Hyam is. Take it from me, the boy's good. Nobody knows him better than I do."

The audience, upturned faces shining with expectancy, applauded. Someone called out, "Nix on the imitations, Milt, give us the real stuff."

The lights went low, only a spotlight picking out Milt, slim and sleek, with the peculiar air of Broadway about his clothes and glossy hair. He began to sing, plaintively at first, then with a laughing lilt in the chorus.

When he had finished, a roar of applause spread through the house. He got you, that smiling boy. It was better than crooning, his own particular brand of singing. It made you happy and yet, it put a lump in your throat.

A year ago, nobody had heard of Milt Hyam. That is, nobody who counted. Then, suddenly, as if he had materialized out of nowhere, he was singing on Broadway, twice a day, in vaudeville and again at night at one of the most popular clubs.

Milton gave his audience the encore they clamored for. Then he retreated rapidly to the wings.

Three girls in evening wraps, three men behind them, greeted him.

"You were wonderful tonight, Milt! You were grand!" the girls gushed about him.

"Was I?" Milton's voice was flat, dead.

"Harry's going to run us up to his place to eat," one of the girls told him. "Murray promised you would go. He'll get you to the club in time for your number. We're dying to hear you again."

Like a king followed by his courtiers, Milt moved toward his dressing room. "Out in a minute," he told them briefly and went in.

Inside, Milt's shoulders sagged. Except for his boyish face, he seemed an old man.

A rotund figure emerged from behind a newspaper.

Myrtle Lucksniansky-Irving Feldman Feted In Honor of Betrothal

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lucksniansky of 81 Rand street, Central Falls entertained at their home on Sunday evening in honor of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Myrtle Lucksniansky, to Irving Feldman of this city. Rabbi Schisgal of Pawtucket officiated at the betrothal ceremonies.

About 60 guests were present from New York, Brockton, Newport, Salem, Central Falls, Fall River, Attleboro and this city.

Entertainment was presented by the guests and Cy Feldman was the master of ceremonies. David Pokrass of Boston cousin of Miss Lucksniansky, gave a congratulatory speech. Telegrams and flowers were received from various organizations, of which the guests of honor are active members.

Refreshments were served from a table, most artistically decorated with cut flowers and lighted tapers.

On Tuesday evening, 20 friends of the engaged couple tendered them a dinner and dance at the Lotus Restaurant.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Curran, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zarchen, Mr. and Mrs. Ben M. C. Poulten, Miss Jennie Lucksniansky, Miss Ethel Zarchen, Miss Marie Zarchen, Miss Diana Feital, Dr. Harold F. Klibanoff, Al Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Selya, Sidney Goldstein and Cy Feldman.

still in the brown wrapper it had come in.

Milt's eyes glowed as he slit it and flung open the sheets. Ignoring the week-old front page news, his eyes took in the local columns hungrily.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Rivkin are visiting Mrs. Rivkin's mother on Montford avenue.

Miss Celia Herr returned from Raleigh this week.

Myron Brown is already recruiting for the 1932 minstrel show. Myron promises a better show than ever this year.

A mist formed over Milt's eyes and the type swam before him. But he read on, drinking in every word, the advertisements, even the want ads.

And there he read that Sam Paterson was again advertising for a salesman. "He doesn't keep them more than a week," Milt murmured. "He always has this ad in. And I worked for him for five years."

Milt went to bed but not to sleep. "How can Myron expect a better show than ever this year? I was the best end man he ever had." The thoughts whirled in the darkness. "Celia must have been visiting her brother."

It was then that it dawned on Milt what was the matter with him. "I'm homesick, that's all. Homesick for a town that's probably forgotten all about me—unless they get me on the radio. It's not as if I had a family to write to me. If I didn't get the paper, I wouldn't know what was going on."

He rolled over and buried his head in the pillow. "But they always liked me—even before I sang in the minstrel show. Mrs. Paterson was like a mother to me. And I always ate supper in the Herr's on Friday night. Celia's an awfully nice girl."

The morning drifted slowly in. It found Milt dressed, his bag packed. His mind was made up. The only thing was the fare. Murray didn't handle the funds for nothing.

Milt took the elevator down to the lobby and sauntered casually over to the desk.

"Will you let me have fifty dollars?" he asked the clerk. "You can put it on the bill or Murray Stein will pay you when he comes in later."

The clerk grinned at Milt. "Glad to help you out, Mr. Hyam. I heard you last night. We always wait up for you. Gee, Mr. Hyam, you sure put it there where the old pump works. When you're on the air you'd think there was only one radio in the whole apartment house. Everybody has you on. I don't know what we'd do without you."

The clerk counted out the money. But Milton didn't see him. Instead, he saw himself the multiple person he had become. He couldn't go back. He didn't belong to himself any more. Pushing the bills back across the desk, he said, "Never mind. I don't think I'll need it after all."

Dr. Nahum Goldman, a World Zionist Officer, Gives Lecture Here

A capacity audience greeted Dr. Nahum Goldman of Berlin, Germany, on Sunday evening, Feb. 7, in the Foyer of the Biltmore Hotel. Dr. Goldman is a member of the Actions Committee of the Zionist Organization of the World and accompanied Dr. Nahum Sokolow, World President, to America.

A short business meeting of the Zionist District of Providence, preceded the lecture, under the chairmanship of Joseph Smith, who then turned the meeting over to Joshua Bell, cultural chairman. He introduced Dr. Goldman, who in a most brilliant fashion, outlined the economic and political situation of the Jewish people in the world today.

Zionism, according to Dr. Goldman, is the only answer to every problem confronting the Jew. Bernard M. Goldowsky presented the speaker with a check for four hundred dollars for membership dues collected thus far in the membership campaign now in progress, and of which Mr. Goldowsky is chairman.

Mrs. Archibald Silverman spoke with regard to the membership campaign with the result that several new members enrolled. The meeting closed with the singing of Hatikvah.

Young Judaea Clubs

CHEVTZI-BAH JUDEANS

At the regular weekly meeting of the Chevtzi-Bah Judaeans, held Feb. 8, at Temple Beth-Israel, Miss Mary Port gave an interesting report on the Jews of Amsterdam.

Mr. Arno Wrazlowsky, President of the Young Judaea Council, and a native of Holland, gave a delightful talk on that country. He pointed out that the correct name is not Holland, but Netherlands. He also told how densely populated the country is. It was interesting to learn that there are about one-half million Jews in Netherlands, making up approximately one-tenth of the entire population. Jews are treated most respectfully in that country, he said, and many of them hold government positions.

Mr. Wrazlowsky informed the members also that all the Jews are Orthodox and are compelled to join a congregation.

Although most of the Jews of Holland are merchants, they do not work after sun-down on Friday and on Saturday.

JOLLY JUDEANS

The Jolly Judaeans won the decision in a debate held with the Senior Judaeans recently.

The Jolly Judaeans upheld the affirmative of, "Resolved, That public ownership of land as opposed to private ownership of land should be followed in the projected Jewish State."

LITTLE STORIES from REAL LIFE

Helen Found An OLD COLONY SHARE BOOK

Going through the bureau drawers one rainy Sunday, she found a long-forgotten book for Old Colony Savings Shares.

In it, the last entry showed a balance of $33.42, left there since the happy days of 1925, for some forgotten reason.

Surprised, pleased and a little wistful over the memories evoked, she brought in the book with the idea of withdrawing the balance and closing the account. But when the teller first looked up and entered the accumulated dividends of $13.42, and prepared to pay the total of $46.84, she changed her mind.

She was impressed anew with the way that money earns money, the magic of compounded dividends. She was so impressed that she took the proceeds and opened two Monthly Payment Accounts for her little children . . . resolved that they should be taught the virtues of systematic saving and the values it creates, even if it took a little extra sacrifice to see the lesson through.

A lucky "find," in more than one sense.

R. I. Workingmen's Beneficial Association News

Sydney J. Hoffman, chairman, had the pleasure of conducting one of the largest attended meetings since his installation. About two hundred members were present last Sunday to listen to an address by the well-known Attorney, Thomas Cooney, who delivered an interesting lecture on George Washington.

In addition to the previously announced attendance prize of a 26-piece silver set, five boxes of Gibson's candy was also given away as prizes. The winners were as follows: The silver was won by Israel M. Resnick and the other five lucky number holders were Harry Silverman, Stanley Pierce, Alter Boyman, J. Kaufman and Max Peisach. Attendance prize for the next meeting will be a beautiful mirror, which was donated by Brother Zuckerberg.

J. Y. M. A. Installs New Officers—Committees

The first annual smoker and installation of officers and committees of the Jewish Young Men's Association was held last Sunday afternoon, Feb. 7, at the Jewish Community Center.

The following officers and committees were installed:

President, Nathan Pass; Vice President, Samuel Glassman; Secretary, Harry Seegal; Treasurer, Jack Dress; Executive Committee, Edward Kleiner, Max Klibanoff, Simon Chorney, Milton Spitz, Lou Silverman and the four officers; Membership Committee, Max Klibanoff (chairman), Edward Kleiner, Bert Pickar, Louis Silverman, Jacob Dress, Samuel Glassman; Athletic Committee, Irving Katznelson (chairman), Simon Chorney, Max Klibanoff; Entertainment Committee, Al Gurwitz (chairman), Edward Kleiner, Harry Seegal, Nathan Horvitz, Jacob Dress.

Entertainment consisted of a group of songs by Louis Silverman, accompanied by Miss Beatrice Gross, a skit by Nathan Horvitz and a wrestling match between Bob Dimond and Abraham Gordon, with the former winning two out of three falls. This was followed with a parody on the match presented by Max Klibanoff and Milton Spitz.

Jacob I. Cohen, Executive Director, gave a short talk which was followed by the main address of the afternoon, given by Walter Adler. A social hour with refreshments and smokes followed.

About 75 members and guests were present at the smoker and many new candidates were presented. The entertainment committee was in charge of the affair. Al Gurwitz presided as toastmaster.

The feature at the next meeting, which will be held on Sunday, Feb. 21st, will be a debate sponsored by the boys of the J. A. C., their subject being, "Resolved, That the Hoover Administration has been a success."

Abe Swerling, chairman of the social committee, was very encouraging in his report on the dinner-dance and cabaret, which will be held on March 3d, at Rhodes Dining Pavilion. The response of the members at the meeting indicate that the attendance at the affair will exceed the expectations of the committee, in view of the fact that several hundred reservations have already been made.

Joshua Bell has announced that the guest speaker at the meeting of March 6th, will be Professor Shoemaker of Brown University. His subject will be announced in The Jewish Herald in the near future.

FINAL EXPERIMENTS TO COMPLETE MICHELSON'S WORK

Chicago, Feb. 12—(JTA) — Final experiments to complete the work of the late Prof. A. A. Michelson, Jewish scientist, of the University of Chicago in measuring the speed of light, will be conducted in California this spring, according to an official announcement made by the university recently.

Fred Pearson, who was assistant to Prof. Michelson for 25 years, will make 5000 additional observations of the speed of light rays moving in a vacuum through a mile long pipe. Dr. Michelson had made 5000 such measurements himself and it is believed that when the others are completed this year the ultimate possibility of correct light speed will have been attained.

Mr. Warburg had been a director and vice president of the academy for 22 years. The resolution pointed out his "active support, wise counsel and unselfish loyalty to the academy's endeavors to promote the application of political science to public problems."

TIRE VALUES versus TIRE DEFINITIONS

WE KNOW that car owners are interested in real TIRE VALUES, but are not particularly interested in tire definitions which manufacturers and distributors of special-brand mail-order tires had the National Better Business Bureau adopt that they could use to their advantage in their advertising.

When the National Better Business Bureau realized that the public was being misled — and an attempt was being made to keep the truth about real tire values from car owners, they issued a bulletin July 10th which in substance retracted their sponsorship of tire definitions.*

Firestone extra values are the result of great savings in buying — great savings in efficient and economical manufacturing and distributing, plus the patented process of Gum-Dipping — the patented two extra cord plies under the tread — and a more efficient non-skid tread, which makes them safer than any other tire.

We have sections cut from Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires and Special-Brand Mail-Order Tires, and invite you to come in and judge for yourself the extra values we give you — values that you can see and understand instead of "definitions." Then we know you too will buy Firestone Tires as thousands of other car owners have done to the extent that during May, June and July they bought more Firestone Tires than during any like period in history — Drive in today!

*When the National Better Business Bureau realized that their Bulletin No. 834 was being taken advantage of by some advertisers they issued a Bulletin dated July 10th as follows:

"In our Bulletin No. 634 entitled 'Definitions of Terms Used in the Tire Industry' we published definitions of First Line—Second Line—Third Line—Heavy Duty and Super Heavy Duty Tires.

"Our definitions pointed out, 'Although each manufacturer's or distributor's first line tire may represent his best standard size 4 or 6 ply tire, there is not necessarily any equality of competitive first line tires as to materials, workmanship or price.' This interpretation also applies to all lines of tires.

"We therefore recommend that advertising to the consumer shall avoid the use of these terms for the purpose of comparing competitive products."

NEWS OF INTEREST TO MEN

COLLEGE — COUNTRY CLUB — SPORTS

Some People
Golf, or otherwise, work in the summer time, loaf in the winter, work all the time, play some time, while the President of Ledgemont is on the alert all the time, whether at home or on tour. He was discovered in Florida, and it all happened because his running mate was looking into a looking glass and playing with his scalp. What this mate was trying to do was to count the results of special treatments prescribed by a Scalptician. To date, results by latest reports successful.

Now, if one doesn't think that Mr. L. F. Rosenberg, the genial President of Ledgemont, wasn't on a successful trip, laugh this one off. Met Bill Shore at the Miami Beach Golf and Country Club, Mrs. Joseph Marcus at the Roman Pools, Mr. Maurice Bliss and Mr. Ralph Krauss walking down Biscayne Boulevard and it wasn't Navy Day, either, just greetings from home. Signed up Mr. Louis Kessler as a member of the Golf Club for 1932, went to Hollywood with Leonard Levin and Lew Myers, the Pro; played golf and spent an enjoyable day golfing, promenading and dining at the Hollywood Hotel with Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Brown.

Then back to Miami, and the President, the last I knew, was looking for Harry the Hatter. Another day passes.

The following a. m. Finds the President and Treasurer with Leonard Levin out at Miami C. C. for a round of golf with the Pro, and what the Pro wants to know is why Levin had such a load to carry in the matches played. Lenny did honor to his state and club by shooting rounds of 76, 78, 79. Just a tip for Dr. A. C. Berger, the 1932 Champ, by proxy to look for his laurels. The President has a bag of new tricks, having taken up trick golf, and it all came so natural to him that Joe Kirkwood and Jack Redmond will be left by the wayside; which reminds everybody to improve their game they must play a No Top in 1932 or suffer the consequences.

Have you ever played water golf? ask Leonard Levin and J. F. Rosenberg. They introduced the game at the Roman Pools, Miami Beach; by the way this reminds me that one of the requirements for becoming a 100% sporting member of the golf club, is that all members must be able to swim. The President is a swimmer of unlimited ability. He gave the greatest exhibition ever witnessed the past Sunday at the Pools, and he received a great ovation. His pal, Lenny, did the announcing in place of his home town friend and our genial Doc Berger, who could not make the trip South on account of motor trouble; it was rumored that Doc tried to get a hold of Charles Brier's plane and wanted Doc Jos. Smith to pilot the same. But through some unforeseen oversight, could not make proper connections.

Still looking for Harry the Hatter. Probably, President, you and Len will find him on the wide open spaces while En Tour Homeward Bound. Adios and Au Revoir.

Fields Regains Welterweight Crown; Other News Not So Good

In newspaper offices cubs are always instructed that in writing a story, they should use the pleasant and cheerful news first. If the story has any unpleasant angles they should be saved for the end. Following that precept, I must first report that Jackie Fields, who lost the welterweight crown to Jack Thompson two years ago, regained the title last week in Chicago, when he outpointed Lou Brouillard in a savage ten-round bout. The decision was unanimous and was greeted with approval by a crowd of more than 10,000, who were on hand to witness the breaking of that old adage, "They never come back."

Jackie Fields, who now makes his home in California, appeared in his home town ring trained to razor edge. He outboxed, outslugged and outgeneraled his rugged southpaw opponent. In the sixth round Jackie had the champ practically out on his feet, only the bell averted a certain knockout. Fields had piled up a nice lead and coasted the rest of the way for a certain win.

Well, now we have another champion, but there is a fly in the beer. Both fighters are managed and owned by the same syndicate of promoters and they will collect just as much now that Fields is champion. To the insiders it looked like funny business in the wood-pile. Not that the bout was crooked—Fields won easily, but there is no doubt that any number of welterweights could have turned the trick. It so happened that Fields, because of his managerial connections, was allowed to take a crack at the title.

Titles mean little today. The man with the best manager has the best chance to become champion. The manager with the best connection gets the best fights and "ad infinitum." But after all the record books only list the names of the fighters and not the managers, so for all practical purposes Jackie Fields goes down in history as the welterweight champion of the world and the man who came back.

Levinsky Loses to Baer

Ballyhoo does not win fights. King Levinsky found that out when he met Maxie Baer at Madison Square Garden recently. The big Chicago boy was the recipient of tons of publicity, but it all availed him little when he had to wade into the fists of Baer. It was a ten-round bout and pretty dull going. With the exception of the first round little happened to bring the spectators to their feet. Baer was simply smarter than Levinsky, kept out of his way, and pounded away at the Chicagoan's body. The prize, which went to the winner, besides the usual purse, was a chance to fight the winner of the Uzcudun-Schoof bout.

Still Levinsky didn't come off so badly. Mrs. Levy, his manageress, signed up her charge to meet the champion, Jack Dempsey, in a four-round bout, which will be fought in Chicago on Feb. 18th. Mrs. Levy is one sweet manager and if the King can ever fight as well as she can manage, he is going to go a long way. Lena was offered $5000 for the bout, but held out until the ante had been raised to $7500. The idea of the bout is a clever one and if Levinsky ever spills the old champ, he will have done much to eliminate the bad impression he created in the Baer fight.

Dr. Kallet Talks About Football

Dr. Harry Kallet of Syracuse, N. Y., a former All-American football star and until a few years ago, coach of the Manlius Military School football team, still is vitally interested in football. If there were more men of his calibre connected with the game the whole idea of scholastic and college football would be a lot better off. Dr. Kallet sincerely believes that the game is a character and body builder and what evils that there are, can be blamed in part on the system of subsidizing young men to play football.

He told me the story of one of the boys at Manlius, a native Syracusan, who had gained quite a reputation as a football player. He expressed a desire to enter Syracuse University, but word of his fame had reached a New York coach who immediately headed for Syracuse. He met the boy and offered him $25 a week, room, board and tuition. The boy, a youngster, overcome by all this attention, consented to go to New York. In the meantime some of the Syracuse officials got word of what was happening and went to see the boy. They told him that Syracuse would offer him nothing more than a chance to get an education and a job as waiter, but pointed out what an opportunity he would be missing by killing his chances of making a name for himself in his home town. The boy really didn't want to go to New York and told the New York coach that he had decided to stay at Syracuse. Another hurried trip, more offers, a raise in salary, the promise of all the long-distance phone calls he wanted to make, were promised, but by this time the boy was disgusted with the spectacle and refused to leave home.

As Dr. Kallet pointed out, right there is where the over-emphasis of football commences. It gives a young fellow an inflated idea of his own importance, makes him think that football is a permanent profession and certainly makes him feel like a professional. There is no serious objection in trying to influence a fellow as to the choice of his college, but when a student has already decided and has made all arrangements to enter it does seem unfair for a football coach to come along and try, by means of bribes, to get the boy away from the institution he picked himself. It is poor sportsmanship to start with. If every college were to pledge itself not to bid for the services of football players, material would be spread around more evenly and more schools would have representative teams. It would improve the entire outlook.

OBITUARY

William Sydney

William Sydney, charter member and former President of the Sons of Zion Synagogue, died on Monday evening at his home at 884 Riverside Drive, New York City, at the age of 65. He was President of the Birth Sholom Lodge of New York.

Fifty years ago, Mr. Sydney came to Providence, residing here for 35 years before going to New York. At one time, he was connected with the Shepard Stores.

Five sons and two daughters, Rabbi Charles Sydney, Leon, Emanuel, Aaron, Monroe, Naomi and Mrs. Dorothy Bernstein, all of New York, survive him. He was a brother of the late Israel Sydney of Providence. The funeral was held from his late home on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Benjamin Rosendale

Benjamin Rosendale of 109 Wesleyan avenue died Wednesday morning in his fifty-first year. He was engaged in the wholesale millinery business for many years until his retirement ten years ago.

Mr. Rosendale became a wholesale milliner when very young, following in the steps of his father, who was in that business for almost fifty years. With his brothers, he conducted the concern called Rosendale Company, Inc., millinery-Jobbers, at 77 Washington street, now the Paramount Building.

Mr. Rosendale is survived by his widow, Barbara, a son, Vincent, and three brothers, Samuel of Providence, William of New York and Harry of Buffalo. The funeral was held Friday from his late home.

Protest Against Production of Freiburg Passion Play

Yonkers, Feb. 12—(JTA)—A resolution, protesting against the scheduled presentation of the Freiburg Passion Play here this week, was adopted by the Westchester Rabbinical Association.

"We trust that the residents of Westchester will understand our solicitude," the resolution declared, "regarding a theatrical production which presents a religious drama in a manner that is likely to create in some minds ill feeling against the Jews and that may disturb the good will existing between Christians and Jews in this county," the resolution concluded.

Providence Jewish Food Show And Household Exhibit At Infantry Hall, March 1-2-3

Heins Wingenfeld In Charge Of Model Kitchen at Show

Cooking Classes, Food Demonstrations, Lectures and Fashion Revue Are Scheduled for Exhibit

HEINS WINGENFELD

Visitors at the first Jewish Household and Food Exhibit to be held in Providence at Infantry Hall on March 1, 2 and 3, afternoon and evening, will find the model kitchen one of the most completely equipped with every appliance the latest available. Those who attend are sure to find many recipes of interest of those which are to be demonstrated.

The cooking classes and demonstrations will be under the personal supervision of Heins Wingenfeld, internationally famous chef and authority of Jewish dietary dishes. Mr. Wingenfeld will also deliver lectures at each of the classes. The first class will be conducted on Tuesday afternoon, March 1, soon after the opening of the exhibit, and on March 2 and 3.

The cooking school the first day will be equipped with electric accessories and on the second day with gas. The third day will be a combination of both.

Will Prepare Menus

In this modern and sanitary kitchen, Mr. Wingenfeld will prepare menus tempting to the appetite, balanced from a standpoint of nutrients, yet in accordance with Jewish Dietary Laws. He will answer questions on all recipes prepared and will assist in solving personal cooking problems.

Mr. Wingenfeld has traveled through France, England, Germany and Italy, where he has collected the secrets of favorite dishes. He is well known in domestic science throughout the country and has been giving lectures and conducting cooking classes for the Consolidated Gas Company of New York. He is also in charge of the model kitchen of Hessel's Grand Hotel, Edgemere, Long Island.

The novel and unique features of the cooking school at the exhibit come from the realization by those in charge of the exposition of the importance of scientific knowledge of dietics and the recognition of the fact that the average housewife lacks detailed information in the preparation of dishes in accordance with the dietary laws. The cooking schools in Infantry Hall will provide such an opportunity to the thousands of Jewish housewives who will attend.

Wingenfeld Interviewed

In an interview with Mr. Wingenfeld, a reporter writes the following of the famous "Kosher Chef."

"I found Mr. Wingenfeld one day in his kitchen. That is the very place to find a chef. And Mr. Wingenfeld's kitchen at once distinguishes him as a chef who has made both an art and a science of cooking. The walls of his kitchen are decorated with food charts and illustrations of the various animals, and the shelves lined with all types of casseroles and molds to create the most delicious dishes in the culinary art.

"I asked him to relate to me some of his experiences. His eyes twinkled and he told me of the time when he was known as the 'Kosher Chef'."

"When I was on the committee of the International Chefs' Association, the New York branch, some of my fellow chefs had heard of my success in preparing kosher dishes, and not knowing the particulars of the Jewish Dietary Laws, asked me to enlighten them upon this subject. To most of our craftsmen, cooking is still a mystery. Kosher means really clean. Meat and poultry has to be made kosher before it is permitted for consumption. I discovered that essences and chemical colorings are barred from the kitchen, and the chef has to be one from the old school to satisfy the lady of the house or the rabbi in some of the larger institutions. He does not confine himself to kosher cooking, however."

Travel Abroad

"During his travels abroad he has satisfied the tastes of a Prince in Naples, and nobility in England. He was also the private chef to George Tchicherin, the Foreign Minister of Russia."

"Mr. Wingenfeld is also teaching cooking and is conducting classes in New York. His untiring patience in explaining the art of cooking has drawn large audiences. His classes at the home service department of the Consolidated Gas Company, at 4 Irving Pl., New York, are always crowded with eager and interested pupils."

"When I left Mr. Wingenfeld I realized that most of us eat a well-prepared, tasty meal without much thought to the skill it required. We take good cooking too casually."

Other Features

Other features of this very interesting exposition are Educational Talking Pictures and a Fashion Revue, featuring beautiful professional models every evening.

Jewish Welfare Board at Hoarding Conference

Washington, Feb. 12—(JTA)—The Jewish Welfare Board of New York, represented by Leon J. Obermayer of Philadelphia, was the only Jewish organization which participated in the conference on money hoarding, held at the White House, last Saturday, according to the list of representatives and organizations made public recently.

Thirty organizations in all were represented at the conference.

Austrian Catholic Bishops Urge Pope to Oppose the Student Law

Vienna, Feb. 12—(JTA)—The Catholic Bishops of Austria recently sent an appeal to the Vatican, asking it to register its opposition to the proposed Student Law, which would grant special rights to Aryan students.

The appeal of the Bishops declares that the projected law is incompatible with Catholic principles.

Much importance is attached to the decision of the Pope, upon which the attitude of Catholic students in Austria largely depends.
