Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Dear Ed:

You want to know what's the inside stuff in New York. Well, right now—as this is being written—there isn't much inside stuff. The topic of chatter in New York right now is probably the same as out there in Keokuk—namely, the Lindbergh baby. The first question that's popped at you as you enter any Jewish organization now is—what does the latest extra say about Lindbergh's baby? Just a while ago, I said there was no inside stuff. Well, I withdraw that. There's a bit of inside stuff connecting Lindbergh's baby with the Jewish world that will probably never see print—except in these columns—a story how Lindbergh's baby helped to make Jewish history. That's inside stuff, and I don't know whether I have the right to print it, but my breaks are off right now, and so here goes.

My story goes back to the year 1927. The New Palestine, Zionist organ, at that time entered into a contract with a non-Jewish agency for the selling of advertising space in the Zionist organ. About a month later, the business manager of that periodical wrote the advertising agency that the contract was off. The advertising agency commenced suit for $80,000. The case went to court and the judge threw it out. The advertising agency appealed the judgment and the higher court reversed the inferior court and ordered a retrial, with the result that the Zionist Organization lost and a judgment of $22,000 was awarded to the advertising agency.

Well, you know, Ed, the Zionist Organization had been owing something like $150,000, but arrangements had been made for the installment paying off of this debt. But when this new judgment of $22,000 against the Organization came, there was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. That had to be paid at once, or a sheriff would come in and the Zionist Organization would be declared bankrupt.

Getting $22,000 in a few days' notice in these days is quite a difficult thing, Ed. And the worst part about it was that the lawyers for the advertising agency knew that they held the whip hand over the Organization, for they knew that the Zionist Organization could not dare face the moral effect of bankruptcy proceedings.

Yet, Ed, let me tell you, that there were plenty of people who advised that the Organization bury its pride and let the sheriff come in.

A meeting was held—and this is where Lindbergh's baby helped to make Jewish history.

The meeting, Ed, began something like a wake. Not one of those Italian wakes, where everybody drinks beer and enjoys himself while he mourns, but one of those honest-to-goodness wakes where everybody wears a long face, and feels longer than he looks.

Here was $22,000 that had to be raised before you could bat your eye—or bang would go the sheriff's hammer.

Well, here Abe Goldberg rose, and said bankruptcy wouldn't do—it wouldn't do at all. Among them were Rothenberg, DeHaas, Wise, etc. They joined in asking what would the world say—what would the Arabs say—what would the British government say, if it were announced that the American Zionist Organization, richest and strongest of all Zionist Organizations, went into the hands of a receiver. They would say that the Jews of the world were not behind Zionism, or that, if they were, they weren't worth much considering, for here the richest of them, couldn't face a debt of $22,000.

Well, here Abe Goldberg rose. Goldberg possesses at least one faculty which every one must concede. He has the faculty of presenting something abstract in some small homely way that instantly reflects the whole thing. It was Goldberg who brought out this Lindbergh's baby business. Suppose the kidnapers, said

Hitler and the Jews

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

The Hague. One of the things Chancellor Bruening of Germany told the French Prime Minister, M. Pierre Laval, on the occasion of his visit to Paris two months ago, was that the advent of Herr Hitler to supreme power in the Reich must be considered a certainty before the coming of spring. Nothing has occurred in the time that has elapsed since that visit to invalidate the Chancellor's grave warning. To the contrary, the National-Socialist Party in Germany, instead of declining in influence, has not ceased to grow in numbers and strength. So confident, in fact, do the Nazi chiefs feel about the immediate future that they have in advance proceeded to a division of the cabinet roles.

Herr Philip Rosenberg, Hitler's chief lieutenant, an extremely able man, who may be called the tactician of the Nazi movement, is visiting the chancelleries of London and Paris to confer on certain phases of Germany's foreign policy, as if he were already occupying the chair of the late Dr. Stresemann. At the same time the "Drummer" himself has gone to Rome like a reigning chief of state to call on Benito Mussolini.

In the meantime adhesions to the Nazi party flow in uninterruptedly at the various "Brown Houses," so that the boast of Hitler that "nearly fifty per cent. of the voters in the Reich may be counted upon to support him, even if it contains an element of exaggeration, cannot be so very far from the truth. The Social Democratic Party concedes that Hitler would poll about 40 per cent. of the total votes. In other words a man disposing of so formidable array of votes can not possibly be kept out of the government, either as a participant or as sole detainer of power and Europe had better prepare for a Hitler victory within the next few months. No sensational Mussolinian march on Berlin need now be expected or is now necessary. Hitler will attain power without a coup d'etat or a "Putsch." The very institutions of democracy which he despises so deeply will carry him into the seats of the mighty. Moreover, time is working for Herr Adolph. And time happens to be equipped with wings on this occasion: the terrible wings of destitution and mass-misery. The German people have come to a point where they are frankly desperate and are ready to take a fatal leap ple on Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The dinner will be preceded by a reception at 6 o'clock.

This anniversary marks a decade in the life of Temple Beth-Israel which is one of the first Conservative Synagogues to be organized in New England.

Rabbi B. Leon Hurwitz, who was the first spiritual adviser of Temple Beth-Israel and who is now the Rabbi of the Ninth Street Temple in Brooklyn, N. Y., will be one of the principal speakers. Rabbi Morris Schussheim, another former Rabbi of Beth-Israel, will also be among the important group of speakers who will address the gathering.

Temple Beth-Israel is one of the pioneer congregations in New England to follow the Conservative form of worship and after its successful organization here, other Conservative Synagogues were organized in other sections of New England and also in Providence, notably Temple Emanuel.

The first services were held in the old Turin Verein, Hall on Niagara street and soon afterwards this building was purchased and remodeled into the present Temple building. Temple Beth-Israel has grown in strength and today is the Jewish center for the South Providence and Elmwood section, offering its facilities for the meeting of many senior and junior young people's clubs.

The committee has spared no effort to make this anniversary dinner one to be remembered for many a day and many surprise features aside from the excellent list of speakers have been planned.

The general committee is headed by Louis J. Bachman, as chairman; Jacob Ernstof, treasurer, and Charles J. Sentler, secretary; publicity, Joseph M. Finkle, chairman; dinner, Jacob Licht, chairman, James Goldman and S. Goldin; souvenirs, Morris Chusmir, chairman, Arno Wrzlowsky; entertainment, Joseph Schlossberg, chair-

Both Dr. Mead and President McCarthy extended their best wishes for the success of the seminar, the former stating that it followed out the spirit of the late President W. H. P. Faunce, who had worked for many years for better understanding amongst all religious groups. The latter believed that many of "religious prejudices" were "economic and social prejudices." He heartily endorsed the seminar and looked forward to it that it would accomplish its purpose.

Mgr. Foley brought assurances from the Most Rev. William A. Hickey of his support and that something good will come from the united effort of all.

Everyone present expressed his great satisfaction of the two-day seminar and agreed that it will be the means of a better understanding between religious groups.

CARDOZO IS SWORN IN AS JUSTICE OF U. S. SUPREME COURT

Two Hundred Unable to Gain Admission; Crowd Begins to Gather Two Hours Before Ceremony

Washington, March 18—(JTA)—Benjamin N. Cardozo was sworn in as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Monday, in the presence of a distinguished throng of Jews and non-Jews, which included Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Senator Robert F. Wagner and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York.

Although the ceremony was not scheduled to take place until noon, at ten o'clock a crowd began to gather outside the court chamber. Two hundred people were unable to obtain admission.

Justice Cardozo occupied a seat at the extreme end of the bench and was seated to the left of Justice Harlan Stone of New York.

Justice Cardozo was noticeably nervous. When he raised his hand to take the oath, his hand trembled. Friends explained this was due to his extraordinary personal modesty.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency learns that when he was named to the Supreme Court, Justice Cardozo, in a communication to a friend, expressed doubt as to his worthiness to this high post. This friend, in relating this incident, stated that this was characteristic of the remarkable humility of Justice Cardozo.

The full court witnessed the ceremony. Justice Cardozo has taken an apartment at the Mayflower Hotel, where he will reside as long as the court is in session.

Face to Face With Foot Facts

By DR. H. I. GOLDMAN, Podiatrist

It is said that faithful services are rewarded but sometimes I wonder if that is so.

What serves you more and receives less thought at times, than your feet?

We think daily of our hands, our face, our teeth and other parts of our body . . . yet, one of the most faithful serving parts of our mechanism is overlooked entirely and only when there is an ache or pain does it occur to us that we have such a thing as feet.

STATISTICS

Surveys of school children between the ages of 8 and fourteen years found 80 per cent. of the girl's and 65 per cent. of the boy's feet defective.

Nine out of every ten adults are affected with some form of foot defect, of either a minor or major nature.

Out of 100 per cent. foot ailments, 68 per cent. are among women and 32 per cent among men.

Of 100 per cent. women's cases, 24 per cent. are between the ages of 18 and 30. Seventy-six per cent. are between the ages of 30 and 50.

The percentage of foot ailments increase according to age, to the extent that out of 100 per cent. of women's cases between the age of 25 and 40, and 40 and 60, the percentage is 50 per cent. in each group.

These figures disclose the fact that women acquire foot ills in 50 per cent. of these cases before the age of 40.

From available statistics it is evident that foot defects are on the increase. Annually more than $100,000,000 are lost to industry in the United States through inefficiency caused by pain and discomfort from foot ills.

Several national Jewish organizations were aroused when Jews in Guatemala were threatened with expulsion because they had been engaged in the trade of peddling. KIDNAPING AND THE BIBLICAL LAW

The recent kidnaping of the nation's favorite baby, the son of Charles Lindbergh, has focused attention upon a type of crime which has never in this country carried with it a severe enough penalty. Up till now, the extent of the punishment accorded the writer of a letter of extortion has been a five thousand dollar fine or twenty years in prison. Within the last three years police records have shown a total of 282 abductions. The seriousness of the crime was realized by Senator Patterson and Representative Cochran of Missouri, both of whom have been pushing bills in the House to make kidnaping across a state line an offense punishable by death.

If we look into our own ancient laws regarding kidnaping, we find in Exodus (21.16), a statement of the death penalty for him that "stealeth a man." In Deuteronomy (24.7), also, we find that death is the reward for those who are found to have stolen and sold a child of Israel. The Eighth Commandment was also interpreted by the Rabbis as referring to kidnaping and not only to the mere theft of property. Then, of course, kidnaping usually resulted in the bondage of slavery for the victim, which made it a much more important social evil than the kidnaping of today, which is practised for ransom rather than for murder.

Because Talmudic jurisprudence leaned to reticence in cases involving capital punishment, there were many corollaries to the law of death for kidnaping. Slaves and Gentiles were not included in the law; minors of unsound mind and deaf-mutes were not punishable. In every case, there was a demand for two competent witnesses with valid testimony before the kidnaper could be condemned. Twenty-three judges were necessary for passing on the guilt of the criminal.

Despite all this, the crime of kidnaping was then and should be now recognized as a capital offense. When any social practise becomes fraught with danger for the innocent, then society should pull up that practise by the roots. It is impossible to destroy every potential murderer and kidnaper, but it is conceivable that the death penalty would be a strong barrier for many criminals, particularly for those who are cowardly enough to resort to baby-snatching as a means of livelihood. As in the case of many present laws, authority and valuable suggestions for legislation may be found in our old Hebraic codes. They should be wise and practical guides for us in our modern attempt to provide sufficient and suitable restrictive legislation. From them we can at least learn what is a social crime deserving the full punishment of that society whose safety has been threatened.

PURIM—THE FEAST OF LOTS

With sundown on Monday, March 21, Jews in every part of the world will commence the celebration of Purim, the Feast of Lots. The holiday is observed for one day by all Jews.

Twenty-four centuries ago, Haman, prime minister to Ahasuerus, king of ancient Persia, plotted the extermination of all Jews resident in the Persian domains. Through the intervention of Queen Esther, a Jewess, and her cousin, Mordecai, whose loyalty to the kingdom was known, the evil plot was frustrated.

That day, which was to be one of destruction, became an occasion of great rejoicing. The forces of bigotry and oppression were thwarted.

In the Synagogue the Biblical Book of Esther, which recounts the story of Purim, is recited. Masquerading and rejoicing are the order of the day. Hamantaschen, a triangular cookie filled with poppy seed, is the traditional delicacy.

It is customary for friends and relatives to exchange gifts (Shalach Monos), which alms are given to the needy.

The true significance of Purim today is the celebration of deliverance from impending catastrophe as an occasion of joy rather than one of malice. Purim restates the belief in the rights if minorities to differ. It holds up the belief that the power of conviction will ultimately triumph over the forces of prejudice and hatred. Especially significant is the Purim story now when these same sinister forces are at work in the Haman-like activities of European demagogues who throw one group against another under the guise of religion.

Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities

Goldberg, would ask of Lindy $50,000? Would he not give it? Suppose they asked $100,000—would he not give it? In the final analysis, said Goldberg, Lindbergh, if there were no other alternative, would strip himself of his last cent to get his child back.

"Well," said Goldberg, "Zionism is our Lindbergh's baby." This money has got to be raised—wherefrom we don't know, but there can be no talk of bankruptcy or talk of failure to get this money."

That simile caught fire, and soon all the other speakers were referring to the trouble as Lindy's baby.

Well, Ed, a small crowd was there, among them few really rich men. Most of them have more than you and I—but no big plutocrats among them. Yet there was Szold—for instance—not a rich man, who gave a thousand on the spot. Wise contributed with $500; Judge Mack gave $250; Rucker and Tulin gave $500 each. Well, in a few minutes, they had something like $6500 and the promise of other support.

Of course, Ed, I am not saying that if Abe Goldberg had not sprung that Lindbergh's baby story, this happy ending would not have come about anyway, but it helped, Ed, and I figure that Lindbergh's baby ought to have a place in Jewish history.

Marvelous, Ed, how one episode can so focus the mind of the world. There are, I am told, something like several hundred kidnapings a year. All together, they never attracted one fraction of the attention that this one kidnaping has stirred. Of course, part of it, perhaps, even the greatest part, is due to the prominence of Lindbergh. But I feel that much of it is due to the fact that mankind cannot grasp of evil in bulk. It must have one little episode—one little incident.

Here, for instance, Ed, this week, there died Briand, the French statesman, and his career recalls a similar episode in which he figured — the Dreyfus case. Think of all the attention that case attracted. Besides Briand, there were Clemenceau, Jaures, Anatole France. I do not say that the Dreyfus case made all of these, but it helped a powerful lot in bringing all of these figures to the public eye.

Not only did that one single case help make all of these Frenchmen, but look what it did to the Jews. Did anything do more to start Zionism than the Dreyfus case? It was the Dreyfus case, which you recall, turned Theodore Herzl into that agitation of mind which led him to write the Die Juden Stadt.

And, if you want further evidence of the power of one little episode—think of little Eva. Here was an episode which was purely fictional, and yet, do you know, any one of a half dozen things combined which did more to cause the Civil War than Harriet Beecher Stowe's story?

Otherwise, there isn't so much. Oh, yes, met the other day that mathematical wonderkind, Dr. Finkelstein, who has come from Germany to exhibit himself before the leading universities. They say that while working in the Polish government bureaus, his mind was so apt at figures, that he alone could replace some several dozen tabulating machines. Professor

DR. WISE TO BE TENDERED DINNER IN CINCINNATI

Cincinnati, March 18—(JTA) — Dr. Stephen S. Wise will be tendered a dinner by the Jewish community of Cincinnati on Sunday evening, March 20th.

This dinner will round out a conference on Jewish world affairs, sponsored by the Cincinnati committee of the American Jewish Congress, under the chairmanship of Rabbi Samuel Wohl of the Isaac M. Wise Temple.

WARSAW JEWS WITHOUT MEAT FOR TWO WEEKS

Warsaw, March 18—(JTA) — For two weeks, the Jewish population of Warsaw has been unable to obtain meat owing to a strike of butchers and slaughterers, who are joined by their workers.

The strike is directed against the municipality, the Kehillah and the consumers.

The butchers demand on the one hand a reduction in taxes and on the other an increase in the price of meat.

Every endeavor to import meat has been frustrated by the butchers, who have stationed guards along the roads. These guards either confiscate the meat or pour petrol over the entire consignment.

An effort on the part of the municipality to organize its own meat center has met with failure.

Einstein, I am told, after noting the quickness of Finkelstein's mind, remarked that Finkelstein was but a fore-runner of what all humanity would be a thousand years hence. In other words, we shall ultimately perhaps become superior to the efficiency of our machines.

Speaking of Justice Holmes birthday anniversary, a new biography just issued of him, tells a good story about Holmes and Brandeis. Once, it appears, Brandeis moved by social injustice, urged Holmes, who was about to go on his vacation, to read up on social statistics. "All right," said Holmes, "you pick out the right books and send them to me." In due time, a box arrived at the resort at which Holmes was stopping. Holmes looked at the studies of the textile industry, the eight-hour day, minimum wages, employers' liability and similar topics for a moment. Then he turned to a servant. "Just nail it up and send it back to Brandeis," he said.

Speaking about books, in our two thousand years of wandering since the destruction of Jerusalem — even going farther back — since the days when your ancestors and mine were in the brick manufacturing business in Egypt, do you ever remember when there were so many books published about Jews? Jews in Love, Jews Without Money, Jews on Approval, and now Louis Golding has one about Jews and Goyim. All of the dirty linen, too, is being washed right in the open, so that goyim may see.

I see where Fanny Hurst says that every one has some great book within him, but unfortunately it does not get printed, perhaps fortunately. Imagine what it would be—if every one actually published a book. Job was more sensible than Fanny. He said, "Oh that my adversary would write a book." He would leave publishing entirely in the hands of his enemies. We think he was more right than Fanny.

With best regards, and hoping that little Lindy will be back in his mother's arms before this reaches you.

Local Special Schools Supervisor Addresses Jewish Council Women

At a meeting of the Council of Jewish Women, Tuesday afternoon in the Plantations Club Assembly Room, Miss Mary Greene, Supervisor of Special Schools, sketched the growth of differentiated schools in Providence. Miss Greene pointed out that, while Providence had schools for mentally handicapped children as early as 1907-1908, the work received an impetus from the large amount of mentally handicapped found among men during the war.

It is a most interesting fact, Miss Greene stated, that about 75 per cent. of children backward in schools are found to be mentally handicapped as a result of diseases of childhood.

An even more interesting and important fact that was brought out by Miss Greene was that unless a child is so badly handicapped as to require placement in an institution, special schools can be of assistance in education and training, and that the city schools are equipped to take care of most handicapped children. No parent need feel ashamed at having a handicapped child, Miss Greene said.

Other kinds of schools are those for the physically handicapped. Providence was the first city in the United States to establish a fresh air school. At present there are 11 such schools in the city, of which nine are for primary grades, and two for grammar grades, and there are twenty in each grade. Other special classes are for sight-conservation and speech correction.

Miss Greene was introduced by Mrs. E. Gardner Jacobs, Program Chairman for the season, who has devised many interesting programs for the monthly meetings.

During the business meeting, which preceded Miss Greene's address, Mrs. Louis I. Kramer, First Vice President, presided, in the absence of the President, Mrs. Harold Cohen.

A nominating committee to offer a slate of officers at the April meeting was appointed as follows: Mrs. Harry Wachenheimer, chairman; Mrs. Leon

Jewish Council Women Participate in Local Signature Campaign

Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, is participating in the campaign to secure 1,000,000 signatures to petitions addressed to foreign governments seeking the attendance of representative women at an International Congress in connection with the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition in 1933. This project is the largest co-operative effort in which club women of the United States have ever engaged. The National Council of Women, with which 21 of the leading women's organizations of the United States are affiliated, is sponsoring the plan.

No more effective way of promoting friendly international relations is known than to gather together women from all parts of the world to discuss their problems, and so produce a spirit of understanding and good-will. It is believed that it will mobilize the sentiment of women all over the world for peace and right relationships among nations.

The accumulated signatures will be used to petition foreign governments to send women of distinction to the International Congress, and it is believed that one million signatures will be sufficiently impressive to convince the several governments of the importance of the congress.

The signature campaign is but one phase of the plans for the participation of women in the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition. Another important project will be research into what organized womanhood has accomplished throughout the United States. This will constitute the subject matter of a book on the progress of women to be published at the time of the Exposition.

Twenty-four hundred square feet of floor space in the Social Science Building have been assigned for a demonstration of what women's organizations have accomplished along cultural, educational and welfare lines in the past one hundred years.

However, the International Congress will be the most dramatic feature of feminine participation in the Century of Progress, and club women throughout the United States are concentrating upon the 1,000,000 signatures, which will make this Congress possible.

In Providence, the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, Westminster street, will be the headquarters for obtaining the signatures. Special registration books have been provided, and the local Council of Jewish Women has been assigned to a quota of 400 signatures.

HITLER AND THE JEWS

into the unknown with Hitler or any other demagogue who promises a quick way out from the economic wilderness. Germany's experiment in democracy is about to end up in Caesarism. But what of the new Caesar?

It is utterly foolish to go on affirming blandly that Hitler is a sort of super-hot-air artist, a man without a program, an irresponsible demagogue who could easily be set aright by the first liberal journalist who comes along. When Hitler says that the German people are not forever going to bend under the yoke of staggering reparation payments, he puts into words what every party leader in Germany would like to say openly but dares not. To be sure, all of them, from Herman Mueller to Stressmann, Wirth, Trevianus and Bruening have proclaimed Germany's desire to live up to the obligations imposed by the successive reparation conferences that have followed the initial "Kiwat" of Versailles. But everyone of them knew that this would be impossible. Just as impossible as changing the proverbial Ethiopian's skin. Hitler has said this outright. And that is wherein lies his appeal to the care-worn and exhausted masses of the Fatherland.

Lately he has expressed his willingness to talk the matter over, to negotiate with foreign powers when he shall have attained power. But this remains his chief thesis: Germany cannot pay and ought not to make the sinister pretense to try just to keep France content. He may still modify this position when the day of victory dawns. Let us not forget how Benito Mussolini, Hitler's flamboyant prototype, marched away from Milan at the head of his Blackshirts fully determined to chase him to whom he slightly referred as Victor Savoia, and how almost immediately he came to be the strongest prop and regenerator of the unquestionably moribund Italian monarchy. Between the cup and the lip lies not only many a slip, but with the advent of responsibility the interval may be productive of many a change in policy.

To begin with, as indicative of a change in program, it must have been noticed that the foremost Hitlerite spokesmen, while lately being rather loquacious in the presence of foreign correspondents have nevertheless scrupulously refrained from mentioning the Jewish question. This was no mere oversight. The program of the first hour of Nazism summed up in the cryptic-barbarian cry: "Juden Raus!" is apparently to be modified by orders from higher up. The Hitler emissaries, who are in Holland and Belgium, observing what there is to observe, are strangely silent on the subject of Germany's Jews, but so recently the universal subject of their vengeful talk.

The truth is that Hitler plans nothing as crudely drastic as an old-fashioned Czarist pogrom or a wholesale expulsion of the Jews in the event of his coming to power. He has something far more diabolic up his sleeve. A far more cunning scheme has been elaborated in the inner sancta of the Munich "Brown House." A program worthy of Machiavelli has been elaborated in respect to the Jews of Germany, a plan, let it be said, that surpasses the idea of a simple pogrom, in which "the heads of the Jewish rabble will roll in the sand" by far in cruelty and evil intent.

In short the plan of Hitler resembles that of the Polish Extreme Nationalists, to wit: ostensibly and to all outward appearances to accord the Jews the protection and privileges of full-fledged German citizens. But at the same time to strike at them through a ruthless system of taxation and economic and social pressure that will force the mass of German Jewry into the ranks of the poorest strata of the population within a decade.

Hitler and his tacticians expect, with some reason of assurance, that the Jews thus reduced from a middle-class position to that of proletarians, will, as by instinct, seek their salvation and support in the bosom of revolutionary parties and in subversive movements. If he can actually manoeuvre German Jewry into the false position within the next ten years, it is there that he hopes to administer the coup de grace. For then, instead of evoking a universal outcry of horror, he expects to receive the world's approval. For, it stands to reason that Jewish revolutionaries can scarcely expect sympathy and moral support from American Jewry, once economic conditions in the United States begin to improve. The German Jews, having turned to Socialism and Communism in the mass, will be without friends in the world, except possibly in Moscow. The more sympathy they experience from that side, the better Hitler will like it. Of Bolshevism and all its works he is the sworn enemy. By identifying German Jewry with Bolshevism, he will, as it were, be able to kill two birds with one stone. The German Jews will not be persecuted and oppressed as Jews but as dangerous revolutionaries, underminers of the German state, alien radicals, people who receive their political direction from a foreign power.

Decent and law-abiding citizens all over the world, including Jewish bourgeois and patrician circles in America, while, perhaps, deploring the Drummer's excessive zeal in his final anti-red crusade, will, so he expects, nevertheless, applaud him silently as he sets out to combat the red evil right on the frontiers of Russia and prevent its spread over the rest of civilization. Hitler expects to crush, torture, persecute Jews and make life impossible for them with the silent approval of American Jewry. No more diabolic scheme has been evolved in human brain since Eastern desert spewed forth the monster of what was Haman.

"First we will identify the Jews with Bolshevism," said to me one of the young Hitler lieutenants whom we have here acting as observer in the Nationalist camp in Flanders. "We will show their connections with Moscow and their adherence to the doctrines of the Third International. This will not be as difficult a program as it looks. The Jews of Germany are almost to a man tainted with Liberal, Democratic or Socialist tendencies as it is. When these comfortable bourgeois parasites feel the pressure of a torturing, searing poverty, they will naturally turn into the direction of Moscow. We are practically certain that they will nibble at the Bolshevik bait that we will hold out to them. That will be the hour when we can strike in all confidence, ruthlessly and without mercy to rid these Germanic countries of the Semitic vermin that has sucked away our strength and our blood for centuries. In that hour civilization will applaud us and American Jewry, which is not tainted with Bolshevism, will be reduced to silence. Then the world will see that Herr Hitler is the savior of western civilization and our power will be secure."

Tempting Dishes for Young and Old

COOKED ELECTRICALLY, meals are so tempting that they are always relished by young and old, no matter how jaded their appetites may be. They are so appetizing because meats retain their healthful juices and vegetables their natural mineral salts. There is no circulation of air through an electric oven to waft them away. And the automatic time and temperature controls eliminate the possibility of undercooked or overcooked food.

It's really a pleasure to cook electrically and it is economical, too. Only a penny a person a meal is all it costs on the average to cook this modern way. Come in and let us tell you all about it.

Sylvia Sidney

By HILDA KASSELL

A New Jewish Star Upon the Horizon

A five-foot bundle of exquisite simplicity, Sylvia Sidney, typifies the modern Jewish beauty—slight of figure with undulating curves . . . jet-black hair . . . violet-blue eyes, luminous with intelligence—she epitomizes that which is representative of the modern Jewish girl—beauty with brains.

Five—six years ago she was galavanting with the children in the Theatre Guild School. Now, hardly out of her teens, she occupies Dressing Room No. 1, at Paramount Studios, previously tenanted by such stars as Clara Bow and Gloria Swanson.

It was to replace Clara Bow in "City Streets" that gave Sylvia Sidney her first big chance in the cinema. The rest—"Confessions of a Co-Ed," "An American Tragedy," "Ladies of the Big House"—is movie history.

Not for all the pseudo-glamour of publicity possibilities will Sylvia Sidney budge one inch from the true history of her early life. It is her story and she sticks to it. Born in a Bronx flat in New York, she will even point out to you the very house, if you are interested. Her father, Dr. Sigmund Sidney, a New York dentist, is of Roumanian stock, and her mother, of Russian descent, is considered the youngest-looking mother in Hollywood.

To the parents of Sylvia Sidney goes all the credit for intelligent application in educating and the bringing up of their talented daughter. A student at the Ethical Culture School, she tired of it and left it at the age of twelve to study in the School of the Theatre. By the time she was fifteen years of age, at a performance of "Prunella," given by the Theatre Guild School, other children's dotting parents and fond relatives grudgingly conceded that the honors for the performance must go to Prunella—identified on the program as someone named Sylvia Sidney.

Since then she has appeared on the legitimate stage in such diverse plays as "Crime" (under the Al Woods banner), "Gods of Lightning," "Nice Women" and "Bad Girl." She was offered the leading role in William Brady's production of "Street Scene," which she turned down to fulfill a motion picture contract with Fox Films.

Her career on the stage, though brief, was marked by one triumphant achievement after another. Aside from the superlatives showered upon the new ingenue by the local critics, George Jean Nathan has been known to break all precedents by remaining for the third act, and Alexander

Woollcott referred to her as "a miniature Cornell."

If to young hopefuls and would-be Sylvia Sidneys these superficial references to her career might imply that Sylvia Sidney's path to glory and fame was paved with golden bricks on which she had only to trip gayly, it is merely because some of us are wont to overlook the hardships as well as the spiritual and sometimes even physical difficulties an artist so often suffers. In Sylvia Sidney's case, the glamor of her success cannot blind us to the fact that even if luck did play a major role in making her a star, perseverance, hard work and indomitable courage were in the supporting cast, too, to say nothing of beauty and brains playing feature roles.

With the overwhelming adulations for her performance in "Prunella" still ringing in her ears, she hiked downtown from the Bronx to Broadway. After trekking for months along the Great White Way, with only the cheerfulness of youth to encourage her, fate yielded her a minor role in the case of "The Challenge of Youth." On the second night of the try-out, she fainted in the middle of the first act and was ordered to undergo an immediate operation for appendicitis. She refused, rose to her feet, finished the show, and continued to appear throughout the week when the play closed its run.

Later, a surgical examination revealed a torn ligament in her right side, the result of a fall during the rehearsal, and she was obliged to remain in bed for two weeks.

She has rare courage, indeed. This was not the only occurrence which displayed the girl's commendable fortitude and proved her mettle. A similar incident repeated itself a short while ago when she was appearing in "That Old Fashioned Girl." Coming down the winding stairs from her dressing room, she slipped and fractured a small bone in her ankle. But that did not prevent her from completing the run of the play with her foot in a cast.

It was only after Paramount had inveigled her with an attractive part in "City Streets" that she was persuaded to return to Hollywood. She had been there once before—two years ago to be exact. This first venture proved a dismal failure—a tremendous disappointment. She left the film colony after three months, loathing the place, vowing never to return there.

In speaking of that period she refers to it as seeing everything "through indigo-blue glasses." As she told a friend of hers just before she left for Hollywood this second time: "I was so upset by the unexpected way things turned out for me that it completely prejudiced my viewpoint, and gave me a distorted idea of Hollywood and everyone in it. Having profited by that first experience, I'm not taking any chances this time. Now I am taking along a pair of rose-colored glasses so I can be sure to see everything in a different light."

She is such a sane and level-headed person, in spite of her youth, we suspect she ought to have a little or no difficulty adjusting herself to any environment. But then on the other hand, what girl need trouble her little head about such matters when Gary Cooper is in the offing, lending a helping hand on the one side and Rouben Mamoulian on the other?

Immediately upon her arrival in Hollywood, Sylvia Sidney was put to work on three pictures in succession: "City Streets," "Confessions of a Co-Ed" and "An American Tragedy." After five months of intensive work, she was allowed a short rest. That is, if you call sight-seeing actually resting. For the first time since her arrival in Hollywood, she took time off to look about and get acquainted; attending first nights, visiting other studios.

Now once again she is on the job. This time starring in the role made famous by Betty Compson in 1919 in "The Miracle Man." The picture has been completed a week or so ago, though rumor from Hollywood indicates that there are still one or two retakes and improvements to be made before you will be seeing the film at your local cinema.

Sylvia Sidney has the leading role, playing opposite Chester Morris. Among the "know-it-alls" in the film colony, there is no question but that Sylvia Sidney is filmland's best bet for 1932. She is now riding on the crest of the wave, and is travelling far and fast.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

How to Write a Sport Column
It was inevitable that some one would write and ask me how to write a sport column. I had to wait nearly six years before that letter came, but it finally did arrive, and came from no less a personage than Wallace Smith of Brooklyn. Thanks old man! You have given me a chance to spill a piece I have had in my system far too long.

Writing a sport column, especially a Jewish one, is easier than trying to get a ham sandwich in a kosher delicatessen store. It is even less of an effort than finding the news in a release from Maccabean headquarters.

Get the Right Materials
The first thing you must do is supply yourself with the following: the sports pages of the better daily newspapers, a pair of scissors, four sheets of copy paper, a typewriter and the names of a few good press agents. Some times it is a good practice to have a few ideas, but that is relatively unimportant. Pick up your newspaper with your left hand, glance over the headlines, you see a line—“Harry Wolf Reaches Semi-Finals of Squash Tourney.” Snip with the scissors and you have a paragraph. Slip a sheet of paper into your machine and shoot, “Harry Wolf, New York Jewish boy and only member of his race ever to hold a national squash title, is defending the crown he won last year in the current tournament being played in New York this week. As this column goes to press Harry (you must get familiar or your readers will think you are a mugg), is a heavy favorite to win and is already in the semi-final round.”

Then it might be wise to add a few lines about squash, remarking that it is a comparatively new game and is an out-growth of the original game of court tennis played by the Kings of Old. This gives you the cue for letting loose a few blasts in which you point out that the game is played only in exclusive clubs, organizations who forbid Jews in their midst—the rest is obvious—you go on and say that the Jews anxious for indoor exercise were forced to start their own clubs and as soon as they did, commenced to develop their own players who have proven themselves second to none. This is good flag waving and always brings a letter or two on the prowess of Jewish youths or something.

Back to Your Paper
At this point you have to go back to your paper. “Slow week,” you say to yourself. “The intercollegiate last week didn’t bring forth any Jewish news worth mentioning. I wonder why Ira Singer of N. Y. U. didn’t run. Oh, yes! He never has represented the college, something about eligibility. I must call up Nixon, the N. Y. U. press agent and get the dope. Must also ask him, how many Jewish boys are going out for football next season and complain about the lousy tickets he sent me for the games last year. Hate to bother the boys at the “United Press again.” Basketball all over the page. “Hate that game, but it’s the national Jewish sport and good for plenty of copy. Nice story though on Lou Bender, captain of the Columbia team. How a Gentle on the Dartmouth team, who had suffered from a knee injury and sent his brace to Bender so the Jewish star could use it. It ought to make a good item on good-will.”

Guess I can take a chance and say a Jewish captained team will win the intercollegiate, but maybe I had better be careful. I’ve been picking them with my usual “poker luck.” You notice Nat Holman’s name. “I certainly should go up to C. C. N. Y. and see Holman. He ought to have a swell story on why Jews make such good basketball players. He has coached more of them Jews than a Yeshiva professor.”

You Find a Few Stories
Prize fighting — “Ah, there is a sport.” No week goes by without some Jewish boy flattening or being flattened in the ring. Let’s see. Benny Leonard, the old champ, sentiment, comebacks, success. Used that last week. Another training story. How about a story on his intensive training for future bouts? He’s always in there trying and is good copy. “You write a story about his desire to win the middleweight crown for the Jewish race.” His manager has plenty of dope. You call him, tell him what you want. He says, “Go ahead, say anything you want.” An invitation you take advantage of. Your typewriter clicks and before you know it you’ve done a page on a model Jew in athletics.

Publicity and Mail a Great Help.
By this time you start to look through the publicity releases and letters around your desk. Thin material. A notice that Stein, the Jewish wrestler, eats nothing but kosher food and you remember seeing him put away five of Mr. Steven’s hot dogs at the Polo Grounds. A story about Freeman, another Hebrew grappler, and how he always kisses the Mezzuzah before tackling an opponent, but the big fellow is about as religious as a Shabbath Goy.

Ten pages from Madison Square Garden about the various coming attractions. You look for a couple of tickets and don’t find them, you throw the releases away. No Jewish interest anyway and you never have gotten over the way they fooled you about Cabot, the hockey goalie, calling him Chabotsky and telling you he was a Jew named Chabotsky. You fell hard and even interviewed the Canadian, who had never seen a Jew until he was 16 years old.

Ah, a story—nobody’s name on it, but it says a Palestinian heavyweight named Tel Shatom, is coming to this

At a meeting of What Cheer Lodge, No. 24, Knights of Pythias, held Monday evening, March 14, at the headquarters, the Swedish Workingmen’s Hall, two candidates were conferred the Rank of Page in the Order of Knights of Pythias before a large gathering. They were Daniel Ronsensweig and Joseph Fishbein.

Plans are underway for raising funds for needy and distressed brothers and an interesting program has been announced for the next meeting to be held Monday, March 28.

Zeta Epsilon Pi

The regular meeting of Zeta Epsilon Pi Fraternity was held Sunday, March 13, at the home of I. Siegel on Swan street.

An initiation for future members was decided upon. Pledges Wienbaum and Bomes were initiated Wednesday and will be inducted into the club on Sunday, March 20.

A definite meeting place was discussed.

country. The piece relates how Tel, single handed, knocked out 14 Arabs during the riots in Palestine a few years ago. Looks phoney, but you hope it is true. Better wait until you can talk to somebody about it. Your mail is more productive. Two queries asking whether Babe Herman of the Brooklyn Dodgers is a Jew. You can answer that one. He is a good German-American. A letter with some information about the Jewish boys in Iowa. Save that one for a big spread. Here’s a complaint. They are always good for space fillers. Makes readers think you are a kind and tolerant soul. This one is especially good because it says you over-estimate the importance of anti-Semitism in the athletic clubs and you have so many shining examples.

You Find You Have Column
By this time you find you have almost finished your stint and need only tap out some “Chatterings” such as . . . Irving Jaffee vows he will never skate on another U. S. Olympic team. . . . There hasn’t been a Jew on a Yale football team in four years.

THE WRONG WAY
Grab up your club, tee up the ball, On with your drive, don’t wait to call, Leave all the divots, don’t smooth the trap, Forsake every rule and don’t care a rap.

THE RIGHT WAY
Gracefully wait, then tee up your ball, Observe if a player is within your call, Linger until your divots are found, Forgive the poor player who dubs all around.

I see where contract bridge has taken away some of our early enthusiasts. Haven’t seen Milt Sapinsley, Nate Kaufman or Art Basok on the course these fine days.

Harold Pulver showed up last Sunday, but decided not to play. Too much Northwind wind blowing. You know, Harold usually circles the woods with his tee shots and with the wind blowing in that direction he feared the ball wouldn’t clear the trees to land in the fairway.

At the Narr. round table, Max Grant home from a Southern cruise passing out Corona Coronas, the size of a baseball bat. Hereafter when I can’t sleep nights I’ll call on Max for another. The last one put me out for three hours.

Talk going around about getting up a crowd to go to Pinehurst. Some of our members are still liquid enough to get further than New York, for further information call Lenny Levin.

Listened in on Samson Nathanson at the Men’s Club luncheon the other day. He might not play in the eighties, but he can go around in Par when it comes to court procedure.

Compiling statistics of our membership, I find that Mr. Isaac Woolf is our Senior playing member. Can anyone inform me who is the youngest?

The locker room is open, temporary greens have been rolled and sandwiches may be had if you’re hungry. No excuse now for the boys who have been absent.

First bet of the season: Johnny Silverman wagered he would shoot four rounds of 80 or under during the year. Good luck to you, John.

Looked like a dance for Ledgermonsters at the Narragansett last Saturday night. They might not be all par golfers, but they certainly could dance to the strains of Charlie Brown’s new orchestra. I’m not looking for something for nothing but they would go big at our opening (N. C. of course).

The old scandal sheet is now posted at the club: “NO PAYEE, NO PLAYEE.”

Now that Art Levy has been commissioned to assist in getting our by-laws together into proper form you’ll find him looking around the club to see which ones are continually disregarded. Says it will be better to leave them out altogether.
