Lippmann Boom Grows

Recently this column suggested Walter Lippmann, as a desirable candidate for the presidency.

We now have additional support for our nominee. Heywood Brown, in his column, has espoused the cause of Lippmann for the president, and Gertrude Atherton, the famed novelist, in an article, now lying before me, also urges the merits of Lippmann.

Mrs. Atherton, says of Lippmann, that "he has the most lucid, statesman-like and comprehensive mind in the United States."

No one, she adds, "can approach him in 'grasp' and his intellect is of the very highest order."

Alice In Blunderland

You've heard the story of the little Jewish boy promenading with his father on Christmas eve, who, seeing the lights from the homes of a section of the city largely peopled by non-Jews, questioned his father: "Daddy, do Christians keep Christmas, too?"

Well, I've always thought that a mere story, but I came upon an experience, whose absolute veracity I can vouch for, and which duplicates this story.

I'll even tell you the little girl's name—Alice. And she is—well, between five and six.

It was the week of Passover. "Auntie," she asked, "can we eat ice cream on Passover?"

"Have you ever seen any Jewish children eat ice cream on Passover?" replied the aunt, by way of stalling her off, for I do not believe, the particular auntie was quite sure about the matter herself.

"Yes," replied Alice, "I saw the little girl across the street eating ice cream."

"But, do you know that she is Jewish?" replied auntie.

"Yes," said Alice. "I know she is Jewish, for she speaks English."

Since most of the people about her she knew were Jewish and they all spoke English, Alice came to the conclusion that only Jews speak English.

Bernstein and Zog

Not every man can make a king buy a Frigidaire. But that, I am told, is one of the achievements of Herman Bernstein, U. S. Minister to Albania, who is now on a visit to his homeland.

Mr. Bernstein, it seems, was the first man in Albania to have a Frigidaire. Some time ago, King Zog visited Mr. Bernstein's home and observed all the accoutrements. He was delighted with the Frigidaire, in particular—and ordered one like Mr. Bernstein's for himself.

They talk of a president's kitchen cabinet. King Zog should be able to start one, too.

Listening to the Chimes

Speaking of one thing or another, Eddie Cantor tells the one about the two men listening on the outside of a religious edifice to the musical chimes issuing from within or atop. "Aren't these chimes beautiful?" asked No. 1 of No. 2.

"What did you say?" asked No. 2, as he cupped his ear.

"I said, aren't these bells beautiful?" spoke up more loudly No. 1 again.

"What did you say?" shouted No. 2 again.

"Oh, darn it," shouted No. 1 yet again, and as loudly as he could, "I said, aren't these bells beautiful?"

"Excuse me," shouted back No. 2, "but I can't hear you on account of these terrible bells."

M. Ostrow, Superintendent Of New Jewish Home For The Aged, Assumes Duties

Experienced Social Worker of Many Years Standing, Now Concentrating His Efforts on Transferring Guests From Old to New Home

M. P. Ostrow, social worker of many years standing, has arrived in Providence to take charge of the new during the war. Previous to that, he made many sociological studies for the New York Inter-Municipal Committee.

"In Providence," says Mr. Ostrow, "the Jewish Home for the Aged is foremost on the community program. The city is community conscious, and the Jewish citizens have much foresight, as is evidenced by the many institutions and social agencies and the beautiful new Home for the Aged. The building is a model of modernity and perfectly suited to the needs of the aged and infirm."

Mr. Ostrow is preparing a program that will provide not only shelter, food and medical care, but also supply contentment, happiness and possibly usefulness to the guests that will be admitted there.

The Superintendent is interested in all community projects of a constructive nature, and hopes to so conduct the Home for the Aged that it will be the pride of the community as well as helpful to other institutions and philanthropic organizations.

The ladies of the Jewish Home for Aged Association, who have housed a number of aged on Orms street, will continue their interest and support in the new institution. They have built up a membership of long standing, and are now making arrangements to thoroughly canvass their lists for strengthening this membership. These activities will be supplemented by the men's organization—a committee of one hundred—who will solicit members among the business people of the community.

Mr. Ostrow arrived in the city this week with his family and is concentrating his efforts on the finishing touches of the building on Hillside avenue, in order to speed the time of the transfer of the guests from Orms street to the new Home.

M. P. OSTROW

TRAINING FOR JEWISH LIFE

At the joint session of the National Conference for Jewish Social Service and the National Council for Jewish Education, held in Philadelphia last week, there arose a very interesting as well as a very important problem. Samuel A. Goldsmith, Executive Director of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, argued that the maintenance of Jewish education has now become impossible, since its structure is dependent upon the gifts of erstwhile generous patrons and the irregular support of Jewish parents, and that economic conditions have made the upkeep of the Jewish educational system an impossible burden. He stated definitely that the activities of the whole system are limited by the money available, which is also used for the education of poor children.

Ben Rosen, Executive Director of the Associated Talmud Torahs of Philadelphia, spoke in behalf of the maintenance of our Jewish educational scheme. He saw in it the great unifying force of modern American Jewry. He emphasized the lesson that must be taught to Jewish children, namely, that all of them must be drawn into the "Klal Yisroel," while they recognized the various interpretations of Jewish life and learned to tolerate them. He saw the chief function of Jewish education as a valuable and indispensable force in molding the character of our generation, so that it might recognize the beauty in life that was open to the soul of a Jew.

Whatever the condition of finances in the average Jewish community of today, there are few necessities that can be dispensed with less easily than education. At the same time, there are few things that can be neglected with results so damaging. We are prone to look upon our Jewish life today as a luxury rather than as a vital necessity. We built our expensive Temples and hired our brilliant Rabbis while times were prosperous; and we organized splendid Hebrew schools for our children. Now, when these once delightful expenditures have become difficult, we are easily inclined to feel that a less expensive set of Jewish obligations could replace our better systems.

Nothing could be more foolhardy than to begin to break down a system of education that has proved to be so valuable in our modern Jewish life. We may save a few teachers' salaries, but what we deprive our children of may be irreparable. In living, we want to prepare ourselves for the fullest appreciation of ourselves and those about us. In being Jews we must ourselves understand what in life is more beautiful to us than to all others, and we must see that our children are adequately prepared to do the same thing. Through their Jewish education, they are able to get out of life more than the Jew who does not know his heritage and its importance. Our Jewish education is a training for Jewish life, as all other education is a training for regular life. In order to insure the future happiness of our children as Jews, we must allow no circumstances to rob them of what is their right and their necessity.

Russell and Watson

It was Bertrand Russell, who once made this comparison of the difference between the old philosophy, of the type represented, say by Descartes and the modern school of behaviorism.

Descartes, explained Russell, said, "I think, therefore, I am." Watson says: "There are white rats, therefore I do not think."

Watson, in other words, has gone to objective life—to discover his psychological principles. And all I've got to say is, whether behaviorism is true or not, there is an awful lot of psychology to be found in objective life among plain, common folks. A great deal, that never gets between book covers.

The Story of It

This thought came to me, after listening the other day to the story of Mrs. Cohen. Mrs. Cohen had never taken any courses in psychology, but she was a great help to Mr. Cohen.

You will be surprised to learn that Mrs. Cohen was such a help to Mr. Cohen, when I tell you that Mrs. Cohen did very little of the housework and spent most of her time playing bridge. Yet she was a great help to Mr. Cohen, for she was full of psychological insight and so ministered to his mind in many directions and very successfully.

Now the other day, so the story that I heard goes, Mr. Cohen was lying about tossing in bed. He had counted 40,000 sheep; he had recited Shema Yisroel, the Jewish night prayer, two and a half times; he had tried Judaism and Christian Science on himself, yet slumber would not come to his eye-lids nor repose to his weary soul.

"Why dost thou toss so much, and why is thy soul so disturbed?" asked his wife.

"Ah," said Mr. Cohen at this, and turned over again and yet again. At this, Mrs. Cohen grew very irate. "What have you got—the heebie-jeebies? Pray, tell me, tell me what is on your mind?"

And her husband, who was a plain blunt man, responded simply. "All right, if you want to know, Lena. I can't sleep, because I've got to pay Mr. Jacobs $3000 tomorrow and I can't pay it."

"Ho, hum," said his wife. An idea came to her, for she was, as I have said, full of an instinctive psychology. It was after midnight, but Mrs. Cohen rushed to the phone and soon she had dragged Mr. Jacobs from his slumbers to answer the phone.

"Hello," shouted Mrs. Cohen. "Mr. Jacobs, this is Mrs. Cohen. Listen, Mr. Jacobs, Mr. Cohen can't pay you that $3000 tomorrow. He hasn't got the money."

"What!" shouted back Mr. Jacobs. Whereupon, Mrs. Cohen hung up the phone. Then, coming back to her husband, she said: "Now, you can go to sleep. It's Mr. Jacobs who won't sleep tonight."

YOUNG ISRAEL

The Saturday morning services of May 14 were carried out by the Young Israel Judaeans in the usual manner with both a sermon and the reading of the weekly scrolls.

The weekly business meeting opened at 8:30 o'clock, and was devoted entirely to a discussion of the Young Israel raffle to be held June 25. Reports were given on the sale of tickets.

Premature Twins Now Thriving at Miriam Hospital

A set of premature girl twins, whose weight at birth was two pounds and three and a half pounds, respectively, was reported by Superintendent Hoffman as thriving very satisfactorily on the specialized treatment which they are receiving at the Miriam Hospital.

These premature, just short of seven months, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Kagan, of 69 Jefferson street, Providence, and they are "crying" examples of scientific achievement. They can be seen smiling in their incubator home, defying the bugaboo of pre-maturity and the superstition of Friday the 13th, the date of their birth.

Extensive plans will be made for future study in the Department of International Relations, and a Parliamentary Law Class will be started.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

A COLUMN OF GOSSIP

It took them long enough to do it, but finally the U. S. Maccabee Association announced officially what had happened in Palestine. The entire team returned to New York the other day and reported that they had annexed most of the events in the Jewish Olympiads at Tel Aviv. Scoring 178 points, the U. S. Jewish boys and girls walked off with the team honors. Palestine was second with 56 points. England, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Poland and Germany followed in the order named.

The games were over at the end of March, but the team took its collective time getting back. Visiting Italy, France and England was not conducive to a speedy return and the team was accorded all the honors of a conquering army by the Jews of those countries. The crowning spectacle to the Olympics will take place in New York at the end of this month when a dinner will be held for the team.

GOOD WILL SOCCER!

As if it were possible to be good natured about a soccer game! Anyway, a good-will soccer game is being sponsored between the Hakoah All-Stars and a picked team from the German-American League.

The benefits, if any, will go to the New York Zionist Region, who are sponsoring the match. Mayor James J. Walker, who has been acting very worried of late, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the committee. The game will take place at the Polo grounds on May 22nd and will mark the farewell appearance for the season, of the Hakoah team, who are booked for an extended tour on the Continent.

Oh, yes, I almost forgot—the idea of the match is to demonstrate how amicable relations are between the Jews and Germans in this country compared to what they are in Hitler's backyard. It sounds a little far-fetched to me, but as Carl Sherman, formerly of Buffalo, is President of the N. Y. Zionist Region, I am certain it's all right.

However, the idea inspires me to state that I do not believe athletics are any kind of a peace or good-will maker. International contests have caused more friction than any other form of competition. There was more fraternizing among soldiers of opposing armies than there was at the last Olympic games between the athletes. The Davis Cup matches almost caused a diplomatic crisis between France and America a few years ago. A French and English rugby match ended in a riot and you yourself are no doubt familiar with other incidents of a like nature.

Just how bad athletic contests can be on good-will is perfectly illustrated in the case of an upstate college and a military school. This college will not book games with the military school because it is anxious to have the star athletes of the school attend the college. A Jewish coach of the college is responsible for the situation and he has demonstrated the wisdom of his idea. His college gets the cream of the school, while a rival college, which meets the military school, is hated with all the venom possible to youngsters in their teens.

Horses are said to have no nationality except that of the owner. This thesis being a premise I can then report that a Jewish horse named Economy, owned by Harry Lochein of Philadelphia, came in second in the recently run Kentucky Derby. The clothing boys cleaned up plenty and with sales being what they are greeted the event as if it were a mitzvah.

The Harvard lacrosse team is carrying a trio of Jewish net welders; Myerson of football fame, Rabinowitz and Levinson. The last named is the scoring star of the Crimson twelve and accounted for three tallies when his team beat Brown 8-3 last week.

FIGHTING

Jackie Fields, the Jewish welterweight and ex-champ, is back in fighting trim and working his way East via the one-night stand route.

Maxie Rosenbloom, the light-heavyweight, is earning his keeps in the same manner.

Did you know the only left-handed heavyweight of modern times was "Babe" Gross, the Jewish heavy-weight? Do you care?

The only modern fight champion who hasn't written a book is Benny Leonard. "Benja" is saving all his fistic motions for the prize ring and thereby showing a great deal of good judgment.

This may not be strictly fight news, but Emil Lederer, president of the Hamburg-American Steamship Line, who has been asked to become the czar of all the shipping lines, is one of us. And will he have to be a fighter to keep the various lines satisfied?

Spring football practice has been called on the various campuses. But with the weather the way it has been the boys thought it was fall and reported ready to start play. Alas! our one male Jewish tennis player, Julius Seligson, is now just another local tournament player. The former Lehigh boy stays out of the big out-of-town matches and performs only around his home lot. Incidentally his kid brother, Sidney, is playing nice tennis for the New York University team. Another New York boy, who is leaning up on the courts, is John Nogrady, who plays for St. Johns.

Konrad Bercovici, the writer, a sportsman of the first rank, has sailed for his annual European jaunt. He has been warned to stay out of Roumania unless he is willing to use his gun, a famous instrument in the Berkshire Hills, where he summers.

Izzy Caesar, great Hollywood scenario writer, has taken up polo. The other day he was handed a bill for the upkeep of his stable of polo ponies. After reading the total, Izzy moved in with the horses, saying, "At those prices they must get caviar for breakfast."

Four English Jewish wrestlers are on the way to these shores. They will be a welcome addition. For some reason or other, every nationality in England is well represented on the mat.

I've cut the length of this column 10 per cent because of the depression.

20 CANDIDATES TO BE INITIATED

A class of 20 candidates will be initiated into the ranks of the Rhode Island Workingmen's Beneficial Association, at a special full form initiation, to be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at Eagles' Auditorium.

Several interesting ceremonies have been added to the ritual and the committee in charge of the initiation are confident that the members will be greatly impressed and entertained.

The officers in charge of the initiation include the following: Sydney J. Hoffman, chairman; Joseph W. Ress, vice chairman; Bernard B. Abedon, past chairman; Louis Nochemson, master of arms; Aaron A. Bilgor, conductor; Harry Nozick, inner guard, and Abe Swerling, chaplain.

The social committee in charge of the entertainment is headed by Abe Swerling, assisted by Sam Kaufman, Samuel Shanbrun, Harry Nozick, Sydney J. Hoffman and Aaron A. Bilgor.

We have been advised that Chairman Sydney Hoffman has several surprises in store for the members next Monday evening. Sydney's surprises are, as a rule, free to the lucky members.

Morris Shoham Speaks

at Worcester School

Morris Shoham was the guest speaker of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Ivriah School of Worcester, Mass., on Monday evening, May 16.

The occasion was the last meeting of the season.

RKO Albee Theatre

Alexander Carr, Jewish actor, portraying the part of "Uncle Sidney" Cohen, delicatessen store owner, in "No Greater Love," starting Saturday, May 21st, at the RKO Albee Theatre, belongs to that great army of youths who have responded to the lure of the big top by running away from home and joining the circus.

It developed that Carr had a voice and the circus had less need for a singer than almost anything else, so, at the age of 15, the boy was singing in music halls in Europe. A great singer heard him at that time and was so impressed that he took Carr into the chorus of a celebrated opera company, but the fact that it would take 15 years to study for opera, decided him to aspire for something else.

He left the opera troupe for a minstrel show and in the years that followed he played everything from Shakespeare to burlesque.

In 1906, Carr wrote and acted in "Wine, Women and Song." He had the good fortune to make a success of it and New York held it for more than a year.

He toured Europe with a company of his own, played for two years at the La Salle Theatre in Chicago in two great successes, "The Sweetest Girl in Paris" and "Louisiana Lou," and would have continued on in the musical comedy field, he believes, if Montague Glass hadn't written "Potash and Perlmutter." Carr starred in that and other Potash and Perlmutter plays Glass wrote for ten years and in 1923 he made a picture version of the original for Samuel Goldwyn.

Those who enjoyed the lovable Jewish father in "Symphony of Six Million" will be thoroughly pleased with Alexander Carr, the lovable Jewish delicatessen man.

The Tire That Taught THRIFT to Millions

GUM-DIPPED CORDS
The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented construction, and the two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for tire performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD
Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and safe, quiet performance.
