Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Soliloquizing

So Louis Sobol, Hearst columnist, says he would like to be able to go up to his chief, when the latter calls for his column, and say: "Go fly a kite—I'm going fishing." But he can't afford it. Well, Sobol is lucky. Think what it would be if he were a Jewish columnist. Just confined to the Jewish field. Unless the crazy thing is Jewish, you can't write about it. You know how Dana defined news. If a dog bites a man, it is not news, but if a man bites a dog, then it is news. But with Jewish news, it's got to be a Jewish dog. And so few of the dogs are Jewish. Jacob Fishman, editor of the Jewish Morning Journal, is one of the fastest column writers I know. Really, all columns should be written fast. If they are labored, the chances are they will appear so, and who will read a labored column? By the way, one Jewish columnist has dropped out—I mean Morris Margulies, the new Secretary of the Zionist Organization. He was the Mem Shin Hay of The Zionist, olav hashalom, which has disappeared with the incoming of the new Zionist administration. Margulies used to be with the New York Telegram, then he got money-struck and went on the road selling. Now he's in charge of the selling of Zionism to the public. He has initiative—he's generally liked. He ought to make good—and also get married. How can a man talk about a Jewish National Home—if he has no home of his own? But look who's talking?

That was a good story, by the way, that Lee Kaplan, who just returned from Palestine, told. It's all about the Hadassah hospitals in Palestine. It appears that in Palestine, the Hadassah institutions have a reputation for getting on very intimate terms with their clientele. In fact, I am told, too much so. Well, Miss Kaplan tells this one anent the extent of this intimacy.

Mrs. Cohen was in the hospital. To be more specific, she was in the receiving ward, waiting for the doctor to diagnose and prescribe. Along came the medic.

"Well, what's troubling you, Mrs. Cohen?" queried the doctor, with the beaming benevolence characteristic of the staff.

"Well, you see, it is this way," replied Mrs. Cohen. "You see we used to live in Jerusalem. That was a good many years ago. At that time the population of Jerusalem was a good deal smaller than it is today. I should say, in fact, that since then the population of Jerusalem has almost doubled.

"Yes, yes," said the doctor, "but what's troubling you?"

"I am coming to that very quickly," said Mrs. Cohen. "As I said, we used to live in Jerusalem. You know Jerusalem then had none of the tall buildings that it has today. But anyway—to be very brief, one day, my husband took a trip to Tel Aviv. Well, you know how husbands are. Some husbands are very good—and some should be in prison. Well, my husband, soll er gesund sein is not so bad. So he went to Tel Aviv, and you know how men are. Well, to make a long story short, he liked Tel Aviv. Some people like Jerusalem better and some people like Tel Aviv better. It's an old story, some people like herring and some don't like it. So my husband opened a store in Tel Aviv.

"Well, one day, I was staying in the store with my husband, and I decided I would go out for a little walk. So I said to my husband—Chayim, I am going to take a walk. You see my husband's name is Chayim. So I went out for a walk. Well, I enjoyed the walk very much much, and when I came back, I was hungry like two bears and a gorilla. So I goes to the ice box, and eats some fish, and doctor. I don't believe the fish agreed with me. I got pains all over, so that's why I am here!"

DR. STEPHEN S. WISE MAKES STATEMENT BEFORE LEAVING U. S.

Claims 21 Countries Will be Represented at World Jewish Conference in Geneva

New York, Aug. 12—(JTA)—In a statement issued through the Jewish Telegraphic Agency prior to his departure last week for the World Jewish Conference in Geneva, Dr. Stephen S. Wise delivered a parting broadside against the opponents of the conference and the congress idea. Emphasizing that the conference is convened for the purpose of discussion and that there will be no suggestion of haste in summoning a World Jewish Congress, Dr. Wise asserted that "the convening of the World Jewish Congress will not be postponed by reason of the timidities of those who are dominated by their fears in respect to Jewish affairs. Nor can the congress be indefinitely postponed pending the adherence of certain Jewish groups in this and other lands, which find it unpalatable to meet and take counsel with simple and humble Jewish folk of East European lands."

A World Jewish Congress, which he approves, must, Dr. Wise declared, effectively appeal to the judgment and conscience of the Christian nations and in addition to the safeguarding of the security of the Jews, must arouse in the Jew a deeper and finer effort in behalf of the Jewish cause. One hundred delegates, representing 21 countries, will attend the conference, according to Dr. Wise.

70TH BIRTHDAY OF RABBI PHILIPSON MARKED AT TEMPLE

Noted American Jewish Reform Leader to be Honored at Dinner, Also, to Mark Anniversary

Atlantic City, Aug. 12—(JTA)—Tribute to Rabbi David Philipson, noted American Jewish Reform leader, whose 70th birthday occurred Tuesday, was paid at the Sabbath services at Beth-Israel Temple here of which Rabbi Henry Fisher is the spiritual leader.

Rabbi Philipson occupied a place on the platform as the guest of honor. The celebration sermon was preached by Dr. Abram Simon of Washington, a former pupil of Rabbi Philipson at Hebrew Union College.

A dinner marking the anniversary will be given by Rabbi Philipson's congregation in Cincinnati, the B'nai Israel in the fall. Rabbi Philipson, who was a member of the first class of Hebrew Union College founded by the late Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, is one of the outstanding members of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. He is the author of a number of works.

Approves Jewish Chair at University of Dorpat

Reval, Aug. 12—(JTA)—The Ministry of Education of Estonia recently approved the establishment of a Jewish Chair planned by the University of Dorpat as part of its tercentenary celebration.

The university thus becomes the first university in Europe where Yiddish and Hebrew Literature will be taught as part of the course for the doctorate degree.

The chair is to be maintained by friends of Dorpat University for the Promotion of Jewish Science.

The University of Dorpat has been noted for its liberal traditions for a long period and during the Czarist regime supplied a refuge to Russian Jews unable to secure an education in Russian universities.

Board of Health Denies Rabbis' Plea for 72-Hour Burial Period Extension

Trenton, Aug. 12—(JTA)—The State Board of Health has declined a request filed by Orthodox Rabbis for an extension of the maximum time limit for burying unembalmed or uncremated bodies, to 72 hours. The board did, however, amend the sanitary code to provide 48 hours maximum time limit, in place of 36 hours, which was the rule up to now.

The Rabbis had argued previously that the 36-hour regulation conflicted seriously with Jewish ritual laws governing burial when an important holiday, such as Passover or Succoth occurs. However, the board, viewing the matter in the light of the general public welfare, refused to grant the request, sanctioning, however, a 48-hour limit, although it is scarcely perceptible how this will aid the Orthodox viewpoint during a holiday period.

Our Need -- Organization

By EDWARD B. BENJAMIN
President, New Orleans Jewish Federation

The author of this article, Edward B. Benjamin, a prominent merchant of New Orleans, is one of the outstanding public-minded citizens of the community in which he lives. He is a liberal donor to numerous Jewish causes. —Editor's Note.

As a worker for years in the Jewish cause, and lately head of a Jewish federation in one of our representative American cities, I have come to feel very keenly indeed the need of integration and federation in Jewish life in this country.

Beginning from the standpoint of our charities, our national and international causes have always experienced considerable difficulty in appeal and solicitation. The Jewish Welfare Fund idea, designed to meet this situation, only partially fills the bill, it seems to me. The operation of these funds means that in every locality the importance of each of our national and international causes is reevaluated and necessarily a varying significance attached to each. Further, these welfare funds have not to date stressed the relation and interrelation of our national causes, and they represent for the most part purely a convenience in meeting charity assessments rather than a formative force in Jewish life.

As a people, we have yet to achieve a definite and concerted philosophy of existence in this new home—America. There seems to me to be great opportunity for self-development along these lines and for self-advancement as a result.

Beginning again with our fundamental charity needs, I see no reason why the twenty or thirty important national and international causes appealing to American Reform Jewry should not be federated in one central national Jewish federation. This agency could bear to these causes the same relation as a local community chest bears to local charities. Jewish federations throughout the country could elect representation to this central federation, and this representation would have the function of developing a budget for all subsidiary causes in exactly the same sense as is done by the budget committees and boards of directors of community chests. We would then be confronted with but one major national appeal each year. Our local welfare funds would be rendered, to a large extent, unnecessary, and we would at last have the beginning of one centralized bureau for the expression of Jewish activity in this country.

As I envisage this project, the federation would include our outstanding national and international causes both of a relief and a cultural nature. All of these causes are interrelated. Besides giving direct relief to our unfortunate, as is the case with some of these causes, they all invariably redound to the dignification of the Jew in American life. To aid stricken Jews in Poland, or to fight the menace of anti-Semitism in Germany, is after all, only enlightened self-interest, as we aid those bearing our name. Similarly, the support of our theological seminaries as well as of our publishing services represents a cohesive and proper factor in a dignified religious life.

I feel, therefore, that such varying causes as the J. D. C., the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, the American Jewish Committee, the Denver Consumptive Hospital, etc., all belong within one field. They are strengthening forces of our existence and in one way or another their fields interlock.

As has been the case with local Jewish federation solicitation, and with community chest solicitation, considerable financial economy should result from a federation of our important national and international causes. One campaign would certainly be less costly than thirty. Also with the support assured, an institution or a movement can cut down materially in its office personnel. Invariably, too, after years of operation of a federation, overlapping efforts of affiliates are avoided and internal economies indicated in other than the accounting offices. There can be no question of the success from the standpoint of economy of our local Jewish federation movements and of our community chest movements in these United States. The gains here have been large and self-evident. These institutions have rendered themselves invaluable to the American scene, and are unquestionably here to stay for a good many years to come.

Were it only from the standpoint of economy, the federation of our national causes as indicated above would recommend itself heartily to me. However, there is another aspect which opens up a vast and stirring field for thought. Unquestionably, a national federation, properly manned, would be the strongest potential integrating force we have yet produced in our American scene. It could materially strengthen the basis of support for all our national agencies and causes. And with this strengthening might come our great opportunity for self-realization. We would at last have a parliament of minds to consider and help shape the course of American Jewish life. We would at last have the integration necessary to fight prejudice. And to rally together and declare our cause not yet lost would be a wonderful gain in morale to our American Jewry.

Here and there throughout this wide country there is the occasional Jew who has happened to become liked, widely received, and even understood among Gentiles. This is particularly so in instances in our Southland and augurs well. Speaking from this favored position I would like to outline a few concrete steps to our advancement which, it seems to me, could be taken immediately by various of our national causes working with the strengthened support possible from the national federation I suggest, steps which in my opinion could be immensely helpful to our standing in this country.

(1). Our religion and our pulpits should be popularized. I put this first because while for four thousand years our function as a people has been to serve the Lord and to bear witness to ethical truth, the average Christian has still little or no knowledge of the Jewish faith. Particularly is there no general understanding of the modern Jewish religious outlook. Our Reform Judaism is the most simple, friendly and earthy of all religions. With no doctrine of original sin, no duality of good and evil, and no intervention necessary between man and God, with its emphasis mainly on this world, our religion is actually today the religion of most thinking people. We stand to gain in respect incalculably, in my opinion, by creating a general knowledge and realization of this fact.

But this will not be the only message to come from our pulpits. Our Jewish religion has become peculiarly evolutionary and missionary in this comparatively new and unrestricted environment. Once again our ancient gifts of prophecy and ethical leadership have come to the fore. Out of all proportion to our numbers is the influence of our pulpits and our inspired leaders in the humanitarian causes throughout this land. It is as if Israel of yore, with its heart made great by suffering, had found a new promised land, there to join the inhabitants in serving in righteousness. Verily we have produced great religious leaders in this land today. The influence of these men can be extended in every field of reform. Unrestricted by convention, oft times holding a balance of power between Catholic and Protestant, our pulpits with proper support can attain much more than they have yet attained and dignify all of us in the doing.

I would like to see popularization of our religion and of our religious leaders in every way possible. A Friday night nationwide radio hour from our outstanding pulpits could be made of great value to our cause. But there are many other roads open for spreading the understanding of our religion and the realization of the Godliness still inherent in Israel.

North End Dispensary Sponsored by Council Women Aids Hundreds

Alive, bustling clinics greet the eyes of visitors at the North End Dispensary, 49 Orms street, Providence, as the summer speeds on. Five hundred and seventy-two patients, from all parts of the city were treated there during the month of July, Mrs. Saul Rothschild, the Registrar, stated yesterday. The largest attendance was in the asthma clinic, which has increased rapidly in recent years. The hard-of-hearing clinic also has had a steady growth, all the varying stages of deafness being examined and treated. The children's clinic, which was reorganized this summer, is very active, and there have been a large number of tonsil and adenoid operations during the past few months.

Medical and surgical clinics are held daily from 9 to 12 o'clock. Special clinics include:

Eye, ear, nose and throat—Mondays and Thursdays. Hay fever and asthma—Tuesdays and Saturdays. Children's clinic—Wednesdays. Tonsil operations—Thursdays. Hard-of-hearing clinic—Mondays and Thursdays.

The Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, realizing the important part that illness plays in social maladjustment, founded the North End Dispensary a number of years ago, for the relief of sick poor. It is now a member agency of the Providence Community Chest. Mrs. Samuel Markoff is the Dispensary Chairman of the sponsoring Council of Jewish Women. Mrs. Milton M. Fuld is Treasurer, and Mrs. Saul Rothschild, Registrar.

Attendance at this clinic has jumped during the past year, due to economic conditions. In the greater effort to prevent diseases, 189 hay fever and 33 asthma patients were treated during July. Many diseases which in the past were not attended until they had reached a bed confining stage, are now diagnosed and cared for in the early stages at the clinic, and specialized treatment is given for various diseases of the skin, eye, nose and throat.

The staff of the North End Dispensary includes: Drs. Jay N. Fishbein, Perry Bernstein, Rocco Abbate, Stanley Freedman, Preston Geiger, Jack Greenstein, John Walsh, Edward Seltzer, Herman Grossman, Israel Mandell Bradford Portnoy and Eske Windsberg.

Various Council of Jewish Women members are serving as volunteers at the clinic.

HARD-OF-HEARING CLINIC

The Hard-of-Hearing Clinic, formed about three years ago at the North End Dispensary on Orms street, has helped many—both children and adults. On admission, the patients are given hearing tests with a 4-A Audiometer, and a record of each case is kept. From time to time they are re-tested, to note improvement made.

When the clinic was first opened, the patients were chiefly adults. Recently, however, the schools have been testing children and frequently cases of poor hearing are discovered which had not even been suspected by the teachers having considered the children either dull or inattentive. Many of these children are being treated at the Dispensary.

A member of the Council Committee made the following statement today:

"When the hearing of a child is found defective, his parents are asked to take him to a physician or a clinic. Many parents consider it an insult to their offspring, and stoutly maintain that the child can hear perfectly well. For some unknown reason, parents don't seem to mind having defective eye sight brought to their attention, but they become considerably perturbed about deafness. In time, it is hoped that they will be educated to look upon this condition, too, in its proper light, allowing treatment promptly to be instituted, when a diagnosis of deafness is made after examination."

Hias Explains Necessary Steps for Deported Aliens Seeking Re-Entry to U. S.

New York, Aug. 12—(JTA) — The steps to be taken by aliens seeking readmission to the United States after deportation, under the new measure granting the Secretary of Labor discretion to permit applications for re-entry on the part of aliens, are made known in a statement made public recently by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society.

Application for permission to re-apply for admission into the United States cannot be made until one year from the time the alien was deported or left this country voluntarily under order of deportation, according to the Hias. After that year he must apply by an affidavit, stating that he was deported or ordered deported, the reason therefor and the date, to which country he has gone, where he has lived and what he has been doing, and if employed, in what capacity and by whom. Any special reasons why he believes the Secretary of Labor should grant him permission to reapply must be stated. It is well to attach to this affidavit other affidavits or letters from persons in this country abroad testifying to his character, conduct and qualifications and the reasons why he should return to the United States.

"After the Secretary of Labor has granted the permission to reapply, the applicant must go to the nearest American Consul for a visa just as an ordinary alien who never came to America before," says the statement.

Hias has instructed its offices and affiliated organizations to be of assistance to such deported aliens and to help them to prepare the necessary documents of which there should be two copies, one for the Secretary of Labor and the other for the Hias files.

The Hias makes known that through its Washington bureau it will intervene on behalf of every alien entitled to receive permission to re-apply.

Mr. and Mrs. Sig Berger Surprised at Maplehurst On Tenth Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Sig Berger, well known in Providence and Woonsocket, and guests at the Maplehurst Hotel in Bethlehem, New Hampshire, were agreeably surprised with a dinner in their honor on last Sunday at the hotel, the occasion being their tenth wedding anniversary. The dinner was tendered them by the Brenners, owners of Maplehurst.

To the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March" the guests of honor entered the dining room, which was filled with over 100 guests seated at tables arranged in horseshoe fashion. An artistically decorated wedding cake, flanked with roses, formed an attractive centerpiece.

Harry Brenner, well known attorney of Woonsocket, officiated as toastmaster and introduced as speakers, Mr. Ashel Booth of Woonsocket, Benjamin Trinkel of Providence and the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Berger. A poem, dedicated to the occasion, was written and read by Mrs. Rose S. Goldman of Lowell.

Mr. Berger is associated with Arthur Darman of Woonsocket, while Mrs. Berger is associated with the Outlet Company as buyer.

The wedding cake was later cut into small pieces and presented to the guests.

MUSHROOM SYNAGOGUES

It is a patent fact, although not a pleasant one, that the great majority of American Jews become conscious of their religion but two or three times a year. The important period occurs with the High Holidays when all Jews congregate at the house of worship to observe the services for the New Year. Because of this an unusual emphasis is placed on the holidays, bringing with it an abundance of abuses.

The most objectionable abuse is described as the mushroom synagogue. These synagogues are not to be confused with the makeshift synagogues which small and none too affluent Jewish communities established in halls and rented auditoriums for the special holidays of the Jewish calendar. Those belonged to the communities where only a small number of families could be brought together for religious worship, and where a regular synagogue was financially impossible.

The mushroom synagogue, on the other hand, is a business enterprise, which springs up during the Jewish High Holy Days and disappears rather suddenly after the promoters have pocketed the receipts from the sale of the seats. These promoters take advantage of those Jews who are not regular members of a synagogue, and by their activities make it further impossible for the synagogues to attract them to legitimate congregations. Having rented quarters and sold seats, the promoters falsely represent themselves as a regularly constituted congregation and appeal for funds for imaginary Hebrew schools.

Many religious Jews who have unfortunately neglected to identify themselves with a particular congregation are thus deceived, and many struggling synagogues are deprived of their support. It is to the credit of New York branch of the United Synagogue of America that their President, Judge Hyman J. Reit, has inaugurated an active campaign to eliminate the mushroom synagogue insofar as it is possible. The District Attorneys of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx have promised to co-operate in the work of investigating such synagogues as are illegitimately and spuriously established for the High Holidays.

Although no complaint of this nature can be brought against our Providence Jews, yet it is to be deplored that as far as actual usefulness is concerned too many of our synagogues partake of the character of the mushroom synagogue in actual practice. A synagogue should be filled more than a few times a year; and the Jews of the city should contribute more interest and more support to them than is indicated by the annual purchase of a ticket to services.

Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities

And that one of S. R. Harris—not so bad either for hot weather. The one about the Jewish mother, who was going very East and West. "I am getting fat from avayress" (Hebrew for sins), she told the doctor.

"What do you mean—avayress?" asked the physician.
"You know," she replied, "es ist an avayreh arauszuwarfen."

But, talking about columns again, Sobol is right. Fishing is much better. And after all, there is a Jewish angle to everything even to fishing. I remember the first time I went fishing. I couldn't get myself to stick the pin of the hook through the little angle worms. I think it must have been something Jewish in me, that stopped me. Hunting, too, there is something unJewish about. I don't like this mollycoddle business, but I remember going possum hunting down in Texas. It's generally done around midnight and when the dogs who sniffed out the presence of the possums serenely reposing in their slumbers in their trees, began to howl and pounce on the possums, there was something in me that revolted.

Nevertheless, I like fishing. Something so peaceful and lazy about it. And what's the use of leaving all those fish in the sea. They're such a dumb lot. All they can do is swim. Remember, how Benjamin Franklin, who for a time was a vegetarian, began to eat fish. He saw a fish being opened and prepared for frying. As it was opened, a smaller fish, which the big fish had eaten, was taken from its inners. If fish can eat fish, rationalized Franklin, why shouldn't I eat it. But, really, what I suppose affected Franklin, was the smell of the frying fish.

Our quarrel is not with Jews who are different but with Jews who are indifferent; not with Jews who wish to preserve and magnify certain aspects of the Jewish totality, but with Jews, such as they are, who would minimize if not destroy everything distinctly Jewish; not with Jews who would conserve and safeguard too much, but with Israelites who would preserve nothing save their own skins—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

OUTING

The boys and girls of the Jewish Orphanage of Rhode Island were the guests Tuesday of a group of interested friends at Narragansett Pier.

The children left the Home at 9:30 o'clock by bus. Upon their arrival at the Pier they were greeted by the arrangements committee, comprising Mrs. Benjamin Brier, Miss Hazel Priest and Mrs. Michael Tieman.

Following a chicken dinner, which was excellently served at Mittler's Restaurant, the youngsters went on an exploring expedition to the "Rocks," in the course of which the beauties of Narragansett Pier were revealed. Later they proceeded to the beach, where swimming, jumping the breakers and playing in the sand filled the afternoon. The day closed with ice cream, cake, drinks and candy previous to the return home.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD by GEORGE JOEL

LEONARD DOES COMEBACK

He is a middle-aged gentleman, 37 years old, his hair is thin on top. Around his abdomen the ravages of age have left their mark, his legs are a trifle too round, but his eyes are alert, his arms are graceful and he has confidence. It is Benny Leonard, I am trying to describe, the Leonard that was lightweight champion of the world and one of the greatest men of his weight in the game. Just about a year ago he decided to make a return to the ring. Of course the public announcements were to the effect that he was ambitious to bring fistic fame back to the Jewish race, but everybody knew that Benny needed money and nobody blamed him for trying to get some. He indulged in a number of preliminary bouts. His showing was none too good, boxing commissions in three states barred him from the ring on the grounds that he was not able to perform creditably. However, Benny kept going. He regained some of his old skill and won a number of fights. Finally he was given his first big test. It took place some days ago in New York City where he met Billy Townsend, one of the better welterweights.

The fight went the entire distance, ten rounds. At first Benny was timid and seemed to have trouble getting his distance, but as the bout progressed, he gained confidence and then gave the much younger man a boxing lesson. A crowd of 10,000 sat enthralled by the spectacle. They were with him almost to a man. When the final bell had rung and the referee announced Benny the winner, a shout went up that could be heard for miles. Benny had come back.

One fight doesn't make a championship and how the idol of the Jews will do against the top-notchers is questionable, but Benny did show that he is still head and arms above the average fighter. It is true that he is not as fast getting away from blows as he once was and he has lost some of his speedy footwork, but he still has his head and a creditable pair of hands.

The future looms active and bright for Leonard. He wants a shot at Jimmy McLarnin and even if he loses the fight should gross a $100,000 even in these times. A bout was offered Benny with Jackie Fields, ex-welterweight champion, but all depends upon the result of an eye operation undergone by Fields.

As I said in this piece a few paragraphs back, Benny is after the dough. His financial plight is the same as that of so many business men. Unlike the usual run of fighters, Benny was never a high stepper. He did not go in for the night club, women or liquor circuit. He invested his money in real estate, business and professional sport, but alas he suffered with the rest of us. I am sure every sportsman in America wishes him luck in his attempt to put himself back to where he was.

CHATTERINGS

Marco Hecht won the New York State Junior Singles Championships at Syracuse last week.

Rosenfeld of the Brooklyn Dodgers has finally made the grade and will play a position in the outfield regularly.

Mr. Rosenberg from far-away Latvia is representing that country in the current Olympic games. The large gentleman is a weight thrower.

Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion of the moment, is continuing his battle against the depression by fighting all comers in any spot that a ring can be rigged and a crowd with change in its pockets can be found.

PATERSON JEW IS HONORED WITH OLYMPIC APPOINTMENT

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 12—(JTA)—Louis Berliner, chairman of the physical education committee of the local Y. M.-Y. W. H. A., was honored with an appointment as an official of the Olympic boxing teams at the Olympic tournaments now in progress on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Berliner, who is also Vice President of the New Jersey Amateur Athletic Union, was invited by the American Olympic teams to be among the officials.

Burial Ground Provided for Indigent Jewish Veterans

Jersey City, Aug. 12—(JTA)—Through the efforts of Jersey City Post of the Jewish War Veterans of America the Hudson County Board of Freeholders has purchased a piece of ground in a Jewish cemetery as a place for burial for deceased veterans whose families are indigent.

The plot is large enough to accommodate 50 graves. The county officials had already provided burial plots for indigent veterans of the Catholic or Protestant faiths, but up to now provision had not been made for Jewish veterans. It is announced that the veterans' post will beautify the plot, erect a fence and monument and dedicate it as a shrine for annual memorial services.

Find Mutilated Body of Paterson Jew on Roadside Between Berlin and Posen

Berlin, Aug. 12—(JTA)—Samuel Tallman, the American Jew, whose dead and mutilated body was found recently on a roadside between Berlin and Posen, was a resident of Paterson, N. J., the American Consulate informed the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Considerable space was devoted by the press to this case, which is termed mysterious. The conductor of the train and passengers were questioned, but have been unable to offer any clues as to what occurred. None heard a call for help or any cry.

The authorities have established that Tallman's luggage, believed stolen, at first, was shipped direct to Poland from Bremen. No hand luggage was found in his compartment.

(2) Our literature should be popularized. With much being spent in various centers for the education of the Jewish youth in communal Hebrew schools, with so much talk of the Jewish cultural background, etc., I, for one, have taken for granted that there exist in Hebrew and in Yiddish numerous writings, other than Biblical, which would be of keen interest to the world at large. I mean books with the universal appeal of such recent classics as John Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga," Knute Hansun's "Growth of the Soil," Oliver Lafarge's "Laughing Boy."

If we have produced literary masterpieces like these in our post-Biblical days, it is high time they be brought forth in the vernacular and given to the waiting world. Frankly, when I have asked our savants about this possibility, I have never yet received a satisfactory answer, but surely at some time in our post-Biblical history we must have developed some literature not entirely tragic but inspiring and ennobling otherwise I cannot conceive of the preoccupation of our savants with the tomes of our past. If this be so there are book of the month clubs and a wide public at large awaiting translations. And to be able to give to the world additional cultural contributions from the past would be of inestimable benefit to our cause. These contributions need not necessarily be in the form of novels. If they happened to be literary works along ethical lines, but quaint or charming or inspiring, our purpose would be equally well served.

(3) Literature at large and the stage should be cleaned up. The Jew plays the part of the stock villain to-

JEWISH YOUTH WINS FIRST AID CHAMPIONSHIP

Syracuse, Aug. 12—(JTA)—For the second time in a consecutive year, Gerald Jacobs, a Central High School student of this city, won from 400 selected experts from every part of the country who had participated in Los Angeles tests, the national first aid championship. Last year he won the title in Washington.

KURT PEISER NAMED TO POST ON SOCIAL AGENCIES COUNCIL

day still in an appalling number of new books. When I read some of these characterizations, I am astounded at the meagerness of experience with Jews on the part of some of our popular authors. It is our fault as much as theirs. We should contact such people and bring them up to date.

On the stage, men like Eddie Cantor and George Jessel can be hilariously funny, but they sometimes get their laughs from an overdone scene of cowardice reflecting distastefully on their whole people. We are not big physically as a people, but in the popular idiom we are "mighty tough" little people as is evidenced, for instance, by numerous Jewish champions in the prize ring. Our comedians should be able to get their laughs without material slight to their background, and they should be taught to do this. The Irish, from their standpoint, have successfully cleaned up the boards. Why not we?

(4) Our physical development should be aided. If we were a more beautiful people, or if we were a more outstandingly sturdy physical stock, our tale would be assuredly different. A vicious circle extending over centuries has entered in here. We can cultivate as a people a little more the ideal of physical perfection. The easiest road to this end is to encourage sports among our young people, and in particular to aid Jewish athletes of promise in college and elsewhere.

It is remarkable to note in well-born people the preoccupation of adults with sports. We can improve our position and increase the respect of the public at large for us by developing ourselves in this direction, nor need this be regarded as a trivial and superficial effort. A healthy body does help to make a healthy mind. But there is a deeper underlying purpose.

(5) We should learn how to ask for our rights. For years we have protested either not at all or very slightly and ineptly the exclusion of Jews and Jewesses from certain college fraternities, city clubs, country clubs and hotels. The longer this indignity is tolerated, the greater it becomes. It would surprise many of us to learn how much can be accomplished along these lines by speaking up when the speaking is done by influential, socially-experienced Jews who are entitled to every courtesy. Too often those among us of this description dodge this issue or complain merely in private about it. This issue should be fought out, if not in the open, at least determinedly and directly by those among us best qualified to handle each individual situation. I have seen in several instances successful results from a direct approach of this kind. The Anglo-Saxon is fair-minded as a rule. Our American composite citizenry fundamentally most certainly is. We should insist on our rights without hesitation in all cases.

THE RIGHT TOUCH

By NINA KAYE

Seated at his mahogany desk in the private office of the bank he had founded, Benjamin Hertzog realized that he was in love.

Benjamin Hertzog was a clever man. He was inclined to put it modestly and say he did not think with the mob. To this he owed his success in life, the fact that he had weathered 1929 and that he had been for twenty years a widower with a motherless boy and had avoided all entangling alliances.

And now he was in love. A finger sought the mother-of-pearl buzzer at his right, the door opened and a slim young girl with blue eyes and an aura of golden hair about her young face came into the room, her note-book open. She smiled and slipped into the chair beside the desk, head bent over the note-book, her pencil poised.

For a breathless moment Benjamin watched the tendrils of fair hair at the nape of her neck. How he longed to take her in his arms and tell her he loved her! How he would like to replace the pale green dress she wore with a white, hand-knitted sport suit, with tiny touches of pink to emphasize her fragile beauty! There were diamonds and pearls in the safe behind his head only waiting to be reset and restrung for her adornment.

But Benjamin was a clever man. He wasn't going to do what other men would do, he didn't think with the mob. Another man would have taken her to lunch, sent her flowers, taken her to dinner, the theatre, a night club. That is, if she were the undesirable kind of girl who would have gone with him. If she were the kind of girl Betty Milman was, she would have stared at him with terrified eyes, shaken her head and disappeared into the great unknown city where he would never be able to find her. No, another man's way was not the way for him.

He puffed reflectively at his cigarette. Miss Milman raised her head inquiringly and Benjamin found himself gazing into her liquid blue eyes that still had in them the laughter of childhood. They made him remember he was forty-five and she little more than twenty.

But what was forty-five today? He felt as young as he ever did, he was lean and lithe and athletic. He didn't want to grow old, he'd never be old. Didn't Danny say he was the best pal ever a son could have? Being Danny's pal, playing with Danny's collegiate crowd, had kept him young. He would stay young by always having youth about him. Danny was through with college, he would marry some day and go off. But Benjamin wouldn't be left alone, warming aged limbs by the fire. Married to Betty he would always have youth near him.

Miss Milman was waiting for him to dictate. Instead, he ground out his cigarette and leaned forward in his chair. "Decided on a place to spend your vacation yet, Miss Milman?"

She shook her head. "No country for me this year, Mr. Hertzog. I've promised myself a visit to the aquarium and Luna Park and Jones Beach."

A shadow passed over his face. "Oh, don't pity me," she said. "I'm going to have loads of fun. I never get a chance to do those things. And I really like it."

Looking at her laughing face, Benjamin could almost believe her. "Save those things for when you're older and want to find your youth again," he said sternly. "My sister has ordered me to bring you down to our place for a week or so. You know how big the place is and there's no one there but Martha and Danny and whatever friends he's got on his list for this week. Can you be packed by 8 this evening? I'm driving down. Or, better, you can come down on the noon train tomorrow. Don't worry about clothes. We all live in our bathing suits."

When she had left the room, walking as if the floor had become a great balloon, Benjamin called his sister. "I'll be down tonight Martha," he said shortly. "Get the blue bed room on the second floor ready for my secretary, Miss Milman. She's coming down tomorrow. I don't care who's in there now," he snapped. "Throw him out!"

Starved little thing, that's what she was. Only it was good times she was starved for instead of food. Out on the vine-hung veranda, smoking his after-dinner cigar, Benjamin listened to Betty's laughter floating out through the casement windows.

Tilting his chair back, he could see her, slim and young in a white dress that sheathed her like an inverted lily. Her back against the radio, her hands were flung out, her head thrown back, her eyes closed as she swayed to the music. Gathered near her, held by the silken net of her joyous laughter, were Danny and his friends, Alf and Cressida Williams, with her flame-colored hair and her too-sophisticated air.

"She'll never want to go back now," Benjamin confided to his cigar. "This week has meant too much to her. No wonder she's tried to gobble it all in, like a waif at a charity dinner. Whew, she has been going some! I couldn't keep up with her. Dancing until dawn and off with Danny for a canter before breakfast. Of course, when she realizes she won't have to give it all up and go back to the office, she won't have to cram every minute full of excitement. Perhaps she's already slowing down. Tonight, when I suggested staying here, she seemed willing enough."

He sniffed the delicate odor of the wistaria. "I can't expect her to love me," he murmured, "not at first. But if she were out here with me now, I'd—I'd ask her."

As if in answer to his thoughts, he saw Betty disengage herself from the group and come to the open window. "Out there all alone, Mr. Hertzog?" she called, her voice soft as a caress.

"Enjoying the evening, Betty," he said. "Come out and enjoy it with me."

She came readily, turning to wave to those in the room. Like a nestling kitten, waiting for someone to pet it, she curled up on a hassock beside his chair.

"I wasn't telling the truth, Betty," he spoke when she had settled herself. "I wasn't paying the least attention to the evening. I was sitting here, watching you in there and thinking how lovely, how very lovely you were."

"Don't make me blush," Mr. Hertzog said.

"I really was. And I was thinking how much fonder I'd grown of you. Don't you think people learn to like each other more quickly in the country?"

"Yes, I do," she said, her words a little rush like a whisp of breeze. "It's terribly hard not to fall in love in the country."

A great mound of confidence welled within Benjamin. He had been right. All that was needed now was the right word, the right touch.

"Watching you in there," he said, "I realized how much I'd missed by not having a daughter. You know—"

He would have gone on, but a rippling laugh interrupted him. A soft hand was laid over his on the chair arm.

"I'm so glad you feel that way, Mr. Hertzog," she whispered joyously. "I am your daughter. Danny and I were married this morning."
