Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Bye-Bye, Depression

I see by a writer in the paper that the depression is over. It's too bad. I wish it had lasted at least another week, so I could tell the story that just came to me. Not so boiling, perhaps, but it deserves its niche in the stories of the depression.

Perhaps you have heard it. The one about Mr. Cohen, who always took off his hat when you asked him about his underwear business.

"What's the matter, Mr. Cohen, why do you remove your hat, when I ask you if you are selling much of your fine underwear, and how your business is?"

"I always remove my hat, when I talk of the dead," replied Mr. Cohen.

Suffered From Name

It was a great little old depression while it lasted. On the whole, I don't think, it was as bad as we made it out to be. It seems to me there was a lot of good in it, and really the worst thing about it was its name. We should have called it after the fashion of the ancient Jews—a jubilee, instead of a depression. A sort of return to former things.

And we should have carried out the depression idea more completely. What do I mean by that? Well, let me see if I can make myself clear.

Well, now, the papers say that the price of foodstuffs has gone back to that of 1913. Other things have likewise gone back. United States Steel went back in the recent depression to the price in 1861 and A. T. & T. to the price level in 1776.

Back to Other Levels

Now why should we only go back in price levels? I favor a general going back—to bicycles, instead of automobiles; to full-grown beards instead of Gillettes; to slot meters instead of electricity; to long skirts, instead of loin cloths, and the old oaken bucket instead of Coca Cola.

Rockefeller's Idea

Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., had the right idea. He has set aside a great fund to keep an old colonial city in Virginia—I believe it is Williamsburg—preserved in all of its old state.

Most of man's troubles, I am convinced, are due to his constant going forward. If he went back, he would find the peace and happiness that his soul longs for.

Back to Nature

The same idea, of course, has been expounded by many philosophers. Notably Rousseau, in his back-to-nature doctrine. In a state of nature, Rousseau found his ideal. Go back to the Indian days, and you will find the Indian solved his rent problem very simply. He just denied the right of ownership to land, and squatted wherever he saw fit. The great store house of nature was his grocery store, and the price of commodities was never dependent on the amount of gold that the Cherokees or the Mohawks had.

And did you ever hear of an Indian needing an ultra-violet lamp to give him a sun bath, or did you ever hear of an Indian going to a Freudian psychoanalyst to get cured of an inferiority complex, or of an Indian taking Christian Science treatments and saying every morning to himself: "God is good—there is no evil—I must not worry"—every morning before breakfast?

COL. JOSEPH SAMUELS ELECTED FELLOW OF DENTISTS' COLLEGE

President of Outlet Company Given Recognition for Devotion to and Interest in Cause of Dentistry

Colonel Joseph Samuels, President of the Outlet Company, has been elected a fellow of the American College of Dentists and will be invested at the next convocation of the college next winter.

His election is in recognition of his "devotion to and interest in the cause of dentistry." The college was organized about ten years ago and has a membership of about 450 members of the dental profession. It is the aim of the college to give recognition to laymen who contribute to the needs of the dental profession.

Colonel Samuels is the donor of the $300,000 buildings and endowment fund which made possible the children's dental clinic at Rhode Island Hospital. At the dedication of the clinic, named for him, Colonel Samuels was lauded by the dental profession here and elsewhere and acclaimed as an outstanding contributor to human welfare.

The Samuels clinic is one of only four of its kind in the United States and the only one that has an independent building associated with a general hospital.

DR. ENGLANDER TO PREACH AT BETH-EL FOR HIGH HOLIDAYS

President Brown Makes Announcement; Comes Here Pending Appointment of Successor to Rabbi Gup

Dr. Henry Englander, through whose efforts the Temple was built twenty years ago, will return to Temple Beth-El for the High Holidays, Sept. 30, Oct. 1, 2 and Oct. 9, 10, President Charles C. Brown of the congregation announced today. Dr. Englander fills in pending appointment of a successor to Rabbi Samuel M. Gup, who resigned early this summer to accept a call in Columbus, Ohio.

Spiritual leader of the congregation for about five years, Dr. Englander is widely known in Providence for his work in guiding the Temple through the early stages of its growth and in laying out the program for its ultimate expansion.

He was appointed an instructor at Brown University while taking graduate courses and later was awarded a doctor's degree in philosophy. He left this city regretfully, vowing he would never accept a Rabbinate elsewhere, but yielding to his greatest love—that of teaching. Dr. Englander now is Professor of Medieval Jewish Exegesis at Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati.

"I am certain that I speak for the officers and the entire congregation," Mr. Brown declared, in his announcement, "when I say that we are elated to have Dr. Englander back with us even though his return must be temporary and only for the High Holidays. He was the foremost pioneer in Temple Beth-El's history and it will be a pleasure to show him how we have grown with the impetus he gave us at the start."

"I know," Mr. Brown further stated, "that Dr. Englander would not accept a call for the Holidays in any other congregation in the United States, but he yielded because of his love for the local congregation where he received his greatest inspiration for his life's work."

JACOB FRIEDBERG, DETROIT ZIONIST LEADER, DIES; AGE 69

Detroit, Sept. 23—(JTA)—Funeral services were held recently for Jacob Friedberg, Honorary President of the United Hebrew Schools of Detroit and for many years a leader in Zionism, who died at the age of 69 after a prolonged illness.

Coming to Detroit thirty-five years ago from Cleveland, he has been an outstanding figure in Jewish activities and was especially active in all Zionist endeavors and in the Hebrew Schools.

HOME FOR THE AGED SIUM HATORAH TO BE HELD SUNDAY AT 2:30

Torah to be Installed With Impressive Ceremonies in Charge of Charles Silverman and Committee Assisted by Orthodox Rabbis

The Jewish Home for the Aged, 99 Hillside avenue, will hold a Sium Hatorah, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 25, at 2:30 o'clock, at which time a Torah will be donated by Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Datz.

The ceremony will be carried out under the supervision of the Orthodox Rabbis of the city and will be most impressive and interesting. It will be particularly significant as Sunday is the first day of Slichoth, which ushers in the period of preparation for the High Holy Days.

In accordance with tradition, most Jewish people will visit the cemeteries in the morning and the Sium Hatorah affords the opportunity to complete the day of honoring the dead, by inscribing letters as initials of the departed into the new Torah. Such a memorial is considered everlasting by the Rabbis.

The committee in charge comprises George Samperil, chairman; Charles Silverman, Isaac Wolf, Rabbis H. D. Bachrach, O. Werner, J. Werner, I. Bick and I. Schisgal of Pawtucket.

PLANS UNDERWAY FOR RE-OPENING OF BEZALEL SCHOOL

Group of Friends of Late Professor Schatz Contemplate Making It a Public Institution

Jerusalem, Sept. 23—(JTA)—The Bezalel School of Arts and Crafts, founded by the late Prof. Boris Schatz, owing to lack of funds, will be re-opened as a public institution, according to plans now in the process of formulation.

This information is divulged in a letter received from Henrietta Szold by Mrs. Eli Daicher, director of the Friends of Bezalel in Chicago.

After the death of Prof. Schatz, several meetings were held in Palestine of the founders, the members and the contributors to Bezalel, as well as the representatives of several public institutions, Mrs. Szold wrote. The purpose was to find a way of continuing the activities, with the result that a Committee of the Bezalel Society was formed, headed by Dr. Lurie, the Acting Director of the Jewish public schools of Palestine. Dr. Sapier, was temporarily appointed manager of Bezalel.

A second committee was formed, consisting of the teachers of the former Bezalel School, also under the chairmanship of Dr. Lurie, for the purpose of elaborating a plan for the re-opening of the school. The committee entered into negotiations with the various groups of "Friends of Bezalel," which have been formed in various countries, especially in the United States, in order to influence them to renew their activities for the good of the institution. Another step was taken by the Chairman, who applied to the Education Department of the government to grant an annual subsidy for the maintenance of the school.

The activities of the society, the library, the museum, the picture gallery and the workshops, are housed in buildings registered in the name of the Keren Kayemeth.

Under the arrangements contemplated the revived school will be a public institution under the management of the committee. The Jewish National Fund has promised a certain sum of money for the repair of its buildings as soon as the committee shall be confirmed officially.

Casablanca, Sept. 23—(JTA)—Demolition of the old ghetto here has begun in the interests of sanitation.

The authorities have been prevailed upon to sanction the demolition following a vigorous campaign in the Jewish press.

Provocative Analysis is Offered of Position of Rabbi in America

Rabbi Mortimer J. Cohen of Philadelphia Poses Pertinent Questions to Rabbinate on Its Place in U. S. Jewish Communities

Philadelphia, Sept. 23—(JTA)—What is the position of the Rabbi in the life of the American Jewish community. Is he a teacher, a preacher, a scholar, a business manager, a money raiser, a social worker? Is his hunger for publicity justified? Is it not natural under the circumstances that he should become a prima donna, careerist?

Rabbi Mortimer J. Cohen, former President of the Philadelphia Branch, United Synagogue of America, and of the Philadelphia Board of Jewish Ministers, and Rabbi of Congregation Beth Shalom, poses these pertinent questions in a provocative analysis of the American Rabbinate, in an article published, exclusively in the "Jewish Exponent."

"The thoughtful Rabbi faces these difficult days distressed," Rabbi Cohen declares in this article. "His distress is not principally material—though he is not escaping that—his distress is from inside himself, in his soul, spiritual. Deep down he feels an ache that torments him, for that ache is symptomatic of the decay of his life's foundations. He is weighted down with a disheartening sense of the unreality of his work, an unreality that stamps his profession as futile and himself as negligible. He is beset with the haunting fear of a lost personality; he doesn't know who he is, or what purpose, as Rabbi, he serves."

"Not that the Rabbi only today has discovered this inner uncertainty about himself. He has been aware of it for many years, but the post-war prosperity, with its feverish activities, pressed down the lid upon his inner questionings. Today, however, the outer noises are silenced, and up from the depths come the inner voices, tortured and torturing. Insistently they demand that the Rabbi know himself. 'Rabbi, What Are You?'"

Characterizing the present day critics of the Rabbi as inadequate and superficial, Rabbi Cohen maintains that it is unfair to consider these criticisms lightly. "Baiting the Rabbi may bring huge amusement to the crowd," Rabbi Cohen declares, "and fat royalties to the critics, but it brings no permanent gaiety to the Jewish scene."

Under the general caption, "Rabbi, What Are You?" Rabbi Cohen analyzes the various aspects of the ministry and points to the lack of definition from which the Rabbi labors.

In answer to the question, "Is the Rabbi the business manager of the Synagogue?" Rabbi Cohen says: "The Synagogue represents a large investment of funds. To be sure there is a board of directors. We often hear board members speak of the synagogue plant in terms of a factory. Like a factory it has its overhead expenses; it has its labor force—choir, teachers, religious functionaries, janitors; it must also have its manager. Is the Rabbi the money raiser for this religious factory? Must he organize balls, bazaars, banquets, drives, to raise funds? Must he create schemes by which to snare the unwary dollar?"

"Is that the Rabbi? That is what large numbers of Rabbis must do today."

Touching upon the educational aspect, Rabbi Cohen adds, "Education is a highly technical field of human activity. Not only are these techniques to be mastered, but also, since the techniques are the results of certain theories, the theories too must be studied and understood and evaluated. Is the Rabbi to be a technician of this type? Both in general and Jewish education, because of the developments in psychology and its discoveries about the learning process in man, education has created the specialist—the educator. Is the Rabbi to be the educator?"

Continuing, he says: "This absence of a clear understanding of the place of the Rabbi in Jewish life today has given rise to grievous results both in the attitude of Rabbis to themselves and in the attitude of the Jewish community toward the Rabbi."

"On the Rabbi this overwhelming uncertainty of function produces definite psychological effects which become more apparent as the Rabbi possesses greater personal ability."

"The Rabbi becomes a careerist. Whereas ideally he is the servant of a great cause in whose ranks he enlists to fight, willing to make sacrifice for it, realistically he finds himself facing the uncertainty of his task. He finds the service of his cause is lost in a multitude of activities for which he has not been trained. He finds himself overwhelmed by the demands of a congregation that itself does not know what it seeks in its 'spiritual leader.' In dismay, he seeks some one steady factor in his immediate environment, and finds his own needs and wants and desires to be most permanent and stable. He becomes the cause he serves, and unconsciously or consciously becomes the man who seeks to achieve a career. His attitude to his work becomes that of the average man towards his job. He begins to accept the standards of the careerist. He measures himself and his colleagues in terms of the rewards of career, money and power. He may have silent admiration for his more pious colleague, or his more scholarly colleague, but that admiration is mingled with a certain contempt for the colleague's poor salary and his lowly position. He will not, if he can help it, leave the big cities where his power can find field in which to play and where the publicity is city-wide, even nation-wide. He wants no modest corner in which to do God's work—such corners are symbols of the unsuccessful, or but temporary stopping places on the high-road to prestige and place and power. Legitimate ambition aside, does not the careerist spirit in the Rabbinate betoken a defect deeper than an individual's character? Does it not show forth a fundamental trend of circumstance in which the Rabbi is victim, driven by forces that stand beyond him?"

"Another trait of the Rabbi in consequence of his lack of bearings in the seas of Jewish life is found in the psychology of the prima donna that develops in him."

"The Rabbi, shifting his center of gravity from outside him to himself, is possessed by the spirit of the prima donna. He is jealous of his center stage position. He wants the spotlight in the community, and his self-concern is a rock upon which much communal unity and Jewish endeavor have been shattered. Where there is an opportunity to shine—regardless of another's better equipment for the purpose—the prima donna rules and becomes an obsession, it is pathologic and is revelatory of empty realms within."

A Binding Obligation

By BERNARD M. GOLDOWSKY

QUESTION: Why the strong emphasis on putting away a nickel a day for a couple of tickets for the Jewish Home for the Aged Ball that will take place at the Biltmore Hotel, Christmas.

ANSWER: Because every Jew in our State is extremely anxious to do his part in helping to provide a home and sustenance for the feeble and helpless Zakaynim and Zakaynos, but the prolonged depression has left many of us former millionaires with very long faces and mighty short bank balances. Hence methinks that we shall shelve our pride and PUT AWAY A NICKEL A DAY for those couple of tickets.

In a previous statement I announced that I am "staging a comeback." In other words, I shall attempt to make the Ball of the Jewish Home for the Aged a worthy successor to the former Ball of the Jewish Orphanage.

Past experience has taught me that there is but one way to make success inevitable and that is, giving the public its money's worth. Don't depend wholly on sentimentality, but present an entertainment, the musical and novel features of which shall linger in the memories of its patrons until the next one is given. The public is always demanding novelties and, believe me, dear cousins, when you see the program of this coming ball you will agree with my wife that I am a "wonder."

At present I am constrained to withhold full particulars out of consideration for the sponsors of a ball for another worthy purpose that will precede this one.

In due time, however, the Moshov Zakaynim fireworks will, in the language of Kaiser Wilhelm, "begin to commence."

But in the meantime take the advice of a Talmud Cochoim (L'Havdel) and PUT AWAY A NICKEL A DAY for a couple of tickets.

P. S. I shall need an army of volunteer workers and I am a good "Boss," so rally to my standard at once.

Volunteers, please 'phone me, Gaspe 8157.

Cantor Igor Gruenberg to Again Officiate During High Holidays

Cantor Igor Gruenberg of Vienna, Austria, who officiated last year on the High Holiday Services at the Ahavath Sholom Synagogue, has been re-engaged for this season.

Cantor Gruenberg attracted last year a large crowd from the entire state of Rhode Island, and the Board of Directors unanimously voted to invite him again this year.

During his stay in Europe he sang in the leading opera houses in Austria and Czechoslovakia. He will leave the United States the day after Yom Kippur, Tuesday, Oct. 11, to fulfill his contracts in Vienna.

On Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, Cantor Gruenberg and the entire choir will officiate at the Slichoth Services in the Synagogue. No cards will be necessary for admission.

The officers of the congregation are Philip Abrams, President; Louis Ganz, Vice President; Nathan Davis, Treasurer, and Abraham Linder, Secretary.

FREE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Any boy or girl, between the ages of six and fifteen, if for any reason cannot attend the regular Hebrew School sessions, may register for the Jewish History Class.

A regular Sunday School curriculum has been prepared by the Principal, Samuel S. Cohen, and a large enrollment is expected as the admission is free of charge to everyone who is desirous to acquaint himself or herself with our great past.

HOURS OF SERVICES

The Slichoth will be said Sunday morning, Sept. 25, at 6 a. m., by Cantor Gruenberg. The Rosh Hashonah services follows: Friday, Sept. 30, at 6:30 p. m., Sunday, Oct. 1, at 7 a. m., Shacharith, and at 7 p. m., Maariv; Sunday, Oct. 2, Shacharith at 7 a. m., and Tashlich at 5 p. m.

REGISTRATION

Postal cards have been mailed out to all former pupils of the Ahavath Sholom Hebrew School, as well as to a number of possible candidates, to register for the ensuing year. A satisfactory number have immediately applied for admission. Many more candidates are expected to do likewise this Sunday morning between 9 and 12.

Harold Lloyd at the Paramount Theatre

The bespectacled "Monarch of Mirth," Harold Lloyd, is at it again. And this time he's Movie Crazy, at the Paramount Theatre. This comedy sensation of the year brings a new Harold Lloyd—a better Harold Lloyd—a Harold Lloyd that can act as well as clown—a Harold Lloyd that will make you cry one minute and then have you splitting your sides with laughter the next—a Harold Lloyd that's better than ever!

And talk about laughs, Movie Crazy will practically have you in hysterics. There is sustained laughter that's actually checked at seventeen minutes. Just imagine a series of hilarious situations that will keep you chuckling for seventeen minutes without a single let-up. But that is just a seventeen minute run. There's hardly a single let-up in the entire picture. You just begin to relax from one laugh, when another bit of wild comedy rocks you out of your chair.

Harold Lloyd is supported by an excellent cast, headed by Constance Cummings. Constance is his best lead since Bebe Daniels. A most interesting fact about Harold Lloyd's leading ladies is that they all seem to win success on the screen. Bebe Daniels, Mildred Davis, Jobyna Ralston and Barbara Kent are the outstanding examples.

Constance Cummings is his latest leading lady and has already made a favorable start in her climb to success.

Kenneth Thomson, Spencer Charters and Louis Closser Hale make up the rest of the principles in an excellent cast. Movie Crazy is under the superb direction of Clyde Bruckman.

Movie Crazy is one of the first releases of Paramount's New Era Pictures. It took two years to complete, but it was worth it. It raises the "King of Funsters" to new dazzling heights. Movie Crazy will make you forget your troubles and bring on a whirlwind of merriment. Don't miss it!

COMMUNITY, NOT UNIFORMITY

Not long ago a shrewd commentator wrote an article in which he condemned the superficial sentimentality of the recurrent editorials which treat of amity between Jews and Christians. With all due consideration to the commentator, and taking full cognizance of the fact that not all editorials can be forged with the passionate artistry of an orthodox sermon, we feel that the critic of such editorials must have lacked an understanding of their importance. Perfect utterances are rare in any language; and that explains our completely imperfect understanding of our fellows. All modern thought, however, served to inform us that the intelligent man's objective is to try to understand; but if he fails in that, then must he try to tolerate in silence.

As it happens, there have never in history been difficulties among people who understood one another. It is when misunderstanding and prejudice run rampant that trouble begins. The Puritan movement of the seventeenth century was not in itself a wholly opportune nor yet a wholly unnecessary force; but it brought a temporary disaster because neither opposing groups saw any possibility of an existence side by side. American democracy has proved that the striving of a free people has brought about that kind of civilization where different groups may live side by side in community rather than in uniformity. Although not specifically attained everywhere and in all circumstances, this ideal of community has been a potent one in the last few decades.

Most effective in teaching and forming valuable lessons in racial friendship has been the National Conference of Jews and Christians. During the past year, this organization has conducted experiments in the public schools in order to determine how good-will might be emphasized as a by-product in schooling. It has also been making a study of the materials used in Sunday schools, in order to determine their intrinsic value as agents for understanding in children. Perhaps the most significant activity of the conference was the three-day Washington seminar in our Capital, one of the most important ventures in the field of human relationships. With this conference at Washington began the first openly recognized discussion of a problem heretofore randomly and insufficiently treated. The anti-Semitic propaganda sponsored by Hitlerism has made the work of the conference more and more necessary. The future will be safe for civilization only when an organized and intelligent world population is educated enough so that it may effectively frown on and discourage such displays as ignorance and barbarity and intolerance as are being shown in European countries today. Community rather than uniformity should be the watch of the age.

Have You Any Salt?

A friend of mine wrote a play and took it to a producer. The producer promised to read it over and finally did, and the author came to see him to get his verdict.

"It's a good play, ain't it," said the author, looking beamingly and interrogatively at the producer.

"Well," said the producer, "you don't happen to have any salt with you, do you?"

"Salt, what do you want salt for?"

"Well," said the producer, "I thought if you had some salt, we could eat this tripe."

Aren't We All?

And maybe you are saying what the producer said, about all this argument for bigger and better depressions.

I grant you—you may be right—it is tripe, but aren't we all, as they say.

Jewish Welfare Board Issues Booklet, "Woman In Jewish Law and Life"

The National Jewish Welfare Board parent organization for Y. M. H. A.'s, Y. W. H. A.'s and Jewish Community Centers, has issued a publication, entitled "Woman In Jewish Law and Life," by Emily Solis-Cohen, Jr. This booklet reviews the position of Jewish woman, her rights, privileges, obligations and existing disabilities. It should prove most helpful to groups and individuals, particularly women and girls, who are interested in undertaking a study of the role which woman played in the various periods of Jewish history.

The Jewish Publication Society of America, Philadelphia, Pa., has published the booklet for the Jewish Welfare Board.

The resolutions were not adopted. Gustav D. Golding, President of the Federation explained, "to deny any poor person the right to worship, but because of the common practice of a great many people who could afford to pay for the luxuries, but who demand admission to our religious institutions during the High Holydays and expect such institutions to be maintained throughout the year by their regular members."

Persons who are unable to purchase tickets will be given free tickets as long as they are available at various Temples, it was explained, upon application.

Choosing Podiatry as a Profession

In choosing a profession, the one thing every man or woman must bear in mind is, What is the outlook? Is the field limited? Does it lead into a blind alley?

There are fewer objectionable features, and more to commend the practice of Podiatry than in any other profession or semi-profession. Variety and fascination attach to the work, besides the joy that comes with doing something that relieves suffering and is beneficial to humanity. The time required for preparation and getting established is somewhat less than for other professions; the expense incurred more moderate.

Another advantage in following this vocation is the fact that the profession is still in its formative stage. For this reason there are unusual opportunities for progressive studios, conscientious men of the professional type.

No man taking up the study of Podiatry need fear a lack of opportunity when his course is completed. There is a scarcity of Podiatrists throughout this broad country, and in many Podiatrists' offices today opportunities are open for assistants. As such, a Podiatrist can develop a following, and eventually start for himself. The number of graduates from the Podiatry Colleges are insufficient to meet the demand.

The hours of work, which are regular, are, of course, determined by the individual practitioner; the man who has established his own office can make his hours to suit his own convenience. If he is employed by another Podiatrist, he will find that the hours are not as long as in many other callings.

Podiatry is not a means of earning a living with ease nor a haven for the indolent, but it does offer a reasonable competency without unusual sacrifices or hardship.

SPORTING WORLD

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

A Column of Only Yesterdays

Every year about this time I prepare a review of the sport happenings of the past twelve months. Despite my trigger, encyclopedic mind, I find that I must go to the back files and pour over columns that have already become just so much grist for the pulp mills. Last week I was rummaging around the file room looking for information, when I came across a bin, marked "Sport Columns." It was way down at the bottom of the shelves and filled with long multigraphed sheets. You're right, I couldn't resist the temptation. It was in June, 1925, that this sport column first appeared and I thought you might be interested in knowing some of the high-spots of Jewish sports that have occurred since that date.

In 1925, Coolidge was in office; he had defeated John W. Davis, and the country was enjoying the beginning of a wave of prosperity. Magazines had not yet begun to accept advertising copy picturing women smoking. The K. K. K. was still a national problem, calling for violent editorials in the Jewish press. Henry Ford was prosperous and very angry at the Jews. The Hakoah Soccer Club of Vienna had come to this country and given the game its first real impetus. Many of the boys remained here to form a professional team which won the National Soccer Championship three years later. Prize fighting was enjoying a prosperous season. Yale Okun, the heavyweight champ, was making a comeback, which ended a few years later with his permanent retirement. Benny Leonard had two years previously (1923) fought Tendler and had by this time given ear to a mother's plea and avowed he was through with the ring.

The radio was quickly becoming as important as the ice box, but broadcasting was done on a minor and softer though screechier scale. College football games were beginning to be spectacles for the masses. Jewish players were commencing to stick out in the public prints and Benny Friedman was to start his career at Michigan a few years later. John McGraw was clamoring loudly for a Jewish baseball star and other promoters were convinced that the certain way to cajole crowds through the turnstiles was to have Jewish performers. Sammy Bohn was playing with the Cincinnati ball club and Barney Dreyfus was the owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates. A young Chicago kid, named Sammy Alpert, captured the junior nationals amateur golf title and was not to be heard of again. Jews were forming country clubs in all sections of the country and everyone thought that our race would produce a group of golf and tennis champs. Julius Seligson was in high school and already showed promise that terminated in 1928, when he won the Intercollegiate singles title. A controversy over the Jewishness of Madame Lenglen, the French tennis star, was the space filler for the summer of 1925-26.

Andy Cohen was to make his entrance as the first Jewish big leaguer spotted in sport light. His one good season, charged with publicity his quick decline and subsequent shifting to the minor league, occupied the baseball attention of the Jewish fans for the next four years. On the track the Jews were watching "Truck" Miller of Harvard, sprinter, who won the Intercollegiate 100-yard title and was thought to be Olympic material. Miss Fanny Orsenfeld, Toronto girl, was running wild on the track and was one of the world's foremost female athletes. She went to the Olympics with the Canadian team and then seemed to disappear from the scene.

Another Hakoah tour was undertaken but this time the glamor of a foreign all-Jewish soccer team failed to stir up the imagination of the American public and the tour was but mildly successful, but some of the boys remained here and added to those already here from the previous tour found themselves able to form a professional team, which is still performing.

The Stock Market—it is now 1928—was slowly reaching a peak. Everybody thought they had money and spending was the rule. College endowments were bigger and the institutions were beginning to realize just how important a good football team was. Fred Singeton of Alabama was being considered for All-American honors; the Cornsweet boys at Brown University were teaching race tolerance at that school through the medium of the playing field. Anti-Semitism was at its lowest ebb. The Jewish press was prosperous and strong. Bigots were afraid to say things out loud and for a time it looked as though the millennium had arrived. And then came 1929, especially that warm, clear fall day, when the Stock Market did its famous swooning out. . . . But now I am too near the present and your imagination should carry you the rest of the way.

Chatterings

Goldstein is playing good ball for the Baltimore Orioles in the International League; Goldstein is pitching for the Detroit Tigers—but they are not even related. Just a couple of Jewish boys trying to make good with a baseball.

But twenty-five years ago Alta Weiss, a Jewish girl, then 18 years old, pitched a four-hit game against an Ohio semi-professional team, and in long skirts, too. (The gal). She must be 43 years old today. I wonder if she can still do it?

The Jewishness of Helen Jacobs, women's national singles tennis champ, is again under discussion. Miss Jacobs does not go under the Jewish banner, but one branch of her family is named Abrahams, and from good authority, I have it that the California girl is half Jewish.

A letter from Maurice Goodman of Washington, who tells me that an 11-year-old Jewish girl, named Sherry Frank, is playing tennis with a skill that has all the experts up in arms. I hope she is not just another child prodigy.

Ira Singer, the track star, failed to place in the K. of C. meet held in New York City last week.

I'll bet Chick Meehan, now coaching on the Catholic, Manhattan College, will have a Jew in his team by next season. He never coached a team that didn't have one.

No Jewish players qualified for the National Amateur Golf Championship, although four tried for a place.

Home for the Aged Assn. Donors' Luncheon Committee Meets

A meeting of the committee in charge of the Donors' Luncheon of the Jewish Home for the Aged was held last Thursday. The committee will suggest plans for procuring this amount to anyone interested.

The campaign will culminate in a luncheon to be held in January with covers for every donor. The affair will not only celebrate the termination of the campaign but the anniversary of the founding of the Ladies' Association, of the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Many novel plans are being employed by the members, including the sale of home-made preserves, mayonnaise, pastries, ties and tires.
