

Says Point System Used In Rating Home Buyers

DETROIT — "If a Jew belongs to Gentile clubs, it's a sign he's been accepted" and he might be able to buy a home in the suburban Grosse Pointes, says Paul Maxon, secretary of the Grosse Pointe Brokers Assn.

Maxon testified at a Michigan State Corporations and Securities Commission hearing on a point system used in rating prospective home buyers in the exclusive Pointes.

The hearing was ordered by State Atty. Gen. Paul L. Adams, who said the point system was "morally corrupt." Maxon testified in its defense. A score of 50 is accepted as a standard passing grade. A Jew would require 85 points. Negroes and Orientals are not rated at all.

The Point System

Maxon said a perfect score for both Jews and Gentiles is 100 points, but added that the points are spread differently for Jews in order to give more emphasis on churches, clubs and business associates.

He said the scoring system was adjusted for Jews because "they represent a special problem."

Maxon said a Jew who Americanized his name would get a better score than one who hadn't.

"If the name was for instance, Feingold, he would get zero. If it was Smith, he'd get four points," Maxon said.

Eminent Men Allowed

Eminent figures, regardless of nationality or race, might be allowed to move into The Pointes, Maxon said.

Beersheba Excavations Shed Light On Life of Underground Villages

TEL AVIV — Excavations of man-made caves in the Beersheba area have shed light on the life of an obscure tribe which thrived in a cluster of underground villages around 3500 B.C., 15 centuries before the patriarch Abraham settled in the Town of the Seven Wells.

Jean Perrot, a French archaeologist who recently completed the excavations, believes the "Beersheba Culture" was of a relatively high standard, far superior to contemporary Chalcolithic settlements in other parts of Palestine.

Evidence found during eight digging seasons shows that the ancient Beershebans were a peaceful community of farmers who smelted copper, stored grain in silos, made their clothes from hides, produced tools from bones and probably used salt from the Dead Sea to preserve their meat.

Their artists made beautiful ornaments and statuettes from ivory, stone, mother of pearl, turquoise and marble. One of Perrot's finds is a beautiful ivory figurine of a nude woman, probably a goddess of fertility. The statuette, named "The Venus of Beersheba," is a delicately shaped, headless body of a pregnant woman. Tireless searches have failed to produce the head.

Likened to Find in Egypt

The figurine is just over 4 1/2 inches long. The only comparable ivory statuette found in the Middle East is in Egypt.

"Ideals of feminine beauty apparently have changed very little in more than 5,000 years," the French archaeologist commented.

During excavations at Bir Abu Matter and neighboring Bir Es-Safadi, Perrot uncovered two villages dug by the ancients above the banks of Wadi Beersheba.

This is the earliest sedentary settlement so far found in the Negev, according to Perrot. In his view, a migration took place around 3500 B.C. and a tribe consisting of a few clans settled along Wadi Beersheba, where they lived in relative tranquility for two or three centuries.

No Signs of Violence

Then, suddenly, the caves were abandoned. There are no signs of war or destruction by violence. The silos were left intact as were some of the deities, useful tools, jars and pottery, and even the womenfolk's jewelry. As they left, they must have rolled slabs of stones over the entrances to their homes to seal them.

Everything points to the inhabitants' intention to return. But they never did. The site never was occupied again until the archaeologist penetrated its secrets more than 50 centuries later. Even now, no clue has been found to the reason for the troglodytes' move or for their failure to return.

The artificial caves which made up these underground villages were at varying depths under the surface. Some were as much as 16 feet or more deep.

Choose Joseph Levy As R. I. Jewish Man Of Year

Joseph K. Levy of Providence, general chairman and treasurer of the United Jewish Appeal for the past three years and a member of the Rhode Island Industrial Building Authority, has been selected Rhode Island Jewish Man of the Year.

Mr. Levy will be honored together with the Rhode Island Jewish Athlete of the Year, at the eighth annual banquet and sports awards night of the Rhode Island Jewish Bowling Congress, on Monday, June 6, at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Mr. Levy recently was elected vice president of the General Jewish Committee. He and Mrs. Levy are chairmen of the Diplomat Ball of the Israel Bond Drive.

Mr. Levy has served as vice chairman of the Rhode Island Advisory Committee on the Federal Civil Rights Commission, devoting his time to the housing problem.

Active in the charitable field for many years, Mr. Levy is chairman of fund raising for Saint Vincent de Paul Asylum, Providence; a director of the United Fund, Aurora Civic Association, Big Brothers of R. I., Inc.; Jewish Home for the Aged, and has been a Little League sponsor for many years.

POSTPONE MEETING

The 15th annual meeting of the General Jewish Committee of Providence, which was scheduled for last Monday night, was postponed out of respect to the Hassenfeld family, because of the death of Mrs. Leon Hassenfeld Mann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Hassenfeld. Postponement of the meeting at which Mr. Hassenfeld, retiring GJC president, was to be honored, was announced by Joseph W. Ress, president-elect.

Fulbright Discusses Problems With UAR President Nasser

CAIRO — Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark.) last week had a two-hour meeting with President Nasser of the United Arab Republic.

"We discussed all the problems of the Middle East area," said the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Asked about the New York picketing of the UAR ship Cleopatra which ended last week and an amendment to the U. S. foreign aid bill aimed against the UAR, Fulbright replied:

"I explained to President Nasser there are many trade unions

Labor Leaders Warn Picketing of Ships May Be Resumed

NEW YORK — Labor leaders warned last week that they would again picket Arab ships if the Arabs continued to discriminate against ships that do business with Israel.

At the same time AFL-CIO officials expressed satisfaction and assurance from Under Secretary of State Dillon that he would actually seek to end abuses of U. S. seamen in Arab ports. Their reaction was based on these factors, according to an article in the New York Post by Michael Levitas.

The issue of the Arab blacklisting policy and the "indignities" suffered by U. S. seamen had been brought to world attention.

The past policy of the State Dept. in tolerating the boycott had been brought out into the open and it would be difficult for the government to keep silent about it from now on.

The State Dept. has pledged to try to do something to end the discrimination which cost American seamen jobs, although nothing concrete as — or could be — promised immediately.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union who played a behind-the-scenes role in the talks, called it "a substantial victory. We should be grateful to Paul Hall, president of the Seafarers International Union, for his courage in highlighting the issue."

'Definite Assurances'

Dubinsky said that although "nobody was going to go to war" over the problem, "we have definite assurances that the State Dept. is going to take this very seriously. We pulled it out from under the rug and they can't stick it back under the rug again."

Last week, Hall called off his pickets from Pier 16 on the East River, where the Egyptian-owned ship Cleopatra had been stranded for three weeks, with this explicit warning:

"Should the State Dept. fail to give practical implementation to its assurances, we will have no other recourse but to resort to picketing."

That about summed up the reaction of several union leaders. They were constrained to accept the State Dept. pledges in good faith unless future events prove their hopes to have been misplaced.

In our country and it is difficult to control everything. However, I am glad this problem is finished and I hope our situation has become very clear."

Fulbright said Nasser was "most interesting in conversation."

Earlier, Fulbright conferred with Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi for an hour. A spokesman said Fawzi and Fulbright discussed relations between their two countries.

Before leaving for Jordan and Israel Fulbright plans to meet Nasser again.

R. I. SELFHELP

Rhode Island Selfhelp will hold its annual meeting on Wednesday at the Lindsey Tavern, 609 Smithfield Avenue, Lincoln. Dinner which will be served at 7 P. M. will be followed by the business meeting at 8:15 P. M. Officers and members of the board will be elected and installed. Mrs. Ludwig Katz is dinner chairman.

New Funeral Chapel Is Dedicated Sunday

Brief dedication services for the new memorial chapel of the Max Sugarman Funeral Home will be held this Sunday, May 22, at 12 noon at the chapel. The public is invited to attend.

Built as a memorial to Max Sugarman, the founder of the organization, it had been envisioned by Mr. Sugarman prior to his death in 1955.

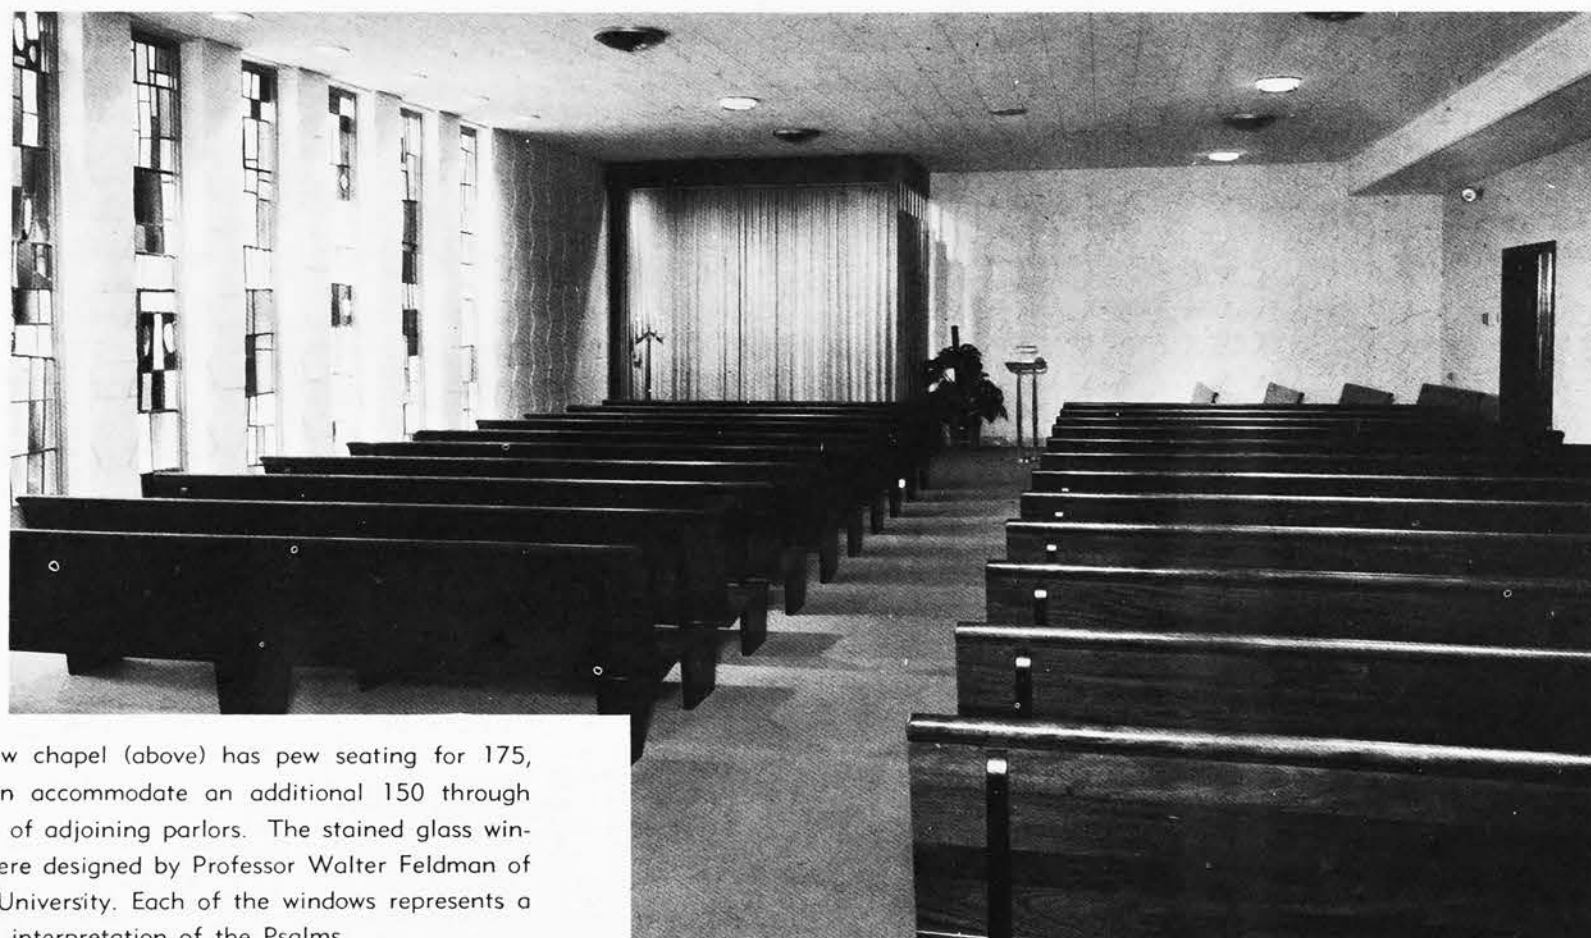

The new edifice, one of the most modern funeral chapels in the East, will enable his four sons—Calvin, Mitchell, David, and Louis—and his brother Rubin, who now direct the firm, to better serve the community.

The chapel marks another milestone in the history of the Max Sugarman organization, which has been known for over a half century throughout New England for efficient, dependable service.

The new chapel (above) has pew seating for 175, and can accommodate an additional 150 through the use of adjoining parlors. The stained glass windows were designed by Professor Walter Feldman of Brown University. Each of the windows represents a modern interpretation of the Psalms.

The Family Room (above), located off the right front of the chapel, is specially designed for the convenience and privacy of bereaved families. The seven stained glass windows dominate the modern and distinctive exterior (left).

Goldberg-Berman

Miss Sandra Sybil Berman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Berman of 121 Tenth Street, became the bride of Sheldon Irwin Goldberg, son of Mrs. Al Goldberg of 59 Eaton Street and the late Al Goldberg, on Sunday, May 15, at Temple Emanuel. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, assisted by Cantor Jacob Hohenemser, officiated at the 6 o'clock candlelight ceremony which was followed by a reception at the temple. Morris Goldberg, uncle of the bridegroom, was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory silk taffeta floor length gown with a princess line, empire waist and a portrait neckline of chantilly lace, studded with crystal sequins. The full skirt with matching taffeta bows attached to the back ended in a cathedral train. Her imported silk illusion veil fell from a crown of chantilly lace, studded with pearls. She carried a prayerbook with white orchids and stephanotis.

Matron of honor was Beverly Marcus, sister of the bride. Elaine Goldberg, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Flower girl was Elan Dale Marcus. The attendants wore blue cocktail length gowns and carried cascades of blue and white flowers.

Bernard Goldberg, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Samuel Berman, brother of the bride, Stanley Fishbein, Paul Saperstein, Lester Lyons, Robert Halpern, Bernard Sweet.

After a wedding trip to the Nevele Country Club, the couple will reside at 201 Angell Street.

White House Conference On Children and Youth

By Marlene S. Finn

The White House Conference was nearing its last day. Thursday morning, each state delegation conferred to evaluate the Conference, thus far and to discuss follow-up upon arriving home. Plans were made for a one-day R. I. Governor's Conference which was successfully held earlier in May.

No sooner had this session been adjourned, then we prepared for our long forum, in which we would act on all recommendations that were formulated by each work-group. After three-and-one-half hours, recommendations ranging from training volunteer leaders of organizations to securing adequate departmental aid for recreation in rural areas were passed. At this point, three-quarters of us were totally exhausted.

Youth, however, had its most vital role ahead, as the Youth Forum officially began at 8 P. M. Every ounce of energy was needed here, for such controversial issues as civil rights, our obligations as young citizens, and the gradual decline of family ties, were opened to the floor for heated debate. If nothing else, we gained a true cross-sectional viewpoint on each individual topic. At 11:30 P. M., several hundred proud youth marched out of the room — the majority of whom wore broad smiles.

Aside from the closing formalities, and an impressive speech delivered by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Arthur

S. Flemming the next day, the White House Conference was over. As delegates, our primary responsibility was to bring back all that we had learned to Rhode Island. For us, this was a difficult task, as we had accumulated a wealth of ideas and knowledge that must be presented through continuous efforts, on our part, in delivering speeches and participating in panel discussions. The success of our Conference in Washington can be determined only by the response of our citizens at home.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

Food Basket -- 1950, 1958, Today

As I went out the door of my apartment in New York City this past Saturday morning, I picked up the bottle of milk. When I returned from the grocery store a short while later, I carried a bag of eight typical food items: total cost of the milk and the food bag: $5.69.

Precisely two years ago this month, had I gone out the same door, picked up the milk, brought home a bag of the identical eight items, the total cost would have been: $5.70.

Precisely 10 years ago this month, had I gone out the same door, picked up the milk, come back with the identical bag of groceries, the total cost would have been: $4.90.

This is how I measure the trend in the cost of food between the spring of 1950 and this day--a period covering the Korean war, periods of prolonged boom, a couple of recessions, a virtually uninterrupted rise in the overall cost of living.

This is how I translate into terms that come clear to me and I trust to you the way the cost of a marketbasket of food climbed in the first eight years of the 1950's and has leveled off since.

On the Bureau of Labor Statistics' consumer price index--the only measurement we have of changes in our cost of living--the food index rose from 101.2 in 1950 to 120.3 in 1958 and now is at 117.7--an increase of 18.9 per cent in the first eight years, a decline of 2.2 per cent from 1958 to now.

But these statistics don't dramatize as does a simple tracing of the cost of a loaf of bread or a dozen oranges or a pound of butter what really has happened to food prices. Just to remind you, here are the prices of foods in my grocery bag as of May 1950, May 1958 and May 1960. Today's prices are those charged by my favorite store in lower Manhattan and undoubtedly differ from prices charged by your store (more on this below). But they're at least representative:

Bread, from 15 cents to 20 to 24 cents.
Milk, qt., delivered: from under 17 to 29.5 to 30 cents.
Round steak, lb.: from $1.01 to $1.13 to $1.19.
Oranges, doz.: from 50 to 79.5 to 75 cents.
Potatoes, 15 lbs.: from over 83 to over 73 to 79 cents.
Butter, lb.: from around 72 to 74 to 75 cents.
Margarine, lb.: from 30.5 to 31 to 35 cents.
Coffee, lb.: from 75 to 95 to 73 cents.
Sugar, 5 lbs.: from around 45.4 to 54 to 59 cents.

Even these simple prices for a little marketbasket don't tell the full story, though. For a first significant fact is that there now are startling variations in price trends from food to food. In earlier postwar years, the trend of just about every food was straight up.

A second significant fact is that there now are sensational differences in prices not only from neighborhood to neighborhood, but from store to store--even stores of the same type or calibre. The extent of the competition may be familiar news to many housewives, but I humbly admit that not until I went shopping in the role of a reporter as well as a housewife did I recognize how big some of the differences are. In our generation, the time-honored advice "shop the stores, shop the seasons, shop the sales" hasn't been as true as it is today.

A third significant fact is that the very abundance of foods permits money-saving shopping on a scale most of us never knew before.

And a fourth significant fact is that there is nothing in the outlook suggesting another takeoff in the price of food. A catastrophe on the farms or a war could change the picture, but neither is foreseeable. Rising prices in seasons--yes. We're into that now. But overall upsurges impelled by shortages, hoarding--no.

My food marketbasket's price trend is saying it plainly: the cost of living rises of this era are coming mostly in services--not in food, not in clothing, not much in housing now either.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Community Money Wasted

BY BERYL SEGAL

I know that my words will be like a voice calling in the wilderness. The committee has met. The board has approved. The deed is done for another year. The Allocations Committee of the General Jewish Committee has presented the list of organizations and agencies to receive grants for the year 1960. The list has been published, and nothing anyone will say will make a difference.

And yet I must speak. A member of the Board of Trustees of the General Jewish Committee said to me:

"You couldn't do a thing. It was decided and accepted, like every year, like the year before. They probably know what they are doing."

People who are small givers said to me:

"What do we care? We give because we wish to help Israel. If they take off a few cents of my dollar for other purposes, let them do it."

In both cases, the speakers referred to a "they." They decided. They take a few cents. Someone impersonal sits in the office and decides to whom to give and to whom not to give.

But this is not so. There is public opinion. There are newspapers who have been writing for the last year or so about the wastefulness of some agencies. There is no reason why all this should escape the Allocations Committee. Providence is insignificant in comparison with the big cities, but someone must start. Somewhere the beginning must be made. Why not here in Providence?

The very first thing to do is to cut out altogether the Defense Leagues. They are not necessary. They are wasteful. They are overlapping in their doings. They are as effectual as a summer hut against a tornado.

We give to the Joint Defense Appeal, $15,000.

We give to the American Jewish Congress, $3,500.

We give to the Jewish Labor Committee, $1,215.

We give to the Jewish War Veterans, $3,500.

And we give to the local Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith, $1,000.

All these agencies, by whatever name they are known, are doing the same thing. They defend us.

They appear whenever an incident happens and they investigate. They interfere with the work of the Government agencies, and they antagonize the local people among whom the incident happened.

This has been repeated in all the incidents that happened in the South, and is taking place with the wave of Swastika smearings everywhere. All the independent newspapers reported it. All the journals commented on it. And yet, they come and ask for money again and again, and the Allocations Committee obliges.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

BROADWAY GAZETTE

ROMANCE DEPT.: Olivia de Havilland was brought to El Morocco last week by her husband, Pierre Galante, the French newspaperman. At the entrance to the night club Miss de Havilland studied the French Foreign Legion uniforms worn by the doormen. Then she revealed that when Galante first wooed her, he met her at the airport in a car driven by an El Morocco doorman--and told her it was an honor guard for her from the French Embassy.

TRAVEL NOTE: Gregory Ratoff spent a few weeks in Honolulu. During his stay there a visitor asked him: "Mister, the name of this place--do you pronounce it 'Ha-why-ee' or 'Ha-vah-ee'?" Ratoff answered: "Ha-vah-ee." The visitor said: "Thank you" Ratoff replied: "You're very welcome."

LOST & FOUND: Thomas G. Corcoran, the Washington lawyer who's made almost $500,000 in fees for his help in the natural gas price increase cases, couldn't be found by the reporters anxious to question him. One of his friends said: "Corcoran has been eminently successful in being unavailable for 'No comment.'"

SOCIAL NOTE: An Academy Award-winning actress has a large collection of jewels, gifts from all her husbands. "But these jewelry pieces," she said, "were given to me not because of anything I did, but because of what other women did. Every time a husband of mine got involved with another woman, I wound up with a piece of jewelry." Then she pointed to six items she was wearing--and named the various other women who prompted each gift.

GIFT DEPT.: Abbe Lane, on the other hand, displayed a huge emerald ring she received from her husband, Xavier Cugat, after his opening in Buenos Aires. Miss Lane was asked if the ring had any special significance. "Certainly," she said, "It means I nagged him enough."

LABOR NOTE: Ed Morgan's broadcasts are sponsored by the AFL-CIO. The union's public relations man, Al Zack, was asked if the AFL-CIO tells Morgan what to say on his broadcasts. "We don't tell him anything," Zack insisted. "But suppose," he was asked, "Morgan broadcasts something which is counter to AFL-CIO policy? What do you do then?" "We gulp," said Zack.

TV DEPT.: Jackie Gleason was asked why he selected Jim Fisk as the character he will portray on TV next season. "Fisk was a big man," said Gleason. "And also, when I read his statement, 'As to the world, the flesh and the devil, I'm on good terms with all three'--I said to myself, Jackie, here's a man after your own heart."

This at a time when we here, in our local institutions, are pinching pennies. We waste $25,000, and we tell our local schools that we have no money for them, even if some will have to close their doors this coming year.

Add $25,000 to the budget of the Bureau of Jewish Education and you save the schools in the North End and in South Providence.

The Allocations Committee further approved sums for two organizations that have outlived their usefulness. They are names of organizations that were meaningful in their time, but have lost all reason for their existence now. It is not their own fault. The times are such that they find themselves without work and without function. They live in the past. And for this, the Allocations Committee granted the United Hias Service, $3,000, and the Refugee Service, $5,000. The sum of $8,000 to two useless agencies. There are no more immigrants coming in. The immigrants that came in have been absorbed into the community long ago. The only reason for the allocations of this money is that no one dared to ask WHY? No one bothered to look into the matter and to say ENOUGH!

These are not the only moneys given by the Committee to useless agencies. Look at the list and judge for yourself.

Now, you ask:

"The Allocations Committee is made up of responsible people. Wouldn't they know all this? Don't they read? Don't they think?"

That is exactly what I ask myself. I have the highest regard for every man on that committee. Why do they do it?

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

POLITICS: Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D., Me.) was invited by CBS to appear on its "Great Game of Politics." Muskie offered his own theory on predetermining Presidential elections: The candidate with more letters in his name always wins, he said. Roosevelt beat Hoover, Dewey and Landon; Truman beat Dewey, in a close race because Truman was only one letter up on Dewey; Eisenhower beat Stevenson. "And I," said the Senator, "could beat any living Republican, Nixon or Rockefeller, if my father hadn't changed his name from Marciszewski to Muskie."

PET DEPT.: A N.Y. dowager, carrying her toy poodle through Lord & Taylor, stopped at a water fountain in the rear of the store and had the poodle drink from it. A floor walker stopped her, "Madame, please. This water fountain is for the use of the customers..." "Oh, I beg your pardon," the dowager apologized. "I thought it was for the employees."

LOCAL NEWS: James Mason may star in the Broadway musical "Anatol"... Jimmy Roosevelt is negotiating with Arthur Murray for a TV shot similar to the Bob Hope roast, in tribute to Eleanor Roosevelt--with the $100,000 fee going to the hospital named for her... Ladies from four musicals will compete in the "Destiny Rides Again" gun-shoot in Shubert Alley at high noon this week... Henry Fonda's 19-year-old son, Peter, will make his stage debut as an apprentice at the Cecilwood Playhouse in Fishkill, N. Y., this summer.

Genius Unrequited

Last year the baseball writers of the American League voted Al Lopez the manager of the year. Al's team had won the pennant. In 1958 the managerial choice was Casey Stengel. His Yanks had won the World Series in a thrilling finish.

In the six or seven years prior to that it was Stengel most of the time, as his club won nine pennants in ten years.

But the manager who is easily the best in both leagues, in my forward opinion, at least, continues to go unrequited. Remembering last weekend's Boston debacle gives him away. He is Paul Richards.

They can say all they like that a manager is only as good as his material. With Richards it seems to be that the material always measures up to him.

The results that Paul gets out of pitchers, young and old, are strictly phenomenal. Where does he get his young ones? And how does he get so many of them? And how come they always are so uniformly effective against the giants of the league?

Richards comes up with a Class D Steve Barber, and salvages a Skinny Brown who has been thrown on the trash heap time after time. He takes a raw rookie like Willie Tasby, blends him with an overripe veteran like Gene Woodling, and mixes a magic potion. He trades away a star southpaw, and comes up with two better ones in his place.

I don't care who wins the pennant, and by how many games; but I consider it grossly unjust for this man to be ignored every year. True, he has never won a pennant. But given the same club Paul handled last year, could either Lopez or Stengel have kept it in third place almost all the way to the wire? Richards did.

Please remember that Paul Richards is managing what used to be the St. Louis Browns. And this club is battling seriously for the league lead!

I can't help wondering how the Yankees would have fared last year had Richards been at the helm . . . and whether the White Sox would have lost a couple of close pennant races to the same Yanks a couple of years back, had it been Richards and not Lopez pulling the reins.

I would like very much to see Paul Richards get a chance to handle a top-rated ball club some year, instead of one of his perennial supposed weak sisters.

Above all, I wish I had a vote in the balloting for manager of the year. Gosh, how that man deserves it!

Collapse Of The Continentals?

The blatant state of warfare that has broken out between organized baseball and the Continental League is a tragic thing. The Kefauver bill on which hearings are now being held before a Senate subcommittee has given the present majors their chance to come out in the open and throw rocks through the Continentals' unfinished windows.

The situation is so bad that the Continentals have just about admitted that they will have to go to war (raiding parties), or else fold up their franchises and disappear.

To one who has been rooting hard for the CL to come into being and succeed, this sudden position of weakness is unfortunate and regrettable. Especially when the new league itself committed the blunder that started the tide rolling against it.

From the start, Branch Rickey and his cohorts have insisted that a franchise in New York was the key to the success of the new league. If such a franchise could be obtained, and if it should receive the blessing of the neighboring Yankees—why, this would have resulted in an automatic entrance into the ballrooms of high baseball society. The Continental League would be in!

Well, the CL got its franchise; then, heaven be praised, the mighty Yankees extended their arms and said "Welcome". And surprisingly (to this column), unaccountably, tragically, the new league rejected the Yankees' peace offer. It was the Continentals' biggest boner.

It all happened during the CL's negotiations with the Board of Estimate of the City of New York to approve a bond issue for construction of a $15 million stadium on Flushing Meadow.

The Yankees saw the issue gain in popular appeal, and then made an offer that automatically would have put the new league into action in 1961.

Let the New York ball team in the new league play in our ball park, the Yankees told the City. We'll share the stadium with them and save New York that tremendous investment. All we ask, besides a reasonable rent, is that the City turn over to the Yankees (and the Continental League's team) for parking purposes the ball field that adjoins the Stadium on the other side of the Concourse Plaza. Alleviate our parking problem with one relatively minor transaction, and keep your $15 million.

Here was the open door policy. Here was recognition of the new league. Here was access to one of the largest ball parks in the country, a stadium that sits astride the New York Thruway and that is just ten minutes from the eastern terminus of the New Jersey Turnpike, 20 minutes by subway from Times Square and Grand Central Station. Seating capacity, around 70,000. What could be sweeter?

All that the Continentals would be giving up under this deal would be construction of their own ball park. In return, they would be saving at least two years of vital time, and would be ready to play next year.

The Continentals turned down the offer! And from that day their troubles mounted, even though they did get approval of their $15 million.

Rickey and Bill Shea, founder of the league, disdainfully turned up their noses at the Yankees. "We're going to build a new park," they sneered. "Who needs you? You need parking space? Suffer, you inglorious plutocrats! Come up and see us sometime, in a couple of years, and squirm while you drool at our acres and acres of parking space! Who needs you?"

Unfortunately, when it came to the matter of obtaining players, the CL discovered that it needed the Yankees and other major league clubs. And when players were not made available by the existing leagues in a manner that pleased them, the CL yelled "Foul!"

Now Rickey and Shea are pleading for passage of the Kefauver bill. Failing that to pass, they have morosely declared they will have no choice but to raid the rosters of the two major leagues — or lie down and die.

This is a tragic situation, and an entirely unnecessary one. Under those conditions, I don't see how the CL can live long enough to play its first game. Acceptance of the Yankees' unusual offer, even if it did contain ulterior motives, would have been a giant step toward official recognition of the CL, and the player impasse would not now be so acute.

I hope this Sport Summit situation will resolve itself into a matter of peace, prosperity and happiness for all — including a third big league.

But right now, I wouldn't invest in it with any confidence.

West Berlin Children To Learn About Hitler

BERLIN — West Berlin school children will learn who Hitler was when they reach the age of 10, city education officials told a press conference.

They also will get detailed instruction on World War II, the Nazi swastika, the Christian Cross, the Jewish Star of David and the Soviet star under a new curriculum.

Children will be well informed about the Nazi era and its atrocities as well as Russia's Stalin and Communist regimes when they leave school, officials said.

The new curriculum was drafted after anti-Semitic and neo-Nazi incidents in West Germany earlier this year which led to fear among educationists that schools neglected Germany's recent past.

FIND 2ND LAYER OF OIL
TEL AVIV—Oil has been struck at Heletz 25 in a layer of porous limestone some 200 feet beneath the present oil-bearing sand strata. This is the first time that oil has been discovered in this country in limestone, and it may lead to a re-examination of apparently dry wells.

Scholarship Committee To Consider Applications

The JORI scholarship committee is preparing to consider applications from students at college and preparing to enter college. These scholarships will be sponsored by the Jewish Children's Home of Rhode Island and are awarded annually to those students whose high scholarship and financial need commend them to the committee as worthy of the grants. Jacob S. Temkin is chairman of the scholarship committee which is now in its 12th year.

Each year the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women has contributed to the scholarship funds, and its representatives participate in the deliberations of the committee.
