A LEADER OF THE AMERICAN Technion Society said recently that Israel would be compelled to step up its training of engineers, technicians and scientists because of its technical aid to the newly established African and Asian states, the New York Times reported. Benjamin Cooper, vice-president of the society, said that the aid Israel was giving the Afro-Asian countries was "causing a drain" on the country's own technological development.

ISRAEL'S LABOR SHORTAGE, a historic development despite immigration of nearly 30,000 this year, requires a greater influx of working women into the factories and offices, according to Labor Minister Giora Josephthal. To cope with the problem, a greater portion of the vocational training budget should be set aside for women, Dr. Josephthal said. In addition, the lack of manpower might make it advisable to reduce the income tax payable by married women holding a full-time job.

THE GAS PRODUCTION POTENTIAL of the six well Zohar oil field has been increased to the caloric equivalent of 135,000 tons of petroleum a year — nearly as much as the output of the Heltz field — Daniel Kimhe, of Naptha Company, told the Minister of Development.

A DELEGATION FROM WEST Nigeria, headed by Education Minister Onabamiro and including top officials of the Ministry, a member of Parliament and an architect, arrived in Tel Aviv last week. The group will explore the possibilities of cooperation between the two countries in expanding the West Nigeria education system.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the Jewish-Christian Friendship Association in Rome last week adopted a resolution denouncing the Italian Orbis News Agency for an anti-Semitic article carried by the agency from Munich, attacking the handful of Jews in West Germany as being "money-sick" and charging them with "creating around them an atmosphere of repressed hatred which some day will explode in a new Hitlerian era." The association charged the news agency with having "identical inspiration as the recent initiative of the international neo-Nazi and neo-fascist organizations." The association called for strong measures.

Job Discrimination To End At Aramco

ALBANY — The court of appeals denied request on an appeal by the Arabian American Oil Company from two lower court rulings that it has no right to question job applicants about their religion, it was reported here.

Appeal Opposed

The oil company's appeal was opposed by the American Jewish Congress which accused Aramco of serving as the "tool and agent" of Saudi Arabia in screening Jews from employment both in Saudi Arabia and in the United States.

Shad Polier of New York, chairman of the American Jewish Congress Commission on Law and Social Action, asked the court to uphold decisions by the State Supreme Court and the Appellate Division, calling on the New York State Commission Against Discrimination to prove charges that Aramco's job practices violate the State's Fair Employment Law.

Aramco's attorney argued that the company asks job applicants to state their religion because it must comply with a ban on the entry of Jews to Saudi Arabia where Aramco conducts its operation. Chester Bordeaux, counsel for Aramco also said that American political interests in the Middle East require that the company be granted an exemption from the state anti-discrimination law.

Brings Counterecharges

The American Jewish Congress attorney countered by charging that Aramco uses the religious question on its job application form as a device for barring Jews not only from employment in Saudi Arabia but also from jobs in its New York City operations where the company has more than eight hundred employees.

"No American court can require Saudi Arabia to admit Jews," Mr. Polier said. "But this court can and should bar Aramco from acting as the tool and agent of the foreign power in violating the laws of the state."

Jewish Communal Life Being Rebuilt In Agadir

CASABLANCA — Jewish communal life in disaster-shattered Agadir, where the Jewish population now numbers 500, is slowly being rebuilt, authorities reported last week.

Most of the one-time residents still have not returned and are living a few miles away in Inezgame. M. M. Moryousse, the head of the Agadir Jewish community, who lost his family and his property in the earthquake and tidal wave of last year, has returned

Ben-Gurion Says Words, Intentions, 'Distorted' In American Press

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Ben Gurion, in an interview given here to the Associated Press said that his speech at the Zionist Congress recently which provoked criticism by Jewish organizations in the United States because of his reference to Orthodox Jews who do not settle in Israel, was in no way meant to be offensive to American Jewry.

He emphasized that his words and his intentions have been "distorted" in the reports which appeared in American newspapers.

"It appears that the totality of what I had to say on the subject was lost through quite unproportional stress that has been laid on some passages which were themselves not properly related abroad," he stated. "No observer of the Jewish scene who is in his senses can possibly underestimate the decisive importance of American Jewry to the entirety of the Jewish people and in the creation and buttressing of the young State of Israel.

"In fact, in my speech I put the emergence of the American Jewish community as a positive development in Jewish life on a par with the miracle of Israel's rebirth which helped Jewry to withstand the great blows of the isolation and paralysis of Soviet Jewry for the last 40 years and the holocaust in Europe at the hands of the nazis. Often in the past I have had the occasion to express admiration for what that community has done for world Jewry and Israel since the end of World War I.

Weakening May Come

"It is true I am deeply concerned that Judaism in the free lands may gradually be weakened unless positive action is taken. But truly you know that this concern I share with responsible Jewish leadership everywhere including the United States. In the United States, leaders of every one of the different organizations keep preaching the need of an education toward a more profound Jewishness, especially through the study of the Hebrew language which is the key to understanding of the Jewish spiritual legacy and especially the Bible.

"Jewish leaders from America who came to see me have told me of this anxiety of theirs and of their efforts to combat negative tendencies. In fact, I have been requested to raise my voice in unison with theirs in calling upon Jewish parents everywhere to see to it that the heritage of our people is not lost to their children.

"This concern, which I have expressed on this score, differs therefore in no way from what is being said by responsible Jewish leadership everywhere and I do profoundly hope that we in this country will be able to concert action with Jewish leadership in the United States and in other countries in order to work out constructive practical programs in the sphere of Jewish education with the purpose of deepening the Jewish spiritual heritage everywhere."

Not 'Godless'

Replying to the question on whether he said that Jews who live outside of Israel are Godless, Ben Gurion stated, "The formula—

Seek Canada's Aid To Force Jordan To Keep Agreement

MONTREAL — McGill University here will seek the aid of the Government of Canada to force the Government of Jordan to comply with its agreement to deliver Dead Sea Scroll fragments purchased by the university in 1952 for $20,000, Dr. F. Cyril James, principal of the university, said last week.

The fragments have been reconditioned and prepared for shipment but Jordanian officials have not given permission for shipment to Canada, Dean Stanley Frost of the University divinity faculty said. He added that he believed that the delay in shipment was partly due to a propaganda campaign by the United Arab Republic to the effect that Jordan has made the scrolls available at "bargain prices" to Israeli agents.

Frost said there had been reports that Jordan planned to renege on delivery of fragments to the Vatican Library, the Univer-

Algerians Accuse Jewish Leaders

PARIS — The Algerian rebel organization, the FLN, has accused Jewish community leaders in Algeria of being "the accomplices of the colonial crimes now being committed in our land," it was reported here last week.

The charge appeared in the FLN newspaper, El Moudpahid, which carried an article on "The Constant Position of the Algerian Revolution with Regard to the Jewish Minority." In the article, the FLN asserted that Algerian Jewish leaders had "deluded part of the Algerian Jewish community by inviting it not to take part in the struggle for national liberation."

The FNL also charged that recent communiques by Algerian Jewish leaders protesting the profanation and systematic devastation of the Great Synagogue of Algiers had "already served this argument for colonial propaganda devoted to setting Jews and Moslems against one another."

The newspaper urged Algerian Jews to be "among the first to join in the demand, made by the National Algerian Organization, that an international inquiry commission be sent as soon as possible to Algeria to establish dispassionately what happened there, and particularly in Algeria during the events of recent days."

CASABLANCA — A weekly publication devoted to the interests of the Jewish population of Morocco was under threat of being banned last week after its director, Victor Malka, was interrogated at length by Moroccan police.

The questioning of the director of Trait D'Union, the first issue of which appeared in November, and the threat of a ban took place despite the fact that permission had been given to him by the authorities to issue the publicacity of Manchester and other purchasers. It was understood that the Canadian Ambassador in Beirut, Lebanon and the British envoy in Amman, Jordan, have taken part in talks with Jordanian officials to achieve fulfillment of the 1952 contract.

"We have a legal and binding agreement with the Government of Jordan," Frost said, "and we cannot accept any unilateral decision not to deliver the scrolls." He added that he visited Jordan a few months ago to examine the collection and that he had been assured an export license would be granted.

The collection purchased by the university is the largest group of Cave IV Dead Sea manuscripts slated to go outside the area. All of the fragments have been photographed and edited and they are to be published jointly by the McGill University Press, the Jordanian Museum of Antiquities and the Dominican Ecole Archéologique Française.

Teen-Agers Define 'A Good Jew'

MIAMI BEACH — The Youth Organization Convention touched all the bases on world, national, local, Jewish and teen-age problems in their discussions. Among the opinions expressed by teen-agers were these:

Teen Morals: Teen behavior today with regard to sex is not much different from previous generations, although the freedom of discussion given now to sex may make it seem so. Morale standards are first established in the home and by the example of parents, but teens develop their own standards as they grow up.

Teens and Judaism: To be a good Jew, one must be observant, ethical, charitable and responsible to the community. Pride of faith is not sufficient without deep knowledge of one's faith. Adherence to one's faith gives a feeling of security, but there should be ethics and standards along with faith.

Religion In Schools: Religion belongs in the church, the synagogue and the home. Religious practices should be eliminated from the schools. Schools should teach the Bible as literature and history, along with other major religious writings. Moral and ethical readings should be substituted for daily prayers.

Parental Authority: Teens need and want definite rules at home. They will respect these rules if reasons are given. Youth today are more grown up and independent, and while needing general direction, they need not be guided at every point. Influence of one's friends sometimes affects the way a teen follows parents' advice.

Citizenship: Becoming a good citizen means learning about community and national affairs, participating in community activities, listening to the point of view of others. Experience in teen-age clubs gives training for this kind of active citizenship.

Values Of Youth: Material things are not as important as might be expected, but are forced on the individual by the standards of society; young people see these symbols as really important — love, family, friendship, education, religion and citizenship. Teens are still groping for real values. They are willing to accept friends with somewhat different standards.

Anti-Israel Blockade More Harmful To Arabs Lebanese Cabinet Told

PARIS — The Lebanese cabinet was told that the current anti-Israel-Arab-blockade was "foolish and would result in doing more harm to the Arabic economics than to Israel's," it was reported here from Beirut.

The report was made by Pierre Gemayel, Lebanese Minister for Economic Affairs, who said Lebanon may take the initiative in asking the Arab League to consider the possibility of a complete revision of blockade practices.

The Minister's proposal was prompted by a recent incident when a Norwegian freighter, the Mars, which had been black-listed by the Arab League for trading with Israel also was barred from discharging its cargo in Beirut. However, it was authorized to discharge cargo at Alexandria by the United Arab Republic.

The Minister asked the Cabinet to either request the Arab League to review the blockade or to take measures to defend Lebanese economic interests. He stressed that the decree setting up the Bureau for the boycott had established a control commission but that the commission has never functioned in Lebanon. He said this had caused further harm to Lebanon's economy.

Refuse Permission To Open Synagogue

PALMA, MAJORCA, SPAIN — The local civil authorities functioning under the Spanish Government have turned down a request by the noted proselyte Isabel Elisheba Munoz for the opening of a synagogue in her home.

The Governor of the Island, in replying to a request for a permit to establish the house of worship declared that no permission could be granted pending a police investigation.

Enemies of the Marranos within the local government, it was disclosed here, have charged Miss Munoz and other Marranos with being affiliated with Communists. These charges have been vehemently denied by Miss Munoz who counter-charged her accusers with Hitlerian acts. "I trust that God may help us," she told the WUP reporter, and that the individuals alluded to may not hereafter be able to harm us with their ignominious calumnies."

30,663 JEWISH SCIENTISTS
NEW YORK — According to the USSR's statistical handbook, there are now 30,663 Jewish scientists out of a total of 310,000 scientist in the Soviet Union. The number of Jewish scientists, as well as the number of scientists in general in Russia, has risen since 1955.

UN Security Council Ends 1960 Without Arab-Israel Dispute

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — For the first time in eight years, not a single Arab-Israel dispute came before the Security Council in 1960, according to figures revealed here by the yearly tabulation of Security Council sessions.

During the calendar year 1960, the Council did hold four sessions on a complaint against Israel. But this complaint was filed by Argentina, which charged that Israel had violated its sovereignty, thereby allegedly threatening peace and security, in the abduction of Adolf Eichmann.

The last twelve-month period when no Arab-Israel disputes had come before the Security Council was in 1952. For a number of years after 1952, the disputes between the Arabs and Israel kept mounting in the Council, reaching 24 in 1953; 22 in 1954; and 12 in 1955. The number of Council sessions on disputes between the Arab states and Israel went up again in 1956, taking up 21 sessions. But, that year, a special emergency session of the Assembly and, later, a regular Assembly session, wrestled for months with the disputes on the Sinal campaign.

In 1957, the number of Council sessions on the so-called "Palestine question" fell again to 10, four in 1958 and finally one in 1959.

E., Jewish Home for the Aged Association, Hebrew Free Loan Association, and was past chancellor of Woonsocket Lodge K. of P. He had lived in Providence for the last 10 years. Previously he had lived in Woonsocket for 30 years.

Besides his wife, Mr. Goldstein is survived by a son, William Goldstein, and a daughter, Miss Estelle Goldstein, both of Providence; a brother, Joseph Goldstein of Long Island, N. Y.; a sister, Mrs. Ethel Speigel of Providence and three grandchildren.

MRS. JOSEPH MONZACK
Funeral services for Mrs. Katie Monzack, 78, of 49 Carolina Avenue, who died Monday after a short illness, were held Tuesday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The widow of Joseph Monzack, she was born in Poland in 1883, the daughter of the late Nathan and Hannah Cohen. She had been a resident of Providence for 55 years.

She is survived by two sons, Nathan, of Cranston, and Eli, of Providence; two daughters, Mrs. Irving Glantz of Providence and Mrs. Max Goldberg of North Miami, Fla., nine grandchildren and three great-grand-children.

In Memoriam

YARZHEIT OF

Morris Kirshenbaum

The sun left the sky and the day grew dark
And embers in the fire lost their cheerful song
The birds in the trees stilled their cheerful song
And everything right suddenly went wrong
You took away a link of our chain—
Will our great loss, then, be your gain?
Do you have sick and needy up there?
Do they need comfort? Then do not despair.

Several parents have written to me as a result of the articles on camping which have appeared in the Herald for the past few weeks. Because of the great interest shown, I will choose one letter each week that has the widest interest and answer it in this column. I will welcome more letters from now on and all of them will be answered either here or directly to you. Names will be withheld and letters will be treated confidentially. Please address them to me: JOE SCHEIN, 95 FREEMAN PARKWAY, PROV. R. I. GA 1-3943.

Letter of the week.

Dear Mr. Schein,

I have a son and daughter, both of camp age and am considering camp for both of them. I would like to know more about the advantages of the all boy or all girl camp as compared to Co-Ed.

Answer.

In my talks with many parents both as a teacher and camp director, I constantly encounter the growing feeling that boys and girls see too much of each other in their daily lives. A common complaint of parents is that their children are too sophisticated and too advanced socially. One wholesome influence that can help, is a camp where boys are engaged in a manly, healthy program without the distractions that pursue them throughout the school year. The pressures of "togetherness", going steady and the other intrusions that tend to disturb a child while growing up certainly have no place in the summer camp.

Ben-Gurion Protests Interpretation

tion of what I am supposed to have said amounts to a distortion of my words and of my intentions. "A major part of my speech was devoted to the theme of the vital need for Aliyah. I explained why the State of Israel needs more educated Jews. On this theme, which as you know concerns me most profoundly I went into some detail. At one point I was addressing myself specifically to the minority of Orthodox Jews and I reminded them that according to the Talmud, some of the commandments of the Jewish religion are linked with the Land of Israel. "As an example of this, I quoted the Talmud which says at one point that "whosoever dwells outside the land of Israel is likened to one who has no God." I did not coin this phrase. The only thing I did was to quote the Talmud on this point to those Jews who believe that every word in the Talmud is obligatory on them. Certainly, I do not think that American Jewry is Godless and it is senseless to attribute such a thought to me."

He added that he believes "profoundly" that "the fruitful interchange and cooperation between the great Jewish community of the United States and the independent Jewish community in the Jewish State can and will produce great results for Israel, for the Jews of the United States and for the Jewish people as a whole."

Backs Ben Gurion

JERUSALEM (JTA) — Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, last week read at the World Zionist Congress a statement in which he declared that Prime Minister Ben Gurion had been quoted out of context in reports in the American press of his recent address.

Goldmann strongly deplored the misinterpretation of the passage in Ben Gurion's speech referring to "Godlessness" of Jews who do not emigrate to Israel. He declared that the interpretation given was totally unwarranted by the speech as a whole, and that Ben Gurion, discussing immigration to Israel, had mentioned in passing that Orthodox Jews must realize that there are religious commandments which can only be fulfilled in Israel.

Goldmann also criticized American Jewish leaders who reacted with "violent protests." He said that the speech had been distorted by two New York newspapers, adding that the distortions had not resulted from misquotations but by making one phrase appear as the principal content of the speech.

Find No Fault

Rabbi Bernard Bergmann, president of the Religious Zionists of America, also defended Ben Gurion.

He said that the remark made by Ben Gurion that no religious Jew can fulfill the whole Torah when residing outside of Israel, did not originate with Ben Gurion tion. The weekly was launched with the approval of some Moroccan Jewish personalities.

Meanwhile, it appeared that efforts of the Council of Jewish Communities in Morocco to obtain the re-appearance of another publication, The Voice of the Communities, were certain to fail.

but that he merely quoted "the dicta of our sages."

Hadassah issued a statement here expressing surprise that the remarks had caused such excitement and misunderstanding. "It caused no uneasiness or disturbance among the delegations," the statement added. "The quotation was a symbolic and mystic expression of the everlasting connection of the Jewish people with Israel, and was not to be taken literally. Nor was it so taken by the large audience which heard it."

Before the controversy over the speech developed, such American Zionist leaders as Dr. Emanuel Neumann and Mrs. Rose Halprin described it as "restrained," and a good augury for future relations.

Label A. Katz, president of B'nai B'rith, paid tribute, at a Congress session, to the historic role of the Zionist movement. Speaking on the question of the relationships of Israel and non-Israeli Jewish communities, Katz remarked that "the concept of God cannot be confined in time and space to any community" and to do otherwise "would seriously negate" the 2,000 years of the Jewish heritage outside of Israel.

Expect Final Showdown Soon In Israel Split

JERUSALEM — A final showdown in the broiling dispute between Prime Minister Ben-Gurion and Pinhas Lavon, which has powered a profound split in their Mapai Party, is expected this month. A postponement of the dispute until after the close of the 25th World Zionist Congress which ended Jan. 10 was requested by Mapai leaders, former Premier Moshe Sharett and Finance Minister Levi Eshkol who has been making fruitless efforts to mediate the dispute. Mr. Eshkol is serving as Deputy Prime Minister during Mr. Ben-Gurion's four week "vacation" on which the Prime Minister left Jerusalem after preparing and signing—but not submitting—his resignation.

The Prime Minister departed with a warning to his party colleagues that he expected them to force Mr. Lavon into complete submission, possibly making him give up his Histadrut post. The fight dated back to a 1944 security mishap, the nature of which has never been disclosed, when Mr. Lavon was Defense Minister. He was forced to resign in 1955, although he stated he had not been responsible for issuing the order which led to the mishap. He was vindicated by a Ministerial committee, which submitted a report several weeks ago to the Israel Cabinet holding that a senior army officer, whose identity was not disclosed forged a document which made it appear Mr. Lavon had issued the order.

Mr. Ben-Gurion who declined to join in the Cabinet vote approving the report, issued an ultimatum that he would resign if the Cabinet vote was not reversed and the whole issue turned over to a judicial investigation. The threat led other Mapai Ministers who had either served on the Ministerial committee or voted for the unanimous report or both to make threats also to resign in protest against Mr. Ben-Gurion's tactics.

TEMPLE BETH DAVID

Temple Beth David night will be observed at the temple Sunday at 8 o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

Dedication ceremonies will be held for a group of commemorative plaques which have been established in the temple. The exercises will be conducted by Rabbi Morris Schussheim of Temple Beth Israel.

The dedication ceremonies will follow the reading of the regular evening Maariv service which will start at 7:30 o'clock.

CHOSEN FOR PLAY

Three Providence children will appear with a professional cast of actors in the Jewish Community Centers' opening Children's Theatre presentation, "The Pied Piper" to be presented at Nathan Bishop Jr. High School this Sunday afternoon.

Chosen at special auditions conducted at the Center last Sunday afternoon, the youngsters who will appear on stage as speaking "extras", are Carol Fine, David Voegel, and Harry Blazer. Also chosen as understudies were Marilyn Tabatsky, Joyce Gitman, Samuel Winston, and Jonas Goldenberg.

Judges for the auditions were Mesdames Leo Gurtin, James Winston, George Price, and Barbara Orsen.

CERAMICS CLASS

With registrations completely filled for its Wednesday night Adult Ceramics Classes, the South Side Jewish Community Center is now offering a second class series on Mondays, from 8 to 10 P.M.

Classes will be directed by Paul Berube, ceramics teacher and ceramics craftsman. Registration will be open to both Center members and non-members. It is also open to both beginners and skilled ceramics students.

For further information the Center at ST 1-8110, may be called.

GOLF CLASSES

Golf classes are being sponsored by the Jewish Community Center for both adults and teens. Ed Payne, former golf pro at El Paso, Texas, will give instructions at the Net operating earnings of Industrial National Bank of Providence rose 16% during the year just concluded, it was reported last week by John Simmen, president. Resources, deposits, loans and capital funds of the bank all showed substantial increases on Dec. 31 when compared with the same date in 1959.

Total assets of $533,089,000 were up sharply, showing an increase of $14,047,000 over Dec. 31 of last year. Loans totaled $160,818,000, an increase of $18,269,000 or 13% during the year, while mortgages of $135,097,000 were up $2,885,000 or 2%. Cash of $53,845,000 and U.S. Government securities of $101,568,000 were down $14,065,000 and $17,253,000 respectively from a year ago, while state and municipal securities showed a substantial gain of $23,773,000 to $68,392,000.

Total deposits of New England's second largest bank reached a new high of $473,387,000 a gain of $13,191,000 or almost 3% from Dec. 31, 1959.

Open Season On Rabbi And His Wife

By Sigmund Hirsch

(Sigmund Hirsch is the pseudonym for a keen observer from the heart of the Mid-West who is actively identified with Jewish life.)

In keeping with the pastoral emphasis of the modern rabbinite, there has grown up in the past decade or so a considerable literature which attempts to prove that rabbis are also flesh-and-blood human beings.

These writings, in one way or another, all ask the same question, "If we have determined that the rabbi is indeed human, how in the world can he live through it?"

The average layman who reads these articles begins to suspect that there are no rabbis who are really happy in their chosen work.

Far from it. There are many happy rabbis. Nevertheless, it remains true that the day-to-day pressures in a rabbi's life could conceivably drive strong men to tears. It all depends on how the individual rabbi looks at life. We can all readily discern the tragic element in life but what in the daily experience of the rabbi provides that touch of humor so necessary for the rabbi's mental equilibrium?

Every rabbi spends a substantial amount of his time on the preparation of his weekly sermon. But there is a speech which all rabbis will have to deliver at the conclusion of their careers. We can hazard the guess that there is not a rabbi in the land who does not have the introduction to that speech fully prepared.

The rabbi visualizes himself at the banquet in his honor on the occasion of his retirement from the rabbinate. The hall is filled with people, most of whom have at one time or another had the rabbi to their homes for dinner. To the hushed multitude the rabbi will rise and proclaim, "Friends, time flies. Here it is forty-five years and 71,893 chicken dinners later . . ." By that time his children will be grown, his wife will be provided for and his stoning will be of no great consequence to anyone.

Why do people insist on serving chicken to the rabbi? It seems obvious that in some obscure passage of the Talmud it must be written that the way to a rabbi's heart is through a chicken. As yet, no rabbi has been successful in finding this rule in the literature but it is safe to say that on the basis of this oft invoked Talmudic dictum some 40,000 chickens per year will leave the dinner table and enter the rabbinate. There are no statistics available on capons.

Let us leave our friend the chicken and speak of other animals. Jewish tradition does not take a kindly attitude toward hunting. But, in some instances at least, it seems that many Jews have abandoned that tradition. For various reasons, most of the states in the Union require licenses for the hunting of wild game. There is in addition a restricted season for the hunting of most animals. There is also a limit to the number of victims a hunter can dispatch to the great beyond.

That is fortuitous for the wild animals. It protects them. But the Humane Societies of the United States have not yet come to the rescue of the rabbi. There is not a single state which has a restricted season on rabbis. From January 1 to December 31 is open season on rabbis in every state, nor is a license required. The sport is open to both members and non-members. Nor is there a bag limit. Sometimes an avid huntsman can get two targets with one shot—flush the rabbi and you flush the rabbi's wife too.

If the rabbi is unmarried, every family in the congregation that can lay claim to having a somewhat eligible daughter will invite him to their home for dinner.

Of course, chicken! What else could win a rabbi's heart? At these festive occasions the onslaught of calories can be deadly. Sometimes the calories are on the table.

To complicate matters considerably, the rabbinate is the only profession in the world where it is impossible to marry the boss' daughter. If he did, the local police would hold him on charges of bigamy, since in most congregations everybody is a boss. The wise rabbi is like the wise wife who settles on a decision and lets her husband make it.

After a decent interval, the thinking rabbi comes to the logical conclusion that marriage is preferable to death by obesity. The poor bachelor rabbi never has a chance but nonetheless the life of the single rabbi is heavenly compared to the lot of the married rabbi.

The married rabbi is a revolving outfielder. He catches it from all sides.

If his wife weighs 115 pounds, "She is too thin. A wind could blow her away."

If she weighs 120 pounds, "She is too fat!"

If she is pretty, "She is too pretty for a rabbi's wife."

If she is not a prize-winning beauty, "You can't even look at her."

If she is intelligent, "She is smarter than the rabbi, she must write his sermons."

If she is not a genius, "She is a regular dummy."

If she has a college degree, "She is from that fancy eastern school."
If she has no college degree, "She sure made a catch for a plain girl like that."

If she has a special dress which she wears on state occasions, "She must spend a fortune on clothes."

If she tries to dress without ostentation, "She should spend a Temple Beth El was the scene of the wedding of Miss Pearl Ann Horvitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Horvitz of 9 Nottingham Way, Pawtucket, to Frederic Richard Shein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley E. Shein of 52 Taber Avenue. Rabbi William G. Braude officiated at the ceremony which was held on Sunday, Jan. 7, at 6:30 P.M. at Temple Beth El. A reception at the temple followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Paul Horvitz was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Simon, Miss Rochelle Harriet and Miss Territa Percelay. Miss Deborah Horvitz was junior bridesmaid and flower girl was Miss Marcia Horvitz.

The maid of honor and the bridesmaids were gowned in Victorian violet peau de soie sheath dresses with bouffant overskirts, fashioned with scoop necklines and three-quarter length sleeves. Headpieces were crowns of pleated violet peau de soie. They carried cascades of white carnations and daisy pom poms.

Dr. Harvey Shein, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Donald Shein, Dr. Paul Horvitz, brother of the bride, Dr. John Livingstone, Morris Perlow, Jeffrey Ruttenberg and Alan Dressler.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was dressed in a gown of ivory silk peau de soie and re-embroidered alencon lace outlined with seed pearls and lace appliques, fashioned with a scooped neckline, long tapered sleeves and a bell skirt, ending in a chapel train. Her bouffant veil of French illusion fell from a tiara of crystals and seed pearls. She carried a Bible cascaded with lilies-of-the-valley, stephanotis and white orchids.

The mothers of the bride and bridegroom were dressed in floor length gowns of pale lavender and wore corsages of white orchids.

After a wedding trip to Nassau, the couple will reside at 146 Irving Avenue.

TO HOLD FORUM

The fight against bigotry and intolerance will be the subject of the next forum in the leadership training program of the Young Adults Division of the General Jewish Committee which will be held Thursday at the GJC headquarters.

Bruce M. Selya is chairman of this forum on community relations

Previous training sessions have been conducted at the Jewish Home for the Aged, Miriam Hospital and the Jewish Community Center. The purpose of these programs is to develop future leaders of the Jewish community and to acquaint the young Jewish people of the community with the various agencies and their functions.

Albert D. Chernin, community consultant of the National Community Relations Advisory Council in New York, will be the guest speaker.

Norman G. Orodener is chairman of the Young Adult Leadership Training program.

YOUNG ADULTS

The Young Adults of Jewish Community Center will hold a general membership meeting on Sunday at 8 P.M. at the South Side Center. Anyone between 18 and 30 years of age is invited to attend.

Committee reports will be presented. An informal social hour will follow the meeting.

TRIUMPHS OF THE MARKET

American
Judaism looks at

THE LIVING ARTS

by DAVID BOROFF

HAVE HAD OCCASION to remark that Jewish subject matter is now "commercial." This has its perils as well as its opportunities. No doubt, it makes possible an authentic portrait of Jewish life free from both sentimentalization and self-hatred. But the market-place has an ugly way of triumphing. And in the end we may get that final indignity—images of Jewish life that are merely cute. After all, "The Rise of the Goldbergs" was one of the first of the situation comedies. Are we now going to see Jewish situation comedies lacking even the elemental drama of the climb out of the ghetto?

Theater

These dour observations have been touched off by the inside story I recently learned about a new Jewish comedy on Broadway, "The 49th Cousin," starring Menasha Skulnik. It appears that the Theatre Guild, emboldened by the success last season of "Majority of One," an undistinguished comedy but a money-maker, shopped around for another Jewish play. But the important thing, you see, is not to impose a strain upon the audience. The comfortable middle-class Jew—like his gentile counterpart—wants reminders of his identity, enjoys even a faint tug of chauvinism, but not at the cost of any great emotional travail. The Theatre Guild has thus come up with a mild little excursion into nostalgia—a play set in the early part of the century about a crusty Jewish father with four marriageable daughters whom he would like to unload. This gives promise of being just right—innocuous, lightweight suburban fare.

Now this chop-licking expropriation of Jewish themes by the Theatre Guild is all to the good if it reminds producers that there is a vast and profitable Jewish audience in the New York area. Moreover, this audience has attained a degree of self-consciousness—in the best sense—which makes it intensely interested in portraits of itself. (It is often a culture in swift transition like ours that creates and nourishes a great art. Witness James Joyce's Ireland, Shakespeare's England, and Chekhov's Russia. We have the audience but it is in danger of being enfeebled by intellectual sloth, cozened by the ad-man's pitch that life is just one big suburban barbecue.)

In the meantime, the fate of "The Wall," a vast and stirring drama is now in doubt. I saw it a few nights after its opening and was distressed by the fact that a good part of the house was empty. Equally distressing was the audience reaction—polite and perfunctory. The crucial question is: Was audience response pallid because of the limitations of the play or because people resent being pulled out of their affluent drowsiness and hurled into the apocalyptic pit of twenty years ago?

As a novel, The Wall was a powerful, probing, deeply humane work. (Exodus, by comparison, reads like a UJA release.) As a play, "The Wall" suffers from an excess of virtue. It is an honest, respectful transcription of the novel—too honest! Its trouble is that it tries to encompass the novel's sprawling complexity onstage. What it gains in richness it loses in dramatic force and unity. It takes half of the first act, for example, merely to handle the exposition. But near the end of the first act, the play leaps to vibrant life. And when a lovely young couple marries and dances and rejoices against a cacophonous background of cries of terror in the ghetto streets, "The Wall" achieves drama of shattering intensity. And later on, when the first shots of resistance are fired, there is an almost unutterable sense of release. And it's all there: the brave Jews and the frightened ones, the monstrously efficient cruelties of the Nazis, and, above everything else, the rousing affirmation of life in the midst of death.

One should acknowledge the novel's artistic untidiness; this is no slick dramatic package. There are uncertainties of tone. (The audience laughed nervously whenever a character made a humorous reference to Hitler.) Out of a desire not to start too "high" (emotionally high, that is)—for where can you go from there?—Millard Lampell sketched a portrait of ghetto life in its first Nazi phase which was too bland, too cheerful. It may even be that we can't handle the full enormity of the Warsaw ghetto experience, that we can apprehend the Nazi era only through a metaphor like "The Diary of Anne Frank." The suffering in the "The Wall" is too huge, too naked, too lacerating. But it is for these very reasons that the play deserves large and sympathetic audiences.

Films

The only film of Jewish interest at the moment is "Exodus," which should be turning up soon. But this is a good time to point out that old taboos are currently being shattered all over the movie lot. Yet there seems to be a tacit restriction on the exploration of everyday Jewish life. There is a whole new, dramatically valid world to explore, if only the movie-makers would exercise the imagination and boldness to do so.

Books

The flood of Jewish books shows little sign of abating. Harry Golden's Enjoy! Enjoy! is on the best seller list. It's the same mixture as before: Golden in his genial role as sage of the candy store. The tone is still relaxed, shrewd, and earthy. It's not great literature, but it is sane and engaging, and Golden is on the side of all the secular angels.

Anna Teller purports to be an epic, but it proved to be only an epic mish-mash. Written by Jo Sinclair, author of The Wasteland, this book reviews the stirring events of the last half century. But all it does is throw together in a tasteless stew mother-son conflict, the Spanish Civil War, the Hungarian uprising of 1956, and mild suburban agonies. The novel deals with a doughty old Jewish lady, a Freedom Fighter, who joins her struck-it-rich son in Detroit. The conflicts and reconciliations between mother and son provide the dramatic spine of the novel. The Jewish component of the novel, however, is ambiguous. Anna Teller is more Hungarian peasant than Jew, and she even marries off one daughter to a Christian who turns Nazi later on. But neither she, nor her son, ever comes to terms with the problem of Jewish identity. He does join a temple, but this is more a gesture of suburban surrender than an act of affirmation. But nothing much matters, for in the end all conflict and drama are muffled by bottomless layers of vapid and self-indulgent talk.

A novel one can take far more seriously is Jan DeHartog's The Inspector. It is a compassionate account of a heroic and self-immolating attempt by a middle-aged Dutch inspector to smuggle a dying Jewish girl into Palestine. The time is 1946, the Nazi disaster still ringing in the ears of its stunned survivors. Peter Jongman, the detective, is no swashbuckler but a "clipped middle-aged duck." "Out of millions of well-meaning but ineffectual middle-aged men, fate had appointed him to undo a crime some other middle-aged men had perpetrated on the innocent." And the girl is an older Anne Frank, a battered victim of fiendish Nazi medical experiments but still marvelously capable of yearning. And there is a gaunt reminder for all of us when the inspector cries out against a world "united in the tacit determination to pretend that the Nazi episode had never happened."

Nevertheless, the book's sweet humanity is vitiated by the portrayal of the Jewish Agency people who come to help the girl. An opposition is drawn between the inspector, unselfishly concerned with the girl, and the Jewish officials who want to take her to America to exploit her suffering for propaganda purposes. This is a real enough issue, and one can even sympathize with Jewish functionaries who interpret their responsibilities in that way. But their personalities are so unpleasant that it calls DeHartog's philosemitism into question. One can quarrel, too, with the suggestion that the Jewish deity is a God of righteousness and not of love. Haven't we heard the last of that canard?

Interesting enough, there is a new novel by Maurice Samuel, that grizzled veteran of Jewish causes, which neatly upsets that notion. Not entirely successful as a novel but immensely fascinating as an exploration of religious ideas, The Second Crucifixion demonstrates the dynamic intimacy between Judaism and Christianity. The novel deals with Marcella, a Roman lady of quality, who discovers that she is of Jewish origin and flees to the Jewish quarter. She is married to the patrician Julius, a kind of uptown beatnik, second century style. (He embraces Christianity the way his counterparts today play around with Zen Buddhism.) Conflict sets in when Julius kidnaps their child for fear she will be reared as a Jew. Marcella, in the meantime, has adopted the way of life of the Ebionites, a Jewish sect which accepts Jesus as a teacher but not as Messiah. People of good will on both sides then try in vain to restore the child to her mother.

Samuel demonstrates through chapter and verse that Jesus fulminated against the wicked in as harsh a fashion as any prophet and that Jewish teachings were not pervaded by a vindictive, angry spirit. In fact, the spiritual kinship of the two religions only heightens the pathos of their failure to stretch out their hands to each other. At the end, Marcella sadly acknowledges: "We must leave them alone, they must leave us alone, we are bringers of dissension among them." And in the other camp, there is a passionate denunciation by a far-sighted Christian of the rising tides of anti-Semitism: "What are you doing? You are poisoning the well of salvation, you are preparing the corruption of the church. . . . You are preparing deeds as foul as those done in the Amphitheater—and those foul deeds will be done in the name of Christ! It is the second crucifixion. . . ."

Report on Algiers Synagogue Desecration—Pictures of the damage to the Algiers synagogue during recent Casbah riots have been received by the World Jewish Congress in New York together with a report from the organization's representative in Algeria, Mr. Jacques Lazarus. When Mr. Lazarus arrived at the scene he found French troops (left) guarding the ruins. The walls inside and outside were daubed with swastikas and such slogans as: "Death to the Jews," "Long Live the FLN" (Algerian nationalist movement), "Long Live the Algerian Republic," and "Death to de Gaulle."

DR. NOVACK TO SPEAK
 Dr. Harry Novack will be guest speaker at the next regular meeting of the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, which will be held on Tuesday at the East Side Jewish Community Center. A coffee hour at 1 P.M. will precede the meeting which is scheduled for 1:45 P.M.
 Dr. Novack's subject will be "The Exceptional Child." An open discussion and question period will follow the talk. Mrs. Gabriel Salk is program chairman and Mrs. Carol Silver and Mrs. Eric Denhoff will pour at the coffee hour.

CANCEL CAMP REUNION
 The reunion of Camp Willmot, which was scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 30, and for which an advertisement appears on page 16 of this week's Herald, has been canceled.

Goldstein Appointed

Abraham Goldstein, a practicing attorney, has been appointed as the first Assistant City Solicitor of the City of Cranston.
 Mr. Goldstein has been financial secretary of the executive committee of the Cranston Democratic City Committee since 1956, and he is a member of the executive board of the Cranston First Ward Voters' Club. He was a delegate to the 1958 Constitutional Convention to amend the R.I. voting laws and has been a candidate for both the City Council and the Cranston Charter Commission.
 An Air Force Officer during World War II, Mr. Goldstein has been active in veterans affairs.

Children's Theatre to Open Sunday

Endorsed by children's organizations, public schools and public libraries throughout the area, the Jewish Community Center's Children's Theatre Series will open this Sunday with "The Pied Piper," presented by the Rockeller Players. This will be the first in a series of four presentations.
 "The Pied Piper" is a dramatization of the old favorite children's story. It will be presented at Nathan Bishop Junior High School at two performances, 2 P.M. and 4 P.M., as will the other presentations.
 Subsequent monthly performances will feature the Children's Dance Theatre of Washington, D.C., directed by Erika Thimey, in a dual presentation — "King Solomon and the Bee" and "The First Totem Pole" — both presented in dance form; the Merrimimes of New York City's renowned Cricket Theatre in "The Firebird", the story immortalized in music by Igor Stravinsky, now told in the style of the Japanese Noh Theatre; final presentation of the season will be the Suzari Marionettes in "Puss in Boots", featuring one of the most ingenious marionette stages ever designed, oversized marionette figures, and adept technicians.
 Admission to Children's Theatre is open to all children of school age by season ticket only. No individual admission tickets are sold to any performance.
 Season tickets are available now at both Jewish Community Center buildings, from members of the

GJC Women's Division

To Meet Thursday

Activities and projects for 1961 will be discussed and planned at meeting of the board of directors of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee and the presidents of all Jewish women's organizations in the greater Providence area next Thursday at the Colony Motor Hotel.

Mrs. Julius Irving, president of the Women's Division, said the meeting will start at 10 A.M. with a discussion of the Community Calendar of events in order to avoid any conflicts of dates during the year. Presidents of the various organizations will participate in this phase of the meeting. Mr. Bertram L. Bernhardt is chairman of the community calendar.

An analysis and review of past campaigns will be made at the board meeting by leaders of the Women's Division and the General Jewish Committee with the purpose of formulating ways and means of improving and enlarging future campaigns.

Following luncheon, Albert I. Cherin of New York City, community consultant for the National Community Relations Advisory Council, will speak on present day community values. Reservations for the meeting may be made by calling GJC headquarters, GA 1-4111.

Mrs. Raymond L. Cohen, general chairman of the 1960 campaign of the Women's Division will report on the fund-raising drive.

Find Fewer Children

In Mixed Marriages

NEW YORK — American Jews were found, in a research reported here last week to slant with American Christians a pattern of maximum fertility in common faith marriages and low fertility in mixed marriages.

The findings were reported at a session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science Convention by Prof. Jacob C. Bresler of Brown University. Bresler studied 1,000 Brown University and Pembroke College alumni, tracing the origins and religions of their parents and grandparents.

He also found that marriages of men and women of the same faith but with different national origins, even if generations have moved, also produce fewer children. He reported that Catholic-Catholic marriages produce the greatest number of children. Next come Protestant-Protestant marriages and then Protestant-Catholic marriages. Last in fertility are marriages in which the mate are of the same faith but in which one partner was the child of parents of different faiths.

In reporting that Jewish marriages followed the same general trends, Bresler said he had studied fewer Jewish subjects was therefore less certain of his findings for this group. He said that his investigation found lower fertility whenever the marriage crossed ethnic groups.

SET FIRE TO SYNAGOGUE
PARIS — For the second time in the past two weeks, anti-Semitic vandals attempted to set fire to the Rue Pavée synagogue by placing gasoline-soaked newspapers against a synagogue wall. A police investigation is underway.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

THE JEWS OF CUBA

by Beryl Segal

In sunny Miami, the little neighborhood park is a children's paradise. The swings go higher and higher; the merry-go-round turns faster and faster; the jungle bars beckon to climb to the very top; the sand box is full of castles and tunnels. The youngsters play ball, ride the wooden donkeys and camels and horses, and go up and down on the see-saws.

And they shout for joy. They shout in Spanish. Most of the children are recent arrivals from Cuba, innocent bystanders of a revolution.

The children are accompanied by their parents. But more often they are watched by their grandparents. Sad, Yiddish-speaking grandparents, anxious about their Yankelch and Mindelech.

In the little neighborhood park, one sees the tragedy of the Jew. Within the life time of one person, the grandparents of these children emigrated from their native lands in Russia and in Poland, made their homes in Cuba, and now have come to the United States. They speak in Yiddish among themselves, their children speak Spanish, and soon their grandchildren will speak English only. Some do already, those who are going to schools.

So the grandparents sit on the benches in the park, mind the children, and in between speak in Yiddish.

They speak mostly of Cuba, the land they loved so much, and to which they would return tomorrow, if only they could.

There were about ten thousand Jews living in Cuba. Of these, about two thousand left the land. They did not leave Cuba because of persecution, as is the case of so many exiles in recent years. Cuba is the only land free of anti-Jewishness. They want you to remember this. They have nothing against the land. But they left Cuba because the laws of the land were in conflict with their economic existence. If they were manufacturers, the government confiscated their factories. If they were land owners, their land was taken away and given to those who work and live on the land. If they were the managers of department stores, these are now managed by the employees of the stores. If they were bankers, the banks are now the property of the government.

So they ran away. Some with money, others without any means at all.

A woman who was the president of the Women's Zionist Organization of Cuba now lives with her married daughter in a two room apartment. In Cuba, the family had a big house in Havana and a summer home in the provinces. The father who is over fifty years old cannot find any work. The daughter and the son-in-law are the providers. She hugs her little grandchild and talks of Cuba. Overnight, they were ruined. A decree was issued that their business was to become public property. The owner is the Cuban people. The former owners may stay and work as any other Cuban works, or he may leave.

They chose exile. In Miami they had business connections. They will start doing business here.

And they will. The day I spoke to the lady was the sixth week of their sojourn in Miami. But already they are planning to open the same factory here. True it will have to be on a small scale. Four families working together. But they will not go idle for long.

This is the spirit among all the Jews from Cuba. They do not brood over their past in Cuba, and are not bitter. They all find work. Life is hard now, but it will not be for long.

I am told that there is not a single Jewish family on relief or in the lines for help in the various committees that have been organized to help the Cuban refugees. The Jewish community of Miami does its share.

The children of school age are taken in the Hebrew schools free of charge, just as they are free to go to public schools, without the usual charge for strangers.

Parents who were Temple members are given free Temple membership as long as they will need it.

Women's Council is combing the city for jobs for younger people. They send college youth to schools on scholarships.

And Hias is there to help the Cuban Jews who wish to leave Miami and go settle somewhere else.

Some of them go. Some even go to Israel. But for most of the Cuban Jews, Miami is almost like home. The climate is the same. Home is so near. You can almost touch it. They tell you that. Cuba is only ninety miles away, they say.

In the meantime, they sit in the neighborhood parks with their grandchildren. They speak Yiddish among themselves, and they change just as quickly to Spanish when talking to their children. And the palm trees shake their heads above them.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

THE 12 KEYS TO NEXT UPTURN

There are 12 crucial "leading indicators" which the nation's most astute business forecasters are watching with intense interest because these indicators will flash in advance the end of the 1960-61 recession and the start of the next upswing.

Below you'll find this list as it has just been revised and expanded from eight to 12 by Dr. Geoffrey H. Moore of the National Bureau of Economic Research, one of the creators of the list and among the world's acknowledged authorities on the business cycle.

Next to each indicator will be the latest available information on what it shows, and at the end of this column you'll read what Dr. Moore thinks the indicators are now saying about this recession.

Do not underestimate the importance of this list. These 12 were selected out of hundreds of statistical series because of their remarkable record since long before World War II in signaling business ups and downs. As an illustration of their value, they began telegraphing the 1960 recession a full year ago, when optimism was at a peak. Here goes....

(1) Liabilities of business failures. Semi-favorable now. The high for failure liabilities (amount of money involved) was chalked up in June of 1960, and since then the total has been wavering below the top.

(2) Index of common stock prices. Semi-favorable now. Stock prices also have stabilized and advanced moderately.

(3) New orders of durable goods manufacturers. Still unfavorable. New orders have been in a slow decline for months, apparently continue down.

(4) Housing starts. Semi-favorable. The decline in housing starts has leveled off since June.

(5) Commercial and industrial building contracts. Favorable. This type of construction has held at a high level.

(6) Average work week in manufacturing. Semi-favorable. The decline in the work week has been slowing since September, may have stopped.

(7) Net change in number of operating businesses. Unfavorable. There is no sign yet that the sag here has been halted.

(8) Index of raw materials prices. Unfavorable. This vital index of prices is going down and there's not much hope for an upturn in the economy until this trend changes.

(9) Gross accession rate in manufacturing -- meaning rate of hiring and rehiring. Unfavorable. In October the rate was at the lowest since 1958.

(10) Layoff rate in manufacturing. Semi-favorable. The rate of firing was down a bit in October, better than in August.

(11) Corporate profits after taxes. Unfavorable. After-tax profits were still declining as of the end of the year.

(12) Change in business inventories. Unfavorable. There's no sign yet that businessmen have shifted away from liquidating inventories or toward reaccumulating them.

It adds up to six still unfavorable, five semi-favorable, one favorable -- a decidedly mixed picture, but better than a few months back when just about every indicator was pointing downward. And this implies, said Moore, when I interviewed him a few days ago, that:

The recession is continuing; BUT there are "tentative" signs that it will be "relatively mild;" AND there are some "preliminary" signals that "usually precede an upturn," even though these signals are not yet "decisive enough to suggest that the next upturn is directly ahead."

That's as far as Moore will go now, and properly so. But I'll guess that his findings also justify the expectation that this recession will bottom out in the first half of 1961.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

On the day Adolf Hitler stepped aboard his brand-new yacht, the scene was observed by a young pianist, Frederick Loewe, who worked in the band on a ship anchored nearby. The pianist never forgot that scene, even after he'd migrated to America, even after he became the fabulously successful composer of "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot." Now, from Miami where that Hitler yacht, the "Grille," is in port comes word that Frederick Loewe is bidding to buy the yacht.

Gary Cooper will be the guest of honor at a Friars' testimonial dinner in Hollywood. George Jessel, as toastmaster, notified all the speakers that they will be limited to two minutes. "Because," Jessel explained, "I've got a date later with a girl in Glendale, and she can't wait." ... Carl Sandburg asked Jessel for suggestions on his speech. Jessel said: "I don't think I need tell you, the great historian, what to say about a highly overpaid cowboy."

Jessel, incidentally, declined all invitations to New Year's Eve parties. He is mindful of Ferenc Molner's frowning upon such parties: "If there aren't enough guests, it's too sad; if there are too many guests, it's too noisy"... Jessel proclaimed, about New Year's Eve: "I need no designated date to wish you well. And nobody has to strike a gong to tell me 'Now get drunk.'"

Gypsy Rose Lee took a freighter to San Juan, where she will open the Drama Festival in "Auntie Mame"... Shelley Winters will make her London dramatic debut in a TV production of "Cheri," opposite Albert Finney... Ethel Merman, at the Stork Club, was asked if she finds it monotonous singing the same songs and reciting the same lines every day. The star of "Gypsy" replied: "Not at all. It's as monotonous as counting your money."

Lou Holtz, the veteran comic, is writing a book about his vaudeville years, for Doubleday. One story he'll tell is about Will Rogers, who preferred to make

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, California --Louie Quinn is a very funny fellow as the bookie in "77 Sunset Strip" but Louie was so outstanding in the feature film "Dondi" in the dramatic role of a blind man, he was given co-star billing. . . Max Lewin, who owns the Chez Paulette on the Sunset strip, across from the real Dino's, was made up to look like Napoleon. When Edd "Kookie" Byrnes asked who he thought he looked like, Max stared at himself in a mirror and guessed: "Clint Walker!"

Belle and Bob Shapiro, of Brookline, Mass., were my guests at Warner Brothers studios where they were struck starblind by a long array of TV and movie stars. Brookline and Boston will never be the same. . . Thanks to Herb Stern, unit man for "Portrait of a Mobster" starring Vic Morrow with Peter Breck and Leslie Parrish. . . Also to Dorothy Atlas, of Warner's TV press department. . . Both the perfect host and hostess.

The cast of "77 Sunset Strip" have a kidding classic in Producer Howie Horwitz' dress habits or lack of same. Howie is addicted to baggy slacks, jackets that look like hand-downs, and is particularly hooked on red socks. Roger Smith and Hugh Benson visited Howie one day and burned all of his baggy clothes at a special rag burning ceremony. Howie almost broke down, but recovered sufficiently to purchase a new wardrobe. On the outside, he is immaculate, but on the inside he's wearing a blazing red jacket lining and on the underneath of his slacks -- red socks again!

Didn't know until I asked that "tante" in French is the same as in Jewish -- aunt. Learned it from the title of the new Parisienne comedy revue "La Plume de ma Tante" (the pen of my aunt) at the Las Vegas Riviera. . . If you want a professional movie screen for your home, same as those in movie houses, get one of Radiant Mfg. Co.'s new lenticular Optiglow screens. Unlike the old beaded screen, there is no fall-off of light or color when viewed from the sides or the floor.

Chanukah card from Beldon Katelman, Las Vegas: "We're in the midst of plans for the new El Rancho Vegas (burned down) but we'd like to take time out to extend holiday greetings. . . After Peter Lawford's anti-Semitic "Exodus" role, will Sammy Davis, Jr., talk to his Sinatra Clan brother anymore? . . . Gogi Grant is the first vocalist to sing an Israeli folk song in the Cocoanut Grove and a certain plush New York hotel who, I am surprised, extended itself even to permit Gogi, a Jewish gal, to sing in its "untarnished" room. . . Shecky Green bought the late Earl Carroll's huge home in Beverly Hills.

Tragic irony in "Exodus" during the chess game when Gregory Ratoff is told by his opponent: "Whatever move you make you were dead 10 minutes ago" . . .

TO INCREASE PRICES

TEL AVIV — Israelis faced the new year of 1961 with higher prices for essential commodities and services like bread and bus transportation. Both the bakers and the bus cooperatives were authorized to increase their prices, by 10 percent.

George Jessel spoke at Ratoff's funeral and described him as "sometimes Puck, then Hamlet, often peasant and even Georgian prince" . . . During the marathon press showing of "Exodus," no refreshments were sold. The night was long and it was like starving through a second Yom Kippur.

That super-long black Cad waiting outside the Fox Wilshire theater during the "Exodus" showing belonged to Mrs. Rea Warner, Harry's widow. She's one of the most charitable women in Hollywood. . . Attention, Walt Disney: In your holiday parades at Disneyland, you used a group of Arabs. Next time, please include some Israelites, Walt? Even though Christmas is not our holiday, you could let us salute Chanukah.

few dollars on clothes. He spends enough on books."

If she is sweet, "She is too sweet. Something is false."

If she is embittered, "He is fine but she will ruin his career."

If she is tall, "She is big as Og. What does he need such a tall girl?"

If she is short, "What's to see?"

If her dresses button at the neck, "Old style from the year ten."

If her dresses button an inch below the neckline, "French styles, the rabbi's wife, did you ever hear of it? In a strapless?"

Were the rabbi to succumb to an ulcer in the face of all this magnanimity the congregation would never believe anything else but that it was the fault of "that nagging wife of his."

But there is hope. In the large city the answer lies in having the rabbi's wife join a different congregation. Then she could talk about HER rabbi and HIS wife. This would relieve the pressure. For the rabbi in the small town who cannot afford such luxuries, there are two possible answers. The rabbi's wife can start the same kind of small talk about the synagogue president's wife or the rabbi can convince his wife to light Hanukah candles on Purim. Either action would convince the "small talkers" that they were right in the first place. This would leave the rabbi free to move to a large city where his wife could solve the problem by implementing the plan for rabbis in large cities. Some rabbis have solved their problem in this way. That is why there are so many rabbis in our larger cities.

There are rumors that there is one rabbi who loves the rabbinate so much that rather than bemoan his fate he solved his problem in a unique way. He went to the nearest automobile showroom and purchased a flaming red convertible with white sidewall tires, zebra hide seat covers and twin spotlights.

Now, at first blush this sounds like a neurotic solution to one of life's problems. But there is more to this than what is obvious. When one of his younger colleagues approached him and asked him how he, as a rabbi, could drive through town in this symbol of wild youth, he said, "It took me ten long years to discover the secret. Why should they talk about me? Why should they talk about my wife? Let them talk about my car!"

The most perilous occupation in which the modern rabbi participates is the social affairs. It seems that most people at these parties insist on discussing other rabbis. There is a prefabricated pattern to this assault. It starts with a probing question.

"Do you happen to know Rabbi Quincemayer?" Sure you know him. A nicer fellow never drew breath. The correct answer is, "Yes, a decent and capable fellow." To answer with a simple, "Yes," is to open the anti-submarine net and invite a torpedo. The attack is then launched in earnest.

"You know Rabbi, he is . . . I don't know how . . . nice fellow but . . . my wife . . . well, I can tell you . . . YOU will understand . . . I don't think he handles his congregation the right way."

Who could? Poor Rabbi Quincemayer has a small congregation and if there is anyone left over who is not on the board of directors he is immediately appointed as chairman of a committee. As it turns out, the informant is the one member of the congregation for whom there was no committee assignment. The correct approach is to point out that he is in the same boat with Rabbi Quincemayer. The good rabbi also has no committee assignment.

It seems that the most succulent tidbit does not really hold water when subjected to close scrutiny. For example, one member discovered some delightful things about his rabbi. The rabbi did not wrestle on television in his spare time. He was not double-jointed. He was not going to convert to Zen Buddhism; he was driven to read it in self-defense. The rabbi's mother was not an Iroquois maiden. And the rabbi was not on the pulpit because "Alcoholics Anonymous changed his life." The only rumor that stood up through all efforts to demolish it was indeed a fact; the rabbi had NOT had a party for his Bar Mitzvah!

The simple and unadorned truth is that man really likes being a rabbi. He loves his people and his religion. He is willing to put up with their idiosyncrasies. So intent is he on his life work that he greets with a smile the fact that in this country it has come to pass that there is a chicken in every pot.

charitable contributions anonymously. One day they passed a place where funds were being raised to buy toys for poor children. Rogers donated $1,000 in cash. The clerk asked for his name and Rogers said: "If I gave you my name, would that buy more toys for the children?"

George Stevens, Jr., now associate producer with his father on "The Greatest Story Ever Told," will produce his own film, Nicholas Monsarrat's "License to Kill" ... The veteran Ted Lewis has oxygen in the wings, for his engagement at Harrah's in Lake Tahoe. Because it's 8,000 ft. high, Lewis finds it tough to play a clarinet there ... Marilyn Davies took her Texas boyfriend to see the giant Christmas tree in Rockefeller Center. The Texan said of it: "Cute."

At the CBS correspondents' luncheon recently, Dave Schoenbrun told this story about de Gaulle's tour of America. In San Francisco the French leader was served California wine. He sipped it and said: "Don't they know I never drink tea?"

In Stockholm recently, Ingemar Johansson announced that he'd lost 6 lbs. mysteriously, the night before Patterson knocked him out. That story was first published here last June ... Another innovation at Carnegie Hall--the stage decorated with red balloons for Skitch Henderson's New Year's Eve concert.

When Brendan Behan returned to Dublin he replied to a local critic who'd mentioned his time in an English jail: "Wasn't the President himself in an English jail, and if that was a disqualification from the franchise wouldn't half our politicians lose the vote?" ...

Behan said that in the U.S. he was glad to meet Paul Keating, "with whom I have a kind of family connection since his uncle sentenced me to 14 years penal servitude."

The new executive director of NYU's Jewish Culture Foundation, Dr. David Passow brought to its library a vast collection of ancient Jewish documents and microfilms -- all obtained by him in Russia this year ... The Golden Theater has installed, for phone-callers, recorded announcements of ticket-availabilities for the Nichols & May show ... Moss Hart, director of "Camelot," is over his heart attack and will rest in Palm Springs.

Hollywood studios no longer install private projection-rooms in the homes of executives. The practice began years ago, so that executives would not have to return to the studio at night to see films. Carl Laemmle was among the first to have such a projection room. He used it judiciously. When his son wanted to invite friends to a home screening, Laemmle refused: "If they see it here free, then who'll pay to see our movies?"

Paul Butler, chairman of the convention which nominated Sen. Kennedy, has not as yet been invited to the Inaugural ... A Wall Streeter at the Coachman, saw a noted builder who is nery in his promotions. "Here's how he operates," said the Wall Streeter. "He approaches bankers with a proposition like this -- 'I've got a door; how about nailing a hotel to it?'" ... Jayne Mansfield was the most photographed girl in Greece during the filming of "It Happened in Athens." She shrugged: "It takes uncoverage to get coverage."

Ivy Baker Priest, who soon will retire as Treasurer of the United States, said of the rumor-spreading in Washington: "Here sound travels faster than light."

PROF. ROSTON TO SPEAK
Prof. Murray Roston will address the next teacher's seminar on Monday at 8 P.M. at the Bureau of Jewish Education library. The seminar will be devoted to the theme of the development of Hasidism on the occasion of the 200th anniversary of the founder of the movement, the Baal Shem Tov.
Teachers in all departments have been invited to attend the session which is sponsored by the School Council and the Bureau. Dates reserved for teacher seminar meetings are Feb. 27, March 20, April 17 and May 15.

JEWISH ATTORNEY NAMED TO TURKISH ASSEMBLY
ISTANBUL — Erol Dilke, a young Jewish attorney, was named by Gen. Cemal Gursel, the Turkish Premier, as a representative to the new Constituent Assembly for the Jewish community. The attorney has been serving as legal advisor for the Grand Rabbinate here. He was a Republican party candidate in the 1957 elections but lost when the Democratic list was victor. The Constituent Assembly convened Jan. 6, to approve a new constitution and a new election law. It will end its activities in October when general elections for a new Parliament will be held.

The 272 members of the lower house are elected mainly by professional groups and political parties. Gen Gursel has the authority to name 12 members.

Mrs. Alvin S. Rosenberg, the former Miss Phyllis Sandra Schwartz, was married on Jan. 8 at Temple Beth El.

Society

Rosenberg-Schwartz

Miss Phyllis Sandra Schwartz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac D. Schwartz of 11 Minola Street, Cranston, was married to Alvin Stanley Rosenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Rosenberg of 157 Oak Hill Avenue, Pawtucket, on Jan. 8 at Temple Beth El. Rabbi Saul Leeman and Rabbi William G. Braude officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the temple.

Miss Estelle Rosenberg was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Yvette Rosenberg, Miss Cynthia Berlinsky, and Mrs. Marvin Lerman.

The maid of honor wore a coral dress of poul de chrome fashioned with ¾ sleeves and bouffant skirt featuring crisscrossed tucks and a single bow. Bridesmaids wore gowns similar to that of the maid of honor. The attendants carried cascades of roses.

Steven Rosenberg served as best man. Ushers were Carl Swartz, Allen Swartz, Jerry Swartz, and Seymour Norman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was dressed in silk bombazine with a scoop neckline marked with Alencon lace appliques accented with pearls and sequins. Her gown ended in a chapel train highlighted by a bow. Her imported silk illusion fingertip veil fell from a half-hat of silk leaves trimmed with seed pearls and alencon lace. She carried a cascade of roses centered with an orchid.

The mother of the bride wore a pure silk satin brocaded dress with a pink sweetheart neckline and bell shaped skirt. The bridegroom's mother wore pink satin with a scooped neckline with pearls and a peplum skirt. Both wore white orchid corsages.

Announce Engagement

Mrs. Rebecca Limer of 80 Forest Street announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Leah Glickman of Canandaigua, N. Y., to Samuel Silverman of Wawick. Mr. Silverman is the son of Mrs. Nathan Silverman of Providence. A spring wedding is planned.

Participating in the service will be Rabbi Morris Schusheim, Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Alter Boyman, Solomon Lightman, Harry Finkelstein, Mrs. Harry Sklut, Arthur Korman and Maurice Bromberg.

Members of the committee are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lappin, Abraham Grebstein, Nathan Schwartz, Harry Hoffman and Israel Klausner.

GJC Drive Fund Reaches $635,000

The 1960 campaign total of the General Jewish Committee now stands at $635,000 an increase in excess of $35,000 over the amount raised in the 1959 campaign.

Merrill L. Hassenfeld, general campaign chairman, said that there are still some persons who have not yet made a contribution to the 1960 fund-raising drive. He said that GJC officials are still hopeful of attaining the goal of $650,000.

South dealer: North-South vulnerable. At my table the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
1H	1S	3H	4S
5H	Pass	Pass	Pass

My partner led the ace of diamonds; I played the two; she then played the queen of spades, which I overtook with the king, and declarer trumped it. Declarer then crossed to dummy with the ace of clubs, returned to her hand with the queen of hearts, and ruffed a small club with a small trump in dummy. She then returned to her hand with a spade ruff and played the jack of clubs, which she trumped with the jack of hearts. She then played the king of diamonds, followed by a small one, which she ruffed with the king of hearts. Next she played the ten of clubs, which my partner won with the king, declarer discarding a spade from dummy. I trumped my partner's trick with the eight of hearts and played a diamond through. My partner had to make her ten of hearts and thus defeat the contract.

In the other room our pair allowed the opposition to get into 4S without even competing in the bidding. In spite of the modest point count it is utterly wrong to pass the South hand. Its shape and playing trick value quite override the point count. Admittedly in the end South is left with a tricky decision — whether to double 4S or to bid 5H — but I think that on the bidding sequence 5H is justified, because neither North nor South can feel confident about breaking a 4S contract.

Israeli Minister Says Nasser Has Many Tanks

JERUSALEM — President Nasser of the United Arab Republic has more tanks than Marshall Montgomery had in his desert victory over Nazi Field Marshal Rommel. "The total number is unusually large," Shimon Peres, Israel's Deputy Defense Minister, reported.

Mr. Peres made the disclosure in a report on Nasser's growing military strength at a meeting of the political committee of the 25th World Zionist Congress.
