Adenauer Condemns Eichmann's Crimes

BONN — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer made a special statement from the rostrum of the Bundestag last week affirming that "the German people are absolutely unanimous in their condemnation of (Adolf) Eichmann and his crimes."

The Chancellor's statement came after angry scenes in the Lower House when leaders of the Social Democratic opposition demanded that the Chancellor repudiate a hate-mongering campaign against Willy Brandt, Mayor of West Berlin, who heads the Social Democratic ticket in the forthcoming elections. Some of the Chancelor's followers had accused Brandt of "treason" because he emigrated from Germany during the Nazi regime.

Fritz Erler, the Social Democratic deputy chairman of the Bundestag, took the floor to demand repudiation of these attacks on Brandt. He told the chamber that Hitler and Eichmann, who is now awaiting trial in Israel for the slaughter of six million Jews, were not identical with Germany. A voice from the floor interrupted: "Neither is Willy Brandt." The Social Democrat excitedly replied: "If I had to cast my vote for Eichmann or Brandt, I would vote for Brandt."

Dr. Adenauer objected to this option offered by Erler, asserting that it would cause "incalcuable damage to the entire German people." He then said from the rostrum: "I hereby affirm that the German people are absolutely unanimous in their condemnation and abhorrence of Eichmann and his crimes."

The attacks on the West German Mayor for having emigrated to fight the Nazis drew sharp criticism in the publication of the Central Council of Jews in Germany. Dr. H. G. Van Dam, the organization's secretary - general, wrote there that "it is sad, indeed, if Germans today must defend themselves for having actively resisted the Nazi regime."

Israeli Students Enjoy Holiday As Teachers Strike

TEL AVIV, Israel — About 4,000 high school seniors are preparing for matriculation examinations in "do-it-yourself" groups and 25,000 students in lower classes of academic high schools are enjoying an unscheduled holiday as a strike by 1,500 teachers enters its third week.

The strikers want to end the relationship between the salaries of teachers in academic high schools and those of their colleagues in kindergartens, primary, agricultural or vocational schools.

The Government's problem stems from the fact that it can not yield to the 1,500 high school teachers without risking a strike by more than 20,000 instructors working in other schools.

The fight to increase differentials is part of a broader struggle by Israeli intellectuals for status. The striking teachers are being suppotred by salary-earning doctors, engineers, lawyers and other professionals opposed to the traditional wage equalitarianism here. This has developed from a situation existing before the establishment of the state of Israel, when there was a surplus of professionals and a shortage of laborers among immigrants from Europe.

This year the teachers set a deadline for recognition. They warned that they would not return to school March 5, after the Purim holiday, unless they received a satisfactory offer. As the deadline approached, Education Minister Abba Eban asked for another two weeks. However, the teachers struck.

South African Jews To Fight Clause In University Statue

JOHANNESBURG — Steps taken by the South African Jewish Board of Deputies to defend the "conscience clause" in the statue of the Orange Free State University, which university officials are seeking to have eliminated in part, were reported at the monthly meeting of the board last week.

The conscience clause is a provision in South African university legislation which bans religious discrimination in staff appointments of student admissions. The Orange Free State University seeks to have the portion relating to staff appointments nullified.

Arthur Suzman, chairman of the board's public relations committee, reported that the university had tried at its inception to omit the conscience clause but the South African Parliament had insisted on inclusion of the clause in the university's enabling act. The university introduced a bill at the current session of Parliament to obtain the partial nullification.

The Board of Deputaies sent all MP's a detailed memorandum on the issue which stressed the case for retention of the full clause, Suzman noted. He told the board that no special position was being claimed for the Jews.

Mapai Refuses To End Effort At Coalition

TEL AVIV — The Mapai leadership, rebuffed again in its search for some way to create a new coalition government by negotiation to avoid new elections, refuses to end the effort.

The latest rebuff was a decision reached by the Progressive Party to reject a proposal to join a government headed by Finance Minister Levi Eshkol as prime minister and David Ben-Gurion as defense minister. The proposal also called for the National Religious Party to join to create a narrow coalition government to replace the one Mr. Ben-Gurion toppled last Jan. 31.

The Progressive Party Executive debated the invitation for several hours. The decisive arguments were that it was not the minority parties but the Mapai which had brought about the crisis and the agreement would put obstacles in the path of the formation of a new "Liberal Non-Socialist Party" for which talks have been underway between the Progressives and the General Zionist.

The vote on the proposal was 56 against, 16 in favor and one abstention.

The National Religious Party also indicates at a meeting that it did not want to join an "improvised government" by terming elections "an accomplished fact" and by appointing a special committee to prepare their party for an election campaign. The party also named a committee to survey possibilities of a merger with the religious party.

Undeterred by the newest setbacks, Mapai leaders met with Mr. Ben-Gurion to explore futher possibilities for working out a government by negotiation. The meeting was called despite indications from Mapai sources that the only other possibilty for a colition would be a socialist one of Mapai, Mapam and Archdut Avodah.

Nasser Supports Algeria Talks

CAIRO — Algerian nationalist leaders have been advised by United Arab Republic President Nasser that they should negotiate a peace with French President de Gaulle, it was reported from here by Jay Walz of The New York Times. Nasser also was reported to have said he would not oppose efforts of Tunisian President Habib Bouguiba, with whom he has been feuding, to work out a peace with France.

Informed sources, Walz wrote, say that Nasser is eager to see the Algerian question settled on "reasonable terms," not yet clearly spelled out. Cairo, it is said, will go along with any settlement "acceptable to the Algerians" represented by Premier Ferhat Abbas' Algerian Provisional Government.

In talks with Balkacem Krim, Algerian Provisional Vice President and Foreign Minister, Nasser is said to have urged rebel leaders to stay away from military or political alliances with France, but did not oppose any financial ties that would be advantageous to the Algerians.

Walz reported that Nasser's views were sought by Krim because the rebels have depended heavily on his support in their six-year fight for independence, and because they wanted his approval before supporting Bourguiba. The two-year old feud between Nasser and Bourguiba has recently shown signs of cooling off.

Nasser, Walz stated, also would like to see an "honorable settlement" of the Algerian problem for domestic reasons, since his commitment to support Algerian independence is blocking resumption of diplomatic relations with France.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

SAVE ON TAXES

(In Cooperation With The Research Institute Of America)

(This is the first of a series of articles by Sylvia Porter on filing income tax reports)

The chance of your income tax return being audited is higher now than ever before -- and by the time your 1960 return is actually examined, the odds probably will be even higher.

So be warned! Use extra care in preparing your return this year. Make sure you have and keep supporting records both to back up all the deductions you claim AND to explain the source of all deposits in your bank account.

Last year Congress boosted the budget for Treasury examining agents. The new batch of agents hired with the additional funds already is being used to step up the number of returns audited, and since many of President Kennedy's top tax advisers favor adding still more agents to undertake still more examinations, the likelihood is for even more audits in coming months.

In addition to examining more returns, agents are going over the returns in greater detail than ever before. In past years, agents generally concentrated on making taxpayers prove their deductions and they rarely questioned the income sections of your return -- showing your salary, interest, dividends.

You can, of course, still expect to have to support your deductions and, as a matter of fact, if you don't have satisfactory records and supporting documents for travel, entertainment and similar expenses, you face more than a disallowance of your deductions. You also may get an official "warning letter" to improve your records -- or else. If you get a "warning letter," it's almost a sure bet your future returns will be examined. The obvious warning is to keep good records to back up your deductions and avoid this.

But in addition, you must now also anticipate that the agent who examines your return will check whether you have reported all your taxable income. This will be done in two ways:

First, the information returns filed by corporations, banks, etc., reporting the interest and dividends which were paid to individual stockholders and depositors will be more intensively checked against the personal returns of the person who received these payments. If this matching process reveals that you omitted any interest and dividends or other types of income, you can expect trouble. The Treasury has warned taxpayers to report all interest and dividends on their returns, for in recent years there has been a large gap between the amount of interest and dividends paid and that reported as income on taxpayers' records.

The Treasury is determined to narrow this gap, and if it finds taxpayers who are guilty of omitting income, it may get real rough. If you omit income, you can be subject to possible fraud penalties.

Second, agents are more frequently checking taxable income against deposits shown on your bank statements. If you have deposits you cannot explain, the agent may arbitrarily add them to your taxable income. At best, this can cause a needless waste of time and energy in tracking down the real nature of the deposit. And at worst, you may have to pay extra income tax because you can't prove that the deposit wasn't income.

The lessons should be unmistakable to you. Keep the best possible records of both your expenses and deposits.

One further warning in preparing your return. If you pay someone else to prepare your return, choose a reputable person. Professional men are governed by ethical codes which normally insure a responsible job. If you use someone else and can't easily check his or her references, consult a Better Business Bureau or similar organization. Remember you will be held responsible for any errors made by the person who prepared your return.

Expense accounts are now really in the hot, white glare of the Treasury spotlight. They no longer are a quiet way of siphoning nontaxable fringe benefits out of a business.

On the business tax returns for 1960, the Treasury has built in a spotlight which will pinpoint expense accounts that tax agents will be eager to examine. The frank aim is to find and knock out any business deduction for amounts paid to cover personal rather than true business expenses. Here is how it works.

If the combined earnings and expense account of a corporate officer, partner or individual pro-

ONE MAN'S OPINION

A PEOPLE DWELLING ALONE

by Beryl Segal

There is a very interesting story in the Book of Numbers of which I thought the other day. It is the story of Balak, the son of Zippor, the Bilaam, the son of Beor. The Children of Israel were journeying in the wilderness, and they came to rest on the plains of Noab, which is a region beyond the Jordan, by the City of Jericho.

Balak, the King of Moab, was afraid of the Israelites, and he sent messengers to Bilaam to come and curse the people.

"Come and curse this people," he said in his urgent invitation, "for they are mightier than I am."

When Bilaam came to Moab and looked at the Children of Israel from a distance, he said:

"From the top of the rocks
I see him,
And from the hills I behold
him,
Lo, it is a people that shall dwell alone,
And shall not be reckoned
among the nations."

How frightening a vision of the destiny of the Jewish people, spoken so many thousand years ago.

That was in the spring time of the entry of the Jews into world politics.

And now, in 1961, we read of the position of the land of Israel in the United Nations, and how similar it is to that of the vision of Bilaam.

"Lo, it is a people that shall dwell alone."

According to Boris Smolair, a veteran correspondent in the Jewish Daily Forward, Israel is all alone at the General Assembly of the United Nations, now in session.

She does not bring any more complaints against her neighbors. She does not demand any more passage through the Suez Canal.

Israel came to realize that Nasser goes his own way in spite of United Nations resolutions. He threatens. He boasts. And he denies Jewish shipping passage through "his" canal. And the United Nations is either powerless, or is not willing to do anything about it.

Israel is also more or less isolated from the blocks that have formed within the United Nations. It is no longer a union of nations but a union of blocks. And Israel does not fit in any of those blocks.

There is the European block, and Israel is not in Europe although in culture and in politics, she is European.

There is a Soviet block, and Israel is definitely out of that block, although her Kibutzim are the ideal communes. All the swear words of the Communist Block are used up on Israel. She is Imperialistic. She is a Colonial enslaver. She is a tool of America, of England, of France, and of everything that is currently degrading. Nasser is the ideal ruler, and Cuba is the ideal state, but not Israel. She can expect no sympathy from the Soviet block.

There is an African-Assian block, and Israel who is definitely of that group, does not belong to it. There, too, the hands of Nasser are pushing Israel away. Since the Conference of Casablanca, where Egypt played a major role, the African countries cooled off toward Israel. Even such newly formed countries as Ghuana and Mali whom Israel helped greatly in their development, have signed the Anti-Israel resolution of Casablanca. So Israel is out with this block.

She certainly is not in the Latin American block, or the Asian block which is made up of such countries as India, China, or Burma.

Israel is neither a member of NATO nor of SEATO, nor of the Warsaw pact.

"Lo, it is a people that shall dwell alone."

France, who was a friend of Israel in the United Nations and out of the United Nations, even France will probably isolate herself from the land of Israel. France is now in the midst of ending the strife with Algiers, and that is uppermost in her mind now. Algiers is a Moslem nation, and will, no doubt, ally herself with the Arabs. It would be suicidal for France to be openly friendly to Israel, when the entire policy of the Arab world, the one point which in fact unites them, is opposition to Israel.

The only hope for Israel is the friendship of America. This country is well aware of the intriques of Nasser in the Congo and of his politics with the Arab refugees. The State Department is not very fond of Nasser. The policy of the government is now slow, careful negotiations for a peaceful solution of the Arab-Israel problem.

Israel has, apparently, more faith in America than in the United Nations. She is quiet, she is unobtrusive in the United Nations. Her voice is not heard in the present General Assembly. She knows that she can hope to gain more by being patient, and wait for American intervention in an Arab-Israel peace, than by open demands in the United Nations.

"Lo, a people that shall dwell alone."

That is apparently the destiny of Israel.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

TEL AVIV: The waiter, in his brand new uniform, brought the breakfast dishes quickly. He set the table while I sunned myself in the rays off the Mediterranean, on a terrace made of limestone quarried in Nazareth. "Sir," he suggested, "couldn't I bring you a nice piece of herring, too? Six kinds, we have." I mentioned the 12 kinds of herring at Grossinger's.

"But we are a young country," he said. Israel, too, could have had a dozen kinds of herring, he added, but Prime Minister Ben-Gurion had checked that program by insisting: "No, no. First the atomic reactor, and then the herring."

Thus do they joke about the years of austerity. Albert, the guide in the new red bus that brought us to Caesarea, the ancient Roman capital, to show us the excavations, pointed to the nearby golf course and said: "Only a few years ago all Israel was one big golf course -- plenty of rough and sand traps. They could have put the 18 holes in anywhere."

Albert indicated -- his bared left arm still bore the tattoo of his number at Auschwitz concentration camp -- the orange groves near Hadera, which means "green." He said: "We Israeli love to eat oranges. Thank God we grow a few bad ones -- otherwise they'd all be exported,"

Beyond Nathania, within view of the hills of Jordan, we crossed a railroad track. "Years ago, a man tried to commit suicide by stretching out on the track and waiting for a train," said Albert. "He died all right -- from starvation." But now the transport tonnage is vast, and Israel even builds its own cars. The late President Weizmann had said, in those early years: "We're getting to be a big state. We have horse thieves, but no horses yet."

Here, in this land where "Exodus," was filmed by Otto Preminger, the producer-director's name has become a verb. On the hilltop, with its spectacular panorama of Haifa, the guide told us: "Now go and Preminger," meaning "take the photos." To the Arab guide in Nazareth, the important name is Linkletter. "I'm in his TV show," the guide beamed.

In the valley beneath the mountain where Saul and Jonathan planned their ill-fated campaign against the Philistines, catacombs recently were unearthed. There are 29 caves containing the tombs

Your Money's Worth

prietor totals $10,000 or more, his firm's income tax return must specifically list his name and separately show his earnings and expense account. This information also must be supplied for an individual proprietor's five top-paid employes whose combined pay and expense accounts total $10,000 or more. (A limit is set on the number of partners and corporate officers who must be listed by large firms.)

With this kind of information on the face of the business return, an agent easily can identify those officers of the firm who get the big expense accounts. The personal returns of these individuals then can be checked to see how they reported the expense account received from the corporation and how they claimed to have spent it.

Can you, as a businessman, take the pressure off your expense account people by not furnishing the information required about them on the business return?

The Treasury has stated that no penalty will be imposed if you fail to supply the information -- but it warns that lack of the required data where it might reasonably be expected may lead to an examination of the return. Yet, as a practical matter, if spotlighting the amount as required will surely bring an examination, some businessmen may decide in favor of omitting the information.

Note that the Treasury has defined "expense account" broadly. The term includes any advances or reimbursements paid to, and amounts incurred by or on behalf of the officer, partner, etc. Thus liberal use of credit cards won't take the payments out of the expense account category. All amounts charged through any type of credit card still are expense account payments for the purposes of the information required on the return.

Also if the firm pays directly for a railroad or plane ticket for an officer, partner, etc., the firm's payment is viewed as part of the expense account of the particular officer, partner, etc.

Another sensitive area of fringe benefit expense deductions spotlighted by the 1960 business returns covers payments made by the firm for various facilities which might be put to personal rather than business use.

Here again, the Treasury wants this information on the face of the return so that its agents can check whether the deductions honestly stand up as business expenses. So the business returns ask for a YES or NO answer on whether deductions were claimed for such items as hunting lodges, fishing camps or yachts; vacations for partners, customers or employes or members of their families; apartments, hotel rooms, etc., used for non-business purposes by partners, customers, employes or members of their families; cost of having members of the employes' families at conventions or business meetings.

A "YES" answer will make your return an odds on favorite for a thorough examination.

And this is only part of the story, for the Treasury isn't relying solely on business returns to give it damaging information on expense account fringe benefits.

The Treasury is not only spotlighting extravagant expense accounts and fringe benefits by requiring businessmen to show these items on the face of their returns, it is also taking the important step of tightening up on the expense account "loophole" which the Treasury itself created. All employes who get and all employers who pay expense accounts should read the following points with utmost care.

Generally, an employe doesn't have to report his reimbursed business expenses or his reimbursement on his own return if he is required by his employer to "account" for these expenses and he does so. In this care, an employe's own return is clean in the sense of not showing any questionable expense account items on its face.

Some employers give certain employes expense accounts without caring particularly how the money is spent. In order to permit these special employes to come under the general rule of not reporting such expenses, the employers set up a casual accounting system which they don't actually intend to use as a check on expenses.

This "loophole" is now being closed. When an agent examines an employer's return, he is instructed to examine the type of "accounting" which is required from employes whose expenses are reimbursed. If the agent feels that the employer's accounting requirements are not adequate to insure that only legitimate business expenses are reimbursed, he will check out the employes who received reimbursement for purposes of auditing their personal records. Where the employer's accounting requirement is not adequate, the Treasury expects the employe to have his own records to support his expense account deductions.

You, as an employer, can help your expense account employes steer clear of Treasury trouble by setting up a good accounting procedure. For example, employers should require employes to submit supporting data such as bills, stubs, tickets, etc., whenever possible.

You, as an employe, can protect yourself by keeping full and adequate supporting records of both reimbursements and actual expense outlays. You should not fail to do this if you think your employer's accounting requirements may be considered inadequate by the Treasury.

You must be careful about the following special Travel and Entertainment expense problems. Agents have been told:

...Not to consider any credit card as automatic evidence of a deductible business expense. You will need supporting evidence showing who was entertained, why, when, etc.

...Not to accept an expense diary as proof of a deductible expense unless the amounts are relatively small, the so-called "Light" diary. If the diary lists heavy expenditures, agents must ask for supporting data.

...Not to permit deductible car expenses to be computed merely on the basis of yearly mileage times an estimated cost per mile.

...Not to accept checks made out to cash as evidence of deductible expenditures.

One final word of caution on T & E deductions to owners of closely held corporations. If you have thought of cutting corners on T & E expenses, think again. If the Treasury disallows the corporation a deduction for such payments to the stockholder-officer, it also usually taxes him on the same amount as a dividend. Depending on the tax brackets involved, a total extra tax cost to the corporation and its owner can come to more than 100 per cent of the disallowed expenses.

W.J.C. Gets Congo Jewery's Report

NEW YORK — The bulk of the Jewish community of what was formerly the Belgian Congo has now returned and is attempting to restore its former communal activities, according to a report received by the World Jewish Congress in New York.

The report, from the congregation in Elizabethville, was sent by Mr. J. Soriano and Mr. J. S. Capelluto, President and Secretary of the community, respectively.

The two Congo Jewish leaders said that they are now taking a census of the community. Figures so far available show a decrease of about 20 per cent. Prior to the Belgian withdrawal from the Congo, the Jewish community totaled about 2,500 of whom 1,000 were in Elizabethville, the principal Jewish center.

Va. Grants Legal Status To Nazis

RICHMOND, Va. — The State of Virginia granted legal status to the American Nazi party of George Lincoln Rockwell and permitted him to incorporate as a company to do business in the state. The State Corporation Commission approved an application by Rockwell for a charter. The application bore a swastika and Nazi slogan.

In the application to be recognized as a legal company, the Nazi party stated its aim as "the gaining of political power in the United States by all legal means and elective processes" and "education of the American public."

Directors of the new Virginia company were listed as Rockwell, chairman, and Seth David Ryan, both of Arlington and J. V. Kenneth Morgan of Alexandria. Both Alexandria and Arlington are communities in Northern Virginia adjacent to the District of Columbia. Rockwell made known that the national Nazi headquarters was now "legal" and "recognized by the state."

Student Confesses To Seminary Fires

NEW YORK — A 21-year-old student at the Orthodox Rabbinical Seminary of America in Forest Hills, Queens, has admitted setting five fires which caused about $20,000 in damages to an annex of the seminary. The student, Pesach Pasternac, was to be arraigned in Ridgewood Felony Court.

Pasternac reportedly has been asked to leave the seminary because of "difficulties" and set the fires to "get even." Detectives had maintained a round-the-clock watch on the seminary after the fifth fire in two weeks had started in a frame building adjoining the main brick building.

Pasternac finally admitted the fire after saying that a friend of his had started them. He was quoted as stating that "They (the seminary officials) did not consider me a student . . . I couldn't learn. I wanted extra tutoring and they wouldn't give it to me.

Witnesses Sought From Majdanek

NEW YORK — A global search has been instituted by the World Jewish Congress in New York for survivors from the Majdanek concentration camp in Poland where 250,000 Jews were gassed and shot by the Nazis.

The survivors are required to provide evidence against camp officials sought for prosecution by the West German authorities.

Majdanek, once a camp for Polish Jewish prisoners of war, was transformed into a concentration camp by the Germans for the Jews from the ghettos of Warsaw, Lublin and its surrounding areas. There were five sectors, each split into 24 barracks.

Majdanek was the scene of one of the Nazis' most monstrous acts. In one single day, November 3, 1943, 18,000 Jews were murdered. In all, about 250,000 victims died in the gas chambers.

Former Majdanek internees are requested to contact Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director, World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y.

Frost To Lecture In Jerusalem

NEW YORK — American poet Robert Frost left recently for the Hebrew University of Jerusalem to serve as the first lecturer in American culture and civilization in the chair established by Samuel Paley of Philadelphia.

At a luncheon tendered to Frost by the American Friends of the Hebrew University prior to his departure, Daniel G. Ross, chairman of the board, expressed the organization's profound satisfaction over Frost's visit to the Hebrew University.

"We, who are dedicated to a program of cultural interaction between our American civilization and the flowering new civilization of Israel see in Robert Frost's visit the concrete expression of this idea," he said. "We also see in it a reflection of mind and spirit."

President Kennedy, in a message to Frost, said, "I am delighted to learn of your recent appointment as the first Samuel Paley lecturer in American culture and civilization at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. I know that your visit will provide the people of Israel with a rare cultural opportunity."

At a press conference following the luncheon the 86-year old poet said jocularly, "I look on Israel as an American colony." He then added, "They all speak English there. They have so much of the American people's spirit. They have many, many thigs in common with us — more than anybody else."

Frost said that he did not know what his plans would be in advance because "I need the pressure of the moment to be drawn into a discussion. The Lord will provide. I will say all sorts of things. I will rumple their (students') brains fondly, instead of their hair."

As for sight-seeing, Frost remarked that, "I'm not a traveler, never saw the Taj Mahal. If I see anything, incidentally, I enjoy it; but not when it is planned beforehand."

Criticizes Israel Only Not Jews, Says Toynbee

NEW YORK — Arnold Toynbee, the historian, has assured the American Council for Judaism that "my own criticisms of Israel and of Zionism are not directed against the Jews and Judaism as such."

Dr. Toynbee gave the assurance in a letter to Harry Snellenburg, president of the council, in accepting an invitation to address its seventeenth annual conference. The sessions will be held from May 4 to 7 at the Warwick Hotel in Philadelphia.

The British scholar said his objections were to Israel's and Zionism's "rejection of historic Jewish moral standards that have set an example, in the past, to the rest of the human race" by what he called "the wrongs done to Arabs in Palestine."

Wedding Announcement

Miss Sylvia Cele Rakatansky, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Nathan Rakatansky of Providence, was married March 19 to Dr. Edwin N. Forman, son of Mrs. A. Weinberg of New York and the late Harry A. Forman, at Temple Beth El.

Rabbi William G. Braude officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white peau de soie, designed with a fitted bodice and elbow length sleeves of alencon lace and a full skirt ending in a chapel train. A silk illusion veil was fastened to a cap of alencon lace and heirloom seed pearls. She carried a prayer book with violets and stephonitis.

Miss Francee Rakatansky, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Mrs. Herbert Rakatansky was matron of honor. They were dressed in ice blue, wore circlets of violets on their heads and carried old fashioned bouquets of violets.

Dr. Herbert Rakatansky was best man. The ushers were Dr. Robert Bialkin, Dr. Floyd A. Davis, Dr. Evins Diamond, Dr. Abram Kaplan, Dr. Lewis Schaffer and Roy Aarons.

of people who died centuries ago. "I show you only this one, because the other 28 are no different," said the woman guide. "Force of habit. It saves electricity, and a lot of walking."

We went on to the Mt. Carmel valley. "God's Vineyard," past Furadis, the peaceful Arab settlement whose windows are painted blue to ward off the Evil Eye; and on through Atlit harbor, where a Crusade ended -- with Crusaders etching their names on the walls of caves, as "Kilroy" later did in a different war.

There were the citrus groves, producing the profitable Israeli melon. They bring so much on the market that once, in Paris, when my wife ordered a melon at the Tour d'Argent and learned the price, she told the proprietor. "At such prices the melons should be the size of pumpkins -- and come complete with original papers from Whitaker Chambers."

The fertile colors of the earth are displeasing only to the eye of Reuven Rubin, Israel's foremost painter. "All those landscapes I painted years ago, with the parch-earth browns, no longer are true," he sighed. "I'll have to start again." In the Negev, Ben-Gurion told me, "We are growing things in places where nothing ever had grown since the time of creation."

They have horses now, and cattle and sheep, vineyards and factories, a new diamond-cutting settlement, and also the world's newest hotel

Posters Show Role Of Civil War Jews

CINCINNATI, Marking the Civil War Centenial, posters depicting the role of American Jews in the war are being issued by the American Jewish Archives, the historical research center on the campus of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion here.

The center is using military and civilian records to assemble the story of Jewish participation. Some notable episodes are dramatized in the set of six posters made for the archives by Clinton Orlemann, a local artist. These posters will be distributed nationally to congregations, religious schools, historical societies and libraries.

Nothern Jewish patriots are symbolized by German-born Louis A. Gratz, who commanded the Union's Sixth Kentucky Cavalry and proved himself a hero at Chickamauga.

Other posters feature the ingenuity involved in preparing a Passover Seder or religious feast in the West Virginia mountains and show the care given to the wounded by Jacob Frankel, the first rabbi in American history to be named a military chaplain.

Another poster recalls the effort of Mayer Lehman, father of former Senator Herbert H. Lehman, to aid captive Alabama soldiers in Northern prison stockades.

Israel To Build New City In Badlands West Of Dead Sea

TEL AVIV, Israel — The badlands west of the Dead Sea have been marked by the Israelis as the next desert to be conquered.

An industrial city is to be built on a windswept plateau near the buried Canaanite kingdom of Arad in the bleak Judean foothills. A prefabricated village for 150 technicians is to rise there next month and the plans call for its growth during five years into a city of 10,000 — a modern Arad.

Arad will be the northern-most of five new desert cities that Premier David Ben-Gurion has said are to be built during the next decade. A $500,000,000 loan that Chancellor Adenauer is said to have promised Mr. Ben-Gurion during their meeting in New York last year is expected to aid in financing the chain of cities.

Last December the Israel Government appointed Arie Eliav as director of the Arad Development Project. Mr. Eliav is credited with the development of Lachish in southwestern Judea, which has been similarly barren in 1954. The Lachish region now comprises thirty settlements with 15,000 inhabitants, who raise cotton, sugar beet, peanuts and other vegetables and fruits. The hub of the region is a new town of 10,000, Kiryat Gat, which serves as the administrative, commercial, industrial and cultural centre for Lachish.

The Arad region that Mr. Eliav's organization is to develop covers 100,000 acres of the southeastern Judean foothills, the Biblical wilderness of Judah and a plain in the south. Historically, the area was a frontier of the Canaanite and Asseliti civilization and a barrier against nomad incursions from the south.

It was here that the Hebrews were halted in their march to the Promised Land after the exodus from Egypt. As related in Numbers, xiv, 45 "the Amalekite came down, and the Canaanite which dwelt in that hill country, and smote them • • • even until Hormah"—west of Beershebe.

So severe was the defeat that it took the Hebrews thirty-eight years to approach the Promised Land again — by another route roundabout to the east of the Dead Sea.

Today about 10,000 Bedouin roam the Arad region. As they are members of tribes that have headquarters in Jordan or in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, the Israelis regard them as Security risks.

Unlike Lachish, the Arad project is not to be based on agriculture at the start; there is not enough water in the region. Priority is to be given to urban development.

The city is to be built four miles east of the mound covering the ancient Canaanite city-kingdom, between two fields where natural methane gas has been discovered by drillers prospecting for oil. The gas is to supply not only power and heat but also raw materials for a petro-chemical industry, which is to be the economic mainstay of the city. Potash from the Dead Sea twelve miles away will also be exploited.

PASSOVER SEDERS

LEBANON, Conn.; The Tannenbaum family, of Grand Lake Lodge, announced this week that Rev. Abner Groff, will conduct their Passover Seders and religious services once again this year. Rev. Groff has conducted traditional Passover Services at the Lodge for the last three years.

INCREASE IN TOURISTS

JERUSALEM — The Government Tourist Office said last week that 14,756 tourists entered Israel during the first two months of this year. This total compared with 9,800 for the same period in 1960.

The Herald finds it necessary many times to edit or omit news releases submitted for publication. The choice of articles to be omitted is purely arbitrary. Omissions are due to lack of space.
