

Refuses Bribe To Print Hate Book

GUATEMALA CITY — The owner of the Catholic weekly, Ya, announced last week that a large bribe has been offered the publication if it would publish an "evidently criminal" book which "is nothing but an incitement to kill" Jews. Elly Rodriguez Gonzalez, owner of Ya, resentfully rejected the offer, declaring "we cannot be anti-Semitic because we are Catholics, nor can we become advocates for criminals because we are humans."

According to Miss Gonzalez, the offer, involving "enough funds for us to become a daily," was made by a local "public official." The man, she said, wanted Ya to publish a book which was "obviously a Nazi legacy embracing more than 100 years of racial prejudices with the object of re-initiating hatreds and their consequences which, thank God, have been overcome after the most bloody war in the history of mankind."

Jordan Returns Kidnaped Israeli

JERUSALEM — Israeli police constable Amram Amor of Eilat, who was kidnaped last month by a Jordanian patrol, was returned to Israel last week after three weeks of detention in an Amman prison. Amor, who seemed well and in good spirits when he passed the border check point, wore the uniform in which he was captured but with the insignia removed.

Three Arab infiltrators were killed and a fourth was wounded and hospitalized last week when the group of Arab marauders clashed with an Israel patrol in the central Negev, an Israel Army spokesman announced.

The incident occurred when the Israeli patrol challenged the infiltrators and asked them to identify themselves.

Release Jewish Population Data

JERUSALEM — The Jewish population in the world totaled 12,300,000 by the end of 1959, according to estimates in Israel's official Statistical Bulletin, published last week. Of the total, 15.3% of the world's Jews live in Israel, the figures show.

Israel's population in 1960, the data shows, was 2,150,000. The population density in this country rose from 41.3 per two square kilometers in 1948 to 106.2 in 1960.

Egypt Delays Israel Airmail

TEL AVIV — The Israel Postal Service declared that Egypt held up a consignment of airmail posted from Israel to East African countries.

According to the Postal Service, officials at a European airport loaded the mail consignment by error on a plane which stops at Cairo, where Egyptian officials seized the mail. It had been posted to Rhodesia, Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika.

Teen-Agers Feel Jewish Education Needs Improvement

MIAMI, Fla. — Some 400 teenage members of the Greater Miami Jewish Community Center agreed at a conclave here that teen-agers remember very little of their Hebrew school education and that their morals and ethics come from total life experiences and that these are not related to their Jewish education.

The National Jewish Welfare Board, reporting on the all-day seminar, also said that the young men and women reported they had the most enduring and pleasant memories of Sunday school attendance because emphasis was placed on Jewish history, holidays and culture which young people can best understand. They also felt that Jewish education starts at too early an age, becomes repetitious and tiresome so that many pupils refuse to continue.

Their conclusions added up to a belief that Jewish education in the United States could be improved if it were started at a later age, if it were related more closely with day-by-day experiences and if it were linked to young people's natural interests.

The Miami teen-agers also called for higher goals in public education, for both average and gifted students and for greater emphasis on learning rather than grades. They also felt that improvements should be made in guidance toward college, educational television, mathematics and language teaching, study habits, teachers' salaries and the general level of English teaching.

Will Start New Student Program

NEW YORK — An internship program to enable theological students to prepare themselves to meet the practical problems of their future ministries has been announced by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. The new program will be launched in January as part of the course in practical theology offered to senior rabbinical students by Dr. Max Arzt, vice-chancellor of the seminary.

Under the new program, the 18 members of the present class will each be assigned to a rabbi who serves a congregation in the metropolitan area. Rabbi David C. Kogen, registrar of the Rabbinical School, has enlisted the services of the local rabbis, and made all technical arrangements for the program. The cooperating rabbis have each agreed to meet with a student for a minimum of eight sessions during the month-long internship.

Evidence Against Nazis Gathered By Israelis

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel is continuing her efforts to bring to justice Nazis who persecuted Jews. Detectives here have been busily gathering information from victims of the Nazis.

The evidence has been forwarded to competent authorities in West Germany and in Austria and has led to the arrest and prosecution of a number of criminals.

However, there has been no indication of further cloak-and-dagger operations such as the one in which Adolf Eichmann was seized in Argentina last year and brought here for trial.

What! No Jewish New Year Babies?

Although practically all probable hospitals in Rhode Island were called, up to Wednesday afternoon, January 3, there was no report of a Jewish baby having been born in 1962.

The Herald canvassed the Providence Lying-In Hospital, the Roger Williams General Hospital, the Cranston Osteopathic General Hospital, the Pawtucket Memorial Hospital, the Woonsocket Hospital and the Kent County Hospital. No, was the only answer received.

We'd like to know if we are wrong. Who is the first Jewish baby of 1962?

The feeling here is that the sensational capture of Eichmann by Israeli agents has served its purpose. It is believed here to have spurred others, particularly the West Germans and Austrians, to intensify their hunts for fugitive war criminals.

Special Section Opened

Consequently, the Criminal Investigation Department of the Israel Police has received so many requests to trace witnesses for war crimes trials that a special section has had to be opened to handle them. The Office for the Investigation of Nazi Crimes opened July 1, 1960, about six weeks after Eichmann's capture.

Superintendent Eytan Liff, head of the office, said the testimony of about 1,000 witnesses had been forwarded to Europe during the last year. He had been informed by Dr. Erwin Schuele, director of the Central Office for the Investigation and Prosecution of War Crimes in West Germany, that the Israeli evidence has helped bring to justice many criminals who otherwise would still be at liberty.

U. S. 'CONCERNED'

WASHINGTON — The State Department last week indicated that it is studying reports of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union and expressed "concern" over the reports.

Scholar Sees No Evidence That Dead Sea Scrolls Reveal Any Connection With Early Christianity

NEW YORK — There is "absolutely no evidence" tying early Christianity to the Dead Sea Scrolls or the religious community that inspired them, the head of the country's leading group of Biblical scholars said last week according to the New York Times.

Dr. Samuel Sandmel, president of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegetists, said the scrolls represented "the greatest exaggeration in the history of biblical scholarship."

In a telephone interview from St. Louis, where he presided at the society's annual meeting, Dr. Sandmel said he was not denying that the scrolls were historically useful.

"What I am denying," he said, "is the high importance originally attached to them and the specific connection seen by some scholars between the scrolls and early Christianity."

Scholars have debated the significance of the scrolls since they were translated from the Hebrew and Aramic more than ten years ago.

The first of the scrolls was found in 1947 by a shepherd boy in a cave near the Qumran Wadi, a stream bed penetrating the cliffs on the western shore of the Dead Sea. Hundreds more have since been found in several other caves in the vicinity. They were apparently placed there by the Essenes, a Jewish religious sect that practiced communal living at Qumran about 2,000 years ago.

The argument has centered on whether the sect's religious practices, which have some parallels in Christianity, were known to Jesus and Paul and were incorporated by them into their teachings.

The scrolls were first thrown open to living-room debate by Edmund Wilson, the writer and critic, who wrote a popular book called "The Scrolls From the Dead Sea" in 1955.

"Edmund Wilson's book gave the average person the impression that now we know all the answers to early Christianity," Dr. Sandmel declared. "His book is responsible, more than any other, for the

Buddhist Studies Of Ben-Gurion Bring Criticism

JERUSALEM — Premier David Ben-Gurion returned to Israel from a two-week state visit to Burma and found some astonishment and dismay at home over the fact that half his time there had been spent in an attempt at Buddhist meditation.

None of the members of the National Religious Front, a party represented in the Premier's coalition Government, was in the group at Lydda Airport to greet him.

All religious parties have been critical of the Premier. Rabbi Menachem Porush of the Agudat Israel party said the Premier was flirting with Buddhism and that this was "a desecration of the name of Israel."

The Premier's office issued a denial today of press reports that Mr. Ben-Gurion had visited a monastery in Burma. The entire time that the Premier spent in meditation, the communique stated, was in a villa belonging to U Nu, the Burmese Premier.

The communique also explained that Mr. Ben-Gurion had been visited daily by three Burmese scholars who instructed him in philosophy and the ethics of Buddhism.

Rabbi Porush said that his party still intended to challenge the property of Mr. Ben-Gurion's behavior in Burma and would meet to decide whether to raise the question in the Knesset (Parliament).

On his return Mr. Ben-Gurion spoke of the good effects of Israel's extensive program of assistance to Burma and said there was "a great field open for political and cultural cooperation between Burma and Israel."

public delusions about what is in the scrolls."

Apprised of the comment, Mr. Wilson demurred. By telephone from his home in Wellfleet, Mass., he said:

"Biblical scholars almost without exception are committed to one point of view or to another: to show how different the Gospels are from the scrolls, or show how much alike they are.

"The point is that there are many resemblances that are unmistakable between Christian literature of the scrolls. There are things in the scrolls which appear to lead up to Jesus, and which are found in the New Testament. And there are many things in the scrolls that are not found in the New Testament."

Much additional research has been done and many controversies have arisen since Mr. Wilson's book was published. I'm hoping to bring the whole thing up to date," he said, "and deal with all these questions that have been raised."

Harvard Students Drop Out of 'Care' Project in Jordan

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The Phillips Brooks House, a Harvard University student social service group, decided this week to withdraw from a CARE project in Jordan because Jordan would have prevented Jewish students from participating.

"Operation Jordan" would have sent a group of some 30 students to Jordan to aid resettlement of Biedouins. When students checked the matter further with CARE officials, they learned that Jewish students could not be included.

Members of the student organization then talked it over with the University Faculty Committee which refused to approve it. Dean John Monro, a member of the Faculty Committee, said the University did not want any of its student groups involved in a project where questions were asked about religious beliefs.

Bill Making Bias A Crime Is Proposed

LONDON — A bill to make it a crime to discriminate against an individual for reasons of color, race or religion in Britain received its first reading this week in the House of Commons.

Fenner Brockway, Labor MP, who is sponsor of the measure, said he had introduced the measure seven times before it reached the first reading stage. He explained that it now had influential support of three major parties.

The bill also would make it an offense for anyone to incite publicity contempt or hatred of any person because of color, race or religion.

Archbishop Cushing Sounds Sharp Warning

BOSTON — A warning that the Americanization of the Jew may produce a scattering and weakening of "the vast accumulation of Jewish learning and culture" has been sounded by Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston.

The Cardinal told a meeting of the Brandeis Club here that whatever might be said against the European ghettos of past periods, "there was no reason to be anxious in these centuries about the survival of Jewish tradition and culture." He said that this living pattern "produced a Jewish community conscious of itself and one aware of the extraordinary treasures of the past which were handed down by learned teachers from generation to generation."

In contrast, he said, the complete Americanization of the Jew in this country posed the threat that "the vast accumulation of Jewish learning and culture will now be dissipated into the wider community and in the process lose much of its strength in the generations that lie before us."

Stressing that the problem in the United States now "is the opposite of the one that faced the Jewish community in times past," the Cardinal declared: "Unless steps are taken to meet the challenge this new social situation presents. Jewish culture itself will be affected in the years that are before us."

He said that "the Jewish contribution to science and art and literature," in the United States as in other parts of the world, "is a massive one but it could become a purley personal contribution made by people of Jewish descent but without a basic Jewish identification."

For this reason, he advised that "alongside and encouraging the great personal efforts of individual Jews, there should be somewhere in this broad land a visible institution which in a sense can formalize and give structure to all the Jewish learning of times past and through its presence provide new inspiration for the learning and discoveries in the days ahead."

The Cardinal stated that Brandeis University, "without being in any exclusive sense Jewish, provides the home in which the riches of the past can meet the challenges of the present in terms of the universal genius of Judaism."

Bank's Deposits At New High

Total deposits of $502,207,479 on Dec. 31 and record earnings for the year just ended were reported Wednesday by the Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island. Deposits were in excess of a half billion dollars for the first time on a statement date, John Simmen, President of the bank, announced.

Net operating earnings of $4,421,000 were $24,000 greater than the $4,397,000 of 1960, and were equal to $3.68 a share compared with $3.66 last year, previously the highest in the history of the bank.

Gross income totaled $25,770,000, up $772,000 or 3% from 1960. Income from loans and mortgages was $16,506,000, an increase of $496,000 or 3% and from securities other than U. S. Governments $1,997,000, an increase of 31% or $473,000. Earnings on Government securities were $3,055,000, off $399,000 or 10%.

During 1961 profits realized on the sale or exchange of securities totaled $1,570,000, all of which was transferred to reserves.

Modern Acol
Terence Reese, assisted by Albert Dormer, has written another important book, "The Acol System Today." This must be considered the standard, up-to-date, and authoritative work on the Acol system. Many of the system's old-fashioned ideas have either gone or appear in modern form. Take, for instance, the old Acol bid of 3NT on a long minor suit with some strength in the other suits:

♠—10 5
♥—A x x
♦—K
♣—A K Q J 7 4 3
One of the difficulties was that neither declarer nor his partner could be quite sure what to do when doubled. Reese and Dormer suggest that this bid should now be abandoned in its old form and used only on hands that contain a solid minor suit and no more than a king or queen in the side. Here are two examples
(1) ♠—7 4      ♠—9 7
♥—3            ♥—10 4
♦—9 7 3 2    ♦—A K Q
♣—A K Q      ♣—7 6 4 3
                  ♣—K 6
The first hand would be a minimum for the bid, the second a maximum. If you are doubled it is for your partner to take action, for he knows within a reasonable margin what sort of hand you have. Here are some examples of how partner should act after a 3NT opening bid:

(1) ♠—Q 10 3
♥—A 8 6 4
♦—Q J 9 4
Pass whether 3NT has been doubled or not.
(2) ♠—A 7 6 4
♥—5
♦—10 7 6
♣—K Q 4 3 2
Partners bid being obviously based upon a long diamond suit, you should jump to 5D, whether doubled or not, with a reasonably good chance of making it. Incidentally, if you had the same hand but without the ace of spades the jump would still be right as a pre-emptive measure.

ADL Says Rockwell 'Withering on Vine' As Supporters Fade
WASHINGTON — The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith asserted that self-styled American Nazi leader George Rockwell and his "party" were "withering on the vine," partly because he and his "troopers" have been hard hit by legal prosecution.
The legal attack in several cities where Rockwell and his followers have staged demonstrations has resulted in Rockwell staying out of public sight "and a wave of defection among some of his closest aides," the ADL said.
The ADL noted that Rockwell has not staged a demonstration anywhere for weeks and said a major reason is the dwindling of his troopers, many of whom have run into trouble with the law on various offenses apart from their Nazi activities.

Israel To Extend Ratio Of Doctors To Its People

NEW YORK-- The associate dean of the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School in Jerusalem says that although Israel has a high ratio of doctors to population "the need for highly skilled physicians persists and could become urgent," according to Irving Spiegel of the New York Times.

The observation was made by Dr. Moshe Prywes at a press conference in the offices of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, 11 East Sixty-ninth Street. He arrived here last week.

Commenting on the most recent arrival of physicians migrating into Israel, Dr. Prywes said that a sizable percentage of them were of advanced age.

"Without new infusions of young Israel-trained doctors the ratio of physicians to population would decline in the not-too-distant future," he added.

Local Source For Future

Dr. Prywes observed that a new immigrant physician could hardly be expected to cope with "the multiplicity of physical and emotional problems growing out of the very nature of Israel's heterogeneous population."

He explained that Israel's medical profession "is extraordinarily heterogeneous," since 50 per cent of the country's doctors had gone there since Israel became a nation and about 90 per cent had previously practiced medicine in other countries.

Dr. Prywes said that while the graduates of the Hebrew University Medical School now constituted only 12 per cent of the physicians in Israel "they are, nevertheless, the largest group with a homogeneous medical education."

"The need for such homogeneity will increase as Israel's medical services expand," he went on.

"A whole generation of young doctors rooted in local problems and aware of the health needs of the country is now being trained at the school."

Medical Educators Sought

Moreover, he noted the medical education his school was giving to African and Asian students with the assistance of the World Health Organization.

But he stressed that the graduating of a score of African and Asian students each year would not solve the health problems of Africa, "a continent which, according to the World Health Organization, will need 40,000 doctors within a decade."

On this point Dr. Prywes said his school's emphasis was on developing medical educators and public health specialists—"men and women who will be able to teach modern medical skills to others and develop systems of medical education indigenous to their respective countries."

Known as Israel's "roving ambassador of medicine," Dr. Prywes is here for a brief visit after having toured various Latin-American countries at the invitation of their Governments and universities.

Germans And Eichmann

The passing of the death sentence on Adolf Eichmann has attracted much less attention in Western Germany than might have been expected.

There are three main reasons for this. The trial of Eichmann has taken such a long time that most Germans have lost interest in it. Other political events have pushed the trial into the background. In any case, Eichmann's guilt was regarded as already proven, and the death sentence was generally expected.

Federal Government spokesmen indicated today that the facts laid before the Jerusalem court had proved Eichmann's guilt beyond any possible doubt. It was not thought that an appeal and a fresh examination of his case could reveal any facts which were both new and relevant. The Federal Government has not commented on the suggestion made in some quarters that Eichmann should be handed over to the West German authorities, who would become responsible for holding him in prison for life.

The right note has been struck by the German News Agency report from Jerusalem, which was written by Herr Kustermeier, a West German who has played a praiseworthy part in work done to secure a reconciliation between Germany and Israel. Herr Kustermeier urges in his report that Germans should not simply regard the sentencing of Eichmann as the end of a chapter, but that they should reflect carefully on how crimes such as his came to be committed and should determine that this shall never happen again.

Herr Kustermeier comes to the conclusion that "there are many Eichmanns among us" — on the grounds that Eichmann was in many ways such an ordinary person. A Christian Democratic Party spokesman comes to an exactly opposite conclusion — "there are no Eichmanns left in Germany." This may give a misleading impression at a time when three German doctors are on trial in Munster for allegedly carrying out medical experiments in the concentration camps, and when pictures were published only a few days ago of half a dozen SS men who are still wanted in connection with war crimes.

In general, however, West German reactions to the Eichmann trial and its outcome have shown a suitable blend of respect for the processes of Israel law and of remorse for the terrible wrongs inflicted on the Jews by the Nazis. Many West German newspapers urge readers to draw the appropriate lesson from Eichmann's story, and a Free Democratic Party statement today sums up perhaps the most important lesson of all: "One way and another the murder of millions of Jews still remains unexpiated."

Eichmann To Be Kept Moving From Prison To Prison

TEL AVIV — Israeli police officials indicated they are taking no chances on Adolf Eichmann being killed by fellow-prisoners while awaiting disposition of the death sentence against him. The former Gestapo colonel will be kept on the move from one prison to another until then.

An appeal has been filed with the Israel Supreme Court but no court action is expected before next March.

In Cologne, Dr. Robert Servatius, Eichmann's defense lawyer, expressed the hope that the West German Government would reverse a decision not to contribute to the costs of Eichmann's defense, for which the Israel Government provided $20,000.

Dr. Servatius said that the costs so far are somewhere around $32,000. West German officials rejected a request for financial aid from Dr. Servatius about a year ago.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

ON TRAVEL

By Beryl Segal

You take the jet plane in New York in the morning, and by the time the hostess clears up the breakfast plates from each passenger, the pilot announces that you are nearing Florida and will you kindly tighten your seat belts. It takes from two to three hours from New York to Florida now... up again... down again.

Well, all this is all right providing you are in a hurry. When every minute counts, then by all means go by jet plane. But if you are not in a hurry and you like to travel leisurely and see the country, try you go through, then you certainly should find some other means of travel. The plane takes you over the clouds. You see nothing but what looks like snowbanks, and an occasional glimpse of the ocean. You want to see more.

The train affords a good picture-window view of the land. You read a book or a magazine and every once in a while, you lift up your eyes from the printed page and observe the country-side to the left and to the right of you. No matter how many times you have travelled the same roadway, there is some new vista you have not seen before. There is something utterly satisfying in the trees that come to meet your eye, in the houses that slip by quickly, in the horses that stand motionless under a clump of trees.

Train travel has its disadvantages, of course.

In the first place, the nights are very long. If you go to Florida, as I did, you spend half of your travel time in sleeping. Just when the train rushes through Virginia and the Carolinas, you are in your bed and you see only lights flash by your window.

Then there is the danger that comes from your neighbor. Some times you get a sour fellow as your seat partner, and he won't utter a word all the way to Florida. On the other hand, you may get a "nudnick" as a neighbor, and he does not stop talking. You wonder which is worse. In either case, you can escape to the smoking parlor and get choked with the smoke just so that you may get rid of your undesirable seat mates.

Even better than the train is riding the bus. There is a fine way to travel! The buses stop frequently and you get out to stretch your legs. The driver of a bus is a friendly fellow. He is in direct fellowship with the passengers. While you may never get to see your train engineer, you always have your eye on the driver. Many of the bus drivers are talkative souls and crack a joke or two that makes the passengers laugh. The friendliest bus driver I know rides the Providence-Albany run. He will announce all the stops and will say something appropriate about each of them. Even when the bus does not stop at a certain village, the driver calls out the name, spells it for you, and gives the number of the population of the place. He is especially cordial to the ladies and tries to please them with remarks about their looks and the dresses they wear.

The trouble with buses though is the long journey. Sleeping in a bus, I imagine, is not a pleasant thing. There is a way out, of course. You travel by day only and sleep in a motel on the road. But this prolongs the journey, and you might find that all your vacation time is taken up in travel. In my case, for instance, I figured out that I would have spent five days on the road, while all my vacation was for ten days.

The most ideal way is driving by car. You go when you please, where you please, and at your own pace. You see a pleasant spot and you stop to fill your eyes. You meet an interesting place and you stop to explore it to your heart's content. And when you come to a quiet little town on the road, you call it a day and you stay overnight.

This way of travelling is a vacation in itself. You do not care if you do not arrive in the place on X or Y day, at Z hour. I am told that there are such lucky people who can do this. But my lot is not with them.

How did I travel to Florida? You guessed it. By train. I was not in such a hurry as to fly by jet, but neither did I have the time to go by bus or car. As a matter of fact, I shall be back at work by the time you read this.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

STAGE SET FOR CRUCIAL TRADE DEBATE

Bit by bit, piece by piece, the stage is being set for one of the most crucial debates by the American people in the almost two centuries that we have been an independent nation.

On the surface, the debate will take place in Congress next year and the issue will be the passage of a new trade bill which would give President Kennedy unprecedented power to negotiate tariff cuts across-the-board with the booming European Common Market.

Superficially, the questions will be: Will Congress agree with the President that he must have broad, new powers so he can offer tariff cuts on our side in return for tariff cuts from a Europe united behind a common wall? Or will Congress simply extend the 1934 Trade Agreements Act when it expires in mid-year, admittedly outmoded and inadequate though the act is? Or will our lawmakers do nothing at all?

But fundamentally, the debate will be in every informed home in the United States and the issue will be whether we are ready to go along with revolutionary changes in our entire economic-political relationships with the free nations of the world.

Fundamentally, the questions will be: Are we willing to have the United States tie itself closer than ever before with the non-Communist nations of the world into one great trading alliance? Are we ready, as businessmen or jobholders, to face the fact that some of our weaker industries are certain to be hurt badly if our tariff walls are erased, many jobs are sure to be vulnerable, our economy will have to make painful adjustments on production costs, wage and price policies?

Decisions of this magnitude aren't reached in a few months by a few senators and representatives. Decisions of this massive importance to our future as a nation are reached only after we become alert to the problems involved, educated to the challenges.

Thus, it appears proper to say that the stage is just being set, bit by bit, piece by piece, for the debate. And it appears reasonable to conclude that no matter what Congress does in 1962, its actions will only pave the way for vital decisions in 1963.

Your Money's Worth

Education of America's industrialists and jobholders to what is at stake in our attitudes toward the Common Market has been Kennedy's prime aim in his recent speeches before Big Business in New York, Big Labor in Miami, other groups -- not immediate support of his bold proposals. He's too sophisticated a student of politics and economics even to hope for the immediate support.

Education of America's leaders in all fields to the pros and cons of a trade partnership between the United States and the European Common Market has been the primary aim of the Congressional subcommittees which have been holding hearings on trade policy throughout this month. The papers submitted to the Senate-House subcommittee, headed by Representative Hale Boggs, D., La., will become the basis for the approaching debate.

Education has to come before decisions are possible.

If, for instance, you are a factory owner or jobholder in an industry being hurt badly by foreign competition, you want to know precisely what will be done to help you through a rough transition if the competition is intensified. Slippery words aren't enough. Will you get low-cost loans or retraining programs or special aid and subsidies or allowances as a displaced worker or adjustments in unemployment insurance and Social Security payments? Or what? Specifically, what?

As of today, we still have time to educate ourselves, think through the specifics, decide intelligently. The Common Market is still in the process of creation, tomorrow's obvious threats are not yet today's realities. But our time will not be indefinite.

Are we to turn backward, build an economic fortress around ourselves because we're afraid of what is outside? Or are we to take the lead in creating a free world community of one-half billion of the world's most industrialized peoples, secure in the faith that united we can do just about anything we want to do? You, the educated American, will make the final decision.

Could this be your family?

If you were permanently removed from the scene, would there be enough for them?

Don't risk their future happiness. Be sure! I represent the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada here and I would be glad to prepare an analysis of your estate, with no obligation. Then you could see exactly how much there would be — for them.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE AGENT: Theodore White, author of the Best-selling "The Making of the President, 1960," also wrote the novel, "The View From the 40th Floor." The movie rights to the latter were sold to the late Gary Cooper. When White's agent, I. P. Lazar, first read the novel, he proposed a movie sale to Frank Sinatra. White said it needed a very tall man.

"Frankie is a big, tall guy," Lazar insisted. This was not just agent's talk. White realized it when Lazar, who is 5-foot-2, stood up. To him, Sinatra does appear tall.

THE TRAVELER: Walter Ulbricht, the Communist leader of East Germany, was interviewed for two hours by Dan Schorr, a CBS News correspondent. It was part of a TV documentary. During the break for film reloading, Ulbricht continued his argument for recognition of East Germany. He said, "You should need a visa to come to East Berlin, just as my friend here"—he indicated an aide standing nearby—"would need a visa to go to America."

Schorr replied, "I'm sure your friend would get a visa to America." The aide was Gerhart Eisler, who jumped bail in New York and skipped out on the Polish steamship Battery.

THE SPEECH: The most effective speech made during the John F. Kennedy's recent trip to Latin America was delivered, in Spanish, by Mrs. Kennedy to farmers at La Morita, near Caracas: "I do not believe there is a wife, a mother, a father or a family in this hemisphere who can be satisfied until the people of all our countries have an opportunity to work for adequate compensation, to live decently and to receive an education.

"These things should be within reach of everyone and not limited to a few of the fortunate. You all know of my husband's profound desire to help those who need help."

THE POLICIES: Bob Feller, now a licensed insurance and mutual fund dealer, has signed up more than 300 professional ballplayers. His particular specialty is the bonus babies. Feller has been touring the country, seeking out their parents and signing them to policies. Feller's argument is brief: "Trophies and newspaper clippings look better with a green background."

THE PROBLEM: Sam Bronston, who produces movie spectacles in Spain—his last two were "King of Kings" and "El Cid"— is eager to do a movie on the Boxer Rebellion. There is one insurmountable obstacle: There are not enough Chinese in Spain, nor any prospect of importing the thousands of Chinese warriors and civilians such a movie would require.

MEMOS: The "Margherita Roberti" who starred in "Don Carlos" at the opening of the San Carlo Opera in Naples is really Margaret Roberts of Iowa. She'll make her debut at the Met in "Tosca" next month... Jean Pierre Aumont has translated the Broadway comedy "Sunday in New York" for a production in Paris... Ronn Cummins, the "Irma la Douce" dancer who was shot while breaking up a fight, played "Action" in the touring "West Side Story"... During Charles Laughton's annual concert tour, he'll change his encore from "The Gettysburg Address" to his Southern Senator's speech from "Advice and Consent."

MORE ON HART: Moss Hart enjoyed repeating Edna Ferber's description of him as "a Bronx Byron, monogrammed in the most improbable places"... Hart said: "The rich get wrinkles from laughing"... As a measure of his own vast but taxable earnings he lectured his wife: "We have to save $1.50 for every 25 cents you spend."

He could never avoid blurting out the truth. At a royal performance in London he heard Queen Elizabeth discuss children's schools, and said to her: "The British school system is barbarous"... He said to his wife, when they entered their new Palm Springs house: "It just occurs to me that you've stuck me through thick"... Of the success of his auto-biography, he said: "Of course I'm taking it big. There is no false modesty in me."

In describing how serious Hart was about his work, his brother Bernard recalled a week-end visit of Gen. Hap Arnold, head of the Army Air Corps. Hart then was writing "Winged Victory." On General Arnold's mind were the European invasion date, the B-29 raids on Japan, the attack on Saipan, etc. "But Arnold slept much better than Moss did."

Hart said of his dining habits: "After a success, any dish seems to have been prepared by Escoffier himself. After a failure, I prefer a simple salad with a touch of arsenic."

He once was persuaded by Darryl Zanuck to be his house-guest at Palm Springs for a few days' rest. Hart enjoyed his "rest" until another guest suggested that his neck muscles needed adjustment. Hart submitted to the manipulation, heard something snap, and couldn't move his neck... But then, in another corner of the room, he heard Gabriel Pascal phone: "Get me Eamon de Valera in Dublin." Hart turned to look, and his neck snapped back into place.

"I try to be a good father," said Hart. "I devote time to my children, feed and clothe them, bring them goodies, call for them at school. But then will come one bad day—just one—and when they stretch out on the analyst's couch, that'll be the only day they recall."

Urge Israel To Clarify Its Monetary Status

TEL AVIV, Israel — Several far-reaching investment schemes for Israel planned by investors in the United States and Canada have been postponed pending clarification of the monetary situation in Israel, it was reported here by Dr. Yeshayahu Foeder, chairman of the board of directors of Bank Leumi.

Dr. Foeder said that "it is high time for the Government to declare in unambiguous terms that it will not devalue the currency during the present term of the Knesset or to carry out devaluation forthwith and without hesitation."

In demanding that "some decision either pro or con be made" with regard to the monetary situation, the Bank Leumi chairman stated that "the present condition of insecurity and uncertainty, with the myriads of rumors and hints from various sources is most undesirable." He added that the rumors about devaluation of Israeli currency had caused a sharp decline in the demand for Israeli securities.

Meanwhile, it was announced here that Israel's foreign currency receipts for the first six months of the current fiscal year which began last April 1, increased by 12.5 percent. Figures released by the Treasury showed that receipts during the period amounted to $397,000,000 compared with $353,000,000 during the same period last year.

Soviet Opposed To Jewish Immigration

NEW YORK — There is a determined governmental policy against permitting Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel, Sen. Jacob Javits told the annual dinner of the American Technion Society.

Reporting on a recent trip to Russia, the New York Republican said that this stand should be protested strongly not only by the United States but also by the United Nations.

He criticized the United States for not supporting the resolution in the General Assembly Special Political Committee which called for prompt peace negotiations between the Arab states and Israel.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, California--Biggest surprise for me at the big MGM tent party for NBC affiliates recently was that MORT WERNER, now NBC veepee in charge of tee-vee, is the same little Mort Werner who used to announce amateur boxing bouts for me when I handled publicity at the Olympic Auditorium here. . . HANK LEVINE, formerly of Pittsburgh, has cut quite a musical career for himself in Hollywood. He studied with NIKOLAI LOPOTNIKOFF at Carnegie Tech who gave him a foundation in music that enabled him to handle anything from rock 'n' roll to motion picture scores.

I might add that 34-year-old HANK LEVINE arranged the recording of VIC DANA'S "Little Altar Boy" which may become the season's biggest rock 'n' roller. Just to prove how versatile Hank is, he is now working with LEITH STEVENS in his UCLA class scoring films in the school film department.

Marital advice to actress NANCY ANN DEAL: "Look, honey, after you hitch your wagon to my good Toronto friend, LORNE GREENE (Bonanza's Ben Cartwright), don't ever try to outshout him in an argument. He makes Niagara's roar sound like a dripping faucet."

JOEY BISHOP denied to me on the phone today that he bounced JOE FLYNN off his TV show when Flynn was reported to be "too funny." Said BISHOP: "This was a vicious rumor. In the first place, I never worry about surrounding myself with laughs and I even handed FLYNN, who played my boss, with some funny lines that I had written myself. In the second place, I don't have the power to fire anyone." BISHOP went on to explain that his executive producer called a halt to effect some needed changes in the story format, but FLYNN jumped the gun two days later by announcing: "Because I have not been notified, I am leaving the show." Commented Bishop: "The producer then talked to Flynn, but I knew nothing about any of this until it was all over."

Anyone remember "PANSY THE HORSE" in EDDIE CANTOR'S "Banjo Eyes" or "Mrs. Astor's Pet Horse" in BILLY ROSE'S Horseshoe? The two men inside the horse's skin were DALE THOMAS and NONNIE MORTON. VIRGINIA MAYO, long before her movie career, was their attractive ringmaster. DALE THOMAS is now in Hollywood conducting a publicity business.

Yes, I was as surprised as anyone when DINAH SHORE announced her separation from GEORGE MONTGOMERY. The two were with me when we participated in a junket to the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas to catch JULIETTE PROWSE'S opening in "Irma la Douce." Also aboard our plane was KIRK DOUGLAS. When GEORGE MONTGOMERY and I waited around for Valet Service to bring our cars, we both sympathized with each other when we had to wait for more than half an hour. He raised a howl when he was presented his bill. The Service refigured it for him, found that instead of overcharging him, they had undercharged, but MONTGOMERY yelled: "Oh, no you don't" and drove off with screeching tires.

SAMMY CAHN, the famous song writer, noted that we had spelled his name "Kahn" in this department. He writes: "When I first came to Hollywood over 20 years ago, I was signed by Columbia Pictures. One of the trade magazines wrote: "Sammy Chan Signed by Columbia." That wasn't bad enough, writes SAMMY, but he was immediately besieged with mail asking for contributions to the Chinese War Relief.
