Says American Jewish Community Faces Loss Of Whole Generation Through Need For More Leaders

KIAMESHA LAKE, N. Y. — Dr. Simon Greenberg warned recently that the American Jewish community was faced with the threat of the possible loss to Judaism of a whole generation because of failure to meet a growing need for adequately trained Jewish spiritual and cultural leaders.

Dr. Greenberg, vice chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, delivered the keynote address at the national convention of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs. He told the delegates that "today there are literally hundreds of Jewish communities in the United States that have no trained leadership at all and hundreds more which have woefully inadequate men and women filling the posts of rabbis and teachers."

Asserting that the American Jewish community has always suffered from a shortage of properly trained spiritual and cultural leaders, Dr. Greenberg said that until the beginning of World War 2, this shortage was primarily due to the fact that American Jewry was "still largely an immigrant people. We could not meet the needs of the rapidly growing community for American-trained Jewish cultural and spiritual leaders." The result, he said, was that "a whole generation" of Jews grew up in the United States, "the majority of whom never so much as knew an American-trained, English-speaking rabbi."

New Factors

The shortages have been greatly worsened, he said, by the post-war development of many new factors, the chief of which he described as "the profound need felt by an ever-growing number of American-born Jews to find satisfying meaning in their Jewish affiliation."

Taking issue with observers who have dismissed the tremendous postwar growth in Jewish congregational affiliation as lacking in spiritual depth, Dr. Greenberg asserted that "the great upsurge in the creation of congregations and the building of synagogues is much more than mere pediatric or social Judaism. It is the expression of a real need to find purpose and meaning in one's Jewish identity." He expressed concern that "if the need for spiritual guidance is not met within a reasonably short time, then the very sense of need will languish and wither."

Discussing the postwar changes which had brought about the critical shortages of Jewish leadership, Dr. Greenberg said that 10,000 Jews in the Bronx or Brooklyn might find their spiritual needs taken care of by one congregation but, when they move to suburbia, "the same 10,000 need 15 or 20 congregations."

RARE BOOKS

LONDON — There are more than 50,000 books, and many rare, valuable manuscripts in the Jewish section of the Saltikov-Shchedrin Library, according to a report by the Soviet news agency Novosti, received here recently.

The collection includes works by Jewish authors during the Spanish-Arabic period, dating back to the era between the 10th and 13th centuries.

Premier Warns Danger Lies Across Border

HAIFA — Prime Minister Ben Gurion warned last week that it would be "disastrous" for Israel "if we forget that brutal danger lies in wait across the border." The warning was obviously a reply to the renewed threat by President Nasser of Egypt that Egypt would "insist on the liquidation of Israeli aggression on part of the Palestine land."

Speaks at Technion

Ben Gurion spoke at the Haifa Technion where he accepted an honorary doctorate of architecture. Israel, he said, would not ever be a world factor in politics or economics for "we are few," and it is only in the spirit that Israel can compete with other nations.

He said he was not sure whether the term "architect" was appropriate to the process of molding a state since, unlike a building "where you have material like clay in the potter's hand," it is "the people that are the main thing, and not land or the power of sovereignty."

Ben Gurion obliquely criticized the Israeli professionals in a wide variety of fields who struck during the past year for higher salaries. "Even among those who achieved no small measure of prosperity, not all are imbued with responsibility devotion to general needs," he said. "Many of them demand for themselves, rather than demanding of themselves."

Goals Can Materialize

He added that the achievement of Israel's goals "can materialize through the cooperation and devotion of every Jew living here or in other countries, but first of all and above all, it depends on two sections of the people of Israel: the workers and the men of science and art."

"All of my life I have cherished his dual aspiration, that there should be unity between the sectors of Israel—between those who create by hand and those who create by brain—and that they should alike be dedicated to the great historic ideals of our people whose most concise and active expression is to be found in the message of our great prophets."

New Approach In Jobs For Blind

NEW YORK — A new approach to occupational adjustment of the blind in Israel is expected to yield experience that can be used to make jobs for unsighted persons in the United States as well. The program is being organized as a joint activity of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Israel Ministry of Social Welfare, and the Organization for Rehabilitation through Training (ORT.)

The experiment will be conducted at the ORT Textile Institute at Ramat Gan, Israel, it was announced here recently by the American ORT Federation. ORT is the American Jewish vocational training agency, and receives funds from the Joint Distribution Committee, a con-

JWB Executive Answers Charges Against Centers

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., — A vigorous reply to Conservative rabbis who recently attacked the Jewish community center movement was issued today by Sanford Solender, executive vice president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, in an address at the National Conference of Jewish Communal Service, at the Ambassador Hotel here.

Mr. Solender charged that the rabbis who published an attack in the winter-spring 1962 issue of "Conservative Judaism," quarterly journal of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, were seeking to destroy the community centers and to turn back progress in understanding and cooperation between centers and synagogues.

Discussion of the problem was one of the highlights of the first day of the four-day meeting, followed by an address by Philip Bernstein, executive director of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, who pointed the way toward intensified social and political action by American Jewish welfare workers.

Uri Gordon, second secretary of the Israel Embassy in Washington, D. C. and currently on leave to study Middle Eastern languages at Harvard University, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Young Adult Division of the General Jewish Committee on Monday, at 8 P.M. at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Gordon is a Sabra, or native-born Israeli, and is a graduate of Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He was a member of the Haganah before the establishment of the State of Israel and later fought with the Israel Defense Forces in the War of Liberation and the Sinai Campaign.

Mr. Bernstein put his finger on an issue that captured the attention of the 2,000 health, welfare and communal workers attending the Conference from all parts of the United States and Canada—the pros and cons of their taking a more active role in shaping national social policy as well as influencing legislation and public action on welfare in their communities.

Backs Medicare

The same issue was implicit on other papers delivered at the Conference, notably one by Dr. S. David Pomrinse, associate administrator of The Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City. Dr. Pomrinse offered a plan of medical care for the aged based on the assumption that the national controversy on this issue will be settled in favor of a program supported by social security payments.

Mr. Bernstein, whose agency is the central consultative body for Jewish community organizations throughout the United States and Canada, declared that American Jewish welfare workers are "concerned and increasingly active in measures to enhance the health and welfare of the entire community, and particularly in formulation of a national social policy."

Issues of Concern

Addressing the second general session of the meeting on "Current Developments in Jewish Communal Services," Mr. Bernstein declared:

"There are great issues before us: medical care for the aging; basic amendments to our public welfare laws that rehabilitation instead of relief alone; urgently needed training of public welfare workers—there is now only one trained worker for every 3,000 persons served; youth employment and retraining; extension and liberalization of unemployment insurance; removal of residence restrictions which chain the unemployed to uneconomic communities.

"These measures, and others, would redefine welfare programs to serve more fully as a wealth-producing force in our society, by helping people to reach the highest levels of their productivity, economically and socially. We have a prime responsibility here, all of us. For in shaping the nation's social policy, who better than the welfare and health agencies know these problems, can better advise on them, have a greater responsibility to make their voices heard?"

Mr. Bernstein told the conferees that despite their "justifiable pride" in the development of "a great, impressive and sically fit blind persons can be taught to work up to the level of skilled workers and foremen, it was found.

The Ministry's Service for the Blind will select 20 students for each class. The course of instruction will last six months. Operation of the training center is projected for at least three years.

The research aspect of the project will aim at developing particularized approaches that take account of the special job possibilities of the blind. They will seek to rationalize hand and foot movements to eliminate those found to be unnecessary and to define precisely the functions to be performed with each finger and hand.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Dear Larry and Bessie:

Plenty of news from Hollywood but the actors are complaining about lack of work. Too many pictures being made overseas and as for television this is the time of the year when they take their vacation.

Dean Martin sent a letter from Israel. He said: "Don't be surprised if I bring back a wife. I fell in love with a street fighter." Looks like Susan Kohner is serious about George Hamilton. He gave her an engagement ring but because of Hamilton's religion there won't be any temple ceremony.

At a recent charity affair here in Hollywood, Steven Allen gave away tongue-in-cheek trophies he called "Zeldas." Lucille Ball is still head over heels in love with her husband, Gary Morton, the comedian.

Red Buttons does a terrific job in Paramount's "Hatari." I wish someone would give Red a part with a lot of meat on it. He can win an Oscar every year. Am happy to hear that Danny Kaye's trouble was only a virus. We were afraid of a heart attack.

Robert Q. Lewis, who is working here as the emcee of KHJ-Radio's early morning show, is also doubling at the Pasadena Playhouse as the hypochondriac in "Send Me No Flowers." I don't know if he's a member of B'nai B'rith, but if he isn't I'll ask him to join.

Eddie Cantor told me in a letter: "You are a good friend indeed and thanks a lot for your stories." This puts the lie to that Jewish writer's claim that "other writers" were not presenting the true Eddie Cantor story. He's mad because we scooped him by months!

Gogi Grant, my personal General Grant, opened June 7 with Joe E. Lewis for an all-Jewish bill at Morris Lansburgh's Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas. Sid Caesar will be back on television next fall. He taped his first three shows here and left for New York.

People keep asking me if Ethel Merman is Jewish. She isn't. You asked me in your last letter, what's all the fever about who's Jewish and who isn't? Well, it's just that we love to know when our people have made it big. So we love to brag!

Fresh from his Emmy win as

Orthodoxy Plans World Program

NEW YORK — An extensive program designed to provide spiritual aid to Jewish communities in various parts of the world was announced here recently by Moses I. Feuerstein, president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America. The organization serves 3,100 traditional synagogues throughout the United States and Canada.

Addressing the UOJCA's national dinner at the Hotel Pierre here, Feuerstein said that the concentrated effort, aimed at supplying assistance in all fields of Jewish religious and educational endeavor, would tap the resources of the leading Jewish spiritual centers in major American cities and utilize the experience and skills of religious leaders and teachers in places where such leadership is critically needed.

Noting that pilot programs of such spiritual aid have already been successfully undertaken by the UOJCA joint overseas commission in India and in several European countries, Feuerstein said that the Orthodox Union was now ready to launch the project on a broad scale.

organization in charge of "masterless" funds which once belonged to victims of nazism. The Flushing YMHA, located in the area, will provide special program facilities for the aged at this project.

best actor, Peter Falk will star with Dick Powell in the tv play "The Doomsday Boys." Should be great. Aaron Rosenberg, producer of "Mutiny On The Bounty," is on pins and needles waiting for the film to be released. Aaron was an all-American football player. Hope his movie is a winner too. He had plenty of tsouris with it.

Stuart Whitman will co-star with Tammy Grimes in her first movie "C'est la Vie." I hope Stu gets his Oscar this year. He missed it mightily close for last year's "The Mark." Attention, Producer Mervyn LeRoy! You know the doctor warned you to cut out cigars. Stop smoking in hideaway corners.

Kirk Douglas will appear in a play and it's about time. Should be great and I'll write you when it's announced. Isn't Kirk from your hometown Larry? Maybe you'll remember him as Issur Danielovitch.

Wasn't that funny when Jack Benny learned that President Kennedy used to listen to his radio show every Sunday night and Jack cracked: "President Kennedy was 15 years old before he found out I WASN'T Bishop Sheen."

Write me soon, Larry and Bessie. Does Ann graduate from Junior High School this semester?

UJA Honors France For Refugee Aid

NEW YORK — The people of France were honored last week by the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York for aid to Jewish refugees over the years, in a ceremony at UJA headquarters.

Raymond Laporte, Consul-General and Minister Plenipotentiary of France, received a scale replica of Michelangelo's Moses which cited the people of France for "distinguished service in aiding homeless Jews to dwell in freedom." The presentation was made by Sylvan Gotshal, honorary chairman of the board of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York, who is a member of the French Legion d'Honneur.

Gotshal called attention to the humanitarian understanding with which France has welcomed the cooperation of the American Joint Distribution Committee and United Hias Service, beneficiary agencies of the United Jewish community organizations in aiding Jewish refugees over the years.

He pointed out that although UJA agencies have assumed the tremendous financial burden of caring for thousands of Jewish refugees in France, particularly from North Africa, that nation and her people have had to shoulder substantial costs of providing educational, health and other vital facilities to these people in their hour of distress.

To Build Housing Projects For Aged

NEW YORK — The housing developments for the aged, one of them financed by a $575,000 loan from the United States Housing and Home Finance Agency, will be erected in different parts of New York City, it was announced here last week.

The $575,000 loan went to the Educational Alliance, a noted East Side institution founded 73 years ago. The project will include a 10-story building, the upper eight floors of which will provide a 40-apartment residence for persons over 62. The lower two floors will house Educational Alliance facilities, including special geriatric services. Residents at the project will be selected from the East Side, and will represent a cross-section of the area's ethnic, cultural income groups.

The second project, in suburban Queens, will have facilities for 225 residents over the age of 60. Helping finance this project will be the Fellowship Fund, an

LIQUIDATIONS

LONDON — Calling Israel "the most dangerous pocket of imperialist resistance against the struggle of our people," Egypt's President Nasser last week called again for the elimination of Israel.

Presenting his new "national charter of socialist principles" to the opening session of the Congress of Popular Forces, at which Nasser has brought together hand-picked representatives of "peasants and workers," Nasser reiterated his old policy of the "need" for Israel's destruction. Egypt, he said, would "insist on the liquidation of Israeli aggression on part of the Palestine land."

Goldmann Says Ben-Gurion Seeks To Undermine Him

JERUSALEM — Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, said last week that he believed Premier David Ben-Gurion deliberately wanted to damage his position by criticizing him for representations Dr. Goldmann had made on Israel's behalf, it was reported by Lawrence Fellows in the New York Times.

The American Zionist leader declined to say whether he thought Premier Ben-Gurion wanted also to damage the World Zionist Organization to diminish the influence in Israeli affairs of Jewish organizations outside of Israel.

"That is for Mr. Ben-Gurion to say," Dr. Goldmann remarked. He spoke at a news conference in the headquarters of the Jewish Agency, executive body of the Zionist organization.

The Premier was reported to have charged at a Cabinet meeting recently that Dr. Goldmann was in effect interfering with Israel's conduct of her foreign affairs, sometimes to the detriment of Israel when the views he presents happen not to adhere to Israel's policy.

With the Cabinet's approval, the Premier sent a letter to Moshe Sharett, chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, asking an explanation of Dr. Goldmann's actions.

Jordan River An Issue

The letter questioned the meeting Dr. Goldmann had earlier this month with Phillips Talbot, United States Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs, on Israel's project to divert waters of the Jordan River to irrigate the Negev region. Jordan has complained that this would divert water from her own irrigation projects.

Dr. Goldmann said today that he had no wish to interfere in matters that were primarily Israel's concern, but that in this case he had advised the Israeli Embassy in Washington in advance of the meeting, and that he actually had done their bidding.

"An Embassy official indicated certain steps which would be desirable," Dr. Goldmann said, "so when Mr. Talbot referred to this issue in our conversation I put forward the idea to which the Israel Embassy official had referred, and suggested to Mr. Talbot that it might be pursued."

"I made it clear that I was not speaking for the Government of Israel. Mr. Talbot promised to consider the point and I informed the Israel Embassy accordingly."

He Sees Effort to Injure Him

"The matter of my visit in Washington," the Zionist leader said, "has been inflated out of all proportions by a wrong procedure and a series of indiscretions by the (Israeli) Government."

"I cannot resist the impression that what accounted for this procedure was an intention to hurt me."

Dr. Goldmann added: "I fully agree with the Government of Israel that it alone is entitled to deal with other governments on matters of concern to the State of Israel, and that neither the World Zionist Organization nor any other Jewish body has the right to intervene in such negotiations unless specifically requested to do so."

Dr. Goldmann said he believed he was justified in meeting with Mr. Talbot because he "did not intend to discuss any concrete problems, but merely the general policy of the United States in the Near East."

Dr. Goldmann declared: "In order to avoid further misunderstandings of this nature, I would gladly be prepared to undertake not to raise in the future any questions concerning Israel's relations with other governments in talks with either the American Government or that of any other country, and I should feel relieved if from now on no such requests were made of me by representatives of Israel."

Detroit Center Leaders Deny Rabbis' Rap

DETROIT — Three Detroit Jewish Center leaders last week rejected criticisms of the Jewish center movement by Conservative rabbis, terming the charges as based on "either lack of knowledge" or on "a need to distort the facts."

The criticisms were made in articles in Conservative Judaism, a publication of that movement. The reply was made in a letter to the Jewish News of Detroit by Charles H. Gershenson, president of the Detroit Jewish Community Center, and Samuel Frankel and Jacob L. Keidan, both former presidents.

The Center leaders said that the repeated reference in the articles to the fact that Centers receive Jewish communal funds "suggests the motivation" for the criticisms. They wrote that the Center is subsidized by central Jewish community funds because it has a Jewish orientation which is much more encompassing than any of the denominational synagogue groups, because it serves many needs of a wide segment of the Jewish community, and because it is both responsible and responsive to that community."

Raps 'Pittance' For Education

MIAMI — Dr. Isaac Toubin of New York, executive director of the American Association for Jewish Education, asserted in an address here that almost every cause but Jewish education was attracting lavish funds from American Jews.

Speaking at the 21st annual dinner of the Greater Miami Bureau of Jewish Education, Dr. Toubin said that vast sums were being "spent for and by Jewish community relations organizations," as against "the pittance spent for Jewish education" at a time "when anti-Semitism is at its lowest ebb in the U.S."

"Throughout this great country we are building supermarkets of religion, but we haven't enough rabbis, teachers or even members to fill them," he said. He criticized non-sectarian institutions of higher learning "which are sectarian institutions without Jewish programs."

He cited data that while the number of Jewish schools has doubled since 1949 the percentage of allocations for Jewish education remained unchanged in 1962 compared with 13 years ago. He added that the responsibility for this situation was "not that of federations alone. Jews simply don't give enough to their federations nor do they give enough to Jewish education."

A Herald ad always gets the best results — our subscribers comprise an active buying market.

They also declared that the focus of the Center movement is to give special emphasis "to informal educational, cultural and other group activities which have special Jewish group survival values." They added that the Center believes that "the general personality development activities and the more specifically Jewish activities are both integral parts of valid programming."

Rabbinical Assembly Launches Program To Build 100 More Day Schools At Historic Convention Devoted To Jewish Education

KAMESHA LAKE, N. Y. — A ten-year program to create another 100 Conservative day schools was hammered out at the 62nd annual convention of The Rabbinical Assembly, the International Association of Conservative Rabbis, held at the Concord Hotel here May 20-24.

Among the resolutions passed by the nearly 400 rabbis in attendance was a declaration of opposition to nuclear testing by all powers, and call upon the great nations to find enforceable controls over armaments and eventual total disarmament. The Assembly decided upon a special convocation of the association to discuss "the problems of war and peace in our times."

In another resolution, the rabbinic called upon the Jewish community in America to confer and agree upon united action to meet the threat to Jewish religious life in the Soviet Union.

The Assembly also endorsed a recommendation from its Committee on Jewish Law and Standards for a conference between "representatives of Jewish community centers and rabbinical bodies for the purpose of discussing the goals and programs of the centers." It was the expressed hope that such a conference would lead to "clarification of the responsibility of the Jewish centers towards the promotion of the ideals of Judaism, and the establishment of a joint body of the center leaders and rabbis for closer understanding and liaison and cooperative undertakings."

The call on the American Jewish community to make synagogue and Jewish center facilities available to day schools was made by Rabbi Friedman, the new President, who declared, "it would be a great crime for the community to divert its funds for new buildings as day schools emerge, since there are thousands of class-rooms available in our synagogues and centers that are being used only for late afternoon and evening activities."

Rabbi Friedman noted with concern that many existing day schools are presently housed in crowded, inadequate quarters, and that the opening of additional day schools, "with many children waiting to attend them, is being delayed by a critical shortage in class rooms."

He appealed to local federations and welfare funds to "emulate those cities where gifted youngsters are encouraged by scholarships to attend institutes of higher learning so that they can properly prepare for a career in Jewish education and Jewish community leadership." He appealed "on a non-denominational basis" not only for students to be sent to The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, the Conservative institution, but to "any recognized institution of Jewish learning."

Dr. Simon Greenberg, Vice-Chancellor of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, asserted that the role of the rabbi and the organized rabbinic in "determining the place that Jewish education is to occupy in the life of the Jewish community is pivotal and probably ultimately determinative."

Rabbi Sandrow maintained that if the synagogue is the center of Jewish life, then the rabbi must be the key figure in education. He added that "unfortunately, Jewish education has not always been religious education."

He said that he meant that "so much time is spent on linguistics - the teaching of the Hebrew language - that by the time the child has finished his Jewish education, he has not absorbed a religious education. We have failed to make Judaism the primary emphasis in Jewish education."

Rabbi Kelmman spelled this out still further in his annual report. All that many Jewish children will remember of their Jewish education, he said, will be a recollection of lovable Jewish tales about Abraham smashing the idols, a few ethnic jokes, and a very detailed, quaint Jewish cuisine: That hamantaschen are eaten at Purim, matzot at Passover, gefilte fish on Friday evening, and similar appetizing and edifying items of information. It is not surprising that Judaism is identified in the minds of so many people with caterers and other trivial infantile characteristics."

Economic Growth of Israel Lauded

WASHINGTON — Israel's economic growth was described last week as a "remarkable development" in a warm speech of praise by Under Secretary of Commerce Edward Gudeman at a luncheon honoring the five-member U.S. trade mission which will leave for a three-week visit to Israel shortly.

Israeli Ambassador Avraham Harman outlined some of Israel's industrial needs and hopes. A major purpose of the trade mission—the first of its kind—is to help stimulate a greater two-way flow of business between the U.S. and Israel.

In its resolution on nuclear testing and disarmament, the Rabbinical Assembly called upon "our government to intensify the investigation of methods other than military by which we can establish peace, at the same time protecting the religious values inherent in our civilization." The resolution urged President Kennedy "to seek sums adequate for this purpose" and declared that "our government must not hesitate to spend as freely to achieve peace as it does to achieve security through armaments."

Government Leaders Attend Celebration

LONDON, — Soviet Government leaders, including a number of Ministers, as well as about 40 leaders of the Jewish communities in Moscow and Kiev, came to the Israel Embassy at Moscow to help celebrate Israel's Independence Day. Jewish Telegraphic Agency dispatches from virtually all other countries around the world reported broad participation in Israel Independence Day receptions.

Among the dispatches were reports of attendance by high governmental officials and state and municipal leaders at Israel Embassy receptions at Helsinki, Brussels, Vienna, Lisbon, Sydney in Australia and Johannesburg in South Africa, Bombay in India, and Montreal in Canada. Guatemala City, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and Santiago de Chile.

Even West Berlin participated in the celebration. The Zionist Organization of the former capital held an Independence Day rally at the new Jewish Community Center there.

Jewish Campaigns Show 18 Per Cent Increase

NEW YORK — Continuing to report impressive increases at all levels of giving, Jewish community campaigns with four-fifths of last years totals already raised — are registering an average 18 per cent increase, contributor for contributor, over 1961, according to an analysis just issued by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds of campaign results in 74 large, intermediate and small cities (excluding New York City) which raised more than $58 million in 1961.

The report was made jointly by John D. Fienberg of Toronto, Chairman, and Marvin Glasspiegel of Milwaukee and Herbert H. Schiff of Columbus, Vice-Chairmen of the Council's Campaign Committee which compiled the report. They pointed out that almost without exception, all the communities covered would definitely surpass last year's final results.

Encouraging as these reports are, they cautioned that these impressive gains could be maintained only if every contributor in each community is reached effectively for larger gifts.

They likened this last phase of the campaign to the final lap of a race when the effort is intensified and heightened and they stressed the importance of "sustaining the impelling sense of urgency to meet the needs at home and abroad which has characterized community campaigns everywhere and has been so well reflected in the increased generosity."

The CJWF is the association of 215 federations, welfare funds and community councils. These central communal organizations, serving areas with over 95 per cent of the Jews of the United States and Canada, annually raise the bulk of all Jewish philanthropic funds.

Communities To Compete For Awards

NEW YORK — For the 10th consecutive year, the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds is sponsoring the William J. Shroder Awards to honor Jewish community organizations or national agencies whose pioneering initiative and progressive achievement have resulted in outstanding social advances.

William Rosenwald, chairman of the awards committee, said that applications in the two categories — one for national agencies and communities with more than 40,000 Jewish population and the other for smaller communities — must be submitted by Aug. 15. Louis Stern of South Orange and Judge Sidney Goldman of Trenton are members of the committee.

The awards were established in 1953 to honor the memory of William J. Shroder, a prominent Cincinnati civic and business leader who was a founder and first president of the CJFWF.

According to the rules, pioneering developments by a large city or by a national agency should be "new within a field of service as a whole nationally, rather than in the particular community alone," while the social contributions of the smaller city organization "should involve new and desirable forms of service which pioneer in the progress of social welfare or the application of already existing forms of service to enhance the welfare of the local community."

TO STUDY IN ISRAEL

NEW YORK — A group of 25 young American rabbis, all Orthodox, left here for Israel last week for three years of advanced studies at the Israel Torah Research Institute at Jerusalem. They were awarded special scholarships under a program conducted by the institute and the immigration department of the Jewish Agency. The scholarship winners were all between the ages of 19 and 25.

Want 'Clean Cut' Revision of Law

BOSTON — The Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston has adopted a resolution calling for a "clean-cut" state legislative policy which would permit persons or businesses closed on Saturdays to stay open on Sundays.

According to Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn, president of the council, and Robert E. Segal, executive director, legislative vision being planned now to amend the Massachusetts Sunday closing law, "falls completely to meet the basic issue of injustice to those who observe Sabbath on a day other than Sunday."

There is a proposal before the State Legislature to exempt from the Sunday closing provisions shops and stores with from one to three employees. While this proposal is "well intentioned," the council resolution declared, it does not meet the need for a "clean cut" revision of the law.

New Role In Education Slated For Philadelphia Federation

PHILADELPHIA — The Federation of Jewish Agencies of Philadelphia announced plans last week for a new community program designed to bring the federation more intensively into efforts to improve Jewish education at all levels in the city. The program was developed by the federation's committee on Jewish education headed by William B. Rudenko and Morris W. Satinsky.

The program set forth as areas in which the federation proposed to substantially increase its direct participation those of development of excellence in Jewish education, raising of standards of instruction and scholarship and concentration of federation support in the areas of teacher training and upper-grade of schooling with special emphasis on strengthening and expanding Gratz College.

The federation said a key phase of the program would be to seek to establish tuition fees in communal elementary schools to cover actual costs. Provision of scholarships or supplementary funds was envisaged to help children of parents unable to pay a full tuition. Federation officials said that because the policy statement represented a considerable departure from current practice, it was suggested it be put into effect over a period of two years.

Support for Teacher Training

Local and national studies indicated that community support was needed primarily for the training of teachers and for secondary level Jewish education. The studies found that elementary Jewish education had largely been taken over by synagogues and "it is therefore apparent that federations should conform its program and utilize its limited funds to yield maximum and optimum return for each community dollar allocated for Jewish education."

"Consultative aid to congregational school systems should be intensified to improve and raise the educational standards of these systems," the report said, adding that "funds for such a program will be available only to the extent that we do not support educationally sub-standard programs and services which in effect are subsidized by the community to persons unable to pay for them."

Much of Jewish education now "is being provided at reduced rates for those financially able to pay in full for the education so given or to join a synagogue which is willing and able to offer a comparable education," the report added.

More Effective Education Seen

The report emphasized that it was not the intention of the federation to close communal systems whose methods parents prefer." But, the report said, the federation would insist "that those able to pay for such education do so."

"If the concern of the parent is ideology," the federation declared, "he should be free to choose any of the communal or congregational systems. But federation should not be put in the position of competing with synagogues by subventioning less expensive substitutes for synagogue education."

It was noted in the report that some of the Orthodox communal elementary schools had been experiencing "persistent losses in enrollment," while congregational elementary schools had been "expanding and flourishing." The report found that of 22,000 Philadelphia children now attending Jewish elementary schools, 20,000 were in congregational schools.

unique network of human services." Jewish social workers may feel no complacency—"not with the kind of world we live in, not with what is happening in Jewish life."

"Native Born."

He linked the problems and responsibilities of the Jewish people to those of this country and mankind against the background of an unsettled United States "with leadership thrust upon it, unready and unsought." in an unsettled world. American Jews have become the largest Jewish community on earth, he pointed out, numbering 5,000,000, "for the first time overwhelmingly native born... and overwhelmingly urban."

Analyzing Jewish problems and welfare needs at home and overseas, Mr. Bernstein termed Israel "an unfinished miracle;" cited the rebuilding of Western European Jewish communities "from their ashes," problems in France, now flooded with refugees from its former overseas territories, and other lands where Jews face great difficulties. He urged swift action because "human problems won't wait."

Stressing that "it is impossible to give strength from weakness," Mr. Bernstein declared, "We build a strong Jewish community here both for our own needs and for our worldwide responsibilities." He called for educational, cultural, moral, ethical, and intellectual effort to build forces and services to strengthen Jewish life, "to give new forms and expressions to fit the needs of a native born American Jewish generation in an American environment."

"Both Synagogue and Center Have Vital Functions."

Mr. Solender said that "both the synagogue and the Jewish Community Center have vital functions in American Jewish life. We must join efforts to increase the effectiveness of both. But our dedication to the central purpose of enriching American Jewish life is too strong to permit of serious diversion. Our best creativity must be addressed to this primary task of fortifying the richness and quality of our life as American Jews. In partnership with all in Jewish life who share this goal, we must and shall move forward towards even greater success in this mission."

Mr. Solender declared that Centers "share their important tasks with other institutions, chief among them being the synagogue. While the Center's community orientation has always influenced it to be concerned about these relationships, this must be given a place of continuing primacy." Charging that some of the writers in "Conservative Judaism" have "chosen to ignore" the great progress made in furthering Synagogue-Center ties, Mr. Solender said that what these writers have attempted "cannot succeed, for the vast majority of the nation's rabbinical and synagogal leadership will have no part of institutional rivalry and conflict."

The results will be embodied in a training manual which will be made available to the industry and organizations working with the blind in the U.S. The U.S. Office of Vocational Rehabilitation feels that the project will help open up employment opportunities in cotton mills for the blind here.

It is anticipated that lessons of the experiment will be applicable in other countries.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

WHY TAX CUT IS BEING PUSHED

Why is a major tax cut for corporations and for individuals, amounting to as much as $9 billion, suddenly getting such strong support even among traditionally conservative sources in the face of the fact that business is still in a good upturn, our federal budget already is sure to be billions in the red next year and there's a constant danger that foreign creditors of the U.S. might be frightened by our government's "fiscal irresponsibility" into staging a devastating run on the U.S. dollar?

Many thoughtful observers of the U.S. must be asking this fundamental question today as they see the trial balloons testing your reaction to a tax reduction in 1963 being sent up by policymakers ranging from President Kennedy himself to governors of the Federal Reserve System. There are answers and they demand simple explanation.

A first answer is that, while business is good, it's not good enough to absorb our unemployed and take up industry's excess capacity, and the fear is spreading that the stock market's crash could so undermine business and consumer spending plans that the 1962 upturn might even be aborted.

A second answer is that worry that 1962's sluggish expansion could turn into recession in 1963 is overcoming worry about budget deficits, and the belief is that our foreign creditors will understand big budget deficits here if our aims are carefully explained to them. Our top officials are now giving the explanations, getting assurances that confidence in the U.S. dollar's stability is being maintained.

A third answer -- and here is the heart of this column -- is that none of the other remedies being suggested to spur our economic growth and cut unemployment has either the validity or the power at this time to achieve our goals. Let's name names and be specific.

(1) The 35-hour workweek which George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, is now pushing to spread work among more jobseekers could not only be no solution to our unemployment problem now but actually could also do great harm to our country. The workweek has been growing shorter over the decades and history emphasizes that the gradual trend toward a shorter week will continue. But Meany is proposing that a worker on a 40-hour week abruptly be placed on a 35-hour week at the same pay -- equivalent to a pay hike of almost 15 per cent! This sort of cost increase many corporations couldn't stand. They'd either have to raise prices which would make us less competitive at home and abroad and which might lead to more unemployment or they'd be put in an even tougher profit squeeze. This is no remedy, definitely not.

(2) Higher prices across-the-board, which the steel industry unsuccessfully attempted to swell profit margins and thereby get the money to finance modernization programs, isn't an acceptable remedy now either. We can't afford general price increases at a time when we're being challenged in all markets by the modern factories of our foreign competitors. Our determination today should be to restrain price and wage increases while Europe goes through her own price-wage spiral and then we'll all be off into a prosperous era of trade competition.

(3) Nor is a vastly expanded program of public works to make jobs a satisfactory remedy at this stage. Our federal budget is swelling every month as it is. Once started, these spending programs tend to become frozen into our budget. We've tried this remedy; we know its drawbacks.

(4) Nor can we count on an aggressive program of easy, cheap credit to spur the economy. Credit is plentiful and borrowing is fairly cheap now. Federal Reserve officials themselves significantly admit that monetary policy (easy credit) can't do more than it is now doing to stimulate business, and fiscal policy (taxes) must take over.

(5) So that leads to the one economic weapon which we haven't used in years and which is acknowledged as the most powerful spur to business and anti-recession weapon there is -- tax cuts.

Important multi-billion dollar tax relief is on the way right now for businessmen who invest in plants and equipment.

Coming up next will be tax cuts for all businessmen, for all individuals. A bill is being drafted within the Treasury now for submission by Kennedy to Congress this summer. Tax reduction will may provide the breakthrough to faster growth which our country so badly needs.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

A TEACHER REMINISCES

By Beryl Segal

(ON THE OCCASION OF THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BUREAU)

Happy tenth anniversary to the Bureau of Jewish Education. May its years be many and may it accomplish what it sets out to do in Providence.

Ten years is a long time. Yet it is only a fraction of the time in which Providence has been at grips with the problem of Jewish education for children. Now, when we celebrate, let us remember those efforts that were made here by hardy souls who struggled for Jewish Schools, and remained unsung and unrewarded.

First in line is Mr. Myer Noot. He was probably the first Jewish teacher in Providence. If there was anybody before him, we do not have any record of him. On April 1, 1877, we read in the Organ, published by the Congregation Sons of Israel and David, "Mr. M. Noot asked the permission of the Congregation for the use of the rooms attached to the Synagogue. His request was granted on condition that he read the Sefer Torah every Saturday."

A fair enough exchange. But soon Mr. Noot's troubles began. Children being children in every age, the Congregation recorded in June of the same year that:

"Mr. M. Noot was notified to have the water faucet repaired at his expense, as the school children have demolished same."

We do not know what Mr. Noot did about it, but we do know that on July of the same year, Mr. Noot became a member of the Congregation, and soon the office of Secretary being vacated, he became the Secretary to the Congregation.

Mr. M. Noot, apparently, became well established in the Congregation and conducted his school in addition to other business. He went on to become Rabbi in Troy, New York, and we do not hear from him any more.

In the year 1896, we read in the same Organ, there existed in Providence two schools. We know it from a report of the Roger Williams Circle to the National Council of Jewish Women, that was meeting in New York. Says Mrs. Belle B. Fink, President of the circle:

"We have two religious schools (in Providence), one connected with the temple (Sons of Israel and David) which consists of the regular Sabbath School and two post-confirmation classes, a senior and a junior. The other, the Talmud Torah School, is attended mostly by the children of the immigrants, holding sessions every day except Friday. For the past three years, the Talmud Torah School was open only to boys, but of late, classes have been formed for girls."

So we have an eye witness report of sixty-six years ago to the presence of two schools in Providence -- one of them open at least three or four years.

The Schools of the Congregation Sons of Israel and David receive much attention in the Organ. Rabbi David Blaustein who was here at the time was an extraordinary man. He was a Professor at Brown, a leader of the Suffragist Movement, a lecturer on every conceivable subject, at churches and at women's clubs, besides his own sermons every Sabbath. He was also the teacher at the Sabbath School, he and four or five others. His subject was Hebrew, and when he was busy somewhere else, the subject of Hebrew was postponed.

Of the Hebrew School, the Talmud Torah, at the Orms Street Synagogue, we have quite a few notes in the same Organ. We read:

"On Sunday, September 29th, at the Synagogue of the sister Congregation Sons of Zion, the children of the Hebrew Free School were publicly examined. The children displayed a great knowledge of Hebrew and of Jewish History."

The public examiners were Rabbi Blaustein and Mr. James Rose, a man whose name we meet again and again. He is said to be a scholar, and an authoritative teacher of the Bible and an author. It would be good to find out more about Mr. Rose who was a figure in Jewish circles of Providence. He represented the North End, the Immigrants, just as Rabbi Blaustein spoke for the "German" Jews.

Similarly the principal of the Talmud Torah, a Mr. G. Brawer, can stand some research. He is said to be a man "of rare abilities in Modern Pedagogy."

But even in my time, Providence had many schools, some Congregational, but three were non-Congregational to which the children came every day of the week. They, too, are waiting for the recorder of the History of Providence to save them from oblivion.

The North End had the Talmud Torah with Mr. H. Lasker as the head. This was the crown of Providence then, and even now his students speak with affection of their teacher and mentor.

The South Side of the city had a Talmud Torah of enormous proportions on Chester Avenue. The South Side Talmud Torah, like that of the North End, had school buildings of their own. The South End school was more modern, and Mr. Alter Boyman, who is a leading figure in the Bureau today, could tell much about that school, its teachers, and its methods, since he was the head of that school.

Then there was the Arbelter Ring School on Benefit Street. These were the days when Yiddish was still the mother tongue of the child, and we really went full speed ahead in teaching the children things that looked like a dream now. Suffice it to say that we had the late Mr. Arthur Einstein, teaching music, and people still stop me to sing me his songs.

But these were the days before the Bureau of Jewish Education came to Providence. The North End did not come in contact with the South Side, and the South Side looked down on Benefit Street. Teacher did not know teacher, and the stimulating influences that come with knowing each other, did not exist. The changes that came to be current in Providence since the Bureau came into being here can only be appreciated by those who toiled for Jewish education of children in those days, and I guess that there are very few of us remaining from those days.

I propose that the Bureau undertake a study of schools and of teachers and of all those who have brought their influence to bear on the welfare of Jewish Education in Providence. That chapter in the life of the community is a heroic one, and a beautiful one, and, I suspect, one that might be forgotten when the history of the Jews of Providence is finally written.

Rabbi Names U. S. Bishop As War Criminal

TEL AVIV — Chief Rabbi Moses Rosen of Rumania recently submitted to the Israeli press pictures and documents which he said showed that Bishop Valerian Trifa, now of Detroit, was the former head of the Rumanian Green Shirt student organization of the Rumanian Iron Guard which conducted programs of Jews under the Antonescu regime.

Rabbi Rosen explained he had delayed his return to Rumania because he had been looking for those documents and said he was prepared to appear before any board to testify against Trifa. Rabbi Rosen said he found the documentary material in the archives of the Yad Vashem, the official agency for the documentation of the nazi genocide program in Europe, and of the World Jewish Congress.

Dr. Aryeh Tartakower, of the Israeli World Jewish Congress executive, said his organization would not take any position as to which Jewish organization would seek to press charges in the case but all material has been transferred to the American Jewish Congress in New York for action.

Denies Charge

DETROIT — The Rt. Rev. Valerian D. Trifa, who according to the Associated Press, described himself as Bishop of the Rumanian Orthodox Episcopacy in the United States, Canada and the Western Hemisphere, said the war crimes charges against him are "absolutely false." In a report to The New York Times, he claimed the charge were inspired by the communist government of Rumania and were "an old story for me."

The Bishop "strongly" denied all charges against him. "I was not even in Rumania during the war. I was a political prisoner in German concentration camps from 1941 to 1945," he told The Times.

According to AP, he said, "I am sorry that Jewish organizations in the United States are being misinformed in this way. I am sorry to know that the Jewish organization is going to be made a mouthpiece for communism in Rumania."

Asks Synagogues To Back Medicare

NEW YORK — Synagogues and churches were urged here this week to speak out on the problems of medical care for the aged, as well as to develop programs to enable elderly persons to become an integral part of synagogue and community life. The proposals were made at a session on "Judaism, the Synagogue and the Aging," during the three-day convocation of the board of trustees of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the synagogue body of American Reform Judaism.

Deploring the fact that medical care for the age has been "reduced to a propaganda war," Judge Emil N. Baar, chairman of the UAHG board, asserted, "Partisan politics are not the concern of the church and synagogue, but the effort to safeguard the dignity of human beings and to meet the critical need of older people who are most vulnerable to suffering, is a struggle about which religion dare not remain a silent and bemused spectator."

At a dinner meeting, conducted by the Combined Campaign for American Reform Judaism, Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the UAHG, pleaded for liberalization of the American immigration laws.

Engaged — Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reef of Portland, Maine announce the engagement of their daughter, Miriam Rena, to Hadley Neil Flint, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Flint of 251 California Avenue.

Miss Reef is a graduate of Boston University, College of Business Administration.

Mr. Flint is a graduate of Dean Junior College and is presently attending Babson Institute.

A June, 1963, wedding is planned.

Urges Drive To Modify U.S. Aid Bill

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Congress called last week for vigorous campaign by national Jewish groups for an amendment to the Mutual Security Act that would deny United States economic aid to any nation that discriminated against Americans because of creed or color.

In a report to the national governing council, Mrs. Thelma Richman, newly appointed chairman of the organization Commission on International Affairs, noted that such an amendment had been passed by the House Foreign Affairs Committee last month by a vote of 22-0.

Pointing out that the Senate version of the new Mutual Security Act, still in committee, contains no anti-bias provision as adopted by the House group, Mrs. Richman called on Jewish groups to wage an intensive effort for inclusion of the House amendment in the final Act, "to the end that our country shall serve notice on all nations discriminating against American citizens on racial or religious grounds that they do so at the peril of depriving themselves of American aid, paid for by the taxes of all American citizens."

Shad Polier, chairman of the AJ Congress national governing council, said President Kennedy's "failure to give active leadership" in the fight for anti-discrimination legislation, has produced apathy and discouragement among civil rights supporters. He added that civil rights groups were "still waiting for Executive action where it is most needed — a Presidential order that would outlaw discrimination in Federally-supported housing."

Release Data On Cleveland Pupils

CLEVELAND — Approximately 75% of the Jewish children in the Cleveland public schools attend some Jewish schools here, according to the 37th annual report of the local Bureau of Jewish Education.

The bureau's report indicated that the organization serves about 30 communal and congregational schools here, with a total enrolment of 12,518 pupils and about 600 teachers. Of the total, 4,173 pupils are enrolled in weekday schools, 570 in day schools, 866 in communal Hebrew schools.

UN Aids Israeli Water Research

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Israel last week received a United Nations Special Fund grant of $489,300 to aid a $2,173,000 project for investigation of problems of underground water storage. The Fund's Governing Council made the allocation which had been previously approved at a closed meeting on the recommendation of Paul G. Hoffman, managing director of the Fund.

Under the grant, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization will work with the Government of Israel during a three-year period to probe the feasibility of storing water deep underground in geological formations. Part of the project will include the establishment of a pilot plant in Israel to study techniques for utilizing the underground water, much of which is known to contain a heavy salt content.

Under the plans as worked out by experts for Israel and the FAO, Israel will spend $1,684,000 for the entire project, more than three times the amount of the grant by the UN Special Fund. The Fund is, essentially a "pump-priming" operation, intended to stimulate development projects by providing relatively modest amounts to help countries launch works through counterpart contributions.

German Greeted By "His Jews"

TEL AVIV — Oscar Schindler, a Sudeten-born German who, during World War 2 saved Jews from the nazis by employing them in an enamel factory he operated near Cracow, Poland, was welcomed here by a crowd of 300 persons whom he had saved and who now live in Israel.

Schindler arrived here to participate in special Holocaust Memorial services during which a forest will be planted in the Avenue of Righteous Gentiles, honoring the non-Jews who helped Jewish victims of the nazis.

During the war Schindler, who was questioned a number of times by SS officers concerning his activities, succeeded in averting danger to "his Jews" by using his personal contacts and pressure.
