Naturalist Teaches Centerland Children Not To Look At The World Secondhand

By LOIS ATWOOD

The Jewish Community Center is fortunate to have a bona fide naturalist in charge of its nature programs until Marvin Friedman gets his Master's degree at the University of Rhode Island and leaves for Israel.

By the time he was five years old he wanted to be a naturalist; "I knew then what a naturalist did for fun, but not what he did for a living."

The children fortunate enough to study nature under Mr. Friedman also learn what a naturalist does for fun. He teaches all age groups three fundamentals, to see for themselves, to discover how much they can learn by looking, and to fear nothing in nature. "I try to give them a realistic approach midway between unreasoned fear and unearned love of animals."

He has been teaching nature at camps for 10 years, at Camp Massad and Young Judaea camps, but last year was his first at Camp Centerland. The usual philosophy of camp nature programs is "show and tell," i.e., make something and take it home. "I love to see people using their hands and imagination," but this is insufficient as a nature program, said the counselor.

Camp Centerland is a beautiful spot with different habitats for animal life, but animals aren't there, except for certain small mammals, a few birds, and a few amphibians and reptiles, said the naturalist. "If there were a lot of animals, I probably wouldn't talk about plant communities, forestry, climate and all the interacting factors, since I'm biased toward animals."

There are always live animals in camp which have been caught, maybe a raccoon, turtles in a pen, a bluejay, snakes. "One snake can take us through a whole week," said Mr. Friedman, who can't understand how people can be content to go through life fearing the unknown. "Everybody loves going out in the country, and their day is ruined by everything that moves except for distant birds."

Children at Centerland are taught to observe the unknown for themselves, rather than relying on information from sensational books or movies, parents or urban environment. The nature director shows them how much can actually be learned by looking and questioning, by taking an animal they know nothing about to see how much they can discover, from his color, shape, size, teeth, ears and placement of eyes (in front for a predator).

He especially likes to combat any sentimental ideas, such as those propagated by anti-vivisectionist organizations which place the life of an animal above that of a human being. "No animal is to be feared; if you should avoid an animal, then you don't have to panic. You can't assume animals' purposes, but I tell the children to get rid of their feelings of awe and fear over some forms of life." He added that he greatly

Cancel Israel-Moscow Orchestra Exchange

JERUSALEM — The abrupt cancellation last week of an exchange by the Israel Philharmonic and Moscow State Orchestras is believed here to be the result of a closer Soviet relationship with the new Syrian Government.

The Syrian Premier, Youssef Zayan, who took power in a coup two months ago, left Moscow last week with a Soviet pledge to help build a dam on the Euphrates River.

The Soviet Union wants Syria to oppose a proposed Islamic pact of Arab monarchs. Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin used the Syrian visit to denounce the proposed alliance.

Relations between Israel and the Soviet Union have never been cordial. The cultural program had been regarded here in recent years as providing the most promising area of exchange.

It was only in the last year that first-class Soviet artists have appeared in Israel. The violinist David Oistrakh played here two months ago to huge throngs. A prominent Soviet writer, Konstantin Simonov, whose work has been translated into Hebrew, left Israel just last week.

The scheduled exchange of the orchestras was to have been the highlight of the slowly developing program. Attempts this week to reschedule the exchange have fallen on deaf ears at the Soviet Embassy in Tel Aviv. Officials there say that the exchange had nothing to do with the Government, that it was handled by private booking agencies.

Many here, including a fair proportion in the Government, see another obstacle to Soviet-Israel relations, the question of Soviet Jews. There are three million Jews in the Soviet Union. Israel has long sought a Soviet policy that would permit their free emigration, presumably to Israel. Pressure for the release of Soviet Jews has also come from the United States and Britain.

One Israeli Government official told friends weeks ago that the Israeli orchestra would never make its Soviet tour.

"Can you imagine the feeling in that audience when the orchestra played Hatikva?"

The emotional response among Soviet Jews to the arrival in 1948 of Israel's first Ambassador to Moscow, Golda Meir, apparently made a deep impression on Soviet officials. Discussion between the two countries on the subject of Soviet Jews has remained strained through the years.

A few weeks ago the Soviet Ambassador in Israel, Dmitri Chuvakhin, met with Premier Levi Eshkol to see how relations could be improved. Among his complaints was that the Soviet Government was being harassed by the Israeli press. Newspapers here give considerable attention to the state of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Israeli officials say they foresee a slow improvement in relations with Moscow, but they think it will be a product of Moscow's realization that Israel cannot be ignored.

CINDY ADAMS

Believes In 'Classic' Look In Fashions For Women

By CELIA ZUCKERBERG

Cindy Adams believes in what she calls "the classic look." She has worn dark lipstick through the various fads of white and pink lipsticks; long hair worn in a bun; skirts no shorter than the knee-cap; high heels which she feels make the legs look prettier. The "classic look" to her is the feminine look — not the kind that needs ruffles and bows and ruching — but the kind which says a woman is a woman.

"Astline," is her term for the current fashion of skirts four inches above the knee, patterned stockings and grade school Mary Jane's. The new look, she says, is the worst thing she has ever seen.

Miss Adams, particularly noted for her recent book, "Sukarno: An Autobiography As Told To Cindy Adams," published by Bobbs-Merrill and now in its fifth printing, was in Providence a week ago Thursday as commentator for the Givenchy-Israel Collection of fashions which was presented by the R.I. Women's Division, State of Israel Bonds, and coordinated and accessorized by Peerless.

Dressed in a Thai silk suit (it doesn't wrinkle) in a beautiful shade of red (she wears only reds, blacks and whites), she could just as easily have been one of the models as the commentator. This is not surprising since, before she turned to writing, she was one of the leading models in the world of fashion and appeared on the pages and covers of the country's most popular magazines.

Israeli fashions she approves of — Israel designers she feels are more practical than those of France — and Israeli skirts are not four inches above the knee. (Witness the pictures with this story.)

Deeply interested in Indonesia — she had only recently returned from that country where she had been since February — she has spent several years in Indonesia.

RIKKI BEN-ARI is emerging as one of Israel's most gifted young designers. This turquoise suit of mohair and wool is trimmed with mink by Stefan Braun.

She is now preparing a second book about Sukarno, "My Friend, The Dictator," which will be published, again by Bobbs-Merrill, early next spring.

Styles in Indonesia are going Western now, she says. Long hair, which was worn coiled in a bun, is now very short. The skirts are also getting very short — particularly on the young girls in their early 20s, but "Thank God, they don't wear patterned stock-

Propaganda Against Jews Condemned In Lenin Letter

NEW YORK — A letter in which Lenin condemned the Tsarist government for its official policy of antisemitism has come to light in an auction here.

Consisting of 18 typewritten lines in German, the letter was written in February, 1917, to Oscar Gruen, the editor of the "Judische Presse-Zentrale." It bears Lenin's signature in Russian in black ink.

The Communist leader wrote that his "attitude towards the Jews has been clear from the beginning" and that when the Bolshevik Group of Deputies in the Duma (Tsarist Parliament) introduced a Bill in 1913 to cancel the restrictions against the Jews, he had written: "The schools, the press, the Parliamentary tribunal, — everything and every sort of means has been used to sow ignorance, evil and wild hate against the Jews."

The letter continued: "In this nefarious undertaking, not only the scum of the Black Hundred (a band of Ukrainian pogromists) are active, but also reactionary professors, scholars, journalists, representatives in Parliament, and so on. Millions, indeed billions of rubles are being squandered to poison the public opinion of the population in the most effective way and manner."

The letter, which was bought by a dealer for $3,300, was written when Lenin was living in poverty in Zurich, where he stayed from January, 1916, until March 1917.

Another letter to Gruen, sold at the same auction for $1,500 was from Dr. Sigmund Freud, written in Vienna on January 27, 1925. It explained the relationship of the founder of psycho-analysis to Judaism.

"I can say that I stand as far removed from the Jewish religion as from all other religions, that is, they are extremely meaningful to me as the subject of scientific interest, but emotionally I have no part in them," he wrote.

"I have always had a strong feeling of solidarity with my people, and have also promoted this in my children. We have all remained within the Jewish faith," the letter continues.

Catholic Paper Praises Jewish Funeral Practice

OMAHA, NEBRASKA — A leading Catholic newspaper has called upon its readers to "learn from our Jewish neighbors" in funeral practices and reduce the time between death and burial; and to keep caskets closed. The editorial in the Catholic Star Herald, official publication of the Diocese of Camden, was entitled, "To View or Not to View." It stated: "We were impressed last week by a reader's letter urging the abandonment of viewing the dead. As the letter said 'Since there is no sign of life... what good would come from the viewing?' A closed casket, the writer felt, 'would prevent unnecessary agony.' "We think the writer has a point. The viewing, the length of the wake, all tend to beget excessive grief. A brief, fond farewell would seem more in keeping with the Christian spirit. "It seems to us we can learn from our Jewish neighbors. They hold no prolonged wakes and generally bury their dead within 24 hours. It strikes us as a sensible custom. Not only does it emphasize that life on earth must go on, but it commits the dead to their new life with God without any self-pitying complaints. It seems to be both religious and realistic to bury the dead quickly. "So far as we can see there's nothing in Catholic theology that would prevent our people having closed-casket wakes and burials within a day or two. It's enough that the heart goes mourning until it too joins its loved ones."

Reserves Decision On Yonkers Arsonist

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — A State Supreme Court Justice reserved decision recently on an application to vacate the confession of 17-year-old Alfred Ruppert who said he set the fire in the Yonkers Jewish Community Center last Dec. 20 which killed three adults and nine children. Justice C. J. Hoyt also reserved decision on a request that Ruppert be released from Westchester County jail where he has been held since he was arraigned on arson charges on Jan. 25. He acted after hearing charges that Yonkers police officials bullied the youth into confessing falsely that he had started the fire. A Westchester County Grand Jury met after considering the confession and hearing more than 100 witnesses but did not make a report. The youth's father had asked for the boy's release.

Bond Campaign Leaders To Be Honored At Dinner

Awards for leadership in the Rhode Island Israel Bond campaign will be presented to Joe Thaler, campaign chairman, and Mrs. Max Leach, women's division chairman, at the Israel Anniversary Dinner in the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel on Sunday evening, May 22. It was announced by Judge Frank Licht, chairman of the executive committee.

The Israel Freedom Medal will be awarded to Mr. Thaler for his leadership of the Israel Bond campaigns for the past three years. The Israel Chai Anniversary plaque will be presented to Mrs. Leach, serving her first year as women's division chairman. The women have already sold a larger amount in Bonds than in any previous year.

Principal speaker at the State-wide dinner will be Abba P. Schwartz, former Assistant Secretary of State and an authority on immigration and refugee problems.

The gathering will commemorate the 18th anniversary of Israel's Statehood and Independence.

The Israel Freedom Medal commemorates the defense of the ancient fortress of Masada, the last Jewish stronghold to fall in the Roman conquest of Palestine 1,900 years ago. The medal will be inscribed to Mr. Thaler "in recognition of exceptional service in strengthening the freedom of the State of Israel through the promotion of its economic development."

The face of the medal bears a sculptured representation of the rock of Masada with the camps of the besieging Roman legions at its base. The legend, "We shall remain free men!" appears in English and Hebrew at the top and bottom of the bronze medalion.

The design on the reverse side recalls an ancient shield. In the center is a composition in relief of Hebrew characters, reminiscent of the towers of a fortress, with the letters spelling out: "Masada shall not fall again!" The same phrase in English appears around the center. The outer portion bears a continuous circular line of figures which represent builders, diggers, and warriors with their tools and weapons.

The Chai Anniversary plaque to be presented to Mrs. Leach bears the seal of the State of Israel topped by the figure 18, and is awarded for "outstanding service and leadership in Israel Bonds in strengthening Israel's economic life in the Year of Chai."

Dinner reservations may be made by calling the Israel Bond office at JA 1-8914.

B'nai Jeshurun Marks 140th Year

NEW YORK — Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, the oldest Conservative synagogue in the United States, celebrated its 140th anniversary on Sunday with a dinner honoring Rabbi William Berkowitz, leader of the synagogue for the past 15 years.

Among the congregation's founders were John I. Hart, son of the Rev. Judah Hart of Portsmouth, England; Benjamin Morange, who had been minister of France to Spain under Napoleon before coming to America; Daniel Jackson, the first president of the Hebrew Benevolent Society formed in 1822, and Abraham Mitchell, one of a handful of Jews who served in the War of 1812. Mordecai M. Noah, the most prominent American Jew of that era, was a friend and benefactor of the new congregation, and Haym M. Salomon, son of the famous patriots of the Revolutionary War, presented a Hebrew Bible when the first house of worship on Elm Street was consecrated in 1825. The present building is at 270 West 89th Street.

The first Jewish prayer before the Congress of the United States was delivered by Dr. Morris J. Raphall of B'nai Jeshurun on February 1, 1860.

The names of its illustrious rabbis, such as Stephen S. Wise, Judah L. Magnes and Dr. Israel Goldstein, are part of American Jewish history. The congregation's laity has played a major role in the development of many leading charitable and philanthropic institutions, and it has contributed significantly to the development and growth of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

Rabbi William Berkowitz is vice-president of the New York Board of Rabbis, an officer of the fraternal Zionist Organization of America, past chairman of the Manhattan Division of Israel Bonds and a member of the presidium of the Histadruth Ivrit. He is author of "I Believe," "Ten Vital Jewish Issues" and "Heritage and Hope — Dialogues in Judaism."

Tifereth Israel To Dedicate New Synagogue

New Bedford Jewry will dedicate the new $1,500,000 Tifereth Israel Congregation building with a two-week congregational and public celebration, Selwyn I. Brady, dedication committee chairman, has announced. The dedication will begin on Sunday, May 22, with a religious service and will end on Sunday, June 5, with an open house tour of the new facilities, to which the entire community will be invited. The dedication marks the successful conclusion of a five-year fundraising and building campaign. It will start with a Torah Procession.

The first Jewish families in New Bedford worshipped in the Howland Street Synagogue, built by the early settlers. As the community outgrew this building, a new congregation was formed under the name Tifereth Israel (The Glory of Israel) in 1921. They dedicated the structure at Madison and Sixth Streets in 1924. The 550-family congregation's new building is at Hawthorne Street and Brownell Avenue.

ARABS SLANT COPY
CASABLANCA — Al Alam, the organ of the opposition Istiqlal Party, has again published a violently anti-Jewish article. The publication printed a photograph of a building in London smeared with swastikas and in the accompanying text declared that "the swastika is the only possible defense against Zionism."

At Duke he was named to the Order of the GOLF, the law school's honor society. He is a member of the Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Federal bars, and was chairman of the R.I. Ecumenicism Demands Hebrew School Training

NEW YORK — PTA delegates of Hebrew Day Schools throughout the United States and Canada were told by prominent Rabbis and School educators that the spirit of ecumenicism now prevalent in North America, with its emphasis on dialogue and common goals, does not in the least diminish the need for intensive Jewish education, but rather puts even more emphasis on the vital urgency of intensive Jewish education.

"Jewish contribution to the world's progress did not come about because we learned less or practiced least," declared Rabbi Morris Shmidman. "It was the committed Jew, the learned Jew, who brought the world spiritual and intellectual benefits and it is only in the Hebrew Day School that we can educate such a learned and committed Jew."

A United States '1984'

The United States Government used to get along with moderate taxes and information. In recent years the taxes have been rising and the government's curiosity has grown. Latest word on governmental prying is that the 1970 census may include questions on religious beliefs.

Ross Eckler, director of the United States Census Bureau, said recently in Cleveland that certain Roman Catholic and Protestant groups are among those asking to have questions on religion included in the census questionnaire. Jews and Christian Scientists oppose such queries, he added.

The invasion of privacy represented by questionnaires is seldom spoken of as anything but a nuisance, but it is an imposition and can be a danger. Why must a man answer personal questions that have no bearing on his application when he applies for insurance or employment or membership in a group? Why must he fill out three pages each time he enters a hospital or clinic? Why should he . . . and the list goes on endlessly. To the annoyance of all this effort for an unworthwhile end, must be added the exasperation of temper attendant upon trying to figure out what the questions mean: Have any of your wives had distemper? Do you keep yard pets? Did your mother eat in moderation or heavily?

Neither annoyance nor anger matters — however they may aggravate one's ulcers — in comparison with the dangers attendant upon letting ourselves be pinned down for dissection by the government. This country is still a frontier nation where the individual's freedom is prized, but once let Americans be paperbound, and George Orwell's country of "1984," where Big Brother is always watching you, will have come much closer.

For Jews, there is another reason for objection to being pinned down in the files of government: Salonika's well-organized records made it easy for all but a few from that flourishing community to be wiped out. The Nazi's extermination efforts were simplified everywhere by the full files kept by European governments, and the multitudinous papers vital to existence there. It is not because this will happen here, that we object to the inclusion of religious questions on the census, but because this can happen anywhere. Since the State Department has discriminated against Jews in appointing them to posts in certain countries, why give any branch of the government any more information than they really need? In fact, why give them much of the information included in the census now?

What positive good the social scientists might get from census questions about religion, is unknown to the majority of Americans. What positive evils might result, Jews know too well. What business of the government's is the religion of its citizens, so long as they refrain from hindering the religious liberty of others? Let the government ask what it must, but let it remember that the Bill of Rights is a guarantor of individual rights, and of individual privacy.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

LITTER VERSUS BEAUTY. AND BILLIONS. This marks the fifth consecutive year in which Ford is offering plastic litter baskets in a selection of colors as a low-cost accessory for all its car lines. To date, an abysmally low level of less than 1 per cent of new car customers have requested the accessory, a response which, a Ford salesman says, "can only be construed as a lack of public interest." As a result, Ford is not offering the litter containers as standard equipment; General Motors and Chrysler are taking a similar position.

This attitude of most Americans toward littering is wrong on every count — from beauty to billions. As we swing into the peak vacation season of the year, when tens of millions of us will be roaming the land, it is imperative that you recognize the simple dollars-and-cents cost to you of your own litter. To illustrate with a few dreadful statistics:

Just the cost of cleaning up litter on highways runs to $100 million a year, equal to about $12 for every new car sold and far more than the cost of any auto litter bag.

The total U.S. litter bill runs around $1 billion annually, estimates Keep America Beautiful, the public service organization founded in 1953 by top American businessmen to fight litter through public education. Half of this bill we, as taxpayers, pay for removal of litter from public property; the other half is spent to clean up private property and to pay for fire, injury and health losses that follow in the wake of the litter-bug.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY Rabbinic Guide To The Gospels

By Beryl Segal

More and more American colleges and universities are now establishing chairs in Judaica. They offer courses in Hebrew language and they teach Jewish Philosophy and Jewish interpretations of the Book of Books.

At Brown University, the Department of Religion is bringing visiting Professors of Judaica for a goodly number of years now. Dr. Asher Finkel has just completed a year of teaching. This youthful Jewish professor astonished his students who were mostly non-Jewish with his depth of scholarship. Next year, occupying the same position, will be Dr. Solo Baron of Columbia University.

Jewish Rabbis and scholars, on the other hand, are seeking to determine how much the teaching of the Rabbis who lived about the same time when the Gospels were being written influenced the teaching and the events described in these documents.

One such scholar is our own Rabbi William G. Braude of Temple Beth El.

In a study entitled "A Rabbinic Guide to the Gospels" which Rabbi Braude read before conferences and seminars of Christian ministers and priests, he reveals some "general patterns of thought which Oral Tradition (Rabbinic writings of the Jews) and the New Testament share."

To my knowledge this study was not as yet read before Jewish audiences. In my opinion, Jews as well as Christians ought to know these "patterns of thought."

I will here cite two instances out of many which Rabbi Braude touches in his study.

You might remember the Prophet Elijah, or as he is called Elijah the Tishbite. Of him it is said in the Book of Kings 2, Chapter one, verse 8, that he was a man "with a garment of hair and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins." Oral Tradition has elected Elijah the Tishbite for the role of harbinger of the Messiah, when he comes. He is the one who will stand on the mountains of Israel and his voice will be heard from world's end to world's end: "Peace has come to the world" "Good has come to the world" "Salvation has come to the world"

Elijah, the forerunner of the Messiah.

Now in the Gospels, John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus, is said to be "clothed with camel's hair and had a leather girdle about his loins and did eat locusts and wild honey."

We read further in the Gospels that Zacharias his father said to John the Baptist:

"Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord and make ready the way; to give knowledge of salvation to his people."

Clearly John the Baptist had not only the same clothing as Elijah the Tishbite, but has the same role to play in the coming of the Messiah, bringing the good tidings of Peace to the world and salvation to mankind.

And here is another story in the Gospels that can be understood only in the light of Jewish Oral Tradition and, we might add, as a document written by Jews for Jews living in the First and Second Centuries, of the Common Era.

The Gospels tell of sick people who came to Jesus wherever he appeared, and touched the tassels of his garment.

The tassels, of course, are the Tzitzis that Jews were commanded to wear and which are found in the four corners of the Tallis Jews wear today. These tassels had a thread of blue in them, a color extracted from a mollusk found in the sea off the coast of Haifa. The purpose of the Tzitzis and the thread of blue was to remind the Jew that he is to "remember all the commandments of the Lord and do them."

But the Rabbis explain the thread of blue in this manner: "Why is blue different from all other colors? Because blue has the appearance of the sea, the sea has the appearance of heaven, and heaven has the appearance of the Throne of Glory." It symbolizes perfection. It is the seal of God himself.

A Jew wearing the thread of blue in the fringes of his garment comes to know Him who sits on the Throne of Glory.

The sick people who came to touch the tassels of Jesus' garment believed that he was the Messiah and through him they will come closer to the Throne of Glory, who is the healer of all troubled hearts and can make the blind to see and the lame to walk and the deaf to hear.

And again, the healing of the sick and the maimed is an attribute of the Messiah, according to the Rabbis.

In the time-to-come (the time of the Messiah), so the Midrash tells us, the eyes of the blind will be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped, and the lame shall leap like a hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing the praises of the Lord.

This is how the Rabbis describe the days of the Messiah-to-come.

The gospel writers who believed that Messiah has come in the person of Jesus, tell us also that these people so afflicted were indeed healed, and they all sang: "Is this not the Son of David? Is not the time come already here?"

Thus the Gospels spoke to Jews of the First Century in the language they understood, in the symbolism their ears were attuned to, and in the terms for which their hearts were yearning in those troubled days.

I have picked only some of the points with which the Rabbi deals in his study. For the rest, you may be interested to read the entire paper, or better still, listen whenever he speaks on this topic.

Orthodox Rabbi Chides National Groups For Defamation By Ignoring Kashruth

To The Editor:

It is alarming and frightening to take cognizance of the unmistakable trend of individuals who have drifted away from Kashruth. In the case of the individual home, or in the religious observance of the individual, a Rabbi cannot proceed too far except to appeal, counsel and adjure. After all, in a Democracy one is allowed to choose for himself any philosophy of religion that suits him best, and it is unthinkable to foist a religious persuasion upon one who does not seek it.

It is doubly frightening and alarming to become aware of the trend of National Jewish Organizations who are repeatedly defiling and battering the religious sensibilities of our People by arranging Conferences, Testimonials, etc. featuring non-kosher food. Beside the fact that these organizations which are dedicated to the principles of democracy and will spend phenomenal fortunes to champion the cause of Democracy, and are really abrogating the process of Democracy by denying the observant Jew the opportunity of joining with his fellow Jew in a common, philanthropic cause — beside this, they are also committing the most horrendous of Jewish deviations, that of "Chillul Hashem". When any thing that is sacred and has been hallowed by the Jew throughout the millennia is being flaunted and desecrated and abused, there can be no other description of this situation than "Chillul Hashem" — the desecration of the name of God.

Many people have approached me to speak out in stentorian tones against these sacrilegious attitudes on the part of local organizations. I have no compunctions of naming the B'nai B'rith and Jewish War Veterans as organizations who are doing violence to the religious and Torah-true sensibilities and sensitivities of Judaism. Where is their national pride for which they are constantly doing battle with the forces of bigotry and hatred, or is the Jewish religion to be divorced from Jewish Peoplehood? The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is doing a magnificent job in its anti-defamation project vis-a-vis the physical welfare of the Jew.

It is doing an equally magnificent job in defamation of the Jewish religion when it sponsors non-kosher affairs. Is it unfair on my part to request of B'nai B'rith, Jewish War Veterans and all other organizations with similar concepts and attitudes — is it unfair on my part to ask them to serve the religious welfare of the Jew with the same vigor, forthrightness, pride and aggressiveness with which they serve the Nationalistic hopes and dreams and aspirations of Jewry? Is it imprudent on my part to ask these organizations to display to the world, yes, this hostile, greedy and ego-centered world, the same dedication to the religion of Israel as it does to the Peoplehood of Israel?

Furthermore, a novel, new-fangled concept has crept into our religious thinking that at times appears to be the apex of folly and at other times the height of ridicule. This pseudo-theological innovation is that it is perfectly acceptable and permissible to par-

By Robert E. Starr

A tremendous majority of players these days will absolutely never open the bidding with a four card major. This attitude is usually but not always a good one for often there is a serious re-bidding problem when one opens with four cards in the Spade or Heart suit. You will note that I said usually for sometimes the four card major should be opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Macktez, of Woonsocket, were North and South with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
-	P	1S	P
2S	P	4S	End

South sensed game when he saw his twenty high card points provided his partner was able to respond, but which suit should he bid? He feared that because of his great strength partner might not be able to keep the bidding open and with this in mind felt that this being Duplicate, he would rather play the hand in one Spade rather than one Club. He also was quite prepared to rebid his hand no matter what response he would receive, even ready to jump to three No Trump if partner bid one, he would gamble on the Diamond suit.

As it was, North raised the Spades one level, a weak bid, so South, discouraged from slam, settled for game in Spades. To hold this contract to five the defenders have to cash their two Diamond tricks; otherwise, six can be made by ruffing one Heart before drawing the trumps and running the Clubs.

Most players opened the South hand one Club and on hearing partner respond two Clubs, thoughtlessly jumped right to game in Clubs where five is the maximum that can be made, a Heart ruff now not gaining a trick.

Even these players could still have gotten to the Spade game by making a jump shift to three Spades, absolutely forcing. North's best bid now would be four Spades which would perfectly show his hand to a perceptive partner. He would be showing good three card Spade support, his two Club bid had already denied any four card major, and a willingness to have partner return to Clubs if his Spade suit were not strong enough with only three card support.

South, however, did have a potent enough suit so should play the hand in game in Spades. As stated before, 12 tricks are available provided the defenders do not cash their two Diamond tricks first, but five Spades is certain with any defense.

Moral: One should open the bidding with a four card major rather than make a preparedness bid of a three or four card minor when he has a very strong 19 or 20 point hand. He should be afraid partner might pass a one Club or one Diamond bid and conduct himself accordingly.

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

She Doesn't Want To Move And Lose Friends

By C. D. Smith

Accepting changes, meeting new people and new situations, all of this is a part of growing up, and as well, a part of life. It is very likely that your parents are also hesitant to leave a community that has been "home" and move away from neighbors and friends of long standing. Yet, we cannot always do what we want to do. We never grow so old that time and circumstances are not likely to force some kind of "change" in our lives. It is easier to accept change if we consider that we are not giving up our old friends. We'll still have them, as well as the opportunity to make new friends.

THE WEEK'S LETTER: I am twelve years old and will be moving to the country in the next state. I don't know anyone over there and the school is in the country. I have a boyfriend here in the eighth grade and I don't want to move because of him and my other friends. Is there anything I can do?"

OUR REPLY: It would be nice if you could take your friends with you, but this is impossible. Rest assured, however, that you will find new friends, wherever you happen to go.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUB-URBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANK-FORT, KY.

Naturalist Friedman Teaches At Centerland

enjoys watching the television program, "Daktari," to check off its manifold errors.

Last year there were no field trips to the sea for nature study, but this summer Mr. Friedman plans to include beaches and bays in the nature program. He brings his own large library out to the day camp, and arranges special intensive work for campers with an above-the-average interest. He has seen some kids turn into absolute fanatics about nature, as a result of what they learned in camp.

In addition to teaching campers about local wild life, he discusses the wild life of Israel. "They visualize Israel as sterile, but it's so much more alive with animals than New England ever could have been." Even the birds overhead are more numerous, and although he has never caught any hawks here, in Israel he can get a falcon within an hour right in the center of Jerusalem.

He was there on the Young Judaea year course, and with his roommate collected a menagerie of 55 animals, including hawks, owls and venomous snakes, which he kept in pillowcases ("pretty safe, as people don't generally go nosing around.") Besides, the snakes were rearfanged and had to chew before they could inject venom.

WITH DUMDUM — Mr. Friedman and his magnificent dog, Dumdum, a cross between a boxer and a Belgian sheepdog. The Friedmans also have a black cat, assorted turtles, tropical fish and an anti-social baby piranha which he says is not much of a danger full-grown, despite folklore to the contrary. He had a greyhound and seven pups last year, which died of an unidentified disease.

He caught venomous snakes for the Tel Aviv Biological Institute while he was in Israel. Snakes were brought in from all over the country, and some were much deadlier than anything we have here. The common ("Palestinian") viper, for example, is three times deadlier than our rattlesnake. But people can live in Israel all their lives and be unaware of the animal life, though the animals here are shyer and warier, said Mr. Friedman. "In Israel you can walk through the fields and see mongooses, and I chased jackals on muleback. The mule needed exercise."

He started off as a leader in Young Judaea in response to an ad and as a challenge and "turned them into one of the most active clubs in Brooklyn . . . and that started me off on it." He has been leading Young Judaea clubs for about 11 years, "imbuing them with a love of Zionism," and his wife also leads one. (Lilliane Friedman, Congo-born, is a nurse at Rhode Island Hospital, leader of the Israeli dance group at Hilliel, dance instructor at Barrington Congregation.)

In Jerusalem as elsewhere, he found it difficult to hunt an apartment or a hotel room with a large number of animals. The hotel in Jerusalem was apparently typical — the people in charge started off slightly fearful, then were fascinated, then friendly, and after a while began to feel they were bursting with animals.

Marvin Friedman had a normal childhood except that his interest in animals was never squelched. His father was open-handed and non-antagonistic toward all animals, and though his mother feared snakes and bats, she let him collect. By approaching an animal gently and talking softly, he can have almost any animal feeding from his hand in a short time. When a camper was trapped in the tent with a garbage can and a skunk, Mr. Friedman "tamed" the skunk within an hour.

When he returned from Israel, he brought back 67 animals, many of them in a tremendous knapsack with cages. At the time it was legal to transport reptiles anywhere in the world, so, since he has "fantastic luck" in keeping alive hard-to-keep animals, the dean of the Tel Aviv Institute endorsed his bringing back a baby viper. "Had he bitten me, I'd have been in trouble as there is no serum outside Israel for it except at the Pasteur Institute in France, and that's weakened," said Mr. Friedman. He brought the Palestinian viper in a coat pocket, and thought he was on the way to success in keeping it when of its own volition the viper ate a mouse, but the snake finally died. Many of the animals he brought back were for the American Museum of Natural History. His first nature book had been one of Ditmars' on North American reptiles, and one day when younger and brasher Marvin Friedman wandered into the Zoological Park herpetologist's office and looked it over. Mr. Ditmars accepted the invasion pleasantly and as that of one naturalist to another. The Center counselor worked at the American Museum on a voluntary basis doing research on temperature regulations in lizards, while he was in school.

Mr. Friedman, who is from the Bronx, is a graduate of City College of New York and started out doing graduate work at URI in physiological ecology, but has switched to wild life management. Wild life reserves have been opened recently in Israel. He hopes to get a post managing one of these or doing research on a reservation for preserving the flora and fauna or on a reservation with game. He always wants to work with children, and spoke of the possibilities of setting up a section for children within such reservations. There isn't a zoo or museum within 150 miles of Providence that's "really great for a child, like the Bronx Zoo or the American Museum of Natural History, or Kruger National Park in South Africa, with hundreds of miles of raw nature set aside where the animals are fearless and people go out on Sunday to look at them."

He has always been interested in Israel. When a child, in an urban environment, he was fascinated with documentary films about the Promised Land, where "Jews ran around in the open." Finally, when he was in college, he went. His letters home interested his sister, who became fascinated with the country and wound up living there. His parents are just back from a trip and will probably move there, too. "It looks like I'm the good American Zionist who sits here and gets everyone there," said the Young Judaea counselor. His Hebrew is good enough so that only his n's and l's give him away in Israel. He studies his school subjects in Hebrew and English, and can remember it in one language if not in another for tests. He can also "move right into his field" without having to learn the technical terms in Hebrew.

He doesn't teach children at Camp Centerland about edible wild plants, except for such unmistakable items as the wild grape which can't possibly be confused with another berry. He does teach them that theoretically it is possible to live off the land, and in Israel he took advantage of the law, that anyone has a right to walk onto anybody's field and eat whatever he wants. On long trips, instead of taking all the food he needed, he would go into the fields of a kibbutz and pick up grapefruits or oranges. Jewish history and law are among his special interests, and this helps in club work, he said.

41-INCH PET — Nature counselor at Camp Centerland holds monitor lizard he brought back from Israel . . . at its tamest, much more vicious than a Gila monster. A very nice gray with black and yellow patterns on it, the lizard was chasing a full-grown sheep when Mr. Friedman caught it.

The day-to-day experiences of any naturalist have an other-worldly quality, so that it seems slightly unreal when you hear that in Tel Aviv Marvin Friedman, entering a cage of fresh-water turtles, was charged by two mean wolves, whom he evaded by throwing them fish as he backed rapidly out. Or that though he was a boxer for a year in college, the worst beating he ever got was from the wings of a large and vicious Egyptian vulture.

It's news to everyone that Israel has leopards, cheetahs, large wolves and wild boar which pass freely from the Syrian hills to Lake Huleh and back to the hills, but Centerland children learn this, along with the crawl-rate of snakes (Mr. Friedman has a crawling race to demonstrate: 4 to 5 mph is a snake's maximum rate, so a human can crawl faster, to say nothing of running). The Center has a year-round nature program, and he teaches an extension at Temple Sinai. He is in charge of six clubs connected with the center. He and his wife attend Temple Emanu-El, though he is "used to the small, homey, odorous synagogue" of his Orthodox childhood.

Although he got rid of his large collection of reptiles and birds, the time will undoubtedly come again when Marvin Friedman will line up a chain of food, in adjoining trays and cages, which starts out as a piece of bread and winds up as a lizard eating a mouse.

GREAT WHITE HUNTER — At Camp Massad the summer of '59, when he was just back from Israel, two mice were keeping the nature counselor awake. He got this one with a slingshot.

City Council Okays Center Land Swap

The City Council of Providence voted this week to authorize the exchange of a major parcel of the Sessions Street Playground for the present property of the Jewish Community Center. The City Recreation Department will continue to run the playground this summer, while the Center completes plans for building.

The signing of Bill H1765 by Governor Chafee on April 20 was the first step in the series of transactions leading to the exchange. The bill enabled the City Council to exchange the parcels of land with the Center. Bernard Gladstone and Samuel Kagan introduced it in the State House of Representatives, and Julius Michaelson in the Senate. Councilman Jack Alprin, chairman of the Properties Committee of Providence, sponsored the resolution in the Council. Details of the exchange will be worked out with Mayor Joseph A. Dourley Jr.

BAR MITZVAH— Larry Alan Winkler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton H. Winkler of 60 East Bel Air Road, Cranston, became Bar Mitzvah on Saturday, April 30 at the Providence Hebrew Day School, where he is a student. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Eli G. Winkler of Pawtucket and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dubin of Providence.

Postmaster Kizirian Advocates Bond-Buying

Postmaster Harry Kizirian this week urged Rhode Islanders with funds on deposit in the abolished Postal Savings System to convert their holdings into United States Savings Bonds. These bonds "offer every advantage of convenience and security formerly available through Postal Savings Certificates plus many other advantages unique to Savings Bonds," he said.

The Postal Savings System, in operation since 1911, was discontinued on April 27 by Act of Congress. The Post Office Department will transfer all unclaimed assets of the System to the Treasury Department on July 1. The decision to abolish the Postal Savings System was made because of declining interest in it by the general public. The original purposes of the Postal Savings System were to get money out of hiding, attract the savings of immigrants accustomed to saving at post offices in their native countries, provide safe depositories for people who had lost confidence in private banks and provide more convenient depositories for working people who were unable to bank during regular banking hours.

Jewish Coverage In Times Called 'Shallow' By Jacobs

NEW YORK — A study of Jewish coverage in The New York Times over the past three years reveals a pattern of shallow reporting and distortion of facts, writes Yaakov Jacobs in "The Jewish Observer." He cites a report in the Times that Hassidic Jews in Williamsburg as a rule wear beards, but that those who do not, "shave with a ram's horn."

The article, liberally sprinkled with citations from the Times's Annual Index, lists three sources of Jewish news which appears in the newspaper whose proud motto is "All The News That's Fit to Print."

Much of the day-to-day copy comes from releases prepared by national Jewish organizations which generally appear as they were written, or only slightly revised, says Mr. Jacobs. A major source of Jewish "news" is the convention or conference where nothing really happens, he continues. And, he asserts, when the Times sends out a reporter to dig up the facts, they almost invariably "are so distorted as to be amusing in an absurd way." A recent story stated that since Hassidic children are all considered "princes," they are not permitted to play games. One has only to walk through the streets of New York's Hassidic quarters to realize the absurdity of that statement, according to Mr. Jacobs.

His article finds most disturbing The Times's handling of news from Israel. On September 11, 1963, a four-column headline read, "Zealots in Israel Raid a Church of Scotland School." The report told that "Ultra-Orthodox Jews stormed into the Church of Scotland School in Jaffe today, beating the children and causing considerable damage . . . The disturbance at the Church of Scotland school was the worst such episode since the Finnish mission school here was extensively damaged last January . . . Miss Jean Roslie, headmistress, said the zealots beat up the smaller pupils and slapped and jostled the teachers."

The facts were later proven to be false; there were no beatings, there was no destruction of property; mission officials themselves denied these charges in court, but a search of the Annual Index of The Times for 1963 reveals no retraction or apology, or any attempt to set the record straight.

Interestingly, in a book review which appeared in The Times on February 18, 1966 the reviewer notes that, "The press notoriously does not criticize itself."

In addition to the damage done by such faulty reporting in the pages of The New York Times, much of their Jewish news finds its way into other daily newspapers and Jewish weeklies throughout the U.S.A. and Canada, thus compounding the number of Americans who are misinformed on Jewish affairs.

"The Jewish Observer" is published each month as a public service by Agudath Israel of America.

Your Money's Worth

this is big-time waste and it's not the litter itself which is the real waste, for most of it has no value. The real waste is the cost of picking it up.

While war and the threat of inflation dominate the headlines, the drive to beautify our land goes forward. President Johnson has asked for legislation to clear up our polluted water and air. Mrs. Johnson has become a living symbol of a national beautification policy. Oil companies are joining in the campaign to beautify roadside gas stations. The attack on auto graveyards is being sharply stepped up.

Nevertheless, litter continues to blight our country, to menace health and safety, to lower property values, to alienate new business, to discourage tourists, to undermine the reputations of companies whose paper products, cans and bottles end up as litter. (KAB was created because leading manufacturers recognize that it was in their enlightened self-interest to deter littering of their products. The organization today has about 100 members, works with approximately 7,000 local groups.)

KAB is concentrating now on wider adoption and stiffer enforcement of local laws penalizing litterbugs. All states and major cities today have laws against littering, with fines ranging to $500 in Missouri and Ohio. Most states also provide for jail sentences of up to 30 days or more. In several states, judges sentence convicted litterbugs to clean up stretches of highways and beaches. But enforcement is spotty. Many existing laws should be strengthened.

The organization also is campaigning for far more adequate litter collection and disposal facilities. Virtually all states provide trash receptacles along highways and at other places but at least two — Minnesota and Ohio — do not and there is no question that there should be more receptacles and more education on finding them.

The key point, though, is, as KAB's executive vice president, Allen H. Seed, Jr. puts it, "litter doesn't throw itself away. Only people create litter and only people can prevent it."

This, of course, brings it down to you and me. If we'll stop littering, we'll not only give our beautification drive an enormous forward push. We'll also ease our own tax burden by hundreds of millions of dollars each year. We win all the way.

The family of the late state legislator Hyman Mintz, who died in jail soon after his sentence, will bring suit against the Correction Dept. The complaint will allege that his heart condition was a matter of public record . . . The N.Y. divorce statute will involve millions in patronage: Court-appointed lawyers will serve as conciliators and children's trustees.

The Zim line may sell the "Shalom," pride of its fleet — because of the dispute over installing a non-kosher kitchen . . . Irving Berlin will go to Toronto for the out-of-town test of his "Annie Get Your Gun," which will open in Lincoln Center . . . Harold Gibbons, vice president of Jim Hoffa's Teamsters Union, was one of the 10 U.S. labor officials who conferred with Prime Minister Wilson at 10 Downing St. last week.

There's been a recent epidemic of Mynah bird escapes in Rome. Anna Magnani's Mynah bird flew from her penthouse into the nearby headquarters of the Christian Democratic Party. The politicians registered complaints because the bird kept singing what sounded like the Communist anthem.

Herman Wouk's next book is so long that, he says, the Introduction alone runs to 70,000 words . . . District Attorney Hogan, dark horse for the Democratic nomination for governor, attended the N.Y. County Democratic dinner — and was seated with the five other party hopefuls . . . The Joe Mankiewicz named their new daughter, born at Harkness Pavillion, Alessandra Kate . . . Avon bought the paperback rights to Elizabeth Taylor's autobiography.

A congressman who visited Saigon was offered and accepted the use of Ambassador Lodge's huge, chauffeur-driven, standard-bearing car. He asked the chauffeur: "What will the ambassador do for transportation?" . . . "He's using the small Chevrolet," said the driver. "The ambassador prefers the smaller car, because this big one is a target for the Viet Cong."

Hoagy Carmichael joined the bandstand at El Morocco, played the drums and then the piano. He played one melody at the piano four times — and it became his newest composition . . . Mike Nichols will start filming his second movie, "The Graduate," in Hollywood in November . . . The David Susskinds' wedding reception the other night was held in their empty UN Plaza apartment. The former rivals, Kenneth Keating and Bobby Kennedy, attended and left together.

Actors Equity's newest member is Nina Hirschfeld, whose name has appeared in every caricature drawn by her father, Albert Hirschfeld, in the Sunday Times . . . Hirschfeld's show business and political sketches are on exhibit at the Hammer Galleries. He says actors are less temperamental to sketch than politicians: "Politicians are always worried about their image. But actors are just glad to get them into the Times."

The U. S. Ambassador to Ethiopia, Ed Korry, has permission from the State Dept. to hold a taped session with college students there, in a hard give-and-take question-and-answer meeting . . . take of a fish dinner in a non-kosher establishment. This is a glaring inconsistency that borders on hypocrisy. To use the words of the mid-western farmer: "We either are, or we ain't" Anyone who is familiar with the basic rules of Kashruth is quite aware that fish prepared in non-kosher utensils is equally frowned upon and disqualified as if it was an intrinsically trefah food substance. It, therefore, follows that even if it is doubtful whether the fish was prepared in non-kosher utensils or cooked and fried in lard, it is yet a fundamental premise in Halachah that sofek-d'oraisa'chumra — we make no allowances for doubt in a question which involves an enjoyment in the Torah. All this is basic. All this, even the minimum knowledge of Kashruth would expound. It is beyond my capacity to understand how Houses of Worship where we pray as Jews, hope as Jews, study as Jews — how they can, in good conscience, and in the name of their Houses of Worship, sponsor fish dinners in the light of what was said above. Is it arrogant on my part as a Rabbi to ask for consistency in place of confusion?

One of the central areas of Jewish religious ritual consists of its dietary laws. Originating in the Pentateuch, they are regarded as having been received by Moses directly from G-d. In Jewish thinking, the dietary rules are part of the concept of holiness. Adherence to them is part of Judaism's concept of a life of religious-spiritual purity and devotion. It is interesting to note that Malmonides lists the dietary laws under the classification of "kedusha" — holiness.

It is my fervent prayer to Him Who is Above us that as a community, which we all love so much and to which we are devoted with so much dedication, we will close ranks, join hands, and fuse our hearts to serve Him with kedusha, and we will not permit ourselves to be deluded in thinking that the G-d of Israel is one thing, and the People of Israel is something entirely different. Center Window Breaker Is Subdued, Arrested

BAYONNE, N.J. — Close to 150 teenagers were terror stricken and panicked at the Bayonne Jewish Community Center early Tuesday night two weeks ago, when a man went berserk and smashed some 26 windows in a surprise attack on the building. Five patrol cars responded to a riot call and arrested a 27-year-old man who had also assaulted a 21-year-old member of the Center.

The youngsters, mostly 7th and 8th grade students, were engaged in group meetings in the basement rooms of the Center when someone started breaking the windows which faced into the rooms from the street level. Scared and screaming the children were led by their leaders up to the third floor of the building to safety.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Richard S. Kohn, youth activities director of the Center, ran out of the building yelling for help and looking to see who was breaking the windows.

Michael Berkowitz, 21 years old and Allan Appel, 18-years old, both ran from the Center looking for the window breaker. They were joined by an unidentified motorist who stopped his car. After a brief scuffle they subdued the man, later identified as George Sabol of Bayonne. By this time, five radio patrol cars had arrived on the scene.

According to police, Sabol had used his hands and feet to break the panes of glass. His arm was bleeding and he was taken to the hospital for treatment. Later the Berkowitz youth went to police headquarters and signed a complaint against the man charging him with assault and battery.

According to an eyewitness at the scene, Sabol was heard yelling "Jews aren't the only ones who are persecuted."

Barry Shandler, executive director of the Center, appeared in Magistrate's court the following morning to sign another complaint against Sabol. He stated that windows in the youth lounge had also been broken.

Mrs. Kohn suffered some minor cuts from the flying glass when a window was smashed over her head.

Her meeting with Sukarno took place in 1961. Her husband, Joey Adams, well-known comedian, was president at that time of the American Guild of Variety Artists largest theatrical union in the world. At the request of President Kennedy, he took the first Cultural Exchange Unit of entertainers to Southeastern Asia. With 25 entertainers, he toured the area for five months — Cambodia, Viet Nam, Laos, Afghanistan, Indonesia, India, Iran . . .

At that time Cindy Adams was a correspondent for NANA (North American Newspaper Alliance) and had been interviewing famous personalities, among them the Shah and Empress of Iran; Nehru and Krishna Menon of India; the King and Queen of Thailand, and President Sukarno of Indonesia.

Two years later Sukarno invited her to do his biography — in the book he says that he had refused to have his biography written several times before, but added that if he were ever going to have it done, it would have to be written by a woman.

She spent several years in Indonesia gathering the material for her book which has now, she says, been translated into Japanese, Dutch, Arabic, Indonesian, Chinese and other exotic languages. She, herself can speak Indonesian, but not fluently. She is now a full-time correspondent for ABC, based in New York.

Although she doesn't manage to see her husband very often, with the two of them traveling as they do, they try to see each other every evening. She had driven up to Providence from New York with her mother, Mrs. Jessica Heller, a charming and attractive woman, who lives just two houses away from her on Fifth Avenue. (Only Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy's house separates them.) Immediately after the fashion show was over, they left to drive back to New York so that she could spend that evening with her husband. She mentioned that Joey Adams had written a book, also to be published by Bobbs-Merrill, which was coming out in June. "The Borscht Belt," a story of the Catskill Mountains circuit where many stars had their start, she says is "a very funny book."

Entertaining to listen to, lovely to look at, and enjoyable to talk to, Cindy Adams seems to be pursuing several careers at one time successfully, and enjoying every one of them.

ENGAGED— Mr. and Mrs. Edward Arrick of Somerset, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Susan Gail Arrick, to Michael H. Margolis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Margolis of Warrington Street.

Miss Arrick will be graduated in June from the University of Rhode Island School of Dental Hygiene. Mr. Margolis, a Providence College graduate, is a student at the University of Connecticut Law School in West Hartford.

A December wedding is planned.

BECOMES STEWARDESS — Ronna Ruth Shanfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Shanfield, 69 Community Drive, Cranston, has been awarded the silver wings of an American Airlines stewardess after training at American's Stewardess College, Fort Worth, Texas. She has been assigned to Los Angeles, Calif.

Ronna is a graduate of Cranston High East, and a member of B'nai B'rith.

Labor Troubles Plague Ashdod

TEL AVIV — The port city of Ashdod remained tense last week as 200 additional police arrived to reinforce the local police force after wild rioting by unemployed workers on May Day.

All 300 workers at the Leyland truck assembly plant went on strike Tuesday after 90 of them received dismissal notices from the management which said there was not enough work to retain the full labor force.

The Ashdod labor council announced that 1,700 workers in the city would be laid off by September.

LABOR RECORDS
NEW YORK — The Yivo Institute for Jewish Research announced it has been awarded a $75,000 grant by the Labor Council, representing the leading labor groups in the clothing industry, for a three-year project involving the recording of the experiences of the leaders of the Jewish labor movement in this country. The project, which has already been started by YIVO will make available to historians of the Jewish labor movement in the United States, recorded tapes and transcribed records of the personal experiences of the pioneers of the movement.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.— Stuart Whitman received a fan letter consoling him after his recent divorce. "At first I thought the writer had misspelled 'matrimoney' and 'allimoney,'" said Whitman, "but once you've been married and divorced I guess that's the correct spelling." . . . John Garfield, Jr., son of the late star, is making his film debut with David Janssen in Paramount's "Warning Shot." Young Garfield's first scene called for him to open a door violently and storm into an apartment. "How did I do?" he later asked director Buzz Kulik. "You overacted slightly," grinned Kulik. "You still have the doorknob in your hand."

ROSS MARTIN offers this definition for hungry husbands, "Home cooking is where a lot of husbands think their wives are" . . . Senior citizen Ed Wynn extends advice to Hollywood's young acting community, "You'll find it much easier to live it up today than to live it down later."

MERVIN LEROY continues to follow his original success pattern by making movies for entertainment, never to preach. Said LeRoy, "If I want to send a message, I'll use Western Union" . . . Cocktail conversation: "Every time I look at my wife I think of Elizabeth Taylor." "You mean she's that beautiful?" "No, I just like to think of Elizabeth Taylor."

WANT TO own a movie studio? You can have Allied Artists cheap; only $1,200,000. Too much? How about Marion Davies' 4-acre Beverly Drive estate for $300,000? . . . A funny thing happened to me at my neighborhood theater— "Cat Ballou" . . . Johnny Carson refused to disclose his salary for that new three-year contract but he told an NBC-TV executive, "Thanks a million."

RED BUTTONS doesn't like those skirts high above the knee. He explained, "Today girl's dress as if they have no faith whatsoever in the imagination of men" . . . A tourist returned home from Hollywood, bitterly disappointed because many stars had refused to give him their autographs. He told his local newspaper editor, "Hollywood would be a better place if they shot less movies and more actors."

IS DONALD O'Connor the next actor for politics and perhaps the White House? His producer for "ABC Stage '67" this fall is Richard Adler, producer of JFK's 1963 inaugural anniversary salute and LBJ's 1964 inaugural gala. . . Homer, of Homer & Jethro, shook his head with disappointment and said, "My son is 16 years old and I'm making more money than he is."

WHILE COURT calendars are jammed with contract disputes, Jimmy Durante, Eddie Jackson and drummer Jack Roth are celebrating their 46th year together on a simple handshake. . . Billy Wilder scored a bull's eye by hiring Frank Bow and Charles Arrow to play Indians. . . Producer Gordon Kay hired Arthur Wolf to play a customer in a clothing store sequence. Wolf bought 10 suits from the owner played by Peter C. Sheep. Result: A Wolf in Sheep's clothing.

TWO YOUNG actresses watched from the wings while Lady Bird Johnson, entering the theater to catch the Broadway play, received a standing ovation from the audience. "What an entrance!" exclaimed one of the girls. "Yes," said the other, "but what a part!" . . . Ever walk out of a theater in the midst of a performance? Well, don't. It affronts the actors on the stage as a rejection of the play or a performance. The wound it leaves is personal.

JOEY BISHOP said, "Tell a woman a secret and it goes in one ear and in another."

Hias Director Urges Need Of Cuban Jews

WASHINGTON — James P. Rice, executive director of the United Hias Service, urged changes in Federal immigration procedures to ease the problems of Cuban Jews stranded in transit to the United States while awaiting employment certification. Rice made the plea in testimony before the Senate sub-committee on Refugees and Escapees, of which Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is chairman.

Rice said the stranded Cuban-Jewish migrants could make contributions to the professions, arts, science and business in this country. He cited as an example the 61 Cuban Jewish refugees who found temporary haven in Curacao, but have encountered serious delays in waiting to be processed for entry to the United States.

The Hias executive said that, of the estimated 10,000 Jews in Cuba when Castro took power, less than 2,400 remain, and more may leave.

He said they fled not because of anti-Semitism, to which they were never subjected, but because they did not wish to live under a communist regime, and because they did not want their children to be educated in such a regime.

FIRST ISRAEL BONDS REDEEMED — The redemption of the first Israel Bond issue to be floated in the United States was completed at a celebration where the Israel Finance Minister, Mr. Pinhas Sapir delivered a check for $31,320,685 to redeem the first coupon bonds, all of which matured on the same day — Monday, May 2nd. The final payment, the largest sum ever paid out by the State of Israel to meet any financial obligation, covered the last outstanding Bonds of the $145,532,800 sold during the three-year period beginning May 1, 1951. Shown at the redemption celebration, which was attended by more than 350 Jewish leaders, are: (left to right) Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, Vice President of the Israel Bond Organization; Israel Ambassador Avraham Harman; Abraham Feinberg, President of the Israel Bond Organization; Finance Minister Sapir and Samuel Rothberg, National Campaign Chairman of Israel Bonds.

Starts Campaign Against Executive-Jobs Discrimination

NEW YORK — University studies in the past five years have shown evidence of religious discrimination in executive positions in much of American industry, said Burton A. Zorn, chairman of the Civil Rights Section of the American Jewish Committee. Jews fill less than 1 per cent of top management jobs, although they account for 8 per cent of all college graduates, he said.

Insurance companies, shown to be among the chief offenders by the committee's research, are the target of a quiet but seemingly firm campaign by the Federal Government. The government seeks to end discrimination against Jews, Roman Catholics, Negroes and other racial minorities in many insurance companies where top jobs are reserved for Anglo-Saxon Protestants.

It is believed to be the first time the Government has moved against religious discrimination under a long-standing Executive order calling for equal employment opportunity in companies holding Federal contracts. The order prohibits discrimination because of "race, creed, color or national origin."

The Social Security Administration is requiring of insurance companies selected to distribute Medicare funds the same compliance procedures regarding creed as it is for race, color and national origin. Involved are some of the oldest and largest insurance companies in the nation.

In the past, the Government has sought to eliminate racial discrimination in all concerns holding Government contracts. It requires each to submit data on the racial composition of its work force. When this discloses an apparent exclusion of racial minorities, steps are taken to see that the company adopts a more open employment policy.

Until recently, no effort had been made to have companies report on the religious affiliation of their employees. In the absence of complaints, the Government generally ignored this phase of compliance.

Last fall, the American Jewish Committee filed a complaint with Labor Secretary W. William Wirtz charging that some major defense contractors were discriminating, chiefly against Jews but also against Roman Catholics, in high management appointments. The committee, which espouses human rights causes not limited to Jewish affairs, called on Mr. Wirtz to impose sanctions, including cancellation of Federal contracts, against companies that persist in religious discrimination.

Both Mr. Wirtz and Edward C. Sylvester Jr., director of the Labor Department's Office of Contract Compliance, expressed concern and indicated more would be done on behalf of both religious minorities and some of the forgotten racial minorities such as Spanish-Americans.

Early this year, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare set up a special staff in the Social Security Administration to seek contract compliance from companies that will pay doctor bills under Medicare. The staff is headed by Chester J. Gray, a compliance officer on loan from the Air Force.

Medicare, the new health insurance program for the aged, will go into effect July 1. Forty-eight organizations in the health insurance field were chosen as intermediaries to distribute the funds, as required by law.

All the companies provided "affirmative personnel policies" on equal employment. In addition to the usual report on the racial make-up of the work forces, the compliance staff asked for a similar report on the religious affiliation of all employees, from salesmen and technicians on up. There is no complaint of religious discrimination in the lower echelons.

Members of the compliance staff will make periodic checks on the companies. An official said that if evidence of discrimination was found and the company refused to correct it, sanctions would be instituted.

There was no indication, however, whether the drive against religious discrimination would be extended to other Government contractors. The campaign was described by one official as "somewhat experimental."

Religious discrimination in employment practices is also prohibited by law. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 bans discrimination on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

MONEY FOR YOUR CHILDREN — HOW TO HAVE FUN OUT OF IT

Retired parents accept in principle the advice often given here that everybody past age 65 should spend their money on themselves and not leave it to heirs.

They aren't about to follow the advice. But they think it's a nice idea.

Mr. Arthur R. Starnes, who has lived in California since his retirement two years ago, has just given $5,000 to a six-year-old grandson who bears his name. But not in cash. He put the $5,000 in one of the bluest of the Blue Chip stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, and put the stock in the grandson's name with himself as guardian. He has specified in a letter to the grandson and the grandson's parents that dividends from the stock are to be cashed and placed in a savings account in the child's name for his college education. He has also specified that the grandson under no condition can cash in the stock until he is 21, which is 15 years. In that time, Grandpa figures, the stock may grow into a small fortune. And in the meantime, he is mailing his grandson once a week the stock market tables from the newspaper, with his stock circled in red, and is mailing all reports and news stories of the corporation. He's going to educate his namesake to be wealthy.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ramsey, a Pennsylvania couple who settled in a Gulf Coast apartment when they retired, started their giving before they moved. They wrote their four children, all married, and invited them to come home on a specified date for "A Family Treasure Auction Party." They isolated the few practical things from the household they wanted to move, then put everything else they had, from chinaware to a brass bed, on sale at the "Auction." They gave each child a handful of play money totalling $1,000, then over three days let them bid on things — to the extent of their play money — until they were broke. Everything went. Then Mrs. Ramsey, getting sentimental like a mother, made Mr. Ramsey agree to pay freight charges to ship the treasures to the children's homes.

A fellow named William Shoemaker, now 68 and retired, is setting out to have a ball with $2,000 of his money, and in the process revolutionize the candy business. He is trying to find a candy company, with stock to sell, that will pay dividends in candy bars instead of cash. He has eight grandchildren, all under 10-years-old. "What do kids know about a dividend check?" he asks. "It's just a piece of paper. But candy bars — that's a capitalistic system they can understand."

"And just think how they'll advertise the company as they spread those candy bars around the neighborhood every three months."

Mr. Shoemaker wants to buy $250 worth of stock for each grandchild. He thinks that will give them about 50 candy bars each per quarter. And frequent trips to the dentist.

Haifa Druggist
 Won't Be Taken
 On The Sabbath

HAIFA — A problem arising out of whether professional ethics oblige a pharmacist to give religious Jews drugs on Saturdays without being paid will have to be decided by the Ministry of Health at the request of a Haifa pharmacist who complained to the police that he had been threatened over the telephone several times for refusing on a Saturday to dispense drugs to an observant Jew who claimed he could not handle money on the Sabbath.

Dr. Kalman Retter, owner of a Haifa pharmacy, is reported to have stated that he had refused to supply the drugs as he thought the customer was trying to make a "shabbos goy" out of him.

The reply of the Ministry of Health will constitute an important precedent. Whatever it may be, it is likely to cause dissatisfaction either among observant pharmacists or among observant customers.

French Gestapo Official
 Sentenced To Death

PARIS — The State Security Court has sentenced to death Jean Barbier, a French national who was a Gestapo official during the occupation of France and who was charged with torture and murder of hundreds of Jews and anti-Nazis.

In 1961 a police probe of charges of brutality a 13-year-old girl filed against him disclosed his identity but a Marseilles military tribunal accorded him "provisional liberty." Apparently fearing that survivors might kill him, Barbier asked for and received imprisonment in Marseilles.
