$2 Million Drive For Center Planned

FIRST JEWISH BABIES OF 1967—Rhode Island's first Jewish baby of the New Year was Paul Mark Dinerman, left, born at 2:02 a.m. on Jan. 3. His twin sister, Enid Sharon, was born at 2:10 a.m. He weighed five pounds, 14 ounces, and she weighed five pounds, 12 ounces. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Dinerman of Danielson Pike, North Scituate, they went home from the Providence Lying-In Hospital on Wednesday.

Older children are Harvey, 10; Steven, 9; Lory, 6, and Norman, 3. The new twins are the Dinermans' fifth and sixth children. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Max Dinerman of Danielson, Conn., and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis of New York Avenue.

Southampton Students Invite Neo-Nazi Leader's Lecture

LONDON—Sir Barnett Janner, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, called on Southampton University to cancel a lecture scheduled to be delivered on Southampton's campus by Adolf von Thadden, deputy leader of the West German neo-Nazi National Democratic Party.

Mr. von Thadden announced in Germany that he has been invited to lecture at Southampton by sociology students. He said he would appear there on Jan. 27, and that the arrangements are being handled by a German student at Southampton.

Declaring that he "deplores" the invitation, Sir Barnett warned the university authorities: "If this report is true, it is highly deprecated. Von Thadden's visit might well be used by extremist elements in Britain for their own purposes."

Mr. von Thadden said in his announcement that the subject of his Southampton lecture would be: "The National Democratic Party—In the Press and in Reality."

Circuit Court Rules Removal Of Cross

EUGENE, Ore.—For the first time in American legal history, a court has ruled that public property may not be used for the permanent display of religious symbols. Circuit Court Judge William Fort ordered this week that a 51-foot neon-lighted concrete cross be removed from a public park in this city of 70,000.

The American Jewish Congress furnished legal counsel in the case. Howard M. Squadron, chairman of the Congress' Commission on Law and Social Action, said that the court decision was the first to order removal of a permanent religious symbol on public property. In previous court cases involving religious displays on public property, the sectarian objects had been of a temporary nature.

Leo Pfeffer of New York, special counsel of the AJC, was the chief attorney for the 10 residents of Eugene who brought suit. The plaintiffs were two Congregationalists, two Unitarians, an Episcopalian, a Jew, a Bahai and three Humanists.

The cross, erected in November, 1964, is on a bluff overlooking Eugene and is illuminated at night during the Easter and Christmas seasons.

Although erected without city permission, the cross was permitted to remain when the Eugene City Council granted, ex-post facto, necessary building and electrical permits.

The Christian plaintiffs asserted in their complaint that "construction and maintenance of the neon-lighted concrete structure is a profanation of the religious symbol of the Christian cross and as such... interferes with their religious opinions and rights of conscience."

Bernhardt Heads Campaign; Grant Leads Initial Gifts

Bertram L. Bernhardt has been appointed general campaign chairman of the $2,000,000 building campaign of the Jewish Community Center, it was announced this week by Sidney Meyer, Center president. Max L. Grant, first president of the Center, has been named chairman of the Initial Gifts Committee for the campaign.

Mr. Bernhardt is chairman of the JCC Century Club, which undertook the fact-finding study prepared by Dr. Harry A. Schatz, Jewish Welfare Board Director of Administrative Services, and submitted to the Center on Oct. 10, 1966. The study clearly established the need for a new Center building.

The study was approved at a board meeting of the Center on Dec. 14. Financing of the two-year study was shared by the General Jewish Committee of Providence and the United Fund. Mr. Grant was chairman of the Fact-Finding Committee, and Mr. Bernhardt and Merrill L. Hassenfeld were co-chairmen.

The recommended site, which has been acquired, is the 83,419 square feet of land which the City of Providence exchanged on June 29 for the 70,829 square foot tract of land on which the present Center stands. The new building will be at the corner of Sessions Street and Elmgrove Avenue. The Center will pay for demolition of its present building and for construction of a new playground with the same facilities as the present playground has.

The letter which accompanied the report said:

New Administrative Director Notes Possibilities Of Expanded Center

By LOIS ATWOOD

Yeshayahu and Pnina Tadmor of Israel came to the United States 12 years ago to further his studies, said the new administrative director of the Jewish Community Center. "Shai" Tadmor will be in charge of the adult program, Camp Centerland and some of the other youth activities, as assistant to Dr. Bernard Carp, executive director of the center. He will also be busy with office administration.

The Tadmors are Sabras, both being "products of Hadassah Hospital." They are in Rhode Island because they met Dr. and Mrs. Aaron Klein of Providence at Camp Ramah in the Poconos 12 years ago, and the Kleins brought them to Providence. "Shai" Tadmor has taught since 1955 at the Temple Emanu-El Religious School, where Dr. Klein is principal. Mr. Tadmor teaches Bible, language and history, and his wife teaches sixth and seventh grades.

The main idea of Jewish Community Centers, he said, is to give young and old a sense of identity to their Jewish heritage. Sometimes children who attend a sports meeting come to feel they belong to a group. "We want to bring up children to a level that will mean cultural identity, to aid in their personal growth. The Jewish Community Center shouldn't be a place that parents would dump their children, but should have a plan that would provide them with growth in their characters, and that applies to adults, also, to help them grow to greater heights, and not only socially."

The Center hopes to offer the hundreds of children who attend Centerland every summer more facilities. "We have very fine counselors," said Mr. Tadmor. "Many of them grew up with the children, who learned to like and respect them. They set a good example, besides providing the children with summer fun. They help them find their place in a little group. Everyone has a chance to express himself. The camp needs to grow in numbers, in staff and in facilities, but what we want to do is expand, not revamp. The camp is going to be an important part of my work here."

An adult program committee was also formed, to meet sometime this month and formulate a plan. "There are many good people to take the initiative and contribute to an all-round program that will cover anything from antiquing to painting and music appreciation. We'll be practical and provide a short course like that in Investments now being given, or Interior Decoration, or how to prepare your income tax.

"The Center fills in a gap for those not affiliated with synagogues. They come here and get a taste of their Jewish heritage, of all the things they're missing otherwise. Their youngsters are also exposed to this heritage."

The new Administrative Director added that the Center is really cramped right now, with space such a problem that gym and theatre classes are held outside the building. A good theatre could become an outlet for our own children and a focal place for the whole community, said Mr. Tadmor, who has some directing experience. He feels that acting helps people express themselves, be creative, build character.

Shai Tadmor grew up in Tel Aviv, where he attended Ha-Carmel and then Herzliya Gymnasium. He had training in Hagana when he entered the Israeli army in 1947, it was as a sergeant. He served until 1949, and "ended up as commander of a company." He held the rank of Seren, comparable to captain in the U. S. Army.

During his army service, he was mainly engaged in operations in the corridor to Jerusalem and in the North, in Galilee. "I didn't enjoy fighting, no one does, but this was something that had to be done and it was done. Our war was almost a primitive war, both in our weaponry and the enemy we faced. There was a joke about one of the first weapons manufactured in Israel at that time, a submachine gun made under the British mandate which had the letters USA imprinted on it. They stood for 'Unsera Selbe Arbeit' — 'Our Own Work.'

"Today Israel is very strong and so are the Arab nations. The reaction of the Arabs is always the reaction of war and annihilating Israel...nevertheless, justice will prevail.

The Arabs of Israel, he added, are good citizens and treated as such. He worked with many Arabs after the War of Independence, when for three years he managed a quarry in Beersheba. It was an American investment in Israel, and they were helping to build a new road to Sodom. He knew a little Arabic, but said many of the Arabs spoke better Hebrew than many of Israel's Jews.

The same customs are found among Arabs now, as when Abraham was at the cave of Ma'Pelah trying to find a burial place for Sarah. Shai Tadmor (Continued on page 5)

Ata Textiles Hopes To Sell Sportswear In United States

NEW YORK—Amos Ben-Gurion, son of Israel's first Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion, came here on a business trip this fall. The general manager of Ata Textile Company, Ltd., of Israel, he hopes to sell more apparel here from the lines his firm produces. Only a small fraction of their junior dresses and sportswear are now exported to the United States.

"I like the attitude of the American retailers I've met. It's direct, to the point and not time-wasting," he said. He met with executives of the Associated Merchandising Corporation, Gimbel Brothers, Inc., and other firms.

During his trip, Mr. Ben-Gurion also handled two other pieces of business for Ata. He made final arrangements with the Manhattan Shirt Company to become its licensee for Manhattan men's shirts and Lady Manhattan women's shirts in Israel beginning in March.

In addition, he is studying the posturing method for manufacturing durable-press goods. Ata is a large producer of cotton and polyester-and-cotton fabrics, and is investigating the adoption of posturing for a portion of its production.

At the age of 46, Mr. Ben-Gurion has already had a distinguished career in his homeland. Born in London and a graduate of an Israeli agricultural college, he describes his business background with these words: "I'm a policeman by profession."

Mr. Ben-Gurion spent 23 years in uniform before joining Ata. During World War II, he served as an officer in the British army, and after Israel declared its independence, became an officer in its army. He later was an official in the Israeli police force, and rose to the post of Deputy Chief of Police.

In 1964, Mr. Ben-Gurion took off his uniform for the last time and joined Ata as a department manager. He advanced to vice general manager and was promoted to general manager late in 1965.

Ata—with its plants in Kfar Ata, 12 miles from Haifa—is Israel's largest private enterprise and one of the largest industrial enterprises in that Middle Eastern nation. Its sales last year amounted to more than $15-million, of which almost 10 per cent represented exports, primarily to Europe.

In 1966, Mr. Ben-Gurion said Ata hopes to sell $17-million worth of merchandise, including $2-million overseas. By next year, he hopes to increase these figures to $18-million and $3-million, respectively.

Ata was founded in 1934 by the late Hans Moller, whose family had been in the textile business in Czechoslovakia for generations. Mr. Moller settled permanently in what was then Palestine in 1938 and soon thereafter Ata became a large supplier of uniforms to the British army.

In 1946 the first public shares in Ata were sold. Sixteen years later, Mr. Moller died and his wife Ziporah—still a member of Ata's board of directors and one of the company team accompanying Mr. Ben-Gurion here—sold the controlling interest.

Spain Awaits Vatican Endorsement Of Laws On Religious Freedom

MADRID — The legislation providing for freedom of religion in Spain for Jews and Protestants, endorsed by the Spanish College of Bishops and approved by a national referendum, will not be sent for passage to the Cortes, the Spanish Parliament, until it is endorsed by the Vatican.

The legislation, which has been in preparation for 10 years, has been scheduled to be placed before the Cortes on Jan. 20.

The new legislation will allow Jews and other non-Catholics to worship openly in clearly-marked houses of worship, to form religious associations, to celebrate civil marriages and to be buried in their cemeteries.

Members of the non-Catholic faiths also will be free from obligatory attendance at Catholic services or teaching in Spanish schools, armed forces and prisons.

Soviet Editor Explains Silence On 'Babi Yar'

LONDON—Aaron Vergellis, editor of the Soviet Yiddish monthly "Sovietish Heimland," published in Moscow, explained why he did not publish the famous poem "Babi Yar" by Soviet poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko.

The Yiddish editor said that he did not publish this epic poem, which calls for the eradication of anti-Semitism and has been translated in many languages, because Yevtushenko failed to blame the mass-massacre of Jews in the Kiev ravine of Babi Yar squarely on the Nazis.

Here on a visit, Mr. Vergellis held a press conference at which he also said that the Soviet authorities are doing their best to assure the survival of Yiddish among the Jews in the Soviet Union. However, he added, the failure of Jewish parents to require their children to be taught in a Yiddish school is to be blamed for the demise of Yiddish.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Both sides played well in today's hand in which Declarer was rewarded for being extremely careful. Actually she had made an avoidance play to insure a vital overtrick and it certainly paid off.

Mrs. Arnold Kornstein of Woonsocket and Mrs. Jerome Horowitz of Providence were North and South with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
1H	P	2C	P
2D	P	3NT	End

The bidding was perfect with North's Two Diamond bid on a three card suit a temporizing bid for she had no real good rebid otherwise. She was too strong for a Two Heart rebid, her Hearts were not good enough for Three Hearts and her Spades somewhat shaky for Two No Trump. Furthermore, partner had guaranteed another bid when she responded at the two level in a different suit. South had an opening bid of her own including a Spade stopper so jumped directly to game which North somewhat reluctantly passed.

Declarer pondered West's lead of the Spade 9 and then made the automatically correct play of the Queen. If that held then she still had the guarded King in her hand provided East never got in to lead through it. If it should lose to the Ace then other steps would have to be taken.

When the Queen did win, Declarer turned her attention to the Clubs for it was here that she would make most of her tricks. East, the danger hand, must never be allowed to get in to lead through the Spade King so Declarer decided to play the Clubs absolutely safe to make four tricks. She was willing to lose a trick to West, if necessary. So the Ace was played from Dummy and then the 10. Had East automatically covered with her Jack as so many defenders would then South had just the right spots to pick up the whole suit when West showed out, but East did not. She had heard South's Club bid so West could not now have more than one Club. Covering the 10 would be a losing play.

South, meanwhile, had already decided to lose a Club to West but when the 10 held she now had five Club tricks. Poor West had to make four discards but correctly did not part with either a Heart or a Diamond; one slip and Declarer would end up with all thirteen tricks.

Declarer carefully noted each Spade discard and, figuring the situation correctly, that West had bared her Spade Ace, she played a low Spade to set up her King for the twelfth trick. Both sides had done their best.

Moral: Sometimes one trick is very inexpensive insurance to pay to keep the danger hand out and often that trick comes back with interest.

SOVIET POET DIES

MOSCOW—Moshe Teiff, well-known Yiddish poet of the Soviet Union, died recently, at the age of 62. Born in Minsk, he joined the Yiddish faculty of White Russian Government University there in the early 1920s. Recently, he had contributed to a Yiddish monthly published here.

Rassco Managing Director Calls Crisis Unnecessary

TEL AVIV — The board of directors of Rassco Rural and Suburban Settlement Co., Ltd. condemned "misleading and incorrect press publications" which they said were likely to damage Rassco and undermine trust in Israeli and foreign investors in the national economy.

The directors did not specify which publications they had in mind. The statement was seen as a vote of confidence in managing director Mordechai Stern, according to The Jerusalem Post.

According to a Post article, Rassco is in financial straits and an Israel Government committee was asked by the Cabinet to find ways of rehabilitating the company. Thousands of foreign investors were said to have a stake in the firm.

The article said that Stern had been asked to take a long leave. Stern resigned from his post Dec. 5 in a letter to the chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive. The Agency has a controlling interest in Rassco.

The Post said it made a regrettable error in reporting that Rassco had an accumulated deficit of 20 million Israeli pounds (about $6,666,666) instead of a lack of liquidity in that amount.

A Rassco spokesman told the Post that the report that Rassco has lost money in a number of projects is also not true. Stern asserted in his letter of resignation that Rassco's crisis was "completely unnecessary and uncalled for. Rassco has been discriminated against now for the past two years. . . All my appeals to the responsible bodies for timely action went unheeded."

Stern told a press conference Dec. 7 that "when I took over Rassco's management it was worth a fraction of its 408 million Israeli pounds ($136,000,000) value today. I leave Rassco, an honest, pioneering, profitable and Zionist concern. . ."

He termed "an absolute lie" the charge that Rassco's difficulties stemmed from over-expansion. Stern attacked Finance and Housing Ministry sources for spreading what he said were false reports that Rassco is in shaky financial shape.

"We managed to convince Jews to invest 70 million Israeli pounds (about $23,000,000) in Rassco companies, and I persuaded Sir Isaac Wolfson to invest in industry through G.U.S. - Rassco, apart from his interests in banking and commerce in Israel," Stern was quoted as saying.

"Each of the companies ended the year with a profit — disproving the Government-originated stories of losses," he said. "But we were punished because of my refusal to allow Rassco to become subject to the Government housing budgets decreased from 10% to 2.5% in 1965. He said that the Government department has a virtual monopoly on public housing construction.

In a related development, Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir, told the Knesset that Rassco's difficulties stemmed from unwarranted expansion into fields other than construction.

Sapir said that the share of Government housing projects allocated to Rassco dropped in 1962-'65. He said the drop was due to Rassco's decision to concentrate on construction independent of the Ministry, and its failure to win bids in many cases, because of high bids.

He said that Rassco, either independently or through its partnership with the Wolfson group, had branched out into farming, fishing, and industry.

The Rassco board of directors on Nov. 28 declared an 8% dividend for the business year ending March 31. The company said it concluded the year's operations with a net accumulated profit of over six million Israeli pounds ($2,000,000), which was about the same as the year before when a 15% dividend was distributed.

Heavy Floods Drown Two Israeli Soldiers

TEL AVIV — Heavy floods sweeping the southern part of the country have brought death to two Israeli soldiers and damage to a number of settlements, many of whose residents had been evacuated when the floods reached a high point of danger.

The two soldiers were drowned near Ashkelon when their army truck was inundated by the nocturnal flood. Rescuers could not locate the bodies until dawn broke.

Damage to dwellings was also reported in Safed and the Bet Shikma settlement.

For And About Teenagers

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I have a real problem and just don't know what to do. There's this certain boy I really like. I just love him so much, but he must not love me. I've known him most of my life, but it wasn't until just last summer we became real good friends.

He's such a great guy. He's just the greatest thing on earth. He was so nice to me and acted like he really liked me. This fall he went away to school and I'm lost without him. His birthday was a few weeks after he left, so I sent him a birthday card and a letter. He didn't write back. Does this mean he doesn't love me? It's been two weeks since his birthday. What can I do? Don't tell me to forget him, because it's next to impossible. My friends tell me he'll write, but I am beginning to doubt it. Help me, please! Should I write to him again? Just a 'casual' letter — I mean, we are friends."

OUR REPLY: We won't tell you to forget him, since you make this request. But we will say you have built him into an image of the ideal man, which he probably is not. A gentleman would at least thank you for remembering his birthday. Give him time. Maybe, he will. If he doesn't, write another casual letter, giving him "news" about the hometown. If he doesn't reply, you may be sure he is too busy with other things and you'll probably not hear from him until he comes home on vacation. Our bet is that then he will want to be friends again and will be as nice as if he had never been away.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

MEN'S CLUB SERVICE

The Men's Club of Temple Beth David will sponsor the service tonight at 8 p.m. Guest speaker will be Ralph Rubnoff, past president of the Brotherhood of Congregation Kehillath Israel, Brookline, Mass., and presently vice-president of the New England Region of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs. His topic will be "Jewish Survival in America." Cantor Charles Ross, assisted by the temple choir will conduct the services, which will be followed by an Oneg Shabbat. All members and friends are invited to attend.

SINAI ADULT EDUCATION

The Rev. Edward Flannery, editor of the Providence Visitor, will speak informally on the subject, "The Jew and the Catholic Church," at the second session of the winter adult education series of Temple Sinai. Herbert Abedon will be the discussion leader at the meeting, to be held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the home of Rabbi and Mrs. Jerome S. Gurland on Saturday, Jan. 14. A coffee hour from 4 to 4:30 p.m. will precede the discussion, which is open to those who have registered.

Registrations may still be made by calling the Temple office or Dr. and Mrs. Fred Musen at 942-2586.

Schools Pilot
Holocaust Text

NEW YORK — The publication of the first experimental text on the teaching of the holocaust era has been announced by Dr. Judah Pilch, director of the National Curriculum Research Institute.

Noting that there has been little, if any, instruction on this "most significant experience in Jewish history," Dr. Pilch said that the volume will help fill a void in the curriculum of Jewish education in almost all schools under Jewish auspices, and should be of considerable interest to all other American school systems.

The book, prepared for use in the secondary schools and on the young adult level, will be available this year in 10 pilot Jewish schools in all parts of the country.

One part of the text deals with the general economic and political conditions in Europe before World War I and between the two World Wars prior to and during the rise of the Nazis.

In another, the Nazi attitude toward the Jewish people is examined by Dr. Alexander S. Kohanski and Prof. Meir Ben-Horin. Dr. Pilch details the factual story of the Holocaust from the time of the rise of the Nazi Party through the Eichmann trial in Israel and the Auschwitz trial in Germany.

Following this, the editor addresses himself to the question of why the world was a silent witness to these events. Prof. Irving Halperin offers examples from the writings of survivors, and historic reflections.

The final portion of the book, prepared by Abraham H. Foxman, presents examples of resistance.

The publication of the text was made possible by a grant from the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture which subsidized one-third of the cost of research and initial publication.

YOU'D BETTER PLAY IT COOL ON YOUR RETIREMENT CASH

The Social Security set, and those about to join it, are being fed too much confusion about what to do with their retirement savings.

Little old ladies are getting about 3 per cent return from banks and trust funds and think it's wonderful. Men with business backgrounds who put their savings into electronics stocks for "fabulous" growth are seeing their worth go up and down like a yo-yo, and are blaming everybody from Washington to the county sanitation department.

Along with these two groups comes the following:

"All that I have saved for my retirement is in savings & loans accounts. I am getting only 4 1/2 per cent return. I need more. Where can I get more?"

It would be well for all of you who are of retirement age to understand two things: One is that nobody really knows which investment will do what, and for how long... and if anybody tries to tell you he knows he's probably trying to sell you something. The second is that a return on your savings of 4 1/2 to 5 per cent is a sensible return on retirement savings... and everybody should be skeptical of most offers below or above that.

James K. Hudson, who retired a year ago with good savings and a little more sense than most about investments, has pretty well been through the mill on his savings. "I had about all I owned in sound common stocks when I retired," he says. "Then last February the market began dropping, and before December roughly one dollar in every three I had just vanished."

"This scared me. But I held to the stocks, and as they began recovering I slowly switched my money out of them. And into guaranteed savings certificates at the bank for 5 per cent. I came to the conclusion that stock prices could be affected by the state of the country's economy, by the state of the corporation issuing the stock, but also by the gyrations of Wall Street traders. It was no place for retirement money."

There are those who are told to put their savings into automobile stocks or gas stations because suburbs and shopping centers assure a growing industry... those who are told to sell their oil stocks because Detroit is trying to perfect electric cars. Maybe I don't know. I doubt that anybody knows such theories with enough assurance to protect retirement savings.

There are those who are told mutual funds are safe because professionals choose the stocks that compose them. But mutual funds started suffering along with stocks last February. There are those who think savings & loans are a fine bet because the troubles they've had in recent months are building up a huge back-log of home-building. But will insurance companies and banks become even greater competitors in the mortgage business when good times return?

What is said here is not an argument that any of these investments is good or bad, but an argument that all of them are unpredictable. Nobody in recent years has been more wrong more often than economists and stock brokers.

DISCUSSION OF 'SOURCE'

Rabbi Saul Leeman will conduct a study and discussion course based on James A. Michener's novel, "The Source," beginning on Wednesday, Jan. 18, at 10:30 a.m. at Temple Beth Torah-Cranston Jewish Center. The 12-session course will be open to all without charge, but participants are asked to read the weekly assignments. Copies of the book are available at the temple office. The sessions will end at 12 noon, just before the Sisterhood's Luncheon on Jan. 18, The Tell; Jan. 25, The Bee Eater and Of Death and Life; Feb. 1, An Old Man and His God; Feb. 8, Psalm of the Hoopoe Bird; Feb. 15, The Voice of Gomer and In the Gymnasium; Mar. 1, King of the Jews and Yigol and his three Generals; Mar. 8, The Law; Mar. 15, A Day in the Life of a Desert Rider and Volkmar; Mar. 22, The Fires of MacCoour; Mar. 29, The Sainly Men of Safed; Apr. 5, Twilight of an Empire and Rabbi Itzik and the Sabra, and Apr. 12, The Tell.

The assigned chapters are: Jan. 18, The Tell; Jan. 25, The Bee Eater and Of Death and Life; Feb. 1, An Old Man and His God; Feb. 8, Psalm of the Hoopoe Bird; Feb. 15, The Voice of Gomer and In the Gymnasium; Mar. 1, King of the Jews and Yigol and his three Generals; Mar. 8, The Law; Mar. 15, A Day in the Life of a Desert Rider and Volkmar; Mar. 22, The Fires of MacCoour; Mar. 29, The Sainly Men of Safed; Apr. 5, Twilight of an Empire and Rabbi Itzik and the Sabra, and Apr. 12, The Tell.

Rabbi Leeman has described the book as a skillful weaving of 15 historical novels which, carefully studied, yield a panoramic course in Jewish history and religion, an analysis of modern Jewish problems, and a study of Zionism and Biblical archeology.

ADULT PLAY DISCUSSIONS

The Adult Play Discussion Group at the Elmwood Public Library will consider "You Can't Take It With You" by Kaufman and Hart and "Mary, Mary" by Jean Kerr at its next meeting, from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., on Thursday, Jan. 19 at the library. John Bray, director and public school teacher, is discussion leader.

SISTERHOOD BRIDGE

The Sisterhood of Congregation Shaare Zedek will hold its regular meeting, a complimentary bridge, on Monday, Jan. 16, at 8 p.m. in the vestry. Members are invited to bring friends and cards. There will be prizes and refreshments.

JWV DONATES FLAG

Dept. Commander Harvey Green has announced the donation by the Jewish War Veterans of a flag to the Jewish Home for the Aged. The flag was flown over the capitol in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Green will lead a delegation from Rhode Island to the First Region Conference at the Treasure Island Motel in Webster, Mass., today, tomorrow and Sunday, Jan. 13-15. Others attending will be Mr. and Mrs. David Penn, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fink, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Levin, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Mittleman, Mr. and Mrs. Munroe Abowitz, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Robin.

Past Dept. Commander Irving Levin was appointed general chairman of the 3rd annual brotherhood exercises.

The Sackin-Shocket Post #533 will hold a dance on Saturday, Jan. 28, at Temple Beth Am, Warwick.

JUDY ANN LEVEN DANCE

The Judy Ann Leven Chapter of B.B.G. will sponsor a dance for the benefit of Muscular Dystrophy at Temple Emanu-El on Saturday, Jan. 14, from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Live bands, W.L.C.E. disc jockeys and free records will be available. Proper dress is required (this means jackets and ties for boys) at the dance, which is open to BBO members.

ANNUAL SKI TRIP

Sr-HI members of the Jewish Community Center will make their annual three-day ski trip from Feb. 21 to 23 to Mt. Snow, Vt. The trip is open to 10th, 11th and 12th graders, who must register by Feb. 6 at the Center office.

MIZRACHI WOMEN

The Board meeting of the Providence chapter of Mizrahi Women will be held at the home of Mrs. Hyman B. Stone, 100 Eaton Street, on Wednesday at 1 p.m.

more than 200 different persons in Providence who participated actively in reviewing the present Center program and administration. They have shared likewise in projecting a more adequate program to meet the needs of the Providence Jewish community, and in indicating the facilities, personnel and budget required to provide such a program to a substantially larger number of people than are now served by the Center, in keeping with the standards of Center services of comparable communities.

"This report is intended to serve as a basis for the decisions to be made by the Center in regard to the contemplated construction of a modern Jewish Community Center."

Among the findings and recommendations of the study, as it applied to programming at the Center, was a wider scope of specific activities appropriate for each age group, from pre-school through Golden Age. Emphasis was placed on helping persons develop a keener appreciation of Jewish values and positive identification with Jewish life, and on fostering a sense of unity.

Recommended programs would help "to develop the personality of the participants in the sense of helping them to learn to live, play and work cooperatively through programs of small clubs, special interest groups, communal activities, individual and group guidance, youth and adult councils, forums and concerts, holiday celebrations and especially in participating with others in the development of new programs."

Among the groups which the study mentioned as participating in the Center's programs, figures given indicated the need for physical expansion. Of the 450 Jewish children from three to five years of age on the East Side, 44 are presently enrolled in two nursery school groups, and on the South Side there are 32 children in a nursery school extension program. Such extensions should be continued, said the study, for the children who live at a distance from the main building, and the capacity of the Center's groups should be increased so that 100 children can be served.

There are 30 special interest groups and clubs for the 2,200 children between five and 12 years of age, 700 of whom belong to the Center. The study recommended 96 such groups, which would be intended to serve more than 1,000 children. The 12-to-14-year-old group numbering 962 youth, should be increased to serve 600 rather than the 300 presently enrolled at the Center. Their 12 special interest clubs should be increased to 24. The 700 senior high schoolers (out of 1,719 in the area) will, the report anticipates, increase to more than 1,000 in a new Center with modern facilities and an expanded program which includes swimming.

Fifty young Jewish adults, out of approximately 2,000, are active in the young adult program, though other members of this age group participate in the regular adult program. More adequate service should be offered them, the study found, and their present activities should be expanded. Almost 2,000 adults are members of the Center, out of approximately 10,000 Jewish adults. The study suggested that there is a need for intensive co-sponsorship programs and consultation services with other adult Jewish and general organizations. The Center now has four clubs for older adults, of whom 400 (out of 2,000) are Center members. The study recommended increasing the clubs, classes and special events to 24, and increasing the informal lounge periods from four to 19.

The health and physical education program includes 25 groups and activities, and should be enlarged to 132, according to the study.

Administrative Director Tadmor Notes Greater Service Of Expanded Center

mentioned a gift brought him by an Arab, who said, "It's only so much." When it comes to the idea of giving, they come with the idea of selling, he added.

The Tadmors came to New York, where they stayed a year or so while he studied economics at New York University. He is a business management graduate of Bryant College. He also studied at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, where he took economics, political science and Jewish law. There is a very high quality of instruction and curriculum there, he noted, though the campus was really in exile when he was a student. The old campus was still in no man's land, on Mt. Scopus, and they occupied many buildings downtown, with classes in a church, a hotel, etc. The new Hebrew University campus is very close to the new Knesset building, and adjoins the Israel Museum, which was private but has now been "adopted" by the government and is publicly owned.

"Art in Israel: you see it everywhere, not just in museums. And music — concerts are given by world-famous people. The theater is active. We attended a concert in Caesarea in a Roman open-air amphitheatre. We listened to Yehudi Menuhin and even the little whisper of the waves didn't disturb us at all. A bulldozer pushing through the sands discovered stones beneath and there was the amphitheatre. They did a marvelous job of giving it subdued light. You have a feeling you've been transformed to another age, another time in Israel."

The pull of history is always present in Israel, Shal Tadmor said. He recalled a trip to Jerusalem as a boy, and sitting on a rock underneath a big olive tree. They were taught the Bible through visiting places with a teacher, who reminded them that they didn't know who else might have rested on that rock, that it might even have been King David.

"I recall finding coins from the time of Bar Kochba, and knowing, 'This is something that happened.' The glorious days are over. Now, if you find something, the government takes charge."

He and Mrs. Tadmor are very happy with their young sons' schooling. Gil, aged six and a half, is in first grade at Providence Hebrew Day School, and Dan, three and a half, is still in "preschool" at the Jewish Community Center (Gil also attended this). The quality of Jewish education here and in Israel can't be compared because over there, there is no obstacle of language, he said. "Many people are wrong in saying their children go to Hebrew school, as it's really religious school and Hebrew is the tool to further religious education."

In addition to his other classes at Temple Emanu-El's religious school, Shal Tadmor has a Saturday class on "Values in Judaism" for boys preparing for Bar Mitzvah. Every boy at least once before he becomes Bar Mitzvah goes into the library, does research on an assigned topic and presents it to the group. Then they discuss, elaborate and dig deeper, the discussion being based on the boy's presentation.

Despite recent American comments on the possibilities of postponing the Bar Mitzvah ceremony or changing its emphases, Mr. Tadmor feels that it will continue at the usual age and with the meaning it has always held, that this is the beginning of responsibility. "In terms of Jewish education, this is the point from which to continue studying." He noted that many of the boys at Temple Emanu-El do go on with their studies.

SCHUSTER AND FINKELSTEIN FAMILY, FRIENDS—Golden keys providing permanent access to the new Schuster and Finkelstein Buildings of Yeshiva Kehilath Yakov, 636-638 Bedford Avenue, New York City, were presented to Mr. Schuster of Providence and Mr. Finkelstein of Elizabeth, N.J., by Rabbi Rosengarten recently at the dedication of the buildings their funds erected. The families established a trust fund of more than $100,000, interest of which will benefit the yeshiva. Grand Rabbi Grunwald of Papa expressed his gratitude. Leonard Finkelstein, son of Abraham Finkelstein, voiced the families' appreciation. Rabbi M. Weitman, principal of Torah Academy, Far Rockaway, N.Y., spoke. Local assemblymen and representatives and members of the families attended the dedication and dinner. A cantor and choir sang at the dedication, which ended with the reading of telegrams from friends.

Jerusalem's Teddy Kollek Welcomes New Group To Aid Israel Museum

NEW YORK—A new group has been formed to obtain funds and works of art for the Israel Museum, which opened in Jerusalem in May, 1965. The American Patrons of the Israel Museum will be part of the America-Israel Cultural Foundation.

Mayor Theodore Kollek of Jerusalem announced the group's formation at a luncheon at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel last week. He is chairman of the museum's board of governors.

Edward M. M. Warburg, chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee, has been named chairman of the new group.

"I'd like to see a solid base of annual membership, augmented by gifts for funds and for pictures," Mr. Warburg said. "One of the main things is to get people to go and see the museum. Once they do, they will want to give to the collections."

"We hope that the museum will not be known by the extent of its collection, but by the quality."

Mr. Kollek said that 900,000 persons had already visited the museum which is on a stony Judean hill in Jerusalem's Israel sector.

"We've had a tremendous amount of visitors who had not seen a museum or knew what a museum was," Mr. Kollek said. "Many have literally come to the museum bare-footed."

He said that museum officers laid the cornerstone last Friday of an 18th-century French room which will be reconstructed in the paintings' galleries. The room is a gift of Baron Edmund de Rothschild of Paris.

Mr. Kollek said that an American collector who preferred to remain anonymous had recently donated $100,000 to the museum to buy works by contemporary Israeli artists.

Karl Katz, the museum's chief curator, discussed its long-range plans.

"We are planning to establish Photographic Archives of Jewish Art," he said. "Just as there is an Index of Christian Art at Princeton University and great Renaissance archives at the Courtauld and Warburg Institutes in London, so there will be housed in Jerusalem comprehensive archives of Jewish art."

Mr. Kollek said that the museum had recently acquired important objects for its collection of Jewish ritual and ceremonial art. Among the objects is a psalm book from Spain, dating to the years before the Jewish expulsion in 1492. The book is a gift of Jakob Michael, president of New England Industries, a holding corporation at 120 Wall Street.

Mayor Kollek is here for a nationwide tour of the United States on behalf of the annual campaign of the United Jewish Appeal. Mayor Kollek, who met with Mayor Lindsay to discuss mutual problems, is having his troubles with urban renewal.

"There is the problem, in the midst of urban renewal, of preserving those buildings of religious and architectural beauty that means so much to all faiths," Mr. Kollek said.

In an area facing Mount Zion are the tomb of King David and a mosque containing the room of the Last Supper. "But the surroundings have deteriorated into a slum," Mr. Kollek said. "We have to relocate the residents in modern housing elsewhere while gradually renewing the old existing housing and its indigenous characteristics. It would be a criminal act to destroy, for instance, a building founded by the Maltese Knights of Crusader times."

Jerusalem, Mayor Kollek asserted, "is the home of the Government, scientific institutions, medical services and scores of religious institutions, all of which crown the nation with brilliance—and none of which pay taxes—something like New York."

'LET MY PEOPLE GO'

Dodeem BBG will present the film, "Let My People Go," in the auditorium of the Jewish Community Center on Monday, Jan. 16, at 8:30 p.m. Sr-HI club members and their guests are invited to attend.

Uncomfortable Frontiers

The real danger to Middle Eastern peace lies now in an escalation of frontier incidents. The sharp new outbreak of shooting last week on the Syrian-Israeli border emphasized that frontier as the main axis of hostilities for months past. Syria is too weak to be a real threat to Israel, but is a prime mischief-maker always ready to fire off guns, send in terrorists to cut pipelines or plant mines, and broadcast fiery warnings.

Egypt has for years been considered the chief potential enemy of Israel, but lately President Nasser has been too busy with the war in Yemen and the planned withdrawal of British armed forces from South Arabia next year, to exercise much of a threat toward Israel. Jordan, where Isrel retaliated for terrorism, has remained one of the least unfriendly of border nations.

Whoever is at fault in the incidents—however the shooting starts—such hostilities do not constitute an immediate peril to the survival of the Arab states or the Jewish state. There is still a little time before unfriendly nations begin a destructive new series of bombing raids or punitive retaliatory expeditions.

There is perhaps just enough time for international action to step in to sustain peace, for the United Nations to fulfill the duty of supporting Israel's right to live in peace and freedom—as the world body supports the rights of other countries to live in peace and freedom. Unless the United Nations soon and effectively takes steps toward permanent peace along the Israeli frontiers, the world may be uncomfortably reminded that small fires can lead to great conflagrations.

BAFFLEGAP DICTIONARY
This newspaper's lead pages soon will be loaded with references to Gross National Product, National Income, Personal Income, Disposable Personal Income, Government Transfer Payments, Net Exports, Personal Tax and Nontax payments — and lots more similar bafflegab. These are the words of the Presidential messages. These are the terms in which President Johnson must talk when he submits to us his best estimates of the Economic State of the Union in 1967.

But unless you are unusually well informed in this field, you cannot properly define all these tricky words. Here, therefore, is another of my little "dictionaries" to help you translate the Words of the Month.

Gross National Product. This is the market value of all the goods and services our economy produces.

It consists of all the goods and services we buy, as consumers; all that government (Federal, State and local) buys; the totals business and non-profit institutions invest in plants and equipment; what business spends for inventories; what we spend for private dwellings; our net exports.

In short, it is the broadest measure of the size of our economy and changes in GNP from year to year show the extent of our growth from year to year.

National Income. This is the total earned by U. S. labor and property in the production of our economy's goods and services, including the taxes on these earnings.

It consists of pay to employees; profits of corporations and unincorporated enterprises; net interest; and rental income flowing to persons. In sum, it measures the cost of producing the goods and services in our land.

Personal income. This is the income received by persons from all sources. Counted as "persons" are not only individuals but also owners of unincorporated enterprises, non-profit institutions, private trust funds and private health and welfare funds. (See what I mean by "tricky?") Personal income is measured on a before-tax basis.

Disposable personal income. This is the income remaining to persons (see above) after deductions of their personal tax and nontax payments to general government.

Thus it is the income persons have left to spend or save. I usually call it after-tax personal income.

Government transfer payments. This is income received by persons, usually in the form of money, for which the persons perform no current service in return. I often call it Pay for Nonwork.

Government transfer payments cover Social Security, including medicare; State unemployment insurance; railroad retirement and unemployment insurance; (Continued on page 8)

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Ducks In The Pond

By Beryl Segal

Reynolds Park in North Miami has man-made lakes. The lakes were formed by man-made jobs. That goes back to the days of the CCC, when all over the United States jobs were created for the jobless. Some of these jobs were useful and necessary, others were not. But all jobs were created so that men would be receiving wages instead of charity.

Today one can see Post Office Buildings in small towns that are not yet filled to capacity. One can ride over highways that were made obsolete by the super-highways. Children go to huge schools that would never have been built were it not for the genius of President Roosevelt. And almost every city enlarged its park and recreation facilities and every state conserved its natural resources by the work of the CCC boys.

Now, about thirty years later, generations grew up that do not even know of President Roosevelt and of his efforts to alleviate the horrible unemployment. Now the children take the schools, and the parks, and the playgrounds, and the ball fields created at that time for granted, as their birth-right.

The lake and the park carved out of a wild place at North Miami is no exception. Children go boating, and fishing and climbing and getting lost in the narrow paths that criss-cross the park.

And the ducks swim in the lakes of Reynolds Park as if these waters were there when the world was created. They seem so natural to the park and to its environment that they seem to say:

"This is our domain. We were born here and our fathers were born here. This park is ours."

The ducks swim around the ponds separated by picturesque little bridges and united by rivulets. In groups of five, they swim. The leader at the head of them and the other four follow in a V formation. Silently they follow behind. When the older duck at the head submerges, the others do the same. Should one of them be distracted and lose its place in the V formation, the elder duck emits a sound and that is enough to bring the strayer back into the formation. So they sail, the white ducks, silently, peacefully on the waters of the pond not turning to the right or the left hand.

On the bridges separating pond from pond stand youngsters that pretend that they are fishing, but mostly looking at the white ducks circling around the waters. It is a fascinating sight.

On the other side of the little bridge is another family of ducks. These are greyish-black and they follow their elder very gracefully. They duck their heads in the waters in unison and make a somersault into the waters and they are up again before the eye can catch them. Their grayish-black bodies come up sparkling with beads of water, and they shake the beads of water off their backs all at the same time.

One can stand on the bridge and watch the ducks sailing silently for hours after hours.

On the morning when I took my two grandchildren to the park we saw a greyish-black duck in the pond of the white ducks. She must have wandered across the narrow rivulet connecting the two ponds, and she looked around bewildered at herself and at the white ducks swimming in formation and she did not find for herself a place in the pond. The greyish-black duck made an attempt to join the formation, but was completely ignored. The white ducks quickly changed their course and their sailing speed and were out of reach of the guest.

HARRY GOLDEN

A Full Circle

"Zionism was born in the fertile brain of the Viennese journalist Theodore Herzl who devoted his short life to the realization of a Jewish homeland. In the beginning, Herzl not only had to persuade the kings and ministers of Europe of the advisability of a sovereign state for the Jews, but Jews themselves.

He organized conference after conference which considered, first, the major project of establishing a Jewish homeland in Palestine and, second, how a people, long accustomed to living in cities, would get along as pioneers in the desert.

Even after the United Nations reestablished a Jewish state the chief problem was how to convert the merchants, peddlers, journalists, doctors and professors into farmers.

Jews had not been farmers for many centuries. In the year 432 A. D. they were forced into ghettos, and adapted themselves to the urban existence all of us know today.

When the Jews began to immigrate to America in large numbers in the 1880's there were many plans advanced and some even put into operation to establish some farming communities. There were such Jewish farming settlements in Montana, Idaho, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and New Jersey; and several of them were indeed successful, even though they attracted very small numbers of people.

But Israel did become an agricultural society, to such an extent that Moshe Dayan, the Minister of Agriculture, announced that Israel has now too many farmers. Israel, it seems, is spending too much of its budget on tractors, fertilizers and storage bins. The problem of surplus is about to rear its head and confuse the Israelis as indeed it has been confusing Americans for a generation now.

Almost simultaneously, then Prime Minister Ben-Gurion issued a proclamation in which he urged these "too many" Israeli farmers to send more of their children to the schools and colleges of the country.

So Israel has come a full circle from the days when the Jewish National Fund was buying land in Palestine and combing the universities of Europe for Jews who would leave their books and get behind a plow. The conversion of the Jews of Europe into farmers was nothing less than a miracle.

Now to convert them back again to city people.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

Mary Garden, who died in an institution near Aberdeen, was the most famous singer of her day. She toured America in a private railroad car; the Chicago police halted her "Salome"; and Debussy wrote "Pelleas and Melisande" for her.

Her fee, until her retirement, was $3,500 a night. "Work and study are what you must do, when you're endowed with a heavenly gift," she said. She disapproved of Broadway stars being seen in nightclubs. "When you're a star you should avoid such public places. If they wanted to see me, they'd have to pay the $5 a ticket."

Once, at their home, her father asked her to sing "Thais" for him. Miss Garden said he'd have to come to the opera the next night to hear it. "He was mad, but he came — and paid."

She never weighed more than 112 pounds. "I'd die before I'd go to 113," she told me, during lunch at the Colony one day. Lunch was her one meal for the day — plus a glass of milk with 12 drops of iodine in it, before going to bed. "The women of America made me. Not the critics. I was something new, and they dragged their poor tired husbands to see me.

"They came to hear Caruso, to hear Melba, but to see me. The others sing all their roles in the same voices. When I finished one character, it went out of me entirely."

She knew how to make news. She made the front pages by announcing she was going to marry the evangelist, Billy Sunday. One day, when she arrived from Europe, the press asked her the customary question about marriage plans. Miss Garden said she'd found the man: "Come to my dressing-room in Chicago next week, and I'll show you his photo."

She scoured the antique shops of Chicago until she found a suitable photo — of a dead Hindu prince. She gave it to the press when they called for the promised picture.

She said her autobiography was incomplete: "I can't write the interesting things which can't be published. I've been offered a $5 a word, but the tales they want are really worth $10 a word." She told S. Hurok: "Some artists, like me, couldn't exist without a scandal. Other artists, like Schumann-Heink, couldn't exist with a scandal."

Mary Garden would have been 93 next month. Her last performance was in "The Juggler of Notre Dame." She sat on the

Hello Again!

Sports News By Warren Walden

OPTIMISM HERE—It looks as though the Red Sox management is anticipating a good year. It must be so because General Manager Dick O'Connell has agreed to take part in a question and answer period during the Palestine Temple Charity Sports Night scheduled for February 10th at Rhodes-On-The-Pawtuxet. Courageous fellow, the G.M. And don't let it be said that Dick has more courage than brains because he has an abundance of each.

BIG NIGHT—The list of luminaries for the Sports Night is attractive and interesting with the emphasis on the latter. Bill Crowley, public relations director for the Red Sox, will be M.C. and Bill is one of the finest and most capable in the business anywhere. Coming along with O'Connell and Crowley will be "Jumping Joe" Dugan, one of the great third-basemen of all time. Dugan has many claims for fame, one of them being that he was Babe Ruth's room-mate and if he reads this he'll remind me that the "Babe," or "Big Fellow" as he calls him, was his room-mate.

ECUMENICAL—The word and its definition are becoming broader these days after the Conference and I use it here when I see that O'Connell, Crowley and Dugan are being featured in a program sponsored by the Shriners of Palestine Temple. Ah yes—America The Beautiful. And add that the proceeds will benefit the Joseph P. McGee Scholarship Fund at Providence College as well as the Hodges-Lawton Unit For Handicapped Children and I'm sure you'll agree that we Americans are one great people. Who'd a thunk it a few years ago? A great night for the Irish on a Masonic sponsored program! Tickets are available at Providence College Athletic Department, too. Also at the Shrine Mosque, 1 Rhodes Place, Cranston and at the Service Bureau in the downtown Outlet store. Good show—don't miss it.

—THE SHOW THAT ISN'T BUT ALMOST WAS—Joe Celletti, who almost became a promoter of a boxing show that was planned to start a revival of the game in Rhode Island, decided to call the whole thing off, temporarily at least. Joe had planned the show for January 18th at Elks Auditorium to be followed by regular weekly presentations on Wednesdays. When the date for the first show was not available, Promoter Celletti decided that he was going to "get away on the right" foot; didn't want to start with a postponement; and decided to wait awhile. All to his credit. "I want to make sure of my program and make sure everything is going to take place as I plan," said Joe. No fault can be found with such effort and along with that, "Good luck to Joe in the future."

NO CRIME HERE—You read here several weeks ago that "if the R.I. Reds ever get good, they'll be too good" and that they were trying harder than any Providence Hockey Club in memory. Also that Coach Creighton and his skaters were to be praised for their effort, "low aim, not failure being crime." Well anthoo. I encountered Sid Feldstein, the "Pawtucket Dept. Store Impresario" (other day. Sid was aglow with praise and enthusiasm concerning the prospects for the Reds this season and next. He's a sports fan of the first degree and, come to think of it, I once saw Sid seated at a dining table with Bill Veeck, called "Vek," in Cleveland which hasn't any connection with his enthusiasm for the hockey team. Feldstein referred to the last three victories scored by the Reds when he said, "They put it all over the opposition." Joe Waldman, the "World's Foremost Exponent In The Art Of Judging Goals" (he's the goal judge, you know) said, "The Reds are 'shaping up.'" They're checking back and functioning smoother. Other fans have started stopping me with, "How about those R.I. Reds!" One in particular remarked, "Those fellows like Coach Creighton and they're working for him. Pierl knew what he was doing all the time."

BRIDEGROOMS VOTE

NAZARETH—The Israeli government approved importing Arab brides from Jordan for a number of anxious young bachelors here, the daily "Ha'aretz" reports. This transaction was part of Ma'arach's efforts to raise its prestige among the Arab population in Nazareth before the municipal elections.

HEE-YA, THEY-YA and EVERYWHEY-A—It just shows to go you how much facilities mean. With swimming pools in Cranston and because of good coaching, aquatic sports have prospered. . . . And facilities may restore Burrillville High to the hockey heights. The new ice palace was opened there last Sat. Burrillville once was a hockey power when the schoolboys used outdoor ice. Then other teams had the use of indoor facilities. Mrs. June Rockwell Levy remarked, "We'll have to do something about this." Now Burrillville has its own indoor skating surface. They won, 1 to 0, in the opening game in the new Arena last Sat., beating Mt. St. Charles which is an accomplishment and must have pleased Supt. of Ed. Tom Eccleston who brought hockey to Burrillville. Babe Mousseau, the coach, was on the original Burrillville team which was not in the Interscholastic League. . . . UNUSUAL—Craig Callen, a Pilgrim High product, is outstanding on the Friar's freshman basketball team. A dedicated player who is developing strength under the baskets and who is exceedingly coachable. He should be a Rhode Islander capable of "making" the Varsity. . . . And the clock ticks on and on which reminds me that I must be off to the hills. So, looking over my shoulder I'll remind you that "if it isn't good, don't say it!"—CARRY ON.

German Report Finds 23,000 Nazi Criminals Hiding Out

NEW YORK — Somewhere in the world about 23,000 Nazi criminals are hiding out from justice. This is the finding of the World Jewish Congress in the light of statistics published by the West German Central Agency for the Prosecution of Nazi Criminals at Ludwigsburg.

Since World War II, the German report states, proceedings have been started against 61,761 persons. The WJC claims that about 85,000 Nazi criminals should be tried, and thus about 23,000 are still missing. Of the 61,761, 41,212 were acquitted by the end of 1964. Of the remaining 20,549, 13,892 cases were still pending in 1965, 12 persons were sentenced to death before this penalty was abolished by law, 77 went to life imprisonment, 5,911 received shorter prison sentences, 114 were fined and one person was put on probation when it was revealed that he had been a juvenile at the time of the crime with which he was charged.

The German authorities report that they have been unable to locate 542 persons wanted in connection with the present trials. These cases "could not be pursued because the suspect lived abroad or at an unknown address."

The report covers the findings of a Commission of 18 German legal experts established by the German Lawyers Association to study the problem of dealing with Nazi crimes. Addressing 800 judges, lawyers and legal experts at a meeting of the Association, the organization's President, Prof. Ernst Friesenhahn, said some courts showed "uncalled for leniency towards Nazi criminals."

Quoting from the Commission's report, the Association's President said "One court held that 'The need to atone is after 20 years no longer as great as it was. Time has mercifully drawn a veil of forgetting over the sufferings of the victims and the tears of their families.'"

Other cases of leniency, Dr. Friesenhahn continued, "produced arguments like these: the accused do not have to be deterred by heavy sentences as they are unlikely ever to get into a similar situation; the accused had been since 1945 a respectable member of society; the accused had proved himself proficient in his profession; in the accused's favor, it must be taken into account that Germans generally are inclined to trust authority blindly; the danger of getting involved in crimes had been such that those who had never lived under totalitarian rule must find it inconceivable, and consequently individual guilt had to be rated correspondingly lower. A former high-ranking official charged with several murders was let off lightly because he had regarded his killings as reprisals admissible under international law."

Dealing particularly with the crucial question of "duress" as a defense, Prof. Friesenhahn pointed out that "in spite of extensive research by the Central Office at Ludwigsburg, not a single case has yet been traced where a member either of the SS or police had suffered serious harm as a result of a refusal to kill human beings."

In New York, the WJC's Institute of Jewish Affairs is involved in a world-wide search for witnesses for trials of Nazis either scheduled to be held or still in the investigation stage. The report by the Commission of the German Lawyers Association has been made available by the Institute of Jewish Affairs in London.

Israel's policy of patience—and firmness

Mr Abba Eban, the Foreign Minister of Israel, answers questions

(The following interview with Mr. Eban took place in November.)

Could we begin from the events of the past few days? Inevitably there are parallels with 10 years ago. Then there was a feint, a minor counterattack against Jordan. It was followed by a very much larger operation in another direction (towards Suez). Since your most serious worry at present must be with Syria, one is bound to wonder whether something is impending against Syria.

I see no resemblance at all between the situation today and that which existed 10 years ago. The international and regional circumstances are entirely different. I still believe that we are dealing here with disturbances of a grave but essentially local character. The complexity of the situation arises from the fact that the chief instigator of the terrorist movement is the Government of Syria. This fact was recognised by a majority of the members of the United Nations Security Council a majority composed of members from five continents. On the other hand, the territory and the population through which the terrorist bands work are often in Jordan. It might be the case that Syria will make a special effort to ensure that these activities take place through Jordanian territory, both in order to prevent a reaction against herself and in order to embroil Israel and Jordan in armed clashes.

Our policy is as follows: first, to make the country as impenetrable as possible—that is to say, to deal with the problem as far as we can by defensive measures within the country. This is the significance of the restoration of the longer period of military service (30 months). There are also technical means which can be intensified to make the boundary less open than it is and to exact a heavier price on Israel's territory from those who come in with violent intent. Secondly, when these events occur, our policy is to maintain the maximum degree of restraint and the maximal utilisation of political influences and of international means. This aspect of our policy was illustrated when, after a very murderous assault in the north, we took the issue to the Security Council and abstained from any action.

During the four months between July and November, there have been dozens of acts, some of them involving loss of life and bloodshed, and there was not one single Israeli reprisal. Some of these abstentions are very difficult to maintain, such as after the derailment of a train and the penetration of a terrorist group to our capital. A Government which can't run a train service or can't keep the capital free of terrorist acts is in a rather serious situation.

Now, it is a question of judgment; not everybody agrees at what point a continual policy of nonreaction would be counter-productive or would be encouraging to the terrorists or would give an impression of an open season or would encourage the extremists. At that point, we go over to an active policy of deterrents.

So I would say that these are the three concepts within which we play. The first is the defensive concept, the intensification of defence within the country; then the maximal reliance on political influences; and as the last and reluctant resort an act of demonstrative deterrence.

You say the instigators are primarily in Syria even though a number of the incidents themselves have come across the Jordanian border. If your policy of restraint—a very commendable policy—doesn't work out and the incidents go on, what sort of active deterrent measures can you take?

The first question we have to face when there is an active measure of deterrence is whether to take it against Syria, which is the centre and the inspiration of this movement, or against the population and territory from which the provocation came. On the last occasion, it was very difficult to trace the origin of the incident in Syria. It originated not from Syria, in this case, except perhaps in terms of ideology of the inspiration, but it emanated from a certain area in the Mount Hebron district, which is a breeding ground and an assembly centre for the activity of some of these groups, an area which is, of course, beyond the Israeli frontier but which doesn't seem to be under very effective Jordanian jurisdiction. Therefore, we envisage this action to be not against any Government but rather against a certain area from which this danger to peace and security arose.

You ask what would we do if something happened of which the Syrian origins were plainer. I must answer that I don't think we ought to commit our action in advance. One has to be very empirical on this matter. We want Syria to know that we insist on reciprocity. That is the key word. We want the same conditions to exist on our side of the border as upon theirs.

In Saturday's incident [the border incident of November 12, when three Israeli soldiers were killed, leading to the Israeli retaliatory raid over which Jordan complained to the UN Security Council] have you in fact identified the nature of the organisation? Is it possible to identify the organisation which was responsible for the mine-laying?

I think the nature of the organisation is known. There are groups of people who are trained in camps in Syria, in Daharan, in Kuneltru, and elsewhere. Having received their training they operate within Israeli territory, either through Syria, sometimes through Lebanon, but mainly through Jordan, because these are mainly people of Palestinian origin, who know the terrain.

And the Jordan frontier is more open of course?

More open. The organisational structure is very loose. There is a proliferation of names.

Are these El Fatah people or Liberation Army people?

I've never had the impression that El Fatah or Liberation Army are rigidly defined groups like political parties. What has happened is that an atmosphere has been created in the Arab world in favour of what is called "a popular war." This is a concept of war of a limited liability; how do you get the maximum results with the minimal risks. And these Governments, especially Syria's, would probably like to avoid frontal conflict between regular forces. They discuss this quite openly in their speeches. They say that the recent history of the world had shown the fantastic results that can be achieved by relatively small guerrilla groups, who make life intolerable and thereby achieve a political effect perhaps even greater than would be achieved by regular forces, without inviting the interaction of armed forces, in which I think Syria and Jordan would come off badly. That is their logic.

This is an easy, cheap way of running a kind of war against Israel. Now, this ideology has spread and it is a source of danger because the fact is that the answer, the technical answer, to that kind of warfare has not been found.

But if you believe that you have identified the training camps, for example, where these people are going through their initial training and the centres from which they are operating, then in the unhappy event of it being necessary to go over to a more active policy of deterrents, these would seem to be the sort of places at which you might be aiming?

If nothing happens, then so much the better. If something happens, then let's meet and consider it in the light of these three alternatives and in the light of the smell that we have of the atmosphere in the region and in the world.

Could I ask more about the identification of the instigation of the troubles as being in Syria? Somebody has to organise and train these terrorists. Somebody has to provide the arms, the equipment, the explosives. Somebody has to say, this is a good place and time. What evidence have you that the instigation is in Syria?

The evidence is first the statements of Syrian leaders themselves. One cannot believe that politicians always say the opposite of what they believe. At any rate, the Syrian leaders, including the President, the Prime Minister, and the Chief of Staff, continually make statements praising, exhorting, encouraging the organisations, especially El Fatah and El Assifa. Secondly, the Damascus Radio, which is the chief instrument for the information services of these groups. To give an example, after the assault at Romema in Jerusalem, Damascus Radio quickly had an extremely precise and detailed communiqué on the nature of the explosive charges that were laid, at what time they were laid, and when they went off. And, thirdly, it is known that training camps for a so-called popular war exist in Syria. These are visited by Syrian Ministers and their whereabouts are known. The Syrian Government doesn't really deny that it approves, exhorts, and stimulates their activities.

Does it provide money?

And finance. There are also certain acts of financial volunteering by other Arab Governments who perhaps don't want to get involved directly.

It is notable that the greatest trouble now comes from the least stable of your neighbours. Egypt used to be the primary source of trouble. Egypt has become a much more solid and stable country and is giving you less direct bother now than it used to. The Syrian Government is in a very shaky state. Its own survival must be in question. It has to be active in order to try to make its own position at home more popular and secure?

I agree with that. The greater the instability of a neighbouring Government, the more active its militance towards Israel is likely to be.

ZIONIST DIES

JOHANNESBURG, So. Africa — Woolf Senior, veteran South African Zionist and philanthropist, who played a leading part in the Zionist movement, died here at the age of 85.

Israel's Planned Slowdown To Be Continued During 1967

NEW YORK — Minister Pinhas Sapir has acknowledged that Israel's planned economic slowdown has gone too far. By his reckoning, unemployment more than trebled during the year.

Nevertheless, he said in his annual budget speech to the Knesset in Jerusalem that the policy would be pursued in 1967.

It was essential, he declared, to shift manpower and resources from nonproductive enterprises to competitive export industries to help attain economic independence. Without temporary unemployment it cannot be done, he said.

The Finance Minister said the recession had helped reduce the difference between exports and imports in two years from a peak of $570-million to $460-million. This was made possible by the shrinking demand and eased labor situation resulting from the recession.

The recession began with a slump in the building industry and spread to other branches of the economy. Industry has not absorbed the displaced construction workers and has dismissed thousands of additional hands because of the slump. Mr. Sapir said the daily average of unemployed had reached 15,000, but the official figure is generally seen as a gross underestimate.

The Finance Minister told the Knesset that unemployment had exceeded expectations because the planned slowdown coincided with an unforeseen decline in immigration this year. Censorship prohibits the publication of current immigration figures.

Large-scale immigration, which has quadrupled the population since Israel was established in 1948, was the cause of the economic boom that has ended.

The $1.7-billion budget introduced last week provides for a 29 per cent increase in development allocations. Mr. Sapir said jobs would be created for 20 to 25 per cent of the unemployed during the transition period.

He said the Government envisaged the establishment of industries that could compete in the world market. Financiers capable of promoting such industries will be able to get as much as 80 per cent of the required capital in Government loans and grants.

Mr. Sapir said the Government wanted to offer investors in approved enterprises grants amounting to one-third of the cost of machinery and equipment and one-fifth of the building cost in addition to the existing tax concessions.

Loans will also be granted at low rates, he said, and special encouragement will be given to enterprises exporting at least half their output.

The budget includes an allocation of nearly $77-million for export incentives.

Mr. Sapir also said that to create an atmosphere of stability it has been decided not to increase taxes in the next three years, unless there is an emergency.

The biggest single allocation in the budget is $326-million for the Ministry of Defense.

One source of revenue that offset a substantial part of the annual trade deficit for more than a decade — reparations from West Germany — has disappeared. Germany has completed payments under a 1952 agreement. United States Government grants have also ended.

government retirement programs; veterans' benefits, including veterans' life insurance proceeds; direct relief; payments to non-profit institutions other than for work done under research and development contracts; a few other minor items.

Net exports. This is the total by which our exports of goods and services exceeds the amount of our imports of goods and services. The net does not include transfers under military grants. Since imports of goods and services are counted in the GNP breakdown of what various groups of us (consumers, businessmen, governments, etc.) buy, exports of goods and services also must be counted to measure the actual output of our economy.

Personal tax and nontax payments. Under personal tax payments go the taxes individuals pay to general government that cannot be deducted as business operating expenses. The principal taxes are income taxes, personal property taxes and inheritance taxes. Contributions for Social Security are not included.

Nontax payments include passport fees, fines, donations, penalties, and tuition and hospital fees paid to schools and hospitals operated by State and local governments.

The estimates to be set to next to each of these items, and hundreds of others in coming weeks, will be at the heart of crucial Congressional debates. They will be the basis for policy decisions affecting the lives of every one of us.

Russian Jews Read Pravda, Apply For Emigration Permits

NEW YORK—Russian Jews carrying copies of Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper, and Izvestia, the Government newspaper, have been turning up at passport offices in the various Soviet Republics in growing numbers, according to reports received here recently.

The newspapers contained reports of Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin's statement of Dec. 3 that Jews wishing to emigrate were free to leave the Soviet Union. The applicants were reported to have included Jews who had earlier been turned down as well as some who had not previously applied. It is not clear whether the Russians will actually be more liberal in granting permission for emigration.

In applying for permits, the Jews acted on the basis of a somewhat watered-down version of Mr. Kosygin's statement.

The Soviet Premier was quoted in Paris as having said: "If there are some families divided by the war who want to meet their relatives outside the U.S.S.R., or even to leave the U.S.S.R., we shall do all in our power to help them. The way is open to them and will remain open to them and there is no problem."

Mr. Kosygin had been asked by an American reporter whether the Soviet Union would facilitate the reunion of Jewish families divided by the war. His reply apparently had been prepared in advance and covered the whole problem of the status of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Soviet citizens who read the statement in Pravda and Izvestia received a more limited version of Mr. Kosygin's statement. Omitted from the Soviet reports were phrases from Mr. Kosygin's statement promising Soviet assistance for the emigrants and that the doors would remain open in the future.

Nevertheless, the account was apparently sufficient to encourage many Jews to conclude that it was now less dangerous to manifest identification with Jews outside the Soviet Union. Tens of thousands of Russian Jews have relatives in the West and Israel.

Previously, only the elderly who were not vulnerable to reprisals or the extraordinarily daring applied for travel documents and only a small number were permitted to leave.

Since applications had to be accompanied by character references from managers of places of employment, few risked requesting them for fear of reprisals.

There have also been reports of cases where students were expelled from universities after their parents included their names in applications.

Younger children have been compelled to stand before their classmates while teachers berated their parents for having attempted to leave the Soviet Union. The children were forced to promise they would insist that their names be erased from the applications.

In a related development, hundreds of Soviet defectors now living in the West and long separated from their families have new hope because of a recent act of Kremlin compassion toward one of their number in London.

Their new hope is born of the reunion on Dec. 17 in London of a recent defector, Leonid Finkelstein, with his wife, Julia, and their 7-year-old son, Dmitri. Now others in a similar situation are appealing to the Soviet Government for the same treatment.

A typical case is that of Anatol Michelson, a research engineer for the E.W. Bliss Company in Swarthmore, Pa., who has appealed to Mr. Kosygin for the release of his wife, Galina, and their only daughter, Olga, 18.

Mr. Michelson has appealed to Soviet authorities before to grant exit visas for his wife and daughter, but each time he reports those requests were denied on the ground that he was in the West illegally.

Rightist Phone Tape Alleges LSD Smuggled From Israeli Institute

NEW YORK — Let Freedom Ring, an ultra right-wing organization that has attacked prominent persons in recorded telephone messages, is now using a recording that says large quantities of LSD are being smuggled into this country from the Weizmann Institute in Israel.

In releasing a text of the taped telephone message, which is reportedly being used in several cities, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said the message linked the drug with Communism as part of a "conspiracy" designed to immobilize American cities.

A spokesman for the Weizmann Institute here said there "is not a scintilla of truth in the outrageous broadcast."

Let Freedom Ring messages were established by Dr. William C. Douglass, a physician of Sarasota, Fla., who is a member of the John Birch Society. These messages have attacked former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, President Kennedy, the late Adlai E. Stevenson, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Chief Justice Earl Warren and Senator Jacob K. Javits, New York Republican.

Jewish Themes Seen On Czech Stamps

LONDON — The Czechoslovakian post office department at Prague has issued a new series of postage stamps which includes several stamps on Jewish themes, it was learned here.

One shows the ancient Mahara! Synagogue in the Czechoslovakian capital. The Mahara! was the great rabbi, Jacob Lowe of Prague, known among other things as the sage who had created the legendary "Golem." He lived from 1513 to 1609.

Translation Replaces Crusaders' Massacre

CHICAGO — The massacre of Jews by a French army of the first crusade took place in the south of France at Montleux near the Italian border, according to a new translation of a 900-year-old Hebrew document.

Previous translations had placed the massacre in Anjou, an early French province near Brittany in the north of France.

Historians had written about massacres of Jews by crusaders in Germany and at Rouen, in northern France, but had no accounts of any in the south.

The report on the document was made public recently by Dr. Norman Gold, associate professor of medieval Jewish studies at the University of Chicago. The translator said the document contains the first known written evidence of the Provencal army before it reached Italy. In contrast, northern crusades kept journals of their travels.

The document is part of a collection from the Cairo genizah (storage room), and is now in the Cambridge University Library.

State Secretary Defends Movie, 'Memorandum'

OTTAWA — State Secretary Judy Lamarsh defended in the House of Commons a National Film Board production, "Memorandum," dealing with atrocities against Jews committed in the Nazi death camps during the war.

Miss Lamarsh spoke in response to objections to the film voiced by Raymond Langlois, a member of Parliament, who said he was unable to "comprehend or support" the film. Miss Lamarsh said the film had won four film festival prizes.

Yeshiva University Faculty Honors Dr. Samuel Belkin

NEW YORK—Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University, was honored by the faculty of the institution's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary at a luncheon recently, it was announced by three distinguished senior members of the faculty who are serving as co-chairmen of the event. They are Dr. Joseph B. Solovitchik, Rabbi Mendel Zaks and Rabbi Jacob Lessin.

Dr. Belkin will be honored for his efforts and work in the dissemination of Torah in his role as dean of the Seminary and president of the University for nearly 24 years. Through these efforts, the chairman said, he has helped "raise in America a generation of Torah scholars and devoted Jews."

The Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary is the pioneer unit from which Yeshiva University has evolved. More than 1,000 rabbis and other leaders of the Jewish community have been ordained there since it was founded in 1897 as an outgrowth of the first yeshiva (school of traditional Jewish learning) in the United States.

Dr. Belkin, a distinguished scholar, author and educator, was elected president of Yeshiva University in 1943 after serving the institution as a teacher and administrator since 1935. Born on December 12, 1911 in Swislitz, Poland, he had arrived in the United States in 1929 at the age of 18—a year after being ordained as a rabbi at Radun.

He attended Harvard University and received an honorary fellowship to Brown University, where he received the Ph.D. degree in 1935 and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Belkin became dean of the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary in 1940 at the death of Dr. Bernard Revel, who was also founder and first president of Yeshiva College. From then until May 25, 1943, when he was elected president at the age of 31, he also served as a member of the seven-man Executive Board which exercised presidential functions pending the election of Dr. Revel's successor.

Under Dr. Belkin's leadership, the institution was granted university status in 1945. Its enrollment has risen from 850 to 6,500; its constituent schools from four to 14; its annual budget from $444,000 to $45 million, plus a $50 million building program; its facilities from one building in the Washington Heights section of Manhattan to four major teaching centers in Manhattan and the Bronx, with a valuation of $59,611,000.

Moreover, the institution established a liberal arts college for women and graduate schools of medicine, social work, science and graduate schools of medicine, social work, science and humanities and social sciences—the first of their kind under Jewish sponsorship.

Dr. Belkin's reputation as a brilliant educator is matched by his scholarly attainments. A prolific writer and noted authority on Jewish law and Hellenistic literature, he is author of "Philo and Oral Law" (Vol. XI of the Harvard Semitic Series, 1940), "Essays in Traditional Jewish Thought" (Philosophical Library, 1956) and "In His Image" (Abelard-Schuman, 1961).

He also has contributed to numerous learned publications and has won wide acclaim for his papers and monographs.

Tuley made a complete image switch three years ago when he realized he was going nowhere in night clubs. He changed his name to Lee Tully, divorced himself from Borsht mannerisms and material and it worked!

He played N. Y.'s Copacabana three times in three years, recently made a big hit at Caesars Palace, Las Vegas, but don't get ideas! He hasn't deserted us.

Scott Paper Company Hunts Minority Help

PHILADELPHIA — The Scott Paper Company, one of the largest paper products manufacturing concerns in the country, has joined with the Jewish Employment and Vocational Service of Philadelphia and the local chapter of the American Jewish Committee in launching a program to recruit Jews and members of other minority groups for executive-level positions in the company.

Representatives of the company met with officials of the JEVS and the Committee chapter to work out plans for the project which will seek to inform the Jewish community and other ethnic groups of the opportunities for executive employment available at the company.

Texas Community Heads Organizing State Welfare Agencies Committee

FT. WORTH, Tex. — Texas Jewish community leaders recently decided to recommend organization of a standing State Committee of Jewish Social Welfare Agencies.

It would serve as an instrument for establishing a systematic program of collaboration aimed at developing regional health and welfare services, under joint sponsorship of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, southern region, and the organized Jewish communities of Texas.

Chairman of the meeting was Bernard Schaenen, past president of the CJFWF Southern Region, comprising the area from Virginia to Texas.

The Texas communities were singled out, said Schaenen, to explore possibilities of expanding regional health and social welfare programs for more adequate services to scattered communities across the state.

According to recent estimates, there are some 32 communities in Texas with Jewish populations of more than 100 persons, totaling approximately 62,000 individuals.

While some of the largest communities have successfully organized broad programs of essential services for their members, many among the others are virtually without such services, and are dependent upon regional services for institutional care of the aged, help to emotionally disturbed children, family and marital counseling, and the like.

Local Texas communities were represented, for the most part, by professional leaders who participated in informal explanatory talks, with lay leaders from localities too small to engage professional staff.

The former included the executives of Jewish communities ranging in size from Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Ft. Worth to Waco, Corpus Christi and Beaumont.

Rabbi Emanuel Kumin, executive director of the Shreveport Jewish Federation attending because of his community's proximity to the Texas border and related community interests, made a plea for cooperation "across the border" wherever possible.

West Germany Probes Past Of 6,000 Nazis

LONDON—Six thousand Nazis of "senior" rank who had held responsible positions in the Nazi security office are being investigated by squads of West German detectives, the Evening Standard reported. The newspaper stated they are being probed for possible involvement in war crimes. Seventeen public prosecutors in West Germany met recently to consider evidence against 8,000 suspected war criminals still unprosecuted. The 6,000 former security agents were reportedly on that list of suspects.

TOURO INAUGURAL BALL
Touro Fraternal Association will hold an inaugural ball on Saturday, Jan. 14, at Touro Hall, 100 Niagara Street, for members and their ladies. The ball will begin at 8:30 p.m. and the Grand March at 9:30 p.m. The organization is celebrating its 50th anniversary year.

MIRIAM WOMEN'S MEETING
The Women's Association of Miriam Hospital will hold an open meeting on Monday, Jan. 16, at 1:30 p.m. in the Sopkin Auditorium, on the topic, "Intensive Care Unit—Three Months Later." Dr. Max Bloom, medical director of Intensive Care, and Dr. S. Frederick Slatfsky, assistant in surgery, will speak and a movie will be shown.

TO DEDICATE PLAQUE
A wall plaque with Biblical inscriptions, given to Temple Beth Shalom by Mr. and Mrs. Sumner L. Woolf in honor of their children Jo Myra, Carl and Sara, will be dedicated at late services tonight at 8:15 o'clock. Rabbi Charles M. Rubel will conduct the services. His sermon topic will be "The Bible and Modern Jewish Life." Afterwards, Mr. and Mrs. Woolf will be hosts at an Oneg Shabbat in the social hall, to which the general public is invited.

The board of directors of the temple will meet at 10 a.m. on Sunday.

RECEIVE AWARDS
Marc S. Jagoliner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Jagoliner, was the only New Englander to receive an award given to outstanding USY members for excellence in study, service and prayer, at the National United Synagogue Youth Convention in St. Louis, Mo. Sixty-seven USY members from the New England Region attended the Dec. 22-25 convention.

The New England Region received a special award, when Archie J. Chaset of Slater Avenue, chairman of the region, was cited for outstanding service and called to the podium to receive the award from Joseph Cohen, national director of Youth Activities.

BETH EL SISTERHOOD
The Sisterhood of Temple Beth El will hold its annual open board meeting on Thursday, Jan. 19. Special guest will be Miss Eleanor Schwartz, associate director of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods. Her topics will be "Where Our Sisterhood Dollars Go" and "New Philosophy in the Role Sisterhood Plays." Also present will be Mrs. Herman Roseman of New Haven, Conn., new president of the New England Federation of Temple Sisterhoods. A petit luncheon will be served at 12:30 p.m. and the program will begin at 1:15 p.m.

AIPAC TO MEET EARLY
The American Israel Public Affairs Committee will hold its eighth annual National Policy Conference in Washington on Feb. 5 instead of in May, because of the situation in the Near East. Irving J. Fain of Providence is a member of the AIPAC Executive Committee, and Mrs. Archibald Silverman and Julius Robinson, of the National Committee.

3RD DIALOGUE MEETING
The Religious Action Committee of Temple Sinai will hold its third dialogue meeting with members of several Christian denominations from churches in the area on Sunday, Jan. 15, at 8 p.m. The evening's topic will be "The Messianic Prophecies as Viewed by the Christian and Jew."
The Rev. Lewis S. Stone of St. David's Episcopal Church, the Rev. John W. Kennedy of the Church of the Immaculate Conception and Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland will serve as resource personnel. Those interested in joining the group should contact Mrs. Helen Blotcher at DE 1-8565.

'GIDGET GOES HAWAIIAN'
The Checkmates will present the movie, "Gidget Goes Hawaiian," from 8 to 10:30 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 14, at the Jewish Community Center.

During the gray, bleak days there are few desserts like those made with red, juicy apples to gladden the eye and warm the gullet. Nature, ever bountiful, ever timely, has provided the rich harvest of this universally favorite fruit just as this dreary season and the market stalls are aglow with them.

Here are two simple recipes that even a newly married, inexperienced bride may prepare with confidence and with pleasing results.

APPLE PUDDING
4 egg yolks
3/4 cup sugar
6 large apples, peeled, cored and grated on large grater
3 tablespoons melted butter (may use melted fat or oil if flais-chig or pareve)
3/4 cup bread crumbs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons lemon juice
4 egg whites beaten stiff but not dry

Beat egg yolks and sugar very well, add rest of ingredients except egg whites and mix well. Fold in beaten egg whites and bake in well greased casserole in 350 degree oven 30 minutes or until nice and brown.

"BAKED" APPLES
8 large baking apples (Roman Beauties)
1 slice lemon with skin
1 slice orange with skin
6 cloves
1 cup sugar

Core apples, peel apples about one inch from stem end (smaller end). Do not discard cores or peelings. Sprinkle 1/2 cup sugar in the bottom of large, flat-bottomed pan, place in the apples cut side down in one layer on top of sugar, add slices of orange and lemon studded with 3 cloves each. Add enough water to just cover peeled part of apples, add cores and peelings, cover well and boil over low heat on top of stove 15 minutes until peeled part is soft, not mushy, turn apples upside down, cover and continue to cook over low heat until just tender. Sprinkle some of the remaining sugar over top of apples and place under the broiler using moderate heat and baste frequently with pan

Irish Jewry Celebrates Birth Of Republic

DUBLIN—Ireland's Jewish community maintains strong ties with Jewry in other parts of the world. The community, about 4,000 persons in Dublin and 53 in Cork, has just completed celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of the 1916 uprising that led to the birth of the Republic of Ireland.

The Representative Council was responsible for a central service in the Adelaide Road Synagogue here at which the President and the Prime Minister were officially represented.

During 1966, the community "learned with gratification" that Rabbi Dr. Immanuel Jakobovits, a former Chief Rabbi of Ireland, had been appointed Chief Rabbi of the British Commonwealth.

A disastrous fire damaged the Terenure Synagogue. Most of the interior of the building, including seats, fittings and ceilings, was badly damaged and the scrolls and prayer books were damaged by water as the fire department battled the blaze. Fortunately, they managed to save the main structure, and the community hopes soon to have the synagogue fully restored for normal services.

Irish Jewry played host to a group of members from Jersey City B'nai B'rith last year. The Mayor, the Chief Rabbi, and officials of the Irish Government were on hand to welcome the visitors.

In addition to its Representative Council, whose delegates attend World Jewish Congress international meetings, the Irish community is served by about 70 agencies, societies and groups covering all areas of Jewish interest and action.

paprika
1 cup water
1 bouillon cube
DUMPLINGS
3 cups flour
3 eggs
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup water

Have meat cut into large cubes. Sauté onions in fat in a heavy pot. Add meat. Brown for 10 minutes. Sprinkle with flour and seasonings. Add water and bouillon cube. Simmer until meat is tender. Broth should be thick but water may be added during cooking if needed to prevent burning.

DUMPLINGS: Combine all ingredients into a batter. Beat until smooth. Pour through a colander with large holes into boiling salt water. Stir gently so the dumplings do not stick together. When they come to the top they are cooked. Serve with goulash. Serves 4 to 6.

BORJUHUS SULT (VEAL BIRDS)
2 pounds shoulder of veal cut in 1/4-inch slices
salt, pepper
thyme
2 cups bread crumbs
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon minced mushrooms
1 tablespoon chopped gherkins
1 tablespoon minced olives fat for frying
3/4 cup soup stock

Season veal slices with spices. Make a stuffing by combining bread crumbs, parsley, onion, and mushrooms. Brown in hot fat for a few minutes. Remove from fire and add gherkins and olives. Season to taste. Spread stuffing evenly on each of the slices of meat. Roll and fasten with toothpicks or tie with string. Brush with melted fat. Roll in flour and brown in hot fat. Place "birds" in a garlic rubbed greased casserole. Add soup stock. Bake at 375 degrees until meat is tender. Turn "birds" once during cooking. Serves 4.

BONELESS BAKED CHICKEN
3 three-pound broilers, split and boned
3 chicken livers, broiled
7 ounces bread crumbs
11 ounces lukewarm water
1 large onion, sliced
1 tablespoon chicken fat
dash of thyme
dash of basil
dash of oregano
salt, pepper

Combine bread crumbs and lukewarm water. Let stand for ten minutes. Brown onion in chicken fat. Sauté livers with onions. Put onion and liver through meat grinder and mix with bread crumbs and seasonings to taste. Place in refrigerator overnight. Spread crumb mixture in equal parts on broilers. Roll and tie up. Broil lightly. Then bake until tender. Serves 6.

FASULYAH ARMENIAN STRING BEANS
3 tablespoons olive oil
3 medium-sized onions, chopped
1 cup cooked chopped lamb
1 pound string beans, Frenched
1/4 cup vegetable broth or bouillon
2 tomatoes
salt, pepper
nutmeg
clove

Heat oil in skillet together with onions. Add lamb, string beans and broth. Simmer 15 minutes. Cut tomatoes in thick slices. Add to broth. Simmer 10 minutes more. Season to taste with spices. Serves 2.

Danes, Israelis Intermarrying

COPENHAGEN — Blonde, blue-eyed Danish girls are deeply enamored of the dark-skinned young men from the Israeli Oriental communities who have been swarming the beautiful capital of friendly Denmark.

The Israelis crash Denmark for two reasons; no entry visas are required and the employment opportunities are unlimited.

The rendezvous between the Israelis and the Danish girls has already resulted in numerous mixed marriages.

Rumanian Rabbi Invites Orthodox To Bucharest

WASHINGTON — The chief rabbi of Rumania has invited two United States Orthodox Jewish organizations to attend a conference in Bucharest in an effort to renew contacts between Jewish communities in the East and the West.

The invitation by Rabbi Moses Rosen came at the opening of the annual convention of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America. The union and the Rabbinical Council of America, also included in the invitation, are the major Orthodox organizations of the United States.

About 2,000 delegates from Orthodox congregations in the United States and Canada gathered for the five-day meeting.

The Bucharest conference, which Dr. Rosen proposed be held in February, would be the first such international gathering of Jewish leaders in an East European Communist country since World War II.

Rabbi Rosen's words were received with an ovation. Joseph Karasik, the union's national vice-president, predicted that "unanimous acceptance" of the invitation would be voted by the convention. Rabbi Rosen asked that his invitation be transmitted by the American Orthodox group to the Conference of European Rabbis, a counterpart organization in Western Europe, and its affiliated groups.

The Rumanian rabbi, a stocky man with a white beard, spoke in Yiddish. Convening of such a conference in Rumania, he told the delegates, would be conducive to closer association and understanding between the Jewish communities in the West and in Eastern Europe. "It could help ease the tensions of the cold war" and "in this way Jews in different parts of the world might well be instrumental in carrying out the Jewish religious mission of bringing peace to mankind."

Dr. Rosen, who is president of the Federation of Rumanian Jewish Communities, which has a membership of 100,000 Jews, stressed that Rumanian Jews were an "integral part of the world Jewish community, recognizing their role and responsibilities in the religious affairs of Jewish people everywhere."

"We are freely developing an independent Jewish religious and cultural life within the framework of Rumania's socialistic society," he added.

Citing his nation as "an example of the existence of religious freedom in a socialistic society," Dr. Rosen said that Rumanian Jews enjoyed full religious and cultural rights and that the Jewish community maintained synagogues and religious schools and published a biweekly newspaper.

It was not known whether representatives of Jewish Orthodox communities in the Soviet Union would be able to attend the proposed conference.
