

Group Warns Anti-Semitism Is On Increase In Italy

ROME — A new group of Roman Catholic priests and laymen, Protestants and intellectuals unaffiliated with churches warned that anti-Semitism was being revived in Italy.

The study group said in a statement that it intended to fight anti-Semitic activities. It denounced what it described as a spate of books and tracts disparaging Jews.

Some of the anti-Semitic literature was said to be circulated by information services of Arab nations, but printed in Italy and as left-wing material. Other anti-Jewish pamphlets were traced to marginal Roman Catholic factions and Zionism rather than of the Jewish people. Although

A member of the new group, the Very Rev. Pietro Rossano, said in an interview that he expected it to become a permanent interfaith committee to combat anti-Semitism in Italy.

Monsignor Rossano is undersecretary of the Vatican's Secretariat for Non-Christians, but he explained that he was participating in the new group in a personal capacity.

The prelate said that the committee had held its first "consultation meeting" at the International University for Social Studies Pro Deo, a private Roman Catholic institution, here.

The Union of Italian Jewish Communities and other Jewish groups have protested recently against the desecration of synagogues and Jewish cemeteries in Italy. Individual Jews have complained that they had been attacked or were being threatened in anonymous letters and phone calls.

The Italian Jewish community numbers about 40,000 in a nation of 55 million people. A few hundred Italian Jews emigrated to Israel during each of the last few years.

At the meeting of the new committee on anti-Semitism, Alfonso Di Nola, professor of history of religions at Siena University, submitted a report on Italian publications hostile to Jews.

Professor Di Nola said that some Roman Catholic fringe groups here started publishing anti-Semitic tracts after Pope John XXIII ordered the suppression of elements in church liturgy that were felt to be offensive to Jews.

Another major source of anti-Jewish literature, according to Professor Di Nola, is a shadowy "neo-Nazi-racist movement" in Italy, said to operate on the fringes of neo-Fascism.

The scholar said that many anti-Semitic books were on sale at newsstands and were being circulated among students in the law and literature departments of Rome State University, which are considered bulwarks of neo-Fascism.

Professor Di Nola reported that two editions of the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," a notorious fabrication purporting to expose Jewish plans for world domination, were recently published by a right-wing extremist group.

Discussing literature believed to come from Arab sources, Professor Di Nola said that it was ostensibly critical of Israel and Zionism rather than of the Jewish people. Although purporting to be the expression of left-wing thought, such Arab-inspired anti-Semitic material could often be found in the hands of rightists, the scholar observed.

41% of Reform Rabbis In US Officiate At Mixed Marriages

GROSSINGER, N.Y. — Forty-one per cent of the nation's Reform rabbis defy tradition and officiate at mixed marriages involving Jews and non-Jews, a statistical study indicated.

The study was the first ever made on mixed marriages and the Reform rabbinate. Unofficial estimates had placed the figure much lower, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. The statistics were made public at the annual convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the rabbinic arm of Reform Judaism, being held at Grossinger's.

A mixed marriage refers to one in which the partners retain their separate religious identification and do not go through conversions. Rabbis who do officiate at such marriages usually exact a promise that children must be raised as Jews, and they frequently recommend that the non-Jewish partner study the basic tenets of Judaism.

However, of the 41 per cent who officiate, half do not require any pledges.

The official position of the Central Conference on mixed marriages holds that they are contrary to Jewish tradition and should be discouraged. But the actual practice is left up to the individual rabbi. The stand was adopted in 1909 and reaffirmed in 1947 and 1971.

The study released was conducted by Dr. Theodore I. Lenn of West Hartford, Conn., from 1970 to 1972, and supervised by a special committee headed by Rabbi David Polish, president of the conference. More than 600 of the 1,000 rabbis in the conference responded to questionnaires.

Rabbi Herman Schaalman of Chicago, chairman of the conference's Mixed Marriage Committee, told the Reform rabbis that the issue had been "threatening the unity of the Reform movement."

He observed that attempts last year by Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn of Boston to forbid rather than discourage officiating at mixed marriages had "intensified feelings."

"Passionately held commitments have tended to clash and to polarize rabbis and laymen alike," he said.

Rabbi Schaalman said that his 10-member committee had in the last year, studied all aspects of the problem and had recommended that, to "reduce the tensions" and provide the framework for further discussion and study, the conference maintain its present stand for the time being to enable additional research and analysis.

Rabbi Joseph R. Narot of Miami also urged that no change be made.

Koor Industries Signs Agreement

TEL AVIV — Israel's largest industrial holding company, the Histadrut-owned Koor Industries, signed an agreement in Tokyo last week with the giant Japanese firm of Koichi Ishikawa for the establishment of a joint trading company, to develop commerce between the two nations and to expand their commerce in other parts of the world, particularly Africa. The contract was signed by Meir Amit, general director of Koor, and Koichi Ishikawa, president of the Japanese concern.

Israeli circles hailed the deal as a major economic and political breakthrough for Israel. The

150,000 To Tour Israel In Next Four Months

Arabs Start Annual Summer Visits To Relatives Across Jordan River

JERUSALEM — With official and public attention focused on the well-being of thousands of foreign tourists arriving daily at Israel's international airport, another flow of more unusual tourists is pouring into the country with little notice and little tension.

These are Arab tourists, citizens of countries technically at war with Israel, crossing the Allenby Bridge across the Jordan River at the rate of several thousand a day, to spend their summer vacations under the Israeli flag.

The growing popularity of this summer-visitor program flies straight in the face of the ideology of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the illusions of mutual hatred, and the Arab boycott of Israel.

As many as 150,000 Arab tourists are expected to cross Israeli border posts during the next four months. Last summer, the figure was 107,000, and in 1970, there were only 53,000 Arabs who risked visits to the lands under enemy occupation.

The Arab visitors and their relatives or friends on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan reply with shrugs to questions about the political significance of the interchange. They choose to regard it merely as an opportunity for reunions and interesting travel to places that were long off-limits.

To Israelis, Arab tourism is one of the most promising and exciting signs of political evolution in the Middle East since the six-day war of 1967.

For Israel's first two decades, the Arabs enforced a strict boycott of goods, personal interchange or official notice, hoping thereby to starve the Zionist settlers into isolation and powerlessness.

The war, and the swift Israeli occupation of lands supporting one million Arabs, suddenly produced a gray area in the rigid boycott. Israeli policymakers perceived an opportunity to promote peaceful coexistence on a daily, routine basis between the two hostile peoples, whatever the diplomats and peacemakers were arguing about.

As Prof. Yoram Dinstein of the law faculty at Tel Aviv University put it: "The message of peaceful coexistence, conveyed in the past 60 months, explodes the myths of the previous 60 years. It is now clear to countless Arabs and Jews that the images which they use to have of each other — the deposits of accumulated propaganda and prejudices — do not correspond to reality."

The reality these hot weekend afternoons is to see Israeli families mingling on the Mediterranean beaches with Arab families from the West Bank, Jordan and the lands beyond. There may not be much conversation or contact between them, but it is hard to feel much hostility on the white, hot sand.

Curiously, this year's Arab visitor program started just two days after the massacre of tourists at the airport near Tel Aviv by gunmen trained by a Palestinian guerrilla organization. Israeli authorities briefly considered canceling or delaying the visitor permits on security grounds, but then decided to go ahead as scheduled.

Senior officers report no significant sabotage or hostile activity in the occupied territories or in Israel itself as a result of the flow of Arab tourists. They do admit to taking special care in the baggage and personal inspections at border crossing posts.

Entry visas, valid for three months' travel in Israel, must be requested by a resident of the occupied territories on behalf of the friends or relatives who wish to come. The application requires a guarantee of peaceable intent and behavior by the visitor.

Among the 70,000 visitors visas already approved are applications of former Jordanian Cabinet ministers and legislators who are now ready to visit their relatives and friends living under the occupation.

One of the visitors expected at Nablus is the commander of the Jordanian Army brigade that surrendered the West Bank city to the advancing Israelis in the war five years ago.

Socialist International Hails Presence Of Golda Meir

VIENNA — The Socialist International which is holding its 12th congress here, has the flavor of a class reunion: It's "Willy" and "Harold," "Francis" and "Pietro," "Bruno" and "Olet," as government chiefs greet leading politicians.

Most often it's "Golda." The Premier of Israel, Golda Meir, is the brightest star in this galaxy of Socialist and Labor parties from some 30 countries.

Senator Pietro Nenni, the 80-year old Italian Socialist, hugged and kissed Mrs. Meir when they met on the dais of the congress hall. Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany drew her into a corner for a confidential talk at a glittering reception at the Austrian Federal Chancellery.

Austrian television showed Mrs. Meir visiting a transit center for Jewish emigrants from the Soviet Union. People keep telling her how moved they were watching her speak with newcomers in Yiddish and broken Russian.

At the congress Mrs. Meir spots an old friend every so often and exchanges reminiscences in English or German.

A Socialist since she taught school in Milwaukee, she is taking the affairs of the International seriously. Some of her European colleagues — pardon, comrades — are making only brief appearances at the Socialist summit meeting, pleading that they are busy with pressing European currency and Common Market problems.

The Israeli leader, who has explosive military tension in the Middle East on her hands, does not miss a single subcommittee session.

An Israeli official explained: "It's not just Socialist nostalgia that's motivating Golda to spend so much time here. The Socialist International is one of the few prestige organizations that have backed Israel during the six-day war and ever since. For us, the Vienna meeting is pretty important."

Inevitably, the coffeehouses buzz with rumors that Mrs. Meir is here not only to meet old Socialist pals but also to have secret contacts with mysterious Arab emissaries. Her aides brush off such speculation, but Austrians who might know say "maybe."

Occasionally, Mrs. Meir drops out of sight for several hours. No one will say where she is or what she is doing. An Austrian security officer said she was spending her nights and working several hours every day at a well-guarded villa on the outskirts.

Israeli and Austrian security people held several meetings before Mrs. Meir arrived last Friday on a scheduled El Al flight. She got out of the plane on the side that was not visible from the terminal building and was whisked away in a green Mercedes-Benz. Since then she has been seen in a cream-colored Mercedes and vehicles of other colors except official black.

Though the police say inconspicuousness is the method chosen to protect Mrs. Meir, the Austrian and Israeli "gorillas" — as the security men are called — are not inconspicuous when she appears in public. They communicate by walkie-talkie on a common frequency.

Japanese firm has connections with large steel plants and will enable Israel to import steel at much lower prices than it pays now. Economic circles here said the agreement would result in doubling Israeli imports from Japan to about $100 million as early as next year. Another immediate effect of the agreement will be to increase the importance — and hence the development — of Eilat, Israel's Red Sea port and its major outlet for trade with Africa, Asia and the Far East.

Eilat will serve as the port of entry for raw materials purchased by Israel in Japan and as the shipping port for the re-export of finished products. The Japanese connection is expected to assist the entry of Israeli products into the Japanese market.

Koichi Ishikawa has commercial outlets in 32 Japanese cities. It is especially interested in breaking into African markets where Koor Industries already has substantial outlets. Politically, the agreement was seen here as breaching the Arab League boycott of Israel which has hitherto kept many Japanese firms from entering into large scale business relations with Israel.

Seeks Action On Israel

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., — The Security Council continued an emergency session as Lebanon sought action for "a very strong condemnation" of Israel for "persistent acts of aggression."

Lebanon also demanded the return of five high-ranking Syrian Army officers who were captured near the Lebanese - Israeli border by an Israeli armored task force.

At a heated Council debate that lasted until nearly midnight, both the Soviet Union and China expressed unqualified support for the Lebanese position.

Yakov Malik, the Soviet representative, said that despite the fact that "important international problems were being solved on a realistic basis," the "Zionists had shown no interest in using this improved international climate to solve the problems in the Middle East."

China's representative, Huang Hua, said that the "wanton provocation by Israel could only be carried out with the support of imperialism."

Despite the Chinese stand, Yosef Tekoah, Israel's representative, appealed directly to China for support.

Mr. Tekoah said that in dealing with the Middle East, the United Nations applied a double standard. "It is only when Israel, as a last resort, strikes back in self-defense to repel and avert attacks, to protect the lives of its citizens, that the Council seems to awaken," he said.

American Married To Soviet Jew Says Husband Jailed

NEW YORK — A young American woman, married three weeks ago in Moscow to a Soviet Jewish dissident, said that she had learned that her husband would be put on trial Friday by Soviet authorities.

The woman, Judy Silver Shapiro, who is in her twenties, said she had spoken by telephone with the Soviet official investigating her husband's case, who told her that she could come to Moscow but would not tell her what the charges were against her husband, Gavriel Shapiro, a 27-year-old chemical engineer.

Mrs. Shapiro, a social worker from Cincinnati, told of these developments at a news conference at the Hotel Americana, called by the American Jewish Committee, which is trying to help reunite the Shapros. In Washington a State Department official said that efforts were being made there and through the United States Embassy in Moscow to help.

Her husband, Mrs. Shapiro said, was thwarted in efforts to emigrate to Israel and was being sought by Soviet authorities for evading military duty when they met a year ago. They were married in a private ceremony June 9 and Mrs. Shapiro returned to the United States, planning to return to Moscow for the required civil ceremony on August 30. On the day she left, she said, her husband was taken into custody.

Middle East Myopia

For the sixth time in less than four years the United Nations Security Council has condemned Israel for retaliatory raids against Lebanon without seriously addressing the root of the problem — deadly Palestinian guerrilla attacks against Israel from Lebanese soil. The myopic, partisan approach to incidents in the Middle East can only serve further to exacerbate tensions, to undermine the U.N.'s efforts to promote an Arab-Israeli settlement and to erode whatever confidence still exists in Security Council resolutions.

Although the Council acted in response to a Lebanese Government request, its failure to condemn Palestinian extremists for their provocative violence is almost as much of a disservice to Lebanon as it is to Israel. The Lebanese, necessarily the least belligerent of Israel's Arab neighbors, clearly have no interest in picking a quarrel with the Israelis. But Lebanon is too weak militarily and politically to be able to control the guerrillas on its own.

Strong United Nations condemnation of the Palestinian extremists might at least offer some encouragement to those elements in Lebanon who are calling for a crackdown on the guerrillas. It would also take the Council out of the contradictory and self-defeating position of appearing to condone violence on the part of groups which have persistently rejected U.N. proposals for a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute, from the original Palestine partition plan to the Resolution of November 22, 1967.

It is time the world organization — and especially its Arab members — distinguished between the violent demands of those diehard provocateurs and the legitimate interests of the Palestinians who want to live at peace with Israel in a portion of their own homeland which they could call their own. The Security Council could play a far more constructive role if it focused its efforts on promoting a settlement that fulfills this reasonable goal.

How To Read a Health Insurance Ad

"$210 a week paid directly to you while you're in the hospital!"
"$600 a month tax-free when you go to the hospital!"
"Cash income for up to five years — $39,000!"
"$1 introductory premium — only a few dollars a month thereafter!"

Across the country, full-page newspaper and magazine ads have been repeatedly promoting health insurance policies with such generous sounding benefits as these. Criticism of the policies is now mounting, questions are multiplying.

Are the policies as good as they sound? A wise buy? Are there loopholes which might prevent you from getting the benefits?

Most mail order insurers are reputable and offer policies which are good buys. BUT never buy this type of policy as a substitute for the broader Blue Cross types of hospital policies which pay virtually your entire bill and which can be supplemented by extra coverage available at moderate additional cost.

All too often, what you are actually buying and what you think you are buying are dramatically different. What's more, there are no direct federal controls over mail order health insurers, and until recently most state regulatory insurance departments have been grossly understaffed and unable to crack down on misleading ads that could conceal loopholes or exaggerate benefits.

You must shop with care for this type of insurance, search out the drawbacks and pitfalls before you sign up. But despite all the publicity, no one is telling you precisely what to look for. Here, therefore, are pointers on how to read these ads:

* Read the WHOLE ad, not just the big type. The small print may contain qualifications which take away many benefits.

* Question the company about anything in the ad which is not entirely clear to you.

* Use the checklist below as a guide as to what to watch for:

WHAT'S COVERED: Illnesses as well as accidents? What illnesses are excluded? Some policies exclude cancer, TB and heart disease. Most will cover you only if you are actually in a hospital.

WAITING PERIODS: If you've had an accident, you can probably collect from the first day you're in the hospital. If you're ill, though, your waiting period may be from three to eight days with an average wait of six. Eligibility for sickness benefits often does not begin until the policy has been in force for 30 days and there's usually a six-month waiting period for coverage of certain diseases.

PREEXISTING CONDITIONS: These may be among the most agonizing loopholes in many contracts. A seemingly helpful provision may actually say that for the first two years of your

Gemilath Hased at Seventy

By BERYL SEGAL

The Gemilath Hased (Free Loan Association) of Providence is on the threshold of its seventieth year.

In 1903 the Secretary of State of Rhode Island granted a charter to the Gemilath Hased. That makes it one of the oldest organizations in the city. Yet, the Gemilath Hased is as vigorous today as in the year of its founding. It offers greater services to its members and non-members, and it is now embarking on new ventures becoming a young agency. It proves that age does not diminish the usefulness and the vitality of an agency of kindness.

I had occasion to translate for the Jewish Historical Notes the report of the secretary of the Gemilath Hased, written in Yiddish, for the first five years of the existence of the organization. In that report, the secretary complains that Jews with money stay away from the Gemilath Hased. But in the same report we find that Jews without money remembered the Gemilath Hased at the head of all their Simchahs. The birth of a child, the Bar Mitzvah of a boy, the profits from a picnic, the pennies collected at a friendly card game were all donated to the Gemilath Hased. I find a curiosity of a donation of one dollar from a bet one man won from another.

Jews who were without money once and were helped by the Gemilath Hased could not forget what the Free Loan did for them in the days of their need.

In the report of 1927 we find a remarkable "hour glass" declaration of the aims and purposes of the Gemilath Hased. We reprint it here as it appeared in the little booklet. We think that it speaks better for the organizations than thousands of words:

The object of this Society is to loan money to those in need, instead of giving alms, and thus assist respectable people whose character and self-respect will not permit them to receive alms, but who will accept a loan which they can repay and thus overcome the difficulties in their struggle for means of livelihood. Money is loaned in sums of $5.00 to $200 to applicants on notes endorsed by business people, without any interest or expense of any kind, the borrower repaying the loan in WEEKLY PAYMENTS.

It is interesting that the Gemilath Hased lost in non-payments only about a thousand dollars in 24 years of doing business on trust in the decency of man. Altogether the Gemilath Hased loaned $677,888 on some 500 applications. The total amounts loaned increased during the 24 years from $4,298 in 1903 to $63,000 in 1927.

We hear about poverty and hardships among Jews. Yes, in spite of the popular myth, there are many Jews who do not have the wherewithal to meet their obligations. The Gemilath Hased takes such cases into account and loans money up to $50 without endorsement. The Gemilath Hased also gives $100 to students without endorsements. Times have changed. Instead of the $5 to $200 loans, the Gemilath Hased is now, in 1972, listing loans up to $1,500 from certain funds.

You may ask, what is the secret of the Gemilath Hased?

The secret is not hard to find. First there are dues from members. Membership is from $3 upwards. Last year the income from membership dues was over $4,500.

Then there are Memorial Funds. Loans on applications are made from the various funds depending on the kind of loan and the purpose for which the money is to be used.

There are also donations from friends on different occasions. Altogether there was an income from these donations of over $700 during 1971.

Dividends from monies deposited or invested amounted to close to $5,000 this year.

And expenses are kept to a minimum. With all the increases of business, the Gemilath Hased still gets along with one office girl. The expenses for last year were $6,950.10. That included salary, heat and lighting, rent and telephone, office supplies and insurance, plus minor expenses.

Unfortunately, very little is known about this Free Loan Association, especially among the younger members of our community. How can we measure the extent of aid the Gemilath Hased has offered to the fathers and grandfathers of these young men of today? How can we impress on the minds of the young men of today that in founding a Gemilath Hased their fathers followed a long line of Jews who in every generation, in many lands of their habitation, had organized this special fund to come to the aid of their fellow Jews?

Every morning, during the Morning Services, Jews have read with a peculiar singsong:

"These are the commandments which have no fixed measure. (One can never say I did enough.)"

And Gemilath Hased is one of them. It is next to the study of Torah.

Next year will be the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Gemilath Hased (Free Loan Association) of Providence. It is only proper that the occasion be celebrated in the manner it deserves.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Governor Rockefeller gave a dinner party for President Luis Echeverria of Mexico during his recent visit here. The governor escorted his guests on a tour of his sculpture and statuary collection on the grounds of his country home in Pocantico Hills. His children Nelson and Mark were playing in front of the statue of Aphrodite, a 17th-century Florentine work, and had spread out their collection of toy snakes, lizards, insects, bats and spiders.

The governor asked his children to take away their playthings. The boys looked up at him and said: "Oh, no Daddy. This is OUR collection."

Hans Holzer, who has written 27 books about ESP, psychic phenomena and the occult, has completed a pilot TV series, "Haunted." One of the segments was filmed at a house in Westchester. Several people had seen a knife slowly rising from the floor. This was not during a seance, but on a Sunday morning at breakfast. The knife floated in an arc, and, settled at the host's feet. Holzer, when called in to investigate, brought a film crew.

Their film showed on one frame two heads and light reflections. These phenomena remain unexplained.

The Castle Altenberg in Austria is one of the sights to be visited by a Swissair study group Holzer will conduct. During an overnight stay at the Castle, Holzer and his wife slept in twin beds. In the middle of the night, he suddenly saw what looked like a valet in a green uniform staring at him. Then the vision disappeared. In the morning, his wife had a curious desire to pray with clasped hands.

Later they learned that in the early 19th century, one of the masters of the castle was killed by a peasant, and the body was discovered by his valet — who wore a green uniform.

Holzer's wife had slept in a bed that once belonged to a bishop.

Harnett Kane, who wrote "Louisiana Hayride," is completing his 30th book for Doubleday. The story concerns a scandal in early America, which involved many historic figures... Stanley Baker, the British actor-director has turned to producing concerts and will present the Rolling Stones' next appearance... Max Von Sydow will play the title role in "The Exorcist," which will be filmed mostly in New York City.

Disagrees With McGovern Supporter

I would like to comment on Mr. Levin's letter concerning Senator McGovern's record on Israel. Mr. Levin seems quite convinced that the Senator is a staunch defender of Israel; so in order to "clear up whatever doubt may remain in peoples' minds," he presents us with a letter written by the Senator himself. After all how can we doubt the word of a Presidential candidate just before elections?

Senator McGovern states in his letter that the charges made against him are "distortions." Is it a "distortion" that he voted against the Defense Procurement Act of 1970 and against the Foreign Aid Act of 1971 which authorized military and economic aid to Israel? Or perhaps it is also a "distortion" that in March of 1971 he proposed to internationalize Jerusalem and he urged Israel to make reparations to the Arabs? Is it a "distortion" that he has asked for the return of all but insubstantial territories liberated during the Six Day War? The Senator points with pride to his endorsement by his good friend Senator Ribicoff, but he fails to mention his endorsement by Dr. Mehdidi's Action Committee on American Arab Relations. He also overlooks the fact that his close advisor, Rick Stearns, is a member of the Arab American Friendship League. Senator McGovern is the only candidate to support Humane Slaughter legislation (legislation which makes kosher slaughter of animals illegal) and to call aid to Day Schools unconstitutional.

It is time that we realize that if a Senator McGovern has been harmful to Israel and to the Jewish People, a President McGovern would prove to be disastrous.

The sum and substance of McGovern's reply upon being confronted by Robert Levin with his anti-Israel record was... "distortion... out of context," and some of my best friends are Jews! Those are the classic words of all anti-Semites. They will remove "all doubt" from the minds of only those Jews who are prepared to sacrifice Israel upon the holy altar of "liberalism."

CALLS KERLER 'TRAITOR'

LONDON — "Sovietsche Heimland," the Yiddish monthly in Moscow sponsored by the authorities and edited by Aaron Vergelis, has launched an attack upon Yosef Kerler, a Soviet-Jewish poet who has settled in Israel, describing him as "a traitor." The article seeks to prove that Kerler's 10-year imprisonment was due to his having committed a crime, rather than his being a victim of the Stalin persecutions. The "Heimland" said, "Now the Zionists in Israel exploit Kerler and make him slander the Soviet Union."

Hold Pretrial Hearing For Massacre Survivor

TEL AVIV — The first stage of the trial of Kozo Okamoto, only survivor of the three-man Japanese guerrillas who killed 27 persons at Israel's international airport, opened before a military tribunal June 22.

Okamoto was handcuffed to a military policeman on either side of them and was guarded by four regular policemen as he sat in a wooded pen before the three-man panel. The trial is being held in Lydda, the site of the airport, which is 11 miles from here.

The session was a pretrial hearing held to allow Jose Avner Munos Vega, leader of a group of Puerto Rican pilgrims who predominated among the more than 100 persons killed or wounded in the May 30 massacre, to testify before leaving for home.

Okamoto told a date for the trial has not yet been fixed told the court: "I don't refuse the facts of the trial, I want to explain my political opinions."

Sources at the Japanese Embassy here said that Okamoto had apparently decided to fight for his life.

"He doesn't want to die any more and has stopped talking about world revolution," the sources said.

They said that they had the impression from recent meetings with him that he now asserted that he had fired only on armed policemen in the arrival hall at the airport and that his only function had been to cover and guard the chief of the guerrillas.

An embassy official who has visited Okamoto several times said that he had become more confidential and had spoken about his childhood and his position in the guerrilla squad during the past few days.

"I was No. 3," he was reported as saying.

A military spokesman said today that Max Kritzman, who has agreed to defend Okamoto, had been provided with the material gathered during investigations. Mr. Kritzman, accompanied by a Japanese Embassy official, saw Okamoto this morning.

SOVIET PLEDGE

JERUSALEM — The Soviet pledge of more military aid to Egypt, contained in a communique issued following President Anwar Sadat's departure from Moscow was viewed as a negative development by Israeli officials but apparently not a cause for immediate concern. The Sadat trip, his second to the Soviet capital in two months, was described by some observers as "perfunctory" and the Soviet pledges as little more than lip service not likely to alter the current situation.

A remark heard often at the Bridge table after a hand is over is, "I should have" or "I wish I had." Usually it is because the player saying this has either misplayed a hand, misguessed or made an error in judgment. Sometimes what he did say, not have been wrong but the alternate plan would have worked out better. I am the culprit in today's hand for I played the hand myself at the recent Regional Open Pair Tournament and went down because I did not follow my original decision. When the hand was over and before my partner could start to berate me, he being an extremely sharp and perceptive player who knows exactly what the right play was immediately after every hand, I apologized and made the statement mentioned above. I should have done something at trick one that I failed to do which led to my downfall.

I was South, playing with my old partner, Frank Westcott. We were vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding.

 P INT P 3NT

The bidding was quite automatic. When North heard my opening bid he was quite certain we would have a reasonable play for game, even make a Slam if the cards in all four hands were perfectly placed. As far as bidding a Slam was concerned, we did not have enough high cards so he settled for game in No Trump and awaited the opening lead.

West led the Club 2, East playing his Ace and here is where I had to make the key play and believe me when I say I gave much thought to making what would have turned out to be the correct decision. This was my problem: I wanted to be able to take five Diamond tricks but had to lose one first. The only entry to get over to do this was the Heart Ace and if that were removed before those Diamonds were set up that plan would go "down the drain". My right hand opponent was a good player, quite up to switching to a Heart for he, too, could see those Diamonds. You might say, "What if he has the King himself?" He would be quite capable of leading that King and sacrificing it if necessary in order to get that Ace off the table. If West had it the Heart finesse would work but it would gain me one trick but cost me three Diamonds. I could hope he would continue a Club or that he would not lead the Heart but when I played my low Club to that first trick he did lead the Heart and after I played my Queen, West covered and there went my Ace from Dummy.

I tried to recover and took the Spade finesse but that lost to the Queen. A bit was salvaged when West returned a Heart for now my nine became another trick when East played the ten but now I could only count to eight tricks. I tried to get the ninth by going to the high Diamond in Dummy and hoping against hope that East had the Club Queen, finessing with my 10. This, of course, lost to the Queen and I never did get that ninth trick.

What should I have done? At trick one I should have jettisoned my Club King under East's Ace. That way Dummy's Jack would have been that other entry to make the Diamonds. All I had to do would be to lead over to it after the Diamonds were set up. If West had that Club Queen as he does, that would make the hand. You might say what if East turned out to be the one with that Club Queen. True, he might have had it but I felt that with the lead West was more likely to. If so, then I must play that King at trick one. As the cards are and I had, I would have made the hand. One cannot see through the backs of cards but one does try his best to figure where they are most likely to be and then govern himself accordingly. In this hand I placed the Club Queen with West and didn't care where the Heart King was. Under those circumstances "I should have" played the hand correctly and made it.

Moral: Do not count on the opponents making an error unless it is the only hope. Assume they will do the right thing when you can combat it yourself. Then play the best way percentage-wise.

policy, you cannot collect for any condition you had when you bought it — even if you weren't aware of the condition at the time. Some companies routinely reject from one-half to four-fifths of claims for this reason.

BENEFITS PAID: A policy paying $100 a week pays $14.29 a day; $600 a month is $20 a day. Not much in an era when hospital room rates have in many large cities reached $100 a day.

Also, say an illness keeps you in the hospital for the average eight days and your policy has a six-day waiting period. You collect for only two days, or $40 for an eight-day stay under a $600 a month policy. And you'd have to be virtually a basket case to collect that maximum $39,000 over a five-year period.

Another key point: there's nothing special about the tax-free benefits of the payouts. Most health insurance payments are tax-free. And, unlike regular health insurance policies, premiums on this type of policy may not be tax-deductible.

PREMIUMS: A 25 cent or $1 "introductory premium" may look inviting, but that's just for the first month, and typical premiums are $5 or so a month thereafter. Rates also may be sharply hiked later, or the contract call for higher premiums at age 65.

ENROLLMENT PERIOD: An advertised "limited enrollment period" may create a false sense of urgency. The deadline also may prevent you from making inquiries, since it may leave you only two or three days to enroll. (The company may then advertise another "limited enrollment period" a month or so later.)

RENEWABILITY: How long will the policy stay in force? Under what conditions can it be renewed or cancelled? Rate changes or policy cancellations may occur as long as they are made statewide or apply to all policyholders of your "classification" (could mean your age group). Raising premiums statewide is not uncommon.

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

Hello Again!

WASHINGTON: Approaching the other day, a brisk walking acquaintance excitedly exclaimed, "You can't send any more mail to Washington!" And, caught off guard, I curiously and quickly asked, "Why?" The quick answer with a guffaw was, "Because he's dead!" And here I might add, after talking to my special Washington correspondent, "So is baseball in the Capitol City."

Rains Came' and it also brought 'football last Saturday night.' The coaches all star game between the East and the West monopolized the air-waves on one channel. When will promoters learn the moral of the fable of the goose and the golden egg?

SAYS STEPHEN: Visiting his grandparents, Caesar and Mary Romano, in Providence, Stephen Routh was all sports talk. Stevie lives in the Silver Spring section of the Washington area, plays baseball and soccer at St. Michael's School, and follows the various sports teams in person, in the papers and on television and radio. He knows all the answers. "Do we miss major league baseball in Washington?" he questioned with an answer to that question. "No one seems to miss it too much," Stephen went on. "And some couldn't care less." Young Mr. Routh's idea of a sports town is Boston. "I'm glad the Bruins won; I watch the Red Sox when they're in Baltimore and when they're televised in the 'game of the week.' Caesar (his grandfather) likes the Boston Patriots; the Red Sox need pitching help." And so it went with Stephen extolling the Boston teams. "Baseball in Washington? We can live without it." And talking with Caesar Romano in Max Greenberg's Star Pharmacy 'other eve, he commented, "Maybe they said it too much; maybe they referred to the Washington as 'first in peace, first in war, first in the hearts of his countryman' — but — last in the American League — maybe they said it too much."

MORE AND MORE: Children bicyclists dangerously ride their "wheels" on crowded highways, becoming a problem for motorists — and — Providence Recreation Department started a "Bicycle Skills Safety Meet" series on Wednesday of this week. That department has "Nok-hockey" listed for July 13; a baseball hitting contest on July 19; a Street Hockey Tournament on August 4; and Playground Olympics on August 17. Those being among a long list of events . . . The R.I. Reds announce that Student Nights will again be observed for boys and girls under 16 years of age — $2 per ticket.

THIS AND THAT: On your way to Ledgeport Country Club — or — other destinations requiring traversing Newman Avenue in Seekonk, you'll see two trophies won by the Boston Celtics in the windows at Organ Center . . . Wonder what became of the old saying, "Whadaya doin' — ketchin' flies?" sarcastically aimed at boys who always had their mouths open . . . One place advertises "mufflers" — the kind for automobiles and motorcycles. Wonder how much business a company would do advertising "mufflers that make noise?" — Or — why do so many people have to suffer just because some nitwits violate rules, regulations and laws with cutouts and roaring, blasting motors that deafen? . . . The song says, "June Brought the Roses." It could add, "And also 'The

A GOLFER'S IF: (By Jim Metcalf with apologies to Rudyard Kipling) If you can keep your head down when those around you are lifting theirs and messing up a shot; If you can hit straight down the fairway far and wide and neither hook nor slice a lot . . . If you can sink those putts and drop those chips no matter how and where they lie; If you can miss those traps and bunkers and get out of them the first time you try . . . If you can keep those drives long, low and accurate and put them where you wish to — right or left; If you can miss those ditches and waterholes and never scare some poor fish half to death . . . If you can reach those greens in two and maybe sometimes three; You're a Pro, you lucky Joe — Oh how I wish it were me!

And with that — CARRY ON!

Some people say all this talk about a power shortage is a lot of rubbish.

They're right. Because, without enough electricity, a lot of the things that make a mess of our lives would be piling up on us at the rate of 3.5 million tons a year. It takes a lot of energy just to clean up after ourselves.

Take the recycling of waste materials. Discarded cans, papers, bottles, old automobiles — in fact, most of the refuse that fills our trash barrels and litters our landscape — can be converted to useful ends by electric energy.

We will also be using more and more electric power to purify the water we drink and to clean the air we breathe.

That's why we're working now to provide the kind of facilities it will take to not only clean up the world we live in but to keep it that way. Remember, it's as important to us as it is to you . . . because we live here, too.

People like you working to make life a little better.

NINE COMPLAIN

Brezhnev to label their treatment "KGB provocation," according to Jewish sources. The said they were "placed outside the law" in violation of constitutional guarantees.

American Company Ends Israel Boycott

WASHINGTON — Under government pressure, an American grain company has cancelled a contract clause which committed the firm to joining the Arab boycott of Israel.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal (D-Queens) had protested to the Commerce Dept. that standard shipping contracts appeared to violate federal law barring American companies from participating in boycotts by foreign nations against other countries friendly to the U. S. The Commerce Department investigated and determined that only one American company had signed such a contract which pledged that ships involved were "not blacklisted by Arab countries."

The firm was identified as Cargill Inc., a Minnesota-based grain company with offices at 2 Broadway in New York City.

Cargill agreed to delete the pledge from its contracts after the Commerce Department, responding to Rosenthal's protest, cited the federal law.

WITH OLIM IN VIENNA

By DANIEL BLOCH

The first encounter is simple yet it has a special air of excitement of its own.

It is seven o'clock in the morning at the train station in Vienna. Waiting at platform No. 2 are two representatives of the Jewish Agency and two station porters. A train is arriving from Moscow and is now entering the station. It is not full but the last cars are crowded with Jews some of whom have met each other for the first time. They have come a long way and have traveled by train for days. Just a few hours ago their train passed the last border of a communist bloc country and this is their first encounter with the free world.

These Jews already heard and knew that in Vienna representatives of the Jewish Agency will be waiting to take care and look after them.

It is very easy to recognize these immigrants by their sheer excitement and concern over what would be happening to them now that they have arrived. They look for and immediately recognize who is a Jewish representative and who is not. The first encounter is simple and straightforward. Shalom, an exchange of greeting in Yiddish or Russian and a few Hebrew words, "What's new in our land?" a few ask, meaning, of course, Israel.

About fifty immigrants have arrived this morning in Vienna. "This is the usual number arriving these days," said the "Schlichim" (representatives) of the Jewish Agency. They are to be found at the station every time a train arrives from East Europe and every time a plane arrives.

The schlichim are there twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. One never knows who, when and how the immigrants will arrive. This morning half of the immigrants are Jews from Georgia, one half from Russia and the Baltic countries.

Here are the Georgia Jews with their baggage, pillows, pots, brooms, preserve jars, garlic, onions and loaves of bread. Here is a family from Odessa, grandfather, grandmother, father, mother and sons; they have with them five trunks which are pretty well packed. The "heavy" luggage they sent by ship through Trieste. The Soviet government permits these immigrants to take with them their household needs providing they are "made in Russia" or in a satellite country.

A special room in the restaurant of the train station in Vienna is reserved during the morning hours for the Jewish Agency. The "olim" (immigrants) are welcomed around tables for a light breakfast meal, in the meantime filling out their first forms.

(This is their first encounter with "Israel paperwork.")

From the train station in Vienna, the refugees are brought to a hostel in Sineu, a small town near Vienna. Here the Jewish Agency has rented an old castle and "reconverted" it to suit its needs. It is a sort of way station and because of lack of space and accommodations the immigrants can't and don't stay there long. Every day or every other day a plane leaves for Israel, sometimes a "Jumbo" is needed for the heavy flow of new immigrants.

In Sineu the first "lists" are prepared for those who will be handling the immigrants at the "end of the line."

The information is not all inclusive, items such as apartments and job opportunities are left to be resolved at a later time. The "olim" prepare their belongings for shipment to Israel. The men of El Al usually inspect the valises as a security measure. The "olim" receive pamphlets and other pertinent data about Israel. They are written in Russian and in Georgian. At the hostel in the evening there is community singing, films and other entertainment. They also receive medical attention in case of need.

This first day's encounter on free soil under Jewish auspices is most important and significant.

The workers of the Jewish Agency in Vienna, handled by Zvi Gilbesky and the staff at the hostel supervised by Baruch Goilli do an excellent job. I would venture to say it is "holy works" but there is no doubt that better facilities are needed there.

Can't help being emotionally touched. The encounter with these immigrants at the train station is a moving and stirring experience. At first glance they seem like ordinary Jews getting off a train with their suitcases, but behind this seemingly ordinary occurrence you know how important this day is to the "olim" to the State of Israel and to Jewry all over the world.

Among these "olim" you see some who have left behind them a life of comparative comfort and job security. They have not heard as yet or read in detail the "bread and butter" information about Israel.

They are not informed about Judaism and Zionism. It is only in the last few years that the State of Israel has made an impact on their lives. For many of them their concepts about Israel are far from reality, but despite this, something in their heart tells them, draws them to leave all and emigrate to Israel.

At the hostel, some of the children look frightened, some are silent and some are playing and running to and fro on the grounds. They will soon be part of the future generation of Israel.

If there is anyone who is opposed to the help and "benefits" these new "olim" are getting; if there is anyone who feels that Israel does not need the "allyah" (immigration), let him come to this southern railroad station in Vienna and wait at No. 2 platform for the 7 o'clock morning train. He will see the faces of these immigrants and those who are there to greet them.

Then — doubt would soon vanish and complaint would turn to sympathy and love for these brave new "olim." As we said, this encounter is unique, historic and laden with deep emotion.

Perhaps a stranger cannot understand this, but even a stranger can't help but be moved.

Translated by Cantor Norman Gewirtz from the Hebrew newspaper "omer."

MEMBER OF BAR: Darrell S. Ross received his Juris Doctor degree, magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School on June 15, and on the same day, was sworn in as a member of the Rhode Island Bar.

Mr. Ross was graduated from Moses Brown School in 1965 and from Yale College, magna cum laude, in 1969.

In the fall, following a four month trip to eastern Europe and Israel, he will join the Providence law firm of Hinkley, Allen, Salisbury and Parsons.

Mr. Ross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney T. Ross of Cranston.

Japan Announces $1.5 Million Fund For Airport Massacre

TOKYO — Japan has announced a $1.5-million fund for victims of the Tel Aviv airport massacre on May 30, in which 27 were killed and nearly 80 wounded by pro-Arab Japanese terrorists.

The money is being deposited, the Government said, with the International Red Cross for distribution to the various countries concerned.

The payments will be made "as an expression of sympathy and sincerity toward those who have suffered," the foreign ministry said in a statement.

Payments of this type are a common practice in Japanese domestic tragedies.

Years later, he spoke with David Niven and they reflected on their successes. Kanin described himself at 58 as "middle aged." Niven disagreed. "How can you call 58 'middle aged'?" How many people do you know who are 116?"

Kanin's wife, actress Ruth Gordon, described the tragedy of the acting profession. "When you finally learn how to do it, you're too old for the good parts." She studied briefly at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, but at the end of the session, she was not invited back the following year and told to quit acting. She decided to ignore the advice. She is the only one of the 64 in her class ever to be heard from again.

JEWISH SCHOOLS CRITICIZED

RABAT — The French language opposition party newspaper, L'Opinion, reproached Jewish schools for remaining open on the anniversary of Mohammed's birth, April 26. Under the headline, "Jewish Schools in Morocco Do Not Respect Muslim Holy Days," the Istiqlal Party organ said "this would result in a moderation of the official attitude toward the question of private education reserved for Jews." It said "the existence of these schools should be re-examined because in order for the Moroccan Jew not to remain on the Margin of Moroccan society he should go to Moroccan schools."

Jewish Activists Disappointed In Nixon Visit

NEW YORK — Jewish activists in the Soviet Union have expressed disappointment in the results of President Nixon's visit to Russia last month.

Contrary to their "great expectation" that their situation would improve, "We see that after the visit our condition worsens," they said in a new appeal addressed to President Nixon and other world leaders.

The text of the appeal was telephoned from Moscow to the headquarters of the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry here. It stated that people seeking to leave the USSR are being subjected to Army induction.

"A week does not pass without arrests, intrusions by force or inductions against these people," the appeal said.

The appeal was addressed to President Nixon and the US Congress; to the prime ministers and parliaments of Great Britain and France and to the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

A separate plea on behalf of Gavriel Shapiro, a Jewish activist arrested June 12 after he was secretly wed to Judy Silver, a Cincinnati social worker, was addressed to United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim by Mark Nashpitz, a 29-year-old former dentist in Moscow.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

Tax-Exempt Bond Funds

Q: Would you please comment on Nuveen Tax-Exempt Bond Fund? P.H. & D.L.

A: This fund series, sponsored by the oldest and largest company in the field, is in its 11th year. Recently the company offered for sale units of its 42nd tax-exempt fund. In this respect, municipal bond funds are structured differently than are open-end funds. Each series represents a portfolio of bonds which are held and administered by a trustee for an annual fee of less than two-tenths of 1%. A $5,000 minimum investment is required and the load fee is 5-1/2%. Recent fund series have featured a check-a-month plan for interest distributions. There is, however, no fee charged for redemptions which are made on the basis of current bid prices on the bond portfolio. Quality ratings on underlying bonds is BBB or better.

The primary attraction of these funds is tax-free income and capital protection. Obviously, income in the first year is largely absorbed by the acquisition fee. However, sponsors receive no annual management fee and shareholders have the added security inherent in a portfolio of 20 or more separate issues. Individual purchases of tax-exempt bonds at the $5,000 level are not only subject to commission but often an odd lot premium.

Q: Can you give me information on Aircraft Armaments now AAI Corp. I have not seen it listed for a long time. O.B.

A: Because United Industrial (NYSE) owns 83% of AAI's shares, there are less than 200,000 shares publicly held. Traded somewhat sporadically over the counter, AAI was recently quoted at around 7-1/2. In 1971 this subsidiary contributed 35% to pretax earnings and 34% to sales of the parent company. Backlog at AAI rose to record levels in 1971 and government spending for research and development is expected to continue growing. As a result AAI declared its first dividend, payable this past February.

Utility for Stability And Income

Q: I started buying Virginia Electric & Power (NYSE) at $23 per share. I am disappointed in the performance. The dividend has not been increased for two years. I would greatly appreciate your advice on the 400 shares I hold. N.W.

A: While Virginia Electric has not increased its dividend on a per share basis, the company's total common stock dividend obligation jumped $4.5 million in 1971 as a result of an increase in the number of shares outstanding. It was this factor — the 4 million share offering — which also reduced the year-to-year earnings comparison in 1971. However, in the March quarter of the current year, a 3.3% gain in per share profit on an 11.7% gain in sales was reported.

Some rate relief has been granted this utility by the power commissions of North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia. A request to set aside $22.5 million in temporary rate increases has been filed with the Virginia Supreme Court.

A $2 billion construction program, which includes a conventional and two nuclear power plants, will increase generating capacity 70% to 10.1 million kilowatts by 1975. Capital requirements will necessitate both equity and debt financing further adding to Virginia's already substantial interest and dividend burden. Shares are attractive only for income investors. Some liberalization of the dividend, which yields a generous 6.3%, is possible later in the year.

Q: How are over-the-counter purchases handled? B.A.

A: OTC purchases are made just like any other, as far as you personally are concerned. They are, however, handled differently by your broker, who acquires stock by negotiation rather than by auction on the floor of an exchange, as is the case with listed stocks. If your investment house acts as a broker, it will buy shares for your account and bill you as agent, charging about the same commission as you would have to pay for a listed stock. If it acts as a dealer, it will bill you as principal at a net price which include normal markup.

Turnaround Seen For Hotelier

Q: I have held Travelodge International (NYSE) for some while. All stocks in the industry have done well except this one. Sales have risen but not earnings. Should I sell at a loss? E.F.

A: Travelodge is by no means the only hotelier working through a period of depressed earnings and stock prices. The economic slowdown of the 1970-1971 period reduced occupancy levels for a large segment of the industry. Travelodge, however, concurrently was faced with mounting operating costs, and higher construction and development expenses. As a result, profit margins narrowed and earnings sagged.

A major expansion is currently underway which will add 13 new units to the 450-unit hotel/motel chain. Of these new units, 12 will be company owned; only 30 hotels in the chain are wholly owned at the present time. Some 310 are co-owned with the balanced licensed operations. Earnings improvement, reflecting newly added motor hotels, expansion in the chain's restaurant services and the sale of a loss-producing hotel, is looked for in the current fiscal year. Shares are a speculative hold.

RESTRICT MAIL

JERUSALEM — British postal authorities have informed the Communications Ministry that postal matter other than letters sent to Israel are to be transported by ship not by airmail. According to the Ministry spokesman, British authorities gave no reason for their decision. However he believed it stemmed from the fear that the mails are being used for bomb packages.

Wishing Gentiles Prosperity

We Jews are a mere handful. A corner of Africa or a single province of China or in Indonesia would overwhelm us in numbers.

We do not have the atomic bomb or standing armies. We work in clothing factories and operate retail stores and manufacture ladies' garments and chemicals, operate on the sick, work in laboratories, write plays and books and many songs, and conduct orchestras. And vast numbers among us are concerned with but one idea — to get into the Gentile country club.

But we find that in England the Nazi groups parade the streets with placards proclaiming the threat of the Jews.

And in Paris Roger Peyrefitte writes a popular book telling how the Jews are all powerful, and among the Jews he lists are former President Johnson, the late President Kennedy, Queen Elizabeth of England, the late President de Gaulle of France, Generalissimo Franco of Spain, Fidel Castro of Cuba, and former West German Chancellor Adenauer. He even lists as a Jew the notorious anti-Semite of the Inquisition, Torquemada.

In Hamburg some neo-Nazis decorate Jewish gravestones with the swastika. In Kansas City, Los Angeles, Birmingham and Chicago, anti-Semitic pamphlets are handed out: "Buy Christian." In Montana in a place called Cortlandt two Jewish students are smothered and harassed on and off the grounds of the schoolhouse.

What is remarkable about all of this is that only about 25 years ago, six million Jews, one-third the Jewish population of the earth, were slaughtered in the Nazi death camps. One would have thought that the mere memory of this vast massacre would have provided sufficient mental orgasms for the anti-Semites. But it is never enough.

I have had no illusions about the end of anti-Semitism. There is no real cure. If all the Jews disappeared tomorrow, the anti-Semites would still have the gravestones. After they had destroyed all the gravestones, they would still have the bodies to dig up. It is endless.

Our only hope is to maintain vigilance, particularly in the democracies, to resist with all our might any attempt to destroy or subvert the democratic institutions which protect us, and to pray daily for the good health and prosperity of the Gentiles. We are in danger only when the Gentile suffers some bad luck.

Says New Moscow Rabbi Is Not Authority On Law

NEW YORK — A leading American Orthodox rabbi said that the newly appointed rabbi of Moscow's Choral Synagogue was the successor but not a replacement for the late Rabbi Yehuda Leib Levin.

Rabbi Pinchas Teitz, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, a long time friend of the late Rabbi Levin, said that the new rabbi, Yakov L. Fishman, 59, was qualified to perform the practical functions of a rabbi but was not an authority on religious law or a scholar of the late Rabbi Levin's stature.

The Moscow Synagogue is no longer regarded as the "central address" of the Russian-Jewish community as it was during Rabbi Levin's tenure, Rabbi Teitz said.

He explained that in the Soviet Union today, as during the Czarist regime, there are Jewish religious functionaries recognized by the government as rabbis and rabbinical scholars who may be without official recognition but are looked to by observant Jews in matters of religious law.

Rabbi Teitz stated that because of the lack of yeshivas to train rabbis under the Soviet regime, there are very few rabbis left in the USSR who can qualify as scholars.

and the Stern Group, made the request in the aftermath of the Lydda Airport massacre. Seadon claimed there was only one way to teach the terrorists a lesson and that was to employ their own methods against them. Otherwise, he said, they sit in Arab and other foreign capitals confident that the Israeli Army will not pursue them in the streets of Beirut, Cairo or European cities.
